The Farmers Cooperative Exchange was organized in 1934. Its first investment was in a modern seed and grain cleaning plant to aid the farmers in producing more seed and grain.

The second move was a fertilizer factory to assist the farmers in taking advantage of the information and research data given out by the State Agricultural College and North Carolina Test Farms.

The third step was to build a feed mill to provide a market for the farmer's grain and manufacture their own feeds by formulas recommended by the State's Agricultural College. It should also be pointed out that prior to this time they had no way to take advantage of the research and information and experimental work of the College and the Department of Agriculture.

Since that day the Farmers Cooperative Exchange has provided numerous marketing services for its owner-members. In eggs alone, it has saved the farmers thousands of dollars and in grain and seed, furnished the farmer a year-round market.

Today, North Carolina farmers, through their own organization and with the help of North Carolina State College and the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, are rapidly turning North Carolina into a balanced agricultural State, which is the only hope for the future security of our economy.

The only way to make farming a profitable business is to lower cost of production and to market in such a way as to give farmers their share of the consumer dollar—this is what farmers are doing through their own cooperatives.

Make Agriculture a profitable way of life and our whole economy will be safe.

Dear George:

In between summer activities, I have to overtake my correspondence file. For many weeks it has been way out ahead. Ever since coming back from the Southeastern swing, I have been on the move.

I do want to thank you for the fine hospitality enjoyed in your home. Will you be so good as to tell your wife how much I enjoyed the stay there? The several days in Atlanta were most delightful.

With this letter you will find a copy of the report which I wrote up after the trip to Va., N.C., and Ga. Your reactions to my observations would be welcome. Naturally, I do not expect them to be too sound, for the time was extremely short. Perhaps I am over optimistic in my premises as to the future of that area, but it certainly seems to me that there are forces that work with tremendous power.

I'll look forward to other reports on your activities to learn of the progress you are able to make. I am not sure how soon we will be able to do a great deal on the cooperative front, but our board is on record as Morris has probably reported to you, to help finance educational and organizational work on a rather intensive scale.

Hubert Jackson has sent me clippings from the Atlanta papers about the opening of their store. He seems to me a very sound thinking and capable gentlemen. A lot will depend on his success of this first cooperative venture in Atlanta. I hope his mistakes will be few.

I do not know when I will get down into that area again, but I look forward to meeting you in the not too distant future, here, there, or somewhere.

Cooperatively yours,

Summary of My Views on the Future of the Southeastern Cooperative League

C. J. McLanahan
May 19, 1947

One can sum up quite definitely, that there are "stirrings" in the Southeast. Stirrings of a new sort, which indicate that there is going to be a natural strong move toward cooperatives. This is all part of a growing determination by the people of the area to build up the resources and assets of the South.

Right now there are only a number of cooperative outposts, rather widely scattered throughout the whole territory. It would be impossible to draw these together to form a regional wholesale at the present time.

It would seem wise that the Southeastern Cooperative League be immediately financed to the point where it could employ personnel to keep in close touch with existing cooperatives, and individuals and groups which are concerned with the development of new cooperatives. This same person would supply services, materials and experience that would make the growth of cooperatives in the area sound and rapid.

It would be most unfortunate if it should continue that there would be no one in a position to give any direct assistance or aid to the various groups which are anxious to establish cooperatives. It would be my recommendation, that at least $2000 be raised to permit the employment on a part-time basis of some individual who would serve as Secretary of the Southeastern Cooperative League. Of course, if more money were available, full-time could easily be used in this work.

I do not feel at this time, that a decision for concentration of effort should be made. There is not enough evidence available to say just where one would be justified in concentrating. And since there is so little power to concentrate, it is not terribly important that one area be developed to the exclusion of another.

From a commodity standpoint, it is obvious that the first service to the area, must come through the Southeastern Cooperative League on a brokerage basis. The Southeastern League to make up orders for local cooperatives, and plan for a carload or truckload shipment at periodic intervals. For the most part, however, the present cooperatives and those which will come into existence in the near future, will have to rely on local sources of supply.

There is the possibility, that in combination with non-profit organizations such as hospitals and schools, sufficient volume would be available to permit earlier and more frequent shipments of merchandise, either from National or Eastern or Central States.

I believe with one person, even part-time on the job, within six months, it would become clear just where greater effort should be placed in the interest of establishing a cooperative wholesale. Without making a study from the standpoint of actual shipping costs, it would seem very likely that two wholesale points would be established. One in the Virginia-North Carolina area, and one in Atlanta. It would be quite practical for one of these to be served as a branch of the other. Both represent definite trade centers.

The people in the South do not want a subsidy from the North, in the sense that they expect other people to carry the load for them. They will start, and have already started to raise funds to help in the work outlined above. It is obvious, however, that they are going to need some outside assistance in getting off dead-center. If the Cooperative League and/or individuals interested in the development of cooperatives in the Southeast, will give a hand at this time, I am sure it will not be many years before the Southeast will be on its own feet and making good progress toward the establishment of another strong regional wholesale.

THE ADVISORY COUNCIL PROGRAM IN OHIO
(As conducted by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation)

In its first few years the Ohio Farm Bureau, like other state farm bureaus, enjoyed a phenomenal growth. Within a period of four years our membership reached around 90,000 families. From that time on to 1933, with a few exceptions, our membership went through a constant decline. By 1933 the membership had dropped to around 7,000 families. Up to that time we had depended largely on township organizations and township meetings to create local interest and activity.

In search of an effective method to get members to assume responsibility and take an active part in their organization, Mr. Murray D. Lincoln, our Executive Secretary at that time, visited Nova Scotia to explore their program of neighborhood discussion groups. This was in the summer of 1935. In April of 1936 the first Advisory Councils were organized in Shelby County. The County Farm Bureau Board divided itself into 4 teams and invited other Farm Bureau members to join them in a neighborhood group which would meet monthly in the homes of members. Each group limited its membership to 12 families. In this way the Board members could explore the thinking and needs of a larger circle of farmers and take advantage of their suggestions and advice. These groups were called "Advisory Councils."

The state organization prepares discussion material to help stimulate the thinking of these groups. The plan was also developed whereby the Advisory Councils make carbon copies of their monthly minutes and mail the extra copy to the State Farm Bureau office. In this way a two-way flow of ideas circulates back and forth from small local units through the County Farm Bureaus to the State organization. The copies of minutes received by the State office are checked and returned to the County Farm Bureau office.

As the Council program developed the value of these small neighborhood groups became more and more clear. Through the past 13 or 14 years in which we have maintained this program, we have learned a great deal about the servicing of Councils in order to keep them functioning in a vital way.

Today we have approximately 1,550 groups representing close to 30,000 adults. Our present Farm Bureau membership to date is approximately 62,000 families, which means that about 25% of our Farm Bureau members belong to these Councils. Approximately 10% of our Council members are non-Farm Bureau members, but as non-members become better acquainted with the program through participation and they frequently join the sponsoring organization.

Except for the summer months, average intake of minutes will run well over 1,000 copies per month.

Other states have adopted a similar program, notably the Michigan Farm Bureau which has now over 850 active groups. In Michigan these groups are known as "Community Farm Bureaus." They operate very much as our groups do in Ohio. The Vermont Farm Bureau has in the neighborhood of 75 groups, and Maryland around 100.

How Councils are Formed

Most of our counties in Ohio have Organization Directors who are responsible for building membership, and developing Councils. Very often the Organization Director encourages the members of a Council to help form a new one. Various procedures are being employed, but they often follow this pattern: One or more families in a neighborhood who have expressed an interest are contacted. The Council program is explained, usually in conference with both husband and wife. If this couple is willing to take the next step they invite two or three of the neighbor families to discuss the idea further. If they are ready to proceed they select an evening for the first meeting and each family invites some of their immediate friends and neighbors to come. In this way the group begins with a certain degree of unity based on social ties.

Care is exercised from the beginning to encourage the new Council members to use their initiative. They choose their topics for discussion, elect their own officers, plan their own programs, and arrive at their own decisions. Meetings are quite informal, especially as members become better acquainted. While the discussion often gets serious, the atmosphere of the meetings is friendly and sociable.

Relationships

The State organization encourages this program through its field force, through its publications, radio, and public meetings. The County organization authorizes the Council program through action of its board. Councils are strengthened by the assurance that their ideas are given serious attention. We find that farm people are quick to sense anything that is not genuine. The program is based on the belief that farm people have the ability to think through and handle many of their own problems, if they can be brought together in small groups, given the necessary information and stimulated to act. The greatest progress in Council development has taken place in those counties where this faith in people has been given its fullest expression.

Integration

Sooner or later the small groups discover that their problems extend beyond their own reach and power. They need help from other groups. Leadership is alert to this need and makes provision to meet it by encouraging Councils in a given community to have joint meetings. Eventually a County Coordinating Council is developed which is made up of representatives of each of the local groups. This Council group brings together the instructions, thinking, and wishes of local groups and attempts to find a common ground for local action. It is not a legislative group, but always advisory, which makes recommendations to the Board. Members of the Board are represented on the Coordinating Council.

ACTION

The achievements of the Advisory Councils is a test of their vitality. Many of their projects are of a local character, which are achieved by the neighbors within the group. Others are the result of County action and still others of district and state action. A list of Council projects is attached to this report.

One of the important functions of Councils is the preparation of County and State Resolutions which are submitted to the Resolution Committee for consideration of resolutions on local issues, while September is devoted to resolutions on State and National issues.

The recommendations of the Councils for 1950 have been tabulated for this report.

Principles and Methods

Without attempting to present a complete list of principles or to weigh the relative importance of each, the following considerations growing out of Ohio Farm Bureau experience in working with small neighborhood groups, seem significant:

1. An Advisory Council is a permanent, stable neighborhood group of farm families who meet monthly in their homes.
2. The program needs a sponsoring organization whose leadership believes in the capacity of people functioning cooperatively, in small integrated groups, to deal effectively with their problems.
3. Boards and management must be prepared to back up their faith with sufficient funds, and wait for results.
4. The freedom of each individual group must be respected.
5. An important function of leadership is to keep the channels of communication open between Councils and the central organization.
6. A sponsoring organization must be ready to accept a responsibility for keeping the major focus of attention of people's felt needs and problems rather than on the institution.
7. As the number and influence of groups increase in the community, the program and emphasis will become correspondingly community-centered.
8. The strength of an organization depends on the kind and degree of membership participation. The task of leadership is to encourage active participation in a two-way flow of ideas within and among groups.
9. Cooperative, problem-solving activities are integrating and socially satisfying.
10. Unless people are stimulated and permitted to face their problems together in small, informal voluntary groups, a dynamic democracy is impossible.

For some time now I've been trying to think through the critical, confused state of the world -- always with the hope of working out some constructive, practical program for peace. Knowing that you've been thinking along the same lines, I'm enclosing a copy of a speech I recently gave at Antigonish which probably sums up my thinking to date as well as anything I've yet put on paper. Dixie Negroes Start Co-Ops to Break Their Dependence on Whites

Poor People's Corp. Markets Dresses, Candles; Jobless Workers Build 'Strike City'

Supermarket Plan Stagnates

By NEIL A. MAXWELL
Staff Reporter of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

JACKSON, Miss.—Seldom has a more unlikely business venture got off the ground.

It's headquartered in the back bedroom of a rented frame cottage. Its chief executive makes his rounds between office, warehouse, and retail outlet on a shabby white Honda motorcycle, the corporate books strapped to its seat. The company's nearly 200 employes, working in 15 branches scattered over Mississippi, sometimes take home less than $5 a week and rarely approach the $1.25-an-hour Federal minimum wage.

But the employes don't complain. They own the company, Poor People's Corp.—a Negro cooperative that is only one of dozens quietly springing up across Dixie these days to help break Negroes' dependence on a white-run economy. For many Negroes, the co-op is one concrete manifestation of "black power," the idea, sometimes rather vaguely defined, of Negro independence from whites.

Some of the groups adhere strictly to the dictionary definition of a co-op as a business owned by its customers. Included are a loan company and a gasoline marketing venture that have been started lately. Other "co-ops" are employe-owned businesses in which a few women, for example, pool their time and talent to make candles or to market fruitcakes by mail order.

Most of the co-ops are shaky, loose-knit affairs with management and capital problems that would drive conventional businesses into bankruptcy. But the co-ops somehow survive, and if they spread, civil rights authorities believe, they could become important tools for achieving gains now assured Negroes by law but difficult to attain in practice.

Seeking $7.5 Million

"There's a tremendous interest developing in co-ops because of growing desperation by Negroes over their economic situation," says Al Ulmer, who has helped start several co-ops as a staffer for the Southern Regional Council (SRC). The Atlanta-based human rights organization is making the rounds of philanthropic foundations to try to raise $7.5 million for a five-year program to organize new co-ops and nurse them through their first year. It hopes to establish a central co-op advisory service with mobile units that would go into the field with advice on how to start co-ops and keep them running.

Despite formidable obstacles, the Negro co-ops sometimes become solid businesses. At a frame cottage in the Negro quarter of Lafayette, La., the Rev. A. J. McKnight, director of Southern Consumers Cooperative, tells how his group's assets have risen to more than $200,000 from less than $25,000 two years ago. Membership has grown to more than 2,000 from 600. To join, each member pays $5, which goes into an education fund, and pledges to invest $300, generally at the rate of $1 a month. That money becomes capital for the co-op's two ventures, a small loan company and a bakery.

The co-op's sales manager, Alfred McZeal, a former janitor at a McCrory's store, says his sales crew is signing up between 20 and 50 new members a month. There are other benefits besides providing loans to Negroes at much lower interest rates than elsewhere, and opening jobs at the bakery, he says. About 50 members who grow pecans, for example, sell part of their output to the bakery, which makes fruitcakes.

Deep South civil rights struggles are being fought increasingly on economic grounds, civil rights leaders say, and they think that thriving co-ops could, in many disputes, prove efficient weapons to tip victory into the hands of Negro forces.

The Strike City Story

A co-op may make it possible, for example, for striking Negro plantation tractor drivers at the cooperative community of Strike City, Miss., to weather the loss of their jobs. They walked off in May last year complaining that their employer wouldn't pay the minimum wage. To build new homes (they had lived on the plantation), the drivers organized a co-op, financed by contributions from civil rights sympathizers. In constructing their houses, the drivers learned how to make kitchen cabinets, and "we're now trying to set up a cabinet-making co-op to sell to other builders," says Frank Smith, who directed construction.

The co-op concept is playing a vital role at Freedom City, Miss., where 94 Negroes are settling down in 24 igloo-like plastic structures grouped on 400 acres of land the co-op is buying. The Negroes lost their jobs and homes to farm mechanization. Later they were evicted

Candle Co-Op Snuffed as Wax Flow Tops Cash Flow

By a WALL STREET JOURNAL Staff Reporter

ATLANTA, Ga.—The cooperative Vine City Candle Co. became so successful that it went temporarily out of business.

Started by three women, the co-op made colored candles by dropping crayons into the wax in milk-carton candle forms. A big Atlanta department store ordered 160 candles, a tremendous order for the women.

They used all the cash they had to buy supplies and were broke by the time they filled the order. "We were under the illusion that 'cash on delivery' meant that you got your money when you delivered the goods," says one of the women. But partly because the women neglected to attach an invoice to the candles, payment was delayed five weeks, during which the co-op was idle.

Self-Help Effort: Dixie Negroes Launch Co-Op Business Ventures

from an Air Force base where they tried to set up housekeeping.

"The whole thing is a cooperative development," says 21-year-old Isaac Foster, a Negro helping to plan Freedom City's future. Home-building and farming have been undertaken as cooperative enterprises. A wheat-growing venture brought in the group's only substantial income a few months ago ($2,000). Now, foot-high soybean plants wave in the warm Southern breeze on 375 acres, and this crop should fetch considerably more money when harvested.

Freedom City residents are aware, though, that they can't support 94 people on 375 acres for long. So they are thinking of setting up co-op industrial ventures, perhaps a sewing project or a frog farm—"unless we can get an industry to move in here," says Mr. Foster.

Southern white reaction to the co-ops is mixed. When the co-ops don't intrude on their way of life, whites wish them well or ignore them. Otherwise, they complain. Mrs. Mary Chandler, head of the Mt. Nebo Sewing Center Cooperative near Prairie, Miss., says that "Every time I go to town the white folks ask how we're doing and wish us luck." But a co-op worker at McComb, Miss., says: "The whites don't like it a bit—for every woman who comes to work out here, that's one more gone from a white woman's kitchen."

A white shipper of sweet potatoes at Sunset, La., grumbles about the Grand Marie Vegetable Producers Cooperative, Inc., which competes with him. "When the U.S. Government goes into competition with me, I don't like it, especially when I pay taxes for them to fi[illegible] [illegible]." He refers to the co-op's application for a Government loan.

For Negroes in the Deep South, there are key advantages to doing business the co-op way. A co-op can get started on a minuscule scale, and if it flops, nobody is out much money. The capital investment in a candle-making co-op being organized at West Point, Miss., by Poor People's Corp. was only $200. The most lavishly financed of the 15 Poor People's Corp. ventures is a dress factory in an abandoned plant at Canton, Miss., started with $1,000 and later bolstered by another $800.

A co-op can last, without sinking, longer than an ordinary business; its members are ready to accept reduced wages without quitting. "We are supposed to be making $20 a week, but since we started back in March, we've only made that once," says Mrs. Steve Lewis, manager of the Beartown Sewing Cooperative near McComb. "We owe me $54 in back pay," she quips.

"Garbo" Hats

Mrs. Lewis worked for a white family 21 years before she quit in May to work full-time at the co-op. She says much of its revenue from the sale of dresses goes to pay operating expenses such as rent, $30 a month; electricity, around $7; and $6-a-month payments on a used sewing machine purchased for $65. The co-op owns five other obsolete sewing machines that were given away by a nearby knitting mill.

The McComb Leather Cooperative, however, is distributing sizable payments to its members—by their standards, anyway. Mrs. Lila Mae Wells, manager, says that one memorable week members got almost $30 each. A full-time maid in McComb usually earns only $15 a week or so (plus lunch). The co-op of five Negro women and two men makes items such as hip-pouch purses and floppy "Greta Garbo" hats.

Locating in buildings that nobody else wants helps some co-ops to trim spending. The Mt. Nebo sewing co-op uses an abandoned, paint-peeling farm house on the edge of a cotton field down a dusty road from Prairie. The rent: $5 a month.

Customer loyalty helps the co-ops survive economic hardships. The Mid-South Oil Consumers Cooperative, which sells petroleum products in three counties east of Memphis, Tenn., counts on this loyalty to keep it in business even though its customers can buy the same gasoline as cheap or cheaper from a white co-op that sells the Negroes their supplies.

Oil Co-Op Expands

Formed last spring because many white service stations refused to serve Negroes at all, the Negro co-op operates one gasoline bulk plant, and pumps at seven country stores. It has 150 tanks on loan to farmers; they are filled by trucks from the bulk plant. "Things are going so well we're planning to add 20 more pumps," says James Johnson, manager. "It's a little slow during the summer, about 6,000 gallons a month, but we'll pick up to 18,000 as soon as harvesting starts next month."

Officials of the People's Enterprise, Inc., co-op at Lafayette, La., credit members' pride with its remarkably low loan delinquency record. The loan company has handed out more than $75,000 in two years of existence, but not a single loan has gone sour. A couple of current ones are, however, in precarious shape because borrowers are on the brink of bankruptcy.

Some co-ops try to market their products among Negro and white civil rights advocates outside the South. "Our goods are made mostly for a Northern market and are Northern price-oriented," says Miss Doris Derby, production director for Poor People's Corp. Such goods include women's bags priced up to $22.50, dresses to $10, and suede hats to $12.50. They are sold through college campus representatives and some New York stores — Khadejha Designs, Kiki Boutique, and Outrageous.

Supporters of the Freedom Democratic Party in New York and Kansas City have raised nearly $3,000 to help build a new plant for the [illegible]una Sewing Cooperative in Mi[illegible]. Now housed in a rickety church building with a rusty tin roof, the dress and toy making co-op has bought an acre of tree-shaded land next door on which to put up a 40-foot by 60-foot concrete building.

A problem for some co-ops is lack of capital. Some have been able to borrow from Federal anti-poverty sources, but co-op directors say Government loans are hard to come by when needed.

At Sunset, La., 375 Negro sweet potato farmers who started the Grand Marie Vegetable Producers Cooperative counted on a $68,000 Farmers Home Administration Loan to tide them over harvest. Not until early this month did they get it. "We just almost had to shut down before the money came through — the harvest was in full swing and we were broke," says Wordy Guillory, manager. The co-op applied for the loan in April.

"Every Imaginable Problem"

The Grand Marie group was able to borrow some money from a civil rights organization to stay in business. "If we had to shut down, we would have lost all our prestige, and our members would have had to go back to the white shippers who have been exploiting them all these years," Mr. Guillory says.

"We ran into every imaginable problem," puts in John Zippert, a civil rights worker helping the farmers. "At one point when we were getting desperate, the Government people told us they couldn't talk to us because they had to leave for a meeting on how to expedite poverty program loans!"

Jesse Morris, the Honda-riding head of Poor People's, waxes bitter over the alleged ineffectiveness of Federal assistance. "They are planning to spend $75,000 to make a study of whether or not our type of operation is economically feasible," he says indignantly. "If they would give us the $75,000, it would make it feasible."

While co-ops are easy to envision, getting members together and actually starting one is quite a bit more difficult. Last November, Floyd McKissick, national chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality, talked of a chain of 50 co-op supermarkets that would be built in North Carolina "within a couple of months." So far, the only concrete start has been a proposal to the Office of Economic Opportunity to spend $250,000 for one supermarket to demonstrate its feasibility—and no action has been taken on that.

Dear Paul:

The National Institute on Cooperatives among low-income people has taken place and a series of recommendations were passed regarding the intensification of cooperative development. Monsignor O'Rourke has made a fine summary of the institute which we are enclosing.

It is urgent to meet together and act upon these to chart the future role of the Committee on Low-Income Cooperatives. It has been proposed that representatives of a cooperative in a low-income area be involved in any future activity. It is my assumption that implementation of such action should take place at our next meeting. It is suggested that each organization bring along to the meeting a representative of a cooperative from a low-income area.

In order to establish the best date for the next meeting, please return the attached form by May 31.

SUMMARY OF INSTITUTE ON COOPERATIVES FOR LOW-INCOME PEOPLE
by
Monsignor Edward W. O'Rourke

During the past two days persons interested in cooperatives among low-income people have had an extremely useful exchange of views. At times the discussions were somewhat heated. This is due to the intensity of the concern of all those who participated in this conference, and also to the fact that the participants have widely different experiences and points of view.

Among the participants are some who have been engaged in cooperative organization and administration for many years. Others of the participants are expert in the problems of low-income people, and some are leaders of civil rights groups. These latter groups may not have had extensive direct contact with cooperatives.

During the exchange of views a challenge was presented to leaders of the cooperative movement by those who have more direct contact with low-income people and the civil rights movement. In regard to certain of the assumptions and the policies of cooperatives, and most particularly regarding the pace we have set for ourselves in making the cooperative a means of assistance to low-income people.

I repeat, I feel that this discussion has been extremely useful. It became more apparent as the program and the informal discussions unfolded, that there are legitimate differences of view. Those who would urge extremely prompt results from cooperatives have been reminded that cooperatives require a certain degree of education and of participation by members, that cannot be accomplished in a very short time. On the other hand rightfully do the representatives of the poor urge all co-op leaders to begin promptly and to act vigorously on the issue at hand.

Also in the area of self-help, differences of opinion have come to light. Among us who are old-timers in the cooperative movement, self-help is our first and most treasured rule. On the other hand, we have been reminded that it is not unreasonalbe for cooperatives, particularly those who serve low-income people, to seek financial assistance from foundations, governments and other sources. The leader of the traditional cooperative was warned, however, that if too much dependence on such outside help occurs, the essential character of the cooperative as an instrument of self-help may be destroyed.

There have been some differences of opinion, too, among us about the extent to which a cooperative or a group of leaders such as ourselves should be concerned with the economic services of such an organization, and to what extent we should be involved in political action, -- in lobbying to help to bring about more assistance by our governments -- state and federal -- to meet the needs both of cooperatives and of low-income people.

In all fairness, we must recall that in addition to the description of the theory of cooperatives, presentations have been made at this conference by persons who have been directly engaged in the formation and strengthening of cooperatives among low-income people. I am confident that as the proceedings of this conference are ready by participants and others that the experiences of these people, their successes and their problems, will prove a valuable guide to all interested in this technique.

I think that those of us who helped to plan this conference must admit that we made some mistakes in our planning. We have failed to clearly make up our minds and communicate to those who have been invited to this conference, precisely what group was to be served at this specific conference, to what extent it was to be a meeting by leaders of low-income people or to what extent it was intended as a meeting of low-income people. Perhaps this is one of the sources of the conflict and difference of opinion which I've just described.

The resolutions that were adopted at this final plenary session make it abundantly clear to ourselves and to others that most of the participants are strongly convinced that cooperatives are an important tool in the effort to enable low-income people to better their economic welfare. It is equally apparent that there is a strong desire by most of us to have conferences that definitely will be for low-income people to which the majority of the participants will be of the low-income group.

It is also apparent, I think, from the resolutions that the majority of participants are convinced that the needs of low-income peoples are so very urgent that we may not go on with "business as usual". We must stir ourselves and seek out diligently both private and governmental money and also personnel which will enable all of us and many of the groups we represent to move vigorously toward the goals about which we have spoken during these past two days.

It is my earnest hope, that as we conclude this conference and go back to our various communities, various organizations and various activities, that we will bear toward one another a spirit of good will and tolerance, that we will focus our attention on the great common concerns that should bind us together and resolve to negotiate and to dialogue about those issues in which we still have differences of opinion.

I should like to conclude my remarks with the story of the man who was considering with one of the members of his family the planting of a shade tree at his home. The other party reminded this man that it would take about 25 years before the shade tree would be of any use. The original proposal was that they would plant the tree next week. Upon averting to the fact that results would require 25 years, the man resolved to not wait until next week, but to plant the tree today.

To the extent that bonifide co-ops require organization, education, training, financing, structuring, and therefore, a certain amount of time, it becomes our duty not to wait until next week, but to begin today to move us toward the situation in which the cooperative movement will truly serve the needs of all our people, particularly those in low-income brackets whose needs are great.

HILTON HEAD FISHING COOPERATIVE, INC.
POST OFFICE BOX 1067
HILTON HEAD ISLAND, SOUTH CAROLINA 29928

REQUEST TO THE FIELD FOUNDATION

The Hilton Head Fishing Cooperative, Incorporated, requests a grant of $46,033.00 from the Field Foundation to expand its present operation at Hilton Head Island, South Carolina. The expansion of the Co-op would include an addition to the present plant which would provide more space for expanded operation, the purchasing of additional equipment, and the hiring of additional workers on a permanent basis.

In January, 1967, ten low-income blak men of Hilton Head Island, all with previous experience and/or interest in the fishing industry, came together and formed a cooperative for the purpose of catching and marketing seafoods with the initial step being shrimp. The formation of the co-op was inspired by a feasibility study that was done by Continental-Allied, Inc., 1035 30th Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., under contract with the Office of Economic Opportunity.

A loan of $66,290.00 was obtained from the Farmers Home Administration for the initial construction with sufficient funds included to begin operation. The co-op opened the first of October, 1968, but after two months of operation, we have found that the present facilities are inadequate to handle the volume of business that is anticipated in the future. There is also a desperate need for additional equipment, and no funds were included in the loan for the hiring of needed personnel.

Low-income residents of the Island have always strived toward self-reliance and independence, even years before the bridge which connects Hilton Head Island to the mainland, was constructed. During that time, the population of the Island was predominantly black, and people depended on crops grown on small acreage but mostly on shrimp, fish, crabs and oysters which they caught and sold at a minimal price. After construction of the bridge, the black low income people of the island found themselves caught up in a rapidly growing tourist area with no substantial means of earning a living that had real hope for the future. The fishing cooperative is the beginning of a dream that a large seafood industry could be established on the island owned, operated and controlled by the people of the island.

During the short peiod of time that the co-op has been in operation, one can hear remarks like "We are proud to have the fishing co-op. For the first time we have something that is 'ours.'" There has already been marked improvementsxin the living conditions of some members of the co-op. One member has renovated his home and two others have installed deep wells and indoor plumbing in their homes. The co-op, even with its limited operation, has provided work for some of the high school students which has enabled them to remain in school more days per week.

The co-op is chartered by the State of South Carolina and has license required by the state for operation.

The need of funds to expand the Hilton Head Fishing Cooperative, Inc. during the "off-season" is crucial. If these funds could be obtained by the first of the year, 1969, most of the work could be done by the members themselves and thus save the cost of labor which is not included in the amount estimated.

At present membership in the co-op is ten, but as the business expands, we hope that new members will join. The only requirement is that a member must own his vessel. It is our desire to establish a credit union through the fishing cooperative.

A grant of $46,033.00 from the Field Foundation would assist greatly the low-income people of Hilton Head Island toward self-reliance and self-pride.

A visit from a representative or representatives from the Field Foundation would be welcome at any time.

Dear Messrs.Fraser and Stoney:

Please forgive me this inexcusable delay in responding to your request. While we had no funds of our own available for this purpose, we had some hope that a small foundation in New York could be of assistance to you. That foundation has taken an unusually long time in responding to our inquiry in your behalf. To our great disappointment, the response was negative.

Do let us know if you have found some other solution to your problems.

Dear Mr. Broussard:

Please forgive me this inexcusable delay in responding to your letter. It was largely delayed because of the new tax bill which has made our own financial situation so uncertain. We still do not know what size operation we will have in the future, or what funds will be available to us. However, I am interested in knowing more about your work and your current needs.

Frankly, we would prefer, if money is available, to provide funds for some of your immediate program needs rather than for your publication program. We would, however, not rule this out entirely. Other possibilities, regardless of our financial means, would be editorial assistance and off-set printing, if this is still a need of your group.

Let me hear from you. And, again, my sincere apologies.

Sincerely,

Dear Sir:

Our group has been active in human relations and civil rights work for several years. We are operating a credit union for poor people, a vegatable cooperative comprised of poor blacks, two day care centers in rural areas, and the first Single Dwelling Rent Supplement Program in the U.S.A. We are also working closely with farm laborers through Mr. H.L. Mitchell of New Orleans, and al so work closely with anti-poverty programs. Now we are hoping to expand our field of operations and hope SRC can be of assistance to us.

This is our plan: to form a small publishing company that will (1)publish material dealing with black history in Louisiana(2) to discover, encourage and develope young Negro writers, poets, etc. We plan our first book to deal with the history of black people in Louisiana. As you know, such an operation is quite complex and expensive. We are starting literally on a shoestring and need all the help we can get. Is it possible to get a grant from SRC to help defray some of the cost of the first publication? Any amount, no matter how small, would be a great help. Perhaps SRC could do a feature article on our operation, or give us some free publicity or maybe even do our printing for us at a nominal rate. Thanking you in advance for any help you can give us, I am,

Sincerely,

Bernard Broussard

Self-help breaks the poverty cycle in Appalachia

Ben Poage

In the waning months of 1969, a struggling group of low-income East Kentuckians in the hard-core poverty counties of Wolfe and Breathitt needed help. They turned to the Commission on Religion in Appalachia (CORA), which extended aid through its self-help human/economic development task force. CORA provided staff and developmental costs for the Grass Roots Economic Development Corporation, a local economic development company.

The results today appear encouraging. GREDC, in the past three and one-half years, with the churches' help, has created four new local businesses with the potential of reversing the pattern of outmigration and breaking the cycle of poverty in that remote and difficult area of Appalachia. Independent, self-determined enterprises are now owned and operated by local residents.

Mr. Poage, a minister of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), was director of the Grass Roots Economic Development Corporation in Jackson, Kentucky, and currently is director of human/economic development for The Commission on Religion in Appalachia (CORA). An earlier article by Mr. Poage appeared in the May, 1971, issue of World Call.

CORA believes the Grass Roots Economic Development Corporation enterprises have shown that community economic development, using local resources and skills, is a heretofore ignored aspect of regional economics. It is an aspect that enhances and develops the local person, allowing for indigenous development of business and industry alongside the government-supported growth center factories.

Community development projects, such as this in Appalachia, focus the concerns of the church toward long-range solutions to human need on an economic base. They offer a platform from which poor people can begin to help themselves and thereby alleviate the misery of poverty, paternalism and colonial domination in their lives.

Near Bethany, Kentucky, on a winding rural road two miles off state highway 15, the fifty members of the Kentucky Mountains Feeder Pig Cooperative held a gala opening of their new building in mid-April, this year, complete with sandwiches, soft drinks and door prizes.

The three-year-old cooperative had reason to celebrate. It was organized to help its members market their pigs better, purchase feed and medicine more cheaply and show others in the area, especially low-income farmers, that this can be a profitable business. Plenty of low-income families live in Wolfe and Breathitt counties, the section of eastern Kentucky from which the cooperative draws its members. Many families have so little cash coming in that they raise as much of their food as possible; it's not uncommon for the only "store-bought" item at a meal to be a soft drink.

Feeder pigs are young hogs weighing up to forty pounds. When they reach this size, which takes about ten weeks, northern growers will buy them for finishing out to butchering size. One sow, which usually has two litters a year, can easily bring its owner $100 or more a year clear profit, if he joins the cooperative and follows its suggestions on feeding and care.

Before the existence of the cooperative, farmers had to sell their feeder pigs to "pen-hookers" who often doubled their money on pigs purchased in the area. Until the opening of the new building, Kentucky Mountains members' pigs were picked up by the cooperative's truck (procured through funds received from the Reconciliation program of the Disciples of Christ) which then delivered them to markets in Winchester and Lexington. Now pigs can be brought to the facility for sorting and holding in the front half of the building, and the purchaser's truck can pick them up from this central location.

The back half of the building is a feed store, open three days a week to any farmer in the area (not just cooperative members). It sells reasonably-priced feed—for pigs and dogs—and medicine. Cooperative members receive a percentage of the total amount of their purchases back at the end of the year, the percentage depending upon how much the store has sold during the year.

The cooperative also offers its members good breeding stock to elevate the bloodline of their herd—some of it donated by Heifer Project, Inc., of Little Rock, Arkansas.

Chairs from the gap

Four young Appalachians turn out hand-crafted quality rocking chairs, ladderbacks, children's rockers and stools in the small Sulfur Gap Chair and Woodworks Company near Jackson (Breathitt County), Kentucky. They have little trouble selling all they produce of that sturdy, handsome furniture (about 800 chairs a year).

The men, who took a sixteen-week on-the-job training course under a Department of Labor program to learn woodworking techniques, are all Appalachians who once worked in the north but were delighted to have a chance to come back to the mountains once employment was available to them. The factory is located in a rented building located on a good, useable, year-round road. The surrounding area has an abundance of the hard woods, chiefly walnut, which are used for the furniture.

In the two and a half years it has been in operation, there has been no turnover of personnel at all. The venture is a profit-sharing one which the workers will eventually own and control.

Most of the funding for the project came from the Presbyterian Church, through CORA, and from Office of Economic Opportunity craft training funds.

Rabbits, rabbits everywhere

Incorporated in November of last year, the Breathitt Rabbit Producers Corporation is about to get off the ground and into the cages of the building which the cooperative is now constructing. There is a lively market for rabbits from the area as experimental animals for national laboratories or for meat in urban areas.

Once the cooperative corporation is in operation, members will raise rabbits until they are weaned (at about eight weeks of age) and then deliver them to the corporation facility for holding until they can be guaranteed to be free of disease and have reached the age and size desired. The corporation expects to be able to guarantee to its purchasers a steady supply of somewhere between 12,000 and 25,000 rabbits a year, once it is fully operational.

Rabbit-raising is a traditional mountain activity, and many local families will probably be eager to participate. A family which has 100 pens each producing 30 rabbits a year is expected to be able to net $3,000 a year. In addition, members will be given a percentage of the profits at the end of the year in proportion to the number of rabbits they have delivered.

The Mt. TOP experience

The biggest project the Grass Roots Economic Development Corporation is involved in is just about to start construction. It will be the Mountain Timber Owners Processing Corporation, or Mt. TOP, Inc., a sawmill near Jackson, Kentucky, which will employ forty to fifty workers and will be a twin mill, processing both high-grade and low-grade lumber. The mill is expected to be in operation eight months after construction starts in the spring of 1974 and should have gross receipts of $750,000 to $1,000,000 a year.

The funding for the site and the building was procured from government agencies and local bankers (through a local development fund); hardest to obtain has been the high-risk working capital. The United Christian Missionary Society has loaned Mt. TOP $25,000 of this high-risk capital. The site is a 22½-acre plot near a spur of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad; already on the site is a residence that will be converted into offices for the mill.

The sawmill hopes for a mix of at least 50 per cent high-grade lumber that is more profitable to cut. It can make a profit, however, with 40 per cent high-grade to 60 per cent low. Low-grade lumber and high-grade scrap can be used for pulp for the frames of upholstered furniture or for industrial pallet parts. Bark can be sold for mulch.

The sawmill should have a great impact on the area, not only because it will employ so many workers but because it will spur logging operations. These mean more employment and may attract furniture factories or pallet assembly plants to the area. The feasibility study estimates that for every employee in the mill, one and one-half will be involved in logging. Small logging businesses may very well grow up in the wake of the factory.

He talks with Wesley Stoltsfus, chairman of the corporation's board of directors, about the new marketing facility being constructed. (Photo by Kenneth Murray)

Developing participation

Grass Roots Economic Development Corporation, the guiding spirit behind the four enterprises, wanted to suggest by its name how important local participation would be. Its purpose is to help establish new businesses owned, managed and operated by local people, a goal whose importance for Breathitt and Wolfe counties, where jobs are at a great premium, can hardly be overestimated.

The Commission on Religion in Appalachia's relationship to GREDC is indirect rather than direct. It has offered technical assistance, loans and subsidies and has also helped Grass Roots get all of these from government agencies, universities and foundations. CORA does not fund GREDC directly, but many of CORA's denominations contribute to its budget. For example, the Reconciliation program of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) has contributed $6,500 to GREDC in the past two years.

As it matures, the future looks bright for GREDC, its projects and its people. This is the model to which CORA proudly points as true grass roots development in Appalachia.

I'm enclosing, for your information, a copy of the Self-Help Human/Economic Development proposal and transmittal letter which went to Rod Petrey of the Clark Foundation earlier this month.

I realize that, from time to time, you do cross paths with Petrey and felt that it would be good if you knew what we were asking them for. I would also appreciate any comments you might have on the proposal and/or ideas about other places we might try to market it.

I enjoyed being with you in New York at the last NSF Board meeting.

The best for '74.

Dear Mr. Petrey:

I am enclosing three (3) copies of a proposal for funding the work of our Self-Help Human/Economic Development Task Force, and five (5) specific community economic Development (CED) corporations in Central Appalachia, during 1974.

This proposal comes out of our work in this area for the past five years and represents a closer and stronger supportative relationship between the Task Force and the CED corporations, which has been achieved during '73. You have visited some of these groups and understand first hand the necessity of the planning, organizational, technical, training and funding assistance the Self-Help Task Force can and must provide.

This proposal requests a total of $86,000 -- $36,000 to fund the supportative assistance role of the Self-Help Human/Economic Development Task Force, and $50,000 for vital staff and staff-related support of the five (5) CED corporations. These groups met together in December and asked Ben Poage to write their corporate section of the proposal reflecting the following specific needs for 1974 (page 3 of CED proposal):

. Appalachia CDC, Appalachia, Virginia	$ 4,000
. Frakes Feeder Pig Cooperative, Wofford, Kentucky	8,500
. Grass Roots Economic Development Corporation, Jackson, Kentucky	15,000
. Model Valley Industrial Development Corporation, Clairfield, Tennessee	7,500
. Scott-Morgan CDC	15,000

Yet, it is beyond the resources of the church to continue the necessary development support these corporations must have for survival and eventual victory.

We feel these symbols of effort represents a powerful force for Appalachian self-development. Therefore, in all humility, we now invite you to join us in this struggle; our hope for freedom and dignity.

SELF-HELP

HUMAN/ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

I. THE PROBLEM

Over one-third of Appalachia's 18,000,000 people earn an income of less than $3,000 a year, and two-thirds of the families earn less than $6,000. The mountain's young people are rapidly leaving the area for the increased opportunity of northern industrial cities. The widespread use of strip-mining, clear-cutting and speculative land development has led to the deterioration of Appalachia's environmental resources to the advantage of only a select few.

Wolfe and Breathitt Counties, in Kentucky, are prime examples of the depressed economic condition found throughout Central Appalachia. In the latest census, these counties were among the fifteen poorest in the nation. Per capita income was $1,119 in Breathitt County, with 55% of all families having income below the poverty level as compared to $1,083 in Wolfe County, with an even higher figure of 59% of all families having an income under the poverty level. Even worse, economically speaking, the median family income of those persons "up the hollows"--those not touched at all by county seat evidences of economic affluences--was rarely more than $1,000 per annum--and in many cases, families existed on home gardens and food stamps with no cash income at all.

Welfare, food stamps and other governmental aid programs cannot, by their very nature, begin the task of regionwide development necessary for improving the lives of the Appalachian residents.

In the past, huge amounts of federal money have been funded into the region, but little has trickled down to meet the real human development needs of the region. Government programs are traditionally acted out along brick and mortar and/or service lines, no matter what the original intent of the program might have been.

Regardless of individual income, however, Appalachia will remain an impoverished area without the parallel development of individual opportunity, ownership and decision-making power. At this point, native Appalachians have little opportunity to develop their own resources, human or economic. The scattered nature of the population makes the development of any widespread social action exceedingly hard. Jobs, provided by the predominant mining industry, have not contributed to the overall development of either the Appalachian worker or the region itself. In essence, the right to ownership and the right of individual liberty are meaningless in the face of an externally-controlled economy. And thus, the traditional and social education that historically enables Americans to choose or alter their life style has yet to be felt.

If Appalachian men and women are ever to develop individual or community business opportunities, their success will depend on the availability of good financial and technical assistance. Without such assistance, these attempts at self-development will surely fail.

II. THE PROPOSAL

The Commission on Religion in Appalachia is seeking the funds to support its Task Force on Self-Help Human/Economic Development for 1974.

Philosophy of CORA and the Self-Help Task Force

The Commission on Religion in Appalachia (CORA) is a non-profit organization established in 1966 by the seventeen largest national Christian denominations for the purpose of developing a coordinated approach to Appalachian development. CORA believes that only through internal organization and a philosophy of self-help will Appalachia achieve the freedom of choice necessary for vitality, and the autonomy necessary for pride that will promote functional redevelopment. Essentially, CORA wishes to act on the belief that increased participation by people is the key to changing the conditions under which many Appalachians live.

CORA hopes to accomplish this goal through local organization. In virtually every town, the church exists as a primary social institution, encompassing all aspects and ages of the community. Hence, the church offers, perhaps, the greatest potential for cohesive action with widespread results. Through the present framework of churches in the Appalachian communities, CORA can provide the social education, through the teaching and demonstration of problem-solving, which will act as a catalyst for Appalachia's own social action. However, CORA's purpose is in the development, implementation and self-direction of programs, rather than continued sponsorship.

Much of CORA's activity has been to help people find new ways of earning a reasonable income near home. At the same time, CORA initiated projects aimed at maintaining a sense of dignity and self-reliance among the people through its emphasis of local community control.

In 1968, CORA created the Self-Help Human/Economic Development Task Force to assist Appalachian community groups to help themselves in developing meaningful economic alternatives to poverty and outmigration.

Self-Help Human/Economic Development is based on the timeless Christian principle of ministering to the whole person--fostering dignity and feeling of individual worth--through the building of individuals and groups toward eventual self-sufficiency. No government agency is currently functioning--any place in the region--based on this principle.

The Task Force objectives are based on the belief that human resources and the strengthening of the democratic institutions, experiences and political awareness which can develop them, are the foundations upon which genuine Community Economic Development (CED) must be built.

The Task Force seeks to achieve these objectives through providing the technical and resource mobilization assistance to Appalachian men and women so that they are able to develop their own economic alternatives. Therefore, the Task Force program emphasizes:

The creation of local jobs for local people
Mobilizing and creating capital at the community level
Creating and expanding the rural economic base
Assuring control of the economic base by community residents to insure economic justice

In 1972, the Self-Help Task Force, in addition to its extensive practical field experience, conducted an in depth field survey of all the community economic development groups in Central Appalachia. (This was later compiled into a benchmark report for the Appalachian Regional Commission.)

Through its experience, survey and numerous conferences and workshops held with community and economic development groups in the region, CORA has recognized that for rural Appalachian communities, the sort of enterprises most likely to succeed are those that use local resources and skills similar to those Appalachians already have; enterprises which fit in with the traditional Appalachian way of life. However, organizing and operating their own businesses often necessitates management training and initial capital that is simply beyond the capacity of low-income rural citizens. This is where CORA, through the Self-Help Task Force, steps in.

With CORA's leadership, people in Appalachia are beginning to organize economic development corporations to help establish new businesses, which will quickly be self-sustaining, owned and operated by local people. To date, these direct efforts have helped organize businesses to include:

* Two feeder pig cooperatives which are currently helping hundreds of low income farmers in eastern Kentucky to market their pigs, to purchase feed and medicine more cheaply, and to supplement their incomes by more than $1,000 per year.

* A chair factory which turns out quality, hand-crafted rockers, ladderbacks and stools.

* A rabbit producing cooperative to raise laboratory research animals. Families in this cooperative can supplement their incomes by as much as $3,000 per year.

* A small factory in Tennessee which manufactures wood pallets--flat, lightweight, platforms for industrial use in product handling. A ready market is available for these pallets.

III. Task Force Accomplishments in the Last Four Years

-- Raised $1,250,000 for Community Economic Development (CED) in Appalachia: $282,000 from Church sources, $86,000 from foundations, $572,000 from government, and $310,000 from private sources. (See attached chart)

-- Mobilized 450 days of technical assistance valued at $125,000 from universities, government and other supportative agencies for CED in Appalachia.

-- Directly assisted local groups and individuals in starting more than 10 Economic Enterprises; a local development corporation, a feeder pig cooperative, a feed mill, a domestic rabbit industry, a furniture factory, a wood pallet factory, a primary wood industry, a food service cooperative, a federation of Appalachian craft groups, and several craft cooperatives which are directly providing more than 300 jobs.

-- Provided the leadership and forum for pulling Central Appalachia (CED) groups together to form a supportive base CED organization to facilitate the development of:

* A Central Appalachian MESBIC
* Government supported technical assistance and training organizations

-- Accomplished extensive research in the field of CED through:

* An Appalachian-wide craft survey identifying 120 groups with 5,000 low-income members
* Field interviewing and analyzing in depth, more than 25 CED groups in heartland Appalachia

This has resulted in the formation of the Federation of Appalachian Craft Groups, the publication of a workbook on: Structures for Cooperative Development, and a benchmark report on the status of CED in Central Appalachia.

-- Held five training conferences on low-income cooperative development, jointly sponsored, with the CSM Regional Economic Development Commission. A two-day Appalachian Cooperative Development Exchange and a tent display on cooperative development at the CSM Annual Meeting, provided staff support to five two-day workshops and one six-day training experience for church leaders on Economic Development as Christian Mission.

-- Helped in the organization and fund-raising efforts of the Appalachian Development Fund in order to provide a localized and specific source of grant funds for CED in Appalachia.

-- Less tangibly, but no less important, we have manifested the concern of "The Church" for the whole man, catalyzed the socio-economic, political, spiritual community in local communities, through providing project handles, developed some leaders and have given low income people a rallying point for self-development.

IV. Objectives of the Self-Help Task Force for 1974

The primary program objectives of the Task Force for 1974 are:

--- helping local people to analyze the current needs of their local community economic development (CED) units, including organization, technical and management assistance, training, marketing and funding.

--- engaging in research with community, through a stance of listening and working to develop CED and other tools capable of bringing about change in systems which will free people from dehumanization and poverty.

--- training church and community leadership for direct involvement in CED and indirect change to support CED.

--- supporting the development of affiliated organizations assisting CED through credit, technical assistance, training, marketing, political development, etc., including the intra-organization development and funding of a comprehensive rural CED program for Appalachia.

--- stressing the human side of development and economic justice through initiating processes of study, advocacy and action leading to the promotion of, and organizing, motivating and mobilizing for, self-help CED within church, community, agency and institutional structures in and serving Appalachia.

--- engaging in specific (but necessarily limited) technical assistance training and other support with existing projects (a priority to CORA-related projects) so that they can achieve actual human/economic developmental goals.

The Task Force will approach these objectives by assisting the development of Appalachian organizations through the strengthening of (A) Human Resources and (B) Economic Resources.

A. Human Resources

One of the most crippling aspects of Appalachian poverty is the low level of development of the region's human resources, and the scarcity of social institutions which might improve this situation among very low-income rural people. This basic lack stifles all aspects of life and locks the doors to economic opportunities for the people who need it most.

Human resources, and the strengthening of the democratic institutions and experiences which can develop them, are the foundations; only on this base can economic development be built. Efforts which reach the problem, in depth, must start here.

The human resources development conceived by the Task Force as essential to successful human/economic development starts with an appreciative understanding of the sub-culture of Appalachian poverty which has produced what Rev. Albert J. McKnight (Director of the Southern Cooperative Development Fund) calls "the undeveloped people." It builds on the insight that economic, human growth and community development concerns can be merged; indeed, they cannot be separated.

This approach points up the obvious but frequently ignored principle that economic development cannot be pursued by itself nor vis-a-vis; instead, it depends upon development of the whole person in the total social and political environment relevant to his entire life. This means working simultaneously with individuals and with structures, institutions and processes in which lives are shaped. Not many economic development programs have been willing to undertake this larger, deeper task, or have even seen it as necessary. The Self-Help Human/Economic Development Task Force proposes that such development is possible and necessary, but it must sensitively accomodate the pace and style of mountain life. Further, the Task Force dedicates itself to the refining of such development techniques, building on the strengths in mountain culture and pledges support of projects which are directed toward such development.

The human development thrust of the Task Force is acted out, by and large, in economic and community development base organizations. These organizations develop, in individuals, the ability to cooperate with others in groups to solve common problems, and most crucially, they develop those grassroots social structures in which the skills of democratic group participation, leadership and political understanding can be learned. In such groups, leadership is a function shared by all the members more than it is the right of an authority figure--as is the case in many mountain community groups.

B. Economic Resources

Behind the general regional situation, the economic development problem among the very low-income group might be pictured as a series of gaps which need to be closed:

--- The gap between large-scale, long-delayed regional efforts to bring in new industry, and the need for jobs now--this decade before this generation gives up and takes the dreary escape route to the urban slums.

--- The gap between economic growth centers and the hinterlands--both in physical and psychological distance.

--- The gap between available jobs requiring technological skills and the skill level of most of the unemployed or underemployed workers.

--- The gap between existing vocational and adult education programs, centralized and formally-conducted, and the need of the hard-core poor for such training in forms he can utilize.

--- The gap between the ability of the mountain man to work inventively and hard in enterprises close to his way of life which he can control and the capital and know-how needed to get such enterprises into operation.

It's toward the closing of these gaps that the Community Economic Development (CED) Program advocated by the Task Force is directed.

Community Economic Development emphasizes human and economic resource development with low-income groups, in order to create small decentralized, low-capital, high-yield businesses, being controlled by the workers and/or the community through cooperatively-organized community economic development corporations (LEDCs and CDCs).

Community Economic Development is comprehensive; it promotes realist development in the remote, rural areas of Appalachia and moves in concert with the overall economic development planning for Appalachia, alongside and in support of future larger-scale regional industrial development.

CED places the necessary emphasis on human, community and political development as the foundation for wholeistic economic development, and is realistic and hard-headed about the demands of each.

The CED self-help, cooperative approach at the grassroots level has been shown to have high "multiplier" value both as an entry point, and then in enhancing human resources development. While it may not be feasible for every operation to be a cooperative technically, the principles of self-help will always be present.

One important key to economic development among low-income communities is bridging the gaps referred to earlier. CED, as defined by the Self-Help Human/Economic Development Task Force is designed to innovate and experiment in this area, usually slighted by traditional growth center economics. The models and methodologies coming from task force learnings should prove valuable, not only for Appalachia, but for underdeveloped peoples everywhere.

V. Organization and Staffing of the Self-Help Task Force

The Self-Help Task Force is composed of selected Appalachian pastors, indigenous persons involved in grassroots community economic development, project leaders, and rural development specialists, (see Appendix for list of current Task Force members) who formulate and approve policy, develop program objectives, budget, etc.

Ten of the twelve members of the Self-Help Human/Economic Development Task Force are pastors, church project related persons, or specialists living and working in Appalachia. In addition, eight of those ten directly relate to grassroots community economic development efforts in the Central sub-region.

Ben Poage is the Director for CORA's work in Human/Economic Development. Ben Poage has had wide experience in community development programs and his background and assistance is most necessary for development of these Task Force programs. A resume for Mr. Poage is attached with this proposal. Specialized personnel may be assigned by the Task Force to specific projects depending on the technical needs of the project.

The Director will be assisted by a full-time secretary. The secretary's functions will include:

* telephone communication
* correspondence
* bookkeeping and financial record assistance
* filing
* operation of duplicating machines
* ordering supplies
* general staff support assistance

VI. Evaluation of Task Force Activities

The Project Objectives and Staff Work Program will be measured through monthly and annual progress reports covering:

Monthly

1. Specific program accomplishments in that month.

2. The actual number of man days given to specific priorities in that month.

3. The projected accomplishments for the next two months, including man days anticipated to achieve the projected activity.

Annually

1. Accumulative monthly reports.

2. Dollars and technical assistance given and generated for CED.

3. Projects initiated and served.

4. Training events conducted.

5. Research accomplished

6. Human development progress.

VII. Sources of Past Support

The Self-Help Task Force has received support in the past from the following organizations:

IX. Conclusion

The Commission on Religion is action-oriented. Its efforts through the Task Force on Self-Help Human/Economic Development have been to provide the technical assistance and capital for the people of the Appalachian area to approach community problems themselves. Since the creation of the Task Force, many Appalachian men and women now have self-owned and locally-operated employment opportunities for the first time. Assistance to the Self-Help Task Force is most important for continuation of the development of these new economic opportunities.

A PROPOSAL FOR THE FUNDING OF SPECIFIC COMMUNITY ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT CORPORATIONS IN CENTRAL APPALACHIA

I. The Area

The War on Poverty and the Appalachian Regional Commission's efforts to date have made little appreciable impact in improving the economic or the human conditions of Central Appalachia.

This sixty-county sub-region, stretching from southern West Virginia and western Virginia on the East, through eastern Kentucky to northeastern Tennessee in the West, is the home for 1.5 million people, a population which contains the most severe social and economic problems in the entire Appalachian region. The per capita personal income remains at 50 to 75% of the national average and much lower than other parts of the region. High school drop-out rates constituting the highest in the region remain 10% higher than that of the nation. The more mobile of the population continue to leave the area, and major investment capital, the life blood of indigenous development, flows out; 54 million dollars in 1970.[1]

> Effective programs to motivate the poor must be based on their economic involvement in projects, considered by them, as pressing and important. The poor can be assisted by helping them to help themselves. But, specific projects must be ones the poor themselves decide are pressing and urgent.

II. Community Economic Development - The People's Alternative

Yet, around the edges of the Appalachian Regional Commission's (ARC) road and growth center thrust; and the Office of Economic Opportunity's (OEO) largely band-aid approach, numerous indigenous grassroots economic development projects have emerged. The people's cry for jobs and higher income has found organizational roots in Community Development Corporations, Local Economic Development Corporations and Cooperatives stressing "Community Economic Development" (CED).

[1] See Checci and Company (ARC) Study, Capital Resources in the Central Appalachian Region.

> The target group of Community Economic Development is the low-income people who live in the isolated, small communities which comprise much of Appaalchia and are bypassed by most growth center development programs. The aim is to begin now to help the people at the "head of the hollow" create and successfully hold jobs in small, local businesses which they own and control. Thus, a real choice will be opened up -- to stay in the hollow with a decent income, or to take a job in more technically-advanced industry.

This dramatic demonstration of "self-help" on the part of local low-income people is the grassroots response to the real needs of rural Appalachia. However, it has been the church and foundations which have given primary support in continuing the early developmental efforts of these self-help projects.

III. The Status of CED in Central Appalachia

The Commission on Religion in Appalachia's Self-Help Human/Economic Development Task Force has completed an in-depth study of Community Economic Development (CED) in Central Appalachia. This study, completed under a contract with the Appalachian Regional Commission, includes the analysis of community economic development achievement, of obstacles to success that CED groups confront, and of the fundamental problems that underlie those obstacles. Conclusions, resulting from the analysis, leads the Task Force to believe that self-help economic activities in the 60 hard-core counties of Central Appalachia could be significantly bolstered and advanced through: (1) the legitimization and strengthening of community-based economic development institutions; (2) the availability of an adequate supply of the full mixture of necessary financial support, including investment capital, loan funds, and public and private grants; and (3) the application of a wide range of skills through management training and technical assistance programs.

This proposal is designed to meet the first recommendation: the legitimization and strengthening of community-based economic development institutions. (Community Development Corporations, Local Economic Development Corporations and Cooperatives hereafter referred to as CED corporations.)

The following CED corporations in Central Appalachia have requested funds from the Task Force for key staff support and facilities in 1974. The total amount of the request is $50,000 (specific amounts and needs follow). This proposal is a request for that funding.

IV. CED Corporations Requesting Funding

	CED Corporation	Address	Organizational Model	Counties Covered	Amount Requested

V. The CED Corporation Enterprises

The above CED corporations act as umbrella organizations and cooperatives providing packaging, technical assistance, trainins and, in many cases, marketing assistance for more than nine (9) enterprises (with several more being planned) that directly employ more than 250 persons at the present time. Many more Appalachians are indirectly assisted through providing the necessary raw materials, services, etc. The vast majority of the people employed were not previously working, primarily because the enterprises to provide jobs did not exist. Many of these employees were classified as hard-core poor, designated untrainable by government standards and destined to a life of hand-outs, misery and determinism by the structures in power.

> We believe that there is a close relationship between motivation, team effort, and economic advancement. People who control the financial processes of a region, control the power structure (economic, social and political) of that region. When the poor acquire economic motivation, they also acquire a greater team spirit and responsibility in all areas of community life. If economic progress is to result in a change in the quality and status of the poor American, then they must be involved in effecting this change.

The CED corporations and their existing enterprises are listed below:

1. Appalachia Community Development Corporation (CDC)	Appalachia Builders and Supply Co-op - workers cooperative for housing repair
	Bread and Chicken House - workers resturant cooperative
	Mountain Manor - retirement hotel
2. Frakes Feeder Pig Cooperative (Agricultural Cooperative)	Feed Mill - grind and mix mill for animal feed
	Feeder Pig Production and marketing
3. Grass Roots Economic Development Corporation (LEDC)	Mountain Timber Owners Processing Corp. (Mt. TOP) - primary/diversified wood industry (lumber, pallet and furniture parts)
	Sulphur Gap Chair & Wood Works Co. - Chair and furniture manufacturing and marketing
	Kentucky Mountains Feeder Pig Co-op - feed sales, feeder pig production and marketing
	Breathitt Rabbit Producers Corp. - domestic rabbit production and marketing for laboratory use

4. Model Valley Industrial Development Corporation (CDC)	Model Valley Folk Arts - handcraft production and marketing Clairfield Pallet Co. - industrial wooden pallet production and marketing (under spin-off LDC; Clairfield Local Development Co.)
5. Scott-Morgan Community Development Corporation (CDC)	woodcrafts and furniture industry in development

The economic salvation for Heartland Appalachia is not through enticing outsiders to come in and set up factories, but is found in our own ability to use our human and natural resources, with some outside capital and technical assistance, to launch community-owned and run enterprises.

VI. The Support Role of the Self-Help Human/Economic Development Task Force

The Self-Help Task Force program, organized in 1968, is designed to help Appalachian communities to help themselves in developing meaningful economic alternatives to poverty and outmigration. The Task Force objectives are based on the belief that human resources, and the strengthening of the democratic institutions, experiences and political awareness which can develop them, are the foundations upon which genuine Community Economic Development (CED) must be built.

The Task Force seeks to achieve these objectives through providing the technical and resource mobilization assistance to Appalachian men and women so that they are able to develop their own economic alternatives. Therefore, the Task Force program emphasizes:

The creation of local jobs for the local people
Mobilizing and creating capital at the community level
Creating and expanding the rural economic base
Assuring control of the economic base by community residents to insure economic justice

Specifically, the Task Force will directly relate to the five (5) preceeding CED corporations in 1974 through organizational and planning assistance, technical assistance, training, funding and credit assistance.

Basically, CED corporations have five early functions in community economic development:

- community organization
- need identification
- entrepreneural/enterprise identification
- project packaging *
- resource mobilization *

Later functions include:

- coordination of training, technical assistance and marketing for developing enterprises *
- continued three-fold linkage between the community, the enterprise and resources supporting the enterprise *
- performing a "trust function" in capital-sharing operations
- developing and acting out successful "spin-offs" of maturing businesses *
- continuing the involvement, identification, packaging, mobilization process *

The Task Force, as requested, will relate at any functional level. However, it will target its assistance at the functional levels followed by an asterisk (*) in the preceeding outline.

During 1974, the Task Force will also continue to develop the following support institutions which will, in turn, directly relate to the needs of the CED corporations:

1. A Central Appalachian MESBIC[2] (through Equal Opportunity Finance)

The need for a MESBIC is based on the researched and experiencial belief that if Appalachian men and women are ever to develop individual or community business opportunities, their success will depend on the availability of good financial and technical assistance from outside sources. The MESBIC program, based upon a concept of fianncial leverage and with a staff of business experts, can provide the necessary assistance. The MESBIC is designed to aid minority groups' entrance into private business by providing sources of credit and technical assistance in such areas as accounting, insurance and related management services. Technically, this service, operated by the Small Business Administration and the Office of Minority Business Enterprise of the Department of Commerce, is available to "disadvantaged" persons, regardless of race, and offers a greatly-needed opportunity to new Appalachian entrepreneurs, in the hard core poverty central sub-region.

The MESBIC operates by establishing federally-regulated investment companies which are granted advantageous tax treatment and which can then lever from federal sources matching funds in the ratio of three or more to one for monies they raise for use of loans to disadvantaged small businessmen. The MESBIC is required to have a specialized investment policy under which it provides not only loans, but management assistance to qualified enterprises. The Central Appalachian MESBIC will be organized initially as a part of Equal Opportunity Finance--EOF (the Ashland Oil/Courier-Journal MESBIC).

$150,000 is being sought for investment in EOF which will, in turn, be matched on a three to one basis by SBA funds and the entire $600,000 will be utilized for loans in Central Appalachia. Moreover, this amount, based on existing MESBIC experience, can lever additional SBA Guaranteed Bank Loans in excess of two million dollars.

[2] Separate proposal available upon request.

2. A Mountain Management Institute[3]

Community Economic Development projects established in local mountain communities suffer from a lack of local trained managers. Many projects, therefore, end up with outside management, which hinders the process of long range development and self-determination. This institute would train local leadership to be managers and bookkeepers of community businesses and cooperatives. The Institute is already underway in the limited sense that two workshops (one in bookkeeping and one in management) have been held and two others are in the active planning stages. The proposal for this program has been submitted to several church and foundation sources. Support has been assured from several church bodies. Also, the Glenmary Society of the Catholic Church has made one of its priests, long active in the work of the Self-Help Task Force, available on a quarter-time basis to develop the Institute.

> Our challenge is not to join mainstream America. It is to recreate a renewed and authentic form of what the mountains have always been. From the time that the first white settlers deliberately cut their ties with the coastal culture of colonial America to start a new life in this wilderness, the mountains have offered an alternative to mainstream America. . . .
> The task before us is to renew this alternative and endow it with the capabilities (including an adequate economic base) it will need to survive the late twentieth century America.

Model Valley Industrial Development Corporation

Even small wonders are at a premium these days. The sights of the United States in 1972 seemed geared millions of miles above and beyond the concerns of the small populations of the unincorporated areas in Eastern Tennessee and Kentucky of which this article will treat. In spite of the unbelievable pace of this industrial minded nation, there are individuals and groups of individuals who have proven that human interest can generate steam that is recreative to the economy and the general community interest. Such is the intent of the men and women who comprise the Model Valley Industrial Development Corporation (MVIDC). For reasons that are more easily felt than expressed, the members of the MVIDC have come to believe deeply in what could be the future of their valley. They seem to grasp well the basic concept that survival is dependent upon their ability to band together as a force intent upon developing creative avenues for building strength economically, culturally, socially.

MVIDC is a not for profit Community Development Corporation organized for the sole purpose of facilitating healthy growth within the rural communities of Clairfield, Egan, Hamblintown, White Oak, Duff, Stinking Creek, Habersham, and Morely in Tennessee, and Pruden, Fonde, Frakes, and Davisburg in Kentucky—an area often referred to as Model Valley.

The following explanation will provide the reader with an account of the struggles and development of the MVIDC. Since the MVIDC has been legally organized as a Community Development Corporation, we will henceforth refer to it by the "CDC" title.

Model Valley is entirely rural, meaning that its communities are unincorporated, have a coal mining economy, are totally dependent on the nearest towns, have poor housing and few jobs, impure water and wornout soil, no high schools and roads which are all too often hazardous. Hence, another nonprofit activity such as the CDC is easily understood by the residents of the valley. What makes the CDC different from other local groups, however, is that it includes interest in profit making endeavors which will supply financial returns for those needed community services that engender no return of themselves.

This element of total community concern is essential to the life of the CDC. It involves risks that rarely emerge as complete successes. Total community concern is about people first. A sound economy is simply the means to achieve a better world for the members of the community.

The group, as it uniquely relates to our "rural" situation, does in some ways provide services that would ordinarily be handled by an incorporated town, thus offering some experience in government otherwise denied. For example, there is no tax revenue coming into the CDC, but the group has been able to develop programs that do bring revenue—revenue that can be used for communtiy development.

The CDC has 25 members. The executive board composed of three men working for coal companies and one craftswoman meet regularly with a staff of four people (two local and two outsiders). They are secretary, promoter and sales manager, economist, and community developer. Committees, other work groups and independent groups that have relations with the CDC meet when necessary. By and large the mutual support and understanding, through common goals and struggles, are building a more cohesive community.

Although there are no mechanisms for public voting, community opinions are voiced at public meetings and via the involvement of people as committee members. The rewards for involvement in this manner are few, for failure is more often known than success. Nonetheless, the common good is served through these individuals who are able to tangle with the fickleness of such a venture.

There is no established relationship of the CDC with the County Courts, County Planning Commission, Development District, State Planning Commission, or ARC. This is probably due to the fact that the Development Corporation receives no government funds and because there is no legal, established, or official channel for CDC to relate to such public bodies. On the one hand, we simply do not possess the necessary machinery to have elected officials, and, on the other, our state and federal governments lack the know-how of dealing with unincorporated areas. For these reasons the CDC sees itself in a position of urgency to help search for the solutions to the problems facing rural Appalachian communities.

Without at least a minimum of funds and basic personnel, the council could not function. For five years it has managed and has learned through trial and error the beginning steps of growth. In the years to come the group will endeavor to increase its understanding of the processes which lead to eventual economic independence. Until that time, however, outside assistance is essential.

The most current venture of the CDC has been to initiate discussion and technical advice toward the planning for the development of a village square. Clinic facilities, office space, meeting hall, craft shop, general store, etc., would constitute a square. Several of these groups have developed to the point whereby they could pay their own rent. Such a project could prove to be an excellent business investment. It could be designed aesthetically as well as usefully and, moreover, it would be socially enriching to the members of the community.

But the village square is still very much in the dream stages. The firstborn of the CDC is the Clairfield Pallet Company, a very concrete and positive thrust forward and an investment in the valley's future.

When it became apparent that a pallet factory could be a sound business venture, the CDC approached other members of the community inviting them to form a LDC (Local Development Corporation.) This move was necessary since SBA (Small Business Administration) loans could not be offered to the CDC if it held shares in the new company, which was, of course, a major objective for the CDC. The LDC, then, took on a functionary role—Model Valley's "bureaucracy". But more than this, the members of the LDC have demonstrated their faith and support in the overall endeavor to the Model Valley Industrial Development Corporation.

Along with the support and shared faith, there is a ring of permanency to the LDC. The members recognize their 15 year committment in which to repay their debt to SBA and eventually, the many other folks who loaned them the 10% that had to be put up in order to obtain a loan from SBA.

The total amount of capital that was necessary in order to make a pallet factory in reality was $90,000. SBA gave loans for land, building and equipment. Money for wood supply and salaries was raised by the CDC. A breakdown of funds looks something like this:

SBA	$40,000
Bank	$20,000
Raised in stock	$30,000
	$90,000

The LDC put in 10% of the SBA loan—$6,000, while the CDC maintained control of the factory by purchasing $15,000 worth of stock. Although volunteered services could have represented a sizable amount toward the LDC's 10% share of the SBA loan, such contributions were not acceptable. Most of these funds came from the churches, foundations, and interestingly, from two other community groups.

The LDC has come to be an integral fact in the growth process of Model Valley. In the near future it may well be called upon to request future SBA loans for a sewing factory, a saw mill and a village square. It is already in the process of appealing for church funds for the required 10% of whatever future needs arise from the community. MEMO

TO: BOARD OF DIRECTORS
BOARD OF ADVISORS
AFFILIATES AND SUPPORTING ORGANIZATIONS

FROM: ELMER L. SHIRRELL, CHAIRMAN OF BOARD

SUBJECT: FUND RAISING DINNER

The Chairman of our Committee on Affiliates, Mrs. Elsie W. Johnson, announces that arrangements have been completed for our Annual Fund Raising Dinner to be held Wednesday, March 16, 1955 at 6:30 p.m. in the Terrace Casino - Hotel Morrison.

Our main speaker will be Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of Southern Regional Council, and one of the foremost authorities on the status of Negroes in the South. The Chicago Tribune of January 4, 1950 carried a feature story on an interview with him. "From a national standpoint, (our treatment of minorities) is the most urgent of all domestic issues". More information about Dr. Mitchell, who incidentally is a Rhodes scholar and has a record of distinguished service in Federal administration and labor organizations, will reach you in the near future.

Tickets will be $5.00 of which $4.89 will go to the hotel for the meal, tips and taxes, leaving no margin for the Council's benefit.

IMPORTANT:

1. You are asked to go to work immediately and fill reservations for tables which will seat 6,8, or 10 persons respectively. We suggest that if you are not able to fill a whole table, you may want to combine with another group to do so. Since this is a fund raising dinner it is hoped that each table will include at least two new guests who will be able to make substantial contributions to the Council.

2. Our Advance Gifts Committee will appreciate if you send us the names of two or three potential substantial contributors whom you feel would not attend the dinner but could be contacted for advance gifts.

3. As last year, we are preparing attractive invitations for your use. Let us know how many you would like; they will help you fill your tables.

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

Thank you so much for your telegram and letter, with enclosures, of January 10. Our Board is very pleased indeed that you have consented to be with us on the occasion of our Annual Dinner.

Since desegregation of schools at the moment is in everybody's thought and it seems likely that it will be still more so in March, our Board feels that, unless you have already a subject in mind, they would be interested to hear you discuss the effect of the Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954 on feeling, attitudes, and practices in the South, and how this decision will have its effect on other fields in which discrimination is practiced.

I hope you understand that this is only a suggestion. But I would be grateful if you could let me know as soon as possible what subject you wish to discuss and what the title of your talk will be.

Connected with the dinner is the presentation of our Annual Abraham Schwartz Award which last year went to Archibald Carey. I am enclosing a memo which gives details. This year's recipient has not been selected yet. A few of our publications are being sent to you under separate cover.

Some of the details of the dinner are contained in the enclosed letter. We will let you have further details as our preparations mature.

With kind regards,

Sincerely,

Bruno Tausig

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

We have settled on the title "De-segregation in Southern Schools—Expanding Frontiers of Equality".

This may seem somewhat long and unwieldy, but we felt that it took care of the main point of your discussion with some phases which we would like to have emphasized.

It is, as you know, easy for the northern states to become complacent about their "excellence" in the matter of human relations. We feel that the whole impact of the segregation decision will spill over into other areas of our national living.

Although segregation does not exist by law in Illinois, in practice, it is very evident, because of housing conditions, school transfers and custom. As de-segregation is enforced in the South it seems to us that it will affect neighborhoods, access to other public accommodations, medical services and the like.

It is for this reason that we use the term "Frontiers" with the hope that it will be possible for you to touch on the implications of the Supreme Court in these other fields.

It would also seem to us that "equality" implies problems of human dignity as well as simple services. We are, therefore, interested in the implication of the decision in relation to the human qualities emphasized by it.

Lastly, there is much loose talk in Chicago about newcomers to the city at this time—This includes whites, Negroes and Puerto Ricans. I think if you might be able to touch on the values people bring with them to Chicago and some of their expectations about the city it would be most helpful.

Founded in 1943 not for profit to promote equal opportunity for all and to coordinate and initiate civic efforts to eliminate inter-group tensions.

I do want you to know how very much we appreciate your taking time out of your busy schedule to be with us in Chicago.

Sincerely,

Robert C. L. George

Dear Dr. Mitchell:

As things get underway for the dinner on the sixteenth, I thought it might be helpful to give you the following information.

A suite has been reserved for you at the Morrison Hotel for Wednesday night. We would be happy to meet you on your arrival if you can give us the details of your plans for travel.

The metropolitan press has requested an opportunity for a press conference with you which we will set up for 2:30 Wednesday afternoon if you can be available by then.

We are not planning a reception in the formal sense; however, the members of the Board and a few guests would appreciate having a chance to chat with you before the meeting; so we are asking them to come to the hotel around six o'clock.

It will be our very real endeavor to begin serving at 6:45 and to conclude the program by 9:30 to 9:45. With this in mind, we will hope to give you the time from 8:45 to 9:30 or a little longer if you desire it. Knowing something of the nature of the speakers for the awards who will precede you, we will have accomplished something of a minor miracle to be this sharply on time. I also add that the appeal for funds will come prior to your speech; however, we have become applied psychologists after a number of these affairs and would like to hold our audience through the all too painful extraction process, then let them enjoy the kind of talk you give so beautifully.

If you desire any further information, please let us know.

Dear Mr. George:

Many thanks, and I am looking forward to the dinner on the 16th.

As you know, I have to be in Cincinnati the night before to talk to the Urban League. I will ride the Riley the morning of the 16th. She leaves Cincinnati at 8:30 a.m. and I believe gets to Chicago around 1:00. In any case, no earthly need for anybody to meet me. I will get myself over to the Morrison Hotel and claim my room which you have so kindly engaged and be available to the press at 2:30 p.m. at the Morrison Hotel that afternoon. Or if the press wants me moved somewhere else, I will appear where they say.

All straight to be on hand at the Terrace Casino at 6:00.

My guess is that the kind of speech you want depends more on how the guy feels than on what is in his head. I will try to be feeling good.

Dear Mr. George:

Here are the expenses for that part of my recent trip from Cincinnati to Chicago and back as far as Cincinnati: Train (day coach) Cincinnati to Chicago, $11.50; plane, Chicago to Cincinnati, $20.90; taxis, $.75; tip, $25; meals, $.81; telephone, $.15; airport bus, $1.25; total I figure is $35.61.

If you can afford some modest honorarium on top of that, our Council would be grateful, but I acknowledge the working of the principle of inter-agency commenting.

Dear Miss Draper:

The Southern Regional Council is tremendously interested in arranging for exhibit of "Contributions of the Negro to American Life." It is possible for us to arrange to have this material exhibited in at least forty-three cities in the Southeast. We should like to do it in connection with our program of education in race relations, and at the same time to familiarize the people with the types of things that can be done to promote human understandings.

Will you advise me as to the possibilities of securing this exhibit for use in the South, or for securing one or two copies of the duplicate which you are having made.

I may not have the correct information on the character and conditions of this exhibit. Nevertheless, I do wish that you would advise me specifically as to what I may do to arrange for its showing in the South.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Reid:

Thank you very much for your letter of September 20th and needless to say, I am very pleased and excited that your organization can arrange to have our exhibit, THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN LIFE, shown in forty-three cities in the Southeast. Under separate cover, I am sending you a set of photographs of the exhibit so that you may exactly evaluate its content. You realize, however, that the exhibit itself is larger in size (each placard is 20" x 30").

We are now in the process of having fifty duplicates of the exhibit made up. Heretofore, we have been circulating ten copies of the exhibit but we find that these were not enough to meet all our requests. Our fifty new exhibits will be available for sale. As this organization is a non-profit educational group, we will sell them at cost which is approximately $26.00 a set - certainly not more than $30.00. Frankly, we expect these exhibits to be in great demand - so, I suggest if you are interested in buying a number of them that you let me know as soon as possible. They are also available for loan. In the past, we have had no specific charge for loaning these exhibits but have asked organizations to pay what they can. All money received goes toward the maintenance of exhibits.

Enclosed you will find a brochure which describes the exhibit. We are in the process now of making up a new brochure which gives some specific information as to where our original ten exhibits went and what the response to them was. I will send one of these new brochures to you as soon as they are ready.

If you have any further questions, please do not hesitate to write me.

Very sincerely yours,

There is a very important conference being held in Atlanta on November 1 and 2. If it is possible to receive this exhibit by that time, we shall be able to do a very effective job of distribution in the Southern States where so little of this sort of thing has been shown. Can this be done?

Mr. Guy B. Johnson, Exec. Director
THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL
Room 432

RECEIVED
JAN 17 1947
Southern Regional Council

Dear Mr. Johnson:

Because of the active interest of your organization in promoting and safeguarding the essence of the American ideal of a democratic way of life, we invite your cooperation. We want you to help us select those individuals who, during 1946, have done the most for the advancement of the democratic ideal and the promotion of racial and religious tolerance and equality.

The Council Against Intolerance in America first established the Thomas Jefferson Prize for the Advancement of Democracy in 1943; the award that year being made to the late Senator Norris of Nebraska. In that year our country was engaged in armed struggle against a ruthless enemy without our gates. This year, the first full year of peace, we feel that it is especially timely to call attention to those individuals who have kept alight that Torch which Thomas Jefferson handed on to us, one hundred and twenty years ago.

In re-instituting this award, the Council recognizes that many individuals, in many different fields, have rendered outstanding service in this cause. It has been decided, therefore, to award not one, but five Thomas Jefferson Prizes; one each, in the following categories: Public Service, Education, Science, Literature-Journalism, and The Arts.

These prizes will be presented at a Jefferson Day ceremony to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. While the Council itself has selected nominees in each category for this honor, we feel that the traditional democratic process is the only logical means by which to determine the winners of this year's Thomas Jefferson Prizes. Ballots are therefore being sent to a carefully-selected list of organizations which, like your own, are in the forefront of the struggle to preserve, maintain, and promote the democratic ideal.

On the enclosed ballot, we have named several outstanding individuals in each category, but space is provided for writing the names of other nominees. We urge you to avail yourself of the opportunity to choose the five individuals who, in your estimation, have done the most during the year 1946 to advance the democratic ideal and to combat intolerance, whether these be ones we have named or not. We urge you, too, to note that in order to allow time for tabulating results, these ballots must be returned to us not later than January 25, 1947.

Thank you for your cooperation in a common cause!

Cordially yours,

Henry A. Atkinson

RECEIVED
SEP 15 1947
Southern Regional Council

September 1947

Dear Friend:

Alarming reports from all sections of the country tell of recent outbreaks of racial and religious prejudice. Intolerant groups and individuals have repeatedly violated the basic American tradition of freedom and equality for all. Bigotry has openly assailed the homes, the schools and the welfare of our nation.

To avert this menace in time is the task of the Council Against Intolerance. By awakening the American people through the press, the radio, the churches and public institutions, we are engaged in exposing and preventing these traitorous attacks on our democratic way of life.

Above all, through education we can and must safeguard our children against the ravages of race and religious hatred. The Council has undertaken to distribute, without charge, to schools and teachers throughout the country thousands of maps, manuals, films and recordings which have proved themselves effective antidotes against the poison of bigotry.

To continue and intensify this nationwide program, our Council calls on you to purchase and use the enclosed Seals of Tolerance. If you have aided our Seal Campaign in the past, we hope that you will increase your support at this critical time. If these are your first Council seals, we earnestly urge you to send a dollar or as much more as possible today.

As one who upholds the American ideal of Abraham Lincoln -- "WITH MALICE TOWARD NONE" -- I look forward to receiving your generous contribution.

Cordially yours,

Henry A. Atkinson

Southern Regional Council

Mr. Guy B. Johnson, Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Ga.

Dear Mr. Johnson:

"The Springfield Plan" is a method practised in public schools of one of the nation's communities to promote good will toward all Americans regardless of their national, racial or religious backgrounds. That there are many other such projects taking place throughout the country is an encouraging factor but they too need to be recorded to make them available for the study and inspiration of other communities.

Mr. James Waterman Wise and I, will in a few days, commence gathering material for a new book on human relationships to be published shortly. The book, tentatively called, "It Works", will consist of a bird's-eye view of what numerous local groups are doing in the field of bettering human relationships toward the realization that: Democracy is People - Living Together as Equals.

We will undertake an extensive trip, covering every region of the country as well as recording varied types of activities. We will show in documentary pictures and text such projects as:- the exchange of hospitality between the children of Quincy, Mass. and Harlem, N. Y.; an unequivocal defense by Superintendent of Schools in Gary, Ind. of the right of Negro children to attend the schools together with others; practising democracy in the South's Black Mountain College; defense of civic rights of Mexican-Americans; etc, etc.

You undoubtedly know and are interested in some of the worthwhile work done along similar lines in your community. You even might have hoped, for some time, that such work would find a place in a volume that would portray the meaning of the real America.

If you will describe to us briefly the projects you deem appropriate for such consideration giving names of the people whom we may contact, we will be most thankful to you.

Hoping for your kind cooperation and in anticipation of your early reply, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Alexander Allard

Dear Mr. Alland:

Thank you for your letter of October 2 addressed to Guy Johnson. Guy has gone back to Chapel Hill, and I have taken over his desk.

I enclose a recent issue of our little magazine New South. It may not be very exciting, but I think you will find it quite helpful if someone would seek further into the use of Negro police in some of these cities. This was a step which people said ten years ago would not work, but it does work. Finding out why and how it works would be of interest.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Dear Mr. Alland:

Your letter of February 9 has remained unanswered because of my absence from the city.

We are glad that you and Mr. James Waterman will be in Atlanta about the end of February, as it happens we are having a workshop on civil rights for Southwide leaders, at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, 731 Peachtree Street, on February 27, beginning at 10 o'clock, with an evening session at Sisters Chapel, Spelman College. We will be very happy to have you two with us that day, and we trust that you can arrange your schedule accordingly.

Very truly yours,

BULLETIN

MEETING OF DELEGATES.... BILTMORE HOTEL, JULY 26, The meeting of delegates was very well attended, and achieved outstanding results. Nearly 200 delegates filled the conference room to hear the outline of future plans presented by Dr. Farnham, and to indicate their eagerness to help carry out these plans. A report of the meeting follows:

Dr. Farnham opened the meeting by announcing the incorporation of the Council. The Executive Secretary, Mr. Wile, read the proposed By-Laws. Several additions to these By-laws were suggested and after discussion, it was moved, seconded and carried that they be referred back to committee for the incorporation of these changes, and resubmitted at the next meeting of delegates for final approval.

Dr. Farnham then addressed the delegates on the main subject of the meeting, and proposed that the Council divide itself into five working Sections on post-war economic security for minorities, press relations, cultural projects, educational patterns, and finance and membership.

THE FULL TEXT OF DR. FARNHAM'S ADDRESS IS APPENDED TO THIS REPORT.

The floor was then opened to discussion. Mr. Philip M. Connelly spoke on the extreme importance of the Section on post-war, and urged that a major part of the Council's efforts be channelled in this direction.

Several delegates spoke on the need for educating the public on the significance of political measures, and urged that the Section on education make researches of this nature, not from the point of view of partisan politics, but rather strictly non-partisan appraisals of the effect on civic unity.

Also further discussion on how best to carry out the plans outlined by Dr. Farnham, it was moved, seconded and carried that the five Sections be constituted, and that their first duty would be to bring in a report on their functions, and the best means of carrying them out. Fifty delegates indicated their desire to work actively on one or another Section, as follows: 18 Post-war, 5 Press, 12 Cultural, 11 Educationa, 4 Finance and Membership.

BE SURE TO TELL THE OFFICE WHICH SECTION YOU WILL WORK IN.

HOLLENBECK YOUTH COUNCIL MEETING.. On Thursday, August 10, at 8 p.m., at the Soto-Michigan Center, 1000 teen-aged youths of Mexican, Negro and Jewish extraction will hold a get-together. We are bringing them Rex Ingram, Anthony Quinn and Jack Guilford, to sit with the boys in a round table discussion on the advantages of civic unity. There will also be exhibition boxing, and jitterbugging in the approved styles of each of the 3 groups represented. Admission is free and you are invited to attend.

COMIC STRIP..... Unlimited copies of the excellent comic strip, "THEY GOT THE BLAME" are available for the asking, at the office of the Council. These strips should be given the widest possible distribution.

ADDRESS BY DR. FARNHAM..... The Council for Civic Unity was born in the period of fear, uncertainty and hysteria which gripped the community as the aftermath of the wave of riots that swept the country. It was formed to bring together organizations and leaders from all sections of the community, so that they might solve their problems together, and so achieve the greatest degree of unity behind the war effort. The Council made significant strides in this direction, and performed many public services which it might not be amiss to review.

You all remember the mass meeting held at the Philharmonic on April 24th, at which 2500 people were addressed by Mayor Bowron, Orson Welles, Edward G. Robinson and Jennifer Jones, and were entertained by some of the best of Hollywood's talent. At that meeting our message was passed on to many people who had not been conscious of the problems before, and who have since become most friendly toward the aims and aspirations of the Council.

Previously we had held a meeting on the Los Angeles Railway problem, and were the first to focus the attention of the community on a situation which is now to have a public hearing before the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee.

In addition, we presented 16 radio programs over KFWB, distributed a total of over 17,000 pieces of literature, including bulletins, pamphlets such as "The Races of Mankind", and other pertinent material. Several of our affiliated organizations availed themselves of our speakers' bureau,and ordered literature from us for distribution to their own memberships.

The Council is in communication with over 100 similar Councils in other cities, and exchanges mailing with them to keep in touch with progress being made in all parts of the country. It also keeps in close touch with the Mayor's Committee on Home Front Unity, and the County Committee on Inter-racial Progress, so that the activities of these three committees can be coordinated.

Yes, progress has been made, and a fair degree of inter-community cooperation has been achieved behind the war effort.

Today, however, we must in all honesty report that these promising results are being threatened, and unless we can give them vigorous and organized support we stand in danger of losing our foothold on the ground we have so far gained.

Our main achievement to date has been that of uniting the community behind the war, by convincing the people that such unity was absolutely necessary to winning the war. Without this unity we could not make use of man-power, and without full use of man-power we could never have hoped to achieve the production levels which are now beating the Axis powers to their knees. While there was prejudice against Negro workers, or Mexican workers, or Jewish workers, we were unable to throw our full weight behind the war effort, and for this reason disunity had to give way to unity.

But now that basis for unity is shifting. The end of the war is in sight, and many people think that the end of unity is therefore also in sight. They do not yet see that unity will be just as necessary to win the peace as it now is to win the war.

They do not understand that full production is both necessary and possible during the post-war era. Now Negroes and Whites work together side by side because they feel secure in the belief that all hands are needed to do the job. But when they start thinking of the post-war era, and the possible slacking off of production, then the man next to them becomes a competitor instead of a team-mate, and tensions mount on all sides.

The White worker fears that the Negro by his side may force him out of his job, because possibly the Negro has more seniority. The Negro, on the other hand, worries that he will be let out in spite of his seniority, because of the old pre-war prejudice against his race. And so tensions are fed by personal insecurity, and friction finds fertile ground in which to plant its seed.

And yet all this is the product of false and insufficient reasoning. Because during the post-war period, unless there are jobs for all, there will be job security for none. If there is anything less than full employment, then we will be face to face with another depression, and the wholesale unemployment which cuts across all racial barriers and creates misery for all.

Therefore, the problem of full post-war employment is the common problem of all groups, just as winning the war is the problem of all groups... and the same unity we now have must be continued, maintained and strengthened. This should not be hard to understand, and yet there are very few who today see the logic here expressed.

One of the main roles of the Council for Civic Unity, during the coming period therefore, will be to educate the public in this direction. All groups must be encouraged to plan for the post-war era with these things in mind. Management, Labor, Church and State must be brought together to talk things over and avert the crisis. There must be forums, there must be a clearing house of information, there must be pamphlets, meetings, radio programs, and above all there must be serious thinking on the part of all sections of the community. Production must be maintained..... Unity must be maintained.

In order to carry through this plan of bringing to the attention of the community the problems of the post-war, we believe it would be well to form a Section, whose purpose it would be to make this phase of the Council's activity their special field. They would arrange forums with representatives of business, labor and others, they would assemble literature on the subject, and they would stimulate discussion and activity along this line in whatever manner seemed best to them. Those of you who feel that you would like to help on this Section, are asked to so indicate. In addition, the Board will bring to this Section the best group of experts it can assemble, who are willing to give their time and talents to the project.

And in the interest of maintaining unity, the Council must continue to be on the alert for indications which, if allowed to go unheeded, might aggravate tensions into tempests. One such indication was to be found in last Sunday's edition of the Los Angeles Times, in which there appeared an article which in effect tended to condemn an entire racial group, without naming either specific crimes or criminals, and without giving specific authority for its allegations. This sort of irresponsible journalism must be brought to the attention of the Editors, in order to discourage its repetition in the future. The Council wrote to The Times stating its position in a frank and forthright manner, and urged them to give serious thought to the consequences of allowing such articles to appear. The Mayor's Committee and the County Committee also made their representations, and many leading citizens were encouraged to write to The Times and give their views. All affiliated organizations of the Council are urged to take similar thoughtful action, either by sending letters or by calling on The Times.

In line with following up this type of vigilance in the future, we plan to form another Section, whose duty it will be to scan the daily press for articles either contributing toward or working against civic unity, and to suggest to the Council proper means of getting more of the good and less of the bad type of reporting. By taking prompt and constructive action, both in praise and in blame, and by making the press aware of the desires of their readers, we should through this Section be able to perform a valuable public service.

A third activity of the Council will be in the field of culture. We all know that a knowledge of the culture and people of minority groups goes far in helping to break down old prejudices against them. Our first effort in this direction will be a series of evenings now being prepared by us, in collaboration with the People's Educational Center. We call these the "Know Your Neighbor" evenings. There will be one on Negro culture, one on Mexican, one on Middle-European and one on native American culture. Each evening will feature a movie, a playlet, songs, dances and other cultural activities of the particular groups. It is our plan to bring these evenings directly to the communities, and already we have bookings in San Pedro and Wilmington. We want further bookings in such communities as for example Boyle Heights, Belvedere Gardens, Hollywood, and Central Avenue.

In addition to this project, we could very well institute and carry out other cultural efforts, such as art exhibits and so forth. We wish to form a Section on cultural affairs of this nature tonight, and again I ask you to indicate your desire to help.

The fourth Section we would like to see activized would concern itself with the problems of education. As we envision it, this section would investigate and suggest to the school system ways of improving the curriculum with regard to intercultural education. In addition, it would do valuable research on legislation in the Nation, the State and the City, and educate the public on the significance to the future of minority groups of such legislation. It could compile a library of pamphlets, and another library of films, which deal with the subject of minorities, and which deserve a wider distribution. It could provide material for speakers, and the speakers themselves.

And finally, but by no means less important, is an activity to which we have in the past paid too little attention. This activity concerns itself with the financing of the activities of the Council, and at the same time attracting to it new members. We urgently need a committee who will make this their special problem, and by seeing to it that there are funds in the treasury, free the office and the working sections from the worries of operating without adequare funds at their disposal. Those of you who have the time and energy to devote to this task will be doing us a real service by volunteering for the finance and membership Section.

As soon as it is practical, we intend to convene each of the Sections herein outlined for their first meetings, at which time we will ask them to prepare a report on what each believes its functions to be, and how it intends to carry out this function. These reports will be submitted to the next meeting of delegates. I urge each of you who has the time, to join one of these sections, and to work earnestly in it. You may signify your preference here tonight, or get in touch with the office at a later date. You will then be informed of the time and place of the first meetings.

UNI-FACTS

No. 2 January 31, 1945

ANNUAL MEETING

A brilliant panel of speakers gave more than two hundred and fifty members and delegates of the Council for Civic Unity, an overall view of the causes of racial and religious tensions in Southern California, and recommended specific remedial programs. The assemblage unanimously passed four resolutions crystallizing these proposals, and requested that copies of these resolutions be made available for individual and organizational adoption.

One of the memorable moments of the evening was provided by the highly stylized play "Poll Tax", written by Edward Eliscu and Ben Bengal, and directed by Herman Rotsten. Angela Clarke, Dave Hoffman, Steve Brodie, John Kellogg, Ray Teal, and John Thye dramatized the need to defeat the anti-democratic poll-tax, and the type of bigoted "Senator Blowhard" elected by "2% of the potential voting power".

A stenographic report of the proceedings will be distributed to all members. Copies of the adopted resolutions, together with suggestions on the most potent use, are enclosed.

ACTION OPPORTUNITY

Here is your opportunity. The voice of the 160 organizations and the 1000 members in the Council is a mighty one. Send these resolutions, which represent the policy of the Council, and of its members, to the proper officials, and watch democracy grow!

MAKING DEMOCRACY WORK

Support for Assembly Bill No. 3 creating a Permanent California Fair Employment Practices Commission is growing hourly as Americans realize that discrimination in employment against any racial or religious group makes other groups more vulnerable to similar attacks. Assembly Bill No. 3, introduced by Messrs. Hawkins, Carey, Rosenthal and Mrs. Niehouse, provides for the following guarantees of fair employment:

1. Employment without discrimination is termed a constitutional, civil right.
2. Enforcement would be placed in the hands of a five-man Fair Employment Practices Commission - a full-time, salaried body - to pass upon complaints of discrimination in employment "because of race, creed, color or national origin".
3. It would be unlawful to discriminate in hiring, discharge, wage rates or working conditions, or for a union to "exclude or expel or to discriminate in any way."
4. It would be unlawful for an employer or employment agency "to use any application form or to make any inquiries which express any limitation or discrimination".
5. Upon any complaint, the FEPC would be empowered to hold a hearing, issue orders to cease and desist, force reinstatement, award back pay, and seek enforcement in the courts. This procedure would be similar to that used by the National Labor Relations Board.
6. Violation would constitute a misdemeanor, punishable by maximum penalties of six months in jail or a fine of $500, or both.

ACTION OPPORTUNITY

Send the attached resolution on employment to the key person indicated on the attached sheet. Victory depends on your efforts - act today.

FOLK FESTIVAL

Latin America danced and sang on the stage of the Hollywood High School on Sunday afternoon, January 28th, before a large and demonstrative audience. Mexican migratory workers sang plaintive folk songs and strummed guitars. The Pan-American Dance Group, directed by Letitia Inness, coquetted, and dramatized Mexican customs. Nilo Hernandez, famous pianist and composer of "Green Eyes", played a "Habanera" and his own compositions. The Mexican American Club of Rose-Hill, a wholesome, handsome group of youngsters, showed talent and originality in their chorus numbers.

The audience gained a new insight into and liking for the Mexican-Americans in Los Angeles, and experienced a new type of sincerity in entertainment.

ACTION OPPORTUNITY

The Musicians' Congress plans a series of festivals, one during each succeeding month. Call their office at He. 2353 for exact information on time and place. Their offerings are rare and exquisite opportunities for relaxation and enjoyment.

THE HOUSING STORY

Attorney-General Robert W. Kenny, Supervisor John Anson Ford, Dr. Marie Hughes, Loren Miller, and many other notables, will participate in an all day conference on Housing and Racial Prejudice scheduled for February 24th from 10:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. in the First Congregational Church, 535 South Hoover. Prominent among sponsoring organizations are the National Lawyers Guild, the Council for Civic Unity, The Inter-Racial Council of the Church Federation of Los Angeles, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

HOUSING

Reginald Johnson, famous architect, and Charles Senn of the Los Angeles City Health Department, are two of the many notables who will lead the class in Housing and Urban Redevelopment starting on February 23rd in the Peoples' Educational Center, 524 South Spring Street.

ACTION OPPORTUNITY

Do you want to know the facts about housing, how to use Court procedure to protect your home, how to secure laws for decent living conditions? Put the date on your calendar and we will send you full information within the next few days.

YOU ARE INVITED...

An invitation to share in the work of the Council for Civic Unity is being extended to members and their friends, in a letter from members of the Board of Directors. Setting forth the vital work to be done in this community, the letter points out that, without financial backing, many very important and necessary activities cannot be undertaken. A pledge card and business reply envelope are enclosed for the convenience of the donor.

WE ALL KNOW THE JOB MUST BE DONE. LET'S DO IT! NOW!

Saturday Afternoons-1:15 to 1:30 over KNX- "Destination Tomorrow" program devoted to California's post-war minority problems. AUSPICES-HAYNES FOUNDATION.

NEW OFFICERS

An enthusiastic new Board of Directors unanimously elected Dr. E. C. Farnham, as President of the Council for Civic Unity for 1945. Complete cooperation with Dr. Farnham's leadership was voted by the Board and by the new officers of the Council, who are:

Dr. E. C. Farnham----------President

John Anson Ford, Chairman--------Employment Committee
Ignacio Lopez, Co-Chairman
Dore Schary, Chairman----------Motion Pictures, Radio,

GROUP ENGINEERING COMMITTEE

The work of the Council will now be carried forward through five committees which will meet monthly with organizational delegates and Council members, to work on those community problems which are disruptive of civic unity. The first meeting will take place on March 21, at 7:30 PM in the First Unitarian Church, 2936 W. 8th Street.

ACTION OPPORTUNITY

Elect five delegates from your organization, one to serve on each of the five committees on education, housing, legislation, employment, motion pictures, press and radio. These delegates will bring your wishes and needs before the representatives of 160 civic groups, and carry the work of the committees back to you. All members of the Council are invited to participate in these vigorous programs.

PAYING THE DUES

Because of the greatly expanded program of the Council with the consequent need for more funds, the Board of Directors of the Council voted to raise minimum membership dues from one dollar to three dollars per year and minimum organization dues from five dollars to ten dollars per year, effective march 1, 1945.

NEGRO WORKERS MAKE GOOD

One third of the 1,500,000 negros now employed throughout the nation in war production plants are skilled and semi-skilled workers. More remarkable still, the 250 plants surveyed by the Urban League did not employ a single Negro before the war.

MORE ABOUT THE NESEI

Housing for Japanese-Americans and a pamphlet of facts about these citizens are two activites in which the Council for Civic Unity is cooperating with the Relocation Committee. Offers of housing for the Japanese are routed to the War Relocation Authority, 1031 S. Broadway, by Melissa Blake, Council Volunteer. What You Can Do To Promote Racial and Religious Understanding

By Professor Clyde R. Miller
Columbia University, New York City

First of all, you must realize that racial and religious hatreds are just another of the mental and emotional diseases which today are sweeping the world as plagues and pestilences once swept the world before science and education controlled them.

This pestilence can be controlled, too. The story of how the city of Springfield, Massachusetts, is trying to control it was told in the Woman's Home Companion for June, 1944. That article pointed out how that community is trying to immunize its children against racial and religious antagonisms by means of an education which reaches them at all times, in every grade in school, and which pervades home life and community life.

What can you do to get this approach underway in your community? Obviously, both problems and practical possibilities differ widely in various communities. But there is scarcely one in which some improvement is not only desirable but possible. Here are some suggestions for action. Talk these over with your friends and other ideas will suggest themselves.

If you are a parent invite four or five other parents to your home for an evening of discussion. You may want to have before you a copy of the Woman's Home Companion article on the Springfield Plan, Your Town Could Do It Too. After your discussion, appoint one of yourselves to see the principal of your neighborhood school to find out just what the school is doing to develop strong democratic attitudes. You may discover your local schools better than you think. You are almost certain to discover principals and teachers eager to make education democratic.

Ask your principal to show you exactly what the school is doing to develop stronger democratic attitudes. Ask him how he would like to still further strengthen this program. Arrange with the head of your local Parent Teachers Association for a meeting to have this topic discussed by a competent speaker.

If parents in other school neighborhoods do this, speedy progress will be assured throughout America.

If you are a teacher check what you are teaching. Ask yourself whether pupils, after they leave your class, will be more friendly toward children of other races and religions. Ask yourself if you are developing in them attitudes of fair play, respect for all religions, consideration for all minority groups. Investigate courses of study, textbooks, and bulletins to find what is now being taught in the public schools about tolerance, contributions of different racial groups to American life, propaganda techniques, fascist groups, immigration, etc.

If you are a teacher you can work with other teachers and the school principal to coordinate the teaching of democracy with all school activities. Suggest to your principal that he call a meeting to discuss the building of more friendly democratic attitudes among all groups. At such a discussion meeting a committee can be appointed to work out details of such an educational program for the school. Thus, the school principal will have a carefully thought out program to bring before the superintendent of schools who can bring it before the Board of Education.

As a teacher you can also influence other teachers in your schools to ask the local and state teachers' associations of which you are members to promote this type of education for more friendly attitudes among various races and groups. You can tell them that the National Education Association is going to make this a chief objective of its work next year.

If you are a school superintendent you can call a meeting of your principals and supervisors and ask them to formulate, with the help of their teachers, a program for you to place before your Board of Education. You can determine where there are sore spots and can help your staff set up curative treatment.

You can discuss the matter with civic leaders in service clubs, churches, women's clubs, labor unions and other groups. You will find many of these groups eager to give strong backing to a school system attempting to make your community free from racial, religious and other hatreds. Ask your principals and teachers to arrange for meetings with the Parent Teachers Association in the various schools to discuss such an educational program to give those associations the information which will win their backing and support.

If you are a minister you can work consciously to develop among your church members the religious attitude which sees all men as brothers and which practices brotherhood. You can search your own conscience. If, for example, you are a Christian minister, ask yourself how Jesus would act in facing the problem of race and intolerance.

Whether you are Catholic, Protestant or Jewish you will try to teach your church members to practice the principle of brotherhood as a matter of habit. That will mean their breaking with old habits which perpetuate prejudice and intolerance.

If you are a representative of labor you can show your fellow union members how union policies based on discrimination and prejudice threaten the future and security of all labor. You can point to the example of Hitler's Germany where racial and religious hatred preceded the destruction of the labor unions. You and your fellows can insist that the state and national offices of all unions consistently follow a practice of no discrimination. You can insist that such a practice be written into all contracts with employers. You should also participate in general community activities -- community chest, social agencies, etc. -- and support non-partisan educational efforts.

If you are a business man you can discuss with your associates in your own business and with fellow members of the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and other service clubs the importance to business of having a community shot through with friendship rather than with group antagonisms. You should take a positive interest in the welfare of your employees. Make sure that you are playing fair in your employment policy and not discriminating against any race or religion.

If you are an ordinary citizen, an employee, a housewife, you are still a member of various groups. You have children in school, you belong to a church, a lodge, a club. You can talk over with other members what those groups should be doing to build a community on the American principle of friendship and freedom of opportunity.

You can provide appropriate ceremonies for the public induction of aliens into American citizenship and at this ceremony stress the responsibilities and privileges of American citizenship, at the same time indicating the great contributions that foreign-born citizens have made to American life.

You can provide appropriate ceremonies for young citizens voting for the first time, and at this ceremony stress the importance of the franchise and the fulfillment of civic responsibilities.

You can provide opportunities for minority groups to participate in the community life. You can be careful, in the home, to discourage prejudices among the children and encourage children to select their friends on the basis of character rather than race or creed.

You can be good neighbors right in your home community.

ACTION MEETING ON CIVIC UNITY

EXOTIC DANCERS! COMMUNITY ACTION PLANNERS!
RACE RELATIONS LEADERS! MOTION PICTURE STARS!

All these will bring their talents to the growing problems of race relations in Los Angeles, at the annual meeting of members and delegates from the one-hundred fifty organizations which created the Council for Civic Unity.

Everyone is welcome at our important affair, which will take place on Monday, January 29, at 8:00 P.M. in the Art Salon of the Friday Morning Club at 940 South Figueroa Street.

Never has planning and action on the complex problems of inter-race relationships been more urgent. Consider these forces! The loyal Japanese-Americans are returning! The fight for a permanent F.E.P.C. is on! Reconversion lay-offs may hit the Negro and Mexican workers. The local housing shortage is getting worse! What can we do about it?

As your agent, the Council has contacted leaders in the fields of employment, education, the arts, and legislation, to meet with you, to disclose the means for avoiding the catastrophies of race disunity and for education of the Man in the Street. These suggestions will serve as a starting point, but it will be up to you, as a delegate from your organization, or as an individual member, to develop the program.

To make the meeting most fruitful for your organization and your council, come prepared for the following actions:

1. Make specific proposals for action on local situations which are increasing racial tensions.
2. Decide on the role which you and your organizations wish to play in the program.
3. As the Council cannot carry out this work without your financial assistance, mail a minimum affiliation fee of $5.00 or an individual membership fee of $1.00 to cover the year 1945.

In our next Bulletin, we will give you the names of the famous artists and leaders, and the exact program in which they will participate. Watch for newspaper publicity! Plan now to attend this stimulating event, by filling out the attached form and returning it at your earliest convenience, so that we can make the necessary seating arrangements.

UNI-FACTS

With this issue we make our bow to our friends and co-workers, "UNIFACTS", will come to you twice monthly carrying notes on local and national developments affecting unity in race relations, and suggesting action where action is needed.

You can use this Bulletin to great advantage by putting us on your mailing list, and by notifying us of your activities so that we can publicize them among our 800 subscribers.

We will also carry comments on available speakers and entertainers, obtaining them for your organization affairs on request.

This bulletin can be a means to make your organization grow - to vitalize it with a stimulating program. Use it!

Your affiliation fee will pay for your 1945 subscription, so get it in immediately - before our big meeting on the 29th of January.

ACTION
MEETING..... The dramatic meeting on Monday, January 29, in the Friday Morning Club, is a must for all delegates and friends of the Council for Civic Unity. See our enclosed publicity.

INTER-RACE YOUTH CENTERS are successfully operating in the City of Compton, and four "teen" age youths, one a Mexican and one a Negro, described "Our Center" in glowing terms. They told of the need for recreation facilities which substitute wholesome activities for street delinquencies; of the growth of self-discipline, of the integration of Mexican and Negro groups into social affairs The Compton Center now boasts facilities for dancing, football, bowling, indoor games, reading, and "snacks". With the growth of the center, local juvenile delinquency has shown a decided drop.

OPPORTUNITY.....Here is a vital contribution to civic unity, and youth citizenship. Mr. Neil Jacobson, the enthusiastic director of the Compton Teen-Age Center is available to speak before your meetings. Contact the Council for Civic Unity, for further information.

GROUP DYNAMICS, "An individual will subordinate his prejudices and intolerances to stay within his social group", Dr. A. J. Morrow of the Commission on Inter-Community Relations, told a group of Community leaders at a meeting in the Downtown Y. M. C. A. on December 15, 1944. This technique of gro up pressure is being used in cities and towns where racial or religion prejudice has reached a potentially explosive point. Groups are pre-tested to determine their attitudes, then they are subjected to the complex experiment in group interaction, and tested again to determine whether their prejudices have been lessened or eliminated. The American-Jewish Congress which is sponsoring the research, states that the results of this new technique in Group Dynamics will shortly be released to all interested in race relations.

THE MAN FROM MARS. Orson Welles is planning a series of motion picture shorts on the contributions of the Negro to American Music and Letters. These will be made in his Hollywood Mercury Theatre and will be shown in public schools all over the country. Doubtless, they will reflect the Welles' flair for originality and drama, as well as his penchant for historical accuracy.

OPPORTUNITY..... Watch for the announcement that these shorts are available, then request school principals and Boards of Education to make use of this graphic form of education on our Negro population.

JAPANESE..... The War Relocation Authority believes that the return of the Japanese-Americans to Los Ageles County will be gradual, and that only a small proportion of the 36,900 persons who left Los Angeles County will return. Your Council is watching developments closely, and meeting with Mr. Cooke of the Mayor's Committee to determine whether there is a concrete plan for the housing and the employment of the loyal Japanese who have passed the test of two years of Army scrutiny.

F.E.P.C..... The Fair Employment Practices Committee reports it is handling an ever-increasing load of cases involving employment discrimination, but that more of these are being satisfactorily adjusted. As of October 1, the Committee had 2,176 pending cases, an increase of 41 over the total for September. Evidently the need for a permanent F.E.P.C. and for education in equal employment opportunities is increasing.

OPPORTUNITY.....Support the bills for a permanent state and federal F.E.P.C. by writing to your newly elected Congressman, your senator and your assemblyman.

Dear George:

I have been meaning to write for a long time to request that you place us on your mailing list for all reports and releases. Not only do I want to keep in touch generally with your work, but I am interested in reporting on your work and on Southern problems as you see them on my weekly broadcasts here. I shall enclose a script or two from recent programs. We are now in our third year of continuous broadcasts. As you will appreciate, our news sources are often quite inadequate, particularly as related to distant events. If on rare occasions you have a release applying to an immediate or imminent situation, we would deeply appreciate receiving it air mail. Charge us what you have to, keeping in mind that we are typically impecunious.

Secondly, may we have your advice on a very difficult internal problem? It is whether to exert any form of review over applicants for membership -- e.g., whether to retain the right to reject a member applicant who is in an acknowledged position of leadership in an organization which, in the judgment of the Board, pursues a program inconsistent with our own. Presumably among such organizations would be the Civil Rights Congress, Communist Party, Christian Nationalist Party, etc.

Assuming yours is a membership organization: Does each member have a vote and power to nominate Board members and officers? What are your by-law provisions and/or procedures with respect to admission and termination of membership? Is "membership" essentially

Mr. Edward Howden
Executive Director
Council for Civic Unity of San Francisco
437 Market Street
San Francisco 5, California

Dear Mr. Howden:

I send you this year's issues of New South for a free giftie. We really haven't got a free mailing list, and you ought to send in a $1.50 subscription to New South so that you will get it henceforth. Better act quickly because January 1st she goes up to $2.00.

I think the October issue, out in a few days, will have some spot news for you as it recounts a field trip this Summer to the Appalachian mountain area by an able fellow from Berea, who was exploring whether, in those thinly Negro populated counties, desegregation could be accomplished easily.

The Council has, from its formal organization in 1944 until these past transitional months, been a South-wide membership organization. By formal action this Spring it became a single Board of Directors, and our members in Southern states are being distributed in those organizations which are reorganizing themselves and are taking advantage of the Council's offer to assist them with money in the employment of clerical and professional staff. So, except for people outside the South, we don't have individual members any more, but we continue to do about individual membership what we always have -- print above the signature spot on the application blank for membership the phrase, "Believing in the principles and aims of the Southern Regional Council, I want to be enrolled as." So far as I know, in the last ten years only about two people have joined the Council as to whose integrity in signing that statement there was any grounds for question. And both of them pretty soon quit paying dues!

We do not have any affiliated organizations, except state organizations which we construct ourselves, so we have no problem there.

I do not know the situation on the West Coast, but my whole feeling would be in favor of refusing membership from organizations or individuals which, or who, were not quite clearly loyal to the American form of government.

In the course of ten years, there have been one or two members of our Board as to whom there was criticism, and we still get ridden by the bad eggs around and about that these guys do pull all the wires and set all the policy. One or two out of more than one hundred past and present Board members seem to me pretty small pickings for the bad eggs.

I don't know your exact structure, but I think that the main thing to do is to be sure that the main governing body of your organization is made up of people beyond criticism. I will try to remember your need for spot news and help you if there is opportunity.

Meanwhile, I hope we will be together at Boston at the NAIRO meeting.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Dr. George Mitchell
Executive Director
Southern Regional Council
63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear George:

We would like to know what is happening on any and all fronts with regard to last week's Hearst newspaper attack on the Southern Regional Council. Enclosed is the story as it appeared here in the San Francisco Examiner. May we have copies of any letters, memos or other releases which you issue in response and of any relevant background information?

My own interest is threefold: first, my concern for any such unwarranted and malicious effort to undercut a decent liberal organization; secondly, our interest as a companion organization in race relations; and thirdly, the fact that we too are recipients of a grant (not yet publicized) from the Fund for the Republic, one which will support for at least six months a weekly half hour TV program on both civil liberties and minority group problems. At some point, and I hope very soon, I want at least to talk with people on the Hearst papers here, to tell them of the deep respect in which I have always held you and the Council, and the fact that this view is shared, I am sure, by virtually everyone in our field. I of course have no hesitancy in making these representations immediately; but in these days of argumentum ad hominem I suppose it is desirable to have at hand concrete information relating to some of your more prominent board members and to the broad outlines of the history of the Council and the distinctions between it and other Southern bodies such as the Southern Conference on Human Welfare.

Of course anything I would do here should be strictly in conformity with your strategy thinking on this problem, so let me know if you would prefer no action from this end or if there are considerations of timing which should be observed.

I hope to hear from you very soon--and to see you at the NAIRO conference. You will note in my latest newsletter, enclosed, that we liked your comment in New South on the Emmett Till case.

To secure essential American rights and opportunities denied because of race, religion, or ancestry of the COUNCIL FOR CIVIC UNITY of San Francisco

437 MARKET ST. SAN FRANCISCO

October-November 1955

The CANDIDATES and CIVIL RIGHTS

TEN SAN FRANCISCO COMMUNITY ORGANIZATIONS concerned with problems of racial and religious minority groups have quizzed candidates for the offices of Mayor and Board of Supervisors as to their stands on certain local issues. Here are the results.

Jointly submitting the following questionnaire were these San Francisco organizations: Council for Civic Unity, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, Chinese American War Veterans Ass'n, Friends' Committee on Legislation, Japanese American Citizens League, Jewish Community Relations Council, Jewish Labor Committee, Nat'l Ass'n for the Advancement of Colored People, United Latin Americans, and Urban League.

Note: Nothing in this report is to be construed as implying support of or opposition to any candidate. The questionnaire returns are made available solely for the information of members and friends of the above organizations.

THE QUESTIONS ASKED

1. Do you favor retention of the present policy of the City and County of San Francisco (adopted by the Board of Supervisors in May, 1949) that all redevelopment project contracts shall contain firm covenants guaranteeing against racial or religious discrimination in the sale or rental of housing built on the redeveloped land?
2. Would you favor inclusion of similar anti-discrimination covenants (as in "1" above) in deeds covering publicly owned real property when sold to private parties?
3. Would you support studies by the city government of community problems related to discriminatory restrictions of equal opportunity for minority group persons to secure homes, employment, insurance, health care, or other services or facilities essential to decent living?
4. Do you believe that all city and county jobs must be open to qualified persons solely on the basis of individual merit, without regard to or segregation because of race, creed, or national origin?
5. Do you favor early enactment in San Francisco of a fair employment practices ordinance based upon tested statutes and ordinances which have been in force in recent years in states such as New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Washington, and Oregon, and cities such as Minneapolis, Philadelphia, and Cleveland; such ordinance to include reasonable enforcement powers and adequate budget for essential administrative and educational activities?

RESPONSE TO THE FIRST FOUR

All candidates responding answered "YES" to each of the first four questions. They are: (For Mayor:) CHRISTOPHER, REILLY. (For Supervisor:) AUGUSTUS, BOXER, BRINTON, CASEY, DOBBS, ERTOLA, FERDON, HALL, HALLEY, JAMES, KLUNIS, McMAHON, L. P. O'BRIEN.

Some respondents added comment, as follows:

CHRISTOPHER: (Q.1) "I was the author of the above legislation." (Q.2) "I would favor any legislation assuring equal rights for all minorities." (Q.3) "Believe such a study is essential and would support it." (Q.4) "Yes, such a policy would put mere words into action." McMAHON: (Q.3) "Provided funds are available." L. P. O'BRIEN: (Q.2) "If this is deemed necessary, would definitely be in favor." (Q.4) "The merit system should prevail regardless."

QUESTION FIVE (FEPC)

Answering "YES" without comment: REILLY, BOXER, CASEY, ERTOLA, FERDON, JAMES, KLUNIS, McMAHON.

Answering "YES" plus comment:

CHRISTOPHER: "I have heretofore voted aye on this measure, but it was defeated."

AUGUSTUS: "And if elected will introduce such at first meeting of the new board."

BRINTON: "I have read the ordinance introduced in 1951, and except for the criminal enforcement powers and with several changes in draftsmanship I would support the same ordinance again."

HALL: "I will favor such an ordinance if it is first submitted to the City Attorney or Attorney General for an opinion and, if in his opinion, it passes the test of constitutionality."

L. P. O'BRIEN: "As this has been 'pigeonholed' by the State, cannot be acted upon at present by Supervisors."

Other answers (did not answer "YES" or "NO"):

DOBBS: "If sufficient evidence were adduced before the legislative body to indicate that an FEP ordinance is required in San Francisco, I would be willing to seriously consider the adoption of a 'tested' form of ordinance such as that used in other jurisdictions."

HALLEY: "My personal support of a state Fair Employment Practice statute and strict enforcement is unqualified. If state legislation is unavailable, my hope would lie in the creation of an inter-county FEP commission for the Bay Area. It is my frank, though reluctant opinion, that the industrial and labor complexion of the Bay Area would make spot (San Francisco) enforcement a deterrent, rather than a help, to all segments of the community, particularly labor. Perhaps the most important, however unfair, result would be an increase in the exodus of industry from San Francisco, with labor following into areas not covered by FEP. If such a municipal ordinance is introduced in San Francisco, I would certainly not actively oppose its enactment. Yet I could only support a local FEP if labor, management and the city are not subject to inequities."

GENERAL COMMENT (not related to any specific question)

ERTOLA: "Throughout my life I have constantly adhered to the philosophy of equality, regardless of race, religion, national origin, or creed."

HALL: "I have made no specific comment on each question because I would answer them all the same way, namely, that discrimination in any form is repugnant to me. As I understand the law, restrictive covenants deprive one of due process and equal protection, and are unconstitutional. Therefore, any discriminatory covenants are now unconstitutional."

KLUNIS: "With my parentage being from minority groups I believe there's no doubt in your mind that I believe in equal opportunity on a merit basis for all individuals."

L. P. O'BRIEN: "Feel most of the questions above are covered fully by the Constitution of the United States. We Irish Catholics have been and still are under attack from devious sources and well realize and are in sympathy with the causes basic in your battle for minority groups."

EMMETT LOUIS TILL

"THE MISSISSIPPI KIDNAP SLAYING of Emmett Louis Till, 14-year-old Negro youth, is one of those shocking crimes that looses a flood of pent-up public feeling...

"Six years ago, NEW SOUTH commented: 'It should be remembered that a lynching is only an extreme example of a general lack of regard for the individual. The climate which produces lynchings is one of daily insult, intimidation, and the lesser forms of violence, directed against a whole segment of the population.'

"That is the climate that prevails today in Mississippi and much of the rest of the deep South. Governors, legislators, and lesser officials fill the air with hatred and contempt for law. A few intemperate newspapers trade in inflammatory headlines and editorials. Private associations like the White Citizens Councils preach defiance of the courts and economic death for dissenters. These public officials and their private counterparts preen themselves on their 'respectability.' They even boast that their form of rabble-rousing and intimidation is necessary to avert a revival of the Ku Klux Klan!

"All this amounts to nothing more than a claim that 'respectable' demagogues can speak the language of violence without resorting to the physical violence which is its logical consequence. But all people are not equally 'respectable.' Some respond to the spirit rather than the letter of their leaders' words. When those in positions of authority hold cheap the dignity and rights of Negroes, what could be more natural than the assumption that Negroes' lives are equally cheap? The simple-minded, the confused, the emotionally disturbed people in our society take their cues from above. It is not enough for leadership to be 'respectable;' it must also be responsible.

"The Till case is a symbol. Defensive Southerners will try to blot out the truth with recriminations. Thoughtful Southerners will try to remedy the public climate which breeds such atrocities before we have more of them."

-- NEW SOUTH, September/55, published by Southern Regional Council, Atlanta, Georgia; George S. Mitchell, Director

NORTHERN CALIFORNIANS will have the opportunity to hear Mrs Mamie Bradley, mother of Emmett Till, at a meeting sponsored by the NAACP at San Francisco's Cow Palace Sunday, November 13, at 3:00 PM. Also reporting on today's Deep South will be Ruby Hurley, Southeast regional secretary of the NAACP. Capacity attendance of 16,000 is expected in this massive protest against Mississippi racism.

Dear Ed,

Nearly three years ago a squabbly Methodist minister from a small North Georgia town, nomine Blake Craft, who prints a monthly sheet, began in his sheet (called One Methodist Voice) to say that SRC was honeycombed with red-pronters. He was picking at his Bishop, and we happen to have office space in a mainly Methodist building which also houses the Bishop. Sectarian publication, not savoury, and we went smoothly on. In due time the Methodists deprived the man for a year, and in a Church court convicted him of slandering his brethren. This latter charge because he had an unhappy habit of waiting until someone he didn't like had been moved to a new Church, and then devoting a full issue to scandalous abuse of the not-liked, and flooding the new membership with the sheet! So on the surface we heard no more from the reverend gentleman.

About a year ago a Georgia politician, nomine Roy Harris, of Augusta, began using a sheet of his (Georgia pullulates with these local political weekly papers) nomine the Augusta Courier, to say likewise that we were full of guys with bad records. He was untruthful to a ludicrous extent, and he has a reputation over the state for being thus untruthful, and the paper was small and ill-regarded, so we let that ride.

About three weeks ago the Attorney-General of Georgia, nomine Eugene Cook, took up much the same line, but in a slightly more circumspect way than the hon. Mr. Harris. Cook was really fussing at the NAACP, but he sideswiped us and our affiliate the Georgia Interracial Commission, and you will see. This one probably portends an effort to get the January session of the Georgia legislature to ban us, as being bad eggs.

Not long after that one the INS queried us for a list of our Board members. We think that's public property, and so knowingly stuck out heads into the Hearst lion's mouth (rather a whiffy mouth). Consequence, the story of Nov. 7, and another one, which I haven'T handy (the one with pictures).

This attack seems to us probably libellous, and we are exploring action on that order.

They will similarly jump all the causes aided by our friends the Fund for the Republic, of course.

Fred Routh is going to NAIRO, and I'll stay home. Sorry to miss you and all the other good guys.

All these birds that jump on us are lying their heads off, and I guess know it. It's part of a build-up of a Nazi-like mythology; the Supreme Court are Communists, the sociologists who advised them are Communists, all who advocate compliance with the decision are somekind of reds; ergo - it behooves every good man and true to fight the Supreme Court and the law of the land. Trouble is it makes easy converts. I believe that the truth outs, and that this kind of monkey-business will finally putxxxxxxx its advocates in the wrong. Meanwhile I don't know much to do except to say, through the courts if possible, that they lie, and wait until the public finds out it is being subjected to the action of a smoke-machine.

Best,

Dear Ed:

The trip to the West Coast is beginning to shape up nicely and I look forward to my trip out there. I am enclosing a copy of a letter I have just written Eason Monroe, for your information. I will send you a mat and some biographical material and some further information on the Southern Regional Council the latter part of this week, too.

What do you want me to do about transportation out there? I have an air credit card and can get the ticket here and you could reimburse us, if that is more convenient. I would also like you to arrange for my transportation up and down the West Coast, if that is possible. I will probably stay with my cousin in San Francisco but would need hotel reservations down in the southern part of California. I have asked Mr. Monroe to arrange this for me. Please write and tell me further details about the proposed trip which I may need to adequately plan for effective use of my time.

Best regards.

Seattle, Washington

Dear Louise:

I am coming out to the West Coast to speak to Ed Howden's Civic Unity Council in San Francisco and the American Civil Liberties Union in Southern California. My way out to the West Coast is being paid by them. This raises an interesting question. I would be glad to fly up to Seattle to speak to any group you might have there. The cost involved to you would be my round-trip transportation from San Francisco to Seattle and back. The dates available would be May 26 and 27.

I am speaking to the other groups on the topic "Changing Patterns in the South," or "Desegregation Comes to Dixie." This will be a first-hand report on what is happening across the depth and breadth of the South as it meets the challenge of the Supreme Court decision.

I hope that the information I sent you back in February for the talk before the students at the Lincoln Day program was helpful.

Please let me hear from you on this matter as quickly as possible.

Best personal regards.

Dear Ed:

As things now stand, I will arrive in San Francisco on May 19, fairly late in the evening. My cousin will be meeting me at the airport and I will be staying with them. Their names are:

Frances and Arman Tatarian
143 Morning Sun Avenue
Mill Valley DUnlap 8-2275

I look forward to being on your television program and the scheduled evening meeting on Monday. I would be pleased to speak to other groups in Oakland and Berkeley, as you suggest. Please send me immediately your home telephone number so I may contact you Saturday evening.

I will pay for my own transportation out and back and you can reimburse SRC.

We have no movie shots on what is happening in the South but if you can find some out there from the Fund for the Republic, which you mentioned, it might be helpful.

I am looking forward very much to this opportunity to help bring a factual picture from the South to a very important area of the nation.

Best regards.

Dear GSM,HCF, et al:

Things are going well here in the Golden Gate City; thus far there have been three radio shows, one TV show, and a major address. All of these seemed well received. We also got good coverage in the press, including the local Hurst paper, the Examiner. I am enclosing some clips so you may see how we were represented.

Note of interest: The editor at the Hurst paper told Ed Howden that the question of SRC had been "cleared up", hence their participation in the press conference. I note that I am misspelling Hearst, but trust ya' all will understand. I dislike typing enough not to want to re-type this.

Tomorrow I am off to the South of California to speak for the ACLU. I will send you any clippings I pick up down thata way. Ed and I stopped off at the regional office of the NAACP and they were well pleased with what I had said about them.

Following So.Cal I am off to Seattle to see my Aunt and Uncle whom I have not seen for 10 years. I will be back in the office as scheduled on Monday June 4th...will actually return to Tara on Saturday June 2 so I wont be delayed getting back.

My cousins out here have been doing a royal entertainment job and I have been dashing about with the international set from the Far East. Much to tell you all about this; what is happening in the South is of great importance in the Far East.

Best regards to you all. as ever, Ted

Dear George:

This fellow Routh is even better than we had expected. From our point of view, and that of the Southern California people I am sure, the tour was a great success. I believe you have seen the San Francisco clippings resulting from the press conference. Again our deep appreciation.

Dear Fred:

Sorry to have missed you last Sunday evening as you came through town. We do hope the rest of your trip involved somewhat less work.

Enclosed is our check for what we calculate as half of the expense, excepting the Los Angeles hotel bill, which I assume Eason Monroe will cover, plus $37.50 as half of a $75.00 honorarium. I trust that that latter figure is satisfactory. If not, please let us know.

I shall forward a copy of your voucher to Eason Monroe the first of next week and then his check will follow.

Again our warm thanks and best wishes from your many new friends in the Bay Area.

Dear Ed:

Many thanks for the check covering my expenses and your share of the honorarium. I am sorry I am late in sending this note of thanks, but I have been out of the office ever since my return from the West Coast.

I think the entire West Coast trip was most worthwhile from our point of view, for it helped interpret events in the South as they are happening and not as the "dramatic episode conscious" newspapers would have people believe.

Paul Obluda sent me a letter from some gal who saw "Barrier" and I will answer her later as soon as I return from the UAW-CIO conference in Detroit. Please give my warm regards to Paul.

I have just returned from a Southwide conference on human relations at the University of Oklahoma, jointly sponsored by that institution and the Anti Defamation League. We had representatives from all the Southern States. It was a most worthwhile session.

On the way back from the Oklahoma conference, I stopped at the 30th Annual Conference of the National Congress of Colored Parents and Teachers in Shreveport, Louisiana, and spoke to them. They were having a down-to-earth workshop-type session which was very much worthwhile.

Best personal regards.

I am not going to come to the November 29th NAIRO meeting. Fred Routh is.

I have turned over to him the letter inviting a Mitchell, a Routh, or whoever (I presume), to the breakfast business, and Fred will write you direct.

Congratulations on working with Ed Howden! One of the best of eggs!

I consider you a remarkably good egg yourself!

You know the truth about me is that I am going to quit my job January 15th, and sail to Scotland for good and all, unless somebody invites me back for a year or so of teaching. Come to Scotland for a visit. Remotest highlands among the Crofts. Transportation over the moors seventeen miles through the soppy heather to the nearest pub. And for Helen and her beau I would drive the car clean around to t'other pub and pick you both up and bring you home to a warm peat fire.

Thank you for your letter of October 31. I'm very disappointed that you're not coming to the Conference.

Your leaving the field signifies a well-deserved rest for you but a real blow to race relations. You're one soldier I hope won't "fade away" for a long time!

You make Scotland sound inviting (are you serious?) but please go via San Francisco so we can have a good visit first. After all my crying into your beer I'd like to have you see how happy I am now -- and it promises not to require any more job-hunting for a long, long time.

Best wishes, and do keep us posted on your whereabouts.

FOR RELEASE NOT EARLIER THAN TUESDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 18

Three persons will be chosen this summer by three community agencies headquartered in San Francisco for a year's unique on-the-job training designed to help qualify them for a career in the field of racial and cultural relations. Receipt of foundation grants totaling $15,000 for this purpose was announced jointly today by the executives of the San Francisco Council for Civic Unity, San Francisco-Oakland Urban League, and the Northern California Regional Office of the American Friends Service Committee.

The funds were provided, on a matching basis, by the Columbia Foundation of San Francisco and the Fund for the Republic.

The three "internships in intergroup relations" are part of a national program for meeting the growing demand among both official and voluntary agencies for professionally qualified staff to carry on their programs of education and action for the remedy of problems of discrimination, prejudice, and tension affecting minority groups, and, indirectly, the entire community.

The Fund for the Republic has allotted $100,000 for a nation-wide, two-year project, contingent upon matching grants by other foundations. It is contemplated that up to 24 one-year internships will be granted over the next two years. The program will be administered by the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials, which has issued the following statement:

"Public and private intergroup relations agencies are playing a leading part in America's historic national effort to reduce and finally eliminate discrimination based on race, religion or national origin. The agencies need additional trained professional personnel at the national, state and local levels, to expand their effectiveness in this effort. Interns under this new program will secure on-the-job experience in a variety of intergroup situations, including employment, housing, educational, police and interfaith cooperation."

Candidates for the internships are expected to have completed at least some graduate work or the equivalent in relevant experience. Salaries will start at the junior professional level in each agency. A successful internship should lead to permanent professional status and employment in the intergroup relations field.

Applicants for 1957-58 should apply directly to one or more of the three agencies not later than July 1, 1957. Letters of application should include a concise statement of the nature and extent of the candidate's interest in intergroup relations, and a biographical resume including educational and employment experience, public activities and publications.

The interns selected will start work about September 1, 1957. At the close of the training period each intern and a senior staff member of his agency will attend a two-week seminar conducted by the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials.

The American Friends Service Committee will offer a varied experience in three areas: the Indian program, securing equal employment and housing opportunities for minorities, and work with migratory farm workers. The Indian program includes the hospitality center for relocated Indians in Oakland and service with the Indian field worker in Northern California. The employment and housing opportunities program is centered in Santa Clara and San Mateo Counties. The third activity is conducted by the agricultural labor secretary in the San Joaquin Valley who helps migrants to learn cooperative techniques so as to solve some of their basic economic and social problems.

The Council for Civic Unity intern will gain experience in such activities as investigation of complaints of discrimination, consultation and conciliation directed at the elimination of discriminatory practices, action at the neighborhood level to prevent or minimize intergroup tensions, conference planning, public relations, and other day-to-day activities of a voluntary civil rights agency.

The San Francisco-Oakland Urban League will provide its intern with experience in the areas of employment and housing, with such related activities as vocational counseling and guidance, developing the employment atmosphere so as to include the Negro worker as a normal procedure, scholarship planning, and health and welfare services.

In addition to the grants for internships, the Fund for the Republic has provided the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials with funds for central administration of the program, recruiting, and expenses of the seminars at the close of each training year.

Other organizations participating in the nation-wide internship program include the American Jewish Committee; American Jewish Congress; Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith; National Conference of Christians and Jews; the Urban Leagues of Atlanta (Georgia), Chicago, and Greater New York; the Catholic Interracial Council of Chicago; Community Studies, Inc., of Kansas City, Missouri; Cincinnati Mayor's Friendly Relations Committee; Philadelphia Fellowship Commission; and the Southern Regional Council. Additional agencies may participate by September, 1957.

Dear Ed:

Enclosed is some material on the Judge from Mississippi, Thomas Brady. I hope this will answer your needs.

I am also enclosing our survey on the pro-segregation groups in the South. You will find the Federation for Constitutional Government included in the survey. There has been an increasing incidence of violence in Alabama and South Carolina and some indication of its growth in Mississippi, Georgia, and Florida. This violence is caused by either the Klan itself or klan-like groups. We hope to prepare a special report later on about the increased violence and intimidation.

I hope it is possible for you to get a person who will adequately answer the scurrilous charges of Brady. The Citizens Council movement is anxious to brainwash the rest of the nation with their propaganda and filth and Brady's speech in San Francisco is just one example of this effort.

Warm regards to Helen and you.

John May, executive director of the San Francisco Foundation, has informed me that you will be in San Francisco from October 4 to 11. I hope that we will have an opportunity to meet for I have long admired the work of the Southern Regional Conference and am interested in comparing notes on intergroup developments in the South and this region.

You may know that the Council for Civic Unity of San Francisco has operated for fifteen years in the field of intergroup relations. As one aspect of our program, we offer speaking platforms to "visiting firemen".

I am writing in hopes that you will have an evening free during your visit and that you will consent to speak to a Council audience. I know that interest would be high among CCU members and others connected with intergroup agencies throughout the Bay Area. Yours would be the only presentation, beginning at 8:00 p.m. and allowing time for a question period. The subject would be your own choice, although I would like to point out that there has been great interest here in the significance of the sit-in movement and the "new Negro self-image". I regret that we cannot offer you a fee. We would make a nominal admission charge to cover promotional and hall expenses. I would also like to arrange a small dinner prior to the meeting with members of our Board of Directors and others involved in intergroup work.

We will be happy to make available to you the facilities of our office during your stay. Should you desire a press conference to explain the functions of the Southern Regional Council to the Bay Area, we could arrange this for you as we have done quite successfully for others in past months.

Dear Mr. Quinn:

This is to thank you for your kind letter and to apologize for my delay in replying. The summer always seems to be our busiest and most traveled season.

I have heard of the work of CCU for years (including some first-hand praise from Fred Routh), and I should be very pleased to meet with your board members and friends. A larger evening meeting would be fine, too, although at this point I can only be sure of one free evening -- Monday, October 3. I well realize that this isn't the best time of the week to assemble an audience. But if you should decide to try it on that date, I will gladly be available.

I am grateful for your other generous offers of help while I am in San Francisco. It seems unlikely that I will need to trouble you for office space, but I should welcome a chance to talk with the press.

Perhaps we can work that out when I see you.

With every good wish,

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming

PIKE TALK POSTPONED TO SEPTEMBER 29

A call to an important Paris conference has forced the Very Reverend James A. Pike to move his talk for CCU from September 15 to the 29th.

The Bishop's address, "The Theology of Civil Rights," will be the fifth of the Council's Civil Rights' Luncheons presented this year. "I will attempt an examination of the basis for our Bill of Rights in the context of present-day problems," Bishop Pike explained. "This is a process which each generation must accomplish for itself."

Prior to his appointment as Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, Rev. Pike was an outstanding leader for civil rights' legislation in New York. He taught law at George Washington University, is a member of the California Bar, and was recently appointed housing chairman of the California Advisory Committee to the United States Civil Rights' Commission.

CCU members, and their guests, are invited to hear "The Theology of Civil Rights" on Thursday, September 29, at the Marines' Memorial, Sutter and Mason Streets. Luncheon, beginning at 12:15 p.m. in the 11th floor ballroom, will cost $2.50.

THE LULL THAT DIDN'T

Traditionally, so the myth goes, summer months in San Francisco bring a deep and restful lull in intergroup problems as school-free youngsters drag loving parents to shore, mountain, lake, desert or Disneyland. But summer brings the height of activity in the housing market, and CCU has been beseiged with calls for advice and help as nonwhite families look for homes outside of the "Fillmore" and "Chinatown" districts. Here are just a few cases:

A Negro realtor asked us to find a real estate broker in El Cerrito who would help her find two homes for white clients. She had been turned away by another because he was afraid that dealing with a nonwhite realtor would hurt his business even though the buyers were Caucasians. We located a realtor, at the same time advising our caller that she undoubtedly had a case under the Unruh Civil Rights Act of 1959, which forbids racial discrimination "in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever."

A leading San Francisco realtor told a Negro family that he could not sell to them because the owner objected. A check of the records disclosed him to be the owner. The family is filing suit.

Encampment for Citizenship students checked six downtown apartment buildings selected at random from newspaper ads. At all six, Negro couples were turned away by one subterfuge or another, while white couples were accepted. This duplicated results of a survey last December in the Pacific Heights, Marina and Sunset districts.

A young Caucasian professional received an eviction notice immediately after two Negro friends visited his apartment. The reason given: "Too many friends visit you." No amount of talking by the tenant or CCU could dissuade the landlord.

Two newly arrived social workers, one Caucasian, the other a Negro, found that apartments available to the first were closed to the second. CCU dug up several open to both.

A couple with a 6-months old child spent a week hitting back at one evasion after another from a landlord who finally insisted his building would remain "all white." CCU gave the Lord's Day of a Sunday afternoon to discussing democratic rights with the landlord, to no avail. A lawyer, CCU Board member, is handling a suit against him, while HOP is tracking down an apartment for the family. Six landladies answered our "Wanted for Rent" ad. Five of these responsive property owners belong to a minority group -- more interesting documentation to the strictures of segregation.

OUTSTANDING SOUTHERNER TO ADDRESS CCU

Harold C. Fleming, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, will speak to a CCU audience on "Crisis and Hope in the South," Monday, October 3, at 8:00 P.M. in the Parish Hall of the First Unitarian Church, Franklin and Geary Streets.

Founded in 1944 and headquartered in Atlanta, Georgia, the Southern Regional Council is, "An organization of Negro and white Southerners formed to achieve equal opportunity," explained Mr. Fleming. "It is definitely 'pro-integrationist', a term which is often slurred in these parts. We have been working recently for positive solutions to issues raised by the 'sit-ins' and school desegregation. We are probably best known in the West for our interpretative reporting of the significance of social change in the South as it affects the whole nation, which is what I wish to speak about to your audience."

SRC is the parent body for several State and local human relations councils and has an extensive educational, research, and action program.

Thirty-eight years old, Mr. Fleming is a native of Atlanta and attended public schools there until he entered Harvard University where he received a B.A. degree. He has been with SRC for 13 years, the last three as Executive Director, and is married with two children. He is co-author, with David Loth, of a book, Integration - North and South, has written articles on race relations for the New York Times, Reporter, Progressive, Nation, and other periodicals.

Donation for this meeting will be 75¢.

HELP!

Listings of apartments and houses, in neighborhoods where non-white minorities do not now have equal opportunity, are always welcome. "LET'S NOT TRY TO BE OSTRICHES"

Hailed by national authorities as "the best of its kind" and "a thoughtful work which I wish we had here," San Francisco's Housing Market - Open or Closed? was published by CCU in June.

The 48 page pamphlet is a popularized report of a study made of practices by brokers, lenders, builders, and landlords in selling and renting to nonwhites. It is the second section of the Civil Rights Inventory of San Francisco conducted by the Council under a grant from the Columbia Foundation and is based upon interviews with leaders in the housing industry.

"Let's not try to be ostriches," said a KPIX-TV editorial on the report, "We can't put our heads in the sand to avoid seeing and hearing about subjects that may be embarrassing...or disturbing.... We urge everyone to get a copy of the report and study it...as the first step toward gaining an understanding of the problems on both sides of this controversy."

Order your copy now -- encourage your club or church study group to read it -- send copies to friends, neighbors, or business associates.

Dear Miss Harris:

Mr. Fleming is away from the office for several days and, in the interest of time, has asked that I handle your inquiry of the 18th.

I called Miss Lillian Smith at her home in Clayton and discussed the matter with her. As a general rule, she no longer accepts time-consuming speaking engagements. But, quite frankly, the lure of San Francisco is a mighty one and she was pleased that you had thought of her. She has a January deadline on a book, but would be able to come out during February. In addtion to expenses, I think she would appreciate a modest honorarium to cover the ever-present "hidden" expenses.

Miss Smith's address is Old Screamer Mountain, Clayton, Georgia.

Your choice of Miss Smith is an excellent one. She is a good speaker, a charming person, and a remarkably courageous woman. I feel certain that she would make a very substantial contribution to your annual meeting.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Fleming:

The name of Lillian Smith came up in talking about who might be an attractive speaker for our annual meeting, sometime between the second half of January and the first half of February. Wondering how to get in touch with her reminded us of you.

Would you mind finding out for us if she'd be available for this type of exercise, if she'd like to visit San Francisco (possibly risking the rainy season) and what conditions, if any, she'd stipulate? Any insights you can give us on these questions would be a big help. The sooner we know, the quicker we'll be able to consider specifics, such as set date and other details.

If Miss Smith shows any predisposition to accepting our invitation, would you send us her address so that we may communicate directly. Many thanks for your trouble.

Thought you might like to have the enclosed clippings on your visit here. You did cut them out of the dailies, didn't you?

Sincerely,

White Southerner Advises . . .

'CLEAN OWN HOME' NON-SOUTH

A native white Southerner declared here this week that San Francisco and other non-Southern communities need to "clean their own house" if they want to help race relations in the South.

Harold C. Fleming, a native of Atlanta, told the BAY AREA INDEPENDENT that San Francisco must not give the Southern segregationists a reason to point their finger and try to justify their standpoint on segregation.

Crisis and Hope

Fleming, the executive director of the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta, gave a talk here Monday night on "Crisis and Hope in the South" under the auspices of the city's Council for Civic Unity.

The SRC is an organization of white and Negro Southerners who have been working for improved race relations since 1919. Fleming joined the staff in 1947.

Fleming said that San Franciscans and other non-Southerners can also help the South's civil rights movement in three other ways.

You Can Help

"You can help us," he said, "by joining and working with groups like your Council for Civic Unity, by learning the truth of what is going on in the South and by lending moral support (to sit-ins, etc) through sympathy movements.

"San Franciscans further need to show their support of civil rights on the national level," he charged. "This they can do through their legislators and contacts with national businesses."

Fleming said that accurate information can be obtained on what is going on in the South from his organization (it is free for the asking), from Southern School News (a monthly periodical published in Nashville) and other such sources.

In his talk at the First Unitarian Church here, Fleming said that it is necessary to recognize three phases of the Southern race relations picture — the Negro in the South, national pressures and the reaction of white Southerners.

The Southern Negro

"The Negro in the South is the indispensable factor in this equation," he said. "Without the Negro's determination to live and work in the South there would be no problem.

"Further the young Negroes are demonstrating that they don't want to live by the old rules. The sit-ins, for example, are a message that is plain to all."

The South is changing under national pressures, Fleming said.

"The first civil rights legislation was passed by Congress recently. This is a heartening fact and I forsee more legislation in these areas. Both presidential candidates made it plain they will do something about civil rights."

"Self Interest" Hope

Fleming sees hope in the reaction of white Southerners because of self-interest.

"The migration of industry to the South has

By TOM FLEMING

"Southerners do not look at segregation as a problem confined to the South," said Harold C. Fleming of Atlanta, director of Southern Regional Council." They see it as a national problem.

Fleming, who was the offices of the Council for Civic Unity, was the center of a press interview.

The pro-intergrationist southern intergroup leader was in the city to deliver a public address Monday night at the 1st Unitarian Church. He said he was in the West to observe how race relations operated in this section of the U. S.

Fleming told his listeners the non-violent sit-in movement will increase this autumn on a much larger scale as the colleges open.

He deplored violence that occurred in Jacksonville, Fla., but does not think there will be any large scale violence throughout the South because of the possible resistance.

The Atlantan said violence, or lack of violence, depended to a large extent on attitudes of local police in the various communities.

THE SOUTHERN leader said the sit-ins had brought positive gains in the Negro employment. Many large department and variety stores have changed their employment policies, he said, and Negroes have been hired in other capacities than just menial tasks which had been their lot.

One large drugstore chain in Atlanta had Negroes doing everything in the store which white personnel did, although there was still a pay differential, he declared. Now, he added, 45 cities in the South now have integrated eating facilities.

Fleming said some strong segregationist leaders now privately admit that segregation cannot last, they are only fighting a delaying action.

He thinks Sen. Kennedy will carry the South despite the religious issue that has been raised there. He told his listeners, surprisingly enough, the majority of the literature attacking Kennedy that is flooding the mails of the nation is printed in California.

THERE ARE A million and a quarter registered Negro voters in the South, he said, and this figure has increased because of activities of Rev. Martin Luther King and his group.

Rural Negroes, because of poverty and lack of education, do not vote, although they are more numerous than city dwellers.

Both candidates, he feels, are strongly committed to civil rights and he said they will take more vigorous action in this field.

placed many non-Southerners in executive positions in the South with the resulting liberalized outlook on race relations.

"Resistance to desegregation means closing schools and with the South trying to build and expand its industry, it cannot accept this loss."

Another area of self-interest Fleming mentioned was sports. He pointed out that Southern schools are finding it unsound to continue with segregated teams playing before unsegregated audiences.

"The Almighty Dollar"

Fleming also noted that monetary considerations (the Almighty Dollar) helped to speed desegregation of lunch counters which was accomplished in 45 Southern cities in eight weeks.

"The South will solve its problems," Fleming hopefully declared, "because it is necessary."

Fleming, an Army veteran of World War II, is a Harvard graduate (1944) and a Phi Beta Kappa. He has been a director of SRC for three years. He is co-author, with David Loth, of a book, "Integration, North and South."

Southern Leader Discusses Sit-in Demonstrations Today

Recent developments on sit-in demonstrations in the South will be discussed at noon today in 11 Wheeler Hall by Harold C. Fleming, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, an organization of white and Negro Southerners working for improved race relations.

Fleming was born in Atlanta and educated in Atlanta schools. While he was serving in the Army during World War II, he was a company commander of Negro troops on Okinawa.

He joined the staff of the Southern Regional Council in 1947 and also served on the central staff of the research project on bi-racial education in the United States sponsored by the Fund for the Advancement of Education. The results of this project were reported in "The Negro and the Schools" by Harry S. Ashmore.

A magna cum laude graduate of Harvard, in English and social sciences, Fleming has contributed articles on Southern affairs to such publications as "The Reporter," "New Republic," "Survey," and "The Annals." With David Loth, Fleming wrote "Integration North and South."

Fleming's campus appearance is sponsored by Stiles Hall (University YMCA), the Department of Sociology and the Student Executive Council for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

It was good of you to answer us so promptly on Lillian Smith's availability to speak at our annual dinner.

What delayed our following through were involved deliberations over the past few months on whether or not to hold the dinner this year. The final decision not to precludes the need for a speaker.

Should Miss Smith be visiting in this area anytime in the future, we'd be delighted, with some advance notice, to arrange for her to address a community gathering. There's much we have to learn from her experience and deep understanding.

Again, many thanks for your trouble and warm wishes for a good year.

Mr. Warren Brown
Council for Democracy
11 West 42nd Street
New York, New York

Dear Mr. Brown:

I am sorry for an unavoidable delay in this reply to your letter of April 3.

We are sending you herewith a copy of the charter of the Southern Regional Council and a copy of the March issue of the SOUTHERN FRONTIER. We can also let you have a copy of our by-laws if you would like to have it. By-laws are always rather dry reading, but at least ours show that our Council has a thoroughly democratic structure.

We are still a young organization, having been actually in operation as an organized body only since our charter meeting on February 16-17. We have been literally swamped with details of organization and with the job of trying to stimulate and re-orient various state and local groups which are interested in coordinating their work with ours. I hope that this Council and yours can be of mutual assistance, and I shall be keeping in touch with you from time to time.

With best wishes, I am

Cordially yours,

GUY B. JOHNSON
Executive Director

Atlanta, Georgia.

Dear Dr. Johnson:

It grieved me greatly to have to miss the last meeting of the Board of Trustees, but matters here were of such a nature that I just could not tear away. I am waiting impatiently for Minutes of your meeting.

The National Urban League is sending out a little pamphlet, "The Negro in America," by the Council for Democracy. In this pamphlet, on page 6, they are making a very clever reference to our organization. I hope you will read it. Do tell me at your first convenience just how things are turning out.

Get this. Is it same as Public Affairs Pamphlet 95?

Dr. Reid was here last week. Unfortunately, I was tied up and did not see nor did I hear him, but the reactions have been definitely favorable to his address.

Yours very kindly,

Gordon B. Hancock

NCCY LAUDS COOPERATION OF ARMY RECRUITING SERVICE

U.S. Army Photograph

The National Committee for Children and Youth recently presented certificates of appreciation to 27 U.S. Army recruiters who have been cooperating in the Youth Services Project which the Committee is conducting in Baltimore, Maryland and Washington, D.C. The program has the support of the Office of Manpower, Automation and Training of the U.S. Department of Labor.

This NCCY project is geared to aid youths who volunteer for military service but who cannot make the grade on the Enlistment Screening Test for lack of previous educational opportunity. The program is designed to provide the rejected volunteers with special accelerated educational training to either qualify them for military service or, through Manpower Development Training, to equip themselves for civilian occupations.

The Army Recruiting Service has cooperated with the projects in both cities by making referrals from 22 recruiting stations in the Baltimore-Washington area and by facilitating field trips to Army installations and giving military career council to the youth in training.

Dr. Donald Harting, Director of the Institute for Child Health and Human Development, National Institutes of Health and Chairman of the NCCY Subcommittee, presented the awards to Col. Thomas MacConnell III, Recruiting District Commander, Fort Meade, Maryland; Major Marvin R. Hicks, Recruiting Detachment Commander, Fort Holabird, Maryland. Dr. Harting also tendered awards to the following enlisted recruiters: Sergeant Major Alfred Harris; Master Sergeants Charles E. Jensen, Jr., John J. Dibattista, James H. Davis, James W. Jackson, Edward T. Brown, Joseph A. Gigliotte, Jack C. Buckley, John Topfer, Robert A. Stowell, Vernon D. Friend, Donald L. Tilson, Armenag Palian; Sergeants First Class C. Fred Willits, Harry L. Gromley, Robert F. Burton, Robert G. Gelnaw, Marvin A. Moscowitz, Ralph E. Council, Richard E. Gera, Frank A. Grega, Roy M. Hobbs; Staff Sergeants Regis E. Ketterer, Marshall E. Ledford; and Sergeant First Class Arthur B. Davis.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I have read and have been interested in your various publications since early in 1960. I am particularly impressed with your recent publication "Encounter with the Future." In reviewing your material, I am impressed by the fact that the Council has not only provided leadership but it has also exercised restraint. This combination is very difficult to attain, and indicates the high quality of dedication among the leaders in your own organization.

In reviewing the listing of 375 organizations who have programs related to children and youth, which makes up the Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth, affiliated with the National Committee for Children and Youth, I am concerned that we have a relatively small number which have a major interest in human rights. Those which are now among our membership which have held leadership roles in the CNO are the American Jewish Committee, National Urban League, Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. A number of other organizations such as the National Council for Jewish Women, Encampment for Citzenship, Hadassah, and others, have an interest but not a primary objective for human rights. I feel that it would be a great addition to the Council of National Organizations if the Southern Regional Council would join in the Council.

The Council was created prior to the 1950 White House Conference on Children and Youth to give a means for communication among the national organizations in preparing for the 1950 Conference. It has continued in a relatively informal relationship since that time. During the planning for the 1960 White House Conference, the Council was very active and had representation on both President's National Committee, and the White House Conference deliberations. The Council also has five representatives on the National Committee governing board.

I have sent you under separate cover information regarding the Council of National Organizations and the National Committee for Children and Youth. After consideration you find you wish to join the Council, I assure you the Southern Regional Council would be most welcome and would give us an opportunity to keep in closer communication.

Sincerely yours,

Isabella J. Jones

Dear Mrs. Jones:

Mr. Dunbar has asked me to respond to your letter of July 16 since I will shortly become the Director of SRC.

We are very interested in your invitation and want to respond favorably, subject to approval by our executive committee. However, could you give us some more specific guidance on the financial responsibility involved. Before making a definite commitment, we would want to be certain that the financial obligations are within the means of our present budget.

Thank you for thinking of SRC. We look forward to a close association with the Council.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Anthony:

Thank you for your letter of December 2 advising us of your executive committee's approval of membership in the Council of National Organizations. We are happy to have the Council join us in our mutual efforts on behalf of a better life for all children and youth.

We recently received two booklets from your organization which I would like to request additional copies of. They are: Black Belt Schools: Beyond Desegregation; and The Migrant Farmer, A Psychiatric Study. I would be most appreciative if we might receive one additional copy of each so that we might share them with the National Clearinghouse for Mental Health Information. NCCY is under contract with the Clearinghouse to provide information from our constituent groups relating to the broad area of mental health.

With all good wishes to you,

Sincerely yours,

NCCY

COMMITTEE
FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH

Established to Follow Up the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth

What It Is

A NATIONAL ORGANIZATION created to stimulate implementation of the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth, the NCCY carries out the third important phase of the Conference—followup. The Conference involved millions of Americans in the preparatory stage. The Conference participants developed 670 Forum recommendations. Implementation of these recommendations will be the task of all those concerned with children and youth in the decade ahead.

As early as October 1959, the President's National Committee of the 1960 Conference recommended formation of such a continuing body to provide overall followup. The President's National Committee joined with the three sponsoring groups which had been part of the 1960 Conference to form the NCCY. These groups are: the National Council of State Committees (representing Governor-appointed committees in all the States); the Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth (representing over 500 voluntary groups); and the Interdepartmental Committee on Children and Youth (representing 34 Federal agencies).

The NCCY consists of 21 persons who serve without compensation for three-year terms on a rotating basis. Six are members-at-large, including one youth. The other 15 members are drawn from the three sponsoring groups.

An executive director and staff conduct the work of the NCCY under the direction of an Executive Committee and standing committees. The NCCY is an incorporated, non-profit educational organization operated with private funds. Contributions to it are tax-deductible under Section 170(c) of the Internal Revenue Code.

What It Will Do

The NCCY has adopted this statement of purpose:

1. Stimulate effective implementation of recommendations and utilization of materials of the 1960 White House Conference.

2. Stimulate further research and more effective utilization of research findings on behalf of children and youth.

3. Encourage cooperation and joint activities among the sponsoring groups.

4. In cooperation with the National Council of State Committees for Children and Youth encourage the continuation and/or development of State Committees for Children and Youth, and in cooperation with the Council of National Organizations encourage continued activity of National Organizations on behalf of children and youth.

5. In cooperation with sponsoring groups promote and assist State, regional and national conferences on the problems of children and youth.

6. Promote the exchange of information on the concerns affecting children and youth.

How It Will Be Done

IN CARRYING OUT its program, the NCCY proposes to use the assistance of all possible existing channels, public and private, and especially those of its three sponsoring agencies. [The NCCY will not directly support or approve specific legislation or officially endorse programs of other organizations.] The scope of its activities will be limited only by the funds available to it to support the various aspects of the program outlined here:

1. FORUM RECOMMENDATIONS

• Determine what agencies are working on the recommendations and what their activities are. • Disseminate this information to the constituent groups and agencies

The working together of independent units so as to produce a result greater than could have been produced b involved in the 1960 Conference to facilitate cooperation and avoid overlapping efforts. • Promote interaction among constituent groups and agencies on followup of the recommendations.

2. POINTS OF FOCUS

• Determine the feasibility of selecting problem areas as they may evolve as points of focus for special efforts by the NCCY.

3. RESEARCH

• Encourage sponsoring groups, their constituencies and others concerned with children and youth to identify problems needing research. • Stimulate organizations doing research to make findings available to persons and groups to which they would be useful. • Assist interested persons to obtain research findings by identifying sources of such research. • Stimulate research projects on children and youth.

4. PUBLIC UNDERSTANDING

• Maintain broad public awareness and understanding of the needs of children and youth and promote constructive support of programs to meet these needs by a public information program utilizing all media.
• Prepare and publish information related to Conference followup or encourage others to do so.

5. EVALUATION

• Make a continuing evaluation of the impact of the 1960 Conference and the followup activities resulting from it.
• Make a report to the Nation in 1965 based on this review.

6. RELATED SERVICES AND ACTIVITIES

• Maintain a clearinghouse of information through a house organ, guides, and an information exchange service. • Promote and assist in planning and conducting conferences and joint meetings on regional, national or other levels. • Assist in integrating existing services on followup activities. • Maintain and make available for sale to the public, publications and recordings prepared for the 1960 Conference. • Make the photo exhibit, "These Are Our Children," available for public showing.

by the units working separately.

What You Can Do

- Offer your services to your State Committee for Children and Youth. Work to strengthen your State committee as an effective citizen-action program.
- Support local, State and National Organizations which are working to implement the recommendations of the Conference Forums.
- Know the resources for children and youth in your community, State and Nation, and help to make these more effective.

The NCCY, as a coordinating body, can best serve its purpose by remaining well informed about activities in the field of children and youth, and by disseminating the knowledge it has, and continues to collect, to those in need of such information. Therefore you can take part in the overall effort of promoting the welfare of the Nation's children by:

Telling us of any activity you are conducting or participating in to implement or follow up the White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Asking us for information and/or help in a project you are undertaking relating to followup of the White House Conference.

RULES AND PROCEDURES FOR THE
COUNCIL OF NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH

I. PURPOSES

The purposes of the Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth are to:

- o stimulate cooperation and participation of national voluntary organizations in implementing Forum recommendations of the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth;
- o review and evaluate activities of the member organizations related to followup of the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth and report these activities by means of
  (1) facilities made available through the National Committee for Children and Youth and
  (2) a report to the 1965 Joint Conference; and
- o hold itself in readiness for the effective participation of national organizations in planning and implementing policies and program of the 1970 White House Conference on Children and Youth by making available the knowledge, experience and resources of the national voluntary organizations to the persons designated to plan the 1970 Conference.

II. MEMBERSHIP

Membership in the Council is open to national voluntary organizations having a major interest, emphasis, or concern for children and youth, the determination to be made by the organization, and subject to the approval of the executive committee of CNOCY. Because structure and geographic patterns vary so widely, a working definition of a national organization for purposes of Council membership is an organization that is available to the entire country and that has autonomy; an autonomous organization serving one region of several states where no national organization exists or is appropriate; or, national boards or commissions within larger organizations that have control of their own programs and budgets.

Each organization shall complete the membership form submitted by the CNOCY office and shall designate an individual to be its representative on the Council. All matters involving the Council, or the organization's relationship to the Council are channeled through the designated representative. It shall be the responsibility of the member organization to inform the Council office of any change in representation on the Council.

III. OFFICERS

The officers of the Council consist of the chairman, four vice-chairmen and secretary. The officers and the immediate past chairman are included among the 41 members of the executive committee. Officers shall be elected for a term of two years and shall not serve more than one term in the same office.

A. Chairman - The chairman shall preside at meetings of the Council and the executive committee; appoint committees, as authorized by the executive committee; prepare the agenda for meetings of the Council and the executive committee; serve as ex officio member of all committees, except the nominating committee; serve as one of the Council's representatives on the National Committee for Children and Youth and report on behalf of the Council; and give direction to the staff of NCCY in relation to CNOCY activities.

He shall designate three persons from the elected officers to serve with the past chairman and himself on NCCY. (See Section VIII - RELATIONSHIPS)

B. Vice-Chairmen - There shall be four vice-chairmen, one of whom shall be designated by the executive committee of the Council as first vice-chairman.

In the absence or inability to serve of the chairman, the first vice-chairman shall preside at meetings of the Council or the executive committee and carry out the other duties of the chairman. Similarly, in the absence or inability to serve of the first vice-chairman, the remaining vice-chairmen shall serve as determined among them. The vice-chairmen shall carry out such assignments as given them by the chairman or the executive committee.

C. Secretary - The secretary shall take the minutes of the meetings of the Council and the executive committee; see that they are transcribed, reproduced and distributed to the appropriate persons; and, when called upon, read the roll of representatives to the Council or membership of the executive committee.

IV. EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

The council shall elect an executive committee of 41 members, including the officers and the immediate past chairman, and must include representation from health, education, social welfare, recreation and leisure time, religion, organized labor, arts and culture, human rights, service clubs, youth, and citizen groups.

Members of the executive committee, except the officers, shall serve for a term of ~~three~~ 2 years, and will be eligible for re-election at the end of a ~~three~~ 2-year period for one additional term. No organization shall be represented on the executive committee for more than two consecutive terms. In the event of personnel changes in the representation of an organization represented on the executive committee, the organization may name a substitute representative to the committee to complete the unexpired term.

The immediate past chairman of the Council shall serve on the executive committee during the term immediately following his chairmanship, until succeeded by a retiring chairman.

The executive committee shall carry out policies and programs as directed by the Council; act for the Council between meetings of the Council, and subject to the Council's ratification of its actions; make recommendations to the Council for action; and authorize creation and appointment of standing or special committees as needed to further the business of the Council.

The executive committee shall elect the nominating committee and designate its chairman.

V. HEADQUARTERS, STAFF AND FINANCING

Headquarters for the Council and staff services are provided through the National Committee for Children and Youth.

There are no dues for membership in the Council. Voluntary contributions by the member organizations are requested as needed to cover necessary out-of-pocket expenses for operation of the Council, as are approved from time to time by the officers.

Details concerning the financial arrangements between NCCY and the Council are worked out between the officers of the Council and the officers of NCCY.

The voluntary contributions for out-of-pocket expenses are paid to NCCY. An accounting is maintained of all funds received from national organizations for this purpose and of charges against the fund and a report is made by the Director of NCCY at each meeting of the Council or of the executive committee.

VI. NOMINATIONS AND ELECTIONS

A. A nominating committee of five persons shall be elected by the executive committee at least six months prior to the biennial meeting of the Council. The executive committee shall designate one of the five persons elected to serve as chairman.

B. The nominating committee shall meet at least four months before the biennial meeting and select a list of nominees for officers and to fill vacancies on the executive committee.

The committee shall present a slate of nominees for officers and a list of nominees for the executive committee.

C. In selecting nominees the following guidelines should be considered:

1. the nominee for chairman of the Council of National Organizations should be selected from the officers of the previous year;

2. the nominees for officers should be selected from the executive committee of the previous year;

3. members of the executive committee shall reflect a balance of representation of the primary areas of services for children and youth, namely, education, health, welfare, youth-serving, religion, human relations, recreation, and general service organizations.

D. The nominating committee shall send out a form requesting permission to submit the names of the nominees. Any replies not received by the deadline required by the nominating committee will be presumed to be in the affirmative.

E. The nominating committee shall prepare a ballot which must be mailed not less than sixty (60) days before the biennial meeting to the representatives on the Council of all member organizations.

F. Ballots shall be returned, in the envelope provided for that purpose, to the Council office not less than thirty (30) days before the biennial meeting and shall be opened and counted in such a manner as directed by the nominating committee.

G. Results of the election shall be announced at the biennial meeting.

H. Ballots shall be destroyed upon order by a vote of the biennial meeting.

VII. MEETINGS

A. Meetings of the Council shall be held biennially in conjunction with the Joint Conference on Children and Youth.

B. The executive committee shall meet not less than once a year, or on the call of the chairman.

C. Each member organization shall have one vote at business sessions of the Council, exercised by the designated representative or the certified substitute.

D. A member of the executive committee who is unable to attend a meeting of the committee may designate another representative of his organization to attend as an observer and to participate in discussions, but only members of the committee may vote.

E. A quorum for holding a meeting and conducting business shall be the number present after due and adequate notice of the meeting has been given.

VIII. RELATIONSHIPS

The Council, one of the founding groups, names five members of the National Committee for Children and Youth. These representatives consist of the chairman, the immediate past chairman and three of the elected officers designated by the chairman to serve as members of NCCY. They receive their general guidance from the Council and its executive committee, but they are free to act as individual members of NCCY, in the best interest of all concerned.

Much of the Council's program is directly related to the work of the National Committee for Children and Youth. Through the channel of NCCY, the Council will cooperate with the National Council of State Committees for Children and Youth and the Interdepartmental Committee on Children and Youth in convening joint conferences, exchanging information, preparing and distributing materials, developing questionnaires, conducting surveys and in other ways furthering the purposes of the Council.

A NEW AND VALUABLE RESOURCE ON RURAL YOUTH -- Their problems, needs and aspirations. What changes have been brought about by the expanding urban sprawl and the declining rural economy?

Rural Youth in a Changing Environment: Report of the National Conference on Problems of Rural Youth in a Changing Environment, edited by Ruth Cowan Nash. Published by and available from the National Committee for Children and Youth, 1145 19th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. 20036, 1965. 345 pp. $2.50 plus $.25 postage. (Discount prices are available on bulk orders.)

This report includes full texts of addresses by Winthrop Rockefeller, Dr. Paul A. Miller, Dr. Russell G. Mawby, and Brooks Hays, and summaries of other addresses by government officials and authorities in areas concerned with rural youth. An interesting feature of the report is an analysis by Dr. William Osborne of "A Study of the Problems, Attitudes and Aspirations of Rural Youth" prepared for the Rockefeller Brothers Fund by Elmo Roper and Associates. This analysis, which includes a number of tables and charts, reports on the direct survey of rural youth on their own attitudes and is unique in this area. Considerable attention is given in the report to needs of special groups, including Negro, American Indian, Spanish-American youth and children of migrant workers. The recommendations of the Conference are presented both in full and in summary. A report of followup activities, a catalogue of existing programs and projects to meet the needs of rural youth, and an interesting "Profile of the Rural Juvenile Court Judge" are included in the appendix.

YOUTH'S NEED FOR CHALLENGE AND PLACE IN AMERICAN SOCIETY: ITS IMPLICATIONS FOR ADULTS AND ADULT INSTITUTIONS

By Roy Sorenson

"An adolescent is a traveller who has left one place and has not reached the next," says Roy Sorenson in Youth's Need for Challenge and Place in American Society: Its Implications for Adults and Adults Institutions, a pamphlet now available from the National Committee for Children and Youth.

How can adult institutions and national organizations challenge these young people creatively and imaginatively? Mr. Sorenson suggests six areas of challenge for adult leaders to consider.

This stimulating article sets you thinking about "teen-age culture" and to wondering how much you really understand it. It warns against keeping adolescents children or trying prematurely to make them adults. Youth's Need for Challenge must be read by every parent, every professional youth worker and volunteer in these United States. Order your copy at once.

COUNCIL OF NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH

PURPOSES—

The purposes of the Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth are to:

- stimulate cooperation and participation of national voluntary organizations in implementing Forum recommendations of the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth;
- review and evaluate activities of the member organizations related to followup of the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth and report these activities by means of (1) facilities made available through the National Committee for Children and Youth and (2) a report to the 1965 Joint Conference; and
- hold itself in readiness for the effective participation of national organizations in planning and implementing policies and program of the 1970 White House Conference on Children and Youth by making available the knowledge, experience and resources of the national voluntary organizations to the persons designated to plan the 1970 Conference.

PROGRAM—

The Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth is a medium through which national voluntary organizations pool efforts in behalf of children and youth. In carrying out program, the CNOCY utilizes four specific principles, broadly stated in view of the great diversity of purpose and structure among member organizations, to:

- assist the National Committee for Children and Youth in identifying major areas of need requiring action by national organizations as designated by the Forum recommendations of the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth;
- call the attention of member organizations to these areas through the utilization of all means available, including conferences, reports and clearinghouse services in cooperation with NCCY;
- inform national organizations of the actions being taken by other national organizations in implementing the 1960 Forum recommendations and
- evaluate the participation of national organizations in the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth and prepare for their effective participation in the 1970 Conference.

AUTHORIZATION—

The President's National Committee for the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth, at its first meeting, recommended the creation of a Council of National Organizations for the 1960 WHCCY, "to provide for the most effective integration" of special activities, knowledge, and interest of national organizations about children and youth:

- the existing Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth was invited to form this Council;
- on February 20, 1959, at a meeting in New York City, the CNOCY voted to accept the responsibility and immediately set about reorganizing itself to most effectively "provide the integration" requested by the President's National Committee;
- membership in CNOCY for participation in the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth rose to 593 national organizations.

On October 23, 1959, the President's National Committee for the 1960 Conference approved the recommendation that the National Committee for Children and Youth should be established jointly by the Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth, the National Council of State Committees for Children and Youth and the Interdepartmental Committee on Children and Youth to provide followup of the 1960 White House Conference:

- the Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth, meeting in Washington, D. C., March 31, 1960, voted to continue participation in the ongoing activities related to the White House Conference on Children and Youth including co-sponsorship of the National Committee for Children and Youth.

STRUCTURE—

Membership in the Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth is open to national voluntary organizations having major interest, emphasis, or concern for children and youth:

- determination of eligibility for membership is made by the applying organization, subject to approval of the CNOCY Executive Committee;
- for purposes of Council membership, a national organization is one that is available to the entire nation and has autonomy;
- CNOCY is governed by an Executive Committee of 41 members including the officers (chairman, four vice-chairmen, the secretary, and the immediate past-chairman) and 34 members elected from the designated representatives of the member organizations;
- the Executive Committee includes representation from the fields of health, education, social welfare, recreation and leisure time, religion, organized labor, arts and culture, human rights, service clubs, youth, and citizen organizations;
- staff services and headquarters for CNOCY are provided by the National Committee for Children and Youth.

THE COUNCIL OF NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH

NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS FOR FOLLOW UP OF THE 1960 WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON CHILDREN AND YOUTH

1. CNOCY—Organized December 1950 . . . consists of more than 360 national voluntary organizations having programs for children and youth . . . appoints five members to NCCY.

2. ICCY—Established by Presidential letter April 1948 . . . consists of 34 Federal agencies with programs for children and youth . . . appoints five members to NCCY.

3. NCSC—Organized December 1950 . . . consists of official State and Territorial Committees for Children and Youth . . . appoints five members to NCCY.

4. NCCY—Established November 1960, to stimulate implementation of the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth . . . consists of 21 persons: six of whom are members-at-large, including one youth. The other 15 members represent the three sponsoring groups.

RELATIONSHIPS—

The Council of National Organizations for Children and Youth, the National Council of State Committees for Children and Youth and the Interdepartmental Committee on Children and Youth are the groups sponsoring the National Committee for Children and Youth.

- Each sponsoring group names five representatives to the NCCY. These, together with six members-at-large, provide a vehicle for effective communication, planning, and joint action among the three sponsoring groups.

HISTORY—

- Organized in 1949 as the Advisory Council on Participation of National Organizations to provide a channel for effective participation of national voluntary organizations in the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth with a membership of 464 organizations. The Council report for the 1950 Conference is included in Children and Youth at the Midcentury, Report on Youth, National Organizations and Federal Government.
- The Council voted to continue as one of the units of the National Midcentury Committee for Children and Youth, charged with leadership for followup of the 1950 Conference.
- When this Committee completed its program in 1953, the CNOCY voted to continue as a unit to cooperate with other groups working on Conference followup. The CNOCY received secretarial service from the National Social Welfare Assembly. Out-of-pocket expenses were paid by the Council from a residual fund from the National Midcentury Committee, divided between the cooperating groups. The main activities of CNOCY from 1953-1959 were the Joint Conferences on Children and Youth in 1955, 1957, and 1958, which it co-sponsored with the National Council of State Committees for Children and Youth and the Interdepartmental Committee on Children and Youth.
- Robert E. Bondy, Director of the National Social Welfare Assembly, was the first chairman of the CNOCY, serving from 1949 through the 1960 WHCCY. Mr. Bondy was appointed to the Executive Committee of the President's National Committee for the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth, so the CNOCY would be represented at the highest policy level in Conference planning.
- Following the designation of CNOCY as the coordinating body for national organizations for the 1960 Conference, a consultant to national organizations was added to the Conference staff with an office in the National Social Welfare Assembly headquarters in New York City.
- Prior to the 1960 Conference, organizations were invited to evaluate their own programs and progress since 1950. These studies formed the basis for Focus on Children and Youth, the report of the national organizations to the 1960 White House Conference.
- At the Council meeting during the 1960 Conference, terms were established for officers and the Executive Committee. Lyle W. Ashby, Deputy Executive Secretary, National Education Association, was elected chairman and served until April 1962, when Philip E. Ryan, Executive Director, National Association for Mental Health, became chairman.

THE JOY OF CHILDREN

Text by PEARL S. BUCK

Large format—8½ x 11 inches—224 pages
With 247 photographs

Introduction by ROY SORENSON, Chairman, National Committee for Children and Youth

PEARL S. BUCK'S moving and evocative prose and the 247 expressive photographs combine to capture the beauty, excitement, and challenge of the unfolding of life from birth to young maturity. This handsomely produced volume is based on the photographic exhibit prepared for the 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth, "These Are Our Children," the most comprehensive pictorial display ever assembled about America's young people. It is a book to be treasured forever, and a tribute to the dedicated efforts of all those who work for our children—our strength and our pride.

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

While you already may have received notice and urgent invitation to participate in the forty-third Annual Conference of the Council of Southern Mountain Workers, I am eager to send you this special note of invitation because Miss Julia Allen, chairman of this group in 1954, had you tabbed as one who should be of special value to the thinking of the group studying labor and industry.

We came close to the three hundred mark last year in representation from every state in theAppalachian South, and from many other states as well. The enclosed Newsletter, which you may also receive in a second class mailing, will give you some idea of the outline of this important event. We shall be delighted to have your questions in advance of this conference, but we shall be pleased to have your participation personally, or to have you send representation, or to have you bring additional people with you, whether we are able to discuss this in the meantime or not.

Dear Mr. Ayer:

I wish I could get up to the Conference of the Council of Southern Mountain Workers, but I just don't think I can work it in. I have put February 18th down on my calendar as a date to try to be there, but I don't guarantee to make it.

The enclosed issue of New South has a special message for everybody at the meeting.

If you would like to get fifty or so for distribution, I think they could be sent to you if the Council of Southern Mountain Workers could scare up $5.00. Or maybe some consignment arrangement could be worked out. Really, your people ought to read this one.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

We are sorry that you cannot be at Gatlinburg. We do wish that you might be represented by some other members of your staff. I should be pleased to have you send us fifty copies of the New South, Vol. 9, No. 10. I am a longtime personal friend of Bob Menefee and have been much impressed by his report in this issue. You may bill the Council for these. I think I may endeavor to re-sell them in our sales booth. I judge that I should charge fifteen cents each for single copies, although I do not find such a price listed. If we find an intense interest in one of the work group sections we may decide to give them away.

According to Webster, news may be (1) a report of recent events, or even (2) of old events about which you have not before heard, or—new or old—(3) merely matter of interest to the reader. Thus, in one way or another, the tidings this NEWSLETTER brings surely qualify for everybody.

It is NEWS, of the second classification but of first importance to some, that it is not required* that one belong to the Council of Southern Mountain Workers to be welcome at the 43rd Annual Conference to be held at Gatlinburg, Tennessee, on February 16 to 19, 1955, and to contribute effectively and to share satisfyingly in that event.

WHO, then, MAY ATTEND? A good question. We're glad it came up!

Answer: EVERYBODY is welcome. Those who will come and those who ought to come are:

People who have more than a passing interest in their jobs . People who wish to know about what others are doing, and how to work more effectively with them toward common goals of greater significance than the specific job of any one of us

Such as: Teachers with an inner fire
Agricultural leaders seeking new ways
Ministers who wish to discover and share the Common Denominator of spiritual growth
Recreation leaders and students who have a humanitarian mission
Doctors, nurses, and other health workers
Librarians, extension agents, public officials
Representatives of industry
AND of labor who must succeed together
OR LOSE TOGETHER
Administrators and employees of government agencies
Which do exist for the people
Educators of every status in addition to classroom teachers—
Presidents, Deans, Department Heads, Directors,
Professors, Assistant and Associate Professors, Instructors
Custodians—And other people you will wish to meet

WHY? Another good question. We're glad it came up too!

Answer: The home and the school, the Church and the hospital, the factory and the farm, the government and its citizens, the Appalachian South and the Nation—and the World—are parts of one whole and need to be closely associated in purpose and practice for any one or all to be most effective. We, here in these 250 mountain counties of nine states, have much in common—much to do together and much to share both inside and outside our immediate region. Once a year is not too often to re-examine our goals, to adapt our procedures, and to unite in pride and hope for the future.

PEOPLE YOU WILL WANT TO HEAR

Dr. George B. Zehmer, Director of the Extension Service and Professor of Education at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia

RECEIVED JAN 24 1956

Dear George Mitchell:

I have just been talking by telephone with W. B. Jones at the University of Tennessee, a member of my conference committee for the February 8 to 11 meeting in Gatlinburg. I called him about an idea I have for the education panel which is scheduled for the forenoon of February 10. As I see this thing developing it suddenly came over me Saturday, (why I didn't think of it sooner I cannot say), that we ought to have as a participant in that program Robert G. Menefee, a native of Kentucky--eastern Kentucky mountain boy--who traveled for you and made the field report entitled "The Supreme Court Decision and the Appalachian South". My plan was to ask you to send him to the conference to participate on that panel, but "Dub" says that Fred Routh has already been recruited for this and that you have agreed to send him. This is fine and is exactly as I discussed it in a tentative way with the program committee weeks ago. However, I still believe that it would be well to have Menefee there as a reference person and as a consultant, particularly as he is a native of the region. We shall have copies of this field report reprint on sale and we feel that he would be an excellent person to have either on the panel or in the audience or mingling with the participants throughout the conference.

all in good nature, but still I have gone as far as I can see

The reason I am asking you to send him is because I have already exhausted all the possibilities of official Berea College sponsorship. As a matter of fact I am in considerable disfavor with both the dean and president because of the number of our staff members and students that one way or another we have persuaded the institution to send and to underwrite. Menefee can get away--I checked that. He cannot do this at his own expense. It would cost about $32.50 including his share of some travel if he could be there for the entire time. Due to his class schedule it probably would be better if he did not leave here until Thursday morning which would reduce this cost by two, three, or four dollars. If you agree with me that he is an important man to have there it would please me if you would negotiate with him directly in terms of what I have written since I have already taken the trouble to find out if he can be excused from the campus and if he would go.

Now, I understand what is wrong with taking up two important matters in one letter, but I have a second proposition to make. You are the man who made a speech to the Berea College faculty seven or eight years ago about the Appalachian South and "uniting the pie", which so impressed me and others that Dean Allen and I went to President Hutchins and negotiated your return trip to give a similar talk to the entire student body and faculty in united chapel. I have not forgotten the concept that you made plain of the community of interest and concern of the mountain counties of these nine states and this, of course, coincides exactly with my philosophy of the purpose of the Council of the Southern Mountains, Inc.

As we complete plans for the six-thirty dinner meeting February 10 on the topic "Raising the Standards of Living in the Appalachian South", I would like to have you with us. The Council has, as you know, not a dime of assured income and I cannot offer you an honorarium or even expenses for this participation, but I am asking you to come and to take part because of the importance of this participation to the region. If you knew the limitations of space, staff, budget, and time with which we are operating you would forgive the lateness of these two inspirations. I sincerely hope that you will say "yes" to both requests.

Please extend to Fred Routh my personal cordial welcome to him as a participant also, since Bill Jones has assured me that it is all set.

The education section has been publicized under two or three titles, but the one which I like best is "Educational Progress and Continuing Problems in the Mountain Counties of these nine states, with special consideration of where we are in integration.

Sincerely

Dear Mr. Ayer:

Here is the wire I sent you today. Here is a blue travel blank for Menefee's expense. We are good for it up to $40.00 as said. By "you pull," I meant you to communicate with Menefee and get him to your meeting.

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY

Jan 25, 1956.

Dear Fred Routh,

You noted the Council of the Southern Mountains conference in Gatlinburg, Tennessee, Mountain View Inn, Feb. 8-11.

The Educationsession, entitled "Education in the Applachian South: Educational Progress and continuing Problems, will meet Feb. 10, Friday at 9:00 A.M.

Members of the panel are

Dr. James A. Colston, Pres. Knoxville College, Chairman
Fred A. Routh, Assistant Director for State Organizations, SRC
Herman Long, Director of Race Relations Institute, Fisk, Nashville
Bertis Capehart, Superintendent of Schools, Oak Ridge, Tenn.
Wilson Lindsey, Boys Guidance Counselor, Oak Ridge High School, Oak Ridge, Tenn.
Miss Poole, student, Berea College
A Negro student as yet not obtained.

I am asking Mr. Ayre, Executive secretary of the ~~conference~~ Council, to send you information re program, hotel reservations, etc.

I trust that you are coming to the meeting of proposed consultants (those I recruited several weeks ago) for the Tennessee Council. The meeting is scheduled for 10:00 A.M. Sunday, Jan 29, at the U T. School of Social work, 421 21st Avenue S., Nashville. The same place we met before. I don't believe I told Mr, Beckman to ask you to come, though I believe I did tell him that Isaw you in Atlanta and told you of the meeting.

Maybe you cannot come, if not, Fran Manis, Joe Drake and Lee Campbell will be there along with Beckman and they can induct the new consultants. I recruited four from Nashville and five from Johnson City. I did not have time to go to Chattanooga. Mrs. Valien obtained Gibson from Memphis.

I am making two studies for the state now which take just about every minute I have. I'll be in Conn., R.I., and Deleware next week and will not be able to attend the Nashville meeting. I'll call Beckman now and suggest that you be officially asked to come to the Nashville meeting. Maybe there could be some talk about program development.

SUMMARY STATEMENT OF PANEL SYMPOSIUM "Equal Opportunies for Health Education in the Appalachian South."

The many problems involved in attaining equality of educational opportunity in the Appalachian South cannot be solved within the framework of segregation. We recognize the validity of the U. S. Supreme Court decisions; we recognize segregation as incompatible with Christian ethics and teachings; that it places an insurmountable economic barrier by placing the two races in competition for the educational dollar; that worse, it works a continuing hardship and harm on the minds and spirits of all children--both Negro and white.

We see the movement toward integration as aiding in the solution of several phases of educational inequality; we recognize that there must be an equalization between rural and urban schools in physical facilities, in teacher salaries, and in expenditures per pupil.

We urge that local people--of all groups--come together in equal dignity and full democracy to work toward the solution of their problems within the framework of the Supreme Court decisions; that they support the administrators who stand for law and order as embodied in our Federal Constitution; and that we--the people of the Appalachian South, so conduct ourselves that we may serve as an example to the rest of the South and as a beacon of hope to the rest of the world.

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

It was both a pleasure and an honor to be flying the SRC flag again. I deeply appreciate your giving me the opportunity, especially in view of the fact that you already had such excellent representation at this conference in the person of Fred Routh. It was good to see him again although, as is typical, there was too little time for visiting or conferring.

Fred has probably given you whatever you need by way of a report on the conference. This Council of the Southern Mountains is a lively group with a growing influence in the area. A few years ago they had little or no Negro participation and would have been hesitant to even mention segregation. A resolution favoring integration in 1956 was passed at the session which dealt with this topic and was later approved by the Board. While resolutions solve few problems, this was a fairly drastic step for this group. Incidentally, I think there was no doubt that Routh was the strongest man on the panel and that the SRC contributed significantly to the discussion and the action.

In the conversation between formal sessions there were chances to get in a good many licks regarding the issue in general and SRC in particular. Following up on one of these conversations, I would suggest that you send your latest list of publications to:

Rev. Rufus Morgan
Franklin, North Carolina

Rev. Morgan is president of the Council of the Southern Mountains and indicated a desire for discussion materials for use in his own community. I did not succeed in getting him actually to request the SRC material, but I think he would be interested. He asked me for a copy of the report on my summer project and I was able to supply that.

Thank you again for letting me be a work hand of the SRC and, in fact, for making my attendance at this conference possible. I hope the job I was able to do justified your confidence.

Sincerely,

Bob Menefee

Dear Bob,

It was a real pleasure to be with you at Gatlinburg. I feel that you contributed greatly to the meeting and brought honour not only to yourself but to SRC since you represented us there. I have turned your expense account over to Mrs. Alexander, our Secretary-Treasurer, for processing. It will probably be sent out from this office on Monday.

I too felt that it was significant that the Council of Southern Mountains added their weight on the side of right in resolving that the Appalachian South should desegregate in the Fall of 1956.

Please keep in touch with us and let us know how things go.

Best personal regards,

(Frederick B. Routh,

Dear Mr. Morgan,

What a very real pleasure it was to be with the Council of Southern Mountains in Gatlinburg, Tenn. ! You lead a spirited group of dedicated people who have the interest of all the mountain people on their conscience; who act without paternalism in accordance with this interest. I was deeply moved by the resolution they passed urging Appalachian communities to desegregate this Fall.

I have entered your name for a gift subscription to our publication NEW SOUTH for we feel here that key community and regional people, such as you, are vitally interested in what is happening in the South.

Anything we may do to help the Council of Southern Mountains we are willing to try. Would you please put us on your mailing list for the Newsletter

Best personal regards,

Sincerely,

I recently received a copy of your "A Hundred Years Later" through the reader's service in Current Magazine. I have read this little book with great interest and with great respect for the contributors. Allow me to congratulate you on publishing this book.

I wonder if we may have three more copies of the book. Please bill us if there is a charge. I notice that this is No. 2 in a series called, "Toward Regional Realism". I would be interested, also, in a copy of No. 1 and would be interested in knowing about other publications of the Southern Regional Council.

I enclose information about the Council of the Southern Mountains which you may not have seen. I invite you and others from the Southern Regional Council to attend our Fifty-First Annual Conference which will be held in Gatlinburg, Tennessee , February 19-22, 1963.

March 3, 1964

Dear Council Member:

The Executive Committee met in Berea on February 21 and voted to submit By-laws revision and addition to a vote of the membership at the Annual Conference in Asheville, April 7-10, 1964.

The revision and addition suggested are as follows:

To change the title (in the Index and on Pages 4 and 7) of "The Committee for Economic Development" to "The Committee for Resource Development;"

To add the following provisions for a "Committee for Urban Affairs," as No. 20 under Article VIII and to include the above title in the Index and on Page 4.

The Committee for Urban Affairs shall consist of not fewer that seven (7) members of the Council. Other non-voting members may be appointed by the Chairman. The duties of the Committee for Urban Affairs shall be:

a. To carry out the purpose of the Council, as provided in Article II, relating to problems of mobility and problems of Appalachian people now residing in urban centers.

b. To consider the recommendations of the Annual Conference.

c. To represent the Council, when approved by the Board of Directors, at significant meetings relating to urban affairs.

d. To plan meetings and workshops to promote understanding of rural-urban problems and programs which will ease these problems.

e. To submit written reports to the Executive Secretary as requested on:

(1) Proposed plans and proposed expenditures.

(2) Activities and accomplishments.

The Committee for Urban Affairs will, if created, take the place of the ad hoc Urban Workshop Committee and will become a permanent committee of the Council.

I urge you again to attend this important 52nd Annual Conference. We feel it will be of great significance.

Yours sincerely,

Loyal Jones

COUNCIL OF THE SOUTHERN MOUNTAINS, INC.
Publishers of MOUNTAIN LIFE & WORK
COLLEGE BOX 2307 PHONE 986-3109 BEREA, KENTUCKY

August 21, 1964

Dear Subscriber:

As a reader of MOUNTAIN LIFE & WORK, you know that the work of the Council is unique and important - and growing every day. We are now conducting pioneer projects in education, under a grant from the Ford Foundation; we have organized the Appalachian Volunteers, a community action program, under an Area Redevelopment Administration grant; under another special grant, we have opened an office in Chicago to ease the adjustment problems of migrants to the city from the Appalachian South. The more we do, the more there is to do - and we are expanding our services to mountain people and adding new activities as rapidly as we can find the resources. Now that the nation as a whole has become aware of the plight of Appalachia and its people, we have unprecedented opportunities to render greater service.

But, all the special grants and new projects increase our basic operating costs. Our budget isn't very exciting, and it doesn't get written up in the newspapers, but if we can't pay our overhead expenses we can't do anything else - yet the new programs, while they bring greater operating expenses, don't bring the money to pay them. That's why we must seek additional support for the basic budget. If our financial nucleus is sound, we will receive other project grants (right now, the Council is being considered for a $150,000 grant to help communities organize and become eligible for development funds, but neither this grant nor any of the others allows a large enough amount for administration to offset our administrative costs).

I invite and urge you to become a member of the Council and thus help us meet the challenges that confront us with each morning's mail. I urge you also to invite others to join; our work needs the widest possible support.

The Council is serving well on the resources it presently has - but "well" is only a relative term when there is so much to be done. We can do much more with greater financial help, and you can be sure that your money will be added to many times over. We ask your help because we need it.

Sincerely,

Loyal Jones

Dear Harold:

The October issue of NEW SOUTH has just arrived and I feel that it should have wide distribution both here in the South as well as in other parts of the nation. I would like to have 100 copies if you can spare them. Please ship to the above address and bill to the Delta Foundation, Inc.

I appreciate your making possible the meeting at your office last week where Hazel Smith could present some of her problems. After I had heard some of the difficulties facing you folks in Georgia and Alabama, I began to get ulcer symptoms before I reached Mississippi.

I had planned to visit Chilton County, Alabama, last week but the trip to Centerville put me behind schedule. Since I did not get to the county, folks cannot say that Cox had anything to do with the shooting that took place at Clanton over the week-end. When I first visited Chilton County, I wrote Dave Minter that I would prefer to take my chances in Holmes County, Mississippi.

With very best wishes to all, I am

Dear Gene:

I'm glad you think the October issue of New South is especially useful. We're sending today the 100 copies you requested.

After some delay, I finally reached Mike Yarrow and found him completely receptive to the idea of "Rights of Conscience" receiving contributions to an HBS Fund. We will pursue the idea of an appeal from the Atlanta-based agency staffers. Meanwhile, please pass on any further word you get from the Smiths about their situation.

I'm relieved to hear you weren't on either end of the shooting iron in Chilton County. We just had a visitor from South Africa who has found that the Deep South makes his home country look pretty good.

All the best.

Dear Harold:

I have just returned home after a week in Nashville and St. Louis where I attended the General Assembly of the National Council of Churches.

The package containing 100 booklets arrived in good order and everything would have been excellent had the issues shipped been October in place of September. I regret that our budget will not permit our keeping the copies of THE NEGRO VOTER IN THE SOUTH. I will write to Will Campbell to suggest that he take them. Otherwise I will plan to ship them back to your office.

Dear Gene:

I'm very sorry about the blooper we made on the shipment to you -- one of those failures of intro-office communication. We are sending you the 100 copies of the October issue you asked for.

Just send the voting pamphlets back to us C. O. D. If you've already sent them otherwise, we'll refund the postage to you.

Our supply of the Highlander sheet is temporarily exhausted, but we are undertaking to get some more and, if successful, will send you several.

Art Lewin and I are doing what we can to hustle up some emergency aid for Hazel so that she can meet her December 18 deadline of $2,500. We're also working on the longer range' needs. I khave no particular assurance that we will be successful, and I'm depressed by the consequences of failure, but it won't be for want of trying.

VIA AIR MAIL

Mr. A. E. Cox

Dear Gene:

I am sorry to report that we are still snarled up in red tape in our effort to secure aid for Hazel through interagency channels. I was with Will last week and he told me that you are arranging stop-gap assistance in the form of a loan to tide her over the immediate emergency, which is a blessing.

We got the consent of the AFSC's Rights of Conscience Committee to channel any contributions through them. Also, Art Levin, Will Campbell, and I have agreed to sign a circular appeal, showing our organizational positions for identification only. I am enclosing what we propose to send to the other agencies. If you could sign in the same fashion, Will and I think it would strengthen the letter.

Now the problem. One of the major national agencies which would be important in determining what aid was forthcoming, has been sounded out and has raised an objection. According to this agency information, sometime ago Hazel was attempting to raise funds against a mortgage on her properties, estimated at a combined value of some one hundred thousand dollars.

I quote from the anonymous agency official:

"We were unable to secure anybody here who would lend a substantial amount to the Smiths on Mississippi property, but I then advised that Mrs. Smith's borrowing problems would be minimal if she sought the funds from a lending institution in the South -- fully aware, as we were, that in seeking that type of loan she would be revealing her need for funds, and would also encounter hesitancy on the part of an average Southern lending institution in light of the history of her need for funds.

"However, when she seeks 'contributions', the matter takes on a somewhat different aspect. It is my feeling that there would be a disinclination on the part of most national agencies to make substantial contributions either toward the $2500 fund or toward the still larger funds she will need during 1958. This is not to say that there is any lack of sympathy with her plight; on the contrary, we think she has been very courageous in the face of outrageous difficulties, and certainly some other agencies with which we have discussed the matter doubt that we could ever justify making a substantial contribution to people who have unencumbered property worth about $100,000.

We still want to send our letter around, but we are not well informed enough to know what the proper answer is to this objection. And we do think the objection is important, since the persons holding it would be influential with most of the agencies approached.

Do you know the facts of the matter? If not, do you think you gould get them without unduly upsetting the lady?

God willing, we may yet be able to do something. I will look forward to hearing from you. Meanwhile, all best wishes for the New Year.

Sincerely,

Dear Harold:

Last week, I was in Holmes County, Mississippi, and found Hazel Smith just about at the bottom of the barrel - both financially and in spirit. Both she and Smitty agreed that the offer of our foundation for a small, short-time loan would be of little help to them. They can see little prospect of repayment in the near future.

I must confess that I had little to offer them in the way of encouragement. I did promise to write you of the seriousness of the situation with the hope that our letter may have revealed some leads at the organization or foundation level. Hazel told me that she had received a total of $75 from Mike. If the letter fails to stimulate some concern and financial help I must admit that I see little hope for those under pressure in the South.

Just as soon as there is some indication of the response to our appeal, it might be wise for you and Art to give Hazel your frank appraisal of the situation.

Mrs. Sara McCorkle - recently hired by the executive committee of the Mississippi Councils as Director of Woman's Activities of the Association of Citizens' Councils of Mississippi - has been displaying three magazines at her organizational meetings. Two of these have Hazel's picture - EBONY and TIME. Early this month, such a meeting was held in Lexington but Hazel was not aware of the meeting until it was over. Some weeks ago, Mrs. McCorkle spoke to a civic group at Yazoo City, Mississippi, and displayed the magazines and made some strong charges against Hazel. She was answered from the floor by a local newspaperman who is a friend of Hazel.

With very best wishes, I am

House Studio Used to Make Council Films

By ELIZABETH CARPENTER
Gazette Washington Bureau
1202 National Press Building

Washington, May 11.—With the aid of Representative John Bell Williams (Dem., Miss.), a series of films and recordings for the White Citizens Council Forum of Jackson, Miss., have been produced for radio and television in the House recording studios.

As a result, the Citizens Council gets a 15-minute TV film for $30 to $50, depending upon the number of cameras used, and a five-minute radio tape for $1.50 to $5. Commercially, the film would run several hundred dollars, and the radio tape several times the government price.

Under House rules, only members of Congres can request and be billed for the use of the recording studios. Both the crew and the use of equipment are paid by government funds.

The original purpose of providing the television and radio recording room was to make it easier for congressmen to inform their constituents on public issues. Many representatives and senators use the recording studios.

Representative Williams' use of the studios in behalf of the Citizens Council goes far beyond the stretches of his Mississippi district.

Interview with Faubus

His most recent interview, with Arkansas Governor Faubus, filmed for radio and TV, will be distributed to more than 200 stations by the Citizens Council Forum. It is one in a series of the Forum shows which have been filmed in the House recording rooms, billed to Williams at the regular congressional cost, and then shipped to Jackson, Miss., for duplication and distribution.

Sometimes Dick Morphew of Jackson comes up to Washington to moderate the shows which have included interviews with more than 40 members of Congress. The participation by congressional members does not limit itself to Dixie. Senator Karl Mundt (Rep., S. D.) has been a guest.

Dear Gene:

This is in response to your letter of June 5 describing the need for expense funds that would permit you to make field trips in Mississippi in the interest of better human relations.

The proposal outlined in your letter, as amplified in our personal discussions, seems to us a worthy one. Our understanding is that the general objective would be to meet and counsel with persons throughout Mississippi who are concerned with bettering relations between the races and who presently are largely isolated from each other and from likeminded people elsewhere.

To further this purpose, I am enclosing our check for $250 payable to the Delta Foundation. When these funds are exhausted, we will probably be in position to consider a further contribution up to the total of $500 for 1959 which you suggest.

To the extent that you can manage it, we would appreciate periodic reports on the problems and opportunities you uncover in the course of these field visits. We will be glad to follow up your visits with any materials or advice that SRC can furnish to people of good will in that state. It would also be helpful to us if the individuals who have been related to SRC -- through the Mississippi Council or otherwise -- could be told by you that we are cooperating in the support of this effort.

With kindest regards,

Sincerely,

Dear Harold:

Our work with the National Council of Churches as director of rural development during the past two years has required that we maintain a program based almost entirely on contacts in the field. During both 1957 and 1958, we averaged over 30,000 miles on an annual budget of $2,000 for all expenses.

Due to the reorganization of the Division of Home Missions, certain adjustments had to be made in the 1959 budget. This resulted in a cut in funds available for our work during the current year. The fact that the Council's 1956 Plymouth has seen service of over 72,000 miles during the past 2½ years means additional expenses out of a curtailed budget.

All of the foregoing adds up to this: Since we have been compelled to shorten the length of our communication lines with the Rural Development Program, there will be considerable time for some work closer to home base - which, incidently, is just two miles from the Mississippi line.

As you well know, not a single person is working in Mississippi with specific responsibility in the field of human relations. The entire field is in the hands of the White Citizens' Council who have spent over $250,000 during the past four years on a sales promotion job.

Finally, to get to the point: with a small expenses account for travel and other expenses - not more than $500 for the rest of 1959 - we can establish a minimum of from 1 to 5 contacts in well over half of the 82 counties of the state.

In the event you feel inclined to react favorably to the above suggestion, the Directors of the Delta Foundation would be happy to handle the grant.

Cordially yours,

Gene Cox

Those of the attached clippings relating to the Clennon King case can be returned with the others I sent you yesterday.

When in Jackson last week, I was told that Gov. Coleman directed the maneuvering of the some 50 highway patrol officers who were stationed on and near the Ole Miss campus at the time of Mr. King's attempted entrance to the university. Mr. Coleman was sitting in a car equipped with two-way radio.

You may have read that King was taken from the university to Jackson where he was held over night in the state highway patrol building. After everyone had left the building for the night, two Jackson, Mississippi, newspaper men located an unlocked door to a rear staircase. They went to the top floor where King was locked up for the night and had an interview with him and took pictures. I understand that they got hell from the powers that be after the story was printed.

I was in Holmes County, Mississippi, last week and had a good visit with Walter and Hazel Smith. Hazel told me that Mike had sent her an additional grant of $2,500. from the AFSC. If she can arrange to re-finance the press, she should be in much better shape for some time.

After I saw the attached cartoon in yesterdays paper, I called Dr. Hollis Price to see if there was anything that could be done to answer this type of thing. As the result of our converation, I rounded up 30 copies of the paper to provide that number of the cartoons. Some time ago, Will Campbell had given me a number of copies of the attached NCC Information Bulletin on the NAACP. Dr. Price has agreed to write a letter to about 30 leading citizens of Memphis - using the attached two items as enclosures. We hope it may help to bring a little enlightenment to a few people here.

I am going to call Lucius Burch about the story on the "Gentlemen's Agreement." Someone should protest the use of taxpayer's funds for the cost of a special referendum. Obviously, the Negro citizens of Memphis are not anxious to see their tax money used for this purpose.

Voluntary Race May Be Sought

'Gentleman's Agreement' Being Discussed As Answer To Negro Vote

A voluntary preferential primary for candidates seeking the public works commissioners post was being seriously discussed in political circles yesterday.

The possibility came into focus after Gov. Buford Ellington, here for the National Citizens Planning Conference, said he would not call a special legislative session to pass a private act providing for a runoff in the municipal election races here Aug. 20.

Commissioner Henry Loeb, a candidate for mayor, had sought out the governor's attitude in the matter.

Plan Considered

As envisioned, the special election now being considered would:

1. Be held by "gentlemen's agreement" among all the candidates now entered in the race. (There now are seven).
2. Be conducted soon after the qualifying deadline, July 21.
3. Only the top two candidates in the referendum would run Aug. 20.
4. Cost of the special election, or referendum, would be paid by the city. Estimated cost is $40,000.

Primary purpose of such an unofficial competition would be to remove the possibility of a Negro candidate winning the race as the result of a Negro bloc vote, over six or more white candidates.

Several of the candidates last night said they had heard of the plan, and some have discussed it with their own advisors and others.

No Manipulations

John Ford Canale said he would be willing to enter such a primary if it were conducted on a bona fide basis and not be subject to political manipulations.

William Farris said he would be agreeable.

Sam Chambers—"If some of the other candidates feel they need a second chance, I would agree to go along with the voluntary primary. The race is not too crowded for me as it stands."

W. B. Fowler—"Nobody has consulted me on it. I haven't given it any consideration."

R. B. Sugarmon Jr., Negro candidate — "I don't think it makes sense. Somebody must be on the verge of hysteria."

A. W. 'Ott' Anderson — "I don't believe we should spend $40,000 of the taxpayers' money on something like this. I think the six candidates should give up a lunch hour some day to get together and work something out. I'm sure some kind of gentleman's agreement could be made."

The other candidate, Sam Clark could not be reached for comment.

The National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America is the cooperative agency through which thirty communions render united service. Articles appearing in this publication furnish information on current issues and are not to be construed as declarations of official attitudes or policies of the National Council of Churches.

Entered as second-class matter January 4, 1924 at the Post Office at New York, under the act of March 3, 1879.

What Is the NAACP?

One of the widely discussed organizations in the United States is the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, with headquarters at 20 West 40th Street, New York 18, N. Y. It was organized in 1909 by both white and Negro leaders. This number of the SERVICE gives information on why the Association was organized, what it has done, and how it has worked. This is done by means of a summary of the recent annual reports of the Association, of writings of its officers, and of various current articles about the program. We also give data on persons who are active in the Association's affairs. It is noted below that probably most of the local meetings are held in churches of predominantly Negro congregations.

Nearly two hundred years after the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, proclaiming "that all men are created equal," the American social scene of mid-Twentieth Century is marked by a turbulent struggle between those striving toward basic human rights for all Americans and those who oppose such rights. Generally considered as one of the leaders of the former forces is the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has as its goal the establishment of equal rights for citizens of all races and religions with respect to: security of the person, housing, education, employment, voting, and various public accommodations.

Three-fold Approach

In working to achieve its goal, the NAACP makes a three-fold attack on racial discrimination: legal, legislative, and educational. In brief, the NAACP plan of action consists of court tests, espousal of anti-discrimination laws, and a public information program.

The NAACP does not propose to await the enlightenment of all members of a given locality before proceeding with positive work to bring about equality of citizenship rights in the area. This view of the Association received unsolicited support in a recent article summarizing public opinion surveys conducted throughout the United States during the past fourteen years by the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago, which concluded that "it is not necessary to wait until a majority of whites are ready, to grant the Negro equal access to schools, buses, and residential neighborhoods."

The article published in the December, 1956, issue of Scientific American, New York, noted that in southern localities which have desegregated their public schools since the 1954 Supreme Court decision "two-thirds of the white public continue to mutter that Negro children really should go to 'separate schools,'" although "the fact of integration has been accepted." This situation, the article states, illustrates that it is not necessary to wait for "a majority mandate from the people" before desegregating local facilities.

Despite its consistent efforts to inform the public (by means of pamphlets, press releases, an annual report, radio, and television programs, and other materials) about the racial situation in the United States and also in its views on the situation, the NAACP is convinced that most Americans have only a dim, distorted idea of the total civil rights' picture and of the Association's work. At least two reasons for this state of affairs may be found. First, the NAACP cannot give information to the public in a continuous "saturation" campaign such as that used by mass media advertising, even should Association officials agree on the ethics of such a scheme. Second, its officers believe that the workings of the NAACP have been distorted deliberately by many of its bitter enemies in the South, resulting in much confusion in that region within recent years.

Membership and Officials

The NAACP is a large membership organization, with some 350,000 members located in almost every state, the District of Columbia, and Alaska. More than fifty per cent of the members are in the seventeen southern and border states. Both the membership and the national staff of ninety persons are multi-racial, with an estimated eight to twelve per cent of whites among the members. On the local level, NAACP members work through branches, which in turn constitute state units. These branches more often than not hold their meetings in local churches. Three regional offices have been established by the Association: in Atlanta, Georgia; Dallas, Texas (currently closed by a court injunction); and San Francisco, California. A Washington Bureau maintains contacts with members of Congress and with the executive branch of the government.

National officials of the Association are of various races and faiths. Arthur B. Spingarn, president since 1939, is a white attorney of New York City, who was preceded in his office by two other white men: his brother, J. E. Spingarn, and Moorfield Storey, the first president. Allan Knight Chalmers, a member of the faculty of the Boston University School of Theology, serves as treasurer; and Theodore Spaulding, a Negro judge of Philadelphia, as assistant treasurer. The chairman of the Board of Directors is Channing H. Tobias, veteran educator, church leader, often called one of the "elder statesmen" of the Negro race. Robert C. Weaver, a graduate of Harvard University, now New York State Rent Administrator, the first Negro to be appointed to a cabinet post in the state government, is vice-chairman.

Among the Association's twenty-one vice-presidents those who perhaps are best known in their respective fields are Norman Cousins, Oscar Hammerstein II, Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Wayne Morse, Bishop W. J. Walls, Rabbi Judah Cahn, Rev. William Lloyd Imes, Eric Johnston, and A. Philip Randolph.

A widely circulated statement about the NAACP, which has been promoted actively by anti-Negro elements of the South, is that its policy is charted by a handful of northerners, mostly New Yorkers, who have taken it upon themselves to dictate to the rest of the nation concerning rights for Negroes. Actually, Association policy is formulated by the body's annual convention, a representative group of some one thousand NAACP members from all sections of the United States and Alaska. The policy set by the convention is carried out by the Board of Directors of forty-eight members which also selects the executive secretary, who, in turn, appoints the staff.

The present Board of Directors, of whom about seventy-five per cent are Negroes, has more than thirty-three per cent Southerners in its ranks, including persons from Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. Among current board members are the Rt. Rev. Stephen Gill Spottswood, Walter Reuther, Ralph J. Bunche, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Rev. Benjamin E. Mays, Herbert H. Lehman, Judge William H. Hastie, Mrs. Jessie M. Vann. The interests of board members, in addition to those of the several named above, include civic leader, business executive, physician, attorney, and homemaker. Members of the Board are elected for three-year terms; one-third of the Board is elected each year by means of a referendum among branches.

The Association's staff, headed by Roy Wilkins, executive secretary, includes the noted civil rights attorney, Thurgood Marshall, and such other department heads as Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington Bureau; Gloster B. Current, director of branches; Herbert Hill, labor secretary; Madison S. Jones, special assistant for housing; John Morsell, assistant to the executive secretary; James Ivy, editor of The Crisis, the Association's monthly organ; and Henry Lee Moon, director of public relations. A "church secretary" is scheduled for early appointment.

Notes on History

The formation of the Association, perhaps ironically, was immediately influenced by an incident in the North. In the words of Mary White Ovington, a white social worker who was a founder of the NAACP:

"In the summer of 1908, the country was shocked by the account of the race riots at Springfield, Illinois. Here, in the home of Abraham Lincoln, a mob containing many of the town's 'best citizens,' raged for two days, killed and wounded scores of Negroes, and drove thousands from the city. Articles on the subject appeared in newspapers and magazines. Among them was one in The Independent of September 3, by William English Walling, entitled 'Race War in the North.' After describing the atrocities committed against the colored people, Mr. Walling declared:

" 'Either the spirit of the abolitionists, of Lincoln and of Lovejoy must be revived and we must come to treat the Negro on a plane of absolute political and social equality, or Vardaman and Tillman will soon have transferred the race war to the North.' "

In January, 1909, Miss Ovington relates, she met with Mr. Walling and Dr. Henry Moskowitz and the three selected February 12, Lincoln's birthday, for the issuance of a call "for a national conference on the Negro question."

The Lincoln's birthday call, Miss Ovington continues, was drafted by Oswald Garrison Villard, then president of the New York Evening Post Company, and said in part:

"If Mr. Lincoln could revisit this country in the flesh, he would be disheartened and discouraged. . . . The spread of lawless attacks upon the Negro, North, South, and West—even in the Springfield made famous by Lincoln—often accompanied by revolting brutalities, sparing neither sex nor age nor youth, could but shock the author of the sentiment that 'government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.' Silence under these conditions means tacit approval. . . . Hence, we call upon all the believers in democracy to join in a national conference for the discussion of present evils, the voicing of protests, and the renewal of the struggle for civil and political liberty."

Among the fifty-three signers of this call were Jane Addams, John Dewey, John L. Elliott, William Lloyd Garrison, Rev. Francis J. Grimke, Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Rev. Frederick Lynch, Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, J. G. Phelps Stokes, Lincoln Steffens, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Bishop Alexander Walters, William English Walling, and Lillian D. Wald.

To continue in the words of Miss Ovington: "We have had five conferences since 1909 [her account was written in 1914], but I doubt whether any have been so full of a questioning surprise, amounting swiftly to enthusiasm, on the part of the white people in attendance. These men and women, engaged in religious, social, and educational work, for the first time met the Negro who demands, not a pittance, but his full rights in the commonwealth. . . . In May, 1910, we held our second conference in New York, and again our meetings were attended by earnest, interested people. It was then that we organized a permanent body to be known as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People . . . pledged to a nation-wide work for justice to the Negro race."

One Broad Accomplishment

In 1957, surveying nearly a half-century of NAACP work, the outstanding over-all accomplishment of the organization, in the opinion of its leaders, might be said to be a general loosening of the color-caste system of the United States. The system, though still operative, is declared to have lost a degree of its former inflexibility.

Robert Morrison MacIver, a well-known sociologist, set forth the results of a study of intergroup discrimination in the United States in a book, The More Perfect Union (New York, Macmillan, 1948), in which he stated:

"It is beyond contention that in the United States all 'colored' people—and this designation must here be extended to include Chinese, Hindus, Japanese, Koreans, and Filipinos, as well as Negroes, and for fuller measure American Indians and Latin Americans—are commonly regarded as and commonly treated as constituting a lower caste. In the drawing of this line practically no distinction is made between people of high cultural achievement or historical eminence and those which have no such pretensions."

Lynching

Until recent years, a concomitant of the caste subordination of Negroes was the lynching by mobs, which often carried on this macabre activity secure in the knowledge that predominant local sentiment was on their side. Statistics cited by Walter White, late executive secretary of the NAACP, in his book, Rope and Faggot: A Biography of Judge Lynch (New York, Knopf, 1929), show that during the two decades 1890 to 1910, mobs lynched 2,586 men and women, while in the years 1910 to 1927, the lynchers claimed 1,144 victims. Of these 3,730 persons who suffered the effect of mob sadism, a small number were white. Miss Ovington tells the story in her book, The Walls Come Tumbling Down (New York, Harcourt, 1947):

"As Garrison, in The Liberator, relentlessly held up the horrors of chattel slavery to the world, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People relentlessly broadcasted this [lynching] and other stories of the horrors perpetrated against the black man. One hundred-page study [Thirty Years of Lynching in the United States, 1890-1918] went to libraries, not only in this country but throughout the world. . . . Besides the publicity of the printed word, we used the public meeting. . . ."

The NAACP also campaigned persistently for a federal anti-lynching law and although such legislation never became a reality, the campaign itself served as an education for many white Americans by further exposing the extent and the horrors of lynching.

Walter White's Observations

The analysis of the causes of lynching to which most of Mr. White's book, Rope and Faggot, is devoted, probably had an effect upon those who read the volume, published in 1929. A chapter dealing with the relationship between expressions of Christianity and lynching, for example, states in part:

"In these states with the greatest number of lynchings to their discredit . . . the great majority of the church members are Protestants and of the evangelical wing of Protestantism as well . . . Protestantism in the lynching states has become the stronghold of bigotry, directing its onslaughts against Negroes, Catholics, and Jews."

Having helped to undermine the acceptance of lynching, which it considered to be the first task in its war against racism, the NAACP proceeded to the gigantic undertaking of eliminating other manifestations of race prejudice in America: segregation and discrimination. The Association's activities in this regard have made a part of recent American history. The methods used by the NAACP were summarized by a native Alabaman now residing in Georgia whose letter on Southern racial relations was published in The Christian Century, Chicago, May 30, 1956. Albert E. Barnett said in this letter:

"As a southerner I am thankful for the NAACP. Elsewhere today—as has happened throughout history—repressed minorities are seeking redress of grievances by torch, dagger and bomb, instruments that produce social chaos and involve loss of precious moral values. . . . The NAACP counsels patience and moderation, and admirably illustrates both. It hires a good lawyer and takes its cases to court."

Mr. Barnett's letter also points out: "In no case has 'privilege' surrendered of its own accord. Nor will it. If to 'go slow' is to relax pressures through the courts and public opinion, no social change will be effected."

Hiring a Lawyer

By hiring a good lawyer and going to court, as Mr. Barnett puts it, the NAACP has won a long list of favorable legal decisions. The Association reports that it has won forty-two of forty-six cases it carried to the United States Supreme Court. Among these Supreme Court decisions are those declaring segregation unconstitutional in public elementary and secondary schools, public colleges and universities, public parks and playgrounds, interstate travel vehicles, and intrastate buses. The judicial enforcement of racially restrictive 'covenants' in housing has been invalidated by the Supreme Court, as has been the denial of jury duty to Negroes and varied maneuvers to prevent Negroes from voting. The right of an accused person to a trial in an atmosphere not dominated by the mob also has been established by the court.

NAACP lawyers recently secured from the Interstate Commerce Commission a ruling that interstate passengers cannot be required to use segregated seating on carriers nor to use segregated waiting rooms. The year-long mass protest against racial discrimination on the city buses of Montgomery, Alabama, came to a successful conclusion when an NAACP case carried to the U. S. Supreme Court resulted in a decision, November 13, 1956, that the enforced racial separation of local bus passengers in Alabama is unconstitutional.

On the federal level, the Association has been unable to obtain passage of any civil rights legislation by Congress, such as that to make lynching a federal offense, to protect the right to vote, to ban racial discrimination in hospitals, employment, and housing. The NAACP has, however, been a factor in the passage of fair employment practices laws in fifteen states. On the subject of racial bias in employment, an NAACP leaflet declares:

"Denying a man a decent job because of his race is denying him the basis of his existence. . . . The NAACP believes that an FEPC—to guarantee citizens an opportunity to secure jobs on the basis of merit, not color or religion—is the keystone of the federal civil rights program."

The NAACP also was successful in its efforts to secure enactment of anti-discrimination laws governing public housing and urban renewal in New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Wisconsin. New York State went further in 1955 when two laws, the first of their kind in the United States, were enacted banning racial discrimination in housing which has received publicly-insured or guaranteed financing from the Federal Housing Authority or the Veterans' Administration.

Reaching the Indifferent

In addition to its legal and legislative accomplishments, the NAACP believes that its educational program has been responsible for creating a positive point of view among many civil rights agnostics. By consistently attempting to reach the public with facts about the denial of rights to Negroes, the Association hopes mainly to influence the undecided, the misinformed, the ignorant. Americans whose lives are consumed by racial hatred are considered by the Association often to be beyond the reach of facts, and those who already believe in full constitutional rights for all are not in need of further education on the subject. Support by the latter is needed by the NAACP, however, in carrying forward its program. To those who contend that "education is the answer" to the civil rights problem, the NAACP replies that education is needed but cannot do the job alone; moreover, that it is frequently the white people who stand in need of education concerning the rights of Negroes.

However, apparently because of its most recent accomplishments, particularly the Supreme Court decision banning segregation in public schools, the NAACP presently finds itself in deep and dangerous water in some southern states. Southern resentment has expressed itself by legal and legislative action against the NAACP as well as by vocal tirades denouncing the Association as a "Communist organization." This triple-faceted attack, beginning in 1955, mounted to a crescendo in 1956.

Legal Moves Against NAACP

It was in 1956 that the NAACP was banned by court decree from functioning in Louisiana, Alabama, and Texas. During the same period, legislative attacks on the Association included a package of Virginia laws designed to halt the NAACP in that state, the establishment of a Florida legislative commission to investigate the NAACP, laws making it difficult or impossible for NAACP members to hold teaching or other public positions in Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and South Carolina. Of these attacks, Roy Wilkins, the Association's executive secretary, recently said:

"[By] restricting freedom of speech, assembly, petition, redress of grievances in the courts, and even freedom of thought, [these attacks] illustrate that the attempt to enforce racial inequality has entered dangerously into the area of civil liberties, in violation of the Bill of Rights.

"This invasion of individual liberties has extended beyond the assaults on the NAACP as an organized body. Southern white citizens who have dared express an opinion contrary to the popular view have been subjected to intimidation and loss of employment. Among these victims have been ministers, school teachers, college professors, and others, including a newspaper editor in South Carolina who was forced to announce that desegregation would no longer be discussed in his editorial columns."

Writing in The Catholic Review, Baltimore, October 12, 1956, Msgr. George C. Higgins, director of the social action department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, asserted:

". . . The time has come for law-abiding citizens of the United States—whatever their personal opinion of the NAACP—to rally to its defense in those states where its very right to existence as an organization is being challenged not merely by private individuals but by government itself. . . . One does not have to be a supporter or an admirer of NAACP to recognize that those states which are trying to outlaw the organization by administrative ruling or by legislative fiat are clearly violating one of the most fundamental principles of the natural law in the field of political action. That principle is the freedom of association. . . ."

The American Jewish Congress adopted a resolution on October 21, 1956, declaring that recent southern legislative and legal proceedings "to outlaw or paralyze" the NAACP are "a greater menace to constitutional liberty than mob violence."

Southern attacks labeling the NAACP as "Communist" were made despite the fact that the Association has a long record of opposing Communism and frequently has been denounced in the Communist press. Its officers allege that it hardly is likely that such public figures as J. Edgar Hoover, Francis Cardinal Spellman and Senator Hubert H. Humphrey would publicly have praised the NAACP were it a "Communist" organization.

Frederick Woltman of the New York World-Telegram and Sun wrote in that newspaper, May 19, 1956: "On the charge of Communism, this writer . . . has first-hand knowledge. It goes back more than a decade and a half. Over those years, the NAACP was one of hundreds of church, labor, civic and other groups the Communist party tried desperately to infiltrate. Of them all, the NAACP was one of the least receptive. . . . The NAACP's top leaders have sternly resisted Communist inroads."

Today, stronger financially than ever before in its eventful history, the NAACP has a single aim: to accomplish its objectives and thus eventually to put itself out of business. The Association's leaders believe that segregation can be ended by 1963, the centennial of the Emancipation Proclamation.

Roy Wilkins has called the Negro the test of American democracy. In his year-end review, "Race Relations in the United States, 1956," Mr. Wilkins stated:

"The Negro knows that state-imposed segregation is dead even though certain elements are struggling furiously to revive it. During 1957 and succeeding years he will employ all possible approaches and techniques to attain his objective of first class citizenship."

In this struggle, Mr. Wilkins continued, Negroes "will not be intimidated by economic reprisals, threats of violence or violence itself."

"On the other hand," the NAACP official pointed out, "large segments of the white population of the South have been intimidated and at the present time do not dare to dissent in any degree from the position taken by rabble-rousers reinforced by the politicians."

A series of "desperate measures adopted during the year" by Deep South states to stop desegregation simply are "testimony to the progress being made and to the recognition that compliance with the Supreme Court rulings is inevitable," Mr. Wilkins observed.

Writing in the New York Times, August 20, 1956, C. L. Sulzberger expressed a similar thought in a somewhat different way:

"The most important moral issue facing the United States . . . is that of full freedom and equality. . . . We cannot pretend to be a valid model for democracy if we continue, even regionally, to insist on race superiority."

Man's Development and Possibilities

A booklet, Modern Man, by Ashley Montagu is published by Science Research Associates (Chicago, 1956, 60 cents). It is a clear study planned for upper grades, high school and young adult readers. Mr. Montagu is an anthropologist. He has been assisted in writing the booklet by Paul F. Brandwein, a teacher and science editor. Their main theme is that "people are alike in many more ways—and in more important ways—than they are different. . . . We all have the same basic physical and mental equipment."

After a survey of ancient types of man and a brief account of the evolutionary processes of mutation, geographic isolation and natural selection which make modern man, Mr. Montagu proceeds to explain why men are different.

Dear Harold:

My sincere thanks to you for the time you took out of a very busy schedule last Tuesday. No news from the NCC. The opportunity presented itself on Wednesday for me to tell Lindy, my wife, about the possibility of the axe falling. It is a problem we need to face together and I feel much relieved now that she knows.

Tell Paul Anthony that his message of last Monday was called up to my room at the hotel around 9:00 p.m. Tuesday. Sorry I missed him.

After I arrived home Wednesday afternoon, I debated the wisdom of going to New Orleans. Thursday morning, I took an early flight and was there in time to have a good session with Father Twomey before he wrapped up his statement for the Committee. We shared some concerns and on Friday he made a vigorous statement at the hearing which provided the proper moral and theological tone for the scene.

I secured permission of Harold Brown for the National Agricultural Workers Union and the Division of Home Missions of NCC to submit written statements, if they so desire. A representative of the Tulane School of Social Work made an excellent presentation in which she referred to unemployment problems arising from discriminatory practices based on race.

I would like to have the attached clippings returned for the files here.

With very best wishes, I am

Dear Gene:

This is just to let you know, on the eve of Christmas Eve, that I am not dead at the switch. I appreciated your last letter and the clips (which have been or will be returned), and am gratified to learn that conscience impelled you to New Orleans. I'm sure Father Twomey's presentation was the stronger for your help, and the written statements will be valuable if done.

I have not moved faster on the draft application to Taconic simply because my friends there have informed me that everything except the church gifts is in abeyance until January. I hope to take advantage of the between-holiday lull (if any) to give some sustained attention to this. You will be hearing from me further before long.

Meanwhile, do advise me at once if you get word from the NCC or if the situation changes in any way. Even if it takes some time to get action by Taconic, we may be able to make an interim arrangement that will keep you laboring in these vineyards.

Noel, and best wishes for the New Year.

Dear Harold:

On a trip to Holmes County last week end, I saw Walter and Hazel Smith. Hazel has received a loan of $10,000 and has the promise of another $5,000 on May 1 if it is needed. Obviously, she will have to call for it. The $10,000 is to be repaid within two years.

Just recently, Walter sold for a price of $1,500 an acre of their farm land. It is to be used as the site for a radio-telephone transmission tower.

The Four-County News published at Pickens in Holmes County announced on January 1 that it is through after a five-year venture of operating in the red.

Hazel is convinced that the Holmes County Heard will be unable to survive its second year of publication. In some ways, the picture looks a bit brighter for the Smiths.

Brother Will was here for a few hours yesterday as he broke the trip to Pine Bluff, Little Rock and Austin, Texas.

With very best wishes to all, I am

Dear Harold:

On Thursday I was by to see Hazel Smith concerning the matter related in your memo of January 28.

Without revealing the source of my information, I relayed to her Yarmolinsky's sentiments regarding both the matter of public relations and the repayment of the three short-term loans. I got no reaction one way or the other about her intentions with respect to the loans. She assured me that she had both called and written Yarmolinsky during the final days of the negotiations with Harrison. I did suggest that she follow through at this time with another communication.

Throughout our conversation I tried to impress upon Hazel the need for some fence-mending with those who have given her support. At one point, I was on the verge of telling her that she might well keep the lines of communication open with 63 Auburn Avenue. However, one of the shop men had been on a drunk with the result that both Hazel and Smitty had been up until 3:00 a.m. getting the papers out. I'll save that for another time.

1) That Mrs. J. A. Burt, Administrative Assistance on the Mississippi Methodist Advocate staff was (and may still be) on the staff of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations. This council is affiliated with the Southern Regional Council, an organization which, according to the Communist Daily Worker (Dec. 1, 1954), was founded by a communist - James R. Jackson.

2) That the late Mrs. W. R. Ratliff, mother-in-law of President Ellis Finger of Millsaps, was the president of this Mississippi Council on Human Relations; and that Dr. H. G. Williamson, Mississippi Methodist minister, was also on the Board of Directors.

3) That according to testimony presented before a Joint Legislative Committee of the Louisiana Legislature by ex-Communist Manning Johnson, the Communist-founded Southern Regional Council has its offices "in a little church office building (in Atlanta) presided over by the Methodist Bishop Arthur Moore!"

4) That the book "Behind Soviet Power" by Jerome Davis was sent to 22,000 Methodist ministers by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, and these books were paid for with money from Methodist missionaty funds. This in spite of the fact that Davis has 99 Communist and Communist-front affiliations!

5) That the Volunteer Civil Rights Commission, designed to urge Congress to pass civil rights legislation is headed by Methodist Bishop Oxnam.

6) That according to Bishop Marvin Franklin, speaking before the North Alabama Annual Conference meeting in Decatur, Alabama, on January 13, 1960, the Methodist Church lost 199,000 members last year and 1,000,000 since 1952. (I wonder why? Could it be that our church has become so liberal and steeped in preaching the "social gospel" - including integration - that people are finding spiritual guidance elsewhere?)

7) That at the National Conference of Methodist Youth meeting at Purdue University last August, the morning prayer service was conducted with a background of recorded jazz music.

8) That at this same Youth Conference Eleanor Roosevelt, Harold Stassen and others participated in a special panel discussion on world affairs.

9) That this statement appeared in the June 11, 1958, edition of the Mississippi Methodist Advocate: "When we (Southerners) claim to believe in democracy and are unwilling to share it with Jews, Mexicans, Orientals, and Negroes, we really do not believe in democracy. If we profess that every American is entitled to equal opportunity to develop, and do not work toward this end, can we say that we believe that what we profess?"

Dear Gene:

Enclosed is the original prospectus that you prepared, as well as a copy of the briefer, edited version which I sent to the Taconic Foundation. I am also sending a copy of the latter to Will Campbell.

I raised the matter with Jane Lee Eddy on the way to Savannah and found, as I had suspected, that the proposal had been lost in the shuffle. I am sending her another copy of the brief version (with budget), in the hope that her exposure to the "hard core" discussion will give it a greater claim on her attention. Anyway, I will keep pushing until we get a definite "yes" or "no".

I'll look forward to seeing you at the next Penn clambake.

Cordially,

Dear Harold:

The enclosed is our operating statement and balance sheet as of December 31, 1959.

A breakdown on land and buildings is as follows: approximately 1,500 acres of land, 5 residences, shop, community building, clinic, craft center and farm buildings.

The book value as indicated on the property sheet does not reveal a true picture of the assets of the corporation. The land was purchased in 1938 at a cost of less than $7.00 per acre. Land sales on two occasions brought almost as much as the original purchase price of the property.

Likewise, the figure on buildings is far below actual value. Much of the lumber used in construction was produced in our mill from timber on the farm. The labor for the construction of the community building was donated by members of the Providence Cooperative Association in 1939. Partial cost of construction and remodeling of residences was paid by staff members. In the case of the 12 room building formerly used as a clinic, Dave Minter paid for much of the cost of converting a dairy barn and pasteurizing plant into the clinic. Thus the low book value on buildings.

We have just closed a deal to purchase 130 acres of land which was sold out of the farm in 1880. The cost is $4,000 and the Cooperative Foundation, Inc., has reacted favorably to our initial approach for a grant to cover the cost. Last year, they gave $2,000 to purchase 64 acres in the same area. We have agreed to furnish Soil Conservation Service an easement for a dam which will be constructed on the tract purchased in 1959. One of the main reasons we purchased was to assure control of a potential recreation area in the area immediately adjacent to our community center.

The Delta Foundation is a non-profit educational organization and contributions to its support are allowable income tax deductions

It would cost a minimum of $25,000 to replace buildings through the same means as they were constructed originally. This we could not do. Land, buildings and improvements are worth in excess of $90,000. In addition, we have other assets valued at $27,182.05 today.

It might be well to note here that an agreement entered into by Delta Foundation, Inc., and Cooperative Farms, Inc., restricts the use of our capital assets to the type of program now being carried on in Holmes County, Mississippi. In 1956, Cooperative Farms transferred all their assets to Delta Foundation for the consideration of $1.00.

At the present time the program in Holmes County has little value other than as a holding operation with some psychological value in a county characterized as one of the worst in the entire South.

We will need the auditors report for our files when you have finished with it.

I telephoned Stan Hovatter and Hodding Carter III after I talked with you this morning. Stan is willing to serve on the board and I am to go to Greenville tomorrow to go over the matter with Hod. He indicated a willingness to accept. I will give you a call Monday to report on his decision.

Dear Harold:

It is not my intention to burden you with all the minor details of the needs of the Memphis Chapter of the Tennessee Council. However, I do have a request and you can pass it down the line.

In anticipation of what might possibly be some reactions to the presence of our organization here in West Tennessee, I thought it wise to have in our files adequate background information on SRC - including answers to the stock charges frequently leveled by the opposition. We have a fine working relationship with the press in Memphis - especially with the Memphis Press-Scimitar.

I was reminded of the need for a little planning in this area recently when the Rev. Billy James Hargis, the perennial antagonist of the National Council of Churches, came to Memphis for a three-night stand. I could find no responsibile churchman in Memphis who was prepared to answer any charges Hargis might have made. Too, the image of the hatchet job done on the Mississippi Council by the Jackson, Mississippi, press gives ample warning for the need to be prepared.

Dear Gene:

You are wise and foresighted to prepare for the kind of smear attack that the organized segregationists specialize in. I'm enclosing our main "defense" documents, which deal with most or all of the charges to date. We have found the editorial from the Richmond Times-Dispatch a particularly effective rebuttal.

The Taconic proposal is bogged down again, worse luck. They feel that the kind of program we are proposing should be done under the sponsorship of an established church group. I have passed this word on to Will, and he is supposed to do some exploring of possibilities. Do you have any ideas? This is discouraging, but I don't think we should consider giving up yet. More on this later.

Dear Paul:

Leflore County, Mississippi, is the only county in which I have contacts. For all practical purposes, these are useless in matters relating to registration of Negro voters.

Some years back, a Negro shoe repairman by the name of Collins was active at Greenwood, the county seat of Leflore County. If I recall correctly, some pressure has been put on him in recent years.

I would suspect that the Rev. Aaron Henry (?) of Clarksdale (Coahoma County) might be the logical person to furnish information on the Mississippi counties. In all probability, he is in touch with the Commission.

I think it is safe to assume that any white persons in these counties who might have any concern are in no position to give information. In fact, the next step might well be that of furnishing them with information on the status of Negro registration in Mississippi.

Two or three years hence we might be of some help to you.

Dear Gene:

Here's what we'd like to try first as a way of supporting the work described in your prospectus:

The prospectus - with only minor changes to identify the U.C.M.S. as the sponsoring agency - should be submitted again to the Foundation for consideration.

In our thinking the U.C.M.S. would not be in a position to put any funds into the Midsouth project for the next three years. After that time, if the financial askings we have made become actual money, we may be able to support it.

The responsibilities you would have to us as the sponsoring agency would be primarily reporting - keeping us informed of the work, special situations, and financial accounting. We would plan to consult with you at least every three months.

I regret very much the delay in getting this to you. I hope we can now move quickly to get reconsideration by the Foundation.

As I understand it, you with Harold Flemming will move on the next step. If you need information or papers in regard to the U.C.M.S. we shall be glad to provide them.

Again, I hope this works out.

Sincerely,

Dear Harold:

We are listing below our expenditures for travel made during the past three months:

October	$112.11
November	67.66
December	106.95

With the exception of one trip each to Louisville, Kentucky, and Nashville, Tennessee, these expenditures covered travel in Mississippi and West Tennessee.

In addition to the above, we have made the following disbursements which can be allocated over a period of some months:

(1)	4 new tires	$91.62
(2)	Car repairs	107.09

During the time we have spent in Mississippi a number of new contacts have been made as we renewed many old ones. From the experiences of the past few months we have come to the conclusion that anyone who does a human relations job there needs a respectable front - you name it.

Dear Harold:

Last week was spent in Mississippi - January 9, 10 & 11 at Mississippi State University, January 12 in Jackson and January 13 in the Delta area.

You have heard, I am sure, of the suit filed in federal court to block contributions by the Mississippi State Sovereignty Commission to the Citizens Council Forum. The suit goes much beyond this and actually challenges the constitutionality of the State Sovereignty Commission. Those who filed the suit are:

William L. Higgs, 25, 707 N. Congress Street - office telephone FL 3-5166 - Harvard law graduate who has been in Jackson since 1958; Robert L. T. Smith, Negro groceryman, 1253 Valley - telephone FL 2-7186; Lonnie B. Daniel, 666 Cummins Street - home telephone DR 2-5205 - area director for Communications Workers of America; and, Charles E. Shaffer, 3115 Shirley Drive - home telephone FL 4-1568 - assistant business agent for International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. All four men are nativesof Mississippi.

In talking with Higgs, I found that he is getting quite a bit of support from over the state. At the present, there is no need for financial assistance. Threats have been made against Higg's' parents who live in Greenville. On the day that I talked with Higgs, he told me that his life had been threatened that morning.

I would like to have the attached material back for my files in case you do not need it.

Dear Harold:

We need your reaction to a suggestion that a new proposal be presented by SRC to Taconic on behalf of Delta Foundation.

We have a definite commitment of $15,000 toward the support of the Mid-South Project - and a good possibility of an additional $2,000 - in case Taconic can be persuaded to put up the $40,000 we have requested from them. The money will come from the liquidation of a trust fund of which the actual value is yet to be determined.

The promise of this support is based on our projection of a plan to operate the Mid-South Project for a minimum of 6 years - longer if additional funds can be secured. The attached is our proposal for a maximum budget of $10,000 per year for this period. If Taconic could carry the project for 4 years at this figure, we will be able to have $20,000 on hand by January 1, 1965. The $17,000 invested at 4 percent, compounded semi-annually, would reach a little more than the required figure of $20,000.

Almost 7 months of unemployment prompts my rushing of this additional burden to you.

Delta Fd.

PROPOSAL FOR A HUMAN RELATIONS PROJECT IN THE MID-SOUTH*

The following proposal is submitted by the trustees of the Delta Foundation with the sincere belief that its implementation would help to solve some of the basic problems which confront the Mid-South today.

The Delta Foundation, a non-profit organization (See Appendix A), has had a long-time concern for the needs of the people of the region. In the 1930's, a companion corporation, Cooperative Farms, Inc., began work with the dispossessed white and Negro sharecroppers of Mississippi and Arkansas. For over a decade, this organization sought to bring some degree of economic security to small-farm operators in the Mississippi Delta.

In 1946, the Delta Foundation was organized to provide a wider base for the educational and medical work being carried on among the rural Negro population of a few Mississippi counties. For over twenty years, these two organizations gave active support to the interracial organizations which functioned in the region. The officers of the corporations provided leadership and financial assistance to many of the organizations which worked for goodwill and understanding in the field of human relations. Today, as never before, there is a desperate need for such leadership.

During the period from the middle 1930's to 1954, numerous groups manifested an interest in the region and its people. The following were especially active: Mississippi Council on Human Relations, Home Missions Council, Southern Tenant Farmers Union, Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, Fellowship of Reconciliation, National Sharecropper Fund and various church agencies. Today the field is left almost entirely in the hands of the local church and the White Citizens' Councils.

For the Want of Being Known

Background

In the present struggle to achieve democracy in the Deep South, the most serious and strenuous opposition arises in those areas formerly characterized as the Cotton Belt. From Colonial times to the present, this is the area in which progress in the field of race relations has been slowest and always accompanied by the greatest difficulties. It is here that irrational prejudice and uncontrolled passions have joined hands to deprive many citizens of their civil rights and where relations between Negro and white citizens have deteriorated to an all-time low. Efforts toward interracial cooperation are regarded with grave suspicion and the avowed support of integration is often met with the sternest reprisal. It is from these areas, notably Mississippi and Alabama, that the most powerful organizations opposed to integration in either church or secular institutions arose, and it was from these areas that much of the reaction which beclouded the situation in the upper South originated.

This area might properly be called the hard core region of opposition to integration or to movements which greatly would enhance the status of our Negro citizen. In some of these areas, again and notably Mississippi, the organization(s) spearheading the movement to retain segregation receive the unabashed support of the whole apparatus of government, including its representatives in the Congress of the United States. There can be little doubt as to the length to which these movements will go to attain their ends.

Because these areas are so determined in their intention to maintain segregation, there are many who feel that there is little to be gained by spending valuable time and money in an effort to strengthen the hands of those who are trying to bring some sanity, faith and common sense to prevail in the minds of harassed men and women. The feeling is that it would be better to concentrate on the border and near-border states where the opposition to integration is not so strong. While every effort should be made to strengthen the work in these areas of least resistance, it would be, we believe, a fatal mistake to vacate the hard core areas, leaving them to the courts on the one hand and the White Citizens' Councils on the other.

It is imperative, we believe, to take some effective measures now to help build a native opposition to the White Citizens' Councils, and their equivalent in other states; an opposition, we might add, which is already in evidence, but which lacks coordination and backing in terms of personnel and money.

The Need

There are many people of good will in this hard-core area. There are intelligent and educated Negro leaders striving to organize and unite their people. There are white church women, ministers and priests, teachers and others who stand in opposition to the dominant pressures in Mississippi, Alabama, and elsewhere.

Intensive pressure has been brought to bear on liberals and moderates alike by the White Citizens' Councils and those who share their sentiments. These pressures, social and economic, have already taken their toll of valiant men and women. Many have been compelled to leave the region. Others remain and will be sorely needed in the years ahead.

All too often the Deep South liberals fight a lonely battle. Isolated in small communities, in towns and on college campuses, they often neither know or are known by those standing on similar ground in neighboring communities. These people need outside help and encouragement in thinking through their own problems, in making contact with like-minded men and women throughout the region.

The Proposal

It is proposed that a full-time specialist in community relations be made available for travel and contact work in Mississippi and in the adjacent cotton belt areas of Arkansas and Alabama. The person employed for this work should, preferably, be a native of the area.

We believe that such a project could be of service in these ways:

(1) Identification of liberals in this hard-core area. Those individuals and agencies working in the Deep South can function with more effectiveness if they can be put in touch with friendly and knowledgeable persons throughout the area.

(2) Support of Deep South liberals. The project representative will be in regular, continuing contact with as many of these people as possible. He will keep them informed of developments elsewhere and give them counsel, materials and other aids. Where persons are suffering from economic pressures because of their support of democratic principles and effort would be made to channel necessary assistance through this project.

(3) Contact and communication. A major goal of this effort would be to bring isolated liberals into contact with each other. This would involve small group meetings and occasional workshops or conferences. An effort would be made to bring whites into improved communication with other whites of similar views and, where possible, with likeminded Negroes.

(4) Special work with church groups. Many ministers and other individuals in the hard-core areas who have opposed the WCC position have based their actions in religious principles. The religious groups of this area, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish, are a valuable resource for moderation and reconciliation. Ministers and church groups in the area should be encouraged to consider these problems within and across denominational and faith lines. A number of special retreats and meetings for churchmen might be made possible through this work.

(5) Improved understanding of the area. A community relations specialist, working constantly in this cotton belt area, will learn much about the temper of the area, the direction of public opinion, the strength of resistance groups, etc. Such information and interpretation by someone close to the situation would be most helpful to church leaders and human relations agencies throughout the South, as well as to the national press and appropriate agencies of the Federal Government.

It is not proposed that this be considered as a program of indefinite duration. A three-year period would afford ample opportunity to apply the lessons learned through the project itself and to accomplish many of the objectives described above. In any case, a thorough re-examination of the hard-core area and its program needs should be undertaken at the end of the three-year period.

Meanwhile, the Delta Foundation asks support for three years at the annual rate of expenditure set forth below:

Estimated Annual Budget

Salary	$ 7,800
Travel	3,000
Office Supplies & Equipment	500
Postage, Telephone, Telegraph	1,000
Conferences	1,000
Social Security Taxes, Insurance, Misc.	500
Total:	$13,800

APPENDIX A

THE DELTA FOUNDATION - Its structure, purpose and tax status

The Delta Foundation is a non-profit, Mississippi chartered, corporation. The management of the corporation is under the direction of a Board of Trustees whose members serve without compensation for their duties as such. The Trustees may, however, receive payment for reasonable expenses incurred in the performance of their duties.

The purpose of the corporation, as set forth in Paragraph 7, section (a) of the charter, provides that the corporation was organized "to receive by gift, bequest or devise, money and property, real or personal, and to administer, invest and re-invest, use and dispose of said money and property exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary and educational purposes, provided, however, that no substantial part of the activities of the corporation hereby created, or of the money and property thus received, shall be devoted to carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting to influence legislation."

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in ruling that the corporation is a tax-exempt organization, stated in a letter dated November 9, 1949, that "it is the opinion of this office, based upon the evidence presented, that you are exempt from Federal income tax under the provisions of section 101(6) of the Internal Revenue Code and corresponding provisions of prior acts, as it is shown that you are organized and operated exclusively for charitable and educational purposes.

"Contributions made to you are deductible by the donors in arriving at their taxable net income in the manner and to the extent provided by section 23(o) and (q) of the Internal Revenue Code, as amended, and corresponding provisions of prior acts.

"Bequests, legacies, devices or transfers, to or for your use are deductible in arriving at the value of the net estate of a decedent for estate tax purposes in the manner and to the extent provided by section 812(d) and 861(a) (3) of the Code and/or corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts. Gifts of property to you are deductible in computing net gifts for tax purposes in the manner and to the extent provided in section 1004(a) (2) and 1004(b) (2) and (3) of the Code and/or corresponding provisions of prior revenue acts."

3.) That E. Stanley Jones, the famed Methodist missionary, is a member of the Advisory Committee of Martin Luther King's "Congress of Racial Equality"?

4.) That this same E. Stanley Jones said in his book "Christ's Alternative to Communism" that "When the Western World was floundering in an unjust and competitive order and the Church was bound up with it and was part of that order, God reached out and put his hand on the Russian Communists to produce a more just order..."?

5.) That in order to secure a teaching position at Wood Junior College a person must sign a statement agreeing to teach "any race, creed, or color" who might enroll there? (I have no tangible proof of this; only the word of a friend who taught there two years ago.)

6.) That the Mississippi Methodist Advocate defended, in a sly "round-about-way" the Castro regime in Cuba? (See the editorial page of the September 16, 1959, edition.)

7.) That the Advocate refused to carry an announcement of the annual meeting of the Methodist Laymen and Minister's Association?

8.) That the Methodist Church was one of the organizations which sent witnesses before Congressional Committees, urging more "Civil Rights" and anti-South legislation?

9.) That the pastor of the First Methodist Church in Clarksdale said in a sermon (November 1956) that "segregation is a sin and those who believe in segregation are sinners"? (I was present, and walked out in the middle of the sermon!)

10.) That every Methodist Church in Mississippi has an item in its budget for the National Council of Churches. This is the organization whose president, Dr. Edwin T. Dahlberg, recently said that the time has come to eliminate such expressions as "The precious name of Jesus", "Saved by Grace", "Born of the Spirit", etc.? (We in our Dublin church have cut this item out of our budget.)

DID YOU KNOW?

—PART TWO—

1) That Bishop Marvin Franklin signed and approved the "Bishop's Address" of the 1956 General Conference of the Methodist Church, even though (or maybe because) it contained this statement: "...there is no place in the Methodist Church for racial discrimination or racial segregation ...it is our business to free our world and our nation from these evils." (page 44, "Bishop's Address")

2) That in the July 20, 1958, edition of the Methodist Sunday School publication for youth entitled "Twelve-Fifteen", this statement appeared: "Prejudice indicates a lack of maturity, a weakness in the personality, fear and ignorance." (page 12) (Have you glanced through your child's church school literature lately? If you haven't, then you should.)

3) That of the 95 men who wrote the Revised Version of the Bible, 30 have numerous Communist or Communist-front affiliations.

4) That a number of Methodist preachers from Mississippi attended the Human Relations Conference at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas, last September. Thurgood Marshall of the NAACP was one of the featured speakers at this conference! Rev. R. L. Long of Como and Rev. J. W. Chatham of Sardis went from the Sardis District, and both of these men refused to write an evaluation of the conference when asked to do so by the Methodist Ministers and Laymen's Association. (Rev. Garland Holliman of Clarksdale also attended.)

5) That I have been told by a recent graduate of Emory School of Theology that there are several theology professors there who do not believe in the physical resurrection of Christ.

6) That upon being informed by the congregation of the Dublin Methodist Church that it was cutting several objectionable items (inclusing Millsaps) out of its budget, the District Superintendent, Rev. J. D. Wroten, Sr., roundly condemned the action and said that "When people can't support the church and its institutions, then its time for some people to get out of the Methodist Church!" (This occurred just this past August. I was there.)

7) That Dr. Dudley Ward of the Board of Social and Economic Relations highly recommended in a sermon to the 1959 North Mississippi Annual Conference that a good book which all should read is "The Road to Brotherhood."

8) That Dr. Harry Denman made no bones about it when he said in a sermon to the same North Mississippi Annual Conference that "I am for integration!" (Every Methodist ought to try to attend a session of the Annual Conference; you might be shocked at some of the things said there!)

9) That this statement appeared in an editorial in the November 19, 1958, edition of the Mississippi Methodist Advocate: "We Southerners can afford to be more tolerant of people who do not look like us...We have made His world a shambles as far as human relationships are involved."

NOTE: Feel free to copy any or all of this paper OR write to me for extra copies.

DID YOU KNOW?
— PART THREE —

1) That Mrs. J. A. Burt, Administrative Assistant on the Mississippi Methodist Advocate staff was (and still may be) on the staff of the Mississippi Council on Human Relations. This council is affiliated with the Southern Regional Council, an organization which, according to the Communist Daily Worker (Dec. 1, 1954), was founded by a Communist--James E. Jackson.

2) That the late Mrs. W. H. Ratliff, mother-in-law of President Ellis Finger of Millsaps, was the president of this Mississippi Council on Human Relations; and that Dr. H. G. Williamson, Mississippi Methodist minister, was also on the Board of Directors.

3) That according to testimony presented before a Joint Legislative Committee of the Louisiana Legislature by ex-Communist Manning Johnson, the Communist-founded Southern Regional Council has its offices "in a little church office building (in Atlanta) presided over by Methodist Bishop Arthur Moore!"

4) That the book "Behind Soviet Power" by Jerome Davis was sent to 22,000 Methodist ministers by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, and these books were paid for with money from Methodist missionary funds. This in spite of the fact that Davis has 99 Communist and Communist-front affiliations!

5) That the Volunteer Civil Rights Commission, designed to urge Congress to pass civil rights legislation is headed by Methodist Bishop Oxnam.

6) That according to Bishop Marvin Franklin, speaking before the North Alabama Annual Conference meeting in Decatur, Alabama, on January 13, 1960, the Methodist Church lost 199,000 members last year and 1,000,000 members since 1952. (I wonder why? Could it be that our church has become so liberal and steeped in preaching the "social gospel"--including integration--that people are finding spiritual guidance elsewhere?)

7) That at the National Conference of Methodist Youth meeting at Purdue University last August, the morning prayer service was conducted with a background of recorded jazz music.

8) That at this same Youth Conference Eleanor Roosevelt, Harold Stassen and others participated in a special panel discussion on world affairs.

9) That this statement appeared in the June 11, 1958, edition of the Mississippi Methodist Advocate: "When we (Southerners) claim to believe in democracy and are unwilling to share it with Jews, Mexicans, Orientals, and Negroes, we really do not believe in democracy. If we profess that every American is entitled to equal opportunity to develop, and do not work toward this end, can we say that we believe what we profess?"

DID YOU KNOW?

—PART FOUR—

1) That this "modern" teen-age version of the Lord's Prayer appeared on the Forum page of a recent issue of Concern. This magazine, published by our Methodist Publishing House in Nashville, is referred to as "the voice of Methodist youth and is widely circulated among Methodists of college age.

"Oh, Daddy, O, Who are the most, Hurrah for your support. My personality integrate, All physiques develop. My nervous system calm, In body as in mind. Prepare me new tempo, our daily jive, and Release us from parents And other repressed victims. Lead us into more self-expression And much less boredom. For you are the coolest, Gonest and hepest drive, From now on."

2) That the Sept. 27,1957, issue of Concern carried a race relations report containing this statement: "We recommend students and youth join and take an active part in organizations that are working in the area of race relations such as: Southern Regional Council, Atlanta, Ga., Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, Crossville, Tenn., Anti-Defamation League, New York.

3) That while the Baptists Of Mississippi were gaining in number by 257% during the past 50 years, Methodists increased by only one-third as much.

4) That a poll of 7,000 Methodists in the Washington, D. C. area last November showed that only 18.7% believed that all discrimination and enforced segregation should be abolished now. (This, mind you, in Mr. Eisenhower's "model city", 5years after the schools were desegregated. Evidently the leaders of the Methodist Church do not voice the sentiments of Methodist people, either North or South, when they advocate integration.)

5) That this statement appeared in an editorial in the February 17, 1960, edition of the Mississippi Methodist Advocate: "...they (all the members of the United Nations) had an overwhelming desire for peace, they had the same legal system, high cultural attainment and many things in common." (How ridiculous! Who believes that Communist Russia has ever had an "overwhelming desire for peace"? And who would be so stupid as to say that the Communist countries had the same legal system as such great law-respecting nations as the United States and Great Britain? I wonder what warped mind wrote this Advocate editorial?)

6) That G. Bromley Oxnam, radical integrationist and pro-communist Methodist bishop, was featured in the October 1959 issue of the MYF (Methodist Youth Fellowship) program book Roundtable, as being a man whose life should be an inspiration to young people. On page 29 Oxnam is quoted as saying: "It is not enough to prohibit segregation by legislation and judicial decision. The spirit that breeds segregation must be driven from the heart; the Church must undergo the cleansing of conversion."

7) That according to a news bulletin of the Federal Council Of Churches (now called the National Council of Churches): "...some pioneer spirits should take advance steps in that direction (intermarriage)...mixed marriages may be highly socially desirable". (And the Methodist churches of Mississippi support the National Council of Churches through the "Interdenominational Fund" item in their budgets. WHAT FOOLS WE ARE TO SUPPORT SUCH AN OUTFIT!!)

DID YOU KNOW?
—PART FIVE—

THAT ALL OF THE FOLLOWING QUOTATIONS WERE TAKEN FROM METHODIST PUBLICATIONS!

1) "The Methodist Church is officially pioneering toward the blending of all its members into a body undivided by racial segregation. Perhaps your own church has such an environment that on its doorstep is a chance to make a fine move toward integration. If this is true, you would do well to remind your fellow churchmen of their responsibility as pioneers." (WESLEY QUARTERLY, Jan. 3, 1960. page 17.)

2) "Every church should be for all people...to divide the church simply on the basis of color is completely artificial." (LESSONS FOR INTERMEDIATES, May 10, 1959. pages 22-23.)

3) "The idea of white superiority in our own country leads us to try to justify prejudice and segregation and hence makes second-class citizens out of millions who have also committed themselves to the idea of freedom for all. It is this conflict of ideas which lies at the heart of the racial strife and difficulty evident everywhere in our country...Many people talk about freedom and yet try to make laws restricting the freedom of certain groups." (ROUNDTABLE, Sep. 1959. pages 24-28.)

4) "That all feasible steps be taken toward abolishing racial discriminatory clauses in fraternities and sororities. We commend those fraternities and sororities which are earnestly seeking to eliminate discriminatory clauses in their Constitutions and By-Laws...That racial discrimination be abolished in entrance, participation, or employment practices in any Methodist institution, agency or project (for example, colleges, universities, hospitals, homes, camp and assembly grounds, etc.). (CONCERN, Sept. 27,1957. page 15)

5) "...a step towards Communism", is the way the March issue of the monthly magazine of the Mississippi Methodist Youth Fellowship referred to the church bill now being considered by the state legislature. (I wonder who, and what, has been poisioning the minds of our Mississippi youth?)

6) "Strangers began moving into the neighborhood. They were a different kind of people. We wanted the church to be for 'our kind'. So, of course, we didn't welcome these other people. One day Janice shocked us by bringing the children of one of these 'different' families to Sunday church school. "I just couldn't help it," she explained. "They ought to be in church school and ours is near them." We liked these children. We invited their parents. Later others came. Now the church has changed. We have many of the new families among us. But we have changed in another way. We've learned what it means to be the children of God. We've learned how to be together in Christ."(You can easily guess the race to which these "strangers" belonged.) BIBLE LESSONS FOR YOUTH,Nov.8, 1959. page 25)

CORRECTION:"DID YOU KNOW",Part Four, made the statement that CONCERN is published by the Methodist Publishing House. This is incorrect. It is published by the National Conference of Methodist Youth.

Mr. Harold Fleming

63 Auburn Street
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Mr. Fleming,

Let me thank you again for the very pleasant and useful talk we had on Thursday in Atlanta.

Enclosed are a maximum-minimum budget breakdown, some notes on the proposed film and a summary of my experience in motion pictures.

The minimum budget assumes that we will do all the shooting in Nashville and that we will be able to get interested people to give their services for a nominal remuneration. The higher figure includes more substantial payments to crew and actors, location expenses outside of Nashville and original music. Both of these figures are realistic, although the first presupposes more cooperation than we have a right to assume. We have available to us at a very reasonable rental charge the excellent facilities of the Methodist Film Commission. Needless to say these are not "hard" budgets as we do not yet have a script, but, I repeat, they are realistic.

I wish that the "Notes" were more detailed, but before I can prepare a treatment that would stand up I must know the situation and some of the people involved much more intimately.

I hope this information is satisfactory and that Mr. Cohen can be persuaded that this is a worthwhile project. The office number that I did not remember the other day is printed above. If you need any more information please call me there.

Thank you very much for your interest and help. If we can make this film I am sure you will not be disappointed.

Sincerely,

Douglas Cox

NOTES ON THE PROPOSED SEMI-DOCUMENTARY
FILM ON PUBLIC SCHOOL DESEGREGATION

Much has been written about the process of public school desegregation in the South and "border" states. Newspaper coverage has been quite complete. Most of the objective facts and events - demonstrations, court suits, organizational stands - are well documented and available to those interested in the problem. Yet out of all this material the picture that emerges is primarily group and organization conflict and the participants do not often appear as individuals. I feel that this is particularly unfortunate because the inability to recognise people as individuals rather than as representatives of groups is part of the foundation of prejudice.

I believe that motion pictures is one of the mass communication mediums best suited for the presentation of problems in terms of the people involved. Through film, the audience has an opportunity to get to know these people, to gain understanding of their emotional reactions to other people and situations. In this way the audience can begin to appreciate them as individuals, sharing some characteristics with a group or groups, having some that are uniquely their own. A twenty-eight minute film on this subject, with distribution through interested organizations, churches and television, should prove useful in promoting tolerance and understanding.

In this film I propose to follow one Negro child who is going to a school which is desegregated for the first time. The focus of interest will be upon the child and her family. In addition we should touch upon the reactions of the child's neighbors and the school teacher or principal. It might also be possible to explore some of the feelings of a white family that has a child in the same school. This situation has a great deal of inherent drama and conflict which can be utilised without resorting to sensationalism. I have no desire to make a film that will reinforce antagonisms, but rather one that will help to create understanding and bridge the gap between the races. The threat of violence is, of course, present, but will be used to show the courage and bravery of the child and the people involved in sending her to school.

I would like to pattern the film on a family similar to the Griffith family of Nashville. They have, at present, two children in desegregated schools and two older ones in segregated schools. Theirs was one of the first children to go to a desegregated school in Nashville, and the pressures brought to bear on them were considerable. Mr. Griffith is a postman and, I gather (I have not yet talked with him as he is out of town), of average intelligence and background. However, he believed strongly enough in the cause of desegregation to register his little girl in a previously all white school. Mrs. Griffith had some misgivings about exposing the child to possible danger and as the pressure increased wished to withdraw the child and send her to an all Negro school. With the support of some friends and people interested in desegregation Mr. Griffith stood fast and the child was entered in the school. There were, I believe, some antagonistic demonstrations, but fortunately there were no really serious incidents.

This is the sort of story I would want to film. I cannot give you specific incidents in the story line as I am just starting my detailed research. However I would emphasise that I feel the story should grow out of the more subtle and intimate relationships between the participants, rather than be hung on a series of spectacular newspaper incidents. I would like to end the film on a hopeful note, perhaps the first tenuous contact between two children across the racial barrier, but I would not like to have a slick happy ending which would suggest that with school integregation the problem of racial discrimination is solved.

Dear The Craigs:

The Harrises wrote us that you would like to know about the Southern Regional Council.

I could send you reams of printed things which you would not read. I give you the shortest definition I ever heard of its work, from a Negro in an audience I talked to some weeks ago:

> "Mr Mitchell, in any little town in the South whatever you will find a few fair-minded white people."

The Southern Regional Council is an Association of fair-minded white people and their Negro friends. We are pushing mighty hard these days on a program of getting local discussion groups to use these two pamphlets. Quite amazing response in getting the pamphlets bought by interested organizations all over the South. Two thousand, if you please, were bought the other day by the Mississippi State Board of Education!

I have put in a membership form - the back of the grey mimeographed leaflet. We would be delighted to have you as members.

Dear George:

In accordance with your request, we take pleasure in enclosing a copy of "Code of Ethics for Political Campaigns," which was adopted by the Young Democratic Clubs of North Carolina, in Convention, September, 1951. Our youthful followers of Andrew Jackson seem to have done a pretty good job - if we do say so.

Dear George,

What exciting and crucial times you are entering in your work. My thoughts are often with you and your co workers these days. I know of no more important work going on anywhere than that in which you are toiling. With tragedy hanging heavy in the air I am sure it is most difficult for Southerners of all colors to keep a sense of balance, much less a sense of humor, but I am sure you will contribute toward the maintainence of sensibility and good will.

I was happy to see that you are going to talk at the New School October 2nd. Bonnie and I would love to see you during your visit. Realizing that you likely will want to be with Broadus and his wife, and probably have other commitments, may I give you an open invitation to dine with us the evening of Oct 2 (we are only a few blocks from the New School) or to dine or visit with us at any other date which is more convenient to you. This of course applies to your wife as well if she is able to make the trip. I remember fondly a most enjoyable afternoons conversation with her in 1950 and I would like to be remembered to her. Best wishes from Bonnie and me.

Sincerely,
Jim Crown

Dear Jim:

Most kind of you and of your wife to let me come to supper at your house the night before the Tuesday, October 2nd, speech-reading at the New School. I accept gladly. I will be in New York a number of days that time, and there will be other chances to see Broadus and Louise.

I take it you live somewhere in the south end of Manhattan. I take it, also, that you teach in Washington Square College though the letterhead has all this fancy up-staged up-island notation. Indeed I once found your name on the bulletin board of the Washington Square College. Straighten me out about where you teach and where you live.

Sincerely,

Dear George

Bonnie and I look forward with much pleasure to your forthcoming visit. I take it you are able to come to supper with us Monday October 1st. I think this is made clear in your letter, but I believe mine may have been somewhat confusing. We are expecting you Monday evening about 7.

If by any chance I have confused the date, you can call us on arrival and we'll make arrangements to get together at the right time. If, however, Oct. 1 is correct, as I think it is, no need to notify us further. Just come to 30 Downing St. This is a little street which runs from 6th Ave. (Avenue of the America's, to tourists) to 7th Ave. ~~It~~ The street immediately to the north~~,~~ is Bleeker Street, the street immediately to the South is Houston Street. We are about 12 blocks (approx.) south of the New School. Subways to take are either the IRT local to the Houston St. stop or Ind. to 4th St stop.

You are correct in assuming that I used to grub around full time downtown at the Square, and, fortunately, I still do some of the time, but my main work is at a little snob arts and science shop we run on a Bronx hilltop. I use this stationery to guild the lily.

Goodbye until October. Bonnie sends regards.

Sincerely,

Dear Jim:

I don't know how we got mixed up on the dates. My speech-making at the New School is Tuesday, October 2nd at 8:00 p.m. I have no faintest purpose of squatting in New York City all day Monday, October 1st. And I think I am rather a hero to haul myself up in the dawnings of October 2nd.

So my chance to have supper with you and your nice Bonnie is Tuesday night. And 7:00 is squshingly late. How about moving it up to 6:30?

Therefore, unless I hear from you otherwise, you will find me hanging on your door at 6:29 Tuesday, October 2nd -- and hungry.

If you have to get hold of me, the telephone number in Atlanta at my home is DEarborn 5961. I am in the office off and on on October 1st. And the telephone number there is WAlnut 1821.

Dear Dr. Fleming:

You will remember that I have been in correspondence with you about my manuscript, "Sit Down With Abraham." I have now had a final report from the Broadman Press. I am enclosing the letter which I received from Dr. Fallis in which he explains the reason for turning it down.

I am now writing to you to ask if you have any further recommendations. Dr. Mitchell suggested, first by telephone and then by letter on November 9, 1956, that the SRC might consider the possibility of publishing it. He also suggested that there might be other agencies he could contact. I shall be happy to follow any suggestion which you may make.

It was a great disappointment to me that Broadman did not see fit to publish the manuscript. This is particularly true since I had been informed in July that the editors planned to recommend to the Book Committee that it be published. Had it come from the Broadman Press, I feel that that fact would have persuaded some of the faint-hearted to read it.

If you would like to see the manuscript again, I shall be glad to place it at your disposal.

Sincerely yours,

Roger H. Crook

Dear Mr. Crook:

I am very sorry that illness and travel have caused this long delay in replying to your letter.

I recall very well how eager Dr. Mitchell was that your manuscript be published, and am very sorry to learn that the Broadman Press has turned it down.

Others of us here would be glad to read the manuscript and make any suggestions that occur to us. But lest we sail under false colors, I feel you should know that the Council, unfortunately, is unable to undertake any publishing venture as ambitious as this would necessarily be.

If you can spare a copy of your manuscript without hampering your approaches to possible publishers, we shall be glad to read it and make such suggestions as we can.

With kindest regards,

Dear HCF:

Assuming that I have traced you correctly and this actually reaches you, Hail!

It appears that on or about May 4 I shall be delivering a paper at a convention in Miami. Having never yet ventured further into Confederate territory than the Virginia suburbs of Washington, it seems to me that my education demands that my first-hand impression of the South not be limited to the very special ambience that environs Biscayne Bay.

Unless you have reason to believe that a third agony of Atlanta would be precipitated were I to dismount there, I should like to investigate the possibility of routing myself that way, especially since I may be traveling to or from Columbus, Ohio. The stop would probably be only for a few hours, unless it happened to work out during a weekend.

How say you?

Why do you characterize a word from you as the kiss of death? The only reason I can think of is that you might be too reactionary on the integration question. (

How a white father and son in Little Rock came to support integration is told by Ralph and Carl Creger in "This Is What We Found." Their collaboration stemmed from a history assignment for Carl, a 17-year-old student at Little Rock's Central High School. Ralph Creger is chief train dispatcher in Little Rock for the Rock Island Railroad. The joint research wound up as study of the history of the American Negro and a formulation of the reasons why the authors now support integration. The book will be published Dec. 9 by Lyle Stuart in hard cover and paperback editions.

Margaret Kennedy's new novel, "A Night in Cold Harbor," will be issued by Macmillan on Oct. 17. It deals with a young aristocrat of early nineteenth-century England who devastates several lives before he begins to awaken to the responsibilities and privileges of his class.

"In the Cool of the Day," a new novel by Susan Ertz, will be published Oct. 12 by Harper. It is the story of an English publisher who finds escape from his tragic marriage through the love of an American woman.

A first-hand account of the "exciting, sordid and bloody" years of the Prohibition era in Chicago will be published Oct 31 by Prentice-Hall, entitle "The Dry and Lawless Years. The author is John H. Lyle, Chicago judge who issued t first public enemy warrant f Al Capone's arrest, set $100,0 bail in hoodlum cases and ran determined reform campaign fo Mayor in the early Ninetee Thirties.

Dear Harold,

I don't recall if I sent you a copy of the changes in the first two pages in my book, and the dedication I wrote at the request of my publisher, so I am sending them now.

I recieved a letter from Brooks Hays yesterday telling me he planned to write a review of the book for the Knoxville paper after the book comes out.

A reporter from the Rock Island railroads company magazine come to Little Rock and took our pictures (Carl and I) and plan to run a story on our efforts in the next issue of the company magazine. I checked with miss Brand (Lyle Stuart's editor) and asker her permission, and she told me any promotion of this nature would be fine. She said most magazines took two months or more to get something published, but that it should be kept out of Newspapers until publication date. She said they would handle promotion there, but that anything I could do to help it along would be alright.

William Fulbrights assistant called me yesterday and said that when the senator got back to Washington he would see what could be done to help promote the book as far as the national news media is concerned.

If you have any ideas to help make the booklet known to the public I would appreciate hearing them. Publication date is still supposed to be October 28th. They said they should make that date, or at least not miss it far.

Very Sincerely Yours,

Ralph Creger

PREFACE

We feel sure that nearly all Americans are aware that the teachers in our public schools are frequently underpaid. Most folks, if they are honest, must admit that these "molders of character" are often subjected to unwarranted criticism from irate parents who feel that "Miss Jones" singled "Junior" out for punishment even though "Junior" obviously had done no wrong. It is pretty generally understood that school teachers must be quite careful about where they are seen in public, careful that they dress modestly and that their conduct in general is above reproach.

In view of all this, many of us feel that the average school teacher must have a certain nobility of character to remain in a profession where their efforts are often not properly rewarded, and where even more often they are unappreciated.

The difficulties encountered by teachers are not confined to one region of our land, they are national in scope. However, since 1957, school teachers in the Little Rock, Arkansas, public schoolsystem have been subjected to pressures above and beyond those known elsewhere, and their refusal to bow to these pressures may have been largely responsible for the preservation of the public school system throughout much of the South.

These teachers did not advocate segregation nor integration, but tried to proceed with the process of education. Like most educators, they valued freedom of thought and opinion. There have been no book burnings in Little Rock - the RABBIT WEDDING can still be purchased. Most of them did make it clear to their students they expected to see a display of good citizenship when Negro children entered formerly all-white schools.

Many of these instructors paid a high price for doing what they thought was right and for speaking out against what they felt was sheer demagoguery on the part of State leaders. They came to know the anonymous telephone call at three in the morning, and the threatening, anonymous letter. Part of the Little Rock School Board, with the support of the Governor, tried to dismiss fifty of these teachers in the summer of 1959. No reasons were given for these dismissals other than the vague hint that some of those on the "purge" list had been "soft" on integration. The three remaining school board members refused to be a party to this wholesale "firing" of teachers, and as a result, a special school board election was held which resulted in the replacement of the extreme segregationists with men pledged to preserve the public schools.

This special election may have been far more important than most of us realize. It may have been the turning point in favor of the retention of public schools throughout an entire region.

As Winston Churchill once said, "Never have so many owed so much to so few."

In the winter of 1959, a history instructor in Central High School required his students to prepare a composition on any subject pertaining to American History. What follows is the result of this Classroom assignment.

We respectfully dedicate this book to the public school teachers in Little Rock, Arkansas.

Ralph and Carl Creger

THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND

As a father and son directly affected by the chaos brought on by the integration of Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas, in September, 1957, we were disturbed by what seemed to us a lack of Christian principals shown by so many, and by the willingness of some of those in high political office to exploit an emotional crisis for political gain.

We felt that anything causing as much tension, ill will and bitterness as we had witnessed justified much study and research. We read nearly every book pertaining to race or related matters offered by the public library. In addition, we tried to make an objective study of the Scriptures.

Acts 8-27 through 31 tell of Phillip's experience with the Etheopian:- "And he arose and went, and behold an eunuch of great authority under Candace, Queen of the Etheopians, who had charge of all her treasure, and he had come to Jerusalem to worship, was returning, and sitting in his chariot reading Esaias the Prophet. Then the spirit said unto Phillip, go near and join thyself to this chariot. And Phillip ran to him and heard him reading and said, do you understand what you read? And the Etheopian said, how can I expect some man should guide me? And he asked Phillip to come up and sit with him." What a wonderful opportunity this would have been for the Lord to have explained to us that the Etheopians were really a simple people, not to be trusted, unlearned and unable to assume leadership. It is obvious that such was not the case. The man was everything the racist tells us the Negro is not supposed to be. He was a man of learning, trustworthy and a man of great authority.

Verses such as these may or may not be significant but certainly we found nothing in the Bible to indicate that the Etheopians were less worthy than others, or that they were inclined toward stupidity, immorality, dishonesty, crimes of violence or any of the many undesirable characteristics attributed to the Negro by racists, and which the racist claims are innate.

All of our research led us to believe that the low status of the Negro in America is cultural, forced on him and not inherent. To us it seemed obvious that it would be impossible for the Negro to achieve the successes others have, because of the obstacles placed in his path, particularly in the field of job opportunities.

But more about that later. Our story is basically the history of the Negro in America, and for a better understanding of the subject, it seems advisable to cover some of the backgroud of the Negro people, prior to their arrival on this Continent.

In presenting this frequently tragic, but none the less praiseworthy history of achievement, emphasis will be placed on conditions as they were, and are today, rather than as some might wish them to be.

There are those to whom race is all-important, and to whom racial supremacy has become a religion. Among these people, the statement is frequently heard that the colored races have contributed little that is worthwhile to the civilization of the world. They say that the colored people, even though inhabiting areas rich in natural resources have not exploited these resources as they might have. These racists always fail to mention that climatic conditions between the Tropic of Cancer and the Tropic of Capricorn are not as conducive to the energy and drive needed to excel, as that found in the temperate zones.

Be that as it may, the idea that the darker skinned peoples have always been culturally and industrially inferior simply will not stand up under the careful study of history and science. It is not often called to our attention, but students of history generally agree that for several centuries before Christ, Ethiopia, Egypt and other African countries had a high degree of culture and industry when our foreberas in Western Europe were existing in a state of savagery. Nationa such as China, Babylon, Greece and others of varied racial groups have had their periods of glory.

Why Western European nations and America have been in the dominant position in recent centuries is a matter of conjecture, and one guess is probably as from here on the story is the same as it was

We propose a write-up for your book in NEW SOUTH. This, of course, will call attention to the book of a goodly number of leaders and individuals in the South interested in this field. We would like a review copy as soon as they are available in order to prepare our copy.

If other ideas occur to you in which we might be of aid, please let us know.

Dear Mrs. Crump:

Thank you for your seasons greetings, and I am very sorry to hear that you have been ill with a virus.

It was really delightful meeting you at Mrs. Tilly's meeting and I do hope that I will have the opportunity of working with you again.

In spite of your illness, you still seem to be quite active. We, here in Atlanta, also sent Christmas or Freedom cards bought from the students. I understand that a week before Christmas the students had sold 31,000 of these and I am sure the number increased before the holiday season ended.

As you may know, the lunch-counter controversy is at a stalemate. A don't buy campaign has been started against the down town section, but it is uncertain as to how effective it is. The Chamber of Commerce has refused to do anything to help shave the situation. Fortunately, the students are standing firm and I do believe a sensible solution will finally prevail.

Again thanks for your note and your good wishes.

With all best wishes.

CHRISTMAS ANNO DOMINE 1960

"Joy To The World!" When these words strike my ears, there is wonderous joy. There is perfect peace to think that Christ the Saviour was born and I am here with highly privileged to have the smallest opportunity to render the most infinitesimal service to my fellow man.

A consecrated, dedicated, Soul, A Ruth, the 20th Century Moabitess, (in my way of expressing it) sent me these words from a sermon. Little did she know she was sending to me the very message, the only message Christmas could have for me. These are they:

"God never comes to a man just to be seen . . . the danger of its being only a spiritual experience is too great. God never comes to a man only so that he can see himself . . . there are too many temptations to spiritual self-culture. But God always comes to a man with a job to be done, a mission to be accomplished, a call to be answered."

This Christmas more than ever, I can hear the call of the Christ Child to the same mission for which He came into the world, and to the one to which I am compelled to respond — a mission to be accomplished — a call to be answered.

May Peace be yours and Good Will toward all Men. "For unto you a Saviour is born."

JENNIE RUTH CRUMP.

Dear Mr. Constable,

My Christmas message is being sent on New Year's Day. The Virus Cold caught me as one of its victims.

Surely it was a most delightful pleasure and opportunity to have met you in Atlanta at the meeting of The Fellowship of The Concerned. "Links Inc." an organization, New Orleans Chapter, asked my cooperation in using money for Christmas Cards to be sent for "Sit-Ins". The Appointment of Power may mellow sentiment toward the Naacp. Unfortunately those who deal with young minds are the most fearful people at work. To me nothing is a greater truth than one of those great truths spoken by Lincoln, "To sin by silence when men should speak out makes cowards of men". I will speak for The Voters League Banquet January 1077. I have no alternative but to try to speak the truth. Sincerely

Dear Mr. Ashmore,

Thank you so much for your letter of February 8th. My delay in answering might have led you to believe I didn't appreciate the letter, as a matter of fact I have been so busy putting it to use that this was the reason for the delay.

Several Little Rock people have become quite interested in the book, and in it's possible effect on politics in Arkansas. Sid McMath is writing a man with B'nai Brith asking help in promotion, and has enlisted the help of Phil Back for possible promotion locally. Frank Newell tells me he plans to talk to Winthrop Rockefller about helping promote the book. Graham Hall, who has recently returned to Little Rock from diplomatic service, is quite interested in the book. He took Carl and I to Conway last Monday evening to attend one of his lectures, and to let Carl look the school over, as he will probably enroll there. The Arkansas Council on Human Relations has started a project to send the books to all the libraries in the state, and also to as many schools and ministers as they can, depending on the amount of the contributions. Mr. Hall has said that he will contribute substantially to the fund, he wants to see what some of the others will do. Harold May, who owns May building and Supply company, across the tracks from my office, stopped me the other day and told me he had read the book. I told him of the Council's project, and he said he would contribute, but because of his business he would want to do in annonymously.

I have been trying to preach, to the best of my ability, to the people in Little Rock, those who feel as I do, that now is the time to start taking the initiative. Start putting Faubus on the defensive. For a long, long time now - it seems an eternity, he has been taking the initiative, making his inflamatory press releases, etc, as he saw fit, heaping personal abuse on first this person, then that person, and the targets of his abuse have had to try to defend themselves, often without much support from others. I say it is time to start calling him the demagogue that he his, at frequent intervals, and I intend to do it. When my wife and I were trying to decide whether or not to let the book be published, we sweat it out for several days, we finally decided what we were doing was right, and let it go. We were prepared to send Carl North to school, if things got to tough, and to move to an apartment and get an unlisted telephone number. We thought there would be trouble. There has been NONE, we have gotten many, many letters and calls of commendation from this are, not one bad one. We did get one abusive letter from Toledo Ohio, and it was full of anti-semitic literature, and we got one from Minneapolis which was full of personal abuse for Carl and me. The last day before the Christmas holidays Carls english class went to a resturaunt to each lunch instead of having class, there are two colored kids in this particular class. We thought there might be trouble, but they all went into a nice eating place and were served as though it were an everyday occurrance. To me all of these things are very signifigant.

Brooks Hays tells me he is going to try and get some of the Senators to say something about THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND to the national news media. Whether he will or not remains to be seen, Brooks is a nice guy, and surely has every reason to try to strike back at Faubus, but he seems to be afraid of hurting peoples feelings.

Senator Fulbright, in letters, has told me he would help in every way he can with the national news media. So far he has done nothing. Mrs. David Terry tells me Fulbright is a political coward, and that Orval Faubus will beat Fulbright, and she hopes that he does. I don't know about these things, I just know he hasn't really done any thing to help with the book. I'd think a lot more of him if he'd show some of the guts Kefauver did in last summers election.

A writer for the Pittsburgh Courier seems to be going all out to help me. His name is P. L. Prattis. He has written me several letters, and is giving the book a good write up in the Courier. He says he has a friend in the White House who he thinks can get the book to Kennedy, and he has several other ideas for promotion

I have had letters indicating active help from Ralph Bunche, Hodding Carter, Benjamin Fine, Rufus Clement, Brooks Hays, and many others. I have been dissappointed by not getting acknowledgements from Jackie Robinson, Harry Belefonte and Martin Luther King.

My publisher tells me he plans to put your letter to good use. I am enclosing a copy of a letter that is going to every Arkansas paper, weekly and daily. The principal of Harace Mann High is having his typing classes type up 150 original copies so I can send them instead of duplicate copies. The Gazette people tell me they will be much more likely to get attention that way. I am also writing almost the same letter to about 200 large dailies all over the country.

I have been surprised at the interest in the book among the colored people, and I don't mean just the better educated colored people. It seems to me that just about every colored railroad employee has come by the office and gotten books, and those working at Brinkley and Memphis take 5 or 10 along with them every trip they make. I let them have them at my cost and they make the profit.

All this is just scratching the surface though. Unfortunately the Lyle Stuart Company, although apparently high reputable, is small, and just not able to promote a book as Harpers or Doubleday would do it. And they have no salesmen working the south, that is the most unfortunate part of it. This is where it is needed. These people, and I mean the "red necks" or whatever you want to call them read the book, they read it clear through, and it doesn't make them mad. Some of them start thinking halfway realistically where race is concerened.

I am sure you know all the angles, as far as book promotion is concerend, and I would welcome any advice you would want to give me.

Winthrop Rockefeller advised against the use of your letter. Brooks Hays, Sid McMath, Graham Hall, and several others said USE IT. I had planned to use it regardless of what anyone said.

Thanks again.

Dear Mr. Creger:

Thank you very much for your lengthy report on what's going on in Little Rock. I find it rather encouraging and I appreciate the efforts that you are rendering the community.

I am so impressed, as a matter of fact, that I am sending the letter along to Harold Fleming at the Southern Regional Council in Atlanta, who is one of the wisest men I know in this field. I think he will find it of considerable interest, and you might consider getting in touch directly with him. As you know, the Southern Regional Council is the parent body with which the Arkansas Council on Human Relations is affiliated.

Dear Cousin:

I think you'll find the enclosed letter from Ralph Creger interesting. Creger and his son wrote a sort of sentimental but useful book on the Little Rock school crisis, and he is an earnest fellow. His report on Little Rock I find quite encouraging.

Why don't you come out to Santa Barbara and sit in for a spell? It's much more comfortable here.

Dear Harry:

I was sorry to miss you in Washington recently. Since I did, I must content myself with sending you the enclosed announcements about the changing of the guard at SRC.

As you will see, I am to be a sort of a vigilante on the New Frontier, operating very much in the spirit of the Council. (That is, being officious, but trying not to appear to.)

I hanker for a chance to sit down and talk with you at length about all this. My new work will have me commuting between Atlanta and Washington until school is out and I can move the family. It also means that I will be coming to New York pretty freqeently for a day or so at a time. Keep me posted on your own travel schedule so that we can plan the next reunion.

All the best.

Crackpots!

Mobile, Alabama,

Dr. George S. Mitchell,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:

I see by the Mobile Press Register that you are to address a gathering of Negroes here when they celebrate the 91st anniversary of Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation.

All intelligent people know or should know that the proclamation was illegal, it was just meant to be war propaganda, to fool the ignorant people in the North and in England, Ireland to make them willing to fight "to free the poor slaves."

On August 22, 1862 Lincoln wrote Horace Greeley, Editor N. Y. Tribune:

"If I could save the Union without freeing any slave I would do it; if I could do it by freeing all the slaves I would do it; if I could do it by freeing some and leaving others alone, I would also do that. What I do about slavery (the colored race) I do because I believe it saves the union, and what I forbear, I forbear because I do not believe it would help save the union."

Slavery was not legally abolished until the ratification of the 13th Amendment which was December 18, 1865, eight months after Lincoln's death.

It seems strange that Lincoln did not "free the slaves" in the slave states still in the Union and over which he had authority, viz Missouri, Kentucky, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia. The answer is, he knew he had no legal right to do so.

In his first inaugural address he said:

"I have no purpose, directly or indirectly, to interfere with the institution of slavery in the States where it exists. I believe I have no lawful right to do so, and I have no inclination to do so."

While the outstanding characteristics of the vast majority of Negroes are immorality, lying and stealing, yet they have one admirable trait, they are loyal to their own race and never go against their own people to favor the white people. However, there are many white men, I am ashamed to say, who are not loyal to their own race. They will take the part of the negro against their own race. Some even want to see the negro rule the white people. Often these whites who favor the negro against the whites are on the public payroll.

Yours truly,

John F. Proctor

Dear Sirs.

In a recent issue of a daily paper, your pamphlet "Schools in the South" is mentioned. The question asked & quoted in as follows:- "Do mixed schools lead to mixed marriages." In answer to this, may I say - from long observation that in this fight of the part of the negroes for a segregation is for this are reason - to interbreed with the whites to get rid of their black colors. They have longed for this ever since they saw the color of the half breed. Why don't any intelligent white man or woman with an ounce of pride matter recognize the subtlety of this negro thought? Think you not that intermarriage is a rare thing, you are advocating the equality of the two races and most of them doing it for political reasons or for self gratification. The "nigger" as they know it, is mentally not fit to associate with our white girls & boys. They know it. They know the dirty lustful desires that opening into action when they even look at our white girls & boys. Only the southern people understand this. The northern people either don't want to see this issue - even for their own sons & daughters - or else they are too blind to recognize it. Our race is quite in our favor in the minds of many as saying - before this question of segregation is settled - that it will cause a revolution - I hope it does. Then the white people will rope up with a sickly dull thud. Why don't the southern people as a whole take the stand that they have the a legal right to segregation. May God give them the courage & strength to do this. I speak with all sincerity — because I know that the rubbing of races together causes a friction & finally ends a blaze of destruction and this is the aim of the negro — to destroy the white race by belittling it with the backbiting faults of half breeds. I only hope & pray that the white race will awaken before it is too late. Segregation is the only answer to the whole mixed states.

Respt. Yours.

FOREWORD

On February 1, 1954, in anticipation of an adverse ruling by the Supreme Court of the United States against the South in the Race Integration Cases, I prepared a paper in the nature of a forecast in which I warned the Southern leaders to prepare for the worst. This paper was sent to States' Rights leaders with whom I had worked in the campaign of 1948. The present paper is a revision of that forecast and is an adaptation to the opinion of the Court as handed down on May 17, 1954.

This decision did not come as a surprise to me. To close observers here on the ground there were straws in the wind that he who runs might read. As a member of the Bar of the Court for forty years and the Court's Librarian for a term of years, and as a constitutional lawyer, I cannot concede the constitutionality of the opinion. I think the Court exceeded its powers and invaded the province of the State legislatures and Constitutions. The Court has attempted to exercise the legislative and administrative powers of the Federal Government in a field in which Congress itself has no jurisdiction, namely, the control of the social behavior of individual persons—a matter solely within the jurisdiction of the States.

We States' Righters hold that we still live under the Constitutional Republic of the United States of America. The basic principle of that Republic is local self-government founded upon the State as the unit of power. The Federal Government, no matter how far the Federal machine may have roamed out of bounds, is now and has always been a government of limited, enumerated and delegated powers, identified and documented in a formal written instrument of organic law—the Constitution of the United States.

The following paper is a preliminary dissertation on these principles as they apply to the Race Integration Cases. The final appraisal must await the decree and orders of the Court which may not come before the middle of 1955. At that time the battle lines can be intelligently drawn. It may be appropriate then to issue a new revision of this paper to bring the decree in line with the previous discussion.

A political and sociological Court, in the name of the Federal Government, has challenged the way of life of the Southern States. It is a Federal challenge and is therefore from the outside. In the history of the civilizations which have appeared on the face of the earth there have always been conflicts and aggressions. Many of these failed to rise to meet the challenge when attacked and went down to obscurity and oblivion. Others—fewer in number—rose to strike a harder blow and survived. The history of the South shows where she will stand.

The South faces a long drawn out cold war with many a battle front along the racial integration line. It will not be limited to the question of the school children. Groundwork for an even more dangerous infiltration has already been laid by the Federal Government. Eisenhower recently issued an Executive Order which put the old Roosevelt-Truman FEPC into all Government contracts and subcontracts. It is based upon racial integration at all levels in industry under the coercive power of the Federal Government. This is to be done in connection with the expenditure of billions of dollars of the taxpayers' money appropriated for national defense. This action by the President is also unconstitutional. He has no power as Chief Executive to employ these funds directly or indirectly to control the social behavior of persons—black or white. Here again is an attempt to override the jurisdiction of the States over the private rights of their citizens.

After the foregoing developments have come more clearly to public view and after the South has made progress in the establishment of its own defences, it may be appropriate to issue a States' Rights Manual for publicity and general information.

CHARLES WALLACE COLLINS

THE RACE INTEGRATION CASES

By

1. Background

The remote historical background of these cases, as of every other question which involves the Negro race, goes back to the work of the New England slave traders who brought the Negroes to America; their sale as slaves to the tobacco, rice and cotton planters of the South; the Civil War and Reconstruction; and the adjustment arrived at in the administration of President Hayes. The immediate background of these cases goes back to the year 1936, when the Negro vote, traditionally Republican, went over to the Democratic Party and joined hands with the newly organized CIO and other minority groups which sought left wing legislation from the New Deal. The Negroes, supported by these groups began to organize to restore the old civil rights legisla- enacted by Congress during Reconstruction but which, in a series of leading cases, had been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. After Roosevelt's death strong pressure was brought to bear upon Truman, who, notwithstanding the long line of precedents that the Federal Government was without power in this field, appointed a Presidential Committee on Civil Rights. This committee made a report and a number of recommendations from which several bills were drafted—including the notorious FEPC. These proposed measures were known as the Truman Civil Rights Program, but it was in fact the program of the Negro leaders in the North. The main emphasis was upon the abolition of segregation of the races. The committee even held that Congress could proceed under the authority of the United Nations Charter! Congress did not enact any of these bills during the Truman Administration.

2. The Question

These cases were twice argued before the Court but the real issue was not discussd by the lawyers on either side nor by the Court during argument or in its opinion. All of the official talk was about segregation. But during the last few years the Negro leaders have set their sights much higher. Their aim is not integrated education of the races but racial integration as an end in itself. To integrate is to combine the parts into a whole. To integrate races of people is to produce one race where two or more previously existed. The American Negro is the most race conscious of any minority group in the country yet his leaders deny the existence of races of man and brand as "racism" or "racist" anyone who asserts the contrary.

* Mr. Collins is a native of Alabama. He received his education at Auburn, the University of Chicago and Harvard. He now resides in Maryland, having retired from the active practice of law. In his career as a constitutional lawyer Mr. Collins was a member of the Alabama Bar, the Federal Bar of the District of Columbia, the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and for forty years a member of the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States. As a public servant he has held the offices of Director of the Federal Legislative Reference Service, Law Librarian of Congress, Librarian of the Supreme Court of the United States, General Counsel of the Federal Bureau of the Budget and General Counsel for the Comptroller of the Currency. Mr. Collins is the author of the authoritative work—The Fourteenth Amendment and the States—the States' Rights book, Whither Solid South? and other works on constitutional law, public finance, banking and politics.

The question here involved is not concerned with educational policy or with educational practices in the public schools. These Negro leaders know that, under the present system in the South, a Negro, under the "separate but equal" rule, can obtain a satisfactory education. The question in these cases is how to employ the coercive power of the Federal Government to produce racial integration in the South. The public school system was seized upon as the one instrumentality under which the whole population from the age of six to twenty-two could be held in coercive physical contact from early childhood to maturity. This should be clearly understood by Southern leaders. They should concentrate not upon education in the public schools but upon racial integration.

3. The Method

How do the Negroes propose to accomplish this integration? By means of these cases which were decided as one consolidated case on Monday, May 17, 1954. They turned to the Supreme Court where they finally found "the new climate of opinion" for which they had sought. They have laid their hands upon an asserted coercive power of the Federal Government. Here is the pattern. Beginning at the age of six, little white and Negro children, boys and girls, would be forced into continuous physical contact with each other in the public schools and public school activities. They would study together, recite together, sing together, play together, sit together, talk together, and dance together. They would eat lunch together from food provided by the Federal Government. In this manner they would go through the grade school, through high school, through college and through university. The social theory behind this procedure is that this close and intimate association during the entire formative period of their lives, would in itself produce integration, or, in other words, amalgamation of the races. Fantastic as it may appear the social aim is a Negroid South.

One may search the records of the history of nations, peoples, governments and minority populations and there will be found examples of genocide, extinctions, enslavements, torture and exile, but there will not be found one single instance where a government has forced one race against its will to be integrated with another. In these cases, here under discussion, we see the first employment of this procedure. It comes in the Twentieth Century in the Constitutional Republic of the United States of America. The South and the four border states of Kenucky, Maryland, Missouri and Oklahoma have a white population of about 37,000,000 and a Negro population of about 10,000,000.

The blow has now fallen and the danger signals are plain enough to cause the South to proceed at once to organize. The United States are divided into several regions which have distinctive geographical and social characteristics, such as New England, the Mississippi Valley, the Northwest, the Mountain West, and the Pacific Coast and the South. It is the South which is more distinctively a Region than any of the others. She has a common white racial stock, predominantly Anglo-Saxon; a common language; a common geographical position; and a common history with its poignant story of tragedy and triumph.

Pubilc opinion in the South is made and controlled by the white people. While each State in the South is responsible for its own legislative enactments, in the present crisis, she should act within the orbit of a policy formulated by organized Regional opinion. Unity of action and unity of purpose are essential in this case. This is mortal combat. The South must speak with one voice. The universal principle of political right in this controversy is powerful enough to form a bond of lasting concord to this end. It has been said that patriotism has always proved the best cordial of humanity and that all the sterner and more robust virtues are developed to the highest degree by its powers.

The Southern Region should provide a central organization as headquarters for the consideration of policy and dissemination of information. This body should be manned by strong men who are astute, that is to say, who are self-reliant, who know what the South wants, what can be done to gain it, and what will be done under a given set of circumstances. They will be removed from languor and timidity on one hand and from feverish and morbid excitement on the other. The South is faced by a highly organized enemy which acts with a singleness of purpose.

4. Limitation on the Powers of Congress

Immediately after the Civil War, Amendments 13, and 15, which prohibited slavery and provided that the power to vote should not be denied on account of race or color, were submitted to the States for ratification. They attracted little attention. But when the 14th Amendment came along it was loaded with dynamite. The Radical Republicans were in control of Congress and they intended to enact legislation under this amendment which would weaken the States and set up a strong central Government in Washington which would take over the jurisdiction of the civil rights of individuals and thereby dominate the South through carpet-bagger-Negro rule. On June 16, 1866, Congress submitted the Fourteenth Amendment to the States for ratification. This required the approval of three-fourths of the States. Each of the former Confederate States, except Tennessee (where public opinion was in fact against the amendment), voted to reject the amendment and ratification was thereby defeated. The amendment had been lawfully submitted and the rejection was lawful under the procedure provided by the Constitution. That should have been the end of the matter. But Congress became infuriated at the failure of the amendment to be ratified and from thenceforth adopted highhanded and extra-legal measures. It took over the Southern States by military occupation, disfranchised the white people and put the ballot into the hands of the Negro—coached by the carpet-baggers. In 1868 the Fourteenth Amendment was resubmitted to the States for ratification and this time it was ratified almost unanimously by the Southern States. The United States Army attended to the details. This last ratification was unlawful and in violation of the Constitution. That is why—insofar as the Negro is concerned—the Fourteenth Amendment has never been of any moral force in the South. It was put into the Constitution at the point of a bayonet.

Congress next proceeded to enact legislation to enforce the amendment. There went to the statute books at this time the Enforcement Act of 1870, the Ku Klux Act of 1871 and the Civil Rights Act of 1875. The first case to reach the Supreme Court in a test of these acts was U. S. v. Cruikshank. This case arose in Louisiana. Cruikshank and a number of other white men broke up by violent means a Negro political meeting. Cruikshank and other whites were arrested, tried in the Federal Court and convicted of the violation of the Enforcement Act of 1870.

The case reached the Supreme Court of the United States in 1876 on appeal. The Court held that Congress of itself had no power, and derived no power from the Fourteenth Amendment, to legislate in respect to the acts of individual persons; that the restrictions of the amendment ran only against action by the State. In this case the State of Louisiana had taken no action. The Court held that whatever crime which may have been committed could only be a violation of the law of the State in respect to which the State courts were open. The Court said:

> "The very highest duty of the States, when they entered into the Union under the Constitution, was to protect all persons within their boundaries in the enjoyment of these unalienable rights."

The Cruikshank case saved the South and saved our Republican form of government. It was strongly and completely confirmed by the Supreme Court in 1883 in the Civil Rights Cases which held that Congress gained "no countenance of authority" from the Fourteenth Amendment to enact laws governing the civil rights of individuals.

From the time of these decisions until 1936—a period of sixty years—there was peace in the South between the two races. However, during the latter part of this period, large numbers of Negroes moved North to such cities as Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia and New York. Here they gradually developed political power under the simple qualification of manhood suffrage. They developed local leadership. The Association for the Advancement of the Colored People was organized in New York. It became a nationwide organization with chapters all over the country, including the South. It entered politics. The Association and all of its subsidiaries and affiliates went over to the Democratics Party in 1936, and there, with the support of Northern Democrats, successfully—although indirectly—challenged the South. The Convention's two-thirds rule was abolished, the South thereby losing its traditional veto over the nomination. The South was thereafter unable to make any show of strength to recover her former position.

As a result of this development, the Negro leaders began to agitate for a reversal of the Supreme Court's position on civil rights as embodied in Cruikshank and the Civil Rights Cases. They planned to ask for new civil rights legislation by Congress with a view to having it confirmed by the Supreme Court. The core of this movement was the Truman Civil Rights Program which has now been reintroduced in the 83rd Congress as a somewhat obverse side to the then pending segregation cases.

5. The Opinion of the Court

The Court, by unanimous opinion, reversed Plessy v. Ferguson, the case which in 1896 held that segregation was not a violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment if the facilities offered were equal though separate. This doctrine of "separate but equal" had held sway for 58 years. It had been the basis of public school policy throughout the Southern Region. The Court did not make a constitutional exposition of this radical change of its position. It relied upon social and psychological considerations. It found that segregation had a tendency "to retard the educational and mental development of Negro children. Whatever may have been the extent of psychological knowledge at the time of Plessy v. Ferguson, this finding is amply supported by modern authority. Any language in Plessy v. Ferguson contrary to this finding is rejected." (The language of Plessy v. Ferguson which the Court now rejects reads as follows: "Legislation is powerless to eradicate racial instincts or to abolish distinctions based upon physical differences, and the attempt to do so can only result in accentuating the difficulties of the present situation. If one race be inferior to the other socially, the Constitution of the United States cannot put them upon the same plans.")

The "modern" authorities cited by the Court were not jurists or court decisions but seven psychologists and sociologists taking—God save the mark—Gunnar Mydral's, An American Dilemma as the principal authority! (See No. 9 post.)

6. The Court Invaded the Province of Congress

The legislative power of the Federal Government is vested by the Constitution exclusively in the Congress of the United States. If the Supreme Court hands down an opinion or issues a decree of general application to the whole United States, which has the effect of an Act of Congress, it thereby exceeds the powers conferred upon it by the Constitution and invades the powers of the Legislative Branch.

In such a case the Court moves out into the field of national policy and politics. This it has now done in these integration cases. It has flagrantly attempted to pre-empt the whole field of policy and administration of the public school system of the States. The opinion is a political opinion and the decree, when it is drafted, will constitute, not a judicial act but an act of public administration beyond the lawful reach of the Supreme Court. That the Court intends, by its action in these cases, to create a new national policy in race relations and to provide for its administration, is clear from the language of the opinion. The Court said: "We hold that the plaintiffs and others similarly situated for whom the actions have been brought." * * * and again: "Because these are class actions, because of the wide applicability of this decision, and because of the great variety of local conditions, the formulation of decrees in these cases presents problems of considerable complexity." The Court then announced that it would restore the cases to the docket to hear argument upon the questions of the implemenation of the opinion. It has invited the Attorney General of the United States to participate (although the United States is not a party to the litigation) and the white Attorneys General of the Southern States—the latter in effect, to participate in the South's own funeral. Oral argument is now set for December 6, 1954. The Federal Government has no jurisdiction over State educational policy or over the administration of the State public schools. Congress cannot enter this field. But here the Supreme Court itself at the head of the Judicial Branch of the Federal Government has rushed in where neither of the other two branches can go and is attempting to set up a new and unheard of national policy in this field which is designed to revolutionize and coerce the human behavior of about forty million white people and ten million Negroes with the dictum that Negroes and whites are not only equal but are racially identical. If the Supreme Court succeeds in this effort the Constitutional Republic is dead and the Constitution itself has become a tattered scrap of paper. The implications and potentialities of this action by the Court staggers the imagination. If the Court can thus take possession of the lives of the people of the whole Southern Region and doom them to racial oblivion, there is no limit to which the Court can go in any direction.

The second hearing before the Court was supposed to be based upon a series of formal questions propounded by the Court to counsel. They dealt principally with the history of the Fourteenth Amendment in relation to the public schools. The briefs and arguments were limited to these questions. A prodigious amount of research was done on both sides in briefs running over 200 printed pages, yet the Court completely abandoned its questions and decided the cases on psychological grounds using Gunnar Myrdal as the principal authority. Myrdal's theories were not involved in the questions propounded by the Court neither were they touched upon by counsel except in one instance. In Thurgood Marshall's brief there appears this sentence:

> "Sensitive leaders soon found themselves confronted with what Gunnar Myrdal treated recently as An American Dilemma. (2 vols., 1944.)"

7. The Sphere of State Power

The unit of power in our Republic is the State. The States were in existence as sovereign political bodies prior to the formation of the Union. They met in Convention, adopted a written Constitution under which was set up a Federal Government of enumerated and delegated powers. The powers not granted to the Federal Government were reserved to the States. The guiding principle was local self-government at the State and county level.

The States never had any intention of losing control of the power to govern their own citizens and to provide for the protection of their fundamental rights. The State made provision for their education and for the method by which they would be taught. Nothing is more intimate to a State than her educational system. Any interference with it by the Federal Government would violate the most fundamental principle of our Constitutional Republic and plant the seeds for its destruction. These cases, here under discussion, strike at the heart of the States. The opinion lays the basis for a centralized Federal coercive power which would leave the States to exist in name only. No other single act of the Government in the history of our country has been fraught with greater danger to the existence of the Union.

8. Segregation Cannot Be Abolished

Segregation is inherent to the fundamental mores of the South.

John Temple Graves, a warm friend of the Negro, in 1942 warned the Negroes that there was no hope for them unless they were able to get along with the white men of the South. (Virginia Quarterly, Autumn, 1942.)

Mark Ethridge, the first chairman of the FEPC, and a white Deep South friend of the Negro, gave the following warning at a meeting of the FEPC in Birmingham in 1942, namely: "There is no power in the world—not even in all of the mechanized armies of the earth—which could now force the Southern white people to abandonment of the principle of social segregation. It is a cruel disallusionment, bearing the germs of strife and perhaps tragedy, for any of their (Negro) leaders to tell them that they exact it as the price of their participation in the War."

The late William Graham Sumner of Yale University in his great works—FOLKWAYS—says that the mores come down to us from the past; that we are born into them and are formed by them before we are old enough to reason about them. When we become conscious of them "we find them facts which already hold us in the bonds of tradition, custom and habit. The mores contain embodied in them, notions, doctrines and maxims, but they are facts." He says that the white people of the South have never been converted from the old mores of that region. "Vain attempts have been made to control the new order by legislation. (Referring to Reconstruction after the Civil War.) The only result is proof that legislation cannot make mores. We see also that mores do not form under convulsion and discord." He points out that arbitrary action on the mores accomplishes little or nothing. The conditions of success lie in the mores. The method must conform to the mores.

The rule is clearly stated in Lanterns on the Levee by William Alexander Percy. He says:

> "In the South the one sacred taboo, assumed to be Southern, but actually and universally Anglo-Saxon, is the untouchability of white women by Negro men. It is academic to argue the wisdom or justice of this taboo. Wise or unwise, just or unjust, it is the cornerstone of friendly relations, of interracial peace. It has not been the eleventh, but the first commandment. Even to question it means the shattering of race relations into hideous and bloody ruin. The whites make outcasts of their white women who have violated this taboo, sometimes punishing them as grossly as they punish the offending Negro. Never are they accepted even in the lowest stratum of white society." (P. 308.)

My final testimonial comes from an unexpected source, Hodding Carter, a fellow Mississippian of Alexander Percy, but a Southern "liberal" of outstanding national reputation and Pulitzer Prize winner for tolerance on the Negro question. When he came to write his autobiography he came down to earth and struck at the heart of the principle of race relations in the South. He says: "The ultimate issue . . . is essentially sexual in nature and cannot be ridiculed away, or legislated out of existence. . . . I share this insistence upon sexual separteness, for I can see no good coming out of blood fusion for the white and Negro people of the United States." (See review of Where Main Street Meets the River (by Hodding Carter) by John Temple Graves in the Freeman for August 24, 1953.)

9. Influence of Gunnar Myrdal on Negro Thought and Upon the Supreme Court of the United States

The effort toward racial integration on the part of the Negro is of recent origin. The old fight was designed to implement the "separate but equal" rule to better advantage for the Negro. But the Carnegie Corporation of New York had always professed a deep interest in Negro welfare and it decided to give the whole race relations in the South a "new look." In 1937 the Corporation brought over from Sweden Dr. Gunnar Myrdal, professor in the University of Stockholm. He was described by the Corporation as a "social economist" and an economic adviser to the Swedish Government and member of the Swedish Senate. He called himself a "social engineer." He was a socialist and had no knowledge of the Negro question in the United States. He was asked to make a thorough investigation of race relations in this country; was given an ample staff and funds for that purpose. He was told to publish his findings solely upon his own responsibility. On this project Dr. Myrdal naturally found himself largely in the company of the Negro leaders. After six years he came up with a two volume work of 1,500 pages: An American Dilemma (Harpers, 1944). His solution was racial integration because he held there is no such thing as race. However the author hedged himself in with so many self-imposed restrictions—"value premises"—that the book has no scientific validity. But as propaganda it became the bible of the educated Negro. It had strong financial sponsorship and has been widely circulated. But neither the Carnegie Corporation nor Myrdal dreamed that this book would be cited by the Supreme Court as the principal authority for Federal enforcement of racial integration in the public schools.

About this time the University of North Carolina Press requested a number of Negro leaders to join in writing a symposium—What the Negro Wants—the idea being to represent right wing, middle and left wing points of view. When the book came out it appeared that all of the writers had gone over to Gunnar Myrdal. Some Negro leaders say the manuscript would have been rejected had they not threatened a lawsuit over the contract. Mr. W. T. Couch, head of University of North Carolina Press, took issue with his Negro writers and condemned Myrdal in the following terms: "I believe that An American Dilemma was written under gross misapprehension of what such ideas as equality, freedom, democracy, human rights, have meant, and of what they can be made to mean. I believe the small measure of these gained by western man is in serious danger of destruction by widespread misunderstanding of the kind represented in An American Dilemma."

The Supreme Court reversed Plessy v. Ferguson not on legal or constitutional grounds but upon the authority of "modern" psychology and sociology—openly and frankly and unanimously. It cited seven recent works, dating from 1944 to 1952. Senator Eastland, in his masterful address to the Senate, in which he brilliantly challenged the opinion of the Court, on May 27, 1954, as a matter of emphasis to his address, obtained the consent of the Senate to print these references in the Congressional Record. Six of these citations were page references. The seventh and last to be cited was no other than Gunnar Myrdal, An American Dilemma and the whole book is cited "generally." It was the chief authority for the reversal of Plessy. What have we come to when a fund corporation can hire a foreigner to write a phony book about the Negro and then see the Supreme Court puts its recommendations into effect!

Myrdal himself frankly expressed his total ignorance of the Negro question in the United States. Every position he took in his book was prefaced by a carefully formulated value premise. He was a pure theorist and his 1,500 page work is speculative to the nth degree. I paid my respects to Myrdal in Whiter Solid South? (Chapter IV, p. 54-57.)

10. "And See Generally Myrdal, An American Dilemma (1944)."

(1) In the above quoted language Myrdal is cited as the leading authority for the most revolutionary decision ever made by the Supreme Court of the United States. In the first place Myrdal is not the author of the book. It is a Carnegie Corporation project. Between seventy-five and one hundred anti-Southern writers—many of them Negroes such as Ralph Bunche and Walter White—spent about six years working up this propaganda against the South. Four books were published out of this project by Harper Brothers from 1941 to 1943 and thirty-five research manuscripts were written and deposited in the Schomburg Collection of the New York Public Library. Myrdal and his immediate assistants put together An American Dilemma from this mass of material. This book was never intended to be an investigation of the Negro problem in the United States. The project ignored the squalor of Harlem, Detroit, Chicago, Philadelphia and other Northern cities with large Negro populations. The first thing Myrdal did when he came to this country was to make a tour of the South. The purpose of the Carnegie Corporation of New York was to prepare a brief for racial integration in the South.

(2) Mr. F. P. Keppel, President of the Carnegie Corporation of New York, wrote a Foreword to An American Dilemma. In it he said: "Though he has achieved an extraordinary mastery of the English language, Dr. Myrdal is not writing in his mother tongue. Here and there it may lead to the possibility of some misunderstanding of some word or some phrase. This is a risk that has been deliberately taken." (by the Corporation—not Myrdal) * * * "I venture to close these introductory paragraphs with a personal word dealing with a matter upon which Dr. Myrdal himself has touched upon in his preface, but which I feel moved to state in my own words. It is inevitable that many a reader will find in the (two) volumes statements and conclusions to which he strongly objects, he be white or colored, Northerner or Southerner. May I urge upon each such reader that he make every effort to react to these statements intellectually and not emotionally. This advice I realize, is much more easy to give than to follow, but it is given with a serious purpose. The author is under no delusions of omniscience; as a scholar, he is used to taking hard knocks as well as giving them and he will be the first to welcome challenges as to the accuracy of any data he has presented, the soundness of any general conclusions he has reached, and the relative weight assigned by him to any factor or factors in the complicated picture he draws. Criticism and correction on these lines would add greatly to the value of the whole undertaking." (P. VIII.) This was written on December 15, 1942. This was the book cited as the principal authority by the unanimous opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States to force racial integration upon the Southern States!

(3) Dr. Myrdal states in his preface that when he found out the seriousness of the task before him he proposed to Mr. Keppel that a committee be appointed comprised of one white Southerner, one white Northerner and one Negro to advise him. Mr. Keppel rejected this proposal and said what he wanted was a scholarly appraisal by a "fresh mind." Dr. Myrdal says further: "The author fully realizes, and hopes the reader will remember, that he has never been subject to the strains involved in living in a black-white society and never has had to become adjusted to such a situation—and that this condition was the very reason why he was asked to undertake the work. He was requested to see things as a stranger. Indeed he was asked to be both the subject and the object of a cultural experiment in the field of social science."

Dr. Myrdal protected his ignorance of the American scene through an elaborate system of value premises. The methodology of this system is explained in detail in his appendix No. 2 (Pp. 1035-1064). He says that they must be purposively selected. They cannot be self-evident or generally valid. They can only have an hypothetical character. (Emphis his.) "The scientific basis for constructing our 'field of valuations' is poor. Public opinion in respect to the Negro problem has not been studied much, and the studies made do not meet our requirements. For the most part we have been forced to base our generalization on impressionistic observation of the values held by different groups and individuals." (P. 1061.)

"The value-loaded terms have a meaning and represent a theoretical approach itself is determined by the evaluations inherent in the governing ethos of a society." Upon this theory he concocts an over-all value judgment for his whole work. It is called the "American Creed." It is not a document and cannot be reduced to writing. It is his conception of the national conscience of the United States. It is composed of Christian precepts, the spirit of the English Common Law, the dignity of man, the brotherhood of man, equality of all men, democracy and the right of equal participation in economic and social life. Now this so-called Creed exists only in Dr. Myrdal's psychological speculation. But he imputes it to every Southerner and measures every phase of Southern life against it. He finds that the South does not live up to the American Creed in respect to the Negro. Therefore the South is suffering from a guilty conscience in respect to the Negro. He says of the book An American Dilemma: "We have organized this book around a set of valuations which we have called the 'American Creed'."

So it turns out that the Carnegie Corporation of New York produced through Myrdal the American Creed and the Supreme Court of the United States has employed it to accomplish integration of the races in the South!

Is it to be supposed that the members of the Supreme Bench read the forty-five chapters of Myrdal's two volume work with its ten appendices and two hundred and fifty-eight pages of footnotes? If they did it seems incredible that they could have brought themselves to cite it as an authority. The author himself is at great pains to say that his value premises were hypothetical and theoretical and were arbitrarily selected by him. In other words they are without authority. He says further that on account of the complications and difficulties attendant upon the Negro problem, to draw up adequate value premises, to relate them to relevant facts and to work out practical programs "is a task which cannot be accomplished within the confines of present research resouces." (Appendix 2, p. 1062.)

10. Segregation Follows Natural Law

The Negro had no part in the rise and development of civilization on the planet Earth. He came on at a later date. The great American historian and Egyptologist, James Henry Breasted, (under whom I had the privilege of doing graduate work) in his Conquest of Civilization (1926) laid the place on Earth where civilization originated in what he called "The Great Northwest Quadrant." This area takes in all of Europe, all of Africa north of the Sahara, with an eastern boundary of the Ural Mountains with a line extending from them down to the Indian Ocean. In addition to Europe and North Africa, it also embraces what is known as the Near East. This is the original home of what Breasted calls "The Great White Race." Of this he says: "The population of the Great Northwest Quadrant, from the Stone Age onward, has been a race of white men of varying physical type. The evolution of civilization has been the Achievement of this Great White Race. In the territory adjoining the Northwest Quadrant there are only two other clearly differentiated races, the Mongoloid and the Negroid." The Mongoloids did not "develop a civilization until long after it was far advanced in the Northwest Quadrant. On the South of the Northwest Quadrant lay the teeming black world of Africa, separated from the Great White Race by an impassible desert barrier, the Sahara. Isolated thus and at the same time unfitted by ages of tropical life for any effective intrusion among the White Race, the Negro and the Negroid peoples remained without any influence on the development of early civilization." (Chapters V to VII.)

Along this same line and supporting Breasted, the Harvard University Press brought out in 1948 an authoritative work—Human Ancestry—by Professor Ruggles Gates of London University. Dr. Gates is a renowned geneticist. He was invited by Harvard University to take a position as Research Fellow in Biology to examine and report on the tremendous number of primitive human remains—skulls, bones, teeth and artifacts—discovered within recent years, especially in South Africa and the caves of France and China. This book is the result of his researches and conclusions.

He found (pp. 366-367) that the members of the human race appeared on earth at different times and on different continents. He discards the old theory that all human beings are descended from a common ancestor. This is the doctrine of Homo Sapiens. He says that this doctrine was never scientifically determined to be a fact. He holds that, except for two species of Negro now nearly extinct (the aboriginal Australian and the bushman of the Cape of South Africa), there are on earth today three distinct species of man, namely: Homo Caucasicus (the white man); Homo Mongoloideus (the yellow man); and Homo Africanus (the Negro). Dr. Gates holds that the Negro was the last to appear—centuries after the white man—and that he is closer to the anthropoid ape from which he sprung.

Nature has therefore marked the Negro and set him apart from the white man. The rejection of Homo Sapiens eliminates the political doctrine of equality of races and governments and destroys the basic principle upon which the United Nations is founded. It should be remembered that this doctrine against Homo Sapiens comes from Harvard University which is a hotbed of anti-Southern Negro pretensions. For this reason, Southerners—whether or not they follow Gates on evolution—are justified in using this argument as an admission against interest and as argumentum ad hominem. The Gates theory is based upon the scientific doctrine of the evolution of life on earth from lower to higher forms. However, this theory may be entirely disregarded in the consideration of the question here discussed. It takes no expert to see at a glance the physical differences between the Negro and the white man. Intellectually and spiritually there is no comparison between the two. Strictly speaking the proper place to make the comparison is in the jungles of Africa. The American Negro, by virtue of his short accidental sojourn in this country, has taken on a veneer of our way of life, but he is still rooted in the mores of his ancestors in the savage jungle life.

11. Private Schools

The Court has ruled that segregation in the public schools of a State is a violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The least complicated way out would seem to be for the State to abolish the public school system. It should be noted that such an act would automatically eliminate compulsory education in the State. Citizens of the State could then proceed to the creation of private schools. These would be beyond the reach of the Federal Government. Of course there exist many private schools in every State in the South at the present time so the idea is not new. Private schools would take education out of politics and would diversify it. However, to establish private schools of general application throughout the State, would require a system of financing. There is discussion going on that the State could lend the money or in some other way pay the expenses. In my opinion, if the States give any aid to these schools, directly or indirectly, the Supreme Court would declare the school system to be an agency or instrumentality of the State and therefore subject to the decree. It seems to me that the umbilical cord which connects the school system with the taxing power of the State would have to be cut asunder. However, as a matter of tactics in this fight, time may be gained by accepting State aid and let the question go to the Supreme Court for a new decision and then go on from there. If a non-compulsory, self-supporting, private school system is put into operation, the State would be relieved of the entire financial burden of the school budget. Taxes could be reduced by that amount. A way would have to be found for the taxpayer to turn these taxes into the private school fund. The private educational fund would no doubt be in the custody of a corporation or a board of trustees under a charter and by-laws. I suppose that in these days of the industrialization of the South, the largest taxpayers are corporations. When the State would no longer tax for education, the taxes on these corporations could be reduced in proportion to its contribution to the school budget. The exact amount could be ascertained and the corporation in question voluntarily turn it over to the fund. The same would be true of individuals. Regional public opinion would no doubt facilitate this process.

12. Let the Negroes Educate Themselves

The Negro leaders in New York are boasting that they will now erase the last vestige of discrimination left by the Civil War. They think that this new application of Federal coercion will put the Negro in the South, in every respect, on a plane of equality with the white people. It was these New York Negroes who started this fight for integration in the South. They will have to take their medicine. Under a private system of education for white pupils only, the white people of the South would certainly be under no moral or legal obligation to support Negro private schools. The Negroes would have to educate themselves. No compulsion by the State or by the Federal Government could require the white people to support the Negro private schools. It has been estimated that the white taxpayers in the South pay about 94% of the public schools budget.

13. A Regional Cold War

This question did not arise in this controversy, but it should be borne in mind because it supports the Cruikshank case and may otherwise prove useful. In the McLaurin case (decided June 5, 1950) the late Chief Justice Vinson, in an obiter dictum, made an important observation. This was the case which admitted McLaurin, a Negro, to the graduate school of the University of Oklahoma over the protest of the State authorities. In handing down the opinion of the Court he said, in effect, that the Negro, after the abolition of segregation, might find himself no better off than he was before; "He still may be set apart by his fellow students" and nothing can be done about it. "There is," he said, "a vast difference—a Constitutional difference—between restrictions imposed by the State which prevent the intellectual commingling of students, and the refusal of individuals to commingle where the State presents no such bar."

This principle could easily be put into organized effect in high school, college, and university and thereby make life miserable for the Negro. In the primary schools the parents would teach their children how to act.

14. To "Schools of Their Choice"

One of the questions raised by the Supreme Court was whether the Court should decree that "Negro children should forthwith be admitted to schools of their choice." If left to themselves in the South, I think the Negroes would prefer their own schools and their own Negro teachers. The fight on segregation in the South stems from New York City. After the decree of the Court is promulgated, the first step of the South should be to attempt to induce the local Negro leaders to choose to take their own schools and teachers. If the Negroes are prudent, and the decree permits it, this is the choice they would make. This would make a cold war unnecessary and would preserve the traditional cordial relations between the races which has always been a feature of the civilization of the Southern Region.

15. If Worse Comes to Worst

The Negroes seem to be in this fight to the bitter end. If it turns out that there is no conventional way for the Souh to protect herself, there is one final weapon in her hands. It is secret organization. The South in her weakness after the devastation of the Civil War had the will to use this method to drive the carpet-baggers back across the Mason and Dixon line. The best men in the South manned these organizations. It may become necessary to revive them. (But not the Ku Klux for reasons.) Look up the fair record of the Knights of the White Camelia. Be ashamed of yourself for the remarks you made on January 1st. and as head of that infamous band of traitors to the South! You are the father of a mulatto family, as is well known in South Carolina! and you are not fit, or welcome, to live in that proud State!

How dare you speak of the honorable and most distinguished Governor Byrnes, in such a way! You DOG! The (so-called) Supreme Court of the United States is full of contemptible politicians - and will soon be made to know its proper place, by Congress!

You and your kind had best get out of the South while the getting is good - for we loyal Southerners intend to run you out! - do you understand?

Only men who keep nigger "wives" act and speak, as you did, in the South - Get out - or you'll wish you had! Nigger lover!

The Ku Klux Klan is not dead, as you seem to think, by coming to live in North Carolina!

But Southerners of the right stripe do not need them to solve the South's problems. Nor will we tolerate your "Regional Council"- Traitors!

THE RACE PROBLEM AND THE CLERGY

Dr. W. C. George reports that about 350 communications have been received supporting the petition asking for continued separation of schools for white and Negro pupils. A few letters have been received condemning it. One from a divinity student urged withdrawal of the petition. Among other objections, he disapproved of the sentence that reads: "In as much as a careful reading of the New Testament reveals that Christ never said one word about the race problem, we deplore the efforts of some people to identify a program of racial integration with Christianity." And he raised the question: "Is it really significant that Christ said nothing about the race problem? . . . Our task is to see how the ethic that he lived and taught should be interpreted and applied in new situations."

Since this young preacher apparently represents a point of view common in divinity schools and among the clergy, it probably should have a public answer. The answer is that it makes a great deal of difference whether we teach as Christianity what Christ said or what ecclesiastical politicians say. Furthermore, attempting to interpret Christ's ethic is one thing. Making final judgments on complex human problems on the basis of little information or understanding is quite another.

Ministers have gone much further than raise the question of ethics. Without seeming to understand or even to be aware of very fundamental matters, they have promoted a rash of resolutions declaring that separation of the races is "unChristian" and they have promoted social revolution.

Attempts to exercise temporal power do not make ministers more worthy or more effective spiritual ambassadors of Christ. Doing wrong in Christ's name and calling it "applied Christianity" does not make it right. It merely compounds the wrong.

Those ministers who are tempted to make dogmatic statements and decisions about worldly matters based on their interpretation of the scriptures and try to impose "the Christian position" on the people would do well to read and ponder the sentence imposed on Galileo for proving that the earth is not the center of the universe. It reads in part as follows:

"We say, pronounce, sentence, declare that you, the said Galileo, by reason of the matters adduced in this trial, and by you confessed as above, have rendered yourself in the judgment of this Holy Office vehemently suspected of heresy, namely of having believed and held the doctrine—which is false and contrary to the sacred and divine scriptures—that the Sun is the center of the World and does not move from east to west, and that the Earth moves and is not the center of the World. . . . And that consequently you have incurred all the censures and penalties imposed and promulgated in the sacred cannons and other constitutions, general and particular, against such delinquents. . . ."

The Race Problem From the Standpoint of One Who Is Concerned About the Evils of Miscegenation

By

W. C. GEORGE*

There is a widespread campaign to break down our barriers of custom and law that are intended to prevent miscegenation and the hybridization of America. This campaign is promoted in part by people who sincerely believe that they are doing God's will; also by people who have no regard for God's will but are merely seeking to gain publicity or political advantage. The fundamental issues involved are commonly ignored, and the arguments used are largely political and quasi-religious slogans.

One of the current and probably most effective propaganda lines is built up around the "Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man" motif. Concerning this I will content myself here with recalling to your minds that God made the races different and first segregated them. It requires the presentation of better reasons than have heretofore been advanced before we are justified in declaring that God's original policy of separation of the races should be abandoned. One of the favorite scriptural quotations of those who oppose the separation of the races is: "And hath made of one blood all nations of men." They stop there without quoting the remainder of the sentence, which really reads: "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the time before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation." (Acts 17, 26.)

Many sincere people have been misled by specious and false arguments and by appeals to their generous impulses into an acceptance of the thesis that we should eliminate all of our laws and customs intended to maintain separation of the white and Negro races in social relations. The purpose of this discourse is to point out the falsity of the arguments and conclusions of the proponents of racial intermingling and to explain why the inauguration of policies promoting social intermingling of the races and miscegenation would be furthering the deterioration of our race and our civilization and is, therefore, essentially unrighteous.

PAGINATION INCORRECT

In propaganda lectures, sermons, and published articles dealing with the race problem, the expression, "all men are created equal," is bandied around very loosely. If by "equal" is meant equal in their fundamental right to justice, then intelligent, fair, and honest men can agree to the quotation; but when the expression is used to imply equality in the biological sense, a more false statement is difficult to conceive. Biologically, instead of being equal individuals range at birth all the way from scarcely more than mere blobs of protoplasm to potential physical giants and intellectual geniuses.

In this discussion we can start out probably in agreement upon the general statement that any particular individual is the product of his genetic constitution (i.e., his heredity), nurtured and modified by the influence of his environment. We may differ as to the relative value we place upon genetic constitution and environment. Either consciously or unconsciously the supporters of a policy of racial amalgamation place a high value on the part played by environment in the making of an individual, and they tend to discount heredity. I hope to show you that the value of environment is overemphasized by these people and the potency of heredity underemphasized.

Let us see what two or three reputable and critical scholars have to say about this. Professor Charles A. Berger, of Fordham University, writing in Scientific Aspects of the Race Problem (published by the Catholic University of America Press) says: "We may safely state that most, if not all, psychic characters are deeply influenced both by the genetic constitution and by the environment."

Professor H. S. Jennings, the distinguished Head of the Department of Zoology of Johns Hopkins University until his retirement, and now Research Professor at the University of California, says in the same book: ". . . it is clearly proved that the following types of characterstics depend on the nature of the chromosomal material borne by the individual (that is, on his 'heredity'):

> "Sex, color of eyes and hair, complexion, form of the features, form and distribution of the hair, finger prints and palm and sole patterns, structure and form of the hands and feet, form of the body (stoutness, slenderness, stature, and the like), chemical composition of the blood, the blood types, the glandular types to which individuals belong, the senses and their efficiency, efficiency of the brain, vigor and weakness of the constitution, susceptibility and immunity to various diseases, and many other physical and physiological peculiarities."

How real is this matter of inheritance in our own experience? You are all aware of the reality of family resemblances, and those of us who are older see over and over again our friends reappearing in their children—not only their physical features, but their psychological, temperamental and moral qualities. You are even more strikingly aware of the breed characteristics of size, shape, color, etc., of cocker spaniels, police dogs, collies, dachshunds, etc.; and you recognize that these characteristics are inherent in their genetic constitution; i.e., they are transmitted from generation to generation. The list of heritable qualities is not limited to such gross structural features as size, shape and color. As indicated in the quotation from Dr. Jennings, it includes many intimate features. The courage of a bulldog and the timidity of a rabbit are not environmental accidents. Neither are generations of greatness in the Adams family, or generations of crime, poverty and imbecility in such families as the Kalikaks, incidents of circumstance—although I am ready to admit that accidents of fortune do sometimes greatly alter the course of events, both in the greatly endowed and in the poorly endowed.

One of my neighbors and I are both cattle farmers. The difference between us is that he has a fine herd of thoroughbred Jersey cows that he keeps in well-fenced pastures and breeds to carefully selected thoroughbred Jersey bulls, whereas I have only grade cows in my herd, and that herd is sometimes contaminated by having another neighbor's Hereford bull break down our poor fences and visit at will. We have both observed the re-emergence of heritable qualities through generations of cattle. As I observed my animals through succeeding generations, I have been impressed with the recurrence of qualities of temperatment, character and social behavior as well as structural features and qualities of milk production. It can scarcely be contended that these differences in character and social behavior that appear in some lines generation after generation are due to differences in environment or opportunity since all animals run in the same pastures and receive essentially the same treatment. It is well recognized by cattlemen that different breeds of cattle (Jersey, Hereford, Angus, e.g.) have personality traits just as they have physical traits and physiological traits.

You may not have had an intimate acquaintance with cattle, but many of you have observed dogs and cats. You may know the nervousness of the Pekingese and the terriers, the stolid qualities of the St. Bernard, the aloofness of the police dogs, the alert intelligence and affection of the Cocker Spaniel. You know also the inherent qualities of cleanliness of the cat and the greed and dirtiness of the hog. Could there be any question in your mind that these are heritable qualities and not the result of environment or educational opportunity? You can teach things to cows and dogs and cats and hogs, but the fundamental racial and individual qualities are there in the fertilized eggs from which they came. The leopard cannot change his spots, nor can the Ethiopian change his skin or his genetic constiution.

In formulating our social policies for humanity, we cannot afford to make the mistake of assuming that humans have any less definitely heritable individual and racial qualities than lower animals have. The influence of heredity may be less clear-cut in the case of individuals in the heterogeneous assemblage of interbreeding individuals that make up the human population than it is in pure breeds of dogs and cattle. The hereditary base is still there, however, and it is inexorable in its influence on the future of men and of races.

This power of heredity in humans is most clearly and precisely demonstrated in studies of one-egg twins. The physical likeness of individuals within pairs of one-egg twins is common knowledge. The deep-seated nature of the similarities is not so generally appreciated. It is of great significance that numerous studies and reports establish a high degree of concordance within such pairs of twins in the occurrence of anomalies; the development of tumors; the incidence of disease; the similarities in electrocardiograms and electroencephalograms, which are highly individual records of the fundamental behavior of heart and brain; and similarities in physiological behavior. These similarities cannot in any large degree be ascribed to similarities in environment because they occur in one-egg twins separated at birth and raised in different environments. Furthermore, it is known that two-egg twins raised together grow steadily more unlike in spite of the similarities of environment, while one-egg twins raised apart remain closely similar.

Psychological and intelligence tests of twins, within pairs of one-egg twins, show a high degree of concordance from the upper levels of intelligence down to the grossly mentally deficient. It has been obobserved from these studies that mental ability appears to be inherited to about the same extent as physical traits. Statistical analyses have been made of data obtained from a large number of twins, including fifty pairs of two-egg twins reared together, fifty pairs of one-egg twins reared together, and twenty pairs of one-egg twins reared apart. These analyses lead to the conclusion that physical characters and mental ability are more influenced by heredity than they are by environment; that motor activity and emotional balance are more influenced by environment than are physical characteristics and mental ability; and that environment plays a marked role in determining the results obtained from educational performance tests.

Does heredity have anything to do with moral qualities and character? I know of studies of criminality in 151 pairs of twins, one or both of whom had criminal careers. The concordance, including similarities in types of crimes committed and age of commission, was much higher among one-egg twins than among two-egg twins. That the similarities in criminal histories in one-egg twins is due to hereditary composition is indicated by the fact that there was no greater resemblance in criminal careers among those who remained in the same community than among those who were geographically separated at the time they began their criminal careers and by the fact that the ratio of concordance to discordance in criminal careers is nearly four times as high among one-egg twins as among two-egg twins.

What does all this material about twins have to do with the race problem? I cite this evidence not to deny the importance of environment and education in developing our innate genetic qualities, but to show the fallacy of the conception that all men are born equal biologically and to show the fallacy in the doctrine that all that is needed to bring about universal equality in merit and achievement is to provide equally beneficient environment for all.

The public is being bombarded more or less persistently with the suggestion and the positive statement that the races are all equal and that the only real difference between the white man and the Negro is the color of their skin. As pointed out a few minutes ago, we become aware, when we recall our ordinary personal observations concerning breeds of dogs and cattle, that physiological and personality traits, as well as anatomical features, appear to be associated with different breeds or races. The general consistency in nature would lead us to suppose that the same situation occurs in the human species. But let us examine the evidence and the opinions of critical observers. Ales Hrdlicka (1941), the distinguished anthropologist of the United States National Museum, has this to say:

> "Races, therefore, are not and cannot be identical, and this applies more or less to all their qualities, physical, physiological and intellectual." P.167.

> "The Australian—or Australo-Tasmanian—is a remnant of a once much larger stock of old, doubtless, paleolithic, derivation. It is in anachronism, does not fit well modern humanity . . ." P. 178.

Of the Negroid stem he says: ". . . . the Bushmen, of probably two varieties and the Hottentots, are related, degenerate and petering-out old strains; the Negroes proper, a relatively late development, are represented by a number of varieties, such as the Zulu-Kaffirs, the Nilotics, and probably also the Senegalese, and others as yet not well determined." Pp. 184-185.

The statement on the Negro in the Encyclopaedia Britannica lists a number of the physical charactristics of the race. Also, Wingate Todd, the British-born and reared Professor of Anatomy and Directortor of the Haman Museum of Western Reserve University, and perhaps our leading student of anthropometry, points out some of the anatomical features of the Negro race. I'll not bore you with the technical details. Those interested can find them in Professor Todd's paper in the report of the National Research Council on the Conference on Racial Differences.

When competent observers look sharply enough, racial differences are found to exhibit themselves in many ways other than normal anatomical features. Raymond Pearl (1928, p. 22), Professor at Hopkins School of Public Health, and perhaps our leading student of vital statistics, states that "there are distinct differences between racial groups in this country relative to the incidence of certain diseases." For insance, he points out, on the basis of extensive studies, that cancer is lower in the colored man than in the white and that there are racial features in the details of distribution of cancers in the body.

As we justified in considering that races differ fundamentally in other ways than in color, normal anatomy, and pathology? Are they to be looked upon as different, but equal in ability and achievement?

Recently I heard a preacher state in a sermon that "science" has proved that the races are equal. Science has proved no such thing. Pretty much all of the evidence gathered, as well as our common experience, indicates the opposite, on the basis of our ordinary standards. I am not sure, however, that science can either prove or disprove that the white man is either superior or inferior or equal to the Negro. Questions of definitions and standards would first have to be settled.

It seems fairly evident to me, however, on the basis of the standards of our "white civilization" that the Negro race is inferior to the white race in capacity to develop and maintain a civilization. Let's look at the evidence. In a recent article, obviously pro-Negro in tone and intent, Professor McCormick (1945) of the University of Wisconsin states: "The best tests that have been devised by psychologists to date fail to show that the Negro measures up to the white on the average in mental performance; but they do show beyond question that some Negroes are more intelligent than many whites." Again, Franz Boas (1940), whose general bias is towards minimizing the significance of race, states: "There have been many comparative tests of intelligence of individuals of various European types and of Europeans and Negroes. North Europeans tested in our country were found as a whole decidedly superior to south Europeans; Europeans as a whole, to Negroes."

According to Professor Bonger (1943) of the Netherlands, the U. S. Army tests show that the level of intelligence of the Negro is roughly 25 per cent lower than that of the whites. The author seems prejudiced against the reality of racial differences in intelligence, and after making explanations for the data, says: ". . . One still gets the impression—although without complete certainty—that the inherent intelligence of the Negro is less than that of the white man. Serious, unprejudiced writers such as Hankins, Dowd, Viteles, Garth and Peters come to this conclusion." P. 51.

In a book, Temperament and Race (1926), by S. D. Porteus and Marjorie E. Babcock, Director of Research and Psychologists at the Vineland, New Jersey, school for the feebleminded, the authors present some interesting and significant data. For example, they record the average brain weight of various races of man. The Caucasian stands at the top with an average brain weight of 1,335 grammes, and the Australian aboriginal at the bottom with 1,185 grammes. Next to the Australian aboriginal is the Negro with 1,244 grammes. I am not yet convinced myself that brain weight is a really significant factor in intelligence; but Porteus and Babcock state: "As far as our observations go, the order of brain weights of these races would be the same order as regards educational and general aptitudes" (p. 146); and they point out that studies made on the brain capacity of the feebleminded show that there does exist in general a close connection between brain size and inelligence. (P. 148.) On page 206, they state: "For such a race as the Negro, it can be accepted without question that there is a greater proportion at any given (social) level of inferior attainments than there is of whites." After citing various tests, they say on page 207: "These studies show that the Negro actually belongs, as far as all-round ability goes, to an inferior race." They also point out that comparison of the white draftees with the colored as regards performance in the Army tests, showed that the median score of the colored was more than 2½ years below the median score of the whites.

Admitting the imperfections in any and all tests and testers, there is no escaping the fact that there is a more impressive body of evidence that cries out to us—Stop, Look, and Beware, before encouraging a policy of race amalgamation.

Is there any difference between Negro and whites in social behavior? Anyone who reads the newspapers regularly is likely to be impressed by the large number of cases in which Negroes are reported as involved in crimes. Is this merely an impression growing out of prejudice, or is it founded on truth? Let us look at the record. There is a little book called Race and Crime written by W. A. Bonger, eminent criminologist of the Netherlands, and before his recnt deadth, Professor in the University of Amsterdam. In his book Professor Bonger gives data taken from the United States criminal statistics regarding relative prevalence of crime among different elements of the population. He states: "The criminality among Negroes as shown here (the U. S. Cenus of 1910) is considerably higher than that of the whites."

"The most recent data on the United States, dealing with the first three quarters of 1938, give, in general, a confirmation of the above. There were arrested, per 100,000 of population over the age of 15: 164 whites born out of the United States, 444 whites born in the United States, and 1,175 Negroes." That this is not due to Southern prejudice is indicaed by this statement: "In conclusion, it must be remarked that the criminality of Negroes in the northern states is considerably higher than in the southern states, actually three to one." (P. 44.) Professor Bonger was an eminent exponent of the philosophy that crime is a social and not a biological phenomenon, and his philosophy led him to try to explain away any hereditary significance and to attribute the difference in criminality between races to social and economic factors. His facts are more important than his opinions, however.

I believe that it is certainly true that social and economic factors are important in the genesis of criminality; but the facts that I have previously referred to relative to concordance in criminal careers among members of pairs of one-egg twins show that the biological basis is not to be disregarded.

The historical inferiority of the Negro, so far as civilization and cultural attainments are concerned, is worth recalling, although it is well known. It is true that the "race-levellers" explain this away on the grounds of unfavorable environment or isolation or lack of opportunity, just as they attempt to explain away all other evidence that does not support their thesis; but one cannot brush aside the fact that never throughout their history in Africa did the Negroes anywhere, so far as I have been able to learn, develop any state of culture approaching a cilivization; nor has the Liberian experiment shown much capacity for autonomous civilization; and nowhere throughout the world where there is a high concentration of Negro population, neither in the rural south, nor in the cities of the north, nor in South American countries, nor in the West Indies, nor in the islands of the Pacific, have they as racial groups developed beyond a low state of civilization or shown any capacity or zeal for culture and civilization. It is more than unintelligent; it is hazardous for us to brush aside all of this evidence and yield to the advice of those who would promote policies that would lead to racial amalgamation. There is enough stupidity, indolence, slovenliness and criminality already in the white race without the absorption of 13,000,000 Negroes in whom these qualities appear to be present in still higher degree.

Even if we were to discount entirely the evidence indicating racial inferiority of the Negro, evidence for the unwisdom of Negro-white hybridization is still impressive. The late Dr. Charles R. Stockard (1941), Professor of Anatomy at Cornell, and one time President of the American Association of Anatomists, carried out extensive observations on the effects of cross-breeding various types of dogs. In addition to the caretakers on the dog farm, Dr. Stockard had quite a staff of collaborating scientists to sudy and analyze the data from the standpoint of anatomy, physiology, psychology and endocrinology. In his book reporting results and conclusions, he made a few comments regarding the significance of this study to human problems. He states:

> "The influence for better or worse of one strange gene in the constitution of higher mammals and of man himself should give a thoughtful person adequate reason for concern regarding racial hybridization. . . ." (P. 122.)

In connection with a discussion of incompatible structural disharmonies, he says:

> "There is little doubt that these disharmonies can be registerd among those ills resulting from type and racial hybridization." (P. 358.)

On page 491 he says that "None of the results from the Boston terrier-Dachshund cross offer encouragement to the indifferent attitude frequently expressed towards crossing and hybridizing the various human stocks."

On pages 37-38 he says: "Mongrelization among widely different human stocks has very probably caused the degradation and even the elimination of certain human groups; the extinction of several ancient stocks has followed very closely the extensive absorption of alien slaves. If one considers the histories of some of the South European and Asia-Minor countries from a strictly biological and genetic point of view, a very definite correlation between the amalgamation of the whites and the negroid slaves and the loss of intellectual and social power in the population will be found. The so-called dark ages followed a brilliant antiquity just after the completion of such mongrel amalgamation. . . ."

Since we cannot consider the Negro to be genetically acceptable, what should be our attitude and policy towards him? Although I am firmly convinced that it is of fundamental importance that we shall maintain racial separateness in the social sphere, I believe also that Negroes should be treated with courtesy, consideration and generosity, and I deplore injustice and unkindness. Although we cannot afford to take the chance of having him destroy our race and our civilization, we should allow him every reasonable opportunity to develop his race and his culture.

In the early part of this century we had a great governor in this state, who had, and still has, the reputation of being a statesman with great zeal for the general good. Forty-five years ago that governor, Charles Brantley Aycock, in an address delivered to North Carolina Negroes at the State Fair, had this to say:

> "No thoughful, conservative, and upright Southerner has for your race aught but the kindest feelings, and we are willing and anxious to see you grow into the highest citizenship of which you are capable, and we are willing to give our energies and best thought to aid you. . . . But to do this, it is absolutely necessary that each race should remain distinct and have a society of its own. Inside of your own race, you can grow as large and broad and high as God permits, with the aid, the sympathy, and the encouragement of your white neighbors. If you can equal the white race in achievement, in scholarship, in literature, in art, in industry, in commerce, you will find no generous-minded white man who will stand in your way; but all of them in the South will insist that you accomplish this high end without social intermingling. This is well for you, and it is well for us; it is necessary for the peace of our section."

Inherent in that statement is the basis for a race policy that would protect the integrity of both races, and a more truly Christian policy than one that denies the existence of racial differences. A so-called Christian policy that is based on the assertion of falsehood or a denial of the truth requires re-examination.

Ford Funds To Strengthen School Work

Regional Council Given $150,000 for Southern Project

ATLANTA, Oct. 16 (AP). — The Southern Regional Council announced today that it has received a new grant of $150,000 from the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic to strengthen its educational work in 12 Southern states . . .

Fund for the Republic, A Good Investment

The Fund for the Republic, which is coming in for criticism from American Legion spokesmen and others, was established to make scholarly studies to determine whether American liberties are being imperiled or undermined in various fields. In the words of Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the Fund, its purpose "is to defend the American principles enunciated in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution."

THE VIRGINIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS — A State-wide group organized last July, the council is made up of professional, business and industrial participants representing both races and the three major religious faiths. It is one of 12 organized in Southern States as affiliates of the Southern Regional Council, and is financed by funds raised by the council and matched with funds from the Ford Foundation.

The board of directors of a Southern organization granted $240,000 by the controversial Fund for the Republic includes 21 members with past pro-Communist affiliations, a survey revealed today.

Investigation of the background of the Southern Regional Council also revealed that 13 of these supported the now-defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare,* cited as an arm of the Communist Party by two Congressional committees.

Ford Funds To Strengthen School Work

Regional Council Given $150,000 for Southern Project

ATLANTA, Oct. 16 (AP). — The Southern Regional Council announced today that it has received a new grant of $150,000 from the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic to strengthen its educational work in 12 Southern states . . .

The Following is an Editorial in The Virginian-Pilot On The Same Date:

Fund for the Republic, A Good Investment

The Fund for the Republic, which is coming in for criticism from American Legion spokesmen and others, was established to make scholarly studies to determine whether American liberties are being imperiled or undermined in various fields. In the words of Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the Fund, its purpose "is to defend the American principles enunciated in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution."

Organized by the Ford Foundation but now enjoying an independent status, the Fund for the Republic has a $15 million endowment. It has a board of directors composed of eminent citizens . . .

The Following Appeared In The Richmond News-Leader October 26, 1955:

Dean Resigns Fund Group Post

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (AP) —Arthur H. Dean, former United States ambassador to Korea, said today he has resigned as a director of the Fund for the Republic for "policy reasons."

Asked if this meant he was quitting because of the organization's policies, Dean said, "yes." He declined to go into details.

The fund, an independent foundation set up to promote the principles of the Constitution, Bill of Rights and Declaration of Independence, has been accused by some groups of left-wing activities.

Dean, a corporation lawyer and head of the United Nations truce team that negotiated the peace terms in Korea, said he resigned September 27 as a member of the fund's 16-member board of directors.

THE VIRGINIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS — A State-wide group organized last July, the council is made up of professional, business and industrial participants representing both races and the three major religious faiths. Name 21 Pro-Reds on Board of Dixie Race Study Council

By Leon Racht and Jeffrey Roche

The board of directors of a Southern organization granted $240,000 by the controversial Fund for the Republic includes 21 members with past pro-Communist affiliations, a survey revealed today.

Investigation of the background of the Southern Regional Council also revealed that 13 of these supported the now-defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare,* cited as an arm of the Communist Party by two Congressional committees.

Frank P. Graham, former President of UNC, who is speaking in Norfolk today was a former Honorary President of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

HEADQUARTERS IN ATLANTA

The Council, with headquarters in Atlanta, operates in 12 Dixie states. Its stated aims, in substance, have been to explore relationships between white and Negro in the South.

Early last year, the Council received the grant from the Fund which has been under strong attack recently for alleged leftwing activities. The Fund was set up by the Ford Foundation under $15,000,000 no-strings-attached grant.

Out of 14 members of the Council's executive committee, four were found to have supported pro-Communist enterprises in one form or another. They are:

George S. Mitchell, executive director: sponsor of the Civil Rights Congress, cited subersive by the Attorney General.

Rufus E. Clement, chairman: sponsor of American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born, one of the oldest subversive organizations in the United States. In addition, Clement has been a member of many other Communist fronts.

The Rev. A. S. Turnipseed, connected with the National Committee of Methodist Federation for Social Action, cited subversive by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Paul R. Christopher: signed protest against Dies Committee, under auspices of National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, cited subversive by Attorney General.

Besides these commie-fronters who boss the Council, the partial records of other board members follow:

Rufus B. Atwood: signed statement supporting Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, according to Daily Worker, Feb. 8, 1939.

B. R. Brazeal: Civil Rights Congress sponsor.

W. C. Brooke: sponsored Bill of Rights Conference, cited by House Un-American Activities Committee.

G. E. Clary: signed statement for Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact, cited by Congress as Communist front.

Charles Clingman: sponsored dinner forum on behalf of Protestant Digest, cited by California Un-American Activities Committee.

Herbert Davidson: sent greetings to Mother Bloor (Communist heroine) Celebration Committee.

J. M. Ellison: signed statement for National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions according to Daily Mirror, June 29, 1951. Organization is on Attorney General's subversive list.

Albert D'Orlando: signed Amicus Curiae on behalf of the Rev. John Howard Mellish when latter was before Supreme Court fighting his ouster from a Brooklyn church for alleged pro-Communist activities.

Charles G. Gomillion: On advisory board and secretary of Southern Negro Youth Congress on Attorney General's subversive list.

Charles S. Johnson: sponsor of of American Committee for Foreign Born. Has other affiliations in same direction.

Ralph O'Hara Lanier: also on board of Southern Negro Youth Congress.

Benjamin L. Mays: has long list of affiliations with organizations cited by Attorney General and House Un-American Activities Committee.

Florence S. Sytz: sponsor, National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions.

L. E. Thomas: signer of First Line of Defense, according to Daily Worker, Aug. 29, 1948.

H. Councill Trenholm: sponsored program for W. E. B. Dubois, Feb. 23, 1951. Dubois is a veteran pro-Communist.

Carter Wesley: sponsored dinner honoring Communist leader Ferdinand C. Smith.

Josephine Wilkins: sponsored Council of Young Southerners, cited as Communist-front by House committee.

Those who were members of the openly pro-Communist Southern Conference for Human Welfare include Atwood, Christopher, Clary, Clement, Davidson, Johnson, Mitchell, Trenholm, Wilkins, Gomillion, Mays and Ellison.

Disclosure of the Southern Regional Council's heavily pro-Communist tinge is the latest blow at leftwing activities of the Fund for the Republic.

Earlier, the Fund came under strong anti-Communist attack for its allegedly slanted bibliography on communism in the United States; its employment of Earl Browder, former secretary of the American Communist Party, as a "paid informant"; and employment of Amos Landman as publicity man, three weeks after he took the 5th Amendment when asked if he ever was a Communist.

Do-Gooders Stirring Bloodshed

In the 1850s, before the Civil War, Northern do-gooders gave money to stir racial strife in the South. John Brown's murderous raid at Harper's Ferry, Va., for example, was financed by supposedly responsible people. Among the notable contributors was Gov. Salmon P. Chase of Ohio. Later he was chief justice of the United States.

Brown bought guns and pikes to arm a slave rebellion. His men seized a federal arsenal. The bewildered Negroes didn't rebel. But Brown's fanatics did some shooting anyway. Their first victim was a free Negro. He failed to halt on orders and stopped a bullet.

Wendell Phillips, New England orator, declared the State of Virginia a pirate and called John Brown a lord high admiral commissioned to sink every pirate. Ralph Waldo Emerson, the poet and philosopher, compared the "glorious" scaffold on which John Brown was hanged to the cross at Calvary. The governor of Virginia announced that any further invasions from other states would be met with armed reprisals. Meanwhile—it was 1859—federal troops kept order in "Bloody Kansas."

Today Northern do-gooders again are pouring money into organizations to goad the South. One of these is the Fund for the Republic. It has just donated an additional $150,000 to the Southern Regional Council, which is dedicated to break down separation of the races in the South. It is time that donors of money take responsibility for their beneficiaries. Money is power.

While slavery and secession no longer are issues, violence can take many forms. Already such incidents as the kidnaping of the Till boy in Mississippi are being blown up to inflame the public.

In Chicago a Negro policeman last week beat a 72-year-old man to death on the street. In Brooklyn, a judge sentenced three Negro members of a teenage gang to prison when they pleaded guilty to killing a rival youth. Meanwhile, another juvenile gang death was reported in the neighborhood as the toll of violence mounts.

Usually the race angle is omitted in the Northern press on crime news in its own backyards. Race is played up whenever a victim is a Negro in the South. Both white and colored Southerners know the tension is reduced and peace promoted by separation of the races. An unbiased review of the facts, both past and present, proves this contention.

"The Red Hens Are Now Coming Home To Roost!"

The Pittsburgh Courier, negro newspaper of Oct. 29, 1955, front-pages a "rumor that won't die", — (and no wonder.) They say 'authentic sources' tell them that a group of entirely big name Whites met recently in secret midnight to 5 a.m., session, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. There they formed a "Retribution-Fund-Group, and put up $100,000., as just a beginning, To REVIEW Southern Courts' decisions in cases involving Whites vs. Negroes. "The Group" will then hold "trials in absentia" and reach its own verdicts and mete out its own justice to the White Southerners who offend the "Group's" idea. The informants insisted to the Pittsburgh Courier (Negro newspaper) that in order to have its own judgments carried out, the Secret-Retribution-Fund Group had already made contact with an "internationally-known Underworld Organization" who will be given a year to execute an order from the Secret Group". The paper says further:

EDITOR'S NOTE: Courier editors have been "sitting" on top of this daring revelation for over a month. The story, if true, has so many startling ramifications that we employed every check source posible, in an effort to unearth all the facts. Frankly, there are still some answers we have not yet been able to obtain. We are convinced, however, beyond a shadow of a doubt that something big, dramatic and maybe dangerous is brewing. Our investigations are continuing.

DANGEROUS strategy developing in Dixie is Georgia accusation that NAACP is "subversive." Plan is to point out number of officials with Red-front connections. Here the association is vulnerable on the record. We warned the boys years ago to get clean but they didn't. Now we'll see.

Archbishop Joseph Francis

George S. Schuyler — a Negro Editor of Pittsburgh Courier, Negro newspaper — of same date, — tells below how Reds and Race-Mixing Renegade-Whites recruited so many Negroes to their side — while we slept! :

★ The Ford-Financed Groups of Race-Mixers Know all about it!

AT A TIME when opportunities for Negroes in public service are greater than ever, it is unfortunate that so many individuals who are qualified and otherwise acceptable are security risks.

The extent of gullibility of colored "intellectuals" during the heyday of "joining" in the thirties and forties seems to have been even greater than among whites.

Just the other day a cynical Negro journalist observed that there are few whose records are not vulnerable.

Indeed, this is posing quite a problem to politicians desirous of wooing the Negro vote but anxious not to "cut a hog" by naming some Negro who might cause the party embarrassment.

I alluded to this penchant for joining Communist fronts and enterprises in my piece, "Negroes Reject Communism," in the American Mercury for June, 1939.

And since then I have dwelt upon it on several occasions, much to the annoyance of sable fellow-travelers, but to no avail.

IN THE PAST month three of our well-known leaders have been subjected to the usual security check prior to appointment for high positions. When questioned about each, I gave them a good bill of health and brushed off the fact that, according to my records, they were slightly tainted by the odor of the Kremlin.

My position was that they had probably been opportunistic, naive or ignorant (even though graduates of some of our finest universities and presumably intelligent and well-informed).

What was my surprise to learn that Uncle Sam had ten times more on them than I knew about.

They had either been cheek-by-jowl with the Workers Alliance, the National Negro Congress, Southern Negro Youth Congress, United Negro and Allied Veterans, Young Communist League, American Negro Labor Congress, Civil Rights Congress, Southern Conference for Human Welfare, National Lawyers Guild, Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, International Labor Defense or had sponsored and attended dinners for George Dimitrov or Ferdinand Smith.

They had consistently lent their names to what they must have known were leftist efforts. Too bad!

THE RED hens are now coming home to roost.

While most of these people are or were Democrats, a surprising number are listed as Republicans, so-called, like the three leaders mentioned above.

It must be making things tough for Val Washington and Max Rabb when culling the list of eligibles.

More ominously, the regular Democrat bosses, no longer burdened by the Americans for Democratic (demagogic!) Action and the rest of the New-Fair Deal collectivist fringe, are eyeing prospective Negro local and state appointees more closely.

One veteran fellow-traveler, a long inhabitant of the public trough, was recently painfully rebuffed for reappointment.

Such fellows are not kidding when they wax hysterical over the "climate of fear." They've got a right to sing the blues!

Well, I warned all these chaps to get clean. So now I can only say "I told you so."

☆ But the Baltimore Negro Newspaper, "AFRO-AMERICAN", —and others it mentions in its Editorial shown below,— are impatient at the non-delivery of "Total-Equality"!

The Right To Happiness

The Supreme Court is being asked to review a case which could upset the laws in 28 states forbidding interracial marriages.

The case, originating in Virginia, involves a Chinese and his white wife. The wife was granted an annulment of their marriage on the grounds it violated state law.

The husband appealed, but the Virginia Supreme Court turned him down.

Marriage, it held, is not a constitutionally guaranteed right, but a "social and domestic" privilege which the state has the right to grant or withhold.

Four organizations—the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Jewish Congress, the Association on American Indian Affairs and the Association of Immigration and Nationality Lawyers—are urging the nation's highest court to pass on this odd decision.

We hope it will.

If the 14th Amendment protects the right of an individual to attend public schools, to serve on juries and to buy and sell property without state-imposed segregation, it also protects his right to marry the person of his choice, without regard to race.

It is self evident that the right to marry is basic to the broader and inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

It is difficult for us to see how in light of its other opinions in this area, the Supreme Court could decide otherwise.

Dear Dr. Mitchell

I read in yesterdays journal. "C of C Heads Asked to Aid Racial Peace" I am not only disturbed, but I believe about 90% of white people of South is disturbed as never before in our day, and cant understand why some of the leading Preachers continue to give aid and comfort to the NAACP. of New York & Chicago.

You know that most all Southern Governors and legislators is doing all they can to by-pass the political decision of Supreme Court, would we want to force our daughters to go sit beside a negr boy all day? just picture a thing like that. Isn't social segregation the basic law of peaceful society? Wouldn't intergration of public schools deny parents their freedom to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. (Eph. 6:4).

Isn't the law of nature a God given law? That gives us the right to choose our associates, at the same time reject those that dont suit our nature, I believe any man made law that conflicts with Gods law is wrong.

I dont believe mixted schools will work, nor mixted churches, shouldn't be encouraged.

In re Negro Question -
Segregation vs. Desegregation

Mr. Harold C. Fleming,
c/ Southern Regional Council,
Atlanta,Ga.

Sir:

You are all "wet" in a quotation in the A P from Washington that:"The common notion that desegregation just can't work in the South is plainly contradicted by the findings". Too bad any findings, even if true, should not have been published, as further fomenting trouble in the South with negroes. But, I think you are wrong in saying segregation cannot work; it has worked for all these years up until recently, when probably the Communists started the big mess we are in,and which may head to bloodshed, as you know a lot of southerns are never going to submit to mixing with negroes; a he man had rather be dead than to live without benefits of state right, self preservation,etc. You see, the world existed, reliable scients say, two million years ahead of the written Bible or written law; self preservation and personal liberty existed from the beginning and it should not be surrendered now. God knew what He was doing when he made a negro, though many people do not believe so.

I write every one (even preachers, women,school boards, Appellate and supreme court judges,and have written the U S Sup.Court) that any person (and I can prove this easily) that advocates desegregation is lower down than a damned snake,skunk, rat or piss-ant, as none of those things associate with other breeds,and neither do fowls,birds and fishes,and so why should a man be lower down than they. It only means millions of mullatoes by the movement now,which was never intended. You will soon see the K K K raise up by say 20,000,000,which will be much stronger than our army,navy or air force; when the taxpayers have no rights, through the law failing (and it has failed through our packed U S Sup.Court,the judges of which don't seem to know what they are doing and don' care--neither does Ike care) then they are entitled to anything that may redress their wrongs;,and I will join them any day in doing it. This country isn't going to hell,it is already there. We don't have any men from our local precincts to our heads of departments in Wash., who have brains, red blood, nerves, back bone,etc., and who sit down to urinate. Am about 72 and never dreamed I'd live in such hell of a country.

The Cox newspapers and a Community Chest committee have whitewashed the Atlanta Urban League of charges that it is saturated with NAACP notions and supports integration. But heaps uv Georgians still rate all branches uv the League in the same bracket with the so-called Southern Regional Council—an outfit that gets handouts from the Fund for the Republic. Recently the AP's Bem Price, who must be a super-duper "librel," called Council director Harold Fleming "an advocate of the moderate approach to the South's ancient racial problem"—and promptly got his hand called hard by Charleston's wideawake News & Courier. "Mr. Fleming and the Southern Regional Council," said the N. & C., "are moderate only if one believes the NAACP is also moderate. The objectives of SRC and NAACP are the same—an end to separate public schools in the South."

Cited by the N. & C. was a revelation by a national American Legion publication that 25 former and present SRC directors were actively identified with the defunct and discredited "Southern Conference for Human Welfare," a communist-front outfit that touched off the race-mixin vendetta in the South. "This important information," the noted South Carolina paper pointed out, "was not in Bem Price's article."

One thing that multiplies our Southern problems is that we have so many fuzzy-brained nest-foulers in our own midst. They are a tiny minority, but they are bee-busy.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Texas School And The Races

9-6-57

In perusing tonight's paper, I find the following statement:

"The wide stretches of Texas offer a contrast. Eastward, the big cities of Houston, Fort Worth and Dallas continue to maintain segregated schools; in the West and South, schools are fully or partly integrated. In San Antonio, integration began three years ago."

This, and similarly worded statements, would lead one to assume that integration had made great headway in at least half of the state of Texas. Actually, nothing could be further from the truth.

The racial problem in South and West Texas is not, and never has been, a Negro minority. Negroes in much of the area are notable only by their absence. Many school districts have supported three schools: White, Mexican and Negro—with only a handful of pupils in the Negro school. For instance, when the schools in the little South Texas town where my parents live were integrated recently, there were only three Negro pupils involved.

On the other hand, the vastly overwhelming minority (and, in some places, majority) group is Latin American. San Antonio, my home town, maintains a Mexican high school, Sidney Lanier. While a few Mexicans are scattered among the other schools, they remain, for the most part, a group unto themselves as far as the rest of the student body is concerned. In smaller towns, the racial line is even more sharply drawn. Mexicans attend their own schools, do not mix socially with "whites," seldom intermarry (the whites who cross the line are socially defunct), and are not permitted in "nice" hotels, motels, cafes, etc. (Sound familiar?)

In short, Texas is no different from the rest of the South. In North, East and Central Texas, where there is a heavy concentration of Negroes, the feeling is precisely the same as it is right here in Alabama.

In the rest of the state there aren't enough Negroes to matter one way or the other. That is what is so ludicrous about the proponents of integration using Texas as an example of progress toward achieving their ends.

Incidentally, mention integration to the people of Southwestern Texas on the only basis on which it could possibly be applied to them—integration with the Mexicans—and there wouldn't be another Civil War, but another Texas Revolution.

The Lincoln Sesquicentennial Commission

Gentlemen:

The 17th of May, 1959 marks the Fifth Year since the so-called Segregation Decision by the Supreme Court, and one of the Press Associations says that "Segregationists" labeled that day 'Black Monday'. Others call it the 'Second Emancipation', and thus this integration movement is associated with Lincoln, and implies that Lincoln would be for this integration program, which I dispute. The Emancipation Proclamation itself was not general, but covered only the actual war area, a war measure only.

Lincoln worked on three hypotheses, namely: (1) In Holy Writ it is said that a House Divided against itself cannot stand, and (2) he said that the country could not exist half slave and half free, that it would have to be all one or the other, and (3) he was, himself, working on the last item when he was in the White House, namely, that the country could not live in peace half Black and half White, and therefore, he was hoping to arrange for either a repatriation or a colonization in Central or the edge of South America. As to the third item, see the Diary of Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy, Vol. I, page 150 et seq: Summer 1862, I quote a couple of items therefrom to support my statement:

(1) "The President was earnest in the matter of wishing to send the negroes out of the country." Lincoln did not wish to leave us this legacy of trouble. Defense of Race and hatred are not synonymous.

(2) "Thought it essential to provide asylum for a race which we emancipated but which could never be recognized or admitted to be our equals."

The Great Emancipator had previously made the following declarations in a Speech at Ottawa, Illinois, in the Douglas-Lincoln Debates, on August 21, 1858: "I have no purpose to introduce political and social equality between the white and the black races. There is a physical difference between the two, which, in my judgment, will probably forever forbid their living together upon the footing of perfect equality."

When a Delegation of Negro Preachers, et al, called upon him on August 14, 1862, he, inter alia, stated that: "You and we are different races. We have between us a broader difference than exists between almost any other two races. Whether it is right or wrong, I need not discuss; but this physical difference is a great disadvantage to us both, I think. Your race suffers very greatly, many of them, by living among us, while ours suffers from your presence. In a word, we suffer on each side. If this is admitted, it affords a reason, at least, why we should be separated."

In a speech at Springfield, on December 12, 1857, re amalgamation, he said that: "A separation of the races is the only perfect prevention of amalgamation, but as an immediate separation is impossible, then the next best thing is to keep them apart where they are not already together."

Prof. Allan Nevins, Professor of American History at Columbia University and author, tells us in the U. S. News and World Rep., Nov. 14, 1958, page 72, that amalgamation will be the result, as things are now going: "As a historian, I do not for a moment believe that, in our mighty American river of many nationalities, two currents can flow side by side down the centuries without ultimately becoming one", and he says that "any sociologist could cite a dozen reasons why it is inevitable", and that he "could cite a dozen analogies from history to prove that such a process is inexorable, irresistable."

Thomas Jefferson says, "Nothing is more certainly written in the book of fate than that these people are to be free, nor is it less certain that these two races, equally free, cannot live under the same government."

Many quotations sustaining the above expressions could be supplied, and I do not like to see Lincoln and Jefferson misunderstood and libeled as they have been down through the years, and are now at least inferentially libeled, and such people become Judas Goats by associating them with the current integration movement.

Yours sincerely,
Geo. Washington Williams

Dear Mr Harold Fleming —
Your comments on the negro following of the Asian Ghandi — that "Fakir in Diapers" as Winston Churchill called him! this cowardly behavior on the part of negro students who a decade or so ago were picking cotton — now — at white man's expense — attending college!! Gratitude? they know not the word — Americans

We agree American colleges have made very little impression on the negro sit down! they now are believers of the Asian Ghandi — known for his cowardly technique of just folding his arms and sitting it out — never had the courage of a white man to stand up and see it out decently — freed the African slaves, civilized [?] educated (?) them and as a final made them American citizens — not Americans — so they now turn against U.S. via the NAACP — that Trojan Horse in our midst — Urban League — Jewish Congress now we have the cowardly "Sit-Down" item: (and some Americans are with the Negros vs U.S.)

So these college negros — with no show of American self respect or racial pride just "Sit-Down" on White man's premises and "quietly" demand to dine with people who prefer their own race & people; Why do negros feel so inferior when among their own race? No other race on earth ever feels so — Could it be they feel inferior because they are so? And does sitting next to White charge them your letter to the Progressive indicates that you are an intellectualist who would have knowledge precede action.

Dear Hon. Harold C. Fleming:-

Events, lately, have made this leaflet more urgent than in 1958.

Americans must surely want to escape the coils of the boa-constrictor Church.

America's World Policy has been run all too much by Jesuit conspirators fathered by Georgetown University.

CONTROL OF THE NEWS IN 1958 AMERICA

By BASIL MADDY

"To be sane in a world of lunatics is itself a sort of madness."—Jean Jacques Rousseau and St. Pierre.

The control of the news in America today is something terrific. It is criminal, lecherous, treacherous, and traitorous.

On July 3, 1955, "A witch was burned in a little Mexican town 85 miles from Alpine, Texas." Blanche Lee Puccinelli comments: "Take particular notice that the unfortunate woman had NO Civil Law Trial. She was accused, tried, and convicted — condemned to death at the stake by the local paranoic priest."

Did the leading papers and radio-spielers (owned and controlled by conspirators against Truth and Social Progress) tell you about this event, or play it up like they did Cardinals Mindzenty, Stepniac or Tiso (to whitewash them of Nazi War Crimes committed when they thought Hitler had won the war)?

No, indeed!

For the same reason you did not find the press and radio playing up the murder of the Rev. Norman Dobbs, a Canadian missionary in a mountain village in Brazil by natives who had been aroused to such activity by Roman priests.

For the same reason, you did not see played up similar crimes against Protestants in Colombia, Ecuador, and Yucatan.

For the same reason Franco's labelling Protestants "Reds" and having them shot was kept out of the news when the American thing to do was to help the Loyalists against Franco.

Fifteen years later the censors prevented Sidney Howard from using the word Fascism in the movie, "It Can't Happen Here." Also, a Radio reporter in San Francisco was not allowed to read to his audience a letter from a Spanish prison.

The skimpy Press and Radio reports lately (mid-1958) about Arturovic's being threatened with deportation to Yugo Slavia to answer for his mass murders in CROATIA have been very careful not to mention the real nature of those crimes because they were committed trying to convert the Greek Orthodox Christians to Roman Catholicism under the Hitler occupation. Arturovic entered the United States on a faked Irish passport several years ago. His case makes clear the influence of the Catholic lobby in Washington, D.C. For further information write to Yugo-Slav Embassy.

The boa-constrictor Church of Rome and monopoly Capital of America are working together to stop Social Progress. They are like the Holy Alliance of Monarchists and Church conspirators in the 1820's (who were trying to stop "the Godless Free Masons and LEVELLERS" of America and France from spreading Democracy). Their aim is to stop the "Godless Reds" from bringing the benefits of Social Progress to the peoples of the world. Actually, their purpose is to make themselves eternal on earth. They have succeeded in surrounding the American people with an Iron Curtain of Lies.

This leaflet is an attempt to blast some holes through that Iron Curtain of Lies.

Perhaps, the top ranking crime of Wall Street is its control of the news and means of mass communication through the purchasing power (or starvation menace) used to make tens of thousands of would-be writers and spielers become literary prostitutes. They abnegate their own intelligence and morality just to get to write in large publications or to yell over the broadcasting stations whatever is asked of them by our new feudal masters.

Just before that war criminal, Chiang-kai-Shek, was thrown out of China (with a few hundred millions of American dollars stashed away in American banks, which he had stolen) reporters were sent to China and Russia to see and report the progress being made. When they came back, writing the facts as they had gathered them, the PRESS OWNERS threw their articles into the waste basket and said IN EFFECT: "We do not want this damned Commie stuff. You must write lies against Russia and China or lose your jobs." Most of those manly reporters sat down and wrote what their masters demanded. They have been hammering their lies into people's brains every minute for many years; and because such lies are against peace and against the true Americanism of Jefferson and Lincoln, they should be tried as War Criminals and Traitors to the foundation and purpose of America.

Often, the OWNERS of the means of mass communication are shady people who went into that business to get power by conspiracy against human intelligence by the falsification of knowledge.

There is a reason why so many in New Orleans thought selections from the American Constitution, the Bill of Rights and the Declaration of Independence were Communist propaganda. Specifically, there were 111 out of 112 in a quiz at Madison, Wisconsin.

Lately, Senator Hennings' report from Washington, D.C., made note of the vast number of people who have the authority to classify documents as secret; "and as the result of this blanket issuance of 'top secret' stamps, there are enough classified documents and records to fill a file drawer over five hundred miles long."

Compare that statement with the following of Thomas Jefferson and you will see what I mean: "It is error alone which needs the support of government (p. 675, Padover's Complete Jefferson).

As samples of treachery and treason here are six:

(1)—In 1952, Harry S. Truman "suppressed publication of a Federal Trade Commission Report on a giant international oil cartel because he thought it might adversely affect foreign relations." What all other peoples knew, Americans (inflated by TV, Radio and the prostitute writings of the monopoly press) must NOT be allowed to learn. They have needed that knowledge badly to appraise the "brink of war" measures of Dulles, Nixon and Ike ever since.

(2)—The conspiracy of Dr. Edward Teller (the Hungarian), Admiral Lewis Strauss, and John Foster Dulles to flimflam the public about how far away an atomic blast can be detected. A cipher was dropped off the 2300 miles distance in which a small atomic explosion WAS DETECTED on the morning of September 19, 1957, so that it would read 230 miles instead of the 2300 miles. The purpose of that swindle was to prove that Russia could sneak atomic blasts; and must not be trusted in an agreement; and that we must not stop testing hydrogen bombs.

(3)—In the news from Washington the last week of June, 1958 (about the investigation of Goldfine's gifts to promote influence) mention was made many times of "a House Rule requiring advanced determination in a closed session whether anyone is likely to be defamed or degraded by a witness before allowing him to take the stand." That certainly means to try the witness SECRETLY to prevent him from telling the truth PUBLICLY.

Since Washington, D.C., has become a psychological suburb of Georgetown University, the control of NEWS has brought many people to the point where it makes them angry to hear the words of Thomas Jefferson, as above. In too many places it has become a stigma to be known as "standing for Human Rights."

(4)—In 1954, the Rev. C. P. Bradley wrote, in United People, "Yes, fellas, they know quite well who started the war in Korea. Every leading statesman in the world knows that Uncle Sam and Syngman Rhee started the War."

For years, thousands of intellectual prostitutes have yelled their lies every minute on the Radio, in the pulpit, and in the un-free Press of America, about who started the War. But in time, the people saw that members of the China Lobby could not have cleaned up thirty million dollars on the soy bean market if they had not had the inside information that Syngman Rhee and his Wall Street sponsors were to start the Korean War. After the War, Ben C. Limb, Syngman Rhee's Ambassador, in a public speech, asked, "Why did the U.S.A. and South Korea start the War if they were not going to unify Korea?"

(5)—The way people who have been in China are taken in hand and brainwashed by Security Police "before they are allowed to see their relatives and certainly before they meet the press. If they produce some tale of 'atrocity' they get the green light to fame and fortune. Otherwise, they land in mental hospitals, or get investigated by a Congressional Committee." (Words of Anna Louise Strong).

(6)—Swindling, l y i n g advertising (paid for out of your dollars) put in public places to propagandise for Wall Street's rule. Here are two samples which I saw yesterday in a Key System bus of Hoaxland, Moronia:

"YOUR SHIELD OF FREEDOM — NATO." When NATO was hatched, General Wainwright (hero of Bataan) remarked, "The North Atlantic Treaty Organization is a straight invitatoin to another war." Everything since connected with the NATO has proven the truth of General Wainwright's prediction.

The other lying advertisement showed the picture of a man behind a barb-wire enclosure with the words, "HE KNOWS FREEDOM—DO YOU?" "SEND YOUR TRUTH DOLLARS TO CRUSADE FOR FREEDOM." (Why do they not show the picture of a negro or a poor white boy being beaten to death in an All-American turpentine camp in Dixie?)

Take note: The criminal control of the news is OLDER than the Cold War, World War II, or even World War I. These wars were brought about by the control of the news as explained in 1947 by the Commission on Freedom of the Press, thus:

"The right of free expression has lost its earlier reality . . . The owners and managers of the press determine which persons, which facts, which versions of the facts, and which ideas shall reach the public." (p. 16)

Nobody got into prison for publishing and promoting the lies and slanted news, in support of the Wall Street investments in the Allied cause, to get us into World War I, but long inhuman sentences were given to small fry for telling the truth."

When Woodrow Wilson sent General Graves' army into Siberia, a little 17-year old Russian girl (who weighed less than a hundred pounds) was given a fifteen year sentence for giving out a few protest leaflets. Her name was Mary Stimer.

Tom Watson of Georgia, a Senator in Congress, wrote a pamphlet exposing Woodrow Wilson. Dave Blodgett, a boy of twenty, was given twenty years in Leavenworth for distributing a few copies of Senator Watson's pamphlet in Iowa. Blodgett was tried before a Catholic judge.

Of course the imprisonment of Eugene Debs is the classical example of how the 21,000 new millionaires (made by World War I) tried to keep themselves from being exposed.

As W. Lloyd Clark, a pamphleteer, remarked: "A white slaver in America gets one year; and a little girl of brains and ability who is working for a principle vital to the preservation of civil and religious liberty, gets fifteen years."

The big moneyed traitors to America (Herbert Clark Hoover leading) were bent on sending Allied and American troops into Russia in 1919 to restore the Romanoffs and the parasitic class which had just been overthrown. HERE IS THE TAP-ROOT of the Hate-Russia swindle which has been augmented and compounded by the controlled news until now, forty years later, we keep thirty-five hydrogen bombs in the air at all times (as of early 1958) making us as much the aggressors as Nuremberg war-criminals.

The Hoover - Churchill gang were thwarted in 1919, as follows: The British troops mutinied in Archangel; the French fleet mutinied in the Black Sea; and rumors were abroad that American forces in Siberia were mutinying. Whereupon they did as bad a war-crime as within them lay by diverting American Red Cross food supplies from starving people over to the White Russian Romanoff Armies, causing millions to die of famine.

Meanwhile, and ever since, the criminal press has kept its sheets headlined about "Bolshevik Atrocities," when, in fact, it was the White Russian Romanoff armies which were committing those crimes and not the Bolsheviks. General Graves' book, AMERICA'S SIBERIAN ADVENTURE, says so, and more, thus: "Semeonoff and Kalmikoff soldiers were roaming the country like wild animals, killing and robbing the people."

"There were horrible murders committed, but they were NOT committed by the Bolsheviks as the world believes. I am well on the side of safety when I say that the ANTI-BOLSHEVIKS killed one hundred people in Eastern Siberia to every one killed by the Bolsheviks."

Just as the White Russians (Romanoffs) were traitors to the Russian people so were their American promoters traitors to the American people. General Graves' book adequately proves this in several places.

The American traitor press published both the Romanoff and Japanese lies about General Graves, but would not print General Graves' side.

The control of the news in America by conspirators was of menacing proportions by the time of World War I. It was greatly reinforced in the field of education by the Power Trust, prostituting professors and re-writing text books during the criminal administrations of Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover. For further information see the Confessions of the Power Trust (Investigations of Congressional Committee, 1927). Also, see Carl D. Thompson's THE CONFESSIONS OF THE POWER TRUST.

How to teach the historical facts of Social Progress without being put to death by the Tory-Traitors in power is THE problem FACING professors. If a teacher cannot teach both sides of a controversial issue and have the pupils read and investigate biography, history, travel and the social sciences, he is not therefore free to teach the truth; but is free only to teach the pay-triotic lies which the Wall Street Imperialists and Catholic Actionists want him to teach. To attempt to teach the truths upon which this nation was founded is a guarantee of starvation or worse for a teacher.

The case of the Oil Interests controlling the public schools of Texas was illustrated when a textbook was forbidden because it pointed to public schools, highways, postoffices, social security, and welfare as proof that America has SOME Communism even now.

Wall Street in bed with "The Harlot on the Seven Hills" has produced an awful bastard progeny. There are many in your neighborhood, Mr. Reader. They put up a howl about America's spending something for education; but you will never hear them howling about her spending several times as much for booze and cigarettes, and twenty times as much to blackmail the world with the Hydrogen Bomb.

One hopeful turn of events in 1958 is that some capitalists are fighting the still larger ones. I have in hand a sort of round table letter, or circular, which the Zenith Radio Corporation of Chicago sent to some newspaper publishers. It says: "There are about 1800 daily newspapers, about 7000 weeklies, and many magazines of national circulation . . . " "But now the TV networks, supported entirely by advertisers, have developed a dangerously powerful position" (are displacing the newspapers). "Unfortunately, this vast power is wholly concentrated in the hands of two or three men heading the networks in New York . . . The net result is that two men controlling NBC and CBS have absolute power over what can be seen and heard in tens of millions of homes because of the absolute power of coercion wielded by CBS and NBC."

"One of the two men decided to use this power to kill off the limited test of subscription TV that had been authorized by the Federal Communications Commission . . . within a few days the members of Congress were flooded with hundreds of thousands of letters opposing subscription TV . . . They started the campaign of January 13th with a tremendous banquet for members of Congress and other important people, and seated affiliate executives beside Congressmen to lobby against subscription TV. Then, they sent affiliates home with instructions to go on the air with their TV stations and conduct concentrated propaganda campaigns." . . . "It took a decision by just one man to flood Congress with mail on one side of a controversial subject."

The way these new despots and thought-censors spat upon the Bill of Rights and destroyed eighteen writers, press agents, stage managers, musicians, conductors and song writers FOR STANDING ON THEIR AMERICAN RIGHTS before the House Un-American Committee in New York this June, 1958, proves them to be new Gods (beyond human understanding) bent upon establishing their Kingdom of EVIL upon earth.

Our boys are in Formosa now to start World War III with both sides equipped with Atomic weapons, because "The Eisenhower Doctrine" is treason to the foundation and purpose of America. It says: "All you old parasitic classes, criminal rulers, tyrants, and George-the-Thirds in the world of 1958, be of good cheer, for Ike Eisehower proposes to use Atomic weapons to destroy those impoverished peoples who would subvert your regimes."

December 4, 1961

Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

(In Report L-8 of this series, issued August 10, 1959, there was reproduced a statement on the subject of race and intelligence, prepared by 18 of the country's leading psychologists and anthropologists. The Southern Regional Council believes that the statement now reproduced below ought to be made available to a wide audience. The statement includes a resolution passed at the recent annual meeting of the American Anthropological Association held at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania during the week of November 13, 1961.)

Dear Miss Gai Lorem: Your Propaganda Not Needed or Wanted Here

Association re-affirms its position on race.

At the meeting of the Council of the Association, which included nearly all of the professional Fellows of the Association in attendance at the meeting, the following resolution was adopted unanimously by a vote of 192 to 0:

> "The American Anthropological Association repudiates statements now appearing in the United States that Negroes are biologically and in innate mental ability inferior to whites, and reaffirms the fact that there is no scientifically established evidence to justify the exclusion of any race from the rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States. The basic principles of equality of opportunity and equality before the law are compatible with all that is known about human biology. All races possess the abilities needed to participate fully in the democratic way of life and in modern technological civilization."

The statement was interpreted by those present as a strong reaffirmation of positions which have been taken on the subject of race differences by qualified scientific societies for many years. In introducing the resolution to the Council, President Gordon R. Willey of Harvard University (Boston papers) stated that "the concern which I wish to lay before you is I think a grave one--one worthy of careful thought and strategic action. It arises from recent press statements and certain publications on race and racial differences as a basis for social and political action. Many of you have seen such statements. Some of you have called these to our attention. The Board deliberated on this matter which concerns use of the name 'anthropology' and 'anthropological science' in a way we believe to be false and misrepresentative of our profession by persons who are not recognized by the American Anthropological Association as professional anthropologists." The statement on the racial issue concluded with this warning by Dr. Willey: "Clearly we do not consider this statement as the only thing we as anthropologists can and should do in this matter, but we look upon it as a basic statement of position and a resource which our officers and all of us may draw upon in the future. For be assured that the several items in the press and elsewhere which have come to your attention...are but the beginning. We must be prepared to persevere in what we believe to be the truth."

World Communism is the integration through propaganda and force of all peoples and all governments of all the earth --into mass man under Godless and absolute one-worldism.

Integration of the races in America through propaganda and force is a clear demonstration of Communist take-over through internal subversion.

We would like to open up new territory, and need man, who want to make money in a big way. We have a product, what is used by man, women and children and has proven in the short time that it is on the market a great financial potential who are handling it. If you could get us acquainted with agressive executive type men or women, capable of building and training a large salesforce, we are greatly indebted to you.

An investment for the first merchandise has to be made, but we would help an excellent person with all details of starting this business at once. Dear Sir:

Recently, I wrote to the Southern Regional Council about the establishment of an Public Relation Commission, as manager of the organization, I was able to talk to someone that have great experience on this type of work and what it mean to the State of South Carolina,

I The Public Relation Commission is made up of a Committee or Committees that are kind and understatement, helpful and considerate group, Render aid, assistance; understanding and patience, willingness to to help and comfort great value, in the hour of need, kindness and consideration.

II The Public Relation Commission The Public Relation Committee, will take interviews, discussion, action of every citizens and members who are involved in the community problems that come up for consideration

Since there are the high class citizens middle class, and the poor, we will have to carry the program so that all three Classes will be of value, for every meeting will be one of the best one.

The first step of my program is to organize on facts not how we feel that why I said Fact-Finding, 2 Coordination 3 Joint Action, (4) Common Service, (5) Understanding and I am sure that we want go wrong.

The Public Relation Committee said that they think it is time for us to negotiate for we have been on this thing for a year or so and nothing have been done. and we must go to work at once or closed down, we must have understanding with the Southern Regional Council if our headquarter will be with them, we must know if they will give us direct information, cooperation to build a better community, State,

I think the public Relation today is an outstanding example. we must be responsible for our financial control we must progress, we must have a Government Agency to work with us in order to restore true democracy upon the founder of this Country

The reason why the Committee are pleading so hard is that we don't want another decade we have been through three (3) and we don't want another one. And with the Co-operation of your Committee this problem will be solved.

Ton one Question ask was will the Southern Regional Council help us in building a better Community? Protection, support, material, Answered questions for us on Community problems, that we need help on? Visit some of our meetings in person,? Send speakers to our meetings for example we will like to open the public Relation to the public the first monday in March will you send us some one on that ~~night~~ Night? will the support be in helping us to get the agency at once, opportunities for the Negroes, All of this is to be done without hate or Violation of the law.

will you give us lectures on how to conduct Classes, I Public Relations leadership Training? Dear Sir:

If this is a "FREE" country, WHY should persons who have invested their own money, be FORCED to hire, serve, etc., ANY individual they do not want? Concerns that want to do that, have the right, there is no objection, but others who do not, should not be MADE to do so.

Another thing, fifty years ago, the majority of the people in the south had practically nothing, and very few had any education. That includes whites as well as negroes. The whites have worked and built up what they have. Now it seems, with no work or experience, the negroes want to come in and "take over".

They now have members with educations and money. If they want fine hotels, restaurants, etc., let them build and operate them and hire and serve whom they please.

You are trying to take away one group's rights and give to another.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I am a Negro physician and surgeon and I hope to move my office from New York City to Atlanta during the early spring of this year.

A friend of mine called my attention to your article in the April 12, 1965, Atlanta Constitution. I feel that it will be to my personal interest to locate in a nice, all white neighborhood. For that reason I shall thank you to advise me of the possibility of buying a nice house near you. Do you know of such property for sale?

I shall thank you for your personal cooperation.

Well, the Southern Regional Council based over in Atlanta has issued another press release. This time the agitating, race-mixing outfit that has always had high praise for the Student Non - Violent Coordinating Committee of Stokely Carmichael fame, the Communistic W. E. DuBois Club and an ardent lover of Dr. Martin Luther Cong attacks the prison systems of Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana.

The Southern Regional Council which was once cited by a State of Florida investigating committee as a promoter of "dissention, agitation and turmoil" claims the state penitentiary at Parchman is an operation of "punishment for profit," although the prison annually costs money to operate.

The Southern Regional Council masquerades as a social research outfit, but the theme song is always the same—and it would be interesting to know its full financial operation.

It is nothing new for the state of Mississippi to receive unsolicited advice from radical outfits such as the Southern Regional Council. However, a more factual report would probably be obtained if a prisoner from Parchman were to strike a bee-line for Atlanta and write a report on the SRC.

Needless to say the state penitentiary at Parchman has been written up repeatedly for years for its reforms in law enforcement journals and respected publications. The Southern Regional Council's utterance is just another putt-putt from the left cylinder of another outfit financed by the Fund For The Republic. Accomplishment for humanity—zero.

Gentlemen: I read with interest your statement in the N.Y.Times

You are wrong. No one in America owes anything to anybody, if we are free citizens. But we are no more free, because of statism introduced in America by changing the original constitution by giving the power to the horde of bureacrats to regulate our way of life. Only by accepting the ideal capitalism we can go back on the right track. Otherwise, as the trend is now, may be abt, one million black people in America will be the slavedrivers of us others, including other 19 million black good people, in the service of the future ONE-MAN-OWNER-OF-LIFE-PROPERTY-AND-SOUL of all of us, exactly like in the presentday Cuba, Titolandia etc.

(If there would be no maximum wage law all people could be employed in an ideal capitalist society. Half statism half private enterprise must destroy personal freedom and make us all slaves).

If you do not understand this I am very sorry for you. You may understand only then when the commissars will take over, and I believe this will be in so distant future. I am warning you because it happened to me in Yugoslavia, and Americans are humans like everywhere else.....

If you want a lecture let me know and let me have the expenses. I used to be chief of economic information service in the communist government of Titolandia, thus I know what I am talking about.

Very truly yours,

Address by Mr A,R.K. Jeric to the audience of the 49th Anniversary Celebration of the Proclamation of Byelorussian Independence on March 19, 1967 at Biltmore Hotel in New York City.

My dear Byelorussian friends, ladies and gentlemen:

Is is a special honor to me to have been invited to address you. To tell you frankly, I do not know much about your beloved Byelorussian country. But, I can tell you that I know exactly what are your worries, your languishings and your handicaps to free your country from serfdom. Like in the Byelorussian country, the same kind of regime oppresses my land, which is now Titoland - in full meaning of the word.

After I left it, in one of my writings published in 1950 in London (by the way you may get a reprint from the Anti-Communist International) I pointed out that the so called Russian revolution was saved by the British working class "Hands-off-Russia" action in the same way as Britain and the United States saved the so called Yugoslav revolution. And what is it what they saved? Based on my own experience - and I know what I am talking about - every communist regime is, in practice, nothing else but a one-man-monopoly-ownership-of-life-and-property. I challenge anyone who can prove the contrary. Such regimes of slavery never existed in the known history.

We must search for the reasons why these two cradles of human freedom - Britain and the United States of America - applied such "moral double bookkeeping" (President Johnson used these words for his Vietnam policy critics)? Why by the end of the Second World War they established this costly balance of terror instead of peace in freedom, and why they - even after 50 breaches out of 52 treaties and agreements continue to beef-up these monsters of bankrupt slaveries.

To answer these questions I consecrated 20 years to dig out the dirt - not as a scholar but as a common man - as a krestianin who lost the freedom in his country. I dare to give a reply - a very sad fact .....

First in the British, then successively in the American craddle of freedom the Marxist cockoos put their eggs, with the purpose to make them immune to resist slavery until their freedoms can be burried. In America they did it via England, what looked to me like a revenge for Lexington and Bunker Hill of 1776.

It would be useless to cry for bankrupt England.

But America, the last bastion of human freedom, is at stake. The American Constitution - as the Honorable Hamilton Fish recently pointed out to be "the greatest Charter ever devised by the mind of Man" - was conceived by its Founding Fathers as a panzer - as a straightjacket impenetrable by mischiefs - in order to safeguard the freedom of Man - the greatest wonder God has created on this earth. America was conceived to be a Republic, not a Democracy. This implies the right of every citizen to do whatever he pleases, unless his actions harm the other fellow. The Ten Commandments remained his duties. The Government is not here to steal the money from the frugals in order to give it to the lazy. Under God, even the most awkward citizen knows better what is good for him and his posterity than any bureaucrat can even guess. Only these principles made this country great. But .....

Under various pretexts - as I said before - precisely the Constitution was amended by a couple of cockoo eggs. It would take longer time to go into details. They follow us all like shadows. These cockoo eggs continue to hatch Marxist eggheads, whereas their boss in Moscow waits for the moment when the hatch will be strong enough to legalize the merger of the American shaken freedom into world wide slavery. Unfortunately the rich-fathers'-boys are pushing in that direction. For us from Communist countries this is nothing new. They disinherit themselves of the source of the American liberties and exchange it for the perilous antitraditional collective mentality.

Nevertheless, in America we have still the Bill of Rights and the ballot, which will and must reverse the trend of no-win-wars, adoration of the by the communists conceived United Nations Charter and the beefing-up of anti-human, anti-freedom institutions here and of such regimes abroad.

The much propagandized successes of the bankrupt communist bureaucracies can be example only to insane and to crooks. Let us organize to cure them. Besides destroying communism by replacing it with democratic institutions, this is a modest task of the Anti-Communist International, in whose name I am addressing you. Thank you.

AMERICA BLACKMAILED

HEADLINE 1972 — The following news story may hit the headlines some summer day in 1972:

"The President late yesterday afternoon signed into law the so-called Equal Property Act (H.R. 2216), following the capitulation of both House and Senate before the threats of an angry mob of proponents, estimated by District police officials at upwards of 600,000 persons, which had besieged the Capitol for over 3 days, holding Congress virtually hostage . . . pending a vote on the bill.

"As word of the 'surrender' by Congress was passed thru the crowd, its leaders called for a march on the White House. Within twenty minutes, the partisans began gathering before the Executive Mansion and, shortly before 4 p.m., leveled the iron fence and were milling around the lawn of the President's residence and office. The throng became increasingly unruly as no word of presidential action on the legislation was forthcoming from Administration aides, and, at about 4:45 p.m. militant leaders shouted instructions to burn the White House. Within minutes after these orders were issued — and as torches were being carried toward the East Wing of the White House — Presidential Press Secretary Elbert Williams appeared at the main entrance to the Executive Offices and announced that the President had signed the bill into law.

"A tremendous roar of approval arose, and a partisan band struck up the triumphant People's Power theme song, 'March of the Masses.' Following the signing of the bill, the mob separated into apparently planned 'recrimination squads' and systematically sacked, burned, and looted a 12-block area of downtown Washington as District police and a scattering of military units looked on helplessly. Late last night, Metropolitan Police Chief Tweedy estimated total damage at over $300 million.

"The Equal Property Act completely discards the constitutional concept of private property and sets up a system for the transfer of all private property to all Americans on a so-called equal-share basis. Authority to administer the Act is vested in a Commission in which majority control is to be held by representatives of the poor, the underprivileged, the unemployed, and minority groups which have suffered past discrimination.

"Washington officials see little chance of the Act's being overturned by the Supreme Court in view of threats by People's Power leaders to paralyze all major cities in event of an adverse ruling. The high court is expected to be further guided by the fact that overwhelming People's Power forces earlier this month succeeded in dissolving both the Democratic and Republican national conventions . . . leaving the Power candidate, Arthur Danrig, as the only name on the ballot in November's national election."

THE ROAD WE TRAVEL — Sounds preposterous? We'd like to think so.

But . . . as a matter of cold, hard fact, this nation — the land of the free — is moving relentlessly toward such a fate . . . as government by law gradually submits to the blackmailers of America.

Today's blackmailers operate under the phony slogan of the "right to dissent." They have distorted and magnified the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and right of peaceable assembly into a license for intimidation, sedition, riot, and anarchy.

Under this false banner, they have blocked the traffic and commerce of American cities, shut down the operation of government offices, destroyed private and public property, disrupted our educational procedures, interfered with our selective service system, obstructed inductions into our armed forces, provided aid and comfort to the enemy, desecrated our country's flag, and vandalized hundreds of communities thruout the nation.

Our government of laws, our government of constitutional processes, has begun to crumble before a tide of lawlessness which has not only been condoned but even encouraged by many government leaders.

Instead of firmly supporting the enforcement of law and order on the local level, federal officials and other national leaders gave aid and encouragement to the law breakers . . . on the basis that civil disobedience is justified when the violators are acting in a "good" cause.

BREAK IN THE DIKE — This was the great breakthru in the dike of law and order.

For almost two centuries, we had been taught — and we believed fervently — that the law must be respected, whether we felt it to be a good or a bad law.

All of us know the nagging discomfort of living under laws that are inequitable. In such cases, we may exercise our constitutional rights to bring about a change . . . but we do it by lawful process.

Under provisions of the Constitution, the full power of the United States government should have been placed squarely behind local authorities in the breaking up of the very first sit-in in America.

True, it was peaceable assembly . . . but it clearly interfered with the rights of others to carry on their normal activities under the protection of the law.

But . . . prominent national politicians, blinded to legal justice by the possibility of making political hay, placed themselves on the side of anarchy.

We all remember the statement of the late Adlai Stevenson . . . that he would consider it an honor to go to jail for such civil disobedience. His remarks were echoed by hundreds of others . . . and mob power in America was born.

AS YE SOW — The Watts riots in California served as Lesson No. 1 in large-scale blackmail. This outbreak of mass crime was not punished. It was rewarded with countless millions of federal dollars poured into the area in the hope that the rioters would "cool it."

After that demonstration of largess, can you blame the Negroes of Detroit, Newark, Milwaukee, Chicago, and scores of other American cities for wanting to get in on the action?

The amazing thing is this: Not only have government officials condoned such lawlessness . . . government employes have played a major role in fomenting many of the disorders . . . under the guise of helping the oppressed. Anti-poverty employes in Newark organized and publicized the police-brutality mass rally which led to the catastrophic riot in that city. A Newark anti-poverty official, Willie Wright, urged Negroes to arm themselves against "honkie cops." The agency's accountant, Charles McCray, was arrested for taking part in the shooting during the riot . . . but officials refused even to suspend him from his job.

This supplement is reprinted by TACT as a public service, by permission of Busine

The situation has been the same in countless communities all over the nation. Sargent Shriver's anti-poverty agency admits that there are convicted criminals on the agency's payroll . . . and that many of them have been given jobs counseling youngsters.

Many of the black-power movement's most militant activists — including riot-inciter H. Rap Brown — have been on the government's payroll . . . often as $50-per-day consultants.

It's widely said that the government is motivated by a desire to placate the troublemakers.

Actually, the reverse situation prevails. The trouble makers are blackmailing our government . . . successfully and repeatedly. They seek money . . . and power. They're getting both.

BLUEPRINT FOR CHAOS — Communists are prominent in nearly all the organizations which are fomenting this anarchy in the U.S. They have been welcomed with open arms into the National Conference For New Politics, a group whose Chicago convention was keynoted by Martin Luther King. One of the leaders of the conference happily commented that Communists would provide leadership for the group.

Bettina Aptheker, an admitted Communist, continues to hold a top position in the peace and draft-resistance movements.

Stokely Carmichael has returned from his Red tour to lead his followers toward "the destruction of the American government."

And dozens of others — with countless citations for Communist connections — hold prominent positions in scores of violent "dissent" organizations in this country.

One of these is the Revolutionary Action Movement which has documented its plans for the revolutionary end of the American way of life. RAM says its followers will "strike by night and spare none" . . . that it will foment "mass riots, blocking of traffic, burning of buildings . . . street fighting."

The planners call for "sabotage in the cities — knocking out electric power first, then transportation — and guerrilla warfare . . ."

The blueprint for chaos goes on and on — in great detail — reminding one of Adolf Hitler's brazen revelations in Mein Kampf.

In this atmosphere in which lawlessness and intimidation are tolerated — even rewarded — it is understandable that the crime rate has soared.

THE HARVEST — The FBI reports that the incidence of major crime in the United States is rising at an annual rate of 16% . . . far above the rate of growth in our population.

If the uptrend which has persisted thru 1967 is projected to include 1968, more than 4½ million major crimes will be committed this year. Based on our population tics Corporation, publishers of Babson's Weekly Forecast Service, which is avail-

of a little over 200 million, this means that you will have one chance in 47 of being murdered, maimed, or robbed in the next 12 months!

More and more, criminals are being coddled by our courts . . . and treated as the unfortunate victims of poor social environment. Punishment is out; gentle rehabilitation is in. Yet, a recent FBI study showed that 57% of offenders released on parole in 1963 were rearrested within 2½ years . . . and that 83% of those acquitted or dismissed in 1963 were rearrested within the same 30-month period.

POLICE HANDCUFFED — The Supreme Court has seriously impaired the efficiency of law enforcement agencies by restrictions on investigative procedures and techniques . . . and has so hogtied the police in searches and interrogations that thousands of hardened criminals are yearly set free to prey again on the public.

The sharp uptrend in acquittals, suspended sentences, and refusals to prosecute — particularly in juvenile and minority-group cases — has influenced police officers in hundreds of communities to blind their eyes to gross law violations. Because of this frustration, police morale today is at an all-time low.

The problem was well summed up by Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, who wrote in the April 1967 issue of the FBI Law Enforcement Bulletin: "Morality, integrity, law and order, and other cherished principles of our great heritage are battling for survival in many communities today. They are under constant attack from degrading and corrupting influences which, if not halted, will sweep away every vestige of decency and order remaining in our society."

WHOM WE INDICT — Whom are we to indict for sparking this chaos in America? Are the prime defendants the Stokely Carmichaels, the H. Rap Browns, the hippies, the draft-card burners, the peaceniks, the juvenile delinquents, the rabble rousers, the Commies who have gained respectability as "honest dissenters"? Certainly, most of these could be brought before the bar of justice to answer charges of law violations . . . and they should be.

However, there is a stronger, truer bill of indictment which may be drawn against those who have invited the bloody blackmail of America by permitting, even encouraging, mounting civil disobedience. We speak of men such as the late Adlai Stevenson, Bobby Kennedy, Nicholas Katzenbach, Earl Warren . . . Senators Ribicoff, Javits, Clark, and Case . . . and yes, even Hubert Humphrey and Lyndon B. Johnson. These men of power, prestige, and great influence in the political structure of America have permitted the concept of "freedom of speech" to be expanded to include subversion, intimidation, sedition, and incitement to riot; they have condoned the distortion of "academic freedom" to encompass the adulteration of young minds with Communist doctrine and the disintegration of a well-disciplined educational system; they have allowed "freedom of assembly" to mushroom into disruption of peaceful activity, mob rule, riot, and insurrection.

Unless those in authority in the United States can be influenced to abandon the suicidal course on which they have embarked — or unless they can be replaced by men who will — we cannot hope to restore in our nation the kind of domestic peace and order which has made our many generations proud to be Americans . . . living in a land of freedom, security, opportunity, and justice under law.

The crisis we now face is the most serious, the most dangerous, in the history of our country. Each of us must diligently employ our influence and our effort — in speech, letters, and at the ballot box — to help set straight the way.

Whites Told to Stop Lectures to Blacks On Being Nonviolent

The Southern Regional Council called on white Americans yesterday to stop lecturing black Americans against violating the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s nonviolent philosophy.

"Let white America for once concede to black America strength and dignity sufficient to make that decision without advice or admonishment," the council said in a statement issued by its executive committee in Atlanta.

"Let white America acknowledge that black Americans, as Dr. King has proved, have equal moral personality as human beings and have the qualities of leadership and courage and dignity which all Americans need."

The council is a nonprofit organization of white and Negro Southerners founded in 1944 for "the achievement of equal opportunity for all the South's people."

Stating that Dr. King's assassination "once again reveals the psychosis of violence and the cancer of racism in American society," the council asserted that this was not the time for "bitter and unrestrained recriminations."

It said that "the pangs of conscience white America feels in his [Dr. King's] death give all Americans the chance—and perhaps the last chance—to make the choice between the kind of society for which Dr. King lived and died and the kind of society which denies equal opportunity and relies on force above justice and equity."

"If America cannot produce leadership toward the socie that Dr. King saw in his d for America," the st said, "then Americ ished."

A STATEMENT ON THE DEATH OF DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING

Issued by the Executive Committee of the Southern Regional Council, Inc., meeting in Atlanta, Georgia, April 6, 1968

The assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., once again reveals the psychosis of violence and the cancer of racism in American society. Once again, America is stained with the blood of a courageous and noble leader, with the tragedy of a husband and father senselessly destroyed. His murder violates the ideals for which he stood, ideals which express the great tradition of America.

This is not the time for bitter and unrestrained recriminations against the society which killed Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., but rather the time for all of us to pay heed at last to all that has already been said to the conscience of the nation in the grim, ghastly past — at the murders of John F. Kennedy, Medgar Evers, of the four little children in a Birmingham Sunday School, and so many others.

This is the time for white America to forego lecturing black Americans against violating the non-violent philosophy to which Dr. King's life will stand as a memorial for all time. Let white America for once concede to black America strength and dignity sufficient to make that decision without advice or admonishment. Let white America acknowledge that black Americans, as Dr. King has proved, have equal moral personality as human beings and have the qualities of leadership and courage and dignity which all Americans need.

The life of Dr. King transcends the violence done throughout his career to the American ideals for which he stood and the final obscene violence to him. His leadership during his life and the pangs of conscience white America feels in his death give all Americans the chance — and perhaps the last chance — to make the choice between the kind of society for which Dr. King lived and died, and the kind of society which denies equal opportunity and relies on force above justice and equity. If America cannot produce leadership toward the society that Dr. King saw in his dream for America, then America is finished.

Let white America look into its own heart.

Dear Mr. Cleghorn:

For years I have been telling my northern friends that the range of racial attitudes in the North is no different from that anywhere in the South. It's very difficult for them to believe this fact, however.

I found a vivid illustration of this point yesterday when I picked up the December edition of the South Today from the mail on my doorstep. The following was written in pencil in the space around my address: "I shot a nigger in Roxbury. Rather than integrate I'll shoot more and my friends are all like me. I want to raise an army to kill all of them and the whites that hang with them." I am enclosing a photocopy of this for your information.

I have admired the work of the Southern Regional Council for many years. I wish there were a similar organization in the North with your courage and commitment. I don't think there is.

A. The following is testimony given under oath at Hearings of General Legislative Investigating Committee - State of Mississippi 1962 Regular Session. Manning Johnson and Dr. J. B. Matthews testifying on the Southern Regional Council.

TESTIMONY OF MANNING JOHNSON: 10 years in the Communist Conspiracy in the Southeast - rejected Communism and began testifying in behalf of the United States of America.

SENATOR RAINACH: The Chair orders that Exhibit WJ-3 be made a part of the record of this committee (see page 152)

MANNING JOHNSON: I would like also- to save a little time - to introduce that article from the Daily Worker of March 9,1955,pg.4, which contains the names of the leaders of the Southern Regional Council, and I would like to say that the Southern Regional Council was formed by this fellow Jackson who was a member of the Communist Party. I would like to say it wouldn't have been as successful as it was if it were not for the fact that the little church office building presided over by Bishop Arthur Moore of the Methodist Church allowed them to have headquarters there at 63 Auburn Avenue.

QUESTION: Did I understand you to say that Jackson was the founder of the Southern Regional Council?

ANSWER: That's correct, according to the Daily Worker.

QUESTION: And they have offices - where did you say?

ANSWER: In a little church office building presided over by Bishop Arthur Moore of the Methodist Church.

QUESTION: That's in Atlanta, Georgia. Is that correct?

ANSWER: That is correct.

Note: The above testimony can be found on page 73 - Hearings of General Legislative Committee - State of Mississippi, 1962 Regular Session.

Note: According to FBI file # 85-441A - James E. Jackson, Jr. Southern Regional Director Communist Party USA and wanted for Conspiracy to Advocate the Violent Overthrow of the Government.

DR. MATTHEWS: Now, these three organizations which I have referred to, namely, the Southern Regional Council, the Southern Conference Educational Fund, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare were characterized by interlocking personnel. I will read you the names of the individuals who were in the top bracket among officials in the Southern Regional Council and have also been affiliated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and or the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

Now, you may ask yourselves the question, how do these individuals manage to get into all of these organizations? Will W. Alexander, Rufus Atwood, Mrs. Daisy Bates, Mr. F. Woods Beckman, President A.D.Beittel, Rabbi Stanley Brau, Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Mrs. Myra J. Bryant, Louis E. Burnham, Mr. Hodding Carter, Paul R. Christopher, Rufus E. Trenholm, Don West, Aubrey W. Williams and Marion A. Wright.

I have named individuals who were on the Board of Directors at one time or another of the Southern Regional Council and also were affiliated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and/or the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

(end of Dr. Matthews testimony)

C. Southern Regional Council is the recipient of Ford, Fund for the Republic grants of $497,000.00. Fund for the Republic grants began with the Ford Motor Company. Southern Regional Council is the parent organization of 12 statewide Councils on Human Relations operated only in the Southern States. Southern Regional Council has been able to exploit the facilities of religion and education because of a quasi-religious status afforded by occupancy of space in a building owned by a huge church. The leadership of few units of the Communist apparatus have records of Communist affiliations which exceed those of present and past directors of Southern Regional Council.

Indeed I am fed up:

I am dog tired of these insidious sneak thieves and their off-key versions of communism:

I am dog tired of being imposed upon because I am a white man – a Southern white man;

I am fed up with working for strangers. I am fed up with generation upon generation of reliefers – foreign and domestic – living on the product of my sweat, my taxes, and with being repaid for my largess in venom and hate.

I am dog tired of cynical, addle-headed legal opinions handed down by a fellow-travelling Supreme Court, a court neither competent nor morally honest.

I am dog tired of preachers, priests, and rabbis who turn their backs on God Almighty to forage in sociological fields and who talk to me of the hereafter in terms of Karl Marx. I tell them, now, I want back the old-time religion.

I am dog tired of seeing innocent children driven from pillar to post for the political aggrandizement of debased politicians.

I am dog tired of the unctuous tones of cynical TV newscasters, and of ideologues who pose as reporters while spewing distorted versions of my people.

In short, I am dog tired of those who would malign traditional America – the South. And because I am, I mean to fight. And so long as I fight – we fight – they cannot win.

And fight we shall.

Negroes to Be More Mil Study in Atlanta Reports

By HENRY P. LEIFERMANN
By United Press International

The first major study of Negro teen-agers in 27 years indicates the new generation has a deep mistrust of whites and will be more militant in their demands than current Black Power advocates, the Southern Regional Council (SRC) reported Friday.

The study was conducted among 688 students in five all-Negro high schools in Atlanta, and the responses were analyzed by sociologists from Emory University, Atlanta University, city school officials and SRC researchers.

Only a slight majority of those questioned felt that nonviolence was the best approach to civil rights advances, the study showed, leading SRC to comment:

"It seems unlikely that the next generation of Negro teen-agers will favor moderate means to gain equality."

THE SRC REPORT, entitled "Black Youth in a Southern Metropolis," was the first such undertaking since a similar study was made in 1940 by the American Council on Education.

SRC attached national implications to the report and recommended a "national undertaking" to study the nation's Negro youth.

It predicted that "confusion and transition" will move tomorrow's Negro teen-agers to more forceful means in obtaining their goals.

Other conclusions:

ABOUT 45 per cent of those questioned do not feel whites usually can be trusted.

ABOUT half opposed Negroes fighting in Vietnam.

ONLY 51 per cent agreed with the statement that "nonviolence is always the best approach" for Negroes to use in obtaining their goals.

THE MAJORITY of those questioned were between the ages of 14 and 18 and were in grades nine through 12. Eight per cent were natives of Atlanta, and 42 per cent were living in "abnormal" family situations, mostly with only a mother.

A MAIN THEME that emerged from the study was dissatisfaction with basic city services, including recreational facilities, police protection, garbage collection and the condition of sidewalk, streets and sewers in Negro sections.

Such dissatisfacion the study said "bodes ill for the future," and noted that these same conditions appeared to be basic causes of most urban riots in recent years.

About 21 per cent, SRC said, advocated carrying guns, and [illegible] dem- [illegible]

At the same time, the report showed, most students "are not strong believers in Black Power, nor do they think the situation would be improved if Negroes were more separated from whites.

About 53 per cent agreed with the statement: "If things don't get better in Atlanta, there will be riots.

"Similar conclusions were reached in a number of other American cities," the report said.

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE IS the ROOT-CAUSE of the Civil (Rights) War 1861 - 1865 and the present attempt at "colored" - bastardization of our WHITE Race with "negro" - integration!

THAT PART which says: "We (?) hold these truths (lie) to be self-evident (lie) that all men are created equal (the big lie)."

GOD'S WORD says: Genesis 9:24-27 READ IT!

The Declaration of Independence further says: "But when a long train of abuses (Civil War, Supreme Courts "negro" - equal and "negro" - integration (intermarriage) decisions and Civil Rights War (1958-1960) and usurpations . . . it is their right . . . duty to throw off such Government . . ." for and by White people ONLY! A Government of, by and for White people.

The Declaration of Independence is a lie against the Word of God and against the WHITE race, for the ONLY EVIDENCE IS GOD'S WORD that all men in their own and separate race were created equal!

Thomas Jefferson was not even an Anointed preacher, let alone God, but the people believd him, instead of God!

SOUTH CAROLINA'S Governor Wm. H. Gist, 1858-1860 whose mansion still stands near Union, South Carolina said "If Abraham Lincoln is elected, South Carolina would secede---" WE did and TODAY for July 4, 1959 on, WE celebrate WHITE SUPREMACY and our Independence against Federal "negro"-equality and against Federal "negro"-integration (inter-marriage)!

The U. S. Government up until 1954 outgrew and became the most powerful nation on earth under GOD in "negro"---UNequality and Indians Reservated!

Abraham Lincoln whose mistaken assumption that Free White men were "half"-free and "half"-slave with negroism sodomic-slaves caused the murder of 10,000's of our white brethren north and south, against GOD'S WORD.

Most all Holy Bibles have the Ancient map of the descendents of Ham, "negroes" into Africa (and from there brought into America.)

Here WE HONOUR Our GOD for HIS Supreme White Race Creation, and Praise His Great Name JESUS, the Christ.

Ignorance of God's Word excuseth no man! Contempt of WHITE people is disasterous, but Contempt of God's Word is death, hell and the Second Death. Rev. 20:12.

The 666 of Rev. 13 is a number symbolizing DEATH, for the "mark" of any "B-E-A-S-T" or BEAST-MAN is Death: 6-Born in death (sin). 60-Standing Threat of Murder. Power of man's government. Heb. 2:14 "---him that HAD the power of death, that is the devil."

600---Worship of the dead: History books, Tombstones, Mounments, Unveilings. Idolatry!

This leaflet has been sent to many U. S. Senators, Congressmen, State Governors, Judges, Attorney-Generals, Colleges, Seminaries, Religious Headquarters, Newspapers, TV and Radio.

I CHALLENGE ANY white Non-Repenting "negro"-integrator, man or woman for discussion before the public, to prove that they are against God's Word and against their own White Race. Each side speaking alternately equal lengths of time, using their best representatives and advertising the date and discussion at least 30 days ahead.

I see you had a representative at this meeting at this smelly school, where he sat down with a representative of the Daily Worker and a motley crowd of Communists and communist-fronters. Seemed to be in congenial company.

The above picture was made at the Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tennessee, over the Labor Day week-end.

A high-level conference was held at this school for four days in which was mixed most of the Negroes who have produced the racial strife and tensions in the South, along with a bunch of pinks, punks and Communists.

This is what they plan for your children.

Now before you might come to any kind of a conclusion on this particular matter about how I feel, please listen until we get to the end of the message. I might say something that you don't like. You might not agree with me. I might not agree with you, but certainly we all ought to try to find out what the Bible says. Don't you believe that? (Amens). You know, I am just old-fashioned enough to believe that what the Bible says is so. Someone said, "Why you can not believe in the Virgin Birth of Jesus Christ, can you?" I said, "Certainly I do." (Amens). God's word says so. If I didn't it would relegate Jesus Christ to a position that he would not have my admiration, making him a liar because he claimed to be the Only Begotten Son of God. Therefore, I believe in the Virgin Birth of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Someone said, "You don't believe in the story about Jonah and the whale, do you?" I am like the old country preacher who said that if he heard that Jonah swallowed the whale, he would believe it if it was in the Bible. But I am glad that this Bible is a practical book. I go to it for guidance.

Now the Supreme Court of the United States of America has decided that segregation should no longer be accepted by our schools. There should be schools for colored and whites together. It declared that separate schools are unconstitutional. I tried to find something in the Bible that spoke about a black man. We know about Simon the Cyrene that carried the cross of Christ. We know that we should not be prejudiced, that everyone of them has a soul and that we should carry the gospel to the ends of the earth, and some day up yonder in heaven, it says, Some from every tribe and nation shall be there, and they shall sing the song of Moses and the lamb, and be gathered around the throne. (Rev. 5:9).

There are several different approaches that we could take to this subject, but we want to find out only what the Bible says. Certainly every clear-thinking citizen of the United States of America where this problem has arisen, believes that each one, each individual should have equal opportunities. We believe that, and we are going to call your attention to a verse of scripture. If you have your Bibles, open them please, to the 17th Chapter of Acts and you will find that Paul was standing on Mars Hill in Athens and he said, "Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things, ye are too superstitious. Wherein, I passed by and beheld your devotions and found this inscription on your altar "TO THE UNKNOWN GOD". He whom ye therefore ignorantly worship declare I unto you. God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is the Lord of Heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands, neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing that he giveth to all life and breath and all things and hath made of one (now the word blood is not in the original manuscript) and hath made of one all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the earth and hath determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitation, that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him and find him, though he be not far from every one of us, for in him we live and move and have our being, as certain also of your own poets have said, 'for we are also his offspring.' Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone or any graven image of man's device, and the times of this ignorance God winked at, but now commandeth all men to repent, because he hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance to all men in that he hath raised him from the dead, and when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked and others said, "We will hear the again of this matter.

We have a terrific problem that is facing us at this time. I received a questionnaire from Don Larson, sent out at the request of Ervin, and in this questionnaire, (you probably saw it in the Daily News) the question was asked "Has your denomination taken a stand on segregation? If so, what is it?" No stand has been taken as far as I know. "Do you talk about race problems from the pulpit?" I don't need to answer that. "If the law requires Florida to have mixed schools soon, what would you tell your congregation is the right thing to do?" I believe that if the law requires us to have mixed schools, we are going to have so much trouble here that what God has laid on our hearts, on our minds, in the past, will come to pass more quickly and that is a crying need in the United States of America for Christian Day Schools (Amens) with a Christian emphasis; one where you can send your children and not be afraid that they will be subject to ridicule if they don't want to dance and take part in all these things that are worldly and sinful, and I believe that God is raising up Christian testimonies. I am for the Miami Christian Day School down yonder, and you-all can get applications for it, and we are going to have one here, the Lord willing, we are going to have it, not this year, but next year. (Amens).

Equal Opportunities.

What about this problem about the negro? First of all, I believe in equal opportunities. Listen to this. In Verse 30, it says "But now commandeth ALL MEN everywhere to repent." I am glad that God is no respector of persons. Listen to me. God does not look upon a person's skin to see whether it is black, yellow, red or white. He loves that man's soul, and there will be a lot of black men up yonder in heaven. There will be a lot of white men in hell. I know some of the finest Christians in the world that have skin that is black. I am not an advocate of that which I heard one time, saying that a colored man has no soul. I think that is foolish. God's word says in the 26th verse of the 17th Chapter of the Book of Acts "That he hath made of one ("blood" has been inserted) he hath made of one, all nations; made of Adam, all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and THE BOUNDS OF THEIR HABITATION". What about segregation? Where did segregation originate? Let us turn back here to the 4th Chapter of the Book of Genesis, and Verse 15. "And the Lord set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him." It was a visible mark that Cain had, a mark that was set upon him. We would like to call your attention to the 9th Chapter. We must lay this scriptural foundation, the 9th Chapter of the Book of Genesis, Verse 24, "And Noah awoke from his wine (now he sinned), and knew not what his younger son had done unto him. And he said Cursed be Canaan, a servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren, and he said, Blessed be the Lord God of Shem, and Canaan shall be his servant. God shall enlarge Japheth and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem, and Canaan shall be his servant." Did God intend that we should swallow this propaganda that is being promulgated today by certain societies, and especially the National Council of Churches? I tell you he did not intend that we should believe in it. God never said that there would be ONE WORLD, that there would be ONE CHURCH, that there would be ONE RACE until the Lord Jesus Christ comes back again, and then there will be ONE CHURCH, ONE FOLD, ONE SHEPHERD, and we will all be like the Lord Jesus when we see him. No more racial distinction—Racial distinction shall disappear when we see the Lord Jesus Christ, for God's word says "Beloved now are we, the sons of God, and it does not appear what we shall be, but we know when we shall see him we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." (I John 3:2). Until that time we are in the world that is governed by various societies and various races. We find that a problem was created when our forefathers brought the colored race here to the United States of America. What was God's original plan for it? Listen, as we look at this. We find in the 26th Verse of the 17th Chapter of the Books of Acts that God established the bounds of their habitation.. What does that sound like to you? It sounds to me like he meant the colored to be a certain place and he meant us to be a certain place. He meant the white race to be a certain place, and the yellow race to be a certain place and he established the bounds of their habitation. We are only paying for the sin that took place back in the days when slaves were brought in by the Dutch. We are paying for that today. There is a problem. We must face it. What are we going to do about it? The same God that said that he wanted to give ALL MEN, EVERYWHERE a chance to repent; the same God who said he sent his son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life; (John 3:16) the same God that said that he wanted to give assurance to all men (Acts 16: Verse 32); also said that he established THE BOUNDS OF THEIR HABITATION (bounds of the races of the world). You might not agree with me, but you are not agreeing with the word of God.

Now, let's look over here and see where separation (or segregation) started with regard to the children of Israel. God called out A MAN, (we take up in our Sunday school lessons the Bible, we do not have a quarterly). We just take a chapter. We have the 12th Chapter of the Book of Genesis today. Next Sunday it will be the 13th Chapter). Here we see "The Lord God said unto Abraham, get thee out of thy country and out of thy father's house unto a land that I will show thee, and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee and make thy name great, and thou shall be a blessing, and I will bless them that bless thee and curse him that curseth thee, and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed. (Gen. 12:1-3). So it was that God called a man after men had decided, that they would GET TOGETHER. You read the 11th Chapter of the Book of Genesis, and you will find that the world was all of one language and one speech, and they said, "Come now, let us build us a tower, let us make us a name that will reach up into heaven." This is the same thing that people are saying today. Let US do this with OUR program, let US make US a name, let US build US a great edifice, let US reach up into heaven, and God looked down upon them and he confused their tongues, (Gen. 11:1-7). In Genesis 12, God said "Come over here Abraham. I am going to make YOUR name great." That's the way God works. I don't care how many man-made schemes or how many amalgamations, conventions and conferences and presbyteries, and one thing or other man might think up, God uses MEN and God calls MEN today to herald his Good News of Salvation. Here we see that Abraham was called out. "I want to make of YOU a great nation, I want to bless him that blesseth thee, and curse them that curseth thee, and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 12.)

Segregation Settles Disputes

Well, we find that many times the Bible by segregation has settled disputes. Let's turn over here to the 13th Chapter of the Book of Genesis. We will read a story about Abraham and Lot; both had a large number of cattle. Abraham said, "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, is not the whole land before thee? Separate (segregate) thyself, I pray thee from me, if thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go the right, or if thou depart to the right hand, then will I go to the left." And so it was that they SEPARATED and God blessed them. I have had some well-meaning people ask me just this week "Don't you think it is terrible there are SO MANY DIFFERENT CHURCHES? Don't you think that we all ought to get together and forget our differences?

Get Together — Forget Differences?

Brother, sister, if we all get together and forget our differences, we would HAVE NOTHING LEFT. We can not get together with people who deny the BLOOD of the Lord Jesus Christ to take away sin. We can not get together with people who deny the precious VIRGIN BIRTH of the Lord Jesus Christ, if we are going to earnestly contend for the faith that was once delivered to the saints. We can not get together with people who deny the DEITY of the Lord Jesus Christ and relegate him to A son OF God, instead of THE ONLY BEGOTTEN SON OF GOD. God's word upholds segregation.

You say, well look, that's natural for you. You are from Georgia. No, I just went through there slowly. I am from Minnesota, but I want you to know that I am from southern Minnesota. (Laughter). I believe that we ought to take a safe, sane, scriptural approach to the problem that is all around us. I shall not defy my country, United States of America, but I am glad that the United States of America allows us to have freedom of thought and allows us to have Christian schools if we want them, and to set up our own rules and regulations. Maybe it is God's way of saying to his people that they are to be a separated, (segregated) people from the world. It might make us realize that. God's word says, "Come out from among them and be ye separate," saith the Lord, "Touch not the unclean things and I will receive you." Why are not more people trusting Christ as Savior? Thank God, we have seen them trust the Lord as their Savior here every week in this church. Why are not more people trusting Jesus Christ as their Savior? I will tell you why. Too many Christians look like the world, act like the world, talk like the world and smell like the world! Say amen, you know it hurts, brother. Now that's the truth. Don't you think that God's people ought to uphold some pretty high standards? You say "Oh, Brother Ziemer, don't preach that way. After all, you have made enough people mad already. I am just sick and tired of listening to programs on the radio trying to protect minority groups that are being used all over by Communists to promote their evil ends. Let me say this, and don't judge me about my feelings when I say it. I have preached for colored folks. They like to hear me preach. Some of them come up and tell me that I preach almost as good as their colored preachers. (Laughter). Don't misunderstand me when I tell you that one of the programs of the Communist party is to see to it that the United States of America, if possible, has a mixture of races, so that the standard will be lowered. I have been up in the North, and I have never seen a white man walking with a colored woman down the street. I have seen plenty of white women walking around with colored men. I feel that men will take this message that I am delivering today, and I feel that if you women love your men, you will take it too. (Amens) You talk about people that are spreading hate about the negro. We don't think we have hatred for the negro. We believe that they ought to have equal opportunities for education. We believe that they have not been treated in some places like they should have been treated, but we believe also that the hatred is on the other side. I have picked up little magazines that are edited by the colored and the hatred is there when talking about the whites. This is being used by communists. We believe sincerely that America and the states will work out this problem, and we believe it ought to be left in the hands of the individual states to work it out. We have not had trouble down here. Where do you find they have had trouble? In Washington, D. C. and Detroit (and other northern cities). We have not had a lot of trouble here. We would like to see some well-meaning people just let us alone and let us settle our own problems. Irregardless of that, I want to call your attention to something that I believe in my heart is God's way, and if I make anybody angry, it will be because of the fact that you are prejudiced, because this is God's word. In the 33rd Chapter of the Book of Exodus, we read "For wherein shall it be known here that I and thy people have found grace in thy sight? is it not in that thou goest with us? so shall we be separated, I and thy people, from all the people that are upon the face of the earth." So it was that the children of Israel practiced segregation.

I call your attention to Leviticus, the 20th Chapter, Verse 24, "And I have said unto you, ye shall inherit their land, and I will give it unto you to possess it, a land that floweth with milk and honey, and I am the Lord your God which have separated you from other people." God knew what should be done.

MARRIAGE PROBLEM

I was talking to a lady here just the other day. She attended our church. I asked her this question, "Would you want your son to marry a colored woman?" She said, "I would not care. It would be just fine with me." Even when I tried to show her in the word of God that it is unscriptural, she still would not accept it, because she had that in her mind. In the 9th Chapter of Ezra, Verse 12 it says, "Give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth forever that ye may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and leave it for an inheritance for your children forever." In Ezra, the 10th Chapter, Verse 10, "Ezra the priest says, "Ye have transgressed and have taken strange wives to increase the trespass of Israel." So this is what God's word says in the Old Testament, along with a number of other verses about segregation.

Segregation In the New Testament

Now in conclusion of my message, let us see what God's word says about segregation in the New Testament. We mentioned before that you, as a child of God, a born again person, you are to be separated or segregated from the world. We mentioned that a Christian is supposed to be separate in all things. I don't mean that he can't have fun. I was out once with a Holiness preacher (I love him, I am not making fun of him when I say this) we were having such a big time, he said, "It must be a sin it is so much fun." (laughter). I tell you that God does not want his people to be long-faced. We ought to be the most happy people on the face of the earth. I can sing, "I'm Glad I'm a Christian". Now it says here in the 15th Chapter of the Book of John, if the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, (the world system), the world would love his own, but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." (John 15:18-19).

Today It's Popular To Get Everybody To Speak Well of You.

I heard a rather insipid radio program. I have made remarks about it, and I know that Noel Smith in the Baptist Bible Tribune had something to say about a television program that he heard called "The Pastor's Study." The phone rings ding-a-ling and the pastor answers it. Somebody asks a question, "What about having music in the church?" I don't think there is anything wrong with it but of course there is a difference of opinion. You understand that, don't you? Then a big broad smile, you know, and he goes on again. Somebody asks him about the virgin birth and he said, "Well, I believe in the virgin birth, but of course, there are those that do not believe with me. There is a difference of opinion, of course, you know that, don't you? The big broad smile, ding-a-ling! Hello, Pastor's study. Sounds so sweet, so insipidly sweet, you know. Noel Smith said he ought to drink a pint of vinegar for breakfast and a pint of vinegar for lunch and a half gallon for supper and get up and preach the judgment of God (laughter). I tell you there is too much of this mollicoddling today. We ought to warn men to flee from the wrath that is to come for there is a God that sits up yonder according to the verses that we have read in the 17th Chapter of the Book of Acts, who shall judge the world and, brother, sister, one day, you are going to have to stand before the Lord Jesus Christ and it won't make any difference whether your skin is black or white or red or yellow! It will make a lot of difference if your heart is black or white. I am glad that the blood of Jesus Christ, God's son, will cleanse us from all sin, and I am glad that God, one day is going to wipe out this segregation business. I am in favor of letting Him do it. (Amens). What about it, Christians? God's word says, "Be ye not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed," be not moulded as jello in a mold to this world. You have seen these little molds for jello you can make almost anything out of them; they squeeze in the jello, you know, and it forms right around the mold. So it is with the majority of the people today, and some Christians are molded to the world. Their habits are of the world. They look like the world, they act like the world, they talk like the world and they smell like the world! God said "Be ye not conformed to this world but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind that you may prove what is good and acceptable and perfect will of God." (Rom. 12:2). Moses believed that he ought to be segregated or separated by faith. "Moses, when he became of years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing to rather suffer the afflictions of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." (Heb. 11:24). Brother, I believe that we ought to take that down deep in our hearts as Christians. God's word says in 1st John, 2nd Chapter, Verse 15 through 17. I want you to listen to this. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world, and the world passes away and the lusts thereof but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." Separate yourself from the world. Your spiritual prosperity and posterity will abide.

I John 5:21 warns us, "Keep yourself from idols."—Oh, but you say, "I'm not an idol worshipper"—Brother, listen, anything that you put above God—your home, your family, your pleasure—any thing that you put above God is an idol—leave it. Segregate yourself. God will bless you.

The Unequal Yoke

Now turn to II Cor. 6:14-18. "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers"—Segregate—A Christian young man has no business marrying an unsaved girl. A young lady who is a Christian has no business marrying an unsaved man (Amens). Unequal yokes in business bring disaster. Now what are we supposed to do?

SEGREGATE—COME OUT—CLEAN OUT—all the way—and praise God it says—I (God himself) will RECEIVE you. "And will be a FATHER unto you"—all the privileges of sonship and HEIRSHIP will be ours "And ye shall be my sons and daughters saith the Lord Almighty"—Hallelujah! Let's let go and let GOD have HIS WAY.—

Acts 5:29

Dear Christian men + women,

God does not force or coerce the free wills of His creatures God is no tyrant
Be it written, to live as freemen but do not use your liberty as a cloak for malice?

To maintain the American way of life and pass it intact to succeeding generations is the responsibility of every true American.

Freedom has never been given to men or nations, it had to be won, and it has to be kept by constant faithfulness. Do you believe in this freedom and in this country? If you do you will never side with wrong and cruelty. You will fight, if necessary, to keep this country, your country, the United States of America - strong + free - from D.A.R. Manual for citizenship - 1945 Edition

Our safety, our liberty, depends upon preserving the Constitution of the United States, as our fathers made it, inviolate. The people of these United States are the rightful masters of both Congress + courts, not to overthrow the Constitution but to overthrow the men who pervert the Constitution — Abraham Lincoln

The history of liberty is a history of the limitation of government power, not the increase of it. When we resist, therefore, the concentration of power, we are resisting the process of death because a concentration of power is what always precedes the destruction of human liberties — Woodrow Wilson

William Penn said: "Men must be governed by God or they will be ruled by tyrants!"
Edmund Burke said: "All that is necessary for triumph of evil is that good men will do nothing." Tyrannical behavior is a violation of the Fifth Commandment.

In 1958 the American Bar Assn warned: "The greatest asset the Communists have at the present time is not the hydrogen bomb, certainly not Soviet satellites but world ignorance of their tactics, strategy, and objectives."

Patriotism means to stand by the country. It does not mean to stand only by the President. It is unpatriotic not to oppose him to the exact extent that by inefficiency or achievement he fails in his duty to stand by the country — Theodore Roosevelt from Congressional Record Vol. LXXVII pp (1539-40)

Lunacharsky, the Commissar of public education, publicly declared at Moscow: "We hate Christianity and Christians even the best of them must be looked upon as our worst enemies. We must learn to hate, and it is only then that we shall conquer the world."

Human beings have the right to defend themselves against unjust aggression and oppression

Americans are staunch defenders of freedom - true?

Constitutional Govt. is designed to serve the people not dictate or oppress them again?
With the Evil, satanic use of listening devices which type methods of control

Why should good, honest American citizens obey orders contrary to right reason? Accurate information, knowledge, truth, facts are necessary before citizens are able to render wise decisions and take right action, agree?

At a faculty meeting, Columbia professors, by a vote of 40 to 22, placed themselves on record as opposing Congressional investigations of educational institutions. Under the impulsion of Dr. Franz Boas, anthropologist, almost single-handedly, revolutionized national thinking on the controversial subject of race. It was obvious that a thesis so pleasing to the Soviet propagandists + non-Western races would have an erosive effect upon our basic American racial concepts. Appropriately, there has always been an unconcealed affinity of Boas' anthropologists for social and communist causes. Boas himself, after a lifetime of pretended non-partisanship went overboard for the communist line during the war. He signed the famous March 5, 1941, statement defending the Communist Party. L.C. Dunn, who on Boas' death, succeeding him as the most strident propagandist for his doctrines, has written booklets under the UNESCO imprimatur which, financed by U.S. Taxpayers, have had widest distribution. The anthropological faculty at Columbia has plugged directly into the communist strategy of dividing the American people by creating racial antagonisms in our national politics. Columbia has Arthur Sulzberger, the man of money who is always consulted on major university policy. The Columbia influences which are now working - usually blindly in the interest of World Communism are more indirect. They operate on the levels of foreign policy pontifications which further communist warped ends. They speak misleadingly in the name of world peace for policies which discourage + have the effect of confusing American resistance to the communist advance.

Then reality, fact, truth is the origin, source of forced racial integration come from a Communist, dedicated to the destruction of our free American way of life - Communism is a satanic scourge - then forced racial integration is from a satanic source devised to weaken resistance of white, Christian women in associating with those who are dangerous to soul + body, salvation, human happiness, health, peace of mind - for the unholy, criminal intent to rock: Sexual License: Key Soviet Strategy - Readers Digest Mag. - March 1955 (this strategy produces insane moral conditions in society) READ: PROV. 14:34, ROMANS 8:8, TOB. 12:10

Then this forced racial integration was devised with future intent to corrupt the morals of white, Christian women - Communism attacks Christian Faith + morals READ: 1 COR 15:33 1 PETER 5:8

REMEMBER: We are products of our environments and creatures of habit (conditioning process of racial integration?)

Is it true there are unjust laws? Some devised by evil cruel tyrants for base, unholy intent?

Is anyone required or obliged to obey evil orders READ: ECCL 15:21 why should people obey orders contrary to right reason?

How then could forced racial integration have been from a true, patriotic American, just, source?

Communism is intrinsically wrong and no one who would save Christian civilization may collaborate with it in any undertaking whatsoever — Pope Pious XI to why should American Govt officials elected + appointed to public office for the purpose of upholding the Constitution + representing the American people promote, force upon others, champion the cause of Communist devised forced racial integration? What sense for Americans to aid + abet the enemies of America! Is this a right example for American leaders to set for nations of the free world? Are than guilty ignorant of facts, be deceived or traitors to the American people?

from American Mercury - Jan 1960 - Americans, Speak Out!

The Dept of Health, Education + Welfare employs fully one-third of the top echelon of the international conspirators in this country. This is not to imply, he said, that one-third of the people in the Dept are communists. On the contrary, Washington, sheerness estimate 75 to 80 per cent of the responsible officers are conspirators. The point is that of the whole top echelon of internationalists one-third have chosen to place themselves in that one-dept.

Modern psychiatry - mental health are promoted by the UN-Chisholm crowd, denies God, ridicules the Bible, & its teachings advocate promiscuous sexual behavior - perversion in the name of health & attacks national sovereignty & loyalty. This program is anti-Christian READ: Pros. 14:34

Sin is the worst evil, the source of all other misery in this world. How could sin the worst evil be good for anyone? The false & lying teachers of carnal, sensual, agnostic (devils) doctrines can only teach people how to be enemies of their own souls READ: Tob. 12:10, miserable & displeasing to God - READ: Romans 8:8 freely expressing the loathsome lusts of the flesh - carnal knowledge on how to defile holy temples of God - the bodies of Christian women.

Questions: Why should the American people pay communists employed in the U.S. Govt. wages to destroy our free American way of life, subvert Christian morals, & try to enslave free people? Why couldn't every U.S. Govt. employee be a loyal, trustworthy American upholding the Constitution? This is necessary before people can expect good government designed to serve them!

Mr Flemming,

I ask you as a supporter of the Equal Rights for the Negro.

What did Kennedy, our Late assasinated President, prove on his So journ or Visit (at Government Expense?) to Ireland. Do you Mr Flemming go to your Country of Orgin to prove that you are an American.

Or was he just proving that before he was an American, First and Foremost and above all he was Irish. Do you have to be Irish First and then American. Or is the Negro - Negro. First and lastly American.

Excerpts from "The South and Her Problems," a speech made at the Dallas, Texas State Fair on October 26, 1887 by Henry W. Grady, outstanding Southern journalist on the editorial staff of the Atlanta Constitution, 1879-1889.

"Those who would put the negro race in supremacy would work against infallible decree, for the white race can never submit to its domination, because the white race is the superior race. But the supremacy of the white race of the South must be maintained forever, and the domination of the negro race resisted at all points and at all hazards---because the white race is the superior race. This is the declaration of no new truth. It has abided forever in the marrow of our bones, and shall run forever with the blood that feeds Anglo-Saxon hearts . . . . .

The races and tribes of earth are of Divine origin. Behind the laws of man and the decrees of war, stands the law of God. What God hath separated let no man join together. The Indian, the Malay, the Negro, the Caucasian, these types stand as markers of God's will. Let not man tinker with the work of the Almighty . . . . .

It is a race issue. Let us come to this point, and stand here. Here the air is pure and the light is clear, and here honor and peace abide. Juggling and evasion deceives not a man. Compromise and subservience has carried not a point. There is not a white man North or South who does not feel it stir in the gray matter of his brain and throb in his heart. Not a negro who does not feel its power. It is not a sectional issue. It speaks in Ohio, and in Georgia. It speaks wherever the Anglo-Saxon touches an alien race . . . . .

The Anglo-Saxon blood has dominated always and everywhere. It fed Alfred when he wrote the charter of English liberty; it gathered about Hampden as he stood beneath the oak; it thundered in Cromwell's veins as he fought his king; it humbled Napoleon at Waterloo; it has touched the desert and jungle with undying glory; it carried the drumbeat of England around the world and spread on every continent the gospel of liberty and of God: it established this republic, carved it from the wilderness, conquered it from the Indians, wrested it from England, and at last, stilling its own tumult, consecrated it forever as the home of the Anglo-Saxon, and the theater of his transcending achievement. Never one foot of it can be surrendered while that blood lives in American veins, and feeds American hearts, to the domination of an alien and inferior race."

He Heard Dixie's Heartbeat In Poverty, Hunger, Illness

If you are truly interested in their plight you will work for sterilization - I know many who want it but don't have money

CHARLOTTE (AP) — He listened to the heartbeat of the South a few years ago and thought it wasn't so good. So Dr. Raymond Wheeler of Charlotte took on another patient—Dixie.

Wheeler keeps popping up in places you wouldn't expect to find a soft-spoken Southern doctor with a heavy patient load—on television network documentaries and before congressional investigating committees on hunger and poverty in the South.

His most recent appearance was last week as the opening witness before the U.S. Senate subcommittee on Migratory Labor.

Wheeler, 50, is president of the Southern Regional Council, an Atlanta, Ga., based human rights organization. Since 1967 he has made half a dozen or so trips into poverty pockets from Texas to the mountains of his native North Carolina.

His congressional testimony in 1967 on poverty and hunger brought down the wrath of Mississippi's two U. S. senators, Democrats John Eastland and John Stennis.

Stennis called the testimony "gross libel and slander." Eastland called it "totally untrue" and attributed it to "outside agitating doctors" and "quickie experts on Mississippi health."

Wheeler replied that he was "born and reared and educated in the South. I love the region.

"Throughout these years," he added, "my heart has wept for the South . . ."

As a personality, Wheeler does not come on strong. Many people who meet him find him cold.

Another physician has said of him: "He is not overly warm. Some people find him rather abrupt. He is grave at times. He doesn't joke with his patients. There is no small talk and he is not a hand-holder. But he has a great deal of empathy for patients. He has a deep concern for patients as he does for mankind in general."

But when Wheeler wishes to express himself, he can. Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., gave him an opportunity during congressional hearings to answer charges that he was trying to undermine the South. The doctor scribbled his reply during a lunch break. The reply was set down in the book, "Let Them Eat Promises," by Nick Notz. The doctor said:

"I have watched the Southern Negro and the Southern white walk their separate ways, distrusting each other, separated by false and ridiculous barriers, doomed to a way of life tragically less than they deserve . . .

"Throughout all that dreadful pageant of ignorance and suspicion and mutual distrust, the most distressing figure of all has been the Southern political leader who has exploited all our human weaknesses for his own personal and selfish gains, refusing to grant us the dignity and capability of responding to courageous and noble leadership when all of us had nothing to lose but the misery and the desolations which surrounds all our lives."

Wheeler does not go in for publicity for his exploits, as is probably demonstrated by his wife's discovery one day in rummaging through some of her husband's old belongings.

She found a Purple Heart and a Silver Star, medals won for a dashing rescue of two wounded soldiers when he was a battalion surgeon in World War II.

He had never told his wife about the medals.

Wheeler says he does not know what ignited his interest in social problems. But he does recall a relationship he had as a boy with a Negro in Farmville, where he was born.

"There was a black man named Jim Thigpen," Wheeler said, "who was the janitor in the school where my father's office (as superintendent) was. He had a bike and I had a bike and we used to take long bike hikes on Saturday. We'd take a lunch and spend the day together.

"He was a most unusual man. A black man with a menial job in a tiny Southern town where he endured all the disadvantages and the discrimination and the lack of opportunity and repressions that all black people do. Yet he had a sense of personal worth and dignity and a sense of self that not many people have.

"I really admired him a great deal. I guess I didn't appreciate him as acutely at the time I knew him as I did later when we went back for a visit and found that he had died at home of penumonia without any treatment at all.

"I never really forgot that . . ." . . ."

Goldsboro Regains Telephone Service After Cable Leak

RALEIGH (AP) — Southern Bell Telephone Co. said Tuesday it had restored long-distance service to Goldsboro after a cable failure left the city isolated all day Monday and throughout Monday night.

A spokesman for the company said a cable from Raleigh to Goldsboro developed a leak in a section which lay under about eight feet of water in a swamp off Rock Quarry Road south of Raleigh.

He said workmen had to clear a path into the swamp with a tractor and then build a dam to hold back the water before they could repair the cable.

The cause of the leak in the cable had not been determined, the spokesman said.

GOVERNMENT of the people, by the people and for the people, under honest parliamentary procedure, is the only way to develop people to a higher civilization. A weekly debating club in every town is as important as church! Write to The National Forum, 324 Newbury, Boston.

These Labels are Free.

"Aristocracy", "Nobility", "Citizenry", "Slavory", "Oligarchy", "Usury".

This is the social scale. The percentage of each is subject to changes, according to the character of people. Some of these classes are practically absent in present conditions, to such a point that these are mere decoration to the lower classes. The scale above is from top to bottom.

In present conditions, aristocracy is an ornament for usury, and nobility is an ornament for oligarchy, and citizenry is an ornament for slavory. It can be said that in present conditions, only the bottom half does exist, and that the top half is a decoration only. Few are on the fringe of citizenry.

We have a social system, in which usury, the proper waste that will exist in any social system, is the one ruling the present system. By the process of corruption, oligarchy is created, and, slavory is the result of non-existence of citizenry.

Some believe to be free by acting on the incentive of profit exclusively. Their freedom consists only of chosing their corruptors, but have no freedom as citizens.

This freedom, as citizens, they will only have with the Permanent Plebiscit. This institution will convert slavory into citizenry, and oligarchy into nobility, and [redacted] aristocracy will be a new class, while usury will stay that unavoidable waste at the bottom of the scale. Oligarchy and slavory will become nearly extinct. This is social improvement.

Nations are a necessity for the protection of people, so they will not be victims of the monopoly of usury, which is totalitarian and degrading.

MILITATE FOR PEACE AND UNDERSTANDING WITH SINCERITY

Necessity and Reasons for the PERMANENT PLEBISCIT

For its success, a population must enjoy the natural postulate of tradition, with its racial purity. The totality of the law can never be written. Human Kind is Working Kind. Delinquency is often the result of deficiencies in the social system. Thus, delinquency befalls un-assimilated minorities, if persecuted, not so for their racial particularities, but due to simple delinquency. Insistence on non-assimilation compels them finally to delinquency.

An insistence in non-assimilation which is explained by the fact, that no one will fall into the trap he has set for others. No domesticators will submit to domestication, and no usurer will submit to become a victim of usury. Usury is no profession, no race, and to ideology, etc., but just social waste, fostered by human deficiencies, prolific in heterogeneous populations, of recent immigration, lacking national solidarity and nexus with their country of origin.

People get the government they deserve. If people allow to be exploited, they create social waste in the form of domesticators and usurers. But with social self-control, as the P.P. enables them to, will have legitimate authority established in civic governments, which of necessity must be "dictatorial" towards this social waste.

The P.P. is a revival of what the "Ecclesia" was in ancient Times, long before savagery was an excuse to deprive people of their sovereignity. The cosmopolitan domesticators are now the ones possessed with savagery instead. The P.P. is specially for heterogenous populations, where racial and social questions are crossly missunderstood.

Many people believe, that the only way to provide, is by exploitation, and that thus they must protect themselves with social waste. Thus, fanatism, fatalism and anarchism are spread with cosmopolitan domestication, impairing popular and national solidarity.

From a depressed, humbled and lowered environment, only impertinent exploiters are able to claim, that they are "the chosen ones". And, as an obtrusive enemy, keep people spellbound, near exorcism, obtaining artificial reputation, impairing public health and the peoples wealth.

A direly imperfect system of elections provides just a succession of improvisations, with spectators admiring clowning governments. Which seems purposedly to impair prevailing conditions, where exploiters raise their voice of protest, when an improvement breaks the rule.

Most of parliamentary activity is waste. Economical questions cannot be solved there, since public expenditure requires flexibility, which taxes do not provide. Loans on public expenditure are plain usury, even at a low rate of interest, since governments are unable to profit by these loans.

Despotism is thus practiced by plutocracy, distracting governments by claiming continually liberty, for nobodies benefit, but to allow themselves the insolence to defame populations and their institutions. The P.P. requires autonomous thinking for popular and national benefit, not just as a different feature for domestication and exploitation.

Public matters are in the hands of too few, who maintain their oppression with trickery. Public matters are thus neglected and left without consultation. The blame for this is also on those many, who with nationalism defeated, shun the imperfections of this world, instead of meeting them civically. An attitude by which they compel others to bigotry.

Tolerated trickery is shameful to any honest person. To maintain bigotry, domesticators advise to abolish those commodities they themselves abuse of for usury, concealing their purpose to monopolize all wealth and enslave people. As "protectors of proletarians" they profess to be against "capitalism" concealing usury and accusing the property of innocent people, as the cause of all evil.

Hoping to accomplish what organs of publicity refuse to do, more and fuller information will be supplyed with the encyclopedia of the PP., free, on request.

MILITATE FOR PEACE AND UNDERSTANDING WITH SINCERITY

From Neglect and Exploitation by Social Waste, to Achievements in the PERMANENT PLEBISCIT there is a feasible way.

Work, now a days, is mostly such as to require attentive effort, rather than muscular exertion. Conditions have changed. A Nation is essentially a working population. Work is no particular habit of any class of population. Bearings and legislation should be accordingly. Racial tradition of the population is to be respected. Eradication of savagery shall be no excuse to pretension of artificial prestige to usury. No social waste is desirable. Public economical problems are of concern to all; not just a matter of "specialists". Corruption is defamatory to National interests.

The possibility of improvement is no utopia. If only the prevailing swindel is omitted, conditions will improve notably already. But beyond the neutral point, improvement possibilities go further, into positive action, unobstructed. The P.P. meets the fact, that prevailing conditions do always change, and are never stagnant. Time is an active element, destructive if unheeded.

Present conditions are unsatisfactory, to get people tired, bound to expect ANY change as desirable. Thus people are robbed of their opportunity to have a saying in this, so as to have the change for an improvement. No alternatives are presented, and no discrimination is allowed.

The P.P. will be as liberal and optional, in its use, as any shop in town. It will not abolish existing institutions nor substitute governments. It is to bring changes about gradually and in a consulted way. In it, votes can also be withdrawn, so the support officers enjoy can be determined, including the Time when they are to be relieved by those who are to succeed them.

To emerge from present, unbalanced conditions, where liberty is almost an exclusivity of social waste, it is necessary to introduce the P.P. as a regular institution to provide liberty, insistently, for legitimate, popular and constructive purposes. Distributive activities are just as important as economical and governmental activities, which should not be left to strangers, to become social waste, spreading corruption.

The P.P. enables people to really practice their right to associate, on their own, free choice, which associations can be either temporary or permanent ones, for any licit purpose. The P.P. will be a complement to: government, parliament, commerce, finance, charity, etc. No sanctuary is necessary, honesty will not be restricted to productive and constructive work, but will also expand to all other activities, so no honest person need be ashamed of a function in them.

Corruption can only be eradicated by better acquaintance with commodities, which cannot be abolished. Money, which is one of them, sepresents power and is like a weapon. Since money is used this way, only by a few, these cause an unbalanced situation, with misapprehended privileges and resulting injustices.

The P.P. will come into existence as a regular institution, if people discontinue to indulge in the misapprehension of trusting their wealth and their resources to strangers, making them to social waste. The P.P. will be an institution, where people will be able to put their wealth and resources to good use, so as not to depend on a fallacious incentive of profit. An institution which impairs no legitimate liberty. Present credit institutions do not meet this purpose, serving precariously, only an emergency.

The P.P. will not be conceded willingly to people. Much attention is absorbed by exiting events, at this Time. The P.P. cannot be introduced with the help of public instruction alone, but will require of the Public Lottery, as a primer.

Hoping to effect with this propaganda, sufficient contacts: better equipped to promote this propaganda, more and fuller information will be afforded with the encyclopedia of the P.P., free, on request.

Dear Sirs —

we read an account that since the politically pressured Court handed down the most bizarre, Unamerican edict in 1954 — that the shot at the negro has been downgraded, not glorified, as predicted. So — it seems the nine were not so sufficient in judging human nature —

Americans, like all humans prefer their own race — just as negroes prefer their own but seem to want to intrude on whites

PLEASE READ AND PASS TO OTHERS!

According to careful estimates based on available evidence, virtually 90 per cent of the Negro people of the United States are of mixed ancestry. About 100,000 persons of Negro ancestry "pass" each year as white.

Many people are not aware of all the intermingling, intermarriage and MISCEGENATION (interbreeding of races) which has gone on between whites and Negroes, especially during slavery, and is still going on today.

Intermarriage between whites and Negroes breeds, or produces beautiful mulatto children and could be a solution of race problems and prejudices.

Many light skinned Negroes, such as Adam Clayton Powell, Frank Yerby, Walter F. White (deceased), have obtained national prominence.

Why then are so many people PREJUDICE?

This has an important bearing on the attitude toward the United States in foreign affairs.

Don't be prejudice - this only hurts progress!! Many Negroes are very outstanding and have made important contributions to national welfare.

Some of these have been:

Ralph J. Bunche
Booker T. Washington
George Washington Carver
Fredrick Douglass
W. E. B. Du Bois
Jackie Robinson
Thurgood Marshall
Mary McLeod Bethune
Marian Anderson
Frank Yerby
Langston Hughes
Walter F. White

THANK YOU - - signed "Uncle Sam"

P.S., Please do your part to lift the restrictions of prejudice and "give equal rights to all."

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL still has its offices in The Methodist Church Building, 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta, even though Methodist Arthur J. Moore went off the board quietly several years ago, "because they made pronouncements on race matters when I was not present to help formulate them." SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL leaders and staff people organized and/or coordinated 12 southern state COUNCILS ON HUMAN RELATIONS with $500,000 given to it by the FUND FOR THE REPUBLIC. Mrs. L. C. Bates (Daisy), of Little Rock, is shown as a director of SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL. Harry Ashmore, of Little Rock, is a director of FUND FOR THE REPUBLIC and was a director when the half million dollars was awarded to SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL.

Even our liberal-minded Bishop got "fed up" to some extent with your gang. You ought to be run out of our Church building.

The enclosure I am sending you ought to make Southern Methodist church members get together and kick you out of property that they paid for You stink.

If some of your officials married niggers it would probably reduce your enthusiasm for social equality.

Questions Youths in Mutilation of Girl

Policeman stands guard over handcuffed group of young men in Englewood police station as they awaited questioning in the rape and mutilation attack on an 11 year old girl near her home at 6725 S. Sangamon st. Identified in group are Sam Chandler (left) and Elijah Hopkins (behind Chandler).

QUIZ NINE BOYS HELD IN RAPE OF GIRL SCOUT

Victim, 11, Too Weak to View Suspects

Nine boys, rounded up in a police search for a gang which seized, stripped, and raped an 11 year old girl near her home on the south side Tuesday night, were questioned yesterday in the state's attorney's sex bureau.

The victim of the attack was reported in fair condition in Englewood hospital, altho still not strong enough to view those seized as suspects. The girl said her attackers were Negroes.

Victim Crawls Home

She told Sgt. Thomas Mulvey of the sex bureau that the gang dragged her into a basement areaway at 6701 Sangamon st., stripped off her Girl Scout uniform, beat and raped her, and slashed her with either a knife or a broken bottle.

Shoes taken from Elijah Hopkins are viewed by Detective William O'Malley before being taken to crime laboratory for examination of possible blood stains.

John Rayford (left) and George Hughes, also in custody for questioning.

She lay helpless in the areaway for half an hour after the attack, weakened from loss of blood, before she was able to crawl to her home a few doors away.

David Stokes, who was held for questioning in the attack.

Police scheduled a lie detector test for one of those held, Elijah Hopkins, 13, of 6511 Sangamon st., who is more than 6 feet tall and weighs 170 pounds. The plan was abandoned, however, when his mother, Ethel, refused to give permission for the test.

Idea for Attack Told

Several others held told police that a short time before the attack Hopkins was urging several companions on the playground of the Kershaw school at 65th st. and Union av. to accompany him to "get" a white girl.

YOUR CHILDREN ARE NEXT -!

Every parent, and particularly every parent who believes in racial "integration", should study the clippings which appear here, for they illustrate a problem which the U.S. Supreme Court has thrust upon millions of white families with its infamous school de-segregation decisions...

The results of the Court's vicious program of compulsory mongrelization are already evident, despite the frantic attempts by the northern commercial press and radio to suppress the facts.

In New York, uniformed policemen have been stationed at integrated schools to protect white children from a Negroidal reign of terror in which white girls have not only been abused and insulted, but have actually been beaten and raped on school premises by Negro "classmates"...

The clipping to the left illustrates the kind of "classmates" YOUR child will be exposed to if large scale "integration" comes to your community.

In Philadelphia, where a gang of Negroes recently raped a 17-year-old white school girl in a South Philadelphia schoolyard, the mass exodus of white families to the suburbs continues. And when Negroes attempted to follow them into the nearby suburb of Levittown, white families rioted...

In Chicago the situation is typified by a recent incident in which a group of Negro students at the Kershaw School decided to "get" a white girl. For their victim they chose an 11-year-old Girl Scout, whom they stripped, beat, raped and slashed viciously with a broken bottle.

In Washington, D.C.'s integrated schools, armed police now patrol the halls to protect white students and teachers from Negro jungle violence. Slashings, knifings, assaults, indecent exposures and sex incidents are so rampant throughout the District's integrated system that white students are virtually deserting the schools en masse. Today, Negroes comprise more than 70% of Washington's student enrollment, whites less than 30%!

AND THIS IS ONLY THE BEGINNING! To date only a few Northern and border cities have been integrated under the Supreme Court's edict. Slated for eventual "integration" are millions of Negroes in the South, and in many Northern communities as well. It is only a matter of time until every American family will be confronted with the prospect of sending its children into inter-racial schools to be exposed to crime, narcotics, venereal disease and violence through forced association with Negro "classmates". It's already happening in Washington, D.C., in New York, in Chicago -- it will be happening in YOUR schools soon IF the Supreme Court has its way. LET'S FIGHT BACK! LET'S KEEP OUR SCHOOLS WHITE!

Racial Opinions of Noted Persons

Lincoln's Remarks on Negroes

In a debate with Douglas in September, 1858, at Charleston, Ill., the Great Emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, said:

"I am not, nor ever have been in favor of bringing about, in any way, the social and political equality of the white and black races; I am not, nor ever have been in favor of making voters or jurors of negroes nor qualifying them to hold office.

"I will say in addition to this that there is a physical difference between the white and black races which I believe will ever forbid the two races living together on terms of social and political equality. And, inasmuch as they cannot so live, while they do remain together, there must be the position of superior and inferior, and I, as much as any other man, am in favor of having the superior position assigned to the white race."

Live Apart From White, Negro Leader Urges

Pittsburgh, Aug. 31 — Elizah Poole, self-styled Negro segregationist, has called for members of his race to live apart from the white man and demanded "justice."

Some 1,000 followers of Poole, also known as Mohammad, cheered at a meeting as their leader and two other speakers called for complete social, economic and political segregation of the Negro.

"If the white man is unwilling to live with us, or doesn't want us to, or is not willing to give us a place in this country where he can live alone, we should leave," said the 61-year-old Georgia-born man. "I am," he continued, "a segregationist. I want the black man to have things of their own — their own homes, their own jobs, their own farms. All I want is justice."

Turning to Christianity, Poole said: "It is the white man's religion offered at the end of a long-handled spoon to keep the black man subjugated."

The followers of Poole call themselves "Moslems", although they have no legitimate connection with orthodox Islam.

Racial Opinions Of Jefferson Repeated

Thomas Jefferson said: "Nothing is more certainly written in the book of fate than that these people are to be free, nor is it less certain that the two races (white and black), equally free, cannot live in the same government."

He also wrote: "Nature, habit, opinion have drawn indelible lines of distinction between them," and if this distinction "is left to force itself on, human nature must shudder at the prospect held up."

Thus spoke Thomas Jefferson, Father of the Democratic party and author of the "Declaration of Independence."

Lincoln and Jefferson both advocated deportation and colonization of the American Negro.

Warning by Burke Has Meaning Today

The Editors: In an admirable letter, Mr. Julius L. DuGive cites as being applicable to the present state of affairs, a passage delivered in the United States Senate, in 1878, by Benjamin H. Hill:

It may not be inappropriate to cite an excerpt from a speech by Edmund Burke, the great British political philosopher. Though these utterances by Burke may be discouraging, they may well be accepted as a challenge.

They challenge us to alert our instinct of political self-preservation, and to arouse every emotion of civic responsibility and political self-respect.

They adjure us to halt the present orgy of judicial debauchery and to save the Constitution from the hands of those men who, having sworn to preserve and uphold the Constitution, are now engaged in the work of its destruction. . . .

Token Integration Anathema to South

(A Quote)

The Editors: When I read Margaret R. Bridges' letter, recently, I wondered how one could write so many words that say nothing.

She said: "The South has been given a new and urgent mission." That mission, seemingly, is with the Negro. That mission is not new. It has been ours ever since our Northern neighbors brought African slaves (which they did not find profitable) down here and sold them to us.

"We did find them profitable, and in using them to help us, we helped them. We civilized them, and doctored them when they were sick, and taught many of them to read and write. And our relations with them were sensible and friendly, in the great majority of cases. . . .

"What good could it possibly do for whites and the Negroes, to talk together in frankness and patience? Token integregation, as those silly preachers said, means integration just the same. And we of the South do not mean to have that. Integration is the first step toward amalgamation. . . .

"Yes, the South has fulfilled its 'mission' with commonsense, courage, and kindness for 300 years to a race that is in evolution—a race that perhaps God sent us to help.

"In the struggle that is on, the Negro will be the loser. That is inevitable. It is regrettable that his pretended friends have maneuvered him into this position."

I hope I'm not overly pessimistic, and I am not being flip. But out of some experience in the past with such letters and such people as write them, I don't think anybody short of a psychiatrist or shock-treatment technician can help the writers of these 2 letters. Some letters, maybe. These-- with no names-- what can you do? I don't think it is possible to reason with them. But I agree with you somebody ought to try to help them. America, Wake Up!

A wise and loyal friend of the United States warns us: The cold war is real war . . . . It is far later than we know . . . . The Communists can win without changing their tactics . . . . We cannot win without changing ours . . . . We must assume the offensive . . . . We dare not stand still . . . . To do so is to continue to lose ground. This is a stern and urgent appeal. It is one that no American can afford to ignore.

By Gen. Carlos P. Romulo

Soviet Communism is on the wildest and most reckless rampage of its ugly career. Primary target—the United States. The American chief of state has been openly insulted, American honor has been trampled and American citizens have been pushed around wherever Communists have power or influence. The Monroe Doctrine, shield of the Western Hemisphere, has been flouted. Communists are taking over in the Caribbean area by infiltration just as decisively as if by armed invasion.

In the face of such menace and humiliation a foreigner in your midst naturally looks for the reaction—an angry ground swell of popular protest. He looks in vain. The American people remain strangely unmoved. Even the cold-blooded murder of U. S. fliers fails to stir them out of complacency.

Such meekness in the greatest and still the strongest nation on earth is puzzling and disheartening to America's friends throughout the world. And there is danger in it. Meekness encourages the aggressor to overplay his hand, bringing closer the very catastrophe it would avert.

I realize that the survival of my own country, the Philippines, depends on the survival of the United States. Neutralism provides no protection against Communist expansion—as India is now finding out. My country, accordingly, disregards Red intimidation, and the incumbent President of the Philippines, Carlos P. Garcia, has voluntarily invited the United States to establish missile bases on our soil. Therefore, and because of my deep-rooted friendship for your country, I dare to speak out to you without inhibitions. I say:

"America, wake up! Shake off the course of inaction that is giving the forces of evil the right of way in this world! Face up to the blunt fact that you are now engaged in a real war and that it must be fought and won. This is the only alternative to defeat by default!"

The time for drowsy half-measures has run out. To hope for miracles, such as a change in Kremlin leadership, or friendly negotiations and wise treaties, or a "lessening of tension" is only to fall more inextricably into the Communist trap. Instead, the United States must vigorously provide world leadership. Your firmness, rooted in genuine strength of character, is today the free world's only insurance against the further spread of Soviet tyranny. Your faith that all men are equally entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness has always seemed to the rest of us a national purpose to inspire all mankind and to provide the answer to the pretensions of Red despotism. If now, through apathy or expediency, you waver in your devotion to these ideals of human freedom, a dark age of Communist totalitarianism is certain to engulf the human race.

At its rate of growth since World War II, the universal Communist police state could come into being in our own lifetime. Does this sound like an exaggeration? Well, ancient Romans, too, must have thought the idea of conquest by their clamorous barbarians was farfetched. Today, history moves with electronic speed. Processes that in ancient times took centuries to unfold now explode in decades. Who would have thought it possible barely a generation ago, that Communism would soon stand astride two continents, from the Baltic to the Pacific, with extensions of its power in places as far apart as Africa and the Caribbean?

Surely it must be plain to all that Russia is bent on world domination. It must be equally plain that her leaders cannot be trusted. Yet who can doubt that when the Kremlin again decides to adopt a "soft" policy many of us will again be babbling about a "New Look" in Russia, congratulating ourselves on the excellent chances for "peaceful coexistence," and rejoicing in the fond illusion that the "cold war" is about to end?

CARLOS P. ROMULO, Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist, soldier and statesman, has been the Philippine ambassador to the United States since 1954. Before that he was his country's chief delegate to the United Nations; in 1949 he was elected President of the Fourth General Assembly of the U. N. During World War II he served with Gen. Douglas MacArthur, was several times cited for gallantry in action. His many books include I Saw the Fall of the Philippines, Crusade in Asia, The United, The Magsaysay Story.

The sad truth is that the Communists alone control the thermostat of free-world emotions, adjusting it anywhere that suits their needs in the range between glowing optimism and black despair. We ooze happy relief whenever the Kremlin chooses to lower the temperature, and are plunged into worried fear whenever the heat is turned on again. Each change astonishes us anew—and throws us into fresh confusion. We have become tragicomic puppets jerked up or down by strings clenched in Khrushchev's pudgy fists.

While this performance largely immobilizes Western strength, the Communists draw valuable political dividends from the false hopes they induce at calculated intervals. In the period before the Paris summit debacle, for instance, they induced the U. S. government to remove the last wobbly teeth from American broadcasts beamed to the Soviet people, and to ban the word "liberation" as applied to Communist captive nations. The idea was "not to spoil the friendly atmosphere," and "to avoid antagonizing" the Soviet leaders. But apparently no one thought to ask just how you avoid antagonizing a sworn mortal enemy whose sole purpose is to annihilate you utterly!

Regard the fantastic spectacle of Khrushchev's American tour—a propaganda triumph for world Communism and a body blow to anti-Communist forces everywhere—did this not set a world record for futile courting of a despot? The dictator whose whole life has been devoted, and will be devoted, to the destruction of every human right enshrined in the conscience of the free world, was hopefully welcomed as if he were a gentle dove of peace. How gullible can we be?

This grim and fateful comedy will continue until the free world, under forceful and effective American leadership, wakes up to the ruthless reality of the cold war, stops playing a gentlemanly defensive role and starts aggressively to outfight the Communists on their own terms. Dr. Robert Strausz-Hupé, who has analyzed the Communist concept of "protracted conflict," writes: "For the Communists, there are no different kinds of war, hot or cold. There is only one war—war to the finish." In this everlasting war, the Communists use any and every weapon, from propaganda leaflets to military force, from sabotage and murder to smiles and handshakes. And they are always on the offensive.

The fact that the free world has always been on the defensive accounts for the amazing speed with which the Red enemy has succeeded in enslaving a third of the human race. We have allowed the Communists to take the initiative everywhere, to choose the battlegrounds, the issues, even the weapons at any given time. Free-world counteraction has been constantly improvised under these always unexpected assaults and has therefore been erratic and often panicky. Time after time we resort to a hurried shoring-up of some threatened position which, even if successful, merely retains what we already hold. The shameful idea seems to be that, if we can just barely hang onto what is clearly and rightfully ours, while the Communists scoop up everything else, we will be doing as well as could be expected.

We rush from one crisis to another, each plainly labeled "Made in Soviet Russia." We scramble from one segment of the globe to another, always at times and places of Soviet choosing. When we negotiate, it is invariably about some issue the Communists deliberately create for propaganda purposes and to keep us off balance: the Matsu-Quemoy islands, West Berlin, nuclear tests, disarmament. Never once have we aggressively raised issues to put them on the defensive. When will the flabby statesmanship of the Western world come to realize that the cold war is a real war and that, as with all wars, we are certain to lose it if we don't take the offensive?

The only explanation for this inaction must be our failure to understand even now the nature of the Communist challenge. But surely it should be clear to all that Moscow and Peiping have an inflexible goal —the creation of one Communist world—and a carefully planned strategy for achieving it. They know that they are engaged in a long war. They know that, short of ceasing to be Communists, they cannot settle for anything less than total victory in that war. We, on the other hand, feebly putting up our guard in a series of scattered defensive skirmishes, have no definite goal beyond the hope of a tolerable truce that will allow us to go about our daily affairs without any more annoying interruptions.

The irony of this is that an understanding of the Communist challenge is not hard to obtain, since it has been frankly spelled out by Kremlin leaders from Lenin to Khrushchev. Everything that has taken place in Asia, for instance, conforms to a blueprint drawn up by a Soviet-sponsored Congress of the Peoples of the East held in Baku in September 1920. There the master plan for exploiting colonial tensions and nationalist sentiment was formulated and published. But, blind to such repeatedly proclaimed and inflexible Red purposes, the United States and its associates have preferred to treat the conflict as an aberration, a casual misunderstanding that can be adjusted piecemeal by patient bargaining!

Meanwhile, Western leaders keep paying blackmail in concessions and small surrenders. Consider these instances:

The United States rolled out the red carpet for Anastas Mikoyan: a kind of preview of the later Khrushchev visit. Not long before, an American plane had been electronically lured into Soviet Armenia (Mikoyan's native area) and 17 American fliers were lost. The American government had documentary proofs of Soviet guilt, but withheld them until Mikoyan left, in order not to spoil his good-will tour. How much good did it do?

Before the Paris summit meeting was agreed to, there was a Foreign Ministers' Conference in Geneva. President Eisenhower stated repeatedly that, unless this conference produced concrete results, a summit conference such as Khrushchev was demanding would not take place. The Ministers' Conference accomplished nothing—but the summit meeting was agreed to notwithstanding. Should its failure have been unexpected?

In its anxiety to make the Geneva meeting successful, the United States came close to de facto recognition of East Germany (ardently desired by the Kremlin) by agreeing to "observers" from East Germany on a par with those from West Germany. Khrushchev, having artificially created a crisis in West Berlin with his ultimatum, bellowed that the situation in that city was "abnormal." Washington went along with this, using the very same word. The obvious retort should have been that the situation in West Berlin, since it complied with treaty terms, was perfectly normal—that the abnormality was in East Germany, where Soviet domination continued in violation of postwar treaties pledging free elections.

Incorrigibly hopeful despite everything, the United States twice renewed the moratorium on nuclear testing, thus giving the Kremlin exactly what it wanted—a test ban without inspection. Even now there is hesitation about ending the moratorium, though the protracted negotiations have yielded only frustrations for the United States and propaganda victories for the Soviet Union.

The unfortunate truth is that the free-world leaders are dealing with a sinister global conspiracy by international gangsters as if it were an old-style dispute between civilized nations which respect the diplomatic niceties and the sanctity of treaties. We continue to hope for progress in phony "negotiations" which, on the Communists' side, are just a part of the cold war that we are losing piecemeal. And, worst of all, the democratic coalition has been acting in the vain hope of "relieving tensions," stabilizing situations, "keeping the boat from rocking," of "containing Communism," instead of striving ultimately to eliminate the scourge. Meanwhile, the Red offensive remains intense, planned and persistent.

I have had considerable personal experience with that persistence. When the United Nations was being launched in San Francisco in 1945, a charming, Spanish-speaking Russian "accidentally" found himself near me each morning at breakfast in the hotel dining room. He used the opportunity to talk about how the United States had "abandoned the Philippines in the war," and wondered aloud how I, as an Asian, could stomach a country that oppresses its racial minorities. Some years later, when I was the Philippine member of the Far Eastern Commission in Washington, a Soviet general on the commission continually sought me out and harangued me on the wickedness of the United States. It was obvious that he had been assigned to indoctrinate and pressure me. Still later, when I was president of the U.N. General Assembly, Andrei Vishinsky had me to dinner three times at the Soviet residence in Glen Cove, Long Island, where he deployed his considerable charm and forensic talent in an attempt to turn me against the West.

In my case, of course, these tactics didn't work. But I knew the same tactics were being employed with regrettable success against other more vulnerable Asians. Thus the Communists carry their ceaseless campaign down to the level of personal contacts, while Americans make no similar efforts. Have you ever heard of high American officials, speaking foreign languages fluently, "working on" pro-Communists or neutralists? As one Asian colleague said to me: "The Americans seem to recall that we exist only when some crisis in Asia very clearly endangers their own interests."

Consider another decisive front in the many-sided Communist offensive—propaganda. When President Eisenhower reached Manila last spring, some two million of my Filipino countrymen converged on the city in a tumultuous demonstration of affection for, and faith in, the United States. In view of the present widespread revolt against colonialism, the spectacle had a special meaning: these were people who had been for 48 years, until July 4, 1946, under American rule. Surely this dramatic show of friendship spoke volumes for the enlightened character of American relations with alien peoples under its flag. Similar massive expressions of warm esteem met the President in Korea, Formosa, Okinawa, India, Pakistan and Latin America. Vice President Nixon was given a vast and ecstatic reception in Poland.

Yet there was no effective American propaganda effort to impress the significance of these enthusiastic receptions on the rest of the world. On the other hand, the student riots in Japan which forced the cancellation of the President's trip, and the attacks on Vice President Nixon in Latin America—such incidents, engineered by Communists, have been successfully exploited by Red propaganda to convey to neutral nations the notion of a faltering and abased America.

Another result of the West's passivity in the face of the Soviet Union's ceaseless propaganda offensive has been to make Western "colonialism" the whipping boy in world opinion, while the cruelties of Red imperialism against its captive peoples are all but forgotten. Bloody oppressions in Hungary have not abated; massacres continue in Tibet; Chinese forces still occupy Indian soil and make probing forays into Laos and Nepal. Yet the West keeps up no continual barrage of propaganda about these Red iniquities.

No less remarkable is the success of the Kremlin "peace" and "total disarmament" pretensions. And this despite the known fact that Moscow and Peiping have been directly responsible for virtually every war and war scare since 1945. Witness the international sensation the Communists were able to foment over the U-2 incident, and compare this with the failure of the United States to arouse world opinion against the Soviets' repeated murderous attacks on American planes over international waters.

Dozens of other examples could be cited. To make matters worse, Communist propaganda is allowed to undermine public morale and sow confusion in the United States itself. Former President Herbert Hoover was alluding to this, in a recent speech, when he spoke of "a multitude of citizens who have sunk to the posture of perpetual apology and seeming shame for ourselves."

America's puritanical background and its inherent honesty seem to have produced an inordinate guilt complex. Somehow, it has become the fashion to belittle major American accomplishments, while all Soviet claims, including dubious boasts of future accomplishments, are played up in a groveling spirit.

How are we to account for this persistent failure of America to project on the mind of mankind an accurate image of its own society and a truthful image of the Communist slave world? Why does the United States accept setbacks in this area so supinely? Certainly this cannot be due to lack of propaganda ability—in a country where the arts of image-building are so highly developed. What is lacking is a clear grasp of the incalculable importance of this phase of the protracted conflict.

A global campaign of public education should be mounted on a scale to outmatch the Communists. It must be resourceful, aggressive, unafraid and prepared to turn their own weapons of subversion and infiltration against them. But this will never be done until the necessity of defeating Communism—defeating, mind you, not resisting—is recognized. Only then can you begin to tell the truth as uninhibitedly and effectively as the enemy tells lies.

From the hour of its birth, the Soviet regime has regarded agitprop—agitation and propaganda—as no less important than military strength. So has Red China. Both invest billions of dollars in these enterprises. They have hundreds of special schools which turn out armies of experts in brainwashing and subversion, for deployment throughout the world. In addition, they train Asians, Africans, Latin Americans, West Europeans and even citizens of the United States in all revolutionary techniques, from propaganda and sabotage to street rioting and guerrilla fighting.

How long will free men refuse to see the obvious: the Communists can expunge what remains of freedom with these weapons of political and psychological combat. How long will free men discount this prime threat as "merely" a cold war, a side show, that can be "ended" through social amenities and an exchange of dancers?

The 1960's are the critical years. This is the time for heroic decisions—decisions that will at long last enable the free world to gain the offensive. It is much too late for negative, purely defensive strategy. We cannot possibly win that way. We must fight back in deadly earnest, using a large-scale concentration of brains, skills and budget—everything we possess—to outmaneuver the Communists in their own kind of war.

What I have said here to the America I love and admire applies no less to all other free nations, my own among them. Freedom has become indivisible. To settle for a world half-slave, half-free is the surest road to surrender. The new barbarians cannot be bought off or contained. They must be defeated. This can still be done without a nuclear showdown—by an all-out offensive in the fields of propaganda, economic aid, public education and, in general, fighting fire with fire in every part of the globe.

We can yet drive the Reds in their turn onto the defensive. There are plenty of weaknesses and vulnerable spots in the Communist camp—and we can exploit every one of them. We can turn the Communists' own weapons, including infiltration and subversion, against them. We can create "crises" in their home territory, instead of waiting passively for crises in ours. We can train specialists in every branch of cold warfare instead of relying on amateurs. We can keep alive the hope of release from servitude among our enslaved brothers under the Communist yoke.

Appeasement is as futile in a cold war as it has proved to be, throughout the ages, in hot war. Continued apathy, or half-measures, in the struggle now under way will only encourage the Communists to underrate our will to resist, thus eventually crowding us into a corner where we will have to choose between nuclear war and surrender.

The only possible solution is to wage this protracted conflict twice as hard, twice as effectively, as the Communists are now waging it. We must embark on a massive offensive, turning every Communist trick and stratagem—from propaganda to infiltration—against our mortal enemy. This is the one and only way to win the struggle for survival.

PORNOGRAPHY, A Political Weapon

An alerted and determined public can fight obscenity and win

by John Benedict

PORNOGRAPHY is being used as a political weapon by chicane forces so well protected from public view that barely a hint of their true identity is known by the consuming public. Christianity, specifically that aspect of it termed Christian action, provides the only effective counter-weapon in combatting the bestializing effects of nationwide acceptance of pornography.

An overwhelming flood of pornographic writings, motion pictures and other materials are being prepared for unlimited distribution throughout America. That people welcome this deluge of filth is inconceivable; enough opposition has developed to indicate the contrary to be true, even though the planners already have gauged the quality of expected resistance and found it weak and lacking in temper.

Citizen resistance, except locally, has been almost useless, because it has developed from false premises. The average citizen sees the fight against obscenity as a contest between the local censor or community leaders and the salesmen of lewd books, films and periodicals. Such contests almost always revert to the legal arena; it is there that the promoters and propagators of pornography win their battles. The defender of the moral law seeks justice in the courts; the devotee of the cult of immorality seeks judicial sanction. On a sectional and national level the immoralist almost invariably wins in the courts.

MERCURY discussed the ramifications of "The Lady Chatterley's Lover Case," paying specific attention to the forces promoting the sale of the unexpurgated version of the novel. A shallow dip under the surface of that case revealed that many of the individuals involved had given, some ten years earlier, direct support to Alger Hiss. Other undersurface connections were traced from the Chatterley case to Kuhn Loeb and Company and also into the Communist Party and its fronts. But under everything was the reek of Felix Frankfurter and his proteges.

FEDERAL COURT Justice Frederick vanPelt Bryan's decision on July 21, 1959, upsetting Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield's postal ban of Lady Chatterley's Lover, followed closely on the heels of the United States Supreme Court's decision of June 29, 1959, which allowed exhibition of the uncensored version of the motion picture of the same name. Kingsley International Pictures Corporation, the film's distributor, had carried its fight against New York's film licensing law up through the courts on appeal from an earlier adverse ruling against the Chatterley film.

Justice Potter Stewart delivered the opinion of the Court, based "upon First Amendment liberties, protected by the Fourteenth Amendment from infringement by the States." The core of the opinion was that New York had prevented the film, "Lady Chatterley's Lover," from being exhibited > because that picture advocates an idea—that adultery under certain circumstances may be proper behaviour. Yet the First Amendment's basic guarantee is of freedom to advocate ideas. The State, quite simply, has thus struck at the very heart of constitutionally protected liberty.

> It is contended that the State's action was justified because the motion picture attractively portrays a relationship which is contrary to the moral standards, the religious precepts and the legal code of the citizenry. This argument misconceives what it is that the Constitution protects. . . . It protects advocacy of the opinion that adultery may sometimes be proper, no less than advocacy of socialism or the single tax.

Adulterers will no doubt be quite happy to learn that the U. S. Supreme Court, in all of its august majesty, has decreed that the Constitution's benign influence extends to advocacy of illicit affaires d'amour. Thus has been accomplished the first step in the establishment of a pornocracy. Justice Stewart's inclusion of the term "advocacy of socialism" is another presage of things to come.

And what did Justice Felix Frankfurter, the dominant influence on the Supreme Court since 1941, have to say?

He opined that he was more than surprised, after viewing the picture, that the New York authorities should have banned "Lady Chatterley's Lover." To assume that this motion picture would have offended Victorian moral sensibilities is to rely only on the stuffiest of Victorian conventions. (Our emphasis.)

Frankfurter continued at length developing his pet theories of law: the buttressing of his opinion by sociological references—in this case quotations from D. H. Lawrence's writings on obscenity—and citations from British law on obscene publications. This latter Frankfurter practice is particularly obnoxious to Justice William O. Douglas, who complained: "Reference is made to British law and British practice. But they have little relevance to our problem, since we live under a written Constitution."

JUSTICE HUGO BLACK bracketed Frankfurter from the other side, objecting to the circumstances of the ruling whereby "every member of the Court must exercise his own judgment as to how bad a picture is, a judgment which is ultimately based at least in large part on his own standard of what is immoral." (Our emphasis.) This seems a direct slap at Frankfurter, who, with Whittaker, had concurred in Harlan's opinion. Harlan had decided that he could not "regard this film as depicting anything more than a somewhat unusual, and rather pathetic 'love triangle.'"

A great deal more may be said concerning this ruling, which may be found in its entirety on pages 16141-45 of the Congressional Record of September 1, 1959. Buried in the text are the repeating threads of a pattern so vivid in its texture that it constitutes evidence of megalomania on the part of the Court.

Since pornography has been and is being used as a political weapon, as a psychological tool for mass corruption, an intelligent defense against its pernicious effects must be formulated. Comprehension of the true nature of the enemy must be obtained, the cobwebs of deceit swept away. A first step in the right direction is a clear understanding of the Supreme Court's role in the unleashing of the current pornographic onslaught.

Part of that understanding can be derived from reading Nine Men, A Political History of the Supreme Court from 1790 to 1955, by Fred Rodell (Random House, 1955). Rodell's personal emphasis is one thing; but his marshalling of facts to prove "the Court is the sanctuary of sanctimonious political partisanship" is quite another. Murray A. Gordon of the New York Bar, in a review of this book, wrote one of the most vitriolic attacks against an author ever to be included in the pages of the communist-front National Lawyers

Guild Review (Winter, 1956, issue, page 160). He wrote that > Rodell tells us [that the] few renegades [on the Court never deterred it] from collectively yielding to the importunities of the monied interests or to the necessities of the political origins of the members of the Court; [that] the decisions of the Court are merely the expressions of individual political predilections, [therefore] the Court has no warrant to perform the high function of determining the constitutionality of government action. [Gordon complains that] Rodell strips the Court of its veneer of symbolism with the acid of his realism, and leaves only a Court as devoid of power, as it is, according to him, devoid of principle. . . . He cannot insist that the Court is simply the abode of a handful of men, each intent upon following his political and economic star, and then ask us to invest them with the final discretion to sustain or strike down legislation.

IT IS PRECISELY on Rodell's points that public attention must be focused. Personal value judgments —held by the nine men on the Court—as to what does or what does not constitute pornography, obscenity, immorality and sacrilege should not be perpetrated upon 178,000,000 people; yet they are. The Court has no warrant from the Constitution to determine what is the "law of the land" as to the propagation of filth among the youth of the nation; yet it does.

An interesting sidelight to the Post Office's recent attack on pornography is the observation by Stanley Meisler in his article, "Hidden Censor," in The Nation for October 10, 1959. He states:

> Under the guidance of a dynamic new general counsel, Herbert B. Warburton, the department is studying ways of revising its procedures to meet the objections of book publishers and civil-liberties groups. Warburton hopes to ask Congress for legislation that would put the power of judging obscenity increasingly in the hands of the courts.

Since we, as a nation, unwittingly have given to the Supreme Court the power to order and control our destinies, we must, as individuals, do everything we can to thwart the evil effects of the Court's rulings. Extralegal methods for seeking redress are out; what is left is simply this: we can refuse to fight the pornographers and their allies on their terms.

What methods of counterattack are left? Ruthless and unremitting exposure of every element of the conspiracy behind the pornography racket. Suppression of degrading literature, advertisements and films by boycott, ostracism, picketing, enforced cooperation, police pressure, legal harrassment, any method allowable in our society. Investigation of future intent of the pornographers so that preventive measures may be prepared.

How is pornography a political, or more correctly, a psychopolitical, weapon? The instant a person picks up a piece of pornographic or obscene literature in any of its forms, or attends a movie which has been advertised in a manner so as to awaken his prurient interest or continues to watch a TV show which is covertly lewd in its appeal, he begins to lose his self-respect and with it respect for his fellow human beings. The degree to which he succumbs to the lure of the lascivious, within himself, determines the completeness of his degradation. Passion is not unnatural, nor will any religious source so state; no, it is how that passion is directed—and into what channels —that is important to the spiritual and moral well-being of the individual, which ultimately is reflected in the state of the nation and of all mankind.

The first enemy to conquer is oneself; once that has been accomplished we can look to our fellowmen. If we do not, how can we point the finger at all the myriads of corruptive influences at work in our civilization with any degree of conviction or desire to ameliorate such conditions? Once man is animalized, de-Christianized, psychoanalyzed, debauched sexually, brainwashed into passive acceptance of immoral law as the sine qua non of his existence, he is fit only to wear shackles as a slave. And that is exactly what the men who have planned this expect to happen.

THE FUND FOR THE REPUBLIC distributed 2,000 copies of Banned Books by Anne Lyon Haight (R. R. Bowker Company, New York, 2nd Edition, 1955) to libraries and library trustees. This book lists chronologically those books which fell under a ban because of heresy, treason or obscenity from 387 B.C. to 1954 A.D. It has an introduction by Morris Leopold Ernst. Ernst for years was the treasurer or board director of the American Fund for Public Service, "a major source for the financing of Communist Party enterprises" (Dies Committee Report, March, 1944, page 76, and Appendix IX, 1944); a member of or otherwise connected with the communist-fronts, the National Lawyers Guild, Sacco-Vanzetti National League, Non-Partisan Committee for the Reelection of Congressman Vito Marcantonio, counsel for the cited American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU); and co-author of To The Pure, published in 1928 by the Freethought Press Association, organ of the national atheistic organization, the Freethinkers of America. This book was described by the Freethought Press as a "study of obscenity and the censor. A valuable contribution to the literature of man's struggle with his sex complex, and the efforts of organized religion in politics to stifle his attempts to acquire information." Excerpts from the book, American Stuff, edited and sponsored by Ernst, read into the Congressional Record in November, 1938, "were so vile in part, they were unprintable." (Dies hearings, 1938, pages 2741-44.)

Ernst has exerted a great deal of effort for over 30 years towards the legitimatization of obscenity, as an ACLU lawyer, as an author of several books on censorship and as a coordinator for others interested in the same objective (among them, D. H. Lawrence, author of Lady Chatterley's Lover).

In his introduction to Banned Books, he observed that the > church, maintaining power over masses of illiterate folk, gave evidence of its inner insecurity by endeavoring to maintain power by the suppression of criticism. . . . As the power of the church was diminished . . . censorship shifted from blasphemy into the area of sedition, and then after the democratic process had taken root . . . the power of the state over men's minds dwindled. . . . the next big shift [was] from sedition to obscenity. . . . Anthony Comstock . . . pushed through our first obscenity laws, promptly to be copied in most of the states of the Union. From 1870 to 1915, the practice of book publishers was to submit manuscripts to the Comstock Society. . . . after 1915 a line of cases were brought to court, narrowing to a substantial extent suppressible obscenity.

IT WAS ERNST who made the first major breach in the barriers which had been so carefully erected between the degenerate writers, publishers and distributors and the impressionable youth and nearly defenseless citizenry of this country, barriers long maintained by individuals who often had dedicated their lives to the task. Ernst defended in court James Joyce's Ulysses, which luridly reflected its author's predilections for scatological and immoral matters. This literary garbage had been burned, literally, by our postal authorities from its earliest appearance in this country in 1918 until 1933 when Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., admitted it as a classic, under a Tariff Act provision which permitted entry of so-called classics for non-commercial purposes at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury. Ernst then defended Random House and the book in court, and Judge John M. Woolsey of the U. S. Southern New York District Court (founder of the Columbia Law Review and adviser to the Harvard Law school) raised the ban with the observation that it was a "sincere and honest book. . . . I do not detect anywhere the leer of the sensualist." He ruled that the book was not pornographic because even though > the meaning of the word "obscene" as legally defined by the Courts is:

tending to stir the sex impulses or to lead to sexually impure and lustful thoughts, . . . whether a particular book would [so] tend . . . must be tested by the Court's opinion as to its effect on a person with average sex instincts. [His] considered opinion, after long reflection [was that nowhere did the book] tend to be an aphrodisiac.

ON APPEAL of the U.S. vs. One Book Called Ulysses case in 1934, Judge Augustus N. Hand, of the New York Circuit Court of Appeals, wrote the opinion which sustained Woolsey's ruling. The (Gathings) House Select Committee on Current Pornographic Materials Report, issued on December 31, 1952, analyzed this universally cited ruling, which held that the pertinent theme of an allegedly obscene book was the controlling factor, particularly if the book has high "literary quality" and the obscene contents only delineate character. This, stated the committee, > is as elatic as rubber in its interpretative susceptibility and supplies the purveyors of obscenity with an excuse regardless of what is the degree of obscenity involved and requires each and every book to be judged separately, an almost impossible task.

> Thus a long-existing principle of law dealing directly with obscenity in literature yielded in a revolutionary degree to adjust judicial decisions to the mores of the time. . . . [This established] a new legal philosophy in that field but one so elastic that it serves as the basis for excuse to print and circulate the filthiest, most obscene ltierature . . . ever known in history. Referred to constantly by every publisher of obscene literature whenever approached on the subject, a layman finds it difficult to successfully counter the argument of the publishers citing the Ulysses case.

There is, however, a legal counterargument, and the Gathings Committee supplied it by quoting from an opinion by Federal Judge Goodman of the Southern Division of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California. Judge Goodman, in U.S. vs. Two Obscene Books, referred directly to the Ulysse case among others:

> There has been a tendency, as indicated in the decisions of the Court of Appeals of the Second Circuit [New York, Connecticut and Vermont] and the District of Columbia to "liberalize" the definition of obscenity as it has come to us from the English courts.

Referring to obscene passages in Ulysses and other books, he continued:

> They are sought to be justified by the claim that the books as a whole have an artistic pattern, and to which the obscene and scatalogical portions fit as a part of a whole literary mosaic. But I must conclude that this is a mere sophistry. The filthy scatalogical portions are written in a bluntly different and distinct style from the [rest of Ulysses].

Judge Goodman then turned to Tropic of Capricorn, by Henry Miller, one of the two books before him in this case in 1950.

> It may be the modern trend towards frankness in sexual matters has influenced the viewpoint of claimant and the critics who espouse the cause of Miller. . . . It is sufficient to say, however, that the many obscene passages in the books have such an evil stench that to include them here in footnotes would make this opinion pornographic. . . . If this be importable literature, then the dignity of the human person and and the stability of the family unit, which are the cornerstones of our system of society, are lost to us. (Our emphasis.)

Judge Goodman applied the Hicklin test of obscenity (see below) to the books, held them to be obscene, and continued:

> It is contended . . . that Tropic of Capricorn must be treated differently because . . . these episodes or passages are stated to constitute [only] 13 per cent of the total number of pages in the book.

Judge Augustus Hand, in his opinion on Ulysses, considered "the established reputation of the work in the estimation of approved critics" as an important factor.

Judge Woolsey raised the ban on Marie C. Stopes' Married Love in 1931, saying, "I cannot imagine a normal mind to which this book would seem to be obscene or immoral." As a result, Stopes' book, Contraception, also gained entry and this cleared the way for a flood of imported birth control literature. It was Ernst who successfully defended the study in perversion, The Well of Loneliness, by Radclyffe Hall, in 1939.

In Haight's Banned Books, a survey of the cases cited shows conclusively that 1930 marked the year in which the pornographer-agitators gained their first major victory; in that year the Collector of Customs raised the government ban on dozens of obscene books.

HAIGHT'S BOOK also lists some of the judges who have contributed most to the cultural debacle in this country which has resulted from their rulings for the purveyors of obscenity. They were New Jersey Superior Judge Sidney Goldman, who, in 1953, ruled in favor of Bantam Books' The Chinese Room, by Vivian Connell; New York Magistrate Jonah J. Goldstein, who, in 1935, discharged a complaint against sale of Gustave Flaubert's November; New York City Magistrate Benjamin Greenspan, who exonerated Erskine Caldwell's God's Little Acre of the charge of obscenity in 1933, a decision which "marked a milepost against censorship. It rested on the fact that the book must be considered in its entirety, not in isolated passages;" and New York City Magistrate Nathan D. Perlman, who dismissed the case against

Andre Gide's If It Die in 1936, and who acquitted Roy Larsen, formerly publisher of Life magazine, when he was arrested for selling a copy of his magazine containing a picture story from the film, "Birth of a Baby," previously ruled indecent and corruptive. [Larsen is now president of Time, Inc.]

The moral tone of literature sold and read in this country has been successively lowered, ruling by ruling, by judges in New York City. That an opinion by a city magistrate "marked a milepost against censorship," affecting the lives of every person in this country, as it ultimately has, is an absolute disgrace. When it is also realized that it has been a New York organization, the cited Communist-front ACLU (with which Felix Frankfurter and Morris L. Ernst have been intimately associated), which provided the "legal talent" in many cases for New York City publishers, supported by New York City literary "critics," it becomes clear where the focus of infection lies.

Banned Books provides other interesting and pertinent historical information. There was a Chinese Index in 1884 to suppress communistic and revolutionary writings; conversely there was originated and in operation by 1926 in Soviet Russia an Index of the Soviet Inquisition (its official title) which stated in its direction to libraries: "The section on religion must contain solely anti-religious books." It suppressed all books "which confound science with religious inventions, speak of the wisdom of the Creator and the immorality of Darwinism." In 1953, in East Germany, the communist cultural advisers removed from the libraries, schools and bookshops at least 5,000,000 volumes by German, Nazi and foreign authors. In 1954 the same advisers banned Mickey Mouse as an anti-Red rebel.

PERHAPS the first major judicial sanction of obscenity in the United States was that made by Judge Learned Hand (again in New York City) of Harvard Law School. Judge Hand protested the Hicklin rule in 1913 in U.S. vs. Kennerley in which he called for "adequate portrayal of some of the most serious and beautiful sides of human nature."

Two Negro physicians, Dr. Edward C. Mazique, president-elect, National Medical Association, and Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, testified before the Granahan House Postal Subcommittee Investigating the Problem of Obscene Literature. They said,

> They knew from their own observation that pornographic literature contributes directly to mental illness among young people who habitually read it.
> Dr. Mazique . . . added that obscene literature is a special threat to people of his race. "By nature of the fact that the great masses of Negroes are in the lower socio-economic group," he explained, "they are the most helpless in the face of the inundating force of lewd and obscene literature."—The Tablet, June 6, 1959.

WHAT IS a projected result of the spreading rot of moral degeneracy now besetting America and the rest of the world, a rot which has been accelerated by the pornographer-agitators? Miss G. M. Godden's Russia Under the Red Flag (Burns Oates and Washbourne, Ltd., London, 1929) gives a clue. She realized that pornography always goes hand-in-hand with anti-Christian propaganda and agitation. As a result, her book was savagely suppressed here and abroad. She wrote (page 61):

> Theatrical representations have been devised, throughout Russia, parodying the Gospels with a bestial obscenity impossible to describe in these pages. The actors, by whom all the relations of human life are openly carried out before the audience, may be boys and girls. . . . The organizer of the blasphemous and obscene theatrical propaganda of the Soviet Government is E. V. Meyerhold . . . the Director of the now famous Revolutionary Theatre in Moscow.

Miss Godden further wrote that:

> In a special appeal Zinovieff [Ovse Gershon Radomilsky, sometimes called Apfelbaum] declared: 'We will grapple with the Lord God in due season. We shall vanquish him in his highest Heaven and wherever he seeks refuge, and we shall subdue him forever! . . . Month after month, for 11 years, the flood of obscenity and blasphemy has been poured over Russia, and has been directed down every channel by which the people could be reached.

Miss Godden exposed the horrible system of the Proletcult (Soviet Education):

> Alexandra Kollontai . . . wrote in 1922: "Immorality in the schools is making satisfactory progress; many young girls of 15 are already pregnant. We may rejoice, for we shall have some new little communists." . . . One of the masters in a Moscow Academy describes the new Proletcult education quite frankly: "The boys and girls are herded together indiscriminately, and there is no semblance of morality. There is no pretence at discipline. No punishments are inflicted, no homework is set, and no marks are allowed.' "

These nauseous facts are the outcome of a carefully devised section of the tactics of International Communism. The International Communist is perfectly aware that one of the most intractable of the obstacles to . . . communism . . . is the general recognition, by the peoples of the world, of certain primary moral obligations. Hence the indefatigable and organized replacement, in communist education, of morality by lust, and the insistence on the educational formula of the Proletcult, as regards morality, which is expressed in the phrase everything is allowed. (Madame Smidovich, Pravda, March 24, 1925.) The application of this formula during 11 years to the communistic youth . . . has naturally resulted in wholesale debauchery; a debauchery, moreover, which is welcomed. . . . This systematic Soviet trampling of morality under foot has been carried out . . . with a thoroughness the facts of which cannot be transcribed into English print. . . . Communism, we are told, "deliberately banishes all moral law." . . . M. Yaroslavsky (Gubelmann) has said: "All that is favorable to the Party and the class, as a whole is moral; everything that is not, is immoral." (Pravda, October 9, 1924.)

MISS GODDEN describes in detail the terrible increase in child criminality which resulted from the foregoing policy. New York City calls it "juvenile delinquency." Whatever its label, it means this: what is happening in New York City today, to its youth, is a preview of that which is planned for the rest of the nation. A constant flood of insecurity propaganda, cultistic entertainment and lecherous writings is inundating youth. No wonder children have reacted violently; they are the products of the stupidities of their parents, who have relinquished discipline and moral militancy for the enjoyment of sensual, materialistic pleasures.

The Red War on the Family, written and published by Samuel Saloman in 1922 in Washington, D. C., contains extensive quotations from Soviet Russia's Code of Marriage Laws, compiled by Alexander Hoichbarg, chief editor of the Law Bureau, and reprinted in Contemporary Review (March and April, 1920). The contents of the Code and the descriptions of what happened to women and children in Russia under the Bolsheviks beggar belief! A Bureau of Free Love was established. A girl, having reached her 18th year, was to be considered the property of the state and had to register with this Bureau which was a part of the Commissariat of Surveillance. "Men between the ages of 19 and 50 have the right to choose from among the registered women, even without the consent of the latter, in the interests of the state." Further details of this Bureau were given in the book, The Red Conspiracy, by Joseph J. Mereto (The National History Society, New York, 1920), in addition to explicit information concerning the advocacy of free love and the pursuits of "the lusts of the flesh" by American Socialists before World War I.

Pornography, obscenity and immorality are not only political weapons, they are necessary ingredients of a system of enslavement and are inextricably bound into the fabric of the anti-Christian conspiracy which requires the destruction of the family as a prerequisite to its success.

What one magazine started the current deluge of filth on the newsstands? Some might answer that it was Esquire, which was banned by the Postmaster General in 1946 and then allowed to be sent through the mails after a unanimous decision by the U. S. Supreme Court. Others say the real trend in salacious magazines for newsstand distribution started with the appearance, some nine years ago, of a monthly called Good Times: A Review of the World of Pleasure, published by Samuel Roth. In July, 1955, a federal grand jury indictment was brought in New York against Roth, naming as co-conspirators Chief Miller, G. I. Distributors, Inc., Morris Sorkin and Phillip S. Foner, Remainder Book Company and Abraham Lieberman, Book Sales, Inc. Roth was the only one actually indicted for sending lewd literature through the mails and was sent to prison for five years.

THE SENATE INTERNAL SECURITY Subcommittee (SISS) investigated this case. (See its hearings on Scope of Soviet Activity in the United States, May, 1956, Part 23, pages 1195-1206.) The subcommittee called one of the named co-conspirators for testimony, Philip S. Foner, co-owner of Citadel Press and the Remainder Book Company with Morris Sorkin. Foner had been identified previously as a member of the Communist Party and took the Fifth Amendment when asked if he were a member then (in May, 1956). Foner and Sorkin and their firm had been named as co-conspirators with Alex M. Yudkin and his company in an indictment against two other New York publishing houses on the same offense, handed down by a district court grand jury. Foner is a specialist on Jews in American history and wrote a pamphlet by that name. The subcommittee listed the many titles issued by Citadel Press, "publisher of party-line works." They included Casanova's Homecoming, by Arthur Schnitzler (indicted as obscene in 1924); Documentary History of the Jews in the United States, by Morris U. Schappes (an identified Communist Party member); Homosexuals, by A. M. Kirch; The Satanic Mass, by H. T. Rhodes; and dozens of others of like nature. Roth, "one of the nation's biggest dealers in obscenity," had been in operation 40 years!

According to the Brooklyn Tablet of February 4, 1956, story, Abraham Rubin, 60, was described by District Attorney Frank S. Hogan as "the kingpin of the pornographic industry in this country, doing a $1,000,000-a-year business." Rubin, alias Al Stone, had been cited for contempt in May, 1955, by the Senate Subcommittee to Investigate Juvenile Delinquency, for refusing to answer questions during its hearings on the relationship between pornography and delinquency. Hogan said that, on February 3, the police caught Rubin "with the goods." The rear and trunk of his car were loaded with "filthy material," including 24,000 "filthy comic books," 1,000 decks of pornographic cards and 100 reels of 8mm and 20 reels of 16mm film. He was charged with possession of indecent literature with intent to sell. He pleaded guilty on April 9, 1956; on May 15, 1956, he was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $1,000.

Others cited for contempt of Congress before the Kefauver Subcommittee were "alleged pornographers who invoked the Fifth Amendment 35 times each. . . . Irving Klaw, self-styled king of the pinups, who assertedly does a $1,500,000 business. . . . Edward Mishkin, asserted partner in three Broadway area bookshops." (New York Daily News, July 13, 1955, page 20.)

THE New York Daily News for April 9, 1957, carried an item concerning Hyman Greenspan's arrest with his partner, David Schoer, for selling indecent pictures. "Thousands of indecent photos and reams of pornographic literature were seized," according to the police, after they left the Co-Art Associates photo studios. Greenspan had been arrested on the same charge one year previously and the case was still pending! On December 12, 1957, both men pleaded guilty, on January 17, 1958, each received a $500 fine and a 90-day suspended sentence.

"Three New York City dealers charged with being 'among the biggest operators on the East Coast' in the national $300,000,000 obscene materials business" were indicted on April 7, 1959, by a federal grand jury. This announcement was made by Postmaster General Summerfield and the story was given in the Tablet, April 11, 1959.

> Mr. Summerfield referred to raids on headquarters of three of the nation's "large, defiant and ruthless purveyors of mail-order filth" [after opening of the sealed indictments. He called the raids a] devastating and history-making blow [against this business.] Seized in the crackdown were Ben Himmel . . . indicted on 39 counts; William Glanzman . . . 70 counts; Sidney G. Poss . . . 20 counts. . . . Henry B. Montague, in charge of the Postal Inspection Service, said Himmel, Glanzman and Poss have records of using the mails to distribute pornography and that Glanzman has a 1958 New York State case pending against him. [The 1959 case against these three men is still pending.]

The arrest of the monster of Massapequa, Long Island, Russian-born Ivan Jerome, 60, who had changed his name from Emereff, came about because the police accidentally had uncovered motion pictures which he had taken with hidden cameras in his home. The movies were of himself and at least 20 young girls ranging in age from 13 to 17. District Attorney Frank Gulotta, after viewing the films, said (New York Herald Tribune, June 29, 1955):

> This incident serves as a horrible example. . . . We have here children . . . involved in a series of acts which stoop to the lowest depths of moral degradation and here is an individual, perhaps too low to be described in words, taking advantage of the weaknesses and perhaps naïvete and ignorance of these children. He led them into lives of crime and sexual depravity.

Subsequently, the very wealthy Jerome, out on bail, skipped the country and went to Mexico. At the present time his whereabouts are unknown.

DEFEATS SUFFERED in recent years by the forces of morality in the United States have been numerous. In November, 1957, the U.S. Supreme Court overruled the Court of Appeals ban of an indecent French film, "The Love Game." The high court declared the ban placed on the film by the Chicago Police Censor Board was unconstitutional as an infringement on the freedoms of speech and press. (Tablet, November 23, 1957.) In 1954, the high court had upset a ban an another French film, "La Ronde," by ruling that the term "immoral" as used in the New York law, was too vague.

Ohio's governor, Michael DiSalle, vetoed a bill which would have repealed a section of the Ohio nuisance code which exempts publication with second class mail permits from prosecution for obscenity.—The Tablet, August 22, 1959.

The Pennsylvania State Supreme Court struck down as unconstitutional the section of the State Penal Code which prohibits exhibitions of a "lascivious, sacrilegious, obscene, indecent or immoral nature." The Court based its decision on a prior ruling of the U.S. Supreme Court that such language was too vague. The majority opinion was written by Judge Curtis Bok (of the Curtis Publishing Company family), who had struck down charges of pornography book sales made against five booksellers in Philadelphia back in 1949. Justice Michael Musmanno, who entered a dissent in the 1959 ruling, declared that as a result of the Pennsylvania vs. Martin Blumenstein decision, Pennsylvania "may well be on the way to a cinematic Gomorrah." In 1956, the same court had struck down the state censorship law. As a result of the 1956 ruling, Musmanno said there was no way of keeping "Baby Doll," a "monstrously ugly and degenerate film," from the theatres in Pennsylvania. He said that the 1959 majority opinion "which is written almost in telegraphic code, apparently wants to say that the word 'obscene' is vague. . . . I can only say that the word 'obscene' today is about as vague as the word 'cat.'"

Bok also held in a related opinion that a lower court had erred in dismissing a suit by distributors of the film, "And God Created Woman," which had been banned in Philadelphia in 1957.

Maryland, in 1959, granted a license for exhibition of the uncut version of "Lady Chatterley's Lover," based on the U.S. Supreme Court decision regarding that film. C. Morton Goldstein, chairman of the state Board of Motion Picture Censors, issued the license, prior to a review of the censorship law by the attorney general. (Tablet, July 11, 1959, page 14.)

RUGOFF AND BECKER Theaters in New York City have advertised the following films in this manner:

"The Cousins" is described as "It is a deep cynicism, expressed in absolute hedonism—with shocking candor in the most powerful part of this film which represents a veritable orgy. . . ."—Bosley Crowther, New York Times movie critic, in an ad dated November 27, 1959, in the New York Times.

In the same paper the Rugoff and Becker Theaters' advertisement of their picture, "The Lovers," describes it as "one of the most important films of the year. It is very pure in its worship of sex itself as the incarnation of love. Unabashed, truthful sensuality."—Arthur Winston, New York Post movie critic.

The victimized public does have one weapon left against that faction responsible for the stream of pornographic literature which is flooding newsstands all over the nation. That weapon is a simple yet ruthlessly effective action.

The determined crusader can obtain a pocket-book, such as Pornography and the Law (see "The Lady Chatterley's Lover Case," January, 1960, AMERICAN MERCURY), and have offset reproductions made of pages 132-133 of that book. (Or the text may be copied for mimeographing.) Then, he should distribute that reproduction with a covering letter addressed to the publisher of the book, to the local, state and federal judges, to all civic organiaztions, newspaper editors, veterans organizations, etc., in which the question is asked, "Do you consider this material obscene or pornographic?"

Letters from the publisher or any other source defending this book can then be reproduced along with the letters taking the opposite viewpoint, and copies of the entire correspondence can be redistributed. Silence from any correspondent can be construed as indicating indifference or tacit approval of the material and also can be made public.

This method of exposure is effective. It forces the "liberal" to defend the actual quoted material, rather than to expound on the "evils of censorship;" it confronts the uninformed citizen with the irrefutable evidence of the type of literature being sold in his community. Public support can be mobilized; militant action can then be planned and executed against the local merchants.

Richard Cardinal Cushing, in deploring the current wdiespread distribution of obscene literature, stated,

> What is new and distressing is the effort which is being made in some quarters to minimize the dangers which arise in the prevalance of obscene literature, and to impede the application of existing laws by raising questions, concerning their precise meaning, and the definition of their terms. It is this dishonestly casualistical evasion of the problem which has emboldened distributors and retailers to offer for sale types of literature which only a quarter of a century ago would have fallen under universal condemnation.—The Tablet, June 6, 1959.

What organizations are fighting the forces of licentiousness today? The Citizens for Decent Literature, formed in Cincinnati, is one. It was founded and is headed by Charles H. Keating, Jr., and has been expanded into a national CDL. His group has prosecuted obscenity cases in Cincinnati courts. The CDL hopes to build up in the courts of this nation a recognition of pornography as a major crime against society as a mass and as individuals.

The Churchmen's Commission for Decent Publications, a national Protestant organization, has been formed in Washington, D.C. Chairman of the commission's Legislative Committee is O. K. Armstrong, Springfield, Missouri, a former Congressman from that state.

The National Office for Decent Literature (NODL) was established by the Roman Catholic Church in 1938 and is coordinated from 33 East Congress Parkway, Chicago 5, Illinois. It issues lists of obscene books to its members and coordinates a myriad of activities against the publishers and "pushers" of such literature. The Catholic Legion of Decency, 433 Madison Avenue, New York 17, New York, rates motion pictures as to their objectionable content.

The National Council of the Churches of Christ (Protestant) maintains in Hollywood a West Coast Broadcasting and Film Commission, 5746 Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, California, under the direction of George A. Heimrich. It contemplates making recommendations to Protestants to boycott objectionable films by staying away from all motion pictures.

WHAT CAN the individual do, other than participate in the activities and support the efforts of the organizations named? The following recommendations are made (asterisks refer to Postmaster General Summerfield's recommendations):

1. Do not attend theaters exhibiting films which you believe to be indecent or obscene. Tell the exhibitors you are not going to see such pictures and why. Write the theater exhibitor or owner each time a new objectionable picture is booked, repeating the reason for your non-attendance.

2. Complain to any newspaper that advertises such films with letters to the editor, to the owner, to the stockholders, protesting that newspaper's acceptance of advertising from sources inimical to the public interest.

3. Combine your efforts with public-spirited businessmen who may decide to withdraw their own advertising, and thus revenue, from newspapers that ignore your complaint. If many advertisers divert their advertising, perhaps one local newspaper will decide not to carry the theater advertisements in exchange for the added revenue. Both the exhibitors and the offending newspapers are affected by this method of redress.

4. Find a lawful way to affect the pocketbooks of those who are poisoning the minds of our youth. Organized groups, such as the Catholic War Veterans, the American Legion, the Wage Earners Committee in Hollywood, have successfully picketed motion pictures and theater productions in the past.

5. At the present time obscenity and communism often go hand in hand. Secure documented information as to who the communists and communist-fronters—such as writers, authors, directors, producers, cast members, etc.—are in the entertainment field.

a. Secure Senate Document No. 148, "A Summary Index of Congressional Investigations of Communism and Subversive Activities, 1918 to 1956," (dated July 23, 1956, 84th Congress, 2nd Session), from the Senate Documents Room, Washington, D. C., free, or from the Senate Committee on Government Operations, which compiled it, or the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office (GPO), Washington, D. C. (catalog no. 84-2:S, doc. 48), $1.25 a copy.

b. Check this Index for appropriate investigation of entertainment. Apply to committees indicated for desired report. Ask to be placed on the free mailing list of the SISS and the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC).

c. Subscribe to the American Legion Firing Line, National Americanism Commission, P.O. Box 1055, Indianapolis, Indiana.

d. Apply directly to Lee Pennington, American Legion, 1608 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., for specific information. Or, have your local American Legion Post do so.

e. Secure copies of Reports of the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities in California (CUAC), Sacramento, California.

f. Ask your Congressman to secure detailed reports on individuals in the entertainment fields from HUAC.

6. As pornography and communism often go hand-in-hand, hundreds of authors and other individuals connected with tne press (literary critics particularly) and the publishing field have communist or communist-front records. Secure and use the following cumulative indexes as initial guides to information concerning such subversives:

a. Indexes to Counterattack, 42 Broadway, New York, New York.

b. Cumulative Index, SISS, 1951-55; free from the Committee. (See also the SISS Report for 1958, issued August 27, 1959, for all available SISS publications.)

c. Cumulative Index to Publications of the HUAC, 1938-1954; supplement, 1955 and 1956; free from HUAC.

d. Composite Index to hearings on Tax-Exempt Foundations, 1954. Secure from Congressman Carroll Reece or from the GPO.

e. Composite Index to Hearings of Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations for 1953, from that committee or GPO.

f. Tenth Report of CUAC, 1955, from CUAC, Sacramento, California. (Ask for price.)

g. 13th Report, California Senate Investigating Committee on Education, Sacramento, California. (Ask for all other available reports.)

h. List of publications on communism from GPO and its latest Political Science list, which has complete listing.

i. Yearly cumulative index to Firing Line.

7. With knowledge of the subversive records of many of the authors of pornographic literature and persons connected with obscene motion pictures, draw up lists of individuals, works, films and other material that should be banned.

8. Make your lists available to libraries, the Chamber of Commerce, various veterans' posts, newspapers, bookstores, women's organizations, etc. Resist all pleas for "freedom of speech" and "freedom of the press" as applying to filth, subversion and propaganda as dialectical nonsense; garbage should be burnt, not left out to pollute the atmosphere.

9. Seek advertising outlets, in all communication media, for your lists and specific attacks on books, magazines, films, records, radio and TV programs.

10. Police all communication and entertainment fields. "Stag-party" records are now being sold openly, with semi-nude pictures of women on the record sleeves.

*11. Mobilized efforts are best: parents can join with other parents, teachers, local law enforcement officers and civic groups in drawing attention to the menace of this traffic in filth, forming plans to combat it locally, and mobilizing community support for their representatives in Congress considering legislation to help the Post Office stop the mail-order obscenity racket and to help support the proposed Eastland constitutional amendment against indecency, obscenity and immorality.

12. Make lists of worthwhile books, magazines, films and other materials. Distribute them.

13. Engage the entire family in entertainment activities of your choosing.

*14. Parents can work closely with teachers in their community to detect obscene materials in the possession of children and to determine the origin of such material.

*15. Parents and teachers should make a special effort to impress on the community the fact that even children who are never exposed to the obscene material may be victimized by sex criminals whose minds have been debauched by it.

*16. With reference to mail-order merchants of filth, alert parents should intercept such solicitations through the mail; save all the material, including the covering envelope; put it promptly in the hands of the local postmaster.

*17. Individuals or civic groups can call on the local postmaster for his aid in combatting the mail order traffic in obscenity. He will provide them with samples of such literature, background material for discussion and inform them of the specific problem represented in their community.

*18. Civic groups can establish a militant decent literature and films committee which can attack all aspects of this problem.

19. Secure the latest Index Librorum Prohibitorum, a 508-page listing of books banned by the Vatican over the decades. Order from P. J. Kennedy and Sons, 12 Barclay Street, New York, New York, $1.50 a copy. Also the ACLU Annual Report, 35th-39th, from 170 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, New York; House Report No. 2510, Select Committee on Current Pornographic Materials, December 31, 1952, from its chairman, Rep. E. C. Gathings, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.; The 1959 Hearings of the House Subcommittee on Postal Operations and the accompanying 61-page report, "Obscene Matter Sent through the Mail," from the chairman, Rep. Kathryn E. Granahan, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.; The Report of the Senate Subcommittee to Investigate Juvenile Delinquency from Sen. Estes Kefauver, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

THEODORE HERZL, at a secret conference of the Zionist Congress at Basle, Switzerland, in 1897, made this statement:

"In countries known as progressive and enlightened we have created a senseless, filthy, abominable literature. For some time after our entrance to power we shall continue to encourage its existence."

WHAT AMERICANS SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE N.A.A.C.P.

The above picture of a Harlem Negro and his white wife is one which every self-respecting white American should ponder well, because it represents the ultimate goal toward which the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and every other professional race-mixing organization is striving. Eventually, if they have their way, every Negro will as a matter of right and privilege enjoy the same "equality of opportunity" as the one above...

It is important that Americans should be thoroughly acquainted with the real objectives of the NAACP, and it is also important that they should realize that the president of this organization is not a Negro at all, but a little Jewish revolutionary by the name of Alvin Spingarn. And they should know that the NAACP was originally founded by a band of Jewish revolutionaries in 1909, and that no Negro has ever headed the organization...

It is likewise essential that Americans should know how the NAACP operates to achieve its objectives. They should know that this alien-controlled conspiracy has at its disposal one of the largest and most specialized legal staffs in the world -- and the only one in the world devoted exclusively to the breaking down of racial barriers.

Americans should be alerted to the fact that the NAACP has been carrying on what it boastfully calls a "silent revolution" for the past quarter century. They should know that with the aid and connivance of our left-wing Supreme Court, the NAACP'S huge legal staff has already obtained court decisions outlawing segregated schools, segregated restaurants, hotels, swimming pools, parks and public housing. And that through a series of running court actions the NAACP plans to extend the blessings of racial "integration" to every American community, to every American classroom, church, playground and, ultimately, to every bedroom...

Americans should know that the NAACP's strategy is based upon the premise that the Negro problem will only be solved with total "integration". And that this can be achieved (according to the NAACP) only by forcing whites and Negroes into intimate and prolonged contact from infancy on: at school, at play, at church, in sports, in social affairs, and at work. That is the NAACP goal, and they will never be satisfied with less.

It is for Americans to decide now whether they want this kind of enforced "equality" or not. If they don't want it, they must strike back now -- before it's too late. Let's stop this assault upon American freedom! Let's put the NAACP and its alien promoters out of business! Let's fight back!

Here's what you are helping to prevent

Letters to the Editor

Dear Sir:

I hasnt never wrote a letter to no newspaper before cause they can be so prevockative but right now I am so mad I jes don't care. When I told my boss man about it it made him mad to.

I read Mr. Leslie W. Dunbars article in the April 12 Atlanta Constitution and I called him up on the telephone. I ast him if there is a nice house I could buy in his naborhood and when he found out I was a Negro he wouldnt talk to me.

Whats the matter with him? If feels that intergrashun is so urgent why don't he wan no Negrose in his naborhood. Don't he know the bible says missions begins at home? If he aint willin for Negrose to live clost to him why is he so anxious for us to live clost to other white folks?

What Mr. Dunbar dont know is some real estate men are looking into this matter for me and I may be able to buy me a house clost to his and may be next door to his. When I told some of my colored friends who stays in a all Negro section about this it made them mad to. Since there is several houses for sale in the same street what Mr. Dunbar stays on they told me they is going to buy one. We is going to help him fill so urgent a need.

Respective yours truly,

Willie Grissom

Was civil disobedience a victim?

Massive Attacks On Big Cities

King and Carmichael Map Summer Strategy

By PAUL SCOTT

Dr. Martin Luther King's plans for "disrupting" Washington and several other major cities during 1968 are far more explosive than the details revealed in his public statements.

In addition to recruiting thousands of the poor for his drive here in Washington, King is organizing and training key black militants involved in last summer's riots for major roles in his coming massive campaigns of civil disobedience.

King revealed this and other details of his protest strategy in a series of private conferences here with Stokely Carmichael, the pro-Castro revolutionary leader, and other black militants.

According to a government security agency's report on their talks, King and Carmichael exchanged pledges of mutual support and cooperation in carrying out each other's programs.

Carmichael won King's backing to "organize Washington" through his Black United Front. In exchange, Carmichael pledged his support for King's massive program of civil disobedience against Congress here in April and several other major cities later in the year.

Carmichael also agreed to encourage his "Black Power" supporters to work with King to set up a nationwide political coalition of poor, peace, student and "Black Power" groups.

At one dramatic point in their meeting, Carmichael remarked that the time had come to begin disrupting American cities "to help our Viet Cong comrades-in-arms." (The South Vietnam Benedict Arnolds who joined the Communists)

At a recent Washington news conference, Dr. King (right) outlined plans for his massive demonstration in the capital. With King is Rev. Andrew Young, executive vice president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"To dislocate the functioning of a city without destroying it can be more effective than a riot because it can be longer lasting, more costly to the society," stated King. "It is more difficult for government to quell it by superior force. The disruption of the cities you want will come much easier."

During their private talks, King neither asked for nor received a pledge from Carmichael that the black militants being organized in Washington would refrain from violence during the coming demonstrations.

In his conversations with other black militants, King reported that ousted Congressman Adam Clayton Powell would play a major role in the coming Washington demonstrations.

"I had a long talk with Powell in Bimini recently and he has agreed to come to Washington in April to play an important role in our demonstrations," stated King. "We are going to make his ouster from Congress one of the major civil rights battles of 1968."

Powell's only visit to Washington from his Bimini retreat since his expulsion was to appear before a federal grand jury investigating congressional charges he had misused public funds.

On advice of his attorneys, Powell during that trip did not try to take his Harlem seat in Congress which he won again in a special election. Powell's expulsion case is now pending before the U.S. Circuit Court here.

In a recent letter to C. Summer Stone, a former aide, Powell confirmed that he would return to Washington, writing that "my return to Washington in April will help rock the entire country."

COST OF THE SEARCHLIGHT—"Congress established the General Accounting Office to function as a sort of searchlight, piercing the darkness of bureaucratic bumbling to expose wasteful federal spending. Last year, the GAO reports, it uncovered at least $190 million in wasteful spending. That's impressive. Also impressive is word that detecting such waste required the services of 4,216 persons and expenditures of $49 million. We cite the figures not as reproof of the GAO but as a reminder that even the best federal agencies bear watching."—From the Omaha Evening World-Herald

BIG BULLIES—"The trouble with being a second-rate power is that big countries such as North Viet Nam and North Korea keep picking on us."—Don MacLean in the Washington Daily News

In a hysteria of patriotic American both white and black either promote or condone any defiance of law during non violence in, non violence out, do they promote and condone other techniques which have not used them since 7-4-1776. Meetings, petitions, discussions and the ballot box are used first. Those methods techniques always failed first before violence and death in—

While stressing that he was vigorously opposed to U.S. involvement in Viet Nam, King argued that if such an objective was announced for his campaign that it would backfire.

King explained that more support could be obtained from the public by using the coming Washington protest to create national domestic issues which could be used to bring Negroes into a political coalition with other groups.

To show Carmichael the broad outline of his strategy, King gave him a copy of several of his coalition plans, including one to set up black militant neighborhood organizations in five major cities.

Prepared by the staff of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference which King heads, the plan states:

"The over-all procedure or strategy involved will center on initial workshop groups. The following steps will be structured:

(a) "Selection of five cities in which our staffs will train 100 neighborhood leaders. The suggested cities are Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis, Mo., Houston and Atlanta.

(b) "Contacts will be made with the residents of the poor community. Young men who were actively involved in last summer's riots will be sought out and trained as leaders.

"After the potential leaders, both male and female, have been identified, they will be brought to a residential training center near the urban areas, but well outside the city limits, to receive the basic training."

King also lectured Carmichael that his tactics of massive civil disobedience would be far more effective and helpful to black militants in obtaining their goals than riots.

Businessmen Take On Local Problems

By John Chamberlain

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States chose Washington's Birthday to unveil its program for involving business leaders in efforts to wipe out hard-core poverty, presumably on the theory that if its plans for "mobilizing total community resources" are successful they will constitute the Second American Revolution.

When the talk is of "coordinating" and "balancing" a thousand different things, as it was in the Chamber's announcement of its "Forward America" project, the imagination boggles. Too much is too much. So let's begin at the local community level, just to see what the national Chamber organization is really up to propagandizing.

It so happens that in a number of cities —Hartford, Conn., Seattle, Wash., Tampa, Fla., and Buffalo, Schenectady and Sarotaga Springs in New York state —local businessmen have not waited upon prods from the politicians (who have no resources other than the money they can tax from the people) to get going with programs for attacking hard-core poverty.

Take the non-profit Buffalo Opportunities Development Corporation, with its JET (for Jobs, Education and Training) subsidiary, for one example. The impetus for doing something in Buffalo happens to have involved the cooperation of business, government and local Negro organizations, which is as it should be. The interesting aspect is its growth from naivete to sophistication.

Originally, the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce had proposed doing something to start a recreation center for poor people. But when it dug into popular attitudes, it discovered that nobody in the slum areas wanted things like gymnasiums. They wanted jobs. And they wanted follow-through from job training to job placement. This is what the Buffalo JET project is trying to provide.

In Hartford, Conn., local businessmen, who had become depressed at looking at a frowsy, down-at-the-heels downtown area, decided they must do something about it. But, instead of acting on the naive assumption that urban renewal was just a matter of obtaining funds from Washington and ripping out the center of the city, these businessmen began by asking some pretty sophisticated questions. When you tear down buildings which include dwelling houses, where do you put the displaced people?

If the answer is "public housing," then why is it that people aren't earning enough to buy shelter in the open market? The answer could be "deficient education." Then what about schools? The effort to think a whole chain of things through has led in Hartford to a take-it-slow-and-easy program of urban renewal combined with a system of busing Negro children from slums to suburban school areas.

Now, what the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, operating out of Washington, D.C., proposes is a service job for its 50 state affiliates, its 3,000 local Chamber of Commerce units, and its 300 trade associations. It would let all of these in on what has happened—and what can happen—when businessmen decide to tackle poverty conditions in their own communities.

In a world that has seen scores of programs fail because they were dictated from the top down without "casing" local conditions, this makes magnificent sense.

Certified liberals such as Daniel Moynihan (above) are now pushing locally controlled slum renewal programs.

It happens also to be quite in line with the new sophisticated pragmatism that seems to be uniting conservatives and liberals these days when it comes to dealing with the subject of poverty.

Federal programs for urban renewal have, over the years, bulldozed more low-income housing out of existence than has been restored by public housing subsidies. So now liberals such as Richard Goodwin, Daniel Moynihan and Richard Cloward are joining with the conservative Martin Anderson, author of The Federal Bulldozer, in asking for realistic slum improvement programs that are locally motivated and locally controlled.

We may be getting somewhere at last. And the Chamber of Commerce of the United States may turn out to be one of the most effective agents for the change.

PROPAGANDISTS POPULARIZE RACIAL "INTEGRATION"

The disgusting pictures shown on this page should give every American cause for thought, for they represent the ultimate goal toward which the starry-eyed exponents of interracial "brotherhood" and "integration" are striving. They also depict one of the important methods by which that goal is to be achieved...

Typical of the TV fare now being served up to the American public is this Negro jazz musician, pictured here sharing his instrument with an admirer.

In this connection it is important that self-respecting Americans realize that the vicious race-mixing program of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (N.A.A.C.P.) is being waged on not one, but on two, major sectors. On one front, integration is being implemented by force and compulsion; on the other it is being put over by propaganda. And it is important to emphasize that both are equally dangerous; that neither is a lesser threat than the other.

This concept may come as a surprise to many Americans, whose attention has been concentrated solely upon the efforts of the Supreme Court and the Eisenhower administration to bring about racial mongrelization by compulsion -- i.e. by forcing whites to mingle with Negroes in the public schools, in the armed forces, in public housing projects and elsewhere. Unfortunately, this preoccupation with the compulsory phase of the struggle has tended to obscure and overshadow the equally dangerous propaganda assault which is concurrently being carried on as a means of brainwashing Americans into accepting racial "integration".

If Americans are to avoid the total mongrelization of their Anglo-American civilization, it is obvious that considerably more emphasis will have to be given to the propaganda question than has been the case to date. In particular, patriots everywhere must learn to recognize the principal source from which most of the current race-mixing propaganda is emanating -- that is to say, the motion picture and television industries.

Shown dying in the arms of the heroine is the Negroidal hero of the interracial film, "Simba". The white girl plays part of the Negro's "assistant".

In this respect it is especially important that Americans realize that all three of the nation's major TV nets are Jewish-owned, as is the Hollywood motion picture industry. Both industries are controlled by a small group of New York Jews, many of Russian origin, and it is they who have undertaken a deliberate policy of glamourizing and popularizing Negroes at every opportunity -- as the accompanying photos attest. One thing is certain: if we are to successfully oppose the mongrelization of our civilization, we must find some way to put a stop to the flood of offensive and degenerate racial propaganda such as is currently befouling our television and motion picture screens.

Sir:

Your article concerning the so-called New South may be summed up in one word - trash! Why anyone would herald a mongrelized mulatto America is incomprehensible to me. There is no doubt that many idiotic whites promote a program intended to amalgamate our race with the negro - the most inferior and repulsive race in the world. There is no doubt that they will succeed and this nation, if it survives, will become a completely socialistic, Africanized, total dictatorship. I do not doubt their success but I do question the desirability of it!

In my opinion people such as you are a greater menace to our country than any Russian could be.

BRAIN WASH !

Have you had your brain washed? This is a Communist trick. It is practiced all over the United States. A simple sentence drummed at you and the operation begins to take effect.

Subversives pay millions of dollars for one sentence to wash your brain. Here is the line: Remember if you are a good American, all races, creeds and colors must be equal. Races, creeds and colors means Negroes but that word is not used at this stage of your bath.

When you have been degraded sufficiently by suggestion—then the Negro will be offered as a social equal that all good Americans should want to mate with.

Is your child's mind being tampered with at school? Is it too late for you to learn that your child's mind is as sacred as its body? In other words have you had your brain washed?

"This is the voice of the Southerners. We are a deliberate group of Anglo Saxon white men, led by Asa Carter, who could not buy the Communist line: there is nothing that can be done. Karl Marx said when you have convinced the population that there is nothing that can be done, you have already whipped them.

"But of course, Karl Marx was ignorant when it came to the southern redneck. The Southerners have never accepted atheistic ideals in all of its history. Its true strength lies in his reliance on God and not government.

"We have seven divisions in Alabama and two adsemblies in Mississippi. The Admiral Raphael Semmes Division in Mobile alone has over 1,000 dedicated men. We meet every 2nd and 4th Thursday in the American Legion Hall, 1918 Duval Street at 7:30 p.m.

"We have a brother in our Assembly whose 16 year old daughter was savagely raped by two blacks with a shotgun; now the girl has to have an abortion. If you have any white manhood left in you and you can see fit to help this man with medical expenses that he can't afford, please send your contributions to the Southerners Medical Fund, P.O. Box 303, Mobile, Alabama. Thank you for calling the Southerners."

Message slightly altered some time before May 6.

May 7 to May 11, inclusive, the phone just rings with no answer or recording.

Phone message recorded over number 344-1218 (Mobile, Alabama 205), May 12, 1971.

"This is the voice of the Southerners. The Southerners are assemblies of white, Christian men across the southland, dedicated to save the children and unite white families into a brotherhood of mutual assistance.

"Our next meeting will be May the 20th at the Prichard National Guard Armory - that's Fort Dumont - at 535 Main Boulevard, Prichard, Alabama at 8 p.m.

"Today in Mobile,Alabama, the so-called public school system is a nightmare. White children are being savagely brutalized by niggers while the limp-wristed, weak kneed school officials look the other way. The cowardly action of the school officials is matched in disgrace only by the blanket of silence and biased reporting of our local news media.

"Now, through the Southerners, you can send your child to an all white, segregated Christian school at no cost to you. That's right, no cost. For more details attend our next meeting, Thursday May 20th, Fort Dumont National Guard Armory, 535 Main Blvd. in Prichard, Alabama, 8 p.m. You will not be obligated to join. Thank you for calling the Southerners."

WHILE YOU SLEEP

Seven Pell City system schools were closed: (St. Clair County) According to one school official, because: "Tension was running high. . .as a result of the actions of negroes toward white girls." Newspapers refuse to print what those "actions," are.

Police Chief J.J. Robinson of Mobile has announced he cannot spare any more men for duty at Murphy High School, adding that it is already costing $1,000.00 per day to keep the "riot squad", there now.

Delegation of white girls appeal to the principal of Anniston High School (Calhoun County), for relief from "obscenities and vulgar approaches of negro boys." No action taken.

Vigor High School, Mobile: White male student while attempting to defend a white teacher from blacks, knocked to the floor, stomped and kicked severely, suffering a brain concussion.

White male student, West End High, Birmingham, when accosted by a group of black male students who demanded money and upon telling them he had none, was stabbed in the back, his spinal cord cut. Now a paralyzed patient at West End Baptist Hospital. No one arrested.

Butler High, Huntsville: Blacks riot at basketball game, injuring five policemen. White adults had to be escorted to their cars by police with trained dogs. Associated Press reported "many bleeding white students at the scene." Butler High was earlier a scene of another vicious negro attack which has resulted in suppression of the song, "Dixie," and removal of the Confederate flag. Negroes ripped up the flag and tied bits of it around their shoes.

Foley High (Baldwin County) school principal Oscar Rich refuses to comment on negro violence of white students that required Foley and Robertsdale police, along with the Sheriff's Department, on the scene. Waltern Wellborn High Band (Calhoun county) attacked by negroes at Talladega High for playing "Dixie."

The Confederate flag is being secretly outlawed by public school officials along with "Dixie". The school bands, instead, are being instructed to play the tune, "Battle Hymn of the Republic", . .the bloody abolitionist song of the Civil War. . .as another means of appeasement. . .and surrender to the negroes.

THE SOUTHERNERS

The man who handed you this material could be a medical doctor, a laborer, a college professor, a truck driver or one of many other occupations or professions; all are represented in the assemblies of the SOUTHERNERS.

This man has paid for this material out of his own pocket. He is donating his time and his effort to bring to your attention an obligation that manhood owes to his womanhood and his children. That obligation is not now being lived up to by the bulk of Southern men.

War has been declared upon an entire generation of little white children who are fighting for their lives. , their right to decency, and their heritage of Christian civilization.

Little white girls are bearing the brunt of this savage assault. Their existence or destruction, depends upon the manhood of their race. That is you.

The Southerner who hands you this material has extended the courtesy to you of honoring the manhood he believes you to possess, once you have knowledge of this issue.

If you choose to honor the obligation of manhood toward our white children and womenfolk, you will find an assembly of Southerners near you. You may attend these assemblies without obligation of joining. You will not be called upon for violence in any form.

The politician is turning his face away from these white children. The newspapers are attempting to hide the murder and death of an entire generation of Southern white children.

History will record how you and other men of the South lived up to their obligation of manhood or forsook it out of fear and laziness.

We have to confess . . .

. . . this is a commercial, straight and unfiltered. Hard sell they call it on Madison Avenue, we believe.

Maybe you know us already and we surely hope you do. Maybe you have sent in your subscription for the next five or ten years. If so, we're humble and we're grateful and we thank you.

But maybe you've never heard of us. (That's hard to take, but we recognize the possibility) If so, we want to introduce ourselves and in the process tell you about our winter issue, which we modestly admit is penetrating, refreshing, stimulating and provocative.

NEW SOUTH, now issued quarterly by the Southern Regional Council, used to be pretty much of a loner in the South. We stood for (and still stand for) such unique and unpopular notions as equality and brotherhood and against such sacred Old South cows as segregation and racial discrimination. We're not alone anymore. A good portion of the more enlightened Southern press has come to accept the positions we espoused some years ago, and we're frankly delighted.

All of which is by way of leading up to the fact that NEW SOUTH is now shifting focus. We're going in for more in-depth articles now -- the sort of things you might find in The Nation, the New Republic, The Progressive. And, in fact, our winter issue features some of the writers you see in those magazines. Robert Sherrill, for instance, a regular contributor to the Nation, reports in this issue of NEW SOUTH on the HUAC Ku Klux Klan hearings. Pulitizer prize winner Jack Nelson, now head of the Los Angeles Times southern bureau, offers up an incisive view of current Southern viewpoints, both the changing and the unchanged. Margaret Long, SRC staffer, novelist and frequent contributor to the Progressive, reports provocatively on activity within the Movement. James Silver, professor of history at the University of Mississippi for 28 years and author of MISSISSIPPI: THE CLOSED SOCIETY suggests that the door to that society may be opening a bit in excerpts from his new book to be published soon by Harcourt, Brace and World. Leslie Dunbar, former executive director of the Southern Regional Council and now director of the Field Foundation, probes with the philosopher's instinct for the truth behind current, popular concepts toward a realistic solution of America's racial inequities. Jack Patterson, southern correspondent for Business Week, writes a penetrating analysis of the southern businessman's reaction to the Negro Movement. Vincent Harding, chairman of the Department of History and Social Science at Spelman College, author of MUST WALLS DIVIDE? and articles on the southern scene in national magazines, writes eloquently, movingly of the erosion away from redemptive love within the Movement. Dr. Robert Coles, a psychiatrist with the University Health Services of Harvard University and contributor to the Atlantic, Harpers, New Republic, Nation, The New York Times Sunday magazine; author of ''The Desegregation of Public Schools: a Psychiatric Study,'' published by SRC in 1963, evaluates the Southerner and his unique and tragic heritage against the backdrop of today's vast social changes.

Combine these articles with a quarterly state-of-the-southern states round-up of developments and trends in civil rights from the eleven state councils on human relations and it all adds up to the fact that NEW SOUTH is ''must'' reading for all who wish to be informed of what is going on in Southern race relations today.

But don't just take our word for it. Fill out the coupon below and mail it back to us with your 1966 subscription -- and find out for yourself.

QUOTED FROM THE WINTER, 1966 ISSUE, NEW SOUTH

"Perhaps it was all too wild a dream in the first place, this hope of redemption. Perhaps it was a child's fantasy in the sleep of night, or another Negro folk tale dredged up from the long dead age of faith. But if it was, then, who shall preserve us from the day, from this age, from the sudden blaze of fiery light?"—Vincent Harding.

"That Negro girl I heard talking in Harlem was a Southerner, even as Faulkner was, or Ralph Ellison in many ways still is. Their minds have all taken in the region's warmth, openness, and really splendid countryside. Most of all they have all shared the pitiable self-consciousness that allows neither exploiter not exploited whatever sanctuary the one thinks the other has."—Robert Coles.

"The tensions of the early sessions (of the HUAC hearings on the KKK) lasted only until one realized he was watching an encounter, complete with grunts and fierce chattering, analogous to the formalized grimacing and posturing of enemy savages, met in a deep wood, who do not mean to attack but only to save face."—Robert Sherrill

"In Brazil, you will find blue eyes and black skin, flat skulls with triangular faces, hair plaited in pigtails, white babies at the breasts of colored mothers, colored babies at the breasts of white mothers and colors running from ebony to eggshell via copper, olive, caramel, and banana.

A mixture of this sort has made any attempt at racial segregation out of the question in Brazil—because no one could possibly tell where white begins and black ends."

"Brazil has long since passed the rest of the world in its race relations. The so-called race problem simply does not exist in Brazil."

Born April 12, 1904, at Wrightsville, Johnson County, Ga., son of James Monroe and Ida (Preston) Cook, grandson of W. W. and Mary Ann (Smith) Cook and of Charles Thomas and Mary Elizabeth (Boswell) Preston. Married Julia Adelaide McClatchey, June 1928, daughter of the late H. R. and Mrs. McClatchey (graduate, Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., Summa Cum Laude). Two sons, Eugene, Jr., and Charles McClatchey.

President Redding, Distinguished Guests and My Fellow Members of the Peace Officers Association of Georgia:

It is always a source of genuine personal satisfaction for me to have the opportunity of appearing before this group. Of all the organizations to which I have the privilege of belonging, none has accorded me a greater degree of support and cooperation than the Peace Officers Association of Georgia.

This rapport, I feel, is due principally to the fact that we share common professional objectives and personal convictions. As servants of our fellow citizens, we are made acutely aware of the grave responsibility inherent in protecting the rights and liberties of the people through vigorous and impartial enforcement of the law. As individuals charged with this solemn duty, we are able to see more clearly than others the threat to those rights and liberties posed by those who would substitute government by men for government by law.

It is because of your demonstrated discernment in this regard that I have chosen this occasion as the proper forum for revealing, for the first time, the authenticated details of the most ominous of these threats to arise during our lifetime. I refer to the subversive designs behind the current crusade of the misnamed National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and its fellow-traveling fronts to force upon the South the Communist-inspired doctrine of racial integration and amalgamation.

It shall be my purpose in this speech to totally disrobe the NAACP and to present this sinister and subtle organization in all its nakedness.

The ugly truth about the NAACP and its origin, aims and manipulators is so shocking as to stagger the imagination, but it is borne out by incontrovertible facts which can be established as matters of official record. These facts have been uncovered, checked, assembled and correlated through many weeks of intensive investigation and cooperative effort by my Staff and the Staffs of Congressman James C. Davis of Georgia and Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi.

I am prepared to prove everything I shall say. And I wish to state for the benefit of those who undoubtedly will attempt to smear me and discredit my findings and conclusions that I would welcome the opportunity to present the evidence I have in hand for determination before a trial jury in a court of law.

At the outset I wish to make it clear that the issue involved is one not of race but rather of subversion. None of the organizations which have exploited the race issue in this country has ever had the welfare of the negro people at heart. They have seized upon this issue as a convenient front for their more nefarious activities and as one with which they could dupe naive do-gooders, fuzzy-minded intellectuals, misguided clergymen and radical journalists to be their pawns.

The record shows that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was neither founded nor is presently directed by colored people. It was originated in New York City 46 years ago as the brain child of a Southern scallawag journalist and Russian-trained revolutionary named William E. Walling. Its principal personalities during its early years were descendants of the rabble-rousing abolitionists who fomented the strife which precipitated the War Between the States, a conflict which could have been avoided but for the activities of those abolitionists.

Of its five founders only one was a negro—a Communist-sympathizing lawyer named W. E. B. DuBois whose record of participation in Communist, Communist-front and subversive organizations and activities taken from the files of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the United States House of Representatives requires eight pages of single-spaced typewritten copy to outline. Among his more recent activities of this nature was the donation of his services in the preparation of legal briefs defending since-executed Communist spies Julius and Ethyl Rosenberg and the imprisoned leaders of the Communist Party of the United States. In 1953 he was awarded the International Peace Prize by the "Communist front" World Peace Council in recognition of his participation in the sponsorship of the series of Communist-dominated World Peace Conferences held since 1949 in an attempt to undermine the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

DuBois was Director of Research for the NAACP until 1949 and now is referred to by its officers and members as the organization's "Honorary Chairman."

In addition to Walling and DuBois, the other NAACP founders—all white—were Dr. Henry Moskowitz; Socialist Oswald Garrison Villard, grandson of Abolitionist William Lloyd Garrison; and Miss Mary Ovington White, also a descendant of an old-time abolitionist. The first president of the Association was a white Boston lawyer, Moorfield Storey, who was identified in his youth with the abolitionist movement and who served as secretary to the original race-baiter, Massachusetts Senator Charles Sumner.

From that day to this, South-hating white people with long records of affinity for, affiliation with, and participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling and subversive organizations, activities and causes have directed and subsidized the NAACP. Its present president, Arthur B. Spingarn of New York City, is a white man as are a large number of the current officers, directors and principal contributors.

The files of the House Un-American Activities Committee reveal records of affiliation with or participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling or subversive organizations or activities on the part of the following present officials of the NAACP—the President, the Chairman of the Board, the "Honorary Chairman," 11 of 28 Vice Presidents, the Treasurer, 28 of 47 Directors, the Chairman of the National Legal Committee, the Executive Secretary, the Special Counsel, the Assistant Special Counsel, the Southeast Regional Secretary, the West Coast Secretary, the Director of the Washington Bureau, the Director of Public Relations and two Field Secretaries.

The transcript of this evidence numbers 121 pages of single-spaced, typewritten copy and would require more than six hours to be read aloud. Time being a factor, it is impossible to present all of this material; but, to give you an idea of the backgrounds and ideologies of the policy-making officials and personnel of the NAACP, I shall cite chapter and verse on the activities of this organization's principal personalities.

(The designations which I shall use in describing the organizations and activities with which these individuals have been identified are those applied to them by the Attorney General of the United States, the House Un-American Activities Committee or the Special House Un-American Activities Committee.)

President Spingarn was a participant in the Conference on Africa held April 14, 1944, in New York City by the "subversive and Communist" Council on African Affairs. In 1945 and 1946 he signed statements favoring the granting of Army commissions to Communists and opposing the use of injunctions in labor disputes sponsored by the "viciously subversive" National Federation of Constitutional Liberties. He is listed as a sponsor of the "Communist front" Public Use of Arts Committee.

Board Chairman Channing H. Tobias was a member of the Executive Board and Co-Chairman of the New York Committee of the "Communist front" Southern Conference for Human Welfare which was charged in 1947 with "serving the Soviet Union and its subservient Communist Party in the United States." He belonged, prior to 1949, to the "subversive and Communist" Council on African Affairs and was a member of the Editorial Advisory Board of the "Protestant Digest"—a magazine which "has faithfully propagated the Communist Party line." He sponsored the "subversive and Communist" People's Institute of Applied Religion and the American Committee for Yugoslav Relief and was a member of the Executive Board of the American League for Peace and Democracy, "the largest of the Communist-front movements in the United States." He has sponsored conferences and activities of the "viciously subversive" National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, the "Communist front" New York State Conference on National Unity and the "subversive and Communist" American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born and the National Committee to Win the Peace.

Roy Wilkins—successor to the late Walter White as NAACP Executive Secretary—was quoted on June 17, 1936, by the New York Daily Worker, the official publication of the Communist Party in this country, as attaching "greatest significance" to the 1936 National Communist Party Convention and stating that the Communist Party's racial program had had "a very wholesome effect" in the United States. He was further quoted by the Daily Worker on July 15, 1949, as boasting that he had voted in New York City elections that year for since-convicted Negro Communist Benjamin J. Davis. He is listed as a member of the National Committee of the "Communist front" International Juridical Association which has "actively defended Communists and consistently followed the Communist Party line." He was a sponsor of the "subversive and Communist" Conference on Pan American Democracy, and of a joint meeting in 1937 of the "subversive and Communist" American League Against War and Fascism and the "Communist front" American Friends of the Chinese People. He has spoken for the "subversive and Communist" International Labor Defense and the Workers' Alliance, the former of which is regarded as the "legal arm of the Communist Party" in this country.

Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall—the negro lawyer responsible for the NAACP's court attacks upon segregation in the public schools—as late as 1950 was a member of the Executive Board of the "Communist front" National Lawyers Guild which has been described as "the foremost legal bulwark of the Communist Party, its front organizations and controlled unions." Since its inception, the Guild "has never failed to rally to the legal defense of the Communist Party and individual members thereof, including known espionage agents." And, as a member and policy-making official of this Communist Front, Marshall has served as Associate Editor of the "Lawyers Guild Review" and has criticized this nation's loyalty program. He also is listed as a member of the National Committee of the "Communist front" International Juridical Association which has "actively defended Communists and consistently followed the Communist Party line." And he was among a group of attorneys who, in 1947, protested the issuance of contempt citations against pro-Communist Hollywood writers who refused to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The director of the NAACP's Washington Bureau, Clarence M. Mitchell, protested against being asked whether he was or ever had been a member of the Communist Party at a hearing on proposed legislation to outlaw the Communist Party held before the House Un-American Activities Committee on May 3, 1950. Although he stoutly denied being a Communist, he was quoted as saying that such a question was "unfair" because it "immediately precludes from appearing before this Committee many of the people who would be on trial under a bill of this kind." The transcript further quoted him as saying that: "Presumably there are people who may, for sincere and personal reasons, wish to be members of the Communist Party. They may want to come here and object to this bill, but, I suppose, if they had to answer that question, they very likely would not come."

Director of Public Relations Henry Lee Moon, the Association's propaganda chief, is listed as a member of the "subversive and Communist" Washington Book Shop and the likewise-designated National Negro Congress which is "the Communist-front movement in the United States among negroes." His book, "Balance of Power: The Negro Vote," was praised by the Daily Worker and he was listed in 1949 as a nominee to be commentator for the "subversive and Communist" Voice of Freedom Committee.

Of the NAACP's 28 Vice Presidents, the following 11 have records of Un-American activities:

John Haynes Holmes, 23 citations; A. Philip Randolph, 20 citations; the late Mary McLeod Bethune (who still is listed as a vice president) and William Lloyd Imes, 16 citations each; Oscar Hammerstein, II, the composer, and Bishop W. J. Walls, seven citations each; Ira W. Jayne and L. Pearl Mitchell, two citations each; and Willard S. Townsend, T. G. Nutter and Grace B. Fenderson, one citation each.

Of the 47 members comprising the Association's Board of Directors, the following 28 have records of the Un-American activities:

Earl B. Dickerson, 25 citations; Algernon D. Black, 18 citations; Lewis Gannett, 15 citations; Roscoe Dunjee, 13 citations; S. Ralph Harlow and Chairman Channing H. Tobias, 10 citations each; William H. Hastie, nine citations; Hubert T. Delaney, eight citations; Benjamin E. Mays, president of Atlanta's Morehouse College, six citations; Robert G. Weaver, five citations; Buell G. Gallagher, four citations; President Arthur B. Spingarn, Earl

G. Harrison, James J. McClendon, Ralph Bunche, Allen Knight Chalmers and W. Montague Cobb, three citations each; J. M. Tinsley, Wesley W. Law of Savannah, Ga., Norman Cousins, Z. Alexander Looby, Harry J. Greene and Alfred Baker Lewis, two citations each; and H. Claude Hudson, Carl R. Johnson, A. Maceo Smith, James Hinton and Theodore M. Berry, one citation each.

Two other Vice Presidents and three other Directors are well-known apologists for left-wing causes. The two Vice Presidents are Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon and Eric Johnston of the Motion Picture Industry. The three Directors are Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, CIO President Walter Reuther and Senator Herbert H. Lehman of New York.

Other officers of the NAACP with Un-American activity records are:

Lloyd Garrison, chairman, National Legal Committee, five citations; Treasurer Allan Knight Chalmers and Branch Department Director Gloster B. Current, three citations each; Southeast Regional Secretary Ruby Hurley, West Coast Regional Secretary Franklin H. Williams, Field Secretary Madison S. Jones and Assistant Special Counsel Robert L. Carter, two citations each; and Field Secretary Tarea Hall Pittman, one citation.

But of all the NAACP officials and policymakers listed in the files of the House Un-American Activities Committee, none has a record as notorious as that of W. E. B. DuBois to whom I have previously referred as one of the founders and present "Honorary Chairman" of the Association. No less than 72 citations of Communist, Communist-front and subversive activity are entered against his name—the latest of which was the statement he issued upon the death of Joseph Stalin reading: "Let all negroes, Jews and foreign-born who have suffered in America from prejudice and intolerance, remember Joseph Stalin."

Yet this same W. E. B. DuBois was one of the "modern scientific authorities" whose writings were accepted by the United States Supreme Court as the basis for its decision of May 17, 1954, prohibiting segregation in the public schools. DuBois contributed to 82 different portions of the book, "An American Dilemma," which was cited in its entirety by the Supreme Court as an authority for its ruling.

And, speaking of that decision, let me emphasize in passing that 15 other contributors to "An American Dilemma" also have lengthy records of pro-Communist activity in the files of the Un-American Activities Committee. The same thing is true of two of the six individual authorities cited by the High Court—Theodore Brameld and E. Franklin Frazier—who between them have been members of or identified with 28 organizations declared to be Communist, Communist fronts or Communist dominated.

Another of the six individual authorities cited by the Supreme Court—K. B. Clark—was, at the time of the arguments before the Court, on the payroll of the NAACP as a so-called "social-science expert."

These records of individual officials and members of the NAACP are not the only source of proof of the subversive influences on and in that organization.

Elizabeth Dilling reported in her book, "The Red Network," that, during the seven years from 1923 to 1930, the NAACP received some $43,000 from the radical Garland Fund among whose directors were Communists William Z. Foster and Elizabeth Gurley Flynn. She also disclosed that the official report of the Fourth National Convention of the Communist Party of the United States held in 1925 stated that "the Party had penetrated the NAACP."

Official records show that the NAACP has consistently affiliated itself with Communist and left-wing movements.

It was a member of the American Youth for a Free World which was organized in 1942 and, in 1948, was described by the California Un-American Activities Committee as "heavily infiltrated and effectively dominated by the Communist Party." The House Un-American Activities Committee in its 1951 Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications described the AYFW as "a Communist clearing house."

In 1945, the NAACP sent its Branch Department Director, Gloster Current, to London as an official delegate representing the Association at the founding of the World Federation of Democratic

Youth. This Federation was cited by the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1948 as "part of the Communist International 'solar system.' "

A report made at a meeting of the Communist Party of the United States on July 16, 1946, showed that the NAACP was one of a group of left-wing organizations invited by the National Committee of the Communist Party to a meeting held in Chicago to form a "third party." That report, as detailed on pages 150-151 of the 1947 Report of the House Un-American Activities Committee, lists the NAACP as an active participant in the conference at which the Progressive Citizens of America was formed.

And earlier this month, according to the United Press, the NAACP picketed a hearing on Communist propaganda conducted in Chicago by Senator Eastland for the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee.

A pamphlet outlining the Program of the Communist Party of the United States, published in September 1954 by New Century Publishers of New York City, made specific reference on Page 22 to a link between the Communist Party and the NAACP. It stated:

"We call upon wage workers, working farmers, the Negro people, small business and professional people, upon the women and the youth, to join hands in a common fight . . . for the democratic demands of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Former Negro Communist Foster Williams, Jr., testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee about this matter on June 17, 1954, in Seattle, Wash. He said:

"The Communist Party very sneakily manipulates the negro people for their own purposes . . . The NAACP has had this trouble."

The racial aims of the Communist Party of the United States and those of the NAACP are virtually identical. The Communist program, as reported in the May 26, 1928, issue of the Daily Worker, calls for:

"Full racial equality.

"Abolition of all laws which result in segregation of negroes.

"Abolition of laws forbidding intermarriage of persons of different races.

"Abolition of all laws and public administration measures which prohibit, or in practice prevent, negro children from attending general public schools or universities.

"Full and equal admittance of negroes to all waiting rooms, restaurants, hotels and theaters."

Those are the identical demands being made today, 27 years later, by the NAACP.

On the basis of the evidence now in hand—a minute portion of which I have related to you this afternoon—no other conclusion can be drawn but that the NAACP is being used as a front and tool by subversive elements in this country. Either knowingly or unwittingly, it has allowed itself to become part and parcel of the Communist conspiracy to overthrow the democratic governments of this nation and its sovereign states.

Through its activities, the NAACP is fomenting strife and discord between the white and negro races in the South and is disrupting relations between these races which heretofore have been—and at present are—harmonious and friendly in every respect. These activities, carried to their ultimate conclusion, can only result in conflict, bloodshed and internal revolution, delivering this nation into the hands of international Communism.

The NAACP is being aided and abetted in its agitation by three "front" organizations on the Southern scene—the Southern Conference Education Fund; the Southern Regional Council; and the SRC's affiliate, the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation. The Southern Conference Education Fund and the Southern Regional Council are both dominated by individuals who, like the officials of the NAACP, have long records of affinity for and participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling, left-wing and subversive organizations and activities. Sworn testimony taken by both House and Senate Committees has placed known Communists in both organizations and the Southern Conference Education Fund may soon be designated a subversive organization.

The Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation is a perfect example of an organization formed for the purpose of exploiting the names, reputations and services of well-intentioned do-gooders. It is composed of some of Georgia's most distinguished clergymen and most prominent civic and social leaders who have been duped into doing the bidding of the more sinister elements manipulating the Southern Regional Council.

Investigations currently are being made of all three organizations—the results of which will greatly embarrass those good citizens who unwittingly have become involved in their activities. I urge all such persons to take immediate steps to disassociate themselves from these groups and to disavow their programs and leaders before they, their friends and their congregations are exposed to the anguish and embarrassment which exposure of these groups will necessarily mean.

The activities of the NAACP and its local fronts pose a serious threat to the peace, tranquillity, government and way of life of our State. And for that reason it is my intention to present the evidence which already has been, and currently is being, compiled about the subversive nature of these activities to the 1956 session of the General Assembly of Georgia convening next January for appropriate action by the elected representatives of the people of this State.

In the meantime I pledge the full resources of my office to the enforcement of all existing State laws and constitutional provisions relating to subversive activities and our traditional pattern of race relations. And, toward that end, I solicit—and know I can count on the full support and cooperation of you, the peace officers of Georgia.

I thank you.

Dear Southern Regional Council:

I believe that your response(and the nation's response) to friction-between-the-races is entirely inappropriate.

All this talk about violence, violence, violence... reminds me of my idyllic childhood in the rural South. Back in those good old days acts of violence didn't disturb the peace. Why I can remember kids from Columbus High School riding through Niggertown hitting passerbys with brickbats and sticks; hell, nobody thought anything about it. It was all in good fun.

Now it's my contention that our present response to mugging, head smashing, and 'senseless' killing is all wrong: Why should we lament what we have worked for years to bring about? Even the White Southerner understands an eye for an eye; movies and television deify the smoking gun; newspapers exalt in bodycounts; everywhere weakness and love of peace are held in contempt.

Yes, America has a dream and that dream is coming true--the beautiful chaos of the frontier. After years of hard work and nostalgia ad nauseum she is finally bringing her dream to fruition.

Lamentation is not an appropriate response to success. And we have been successful: we are getting exactly what we've been asking for. So come on let's be good sports; the movies should remind us that every now and then a good guy gets hit by an arrow.

Sincerely,

Charles C. Wiggin

LAND OF ONE RACE

"In Brazil, you will find blue eyes and black skin, flat skulls with triangular faces, hair plaited in pigtails, white babies at the breasts of colored mothers, colored babies at the breasts of white mothers and colors running from ebony to eggshell via copper, olive, caramel, and banana.

A mixture of this sort has made any attempt at racial segregation out of the question in Brazil—because no one could possibly tell where white begins and black ends."

"Brazil has long since passed the rest of the world in its race relations. The so-called race problem simply does not exist in Brazil."

—Washington Afro-American News

Is this to be the fate of our beloved Nation, decreed by nine political appointees to impress the Asiatics and using as their authority the writing of Socialist and Communist tinged authors?

This amalgamation has already begun in the North, but it can be checked by an aroused public opinion to nullify this infamous BLACK MONDAY decree.

Group Deplores Placement Idea

Use For Segregation Fight Prolongs South Unrest, Council Says

By United Press International

ATLANTA, Dec. 5. — Pupil placement plans enacted by a number of Southern state legislatures were attacked by the Southern Regional Council Saturday as "a political device to evade or thwart desegregation."

"When placement is not guided by professional concern and criteria, but is designed to perpetuate racial separation, its use will only prolong the South's unrest," the council said.

SRC is an 80-member interracial group dedicated to improvement of race relations. It issued a policy statement on the school segregation question.

'Get Out Of Courts'

It urged efforts to "get the issue of school desegregation out of the courts and into the hands of responsible educators."

It proposed the South redefine the problem as "how best to educate all our youth" rather than "how to bar Negroes from white schools."

It said much of the South's political leadership, while eager for economic progress, has "seceded from reality" on the school issue.

Threatens Future

"Not for long can this contradiction be kept from blighting the South's economic chance, its moral vigor, and its once great capacity to supply statesmen for the country."

In contrast it cited more than 200 Southern school districts where desegregation was started voluntarily and added, "They give witness to the fact that where responsible leaders take the initiative, desegregation can be handled by Southerners without turmoil or court decrees."

Dear Harold:

I am sending you AN AMERICAN SUCCESS STORY, a document prepared by Carl C. Creger, a student at Central High School, Little Rock, with substantial help from his father, Ralph C. Creger, 14 Rosemont Driver, Little Rock. The father writes that they collaborated but that most of the wording and ideas were the father's. Of course, this contribution from the father robs it of some significance but it is a good statement. The father is a Baptist deacon and I know that if we can get some of his ideas circulated to church people, particularly those who are inclined to hold back for some reason or another in accepting inevitable changes, it would be helpful.

I believe the manuscript is now with the Association Press in New York City and they may put it out in pamphlet form. Subject to that you might find a way to use this material. I don't think it is copyrighted but would prefer that you regard it as their personal property until something is worked out.

With high regards.

Dear Brooks:

Many thanks for the copy of the Cregers' manuscript, "An American Success Story." It is a nicely done treatment of the subject, and the authorship lends a fine note of encouragement.

Of course, we would make no use of it without the permission of the authors. And if it is published by the Association Press, there will be no need to do anything but help make the publication known.

Meanwhile, I am circulating the manuscript to others on our staff.

Mr Harold Fleming,

Dear Mr. Fleming,

I sent the Manuscript AMERICAN SUCCESS STORY to Hodding Carter about a week ago, dont know why I didnt think of him before. Yesterday he called me from Greenville, having just read it. He said he would be happy to write an introduction, and said he felt Brooks Hay. and Harry Golden could also be presuaded to write something in the way of an introduction.

I havent heard anything from Mr. Fleisman yet. Mr. Allen of the Urban league in New York said he was going to contact Fleischman about it.

It seems to me with the support the story should get from editors such as Golden, Carter, McGill and Patterson (of the Arkansas Gazette), and others, that enough publicity to make the book well known, should be assured.

I showed the manuscript to the editor of the North Little Rock Times about a week ago, and he was very lavish with his praise, but his first question was, "Is there any way HE can get at you?" - He - meaning Faubus.

The same question has been put to me in about the same words by several others, and to me that is the most important thing about this whole business, the fact that such a condition can exist here in the United States, where people are afraid of their elected officials.

I will be anxious to hear if you are able to do anything to help get the book in print.

The Urban league people think I overemphasize the importance of getting it in print before the primaries, they say it will be just as good when school starts, next fall. However, the Ridge Press think there is still a chance they might get it out before the primaries.

Very Sincerely Yours,

Dear Mr. Fleming,

I am enclosing a copy of the letter I sent Mr. Fleischman, at your suggestion.

I sent him the manuscript, air mail, and he should have it Monday May 16th.

I am about to run out of gas (and money) on this thing. I sometimes wonder why I should beat my brains out just to set up a situation where my family and myself are subject to abusive telphone calls, and other harrassment, but I am sure you know about these things as well as I.

Anything you can do to help will be greatly appreciated.

Mr. Harry Fleischman

165 East 56th St
New York 22, N.Y.

Dear Mr. Fleischman,

I am chief train dispatcher in Little Rock for the Rock Island railroad and have a son Carl, age 17 a junior in Central high school. Last winter as a history assignment Carl was required to write a theme on any subject pertaining to history. As I had done considerable reading and research on the subject of race I suggested he write on the history of the Negro in America and call it AN AMERICAN SUCCESS STORY.

We checked with his teacher and were told that this would be an acceptable subject, and his teacher also told us that if there were to be another TEACHER PURGE in the Little Rock schools, he was sure he would be on the list.

With the teachers permission we collaborated in writing the thesis and when it was finished we showed it to several local people, both white and colored, and all, even the strong segregationists were highly enthusiastic. At the suggestion of Hugh Patterson, editor of the Arkansas Gazette, I sent it to several nationally prominent people and sent it to Readers Digest.

Harry Golden, Ralph McGill, Stuart Symington and Brooks Hays all contacted the Digest recommending it.

Stuart Symington was not asked to write the Digest, but after he had kept the manuscript about three weeks and had announced as a candidate for the presidency, governor Faubus came out with a press release saying that Symington should know he would get no support in Arkansas (as Symington had refused to attend a democratic dinner in Little Rock that was segregated) Two days later I got a letter from senator Symington saying he had written the Digest recommending the manuscript, and two days after that the Digest advised me they were giving it very serious consideration. However in another week they wrote me that they had all gone over it and felt that since it was chronological in form it would lose much value in cutting, and should be a book, and asked my permission to put it in the hands of a literary agent.

However I decided to try it without an agent, and sent letters of inquiry to 25 publishing houses, and have recieved answers from 21, 16 of whom have expressed a desire to see the manuscript.

The first answer I received was from editor Frances Keene of Rutledge books, the book publishing division of Maco Magazines and seemed very enthusiastic so I immediately sent her the manuscript. This was Friday May 6th. Miss Keene wrote me May 11th to the effect that they wanted to go ahead with it starting with 250,000 copies, but was trying to line up some support from interested organizations. I called her to see what she meant and she told me she wanted to put it on the newstands at a price of from 75¢ to $1.00, but be able to wholesale it to organizations for about 25¢ a copy.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY

Miss Keene said that they were willing to take part of the rist, but wanted enough orders insured to get them started. She told me the Urban league had offered to help in every way they could, but could not place an order at this time.

I called Mr. Harold Fleming, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, in Atlanta and Mr. Fleming told me that they would be willing to place an order, but would like to know more about what would be required, etc., and told me send you a copy of the manuscript, that you might be able to line up support for it from interested groups.

The Urban league has offered the services of their special projects department to help in any corrections or revisions needed, and in securing photographs for illustrations.

Mr. Fleming indicated to me that he would be contacting you on this matter.

The following people have read the manuscript and nearly all of them have written, wired or phoned me praising it and telling me it would be desireable to get it in print, in wide distribution.

Stuart Symington, William Fullbright, Eleanor Roosevelt, Paul Butler, Harry Golden, Ralph McGill, Brooks Hays, Benjamine Fine, Ben Epstein of the ANTI DEFAMATION LEAGUE, Hodding Carter, Harry Ashmore, A. Phillip Randolph and Lester Granger.

Mr. Hays sent his copy to Mr. Fleming of the Southern Regional Council.

In Little Rock Joe Hardin who is running for governor against Faubus has it and plans to contact senator Fulbright to see what can be done. David Brinkley of NBC-TV has it and there is a possibility he might plug it on a newscast.

Most of those in Little Rock, that is those that are pricipally involved in the fight against Faubus and bigotry, have read the manuscript, and would like to help, but have to be careful because if it were known they were backing it Faubus could use it politically.

We have been hoping against hope some way could be found to get it on the news stands prior to the primaries in July, but time is becoming increasingly important.

Anything you could do to help would be greatly appreciated.

Very Truly Yours,

Dear Mr. Fleming:

Brooks Hays sent me a copy of the letter you wrote him concerning the manuscript AN AMERICAN SUCCESS STORY, and I thought you might be interested in recent developments in connection with the efforts that are being made to secure publication.

After hearing from Reader's Digest and others, such as Ralph McGill, I became convinced that the thesis simply was not suited to magazine use and decided to concentrate on book publication.

I sent a copy to Dr. Benjamine Fine of New York, and asked his opinion. He seemed extremely interested and advised me by phone that he had an appointment with his publisher the following week and wanted to talk to him about the story. In the meantime, I sent letters of inquiry to 35 book publishing companies that I felt looked the most promising. With the letters, I sent a brief outline of the story and told them of the support I had. To date, I have heard from twelve publishers, and eight of them expressed interest, the other four all said they are not set up for less than 50,000 words. One of them, the Ridge Press, the book publishing department of Maco magazines, seemed most interested. Their letter read as follows: "Dear Mr. Creger, Thank you for your letter of April 29th which suggests that we consider your and your son's manuscript on the history of the Negro in America. Both the subject and the length seem promising to us and we would be interested in considering the book for publication. Your reference to specific interest on the part of the Urban League is particularly interesting. This is the sort of endorsement we would seek and the fact that you already have it gives added impetus to our desire to see your book. Looking forward to reading you soon, I am, very truly yours, Frances Keene, Editor, Rutledge Books."

Also, The Fleming H. Revel Co. of Westwood, N.J., and the Chilton Co. of Philadelphia expressed more than a normal interest.

I immediately sent the complete manuscript to Miss Keene and it should have reached her on Monday, May 9th. However, since I knew Dr. Fine might have done something, I called him telling him of the letter from Miss Keene. Dr. Fine advised me to do nothing until I heard from him, as his Publisher, Doubleday & Co., is very interested. Since I am strictly a novice at this sort of thing, I was afraid I might make the wrong move.

Mr. Harold C. Fleming

You mentioned in your letter to Mr. Hays that the Southern Regional Council would do what they could to help make the publication known. I am sure if this fact were known by potential publishers, it would have a desirable effect. I am enclosing a foreword to the manuscript which I wrote and sent to the publishers along with the manuscript.

It looks doubtful that the story can be gotten into print prior to the Primaries in July, but many of those who have been advising me say that while this would be desirable, it is not essential.

Very sincerely yours,

AN AMERICAN SUCCESS STORY

BY

CARL CREGER
A LITTLE ROCK CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT

AND HIS FATHER, RALPH CREGER

FOREWORD

As a father and son directly affected by the integration turmoil surrounding Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas, we were disturbed by what seemed to us a lack of Christian principles shown by many, and by the willingness of some of those in high political office to exploit an emotional crisis for political gain.

Rather than blindly accepting the usual theories advanced by so many, particularly by those of the older generations, we felt the subject of race relations important enough to justify much study and research. We read nearly every book pertaining to race or related matters offered by the public library, and in addition, tried to make an objective study of the Scriptures.

What we found convinced us that the barriers erected in the path of the Negro, barriers that deny him many benefits of American democracy that everyone else takes for granted, have not served the best interests of the nation. In studying the Scriptures, we found nothing to indicate that the N egro should be set apart or considered as less worthy, but, rather, we found that Scripture references generally quoted by racists actually referred to the Godly versus the Un-Godly, wherever separation of peoples is urged.

Acts 8-27 through 31 tell of Phillip's experience with the Etheopian, "And he arose and went, and behold an eunuch of great authority under Candace, Queen of the Etheopians, who had charge of all her treasure, and he had come to Jerusalem to worship, was returning, and sitting in his chariot reading Esaias the Prophet. Then the spirit said unto Phillip, go near and join thyself to this Chariot. And Phillip ran to him and heard him reading and said, do you understand what you read?, and the Etheopian said, how can I except some man should guide me? And he asked Phillip to come up and sit with him."

What a wonderful opportunity for the Lord to have explained to us that the Etheopians were a simple people, untrustworthy and unable to assume leadership. It is obvious that such was not the case. The man was everything we are told the Negro is not supposed to be, trustworthy, a man of great authority, and a man of learning.

All of our research indicated to us that the low status of the Negro in this country is cultural, forced on him and not inherent. We feel that the Negro is going to assume full citizenship status in America, and soon. We feel that in spite of attempts by many to prevent his complete emancipation, full citizenship will be accomplished because our laws, our Constitution, and what is sometimes referred to as the American Creed provide for it. We feel he will do this with or without the help of the white man, but we would like to help.

I thought you would be interested in knowing that I have signed a contract with the Lyle Stuart Publishing Company in New York, for publication of my manuscript.

From what I have been able to develop, this is a very reputable firm and believe they will do a good job with it. There are no strings attached as to advance orders, however, I am sure they would be glad to have any support they can get from a promotional standpoint.

I will be on vacation the week of June 12th and have plans to visit friends in Cullman, Ala., and possibly drive on Southeast to Macon, Ga. Would like to stop in your office and visit with you if you plan to be in town during the week of June 12th.

Dear Mr. Alexander:

I am writing to you at the suggestion of Mr. Sol Immerman, concerning the enclosed manuscript, An American Success Story, by Carl and Ralph Creger.

The manuscript started as a history assignment for the 17-year-old white student of Little Rock's Central High School, helped by his father, chief train dispatcher in Little Rock for the Rock Island Railroad. It wound up as both a study of the history of the American Negro, and the reasons why a white son and father in Little Rock came to support integration.

Because of the book's theme and authors, a number of intergroup relations agencies feel that the book might have a wide sale both north and south. While we know that Pocket Books rarely publish original manuscripts, prefering to use reprints, we thought that the wide appeal of this material might justify a change in your practices.

Harold Fleming, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, and Alexander J. Allen, Associate Director of the National Urban League, both feel that the manuscript has considerable merit, even though a good editing job is required on it.

I should appreciate any reaction you may have to this suggestion.

With all best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Harold:

My Publisher advises me the tentative publication date for our book is October 28th. They want Carl and me to come to New York in October for Television and Radio appearances, and we are looking forward to that.

I recently received a letter from Lillian Smith about the manuscript, and she said that she thought a different title would be better for the book. She suggested, "This Is What We Found", the idea being that the book is the result of a search for truth by a high school student and his father. I sent her letter to my Publisher and he agreed with Miss Smith, so the title is being changed.

I rewrote the first two pages to fit the new title and also wrote a dedication at the Publisher's request. I thought you might be interested in seeing the dedication and the revised pages, 1 and 2.

Very truly yours,

PREFACE

We feel sure that nearly all Americans are aware that the teachers in our public schools are frequently underpaid. Most folks, if they are honest, must admit that these "molders of character" are often subjected to unwarranted criticism from irate parents who feel that "Miss Jones" singled "Junior" out for punishment even though "Junior" obviously had done no wrong. It is pretty generally understood that school teachers must be quite careful about where they are seen in public, careful that they dress modestly and that their conduct in general is above reproach.

In view of all this, many of us feel that the average school teacher must have a certain nobility of character to remain in a profession where their efforts are often not properly rewarded, and where even more often they are unappreciated.

The difficulties encountered by teachers are not confined to one region of our land, they are national in scope. However, since 1957, school teachers in the Little Rock, Arkansas, public schoolsystem have been subjected to pressures above and beyond those known elsewhere, and their refusal to bow to these pressures may have been largely responsible for the preservation of the public school system throughout much of the South.

These teachers did not advocate segregation nor integration, but tried to proceed with the process of education. Like most educators, they valued freedom of thought and opinion. There have been no book burnings in Little Rock - the RABBIT WEDDING can still be purchased. Most of them did make it clear to their students they expected to see a display of good citizenship when Negro children entered formerly all-white schools.

Many of these instructors paid a high price for doing what they thought was right and for speaking out against what they felt was sheer demagoguery on the part of State leaders. They came to know the anonymous telephone call at three in the morning, and the threatening, anonymous letter. Part of the Little Rock School Board, with the support of the Governor, tried to dismiss fifty of these teachers in the summer of 1959. No reasons were given for these dismissals other than the vague hint that some of those on the "purge" list had been "soft" on integration. The three remaining school board members refused to be a party to this wholesale "firing" of teachers, and as a result, a special school board election was held which resulted in the replacement of the extreme segregationists with men pledged to preserve the public schools.

This special election may have been far more important than most of us realize. It may have been the turning point in favor of the retention of public schools throughout an entire region.

As Winston Churchill once said, "Never have so many owed so much to so few."

In the winter of 1959, a history instructor in Central High School required his students to prepare a composition on any subject pertaining to American History. What follows is the result of this Classroom assignment.

We respectfully dedicate this book to the public school teachers in Little Rock, Arkansas.

Ralph and Carl Creger

THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND

As a father and son directly affected by the chaos brought on by the integration of Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas, in September, 1957, we were disturbed by what seemed to us a lack of Christian principals shown by so many, and by the willingness of some of those in high political office to exploit an emotional crisis for political gain.

We felt that anything causing as much tension, ill will and bitterness as we had witnessed justified much study and research. We read nearly every book pertaining to race or related matters offered by the public library. In addition, we tried to make an objective study of the Scriptures.

Acts 8-27 through 31 tell of Phillip's experience with the Etheopian:- "And he arose and went, and behold an eunuch of great authority under Candace, Queen of the Etheopians, who had charge of all her treasure, and he had come to Jerusalem to worship, was returning, and sitting in his chariot reading Esaias the Prophet. Then the spirit said unto Phillip, go near and join thyself to this chariot. And Phillip ran to him and heard him reading and said, do you understand what you read? And the Etheopian said, how can I expect some man should guide me? And he asked Phillip to come up and sit with him." What a wonderful opportunity this would have been for the Lord to have explained to us that the Etheopians were really a simple people, not to be trusted, unlearned and unable to assume leadership. It is obvious that such was not the case. The man was everything the racist tells us the Negro is not supposed to be. He was a man of learning, trustworthy and a man of great authority.

Verses such as these may or may not be significant but certainly we found nothing in the Bible to indicate that the Etheopians were less worthy than others, or that they were inclined toward stupidity, immorality, dishonesty, crimes of violence or any of the many undesirable characteristics attributed to the Negro by racists, and which the racist claims are innate.

All of our research led us to believe that the low status of the Negro in America is cultural, forced on him and not inherent. To us it seemed obvious that it would be impossible for the Negro to achieve the successes others have, because of the obstacles placed in his path, particularly in the field of job opportunities.

But more about that later. Our story is basically the history of the Negro in America, and for a better understanding of the subject, it seems advisable to cover some of the backgroud of the Negro people, prior to their arrival on this Continent.

In presenting this frequently tragic, but none the less praiseworthy history of achievement, emphasis will be placed on conditions as they were, and are today, rather than as some might wish them to be.

There are those to whom race is all-important, and to whom racial supremacy has become a religion. Among these people, the statement is frequently heard that the colored races have contributed little that is worthwhile to the civilization of the world. They say that the colored people, even though inhabiting areas rich in natural resources have not exploited these resources as they might have. These racists always fail to mention that climatic conditions between the Tropic of Cancer and the Tropic of Capricorn are not as conducive to the energy and drive needed to excel, as that found in the temperate zones.

Be that as it may, the idea that the darker skinned peoples have always been culturally and industrially inferior simply will not stand up under the careful study of history and science. It is not often called to our attention, but students of history generally agree that for several centuries before Christ, Etheopia, Egypt and other African countries had a high degree of culture and industry when our foreberas in Western Europe were existing in a state of savagery. Nationa such as China, Babylon, Greece and others of varied racial groups have had their periods of glory.

Why Western European nations and America have been in the dominant position in recent centuries is a matter of conjecture, and one guess is probably as

Dear Mr. Constable,

You probably have your review copy of THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND by now. The publisher tells me there was some delay at the printers, but that they were mailed Friday December 16th.

My son and I attended an interesting meeting last night. There were ten students from Stanford University in Little Rock, the ten included seven African exchange students. They all glanced through my copy of the book, and seemed much impressed. The African students told me that they had gotten the impression that the avereage high school student in America had a very hazy, or at best a distorted opinion of the Negroes background in Africa, and that this is very unfortunate, particularly in the case of the Negro student. They said they felt my book might be the answer.

Carl and I have been getting excellent publicty locally. There have been news releases, and book reviews, in both Little Rock papers, and it has been mentioned on radio news. Carl and I appeard on a thirty minute TV show on channel 11 December 15th and are scheduled for a thirty minute show on channel 4 December 28th. The largest book store in Little Rock is having an authors party for us Saturday December 31st.

The publishers sent me a list of cities that have gotten news releases and review copies. There were about 125 of them, but relatively few in the south. I don't understand this. They didn't mention New Orleans, for example. They have us booked on some local radio and TV shows in New York during the first two weeks in January, and are trying to get us on the Dave Garroway, or the Jack Parr show, but have not been able to accomplish this as yet. If you know of any one with influence that could help in this respect I'd appreciate it greatly.

The publishers tell me response from book stores is good, but they have very little as yet in the way of commitments from organizations. So far only 150 copies ordered by CORE.

I am enclosing a news item about the woman who donated $500,000.00 to pay the New Orleans school teachers salaries. It seems to me if she is that interested in "making living work" she might be willing to see that THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND reaches a lot of people that could not otherwise afford it. If I knew her address I'd write her.

Dear Ralph:

My apologies for not writing you sooner about the launching of "This Is What We Found." I have been most impressed by the widespread and favorable publicity the book has received. If publicity and acclaim sell books, this one should move beautifully.

We did receive our copies and will run a review in the February issue of New South.

Both Ralph McGill and Martin Luther King have been on the road so steadily that I have had no opportunity, since your letter arrived, to ask them about the book. I will do so at the earliest opportunity.

Do continue to keep me posted.

Dear Harold,

We just got back from what I would consider a productive week in New York. We were on two radio shows, and I had conferences with Harry Fleischman, Lewis Nichols of the New York Times, Harry Steeger and Alexander Allen of the Urban League, Dr. Benjamine Fine in New York, and with George Guernsey of the AFL-CIO in Washington.

We have been on two local TV shows in Little Rock, and are lined up for another next Monday. Sales have been very good here, and elsewhere, where there has been good publicity. For example Lyle Stuart sent a review copy to Emmett McLoughlin, superintendent of Memorial hospital in Phoenix. Mr McLoughlin was so impressed by the book that he gave a review at a speech he made at Arizona State college, and as a result several book stores in Pheenix have ordered large numbers of books in the past week.

The publisher tells me what we really need are;-

1. Large orders by organizations.
2. Statements about the book to the press by prominently known people.

Harold, I'd like to ask you a favor, would you please call Ralph McGill, and Dr. Martin Luther King, and ask if they have recieved their copies of the book. Also if you would put in a word for the book I'm sure it would help.

I have ordered 500 books myself (at 40¢ per copy) and I'm going to put part of them in the local urban league here, and they are going to put a notice in their news letter telling people they can get them at the urban league office.

Incidentally, did you and John Constable get your review copies?

about DISCOUNTS TO ORGANIZATIONS on THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND

by Ralph and Carl Creger

THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND began as a history assignment for Carl Creger, a seventeen-year-old student of Little Rock's Central High School. Ralph Creger is his father, chief train dispatcher in Little Rock for the Rock Island Railroad. Both father and son became so interested in the topic that they collaborated to expand it to its present length. It wound up as both a study of the history of the American Negro and the reasons why a white son and father in Little Rock came to champion equal rights and opportunities for Negroes.

We originally planned to publish a hard-cover edition to retail for $2.00. (The book has 64 pages.) However, so many organizations have expressed an interest in promoting and selling this title that we are also publishing a soft-cover edition to sell for $1.00.

Our discount schedule to organizations for the $1.00 edition is as follows:

Copies	Discount	Price per copy
500 to 999	60%	40¢
1000 to 2499	64%	36%
2500 to 4999	66%	34%
5000 to 9999	68%	32¢
10000 or more	72%	28¢

Under 500 copies the discount is 40%.

Dear Harold,

Things are going pretty well for my book. We continue to get good publicity. Got a good review by Saunders Redding in the Baltimore Afro-American, one in the Kansas City Star, the Pine Bluff Ark Commercial, The Phoenix Ariz Gazette and the Columbus Ohio Dispatch in the past few days. I got a letter from P L Prattis of the Pittsburgh Courier saying he was going to get a copy of the book to president Kennedy, and was going all out to promote the book. Also got a very nice letter from Ralph Bunche, and Rufus Clement, along with many others.

I. S. McClinton, a colored man here in Little Rock is state president of the Arkansas Democratic Voters Association. His wife is blind, and has been for twenty years. She put herself through college after she became blind, and after she got her threechildren started to school. About three weeks ago she called and said the book had just been read to her by her husband, and that she was writing the Library of Congress asking them to put in on a record so blind people could hear it read. Last week she made arrangements with the publisher to send copies of the book to president Kennedy, vice president Johnson, and each member of the U.S. Senate. They should be getting their copies the first of the week.

Mrs. McClinton has been employed by the state for six years. She worked in vocational rehabilitation for the blind, for which she was ideally suited. She was discharged from her job about two months ago on the grounds that she was physically unable to handle it, however her health was the same as when she started six years ago. Later they were told it was because her husband refused to play ball with the Faubus administration.

There was a nice story about Mrs. McClintons sending the books in the Arkansas Gazette Sunday Feb 5th.

I spoke to Mrs. McClintons club last night, they were the leading colored church women from Little Rock. I told them the history of writing the book, and some of my ideas on helping reduce prejudice among prejudiced people. Then we had a discussion period. They feel, as I do, that while all the work being done by the southern liberal is fine, most of it reaches only the "egg heads". We need to do some missionary work among the "red necks" and thats what I'm trying to do through the book. I still need your help, Harold, all I can get.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY

I left copies of a plan that I feel will help the book, with the ladies. They all said they want to help in any way they can and seemed very enthusiastic. I am enclosing a copy, and also a copy of a review over a radio station in New York, that the publisher just sent me.

Were you ever able to call the attention of Dr King or Ralph McGill to the book?

Very Sincerely Yours,

Best of the Week: WSNY
Schenectady New York
January 22, 1961

In keeping with my policy of trying to bring your attention to some of the best of today's publications, I am happy to report on a book which, while it contains much that is familiar to many of us, is very much worth reading, not only for what it contains, but for the background against which it was written. THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND by Ralph and Carl Creger is a brief, layman's account of the history of the Negro in America. The main body of the book contains less than 60 pages, so you may know it is brief. Even more, however, the authors include some background material on the Negro before he came to this country. Therefore, you won't expect a scholar's exhaustive analysis or a historians detailed account. But it still is a different book - and here's why.

Carl Creger, fulfilling an assignment in history, prepared an essay on the history of the Negro in America. He and his father became interested in the question and followed up by a more exhaustive study which finally resulted in this book. This, too, may not be unusual, but - and here is the fact that makes the book unusual - Ralph and Carl Creger live in Little Rock and the essay was a part of the school work in the schools which underwent the critical experience. Add to this - as a result of their study, father and son came to champion the cause of the Negro, rather, I should say, the cause of democracy for all in our country, including the Negro.

We can hope and pray that THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND will be widely distributed in those areas in the south where schools have not yet been able to adjust to the idea of integration. It should be read in all parts of our country, including our own community, for it helps to answer the charge so frequently unspoken but yet frequently thought, "The Negro is inferior". Add to the teachings of the sociologists, the anthropologists, the conviction arrived at by the Cregers confirming the scientific approach - "There is no such thing as an inferior race." "There are only inferior people, and they are to be found in every race."

I strongly recommend THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND as the Book of the Week. You will feel better knowing that there are people like the Cregers in Little Rock, and the future is with them rather than with the Faubus's.

Mr. Harold Fleming

Room 201, 5 Forsyth St N.W.
Atlanta 3, Ga.,

Dear Harold,

I'm sending you a copy of a letter going out this week to all 164 Arkansas newspapers, daily and weekly. The pricipal of Horace Mann high school here is having his typing students run off original copies for me, so I wont be sending them duplicates. I'd like you to notice particularly the letter from Harry Ashmore included.

I am also sending similar letters to about 200 large dailies all over America.

The book seems to be going well, but I am dissappointed over the publicity given the book in certain areas of the South. As far as I know there has been very little promotion in such states as Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi.

The colored people here in Little Rock seem to be going all out to help promote the book. Also, I am starting to get some active support from local people interested in getting a racially tolerant man in as governor in the next election.

I'd like to ask you once again, Harold, to contact Ralph McGill or some one with the Constitution, and see if they won't give me some kind of a break, publicity wise. They have a copy of the enclosed letter. Also I hope you will be able to contact Dr. King soon, as ask his help.

Very Sincerely Yours,

Ralph Creger

Dear Editor:

As just about everyone knows, Little Rock, and Arkansas, became the symbol of bigotry and prejudice to many people in 1957. This cross we bore, in addition to other misconceptions about Arkansas. Through the book THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND, which began as a Central High classroom assignment, we hoped to show people that folks in Little Rock are no more inclined toward prejudice than others are.

When the book was in manuscript form, several people read it, and the usual comment was, "It's wonderful, but is there any way HE can get at you?" No one felt it necessary to ask who HE was! To me, this has been the REAL tragedy, more to be deplored than the denial of equal rights and opportunities to a part of our citizenry. This sort of thing is just not supposed to happen here! REAL statesmen throughout our history have not felt it necessary to promote and encourage a climate of fear and suspicion in order to prosper.

There have been nice reviews of our book in papers all over America, but three of the best have been local. These include the interpretive report by Bobbie Forster in the ARKANSAS DEMOCRAT, reviews in the PINE BLUFF COMMERCIAL, and the ARKANSAS BAPTIST.

I have just received a letter from Pulitzer prize-winning Editor and Author, Harry S. Ashmore, who is now Editor-in-Chief of Encyclopaedia-Brittannica. Several who are hopeful of a change in state leadership have advised against publication of this letter, fearing it might give HIM another chance to complain about being "picked on". After serious consideration, I have decided that you cannot eliminate demagoguery by catering to it. The letter reads as follows:

"Dear Mr. Creger: I don't know whether it will help or not, but feel free to use the following statement from me in any way that seems useful: By now, a good many millions of words have been written about Little Rock, and I have contributed more than my share. Journalists, preachers, lawyers, sociologists, educators and assorted advocates have had important things to say about the unhappy events that began at Central High and registered their impact across the face of the globe. But, in all this welter of words, one view remains unique...that of a Central High School student and his father who set down their simple, earnest feelings of shock, pain and hope in THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND. Carl and Ralph Creger's book deserves to be read everywhere, and it needs particularly to be read in Arkansas. Great issues of law and of political and social change had their focus at Little Rock, but there was another, not always readily visible element there...simple, compassionate humanity. This is the quality that emerges in the Creger's little book. Arkansans need to be reminded that they share it too, and they should display it with pride, not hide it in shame before the bitter words of the demagogue." Sincerely,

Harry S. Ashmore.....

We would like to have been gifted with Mr. Ashmore's natural artistry with words. Since we were not, we proceeded in the belief that when conviction is deep enough and strong enough, the right words will somehow be found.

Dear Ralph:

Thank you for your letter letting me know the progress of This Is What We Found. Ashmore's letter, in particular, should prove very helpful.

I did have an opportunity to speak to Ralph McGill and learned that he has received and presumably read your book. I am not sure of his plans for publicizing it, but I got the impression that you and I both have done all we can to move him in that direction.

Editorials

THE unequivocal stand of President Kennedy against federal aid to parochial schools is highly commendable. It is beginning to appear that Mr. Kennedy meant what he said when he was running for office—something altogether too uncommon among office-holders in American politics. Turning his back squarely upon high officials in his church (Roman Catholic), Mr. Kennedy declared in a recent press conference that the Constitution and opinions by the Supreme Court of the United States prohibit appropriation of public funds for parochial schools. He hit the nail's head an extra, firm lick by declaring that there "isn't any room for debate on that subject." That's that, refreshingly.

JFK Meant What He Said On Church-State Issue

CARRIED in this week's "Letters to the Editor" department is a letter from Deacon Ralph C. Creger, of Calvary Church, Little Rock, sharing with our readers a letter he received recently from Harry S. Ashmore, who won the Pulitzer prize for his handling of the Little Rock race issue and is now editor-in-chief of Encyclopedia Brittannica. The high commendation of Mr. Ashmore for the forthright book by Creger and Son, This Is What We Found, is an enviable prize in itself for these two Little Rockians, of two different generations, who dared to face the race issue head on in their search for truth, and then were not afraid to publish what they found.

Book on Little Rock Crisis Widely Read

The fact that This Is What We Found is selling like the proverbial hotcakes, not only in other states, but here in Little Rock, is an indication that the people are desirous of considering the race problem with more or less open minds. That there has been a wholesome change of climate for the good in Greater Little Rock and Arkansas is indicated by the fact that the only two "hot" letters received by the authors in a growing flood of mail came from residents of Northern states. Over and over the Cregers are hearing: "You have stated it the way we see it, but we would not dare say so."

Mr. Creger, Sr., regards the fear element, which has closed the mouths, if not the minds, of so many Arkansans, as one of the greatest tragedies of the Little Rock Story.

THE wholesome sharing of ideas and opinions provoked by the Arkansas Baptist Newsmagazine's proposal that the special offerings for missions be brought into the Cooperative Program (our editorial in issue of March 2) is most encouraging. As long as we can discuss openly and fearlessly our common problems as Baptists there is a good prospect not only that we shall remain a great New Testament democracy, but that we may arrive at correct conclusions.

President Pollard On Proposed Changes

Last week's Arkansas Baptist carried letters from a number of our Southern Baptist leaders, sharing their thinking about the special offerings. We are happy to have for this week's "Letters-to-the-Editor" section the frank reactions of President Ramsey Pollard of the Southern Baptist Convention to our suggestion on the special offerings and to one we made in our editorial of February 16 calling for a change of the name of the Southern Baptist Convention.

This editor appreciates greatly the suggestion of President Pollard that our people who have something to say about the proposed new name for SBC write to their state Baptist papers, that their ideas might be shared with all the people. This is a wise approach not only on this matter, but on anything else of concern to Baptists. The Baptist state paper can fill one of its most vital roles by serving as an open-forum medium for our Baptist people.

Personally Speaking . . .

On Saying Something

A DEAR lady was confessing to me recently that she is addicted to reading this column each week. Naturally, I was pleased. People have to pretend to listen to you when you are with them in person and talking, whether you are saying anything or not. It would be rude not to listen. But one's reputation for being courteous is not at stake if he does not read his second-class mail. He can ignore it week after week and be none the worse, as far as his politeness-rating is concerned.

ELM

Noting that I was already beginning to purr, my fan went on to say that "Personally Speaking" is the first thing to which she turns when the Arkansas Baptist Newsmagazine arrives each week.

At this point the middle button on my coat, which is the one I try to keep buttoned because that is at the point I need most to be contained, popped off and rolled across the front of the church where we were standing.

Then the lady said something which I have since been pondering. And I am not sure since that moment whose side she is really on. "I like to skip down to the bottom of the column and see what you say each time," she concluded.

There are a lot of different ways to take that, dear lady! Are you trying to say to me that it takes me the most of my space every week to get around to saying something? I sure hope not, for I have to fill this column with something, you know.

Up till this encounter the worst thing that had been said about me and my weekly (or weakly) brainchild was said by a fellow editor who called my style of writing "whimsical." That did not bother me much. I figured he was just jealous. But what about his looking at the bottom of the column to see what I say?

For some reason, this reminds me of what Dr. Wyatt, of Albuquerque, N.M., added as he read his scripture at the Evangelistic Conference. He had just read: "And, behold, the Lord passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord; but the Lord was not in the wind:" (1 Kings 19:11b) when he added: "A lot of preachers haven't found that out yet."

Our closing thought today is that whether a fellow is speaking or writing he ought to strive, at least by the time he finishes, to say something worth being said. Present company excepted!

President Pollard Favors 'Best Consideration' On Restudy Of Baptist Special Offerings

THANK you so much for the editorial which you plan to publish on March 2 ("In Support of a Cooperative Program").

I think it deserves the very best consideration we could possibly give it. Personally, I think we do have too many offerings in our church. However, I do not think the Lottie Moon Christmas Offering and the Annie Armstrong Offering are going to hurt our Cooperative Program.

It seems to me that we need to undergird our Cooperative Program with some definite teaching concerning its meaning to the mission program around the world. It is altogether possible that we have failed to properly inform our people as to what the Cooperative Program really is and what it is doing for all of our institutions and for the mission cause on foreign soil.

The Cooperative Program needs to breathe — it needs a vibrant personality — it needs to live in the imagination of our people and they need to see the world-wide ministry of Southern Baptists through the Cooperative Program.

I have received any number of letters concerning the proposal to change the name of the Southern Baptist Convention. I have written all of them and suggested that they write to their state editors of the Baptist papers and give them their best thinking on this important matter.

While I cannot be at this time in favor of changing the name of our Convention, I do feel that it is such a significant matter that we ought to keep an open mind and thoroughly investigate all the points in favor of such a change. It seems to me that there is a great deal of interest concerning this matter.

May God's richest blessings continue to abide upon you. —Ramsey Pollard, President, Southern Baptist Convention, Bellevue Baptist Church, 1208 Court Avenue, Memphis 4, Tenn.

An Eye for Results

THE story is told that Eben Jordan, the well-known retail merchant of Boston, once looked about for a man to fill a position of authority that had become vacant. Among the men proposed for the job was the manager of a department who had the reputation of never having made a mistake. Jordan investigated the man's record and summoned him to his office.

"How long have you been here?" he inquired.

"Twenty years," was the answer.

"I hear you have never made a mistake," pursued Jordan.

The manager admitted the fact with pride, anticipating his reward.

"I see by the records," continued Jordan with cold indifference, "that your department has shown less profit than any other department in the store. I see that you have made no mistakes. I also notice that you have made little else. I shall not discharge you, but I must put you on probation. I shall expect your department to show a material gain by the end of the year."

It is not the man who makes no mistakes who always makes progress. In business as everywhere, the rewards go to the man who has his eye on the results as well as on the means of getting them. ■

"Thy Will Be Done"

By JENNIE C. EULETTE

"Thy will be done."
It is not difficult to say
These words, O Lord, when day by day
My life is rich in work and play,
In friendship, love, and laughter gay.
Oh, it is easy then to say:
"Thy will be done."

But should this calm be swept away,
My skies be overcast and gray
As grief or suffering come my way—
Would I be ready, then, to say:
"Thy will be done?"

Whatever burdens life may lay
Upon me, Lord, Oh, let me stay
So close beside thee that I may Find courage, strength, and faith to pray.
"Thy will be done."

Dear Harold,

Thanks for the item on my book in NEW SOUTH. I'm getting letters, and orders from books from all over America. Many from the South as a result of items in the Pittsburgh Courier by P. L. Prattis.

I'm enclosing clippings from the latest issue of the Arkansas Baptist with a story about THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND. I also got a letter from Dick Kornmeyer of the Southern Baptist bookstores in Nashville saying they were going to promote in in their book stores as much as possible.

The Arkansas Council on Human Relations here hopes to raise enough money to send books to as many libraries, teachers and preachers here as possible. I don't know how well they will do though. The columnist in the Arkansas Democrat took a blast at the ACHR a few days ago for some reason or other.

I've had a couple of real nice letters from Harry Ashmore. He suggested I contact you, but I guess he didn't realize that I've done that frequently.

Very Sincerely Yours,

Little Ro[illegible] Arkansas

To the Editor:

My son, a Little Rock Central High student, and I, recently collaborated in writing a book entitled THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND. The book deals with the history of the Negro in America, and deals in part with the 1957 school crisis in Little Rock.

Through the book Carl and I hoped to show that people in Little-Rock are no more inclined toward prejudice than others are, and also tried to encourage Christian ethics in race relations.

The book is being published by a New York publisher, and seems to be doing quite well. We have had a good deal of favorable publicity in newspapers all over America, and particularly in Arkansas. The editor of the ARKANSAS BAPTIST has twice commented very favorably on the book. We feel the reason for the books acceptance is that we stressed the positive, rathern than the negative. We pointed out the tolerant and progressive attitudes of Arkansans, rather than appealing to bigotry, as is done by those who still cling to hopes of retaining the color-caste system.

Even though we avoided traditional arguments as to the merits of segregation or integration, and told of the history and progress of the Negro in America, and our belief that this could not have been done under other systems of government, this seemed to be too much for Dr. B. L. Bridges, former excecutive secretary of the Arkansas Baptist State Convention. He seemed to be very indignant because the editor of the ARKANSAS BAPTIST had commended Carl and I for our stand, and insisted he be permitted to publish an article entitled a segregationist speaks. Permission was granted, and his article published. This is as it should be, as he certainly should have the right to express himself. I then submitted a letter of rebuttal which was not accepted on the grounds that it was not the type material suitable for use in a church paper, particularly because of my reference to our pet tom-cat and sanitation conditions in Arkansas. However the editor did say he would like to see it published, and wished Dr. Bridges could see my answer, which read as follows :-

All Carl and I tried to do in writing THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND was to show folks that people in Arkansas are probably less prejudiced than many others are, and to encourage Christian ethics in race relations. At first I felt rather hurt to think that Dr. Bridges, a member of my own congregation would attempt to belittle our efforts, but, after reading his article, I can see through the scriptures that he conveniently failed to quote that he really had our best interests at heart. I am beginning to see the error of my ways. Certainly, I had never heard any of his arguments before.

I'd like to go over the six points he mentioned and show how he has caused me to change my thinking.

1. THE BIBLE DOES NOT SUPPORT INTEGRATION: I had always felt that Christian brotherhood was a commond bond, one that should be stronger than any other, that the true test of Chrisianity is whether or not we "love the brethren". Now I see that it would be better to fellowship with a gambler, drunkard or an athiest, so long as he is white, than with a dedicated Christian minister who happened to be dark skinned. And, we should not forget Christs golden rule, DO UNTO OTHERS AS YOU WOULD HAVE THEM DO UNTO YOU, BUT KEEP NIGRAS IN THEIR PLACE.

2. BIOLOGICAL FACTS DO NOT SUPPORT INTEGRATION: In this, the disease prevalent among Negroes is mentioned, together with it's effect on them. It is obvious disease has been taking it's toll. I'd wondered what was slowing down Floyd Patterson, Elgin Baylor, Jimmy Brown, Ernie Banks and Wilma Rudolph.

3. SOCIETY AND INTEGRATION: In this one Dr. Bridges pointed out that Cardinals do not mix with wren, and deer do not mix with cattle. I had never before seen the value of bird watching societies in solving social problems, but now I can see the logic in this. But, my DEER Dr. Bridges, two things disturbed me. Why do my neighbors black spaniel and white terrier eat so readily from adjacent dishes, and how can I get my long haired yellow tom-cat to stop co-mingling with the black lady cat up the street. Of course they will never have a legal marraige, so it's probably allright. Cats will be cats, and sow their wild catnip!

43. Sanitation and Integration: Dr. Bridge says, "Sanitation conditions in Arkansas do not justify integration. I cant agree with the good doctor on this one. I maintain Arkansas is as sanitary as any state in the union.

5. Economics and Integration: Dr. Bridges points out that the Negro has not lifted his standard of living to that of white people. I can see the logic here alright. I know in my own industry, the railroad, of the many good jobs available to Negroes. I am thinking of such jobs as locomotive engineer, telegraph operator, conductor, typist, cashier, ticket seller and signal maintainer. I am sure other industries have like opportunities. I had always wondered why colored people insisted on taking jobs as janitors, maids, bus-boys and garbage collectors.

6. The law and integration: Here Dr. Bridges tells us that in 1950 the Destrict of Columbia Bar Association voted not to admit Negroes. I can readily see that if members of the bar are prejudiced, the rest of us should be prejudiced too.

All in all, Dr. Bridges, your article has made a lasting impression. I suggest that you expand it, and try to get it published as a book. I am sure I shall be unable to do further writing because of my physical condition. I seem to be wasting away, and am down to 205 pounds. You see, I recently attended a conference on community unity at which several Negroes were present. I foolishly shook hands with one of them, and am afraid I have contracted that dread Etheopian disease, SICKLE-CELL ANEMIA.

Race prejudice is bad enough, in itself, but it cannot be contained, or confined. It invariably spreads to include many racial, national or religious groups. Politicians who have exploited the race issue usually find they have inherited supporters with other hatreds and prejudices.

Thus we find groups such as the NATIONAL STATES RIGHTS PARTY, who's vice chairman, Mrs E L Bishop, of Little Rock said in a letter to Orval Faubus (as quoted in the Gazette) :- "Jews hope to brainwash all the people of the world by dragging out the Eichman trial for several months." She went on to say that the Jews had faked stories about atrocities committed against Jews in German concentration camps. She said, "In the end they will say that every segregationist, States Righter, conservative, etc., is a potential Eichman, a potential mass murderer. The Jews will use public opinion built up by this long phony trial to get congress and even the United Nations to outlaw patriots everywhere. Are we going to let them outlaw us?" she asked. Orval Faubus was the States Rights party candidate for president last fall. In today's Gazette there is an item telling us that Mrs. Bishop plans to spend the next three weeks in Carthage New York to organize a States Rights party there.

This same thing made me have to stand all alone in my own Baptist church last fall when I supported John Kennedy for president.

(Actually I had a hard time voting, and difficulty in making up my mind. I guess I voted for Kennedy because of all the people who were against him for no other reason than the fact he is a Catholic)

But the most damnable thing of all, in this region, is that colored people, who are merely trying to "get in on" Americanism, and those of us who support them, are invariably labeled communists, or communist dupes. It seems to me that the president, or other key people in the administration, should take to TV and set the people straight on this. They should explain to the frightened people of the South that those really serving the cause of communism are the people who would deny equal rights opportunity and justice to a part of our citizenry.

We recently recieved the following letter from Joseph L Ranft, program manager for RADIO FREE EUROPE. It reads as follows: "Dear Mr Creger, We wish to thank you for sending us a copy of THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND written by your son, and yourself. We shall be able to make good use of it in our broadcasts to Eastern Europe. As you know, we obtained a telephone interview from your son recently about the book."

The thoughts expressed in THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND are in direct conflict with every aim of these communist calling, bible quoting, self styled patriots. Certainly no one is more interested in opposing communism than RADIO FREE EUROPE. If the fact that these people have taken such an interest in our book, and are using it to combat communist propaganda, were generally known in the South, I'm sure it would do a lot of good.

Ralph Creger

Those of you getting this letter are familiar with the book THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND and with its purpose.

While there have been many books written on this same general subject I think you will agree that THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND is unusual in several respects.

It is not written by a known personality, who's views are known and predictable, and who's authorship might tend to prejudice its readers. It is short and simply written so that all can easily understand it. It avoids most of the usual North-South arguments that might tend to make the reader forget the real problem. It avoids most of the usual well worn arguments normally used when the segregation-integration controversy arises. It strikes at points where segregationalists are most vulnerable as it stresses the "underdog" role of the Negro, the inate human respect all people have for those succeeding despite handicaps. The segregationists are well aware of these handicaps, and they too, usually consider themselves a persecuted minority. It points out the analogy between the difficulties encountered in the South by labor organizations and by organizations such as the NAACP which represent another group of people who have been exploited. Since frequently many of the most extreme "racists" can be found in labor organizations, I thought this was a point that should not be overlooked. This analogy seems to be effective, judging from the comments I have been getting from many railroad employees who have read the book.

Since most of you getting this letter have expressed a desire to help make the book knonw, I have compiled a list of things that have been done so far, to make the book known. I have listed both the positive results, and the negative. You may see items I have overlooked, and if so, I'd appreciate them being called to my attention.

It is my idea that if you have this list, you might see organizations or people listed that you know, or with whom you have influence, or you might think of people not on the list who should be.

Official publication date was Jan. 2nd. At this time the publisher sent news releases to well over 100 newspapers over the country, most of them were the larger dailies. A review copy was supposed to have gone with the news releases, but because of a delay at the printers, the books were about three weeks late, and this did not help the situation. However several good reviews of the book have appeared in such papers as the Chicago Tribune, the Kansas City Star, the Phoneix Arizona Gazette, items about the book in the New York Times, the Columbus Ohio Dispatch, the St Petersburg Fla. Times, the Arkansas Gazette and the Arkansas Democrat. The Pine Bluff Arkansas Commercial gave us a good review, and good news items, but most of the other Arkansas papers have not been very cooperative. Radio Free Europe called Carl at School April 10th, and had a 15 minute taped interview with him about the book, and about condidtions in school, and most of the Arkansas papers picked this up. There is no doubt in my mind that most of these papers refused to give the book space because of the theme of the book, and because of Orval Faubus. However the Pine Bluff Commercial has done very well by me. They had an excellent review, and they carried my rebuttal to an article A SEGREGATIONIST SPEAKS written by the retired executive secretary of the State Baptist Convention. (This is the man who got into a controversy with the edtitor of the ARKANSAS BAPTIST because he gave my book so much space) My rebuttal was also carried by the April 8 Chicago Defender. It may have been carried by other papers, but these are all that have been verified. The Arkansas Gazette and the Democrat have both had several items about the book, but strangely, the Democrat has done better than the Gazette.

LABOR which goes to about 500,000 railroad employees had an excellent review.

The Negro press has given the book good coverage. The best had been by P L Prattis in the Pittsburgh Courier. One of his article was so effective that I have gotten letters and book orders from all over America, particularly from Chicago, Cincinnati Detroit and Mississippi. This article was re-printed in full, as an advertisement in the New York Times April 1 and 4.
Saunders Redding gave the book a good review in the Afro-American and there was a review in the Chicago Defender Dec 28 and my letter of rebuttal in the Weekly Defender April 8th. This letter seems to have been quite effective judging from the mail I've been getting. There have been reviews in the NY Citizen-Call and the NY Courier. Several other Negro papers have gotten news releases and letters about the book, but I do not know that they have used them. JET and EBONY have been sent review copies and letters, but so far as I know they have given the book no space and have not replied to my letters.

I have sent letters to the editors of papers all over America. These letters contained statements about the book by well known people, and I have no way of knowing which were used. I sent letters with a statement by New Jersey senator Williams to most New Jersey papers, and don't know how many were used, but the Camden Courier-Post did, as they sent me a clipping. I ordered twenty more of these papers and sent clippings to other senators. Letters containing statements by Estes Kefauver were sent to Tennessee papers, but none were used as far as I know. A long letter of endorsement by Harry Ashmore was sent to all Arkansas papers, but none used it except the ARKANSAS BAPTIST.

I have written letters to both Washington DC papers, and they have given the book no space as far as I know. I have written letters to 50 of the largest dailies in the country, with self addressed envelopes asking for clippings for Carls scrapbook, but only about 15 have replied. I am particularly dissappointed by lack of response from Los Angeles, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit and St Louis.
Review copies of the book were sent to LIFE LOOK NEWSWEEK and TIME. None have given the book any space.
The SOUTHERN PATRIOT carried a good review in the April issue. I understand the CRISIS will review the book. The Progressive has said they may review it, but have given no definte assurance.

Mr. Graham Hall, a man recently returned to Little Rock from the diplomatic service, and a native of Little Rock, gave serious consideration to sending the book to each US senator. Finally he decided against it, apparently not wanting to take a chance on incurring the wrath of Orval Faubus and some of the extremist groups in Little-Rock, but saying he felt some of the leaders who had been here through the crisis should take the lead. Mrs I.S.McClinton, a blind colored woman who's husband is president of the states Negro democratic voters# assn. heard of this, and took on the project of sending the books to the senators. Mrs McClinton has worked for the state, in vocational rehabilitation for the blind, for six years, but was dismissed last winter for no apparent reason. Later they were told it was because her husband refused to "play ball" with Faubus. Mrs. McClinton wrote letters to each senator, and had the publisher send them the books. Something apparently went wrong in the mailing, as only a few seemed to get through to the senators. Only about five acknowledged Mrs. McClintons letters. She felt quite hurt about this. One of them was Herman Talmage. I am sure he did not agree with what the book had to say, but at least he had the courtesy to write her and thank her for the book.

So far the only known results of this move was a strong letter of endorsement by senator Williams of New Jersey. However, several others did not get the book, and have indicated they will have something to say. These include senators Humphrey, Javits, Douglas, Gore and Hickenlooper.

Individuals who know of the book are listed pretty much in the order that they were contacted, after the manuscript stage.

C H Murphy, president of Murphy Oil of Eldorado Arkansas, who recently in speech at Hendrix College told students they must learn to accept integration - has been sent book a few days ago

Winthrop Rockefeller - He wrote Atlantic Monthly, and contacted McGill for me, when book in manuscript form. Nothing since. I feel he could have helped the cause of equal rights a lot more than he has, in several ways. The book is just one of the ways. Maybe he wants to be governor some of these days.

Harry Belafonte - Had to write him second time to get acknowledgment - then his secretary said he just got back from somewhere, and had not read the book yet

William Fulbright - When the book was in manuscript form, and he no doubt thought it would never be published, he wired me, and wrote me three letters, telling me how good the story was, said that if published he would help with the national news media, etc., now that it has published he hasn't done a thing. He writes that it is against his policies to endorse books.

W Averaill Harriman - sent him book, but got no acknowledgment

Natl Democratic Chairman - sent book, but got no acknowledgment
President Kennedy - sent him book prior to Jan 1st in Palm Beach, Mrs McClinton sent him book, wrote him two letters and wired him finally got letter from his secretary Evelyn Lincoln, - form letter saying President thanked me- etc. P L Prattis wrote Meyer Feldman in the White House thought he could get the book to President Kennedy's attention, but Mr. Feldman said that Mr. Kennedy could not change his policies of refusing to endorse books - I didnt expect an endorsment - I thought me might help in some way though.

Lyndon Johnson - form letter of cangratulations from him, when he was a senator

Stuart Symington - He wrote a letter to Readers Digest recommending manuscripts use

Carl Rowan - I sent him book, and several letters. Finally got a reply from him about 8 or 9 months later, that he did not have time to read the book

I sent books to Elgin Baylor, Jim Brown, Ernie Banks and Leontyne Price - but have hardly had time for acknowledgments yet. I'd like to send a book to Wilma Rudolph if I knew her address.

At the suggestion of Hodding Carter I sent a book to Percy Green of the Jackson Miss. Advocate - no reply or acknowledgment.

I went through a book in the Little Rock Library and got the names of most of the Negro Newspapers in the South and sent them letters about the book. I've had no replies yet.

I sent letters to the editors to most Tennessee papers with statements by Kefauver. I don't know if any were used. I doub't it.

Donald Ewing of the Shreveport Times wrote and asked me for a book. I sent him one, but he did not acknowledge until I called him by long distance, then he said he didn't think they had better use it.

The president of Tuskegee has the book, says will read it when gets the time

I have sent a book to Rose Long, af the Atlanta Journal, as a result of her article in LOOK magazine. Haven't had time to hear from her yet.

The following in New Orleans have been sent the book at the suggestion of Jim Dombrowski - Louis Riecke- President of the school board, Mary Sand, president Save our Schools, Rev Albert D'orlando-minister, Bill Monroe, Director News Bureau, WDSU TV, Mabel Simmons, Literary Editor Times Picayne.

ORGANIZATIONS - Religious and otherwise:

UAHC - very nice letter from Rabbi Glaser of San Francisco with offer to help also letter from Albert Vorspan saying he would give book brief plug in social action in review but said could not help in distribution as had same problem with other books on same subject by such authors as Ashmore, East, McGill and others.

AMERICAN BAPTIST CONVENTION - Miss Jean Luckey says will help promote as much as possible.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES - Darrell Randal said will help make book known, suggested I send book to Dow Kirkpatrick of Atlanta, which I did.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL - Harold Fleming has known about the book since its manuscript stage. I visited with Harold in Atlanta in June, 1960. They have given me encouragement, reviewed the book in NEW SOUTH. As far as I know, they have ordered no books.

ARKANSAS COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS - They are trying to raise enough money to get at least 500 books and send to school teachers and libraries in the Little Rock area, particularly because of the speed-up in integration next fall in the Little Rock schools. Nine men have been sent letters asking for contributions, but only two have sent any money. The others say they can't afford to have their name linked to the project, but say they are 100% in sympathy with what we are trying to do.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION. Very good - strong endorsement of book to local book stores. Dick Kornmeyer writes they are listing it in their WORLD OF BOOKS CATALOGUE.

CONGREGATIONALISTS - ordered six books for display on Race Relations week in June at Fisk University.

NAACP - Very good. John Morsell wrote they had just ordered 1000 more books and would help in every way they can - will review in the CRISIS.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE EDUCATIONSL FUND - Good review in the April SOUTHERN PATRIOT, good letter with offer of help from Anne Braden. Jim Dombrowski sent money for five books asking me to send them to five key people in New Orleans, which I did, said would handle further when these people had read the book.

CORE - ordered 100 books originally, nothing further, had hoped for much more from CORE.

Have written three letters to Archbishop Rummell of New Orleans and sent a copy of the book to him. Have received no acknowledgement or reply.

Alice Lilly of St. Louis University has ordered 12 books and says will do all possible to make known in St. Louis area.

Mrs. H. M. Perry of Fisk University ordered books.
Irwin Schulman of B'nai B'rith of New Orleans has written Albert Vorspan and P. D. East about the book, says will be in Little Rock in next few days and talk to me about the book.

URBAN LEAGUE - Alexander Allen of New York helped by correcting a few errors in the original manuscript and by contacting people for me in New York, and helped in other ways. They have not ordered any books, but have mentioned the book in their news-letters.

Herb Tysen of the Urban League in Little Rock says they are having a statewide meeting in Little Rock in June, that there will be 300 people there, many from east and South Arkansas. I'd like to have 1000 books there as Herb says many will want books and I'd like to sell them in lots of five books for $2.00, so they can take the books back to their areas and distribute. Also, I. S. McClinton is having a meeting of his organization to encourage Negroes to buy poll taxes and I could sell books there if I can get them. The big need for the books in Arkansas is in the plantation areas of east and south Arkansas where they are dominated by the plantation owners. The colored people in Little Rock do a pretty good job of thinking for themselves.

AMERICAN FRIENDS SOCIETY - I have been very disappointed here. I have sent books and several letters to these people in Philadelphia but they have not replied. However, many of their people in Little Rock have been quite active in distributing books personally.

RADIO APPEARANCES - Carl and I were on the Bob Dixon Show in New York the first week in January and on Open Mike which originates in Leones Restaurant. The Publisher was unable to book us on any nationwide TV or radio shows. In Little Rock, we appeared on all three TV stations' noon panel shows and were on one radio panel show.

RADIO FREE EUROPE called Carl out of school April 10th and taped an interview with him about the book , reaction to it here, about conditions in school as compared to what they were in 1957. They will use this interview in broadcasts to iron curtain countries. They are sending us the tape which will be used on local radio shows. The book was reviewed by Lee A. Howe on BEST OF THE WEEK, Station WSNY, Schenectedy, N.Y. Jan. 22nd.

Many other things have been done, but I cannot recall all of them.

Two things which are needed to project the book in a really big way are:
(1) Statements to the press about the book by nationally-known people.
(2) Strong organizational support. The book will be read by segregationists if it is given to them, but they normally will not spend their money to buy it. The publisher has excellent discount rates, starting at 40 cents per copy for 500 or more to 999 books, getting down to as low as 28 cents per copy for 10,000 or more books.

All this has been set down for your information so that you can help me in some way if you feel the book can help do the job for which it was written.

Most of you have a copy of the article that dealt with my experiences in getting the book published. This went to Charlie Ferguson of READERS DIGEST, in the hope that they would use it as a "First Person" story. Mr Ferguson returned it saying that the first person stories had to turn on some sharp and dramatic incident, but suggested I send it to CHRISTIAN HERALD, which I did. Mr Ferguson said the DIGEST would no doubt use it as a reprint. Of course it the CHRISTIAN HERALD does use it, and the DIGEST reprints it, our book would get more publicity than we had ever dreamed was possible.

Our publisher tried to get us on the Dave Garroway show, or some nationwide TV show, when we were in New York the first week in January, but this could not be arranged. We appeared on the Bob Dixon radio show, and on "Open Mike" a radio show originating in "Leones" resturaunt. In Little Rock we have appeared on all three TV stations panel shows, and on a radio show.

We just got the tape back from RADIO FREE EUROPE, and a local radio station says they will use it on a broadcast.

Two things are needed to project the book in a really big way,

1. Strong organizational support, by organizations who can, and will take advantage of the discount prices on the books, which start at 28¢ per copy for an order of 500 to 999 books, and get down to 28¢ per copy for 10000 or more.
2. Statements to the press about the book by nationally known people. I have a feeling that a good many of those who have been sent books, have never actually seen them.

Things are really starting to pick up now, but I still need all the help I can get, to show the people in Little Rock they can quite being afraid, and to show people in the South, in America, and all over the world that such a book can come out of Little Rock, and that most of the people here seem to like it.

If I could just get Orval Faubus to come out and blast the book, this would be a big help, but so far he's been to smart for that. I sent him and autographed copy, but have gotten no acknowledgment. Statements to the press by nationally known people would force him to talk. He can't connect me with any of the organizations he has complained of in the past, and he'd look pretty silly picking on me, as he has always fallen back on the fact that he, Orval, the poor boy from the hills was being persecuted.

"THEY SAID IT COULDN'T BE DONE"

Recently, while glancing through a publication called THE MASTHEAD, I was particularly interested in statements by Kenneth D. McCormick, Editor-in Chief of Doubleday and Co.

Mr. McCormick said that his Company receives between five and six thousand manuscripts a year. About four thousand are unsolicited. He pointed out that the most the Company had ever taken from the unsolicited scripts was two: He went on to say, "There is a quality of mediocrity about these scripts that instantly separates them from professional work, from inspired or thoughtful pieces of writing. But they are read carefully because occasional jewels appear among them."

Happily for me, I chanced on these words AFTER I had been fortunate enough to have an unsolicited manuscript accepted by a New York publisher. Even so, after reading the statistics, I almost felt as though I should call and say, "Forget the whole thing, there's been a horrible mistake!"

In the fall of 1957, we, along with many other Little Rock Families, experienced utter frustration as we watched the Governor of Arkansas capitalize on latent fears and emotions of a basically tolerant and kindly people. We wished there were something we could do to help, but it seemed there was not.

As an example of the thinking that prevailed at that time, and which unfortunately seemed to be encouraged by many in positions of authority, the experiences of a young man from my own church may be enlightening.

The young man was a senior in Central High in the fall of 1957. After prayerful consideration, he came to the conclusion that, as a Christian, he could do no less than practice Christ's Golden Rule. He said he had not asked for integration, that he would have been happy to have the schools continue as they were; but, since they were not going to be the same, he felt he should be governed by Christian ethics in the new situations he expected to face.

For speaking a friendly word of greeting to colored students in the hall, for sitting by a colored boy in the cafeteria who was being shunned, this white boy was cornered and beaten one evening by four high school students who seemed to be taking the Governor's defiant words quite literally. For many nights, the boy's telephone rang frequently, late into the night, and threats, abusive language and obscenities were commonplace. As far as I know, this boy and others like him were given no support by the religious leaders in our community. In relating this story to Ministers since that time, I have asked which course they think Jesus Christ would have taken...that taken by the boy taking the beating, or that taken by those who were his assailants, and those who by their public utterances encouraged the assailants.

In the fall of 1958, the public high schools were closed in Little Rock. It was necesssry to send our son, Carl, to a private school operated by the Baptist Churches. For this, we paid twenty-five dollars a month tuition and were asked for further contributions. At the same time, we continued to pay taxes to support the fine high schools we were not permitted to patronize.

In 1959, the public schools re-opened, thanks to a special election, and Carl entered Central High School as a Junior. In October, Carl came home grumbling over a homework assignment which he compared to the "last straw", that easily could break his back. The students in his American History class were being required to write a "term paper" on any subject of their choice pertaining to history. Carl asked for advice, and I suggested he write on the history of the Negro in America. With the permission of his teacher, we collaborated in writing the thesis. In our research we read ninety-eight books from the Public Library. In the composition, we tried to avoid the usual arguments concerning segregation, and simply set down the progress made by the Negro in America...progress that seemed to us to have been made despite great handicaps, handicaps which the rest of us can scarcely comprehend. We entitled the paper AN AMERICAN SUCCESS STORY. Before it was submitted to Carl's teacher, we made copies and showed them to friends. They immediately insisted that what we had written must be published.

Neither of us knew anything of procedure. We had no previous experience in writing. Finally, I decided to make several more copies and send to people I thought might be sympathetic to my position. At first, I sent copies to Brooks Hays, Stuart Symington, Ralph McGill and Harry Golden. Each of these men wrote letters of encouragement and said they would contact Reader's Digest and recommend the manuscript's use. After three weeks, the DIGEST wrote that they thought the story should be published, but that it was chronological in form, could not be cut successfully for magazine use, and suggested it be published as a book. They offered to put it in the hands of a literary agent for me. If I had known the odds against me, I'm sure I would have accepted their kind offer, but, not knowing it couldn't be done, I decided to be my own agent. I knew that Winthrop Rockefeller was supposed to be liberal in his views where race is concerned, so I put in a call to him at his Morrilton, Arkansas, farm. When I explained the purpose of my call, he told me he would be delighted to read the manuscript, so, on the following Sunday, we drove to his farm and I discussed the story with him. The following Saturday afternoon, my wife, Barbara, had prevailed upon me to rake some leaves in the backyard. While engaged in this unliterary endeavor, a telephone call came for me. Barbara thought it was some one from my office and let it be known she did not appreciate having me interrupted after the difficulties she had experienced in getting me started. Reluctantly, she called me to the phone. As I picked up the receiver, a pleasant voice answered, "Mr. Creger, this is Winthrop Rockefeller, sorry to interrupt your yard work, but I wanted to tell you I've read your manuscript and like it very much." Mr. Rockefeller went on to say that although he thought the story very worthwhile, he was afraid since there was no "sex" in it, that it might not have wide appeal. I agreed that the trend in literature seemed to be in that direction, but felt that if we had reached the place in these United States where absolutely nothing, not even civil rights, could be sold without sex to plug it, we might as well give up. Mr. Rockefeller laughed and said he agreed, and that he would get word to the ATLANTIC MONTHLY about the story. (This he did, but they soon advised me that the work was not up to their literary standards, which was probably just as well, as people who can afford to buy a sixty-cent magazine usually don't need converting on the civil rights issue.) When our conversation was ended, Barbara, who was relaxing in the living room, called to me, "WHO WAS THAT?" "WINTHROP ROCKEFELLER", I replied, quite nonchalantly. You can still see the dent in our living room ceiling which Barbara almost went through.

During March, 1960, I wrote and telephoned many people. One of them was Dr. Benjamine Fine of the North American Newspaper Alliance. Near Central High in 1957, I knew he had been punched in the nose and gotten his glasses broken, so I thought he might still have an interest. I wrote and called Senators Fulbright and Kefauver, also Hodding Carter and Lillian Smith and several others. I called David Brinkley and asked for advice and had a good visit with him. All these telephone calls certainly broadened my field of acquaintances but created astronomical phone bills. These calls seemed like strokes of genious to me when made, but by the time the bills arrived, they were, to Barbara, sheer folly... One night we were visiting friends who are Catholic. The lady seemed quite impressed at my willingness to call anyone whose named popped into my mind. As we talked about well-known people sympathetic to my position, the Pope was mentioned. I reached for the telephone but dropped it quickly as our friend screamed, "OH, NO! NOT HIM!"

At one time, I contacted as many people as I could in Little Rock who I felt might have had experience in writing, but without exception they said,

"Don't ask me, I've never had any luck in getting anything published."

Although most of those I called were quite helpful, I soon found that Publishers are quite "touchy" about someone trying to use influence to get something accepted. I had no influence, but they could see I would use it if I did have it. Eventually, I came to the conclusion that I would have to select a Publisher, submit the manuscript and hope that it would be accepted on its merits.

Strictly by chance, I picked the Chilton House of Philadelphia, after reading through a list of Publishers in the WRITERS' DIGEST, which a friend loaned me. In a few days, the Executive Editor of the Chilton Company wrote me saying that he liked the story very much. He went on to say that he felt it should be published in "paperback" form so that the average student could afford to buy it. He said his Company did not publish paperbacks, but that he had a publisher friend in New York who did. He told me he had called his friend, explained the book, and sent him the manuscript.

Four days later, my wife called me while I was at work and read a special delivery letter from the Lyle Stuart Publishing Company in New York, saying, "We have read AMERICAN SUCCESS STORY" and liked it very much. We will be happy to publish it. A contract is being mailed."

When we finally realized that what Carl and I had written actually would be published as a book, we discovered that we still had a difficult decision to make. We were afraid. We had stated in no uncertain terms what we thought of the Governor's actions during 1957 and 1958, and felt things might be very difficult for us. Finally, we decided we were right and that we should go ahead and sign the contract and send Carl away to finish school if things got too bad.

that the success story was not finished and that the book actually was the search of a high school student and his father for truth. The publisher agreed with Miss Smith's suggestion and THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND reached the book stores on January 2, 1961. We were surprised and immensely pleased at the reaction to the book. There were many, many calls and letters of commendation. Most of them said, in effect, "You have said what we feel but were afraid to put into words." We received only two abusive letters. One was from Toledo, Ohio, and was full of anti-semitic literature. The sender advised he had subscribed to a magazine called KINGDOM DIGEST for me and that it would straighten me out on the Bible. I got one copy of it, and as nearly as I could figure it out, the editor thinks Gentiles are not really Gentiles, but are Jews, and that Jews are not really Jews, but are actually gentiles. Apparently, the author was concerned about the statement in the Bible classifying the Jews as God's chosen people, and this was the only way he could think of to get on the right side. I wrote the editor and told him I had not subscribed to his magazine and that if it produced the type of obscene literature the man from Toledo sent me, to take me off his list. I did not receive a second copy. We also received a letter from Minneapolis containing considerable personal abuse for both Carl and me.

We were asked to go to New York the first week in January where we appeared on two radio shows. In Little Rock, we appeared on all three Television stations' panel shows and on radio shows. There has been much favorable publicity in both Little Rock papers and in other Arkansas papers. Many other papers, such as the New York Times, The Chicago Tribune and the St. Petersburg Times had nice things to say. We are members of a Southern Baptist Church and were pleased when Convention Headquarters in Nashville commented favorably and promised to make the book known through their book stores.

is the son of a Little Rock Minister. At the beginning of the school year, there was always a ring of empty seats around the chair occupied by Frank. The white students seemed to feel that this was expected. But Frank, who has a personality you have to see to believe, just laughed it off and concentrated on his studies (he is a (B) plus student). Before long, the white students were saying to each other, "Well, I don't like 'niggers' but Frank's different." Later, they came to the conclusion that perhaps Frank wasn't so different, that the other colored students seemed to be quite human, after all. By the end of the term, the formerly empty seats were all filled and usually among the first taken. Little Rock's teenagers have shown that they are more willing to judge people as individuals than some of their elders are. These teenagers have usually shown that they are taking their religion more seriously than many grownups as they practice, not just preach, the principles set forth in the gospel according to St. Mathew which reads, "Therefore, all things whatsoever Ye would that men should do to you, do Ye even so to them."

We continue to receive letters from people all over America, from Lyndon Johnson, from Senators Williams and Douglas, from Jackie Robinson, Elgin Baylor, Jimmy Brown, Ralph Bunche and many more, but of all the letters received, the ones which mean the most to us are from the colored people who say, "God bless you and give you strength". Some of these letters contain grammatical errors and mis-spelled words, but to us they are pure gold. They are a message from a people whose faith in America has survived stern tests, tests that might have caused some of the rest of us to waver. It is a faith that vindicates the vision of our founding fathers who proposed a government "with liberty and justice FOR ALL!"

Dear Mrs. Flowers:

I have received a great deal of encourgaging mail within the past few days about my book THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND. Margaret Long phoned me last Tuesday and said she had reviewed it in the Atlanta Journal. She had many nice things to say about it, and stories about the book have appeared in several more large newspapers.

Several very well-to-do people seem to be interested and I have received letters at regular intervals from Kivie Kaplin of Boston and Ellen Steinberg of New York. Also have received letters of endorsement for the book from several U.S. Senators, so I am feeling quite encouraged.

There are several areas of the south, however, which are in need of the book and where it has not been publicized, to speak of, and I hope you can help me in these areas.

Many strong segregationists seem to like my book and their views appear to be softened a bit after reading it, unfortunately though, they usually will not spend their own money to buy it.

With best wishes, I am

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I hope you are familiar with the book THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND, written by my son and me. Margaret Long advised me by phone that she had reviewed it in the April 30th issue of the Atlanta Journal. I have heard from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt who said she had written about the book in her column of May 3rd.

Several members of the negro press have advised they are doing stories on the book. I hope you can help me further in making the book known, particularly in the south as this is where I seem to be experiencing the most difficulty, however, Miss Long seemed very optimistic about prospects in Atlanta.

Sincerely yours,

Mr. Leslie Dunbar has referred to me your letter of May 8, 1961, concerning THIS IS WHAT WE FOUND.

As you know, we ran a brief review of the book in NEW SOUTH. Beyond that, there is little we can do in the way of promotion except through word of mouth which we will be happy to do.

I read Margaret Long's column concerning the book. Miss Long is a personal friend and is quite interested in good race relations.

Have you contacted other groups in the human relations field? They might be of some limited aid.

Dear Mr. Dunbar,

As you know, I have been active in race relations work for several years. About a year and a half ago Brooks Hays suggested to me that I should seek Federal employment, in the area of civil rights. I have pursued this, and written several people in Government circles, and it is the consensus that I should concentrate on work in the staff of the Commission for Equal Employment Opportunity, once the staff is named. I have recieved letters that have sounded very encouraging from such people as Carl Rowan, Senator Fulbright, Congressman Mills, John Stewart of the Vice Presidents office, and others. Harry Golden told me he would speak to the Vice President about me.

Brooks told me that it would be unlikely I could get into the Little Rock office (if a regional or state office is established here) because of local political pressures. It would seem wrong to me, to be penalized because of my efforts in behalf of racial justice, by being kept off such a job locally. But I am sure that Little Rock is not the only place such things happen. I did tell Brooks though, that I would go "anywhere".

Aside from my personal involvement in race relations work, I have had a good deal of experience in interviewing applicants for employment with the railroad. I interview just about all the new employees, and understand fully how industries manage to discriminate through handling by regional and local supervisors.

Until April 1st of this year the railroad company did not seem to object to my race relations work, and the Vice President encouraged me and bought several of my books to give to friends. Now the Southern Pacific is taking over the Rock Island, and this Vice President, Mr O. W. Limestall is being, or has been, forced to retire. There have been many changes in personel, and those left, I find, are not at all sympathetic to my position and are giving me a bad time. I campaigned vigorously for the Johnson-Humphrey ticket last fall, and the division superintendent, my immediate supervisor did not like it at all.

Aside from all of this I have wanted, for some time, to get out of the railroad, and get into race relations work for the rest of my life. I believe that equal employment opportunity is the real key to the thing, as I have indicated in my book A LOOK DOWN THE LONESOME ROAD.

I need help from my friends on this thing, and am wondering if you would be willing to drop the Vice President a note about me. You could check on my work with Ozell Sutton or Nat Griswold of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, if you wished. Also, I read in the paper of Mr Branton's appointment by the Vice-President. I sent a copy of my first book to Mr Branton, and we had an exchange of correspondence about it. I believe he would remember me. I'd like to write him, and ask his help. Could you tell me how to properly address him. I presume he has left Atlanta.

I am just hoping that I can get into this work for the rest of my life, and I hope that people are not appointed who are not really dedicated, but are just put on the job because of political patronage.

I will appreciate any help you can give me.

Sincerely,

Ralph Creger

Dear Ralph:

Thank you for your letter of May 3. I wish you all good luck, though I am saddened by the news that you may be leaving Little Rock.

I shall write to Wiley Branton about your interest, though I do not know what can be done until the President appoints a commission. Certainly it will not hurt to have your name on file, though I believe we can make better progress after recruiting has begun. I shall not, as you suggest, write to the Vice President because, in the first place, he barely knows me and, because in the second place, my own experience has been that this route to high authority is not a good way of getting one's application fairly considered.

All good wishes, and let me know if I can be of any other help.

Dear Mr. Dunbar,

Thank you for your letter of May 7th. I was in Washington May 10 and 11, and was lucky enough to be there the day the Commission was named. I was in the Vice-President's office, with John Stewart, who seems to be taking a personal interest in me. He made arrangements at once for a conference for me with Mr. Roosevelts executive assistant. I had a long talk, and was told to go home and prepare a resume' with particular emphasis on my employment record and my work in the field of human relations. I was also asked to send a copy of my new book A LOOK DOWN THE LONESOME ROAD. It was indicated that letters from key people would be helpful. I have many of the leaders in the Little Rock area writing. These are people who know me personally, civic, religious and business leaders. Ozell Sutton of the ACHR wrote a letter of recommendation and so did George Henry of the Urban League. Mrs. Roosevelt had written about me in her syndicated column in 1961, and I sent that in. Judging from what John Stewart told me, I believe I am in pretty good shape for getting on with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. But you never know just what it might take to put you over.

When I was in Washington I was lucky enough to get to see just about everyone I had hoped to see. I had a good talk with Mr. Brainton, and he said he had just recieved a letter from you.

Now that the chairman of the commission has been named, I do believe that a letter from you would be helpful to my cause. As information we moved to Little Rock in 1955, I have been chief dispatcher here for the Rock Island railroad all of the time since then. I have been as active as I knew how to be all of this time in the various human relations group. I worked hard in the S.T.O.P. campaign to open the schools, in the "Bridges Across The Barriers" program of the ACHR and in the Little Rock Conference on Religion and Race. I have been able to break down a few barriers on the railroad insofar as employment practices are concerned.

On my job I have about 400 employees under my supervision, and part of my work has been to interview all new employees hired on the division in the past ten years. I know how management manages to discriminate at the local level.

It seems that the combination of my work experience, together with my dedication and work in human relations should qualify me for some place of service with the new commission.

They did not rule out the possibility of a regional office here. Of course I would love to be assigned to Little Rock. But I told Mr. Roosevelt's assistant I was used to working for an organization in which I went where sent.

Any help you might care to give me would be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Creger:

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of May 16 regarding your interest in working with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. It will be a few days longer before the EEOC will be in a position to consider personnel for the staff and probably several months before any thought will be given to the establishment of regional offices. Please understand these are personal opinions and are not intended to reflect the position of EEOC.

It appears to me that the only job which the EEOC could offer you at an early date would be a position on the staff here in Washington depending upon their need for a person with your particular qualifications. They must first get a staff director and key personnel to form a working cadre to consider staff problems.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Dunbar,

Dr. Luther Holcomb has been named Vice-Chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and is in charge of the selection of personel. Brooks Hays had lunch with him last week to talk about me. Brooks telephoned me and said that the situation was very good.

John Stewart, assistant to the Vice-President, called me yesterday and said that he had just talked with Dr. Holcomb about me. Things have moved quite slowly, so far. The six department heads are all that have been named, so far. They start to work August 9th. However, they will immediately start to work on further staffing. Mr. Stewart said that it would probably be helpful to my cause if those wanting to help me would write Dr. Holcomb and put in a good word for me. If you would want to do this, I would certainly appreciate it.

I recently recieved a letter from Charles Morgan, and I noticed his address was also 5 Forsythe Street. If you see him you might tell him about my situation, and about what John Stewart wrote me. I think that Mr. Morgan would want to help me.

This is from a late-1963 interview with Lester Maddox, which I am re-using~~xm~~ (or rather, using a part of not used before). I thought you might be interested in the part about SRC. Boy, does he ever have you guys figured out. (The contents are not for use by anybody, of course.)

RC

What about equality ? "Well," he said, "I'm sure that history speaks for itself. We've never had an integrated society anywhere that was as successful as a segregated society, in any country any time during history. If you're equal you don't have to prove that you're equal." Negroes are inferior intellectually, he said, but they are progressing. "I think there will always be progress," he said, "and I think we're restricting progress with the Negro by teaching them to eat, and sleep, and to worship and educate -- to be successful in those areas -- that they've got to mix with the white people . . . . It would take centuries for them to bring themselves up. They can bring themselves up . . .. Africa has proved their capacity. The white man hasn't interfered with them there. And they have more resources, they had all the opportunities, and the only areass where they've ever developed is where the white man has moved in and guided, given the leadership. The same is true in Brazil. Look at Brazil. It's much larger, it has material wealth -- terrific -- and it hasn't really gone anywhere at all except in the areas where the United States has stepped in to provide financial aid." Was this because of integration ? "Yes."

When he talked of the rights movement, he invoked what almost sounded like a Marxist view. "I think the major cause behind the move to integrate is not to help the Negro," he said. (This time he switched his pronunciation from "Nigra" to "Nee-grow.") "It is to help the big financial people. Maybe the Carnegies and the Mellons and the Fords and the various big-money people -- they want to please the African countries in order to get into that market where there would be almost a virgin market for heavy industry, for appliances for homes, for furnishings, for clothing, and in order to do that they're trying to indicate to Africa and other parts of the world that the United States has come to be a leader for doing something for the Negro . . . ." Do big capitalists run the United States that way ? he was asked. "Yes, sir," he said, "through their foundations which keeps the Southern Regional Council in operation, various foundations have contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars to that particular organization, and in turn it is a kind of forefather over many other organizations -- helps to finance various interracial movements -- and Atlanta has turned into a headquarters for such organizations." (The regional council, headed by an interracial board of southerners, receives foundation funds for information and research, supports human relations councils, and engages in such projects as voter registration.)

What about Communists ? he was asked. Most of the more vociferous segregationists , such as Leander Perez of Louisiana, speak incessantly of Communists as the real mastersof the civil rights movement and Maddox himself often says Communists are responsible for integration. Yes, he said this time, Communists and the big capitalists are both responsible. "Communists are directly involved. So I would never try to say that the Communists are not involved. I think they're directly involved, but we still have the other area, too, of the men trying to gain more dollars."

White people must fight this, he said. "We are careful enough to protect our pets, our birds, our dogs, our livestock, our cattle -- the purity of them -- but we are foolish enough to not take the same precautions to protect our own people . I think

Nation Pays Tribute to Hugo Black

THE WHITE HOUSE

March 24, 1945

Dear Senator Barkley:
Alias "Dear Alben".

It seems to me a wise thing in these times to revive the public memory of the fundamental liberalism of Thomas Jefferson by honoring, in his name, a living southern liberal for distinguished service to the nation. Hugo L. Black deserves such honor. His own career has served to translate from history to public service the meaning of Jefferson's devotion to the rights of man.

May I join in this reaffirmation of Jefferson's liberalism in your tribute to a living public servant. America owes much to the South, and certainly not the smallest part of its debt is the heritage of the free mind and the liberal, democratic faith which we associate with the great Jefferson.

We never needed that faith more than now. A South which could lead once again in such a faith would serve not only itself, but, as once before long ago, the freedom and dignity of all men everywhere.

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black of Alabama received a tribute from the nation at the dinner given in his honor at the Hotel Statler, Washington, on April 3, where he was awarded the Thomas Jefferson medal by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, given to the Southerner making the year's outstanding contribution to the progress of the nation.

Among the speakers at the dinner, attended by one thousand prominent Washingtonians, were: Judge Fred M. Vinson, Director of War Mobilization; Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; Judge Sherman Minton; Dr. Frank P. Graham, President of the University of North Carolina; Senator Claude Pepper and Mr. Charles Houston of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Senator Alben Barkley was toastmaster.

Dr. Clark Foreman, President of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, presented the Thomas Jefferson Award to Justice Black, "as a man whose life and work are the expression of the finest liberalism of the South, and yet whose wide horizon knows no bounds of section, race or creed". Justice Black received the award for the second time, the first seven years ago for his outstanding contribution in the United States Senate, and on this occasion, in honor of his defense of democracy and the common man on the highest court of the nation.

Honoring Justice Black at the speakers' table were: Justice Wiley Rutledge, Justice Frank Murphy, Justice Stanley Reed and Justice William O. Douglas, as well as Judge James F. Byrnes, Secretary Harold Ickes, Secretary Frances Perkins, Philip Murray, Daniel J. Tobin and Dr. Channing Tobias.

The Dinner Committee was headed by Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and including as Honorary Vice-Chairmen: President Truman, Secretary Henry Wallace, Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Msgr. John A. Ryan, Dean William H. Hastie, Dr. Frank P. Graham, Barney Whatley, Mrs. Mary M. Bethune, Judge Jerome Frank, and Lowell Mellett.

Among the sponsors of the dinner were: Secretary Edward R. Stettinius, Secretary James Forrestal, Secretary Francis Biddle, Secretary Claude Wickard and Secretary Frank Walker; Senators Robert Wagner, Wayne Morse, James Mead, Scott Lucas and Joseph Guffey; Representative Estes Kefauver, David Lilienthal, Maury Maverick, William Clayton, Clifford Durr, Sidney Hillman, James G. Patton, Dr. Homer Rainey, Nelson Poynter, Jennings Perry, Josephus Daniels and Dr. Rufus Clement.

Black's Record Hailed

Excerpts from Dinner Addresses and Messages—

Dr. Frank P. Graham

President, University of North Carolina

Honorary President, Southern Conference for Human Welfare

I am very glad to be here tonight as a member of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare to speak our acknowledgment as Southerners, our pride as Southerners, in the life and career of Mr. Justice Black. I shall confine my remarks mainly to his work in behalf of the common man. So many millions of common men live in the South . . .

This great Justice in the midst of our southern and national modern industrial society places in the middle of it all, not mechanisms but personality, not machines, but human beings, not the fictions and symbols of the law but the economic realities and social needs of the common people, not the dividends of today but the children of tomorrow, for after all there is the kingdom that is to come.

Judge Fred M. Vinson

Director of War Mobilization

Senator Black did not accept part and parcel the established order of things. He insisted on looking beneath the surface to the underlying realities. He demanded that the people's heritage of natural resources be preserved as a public trust, to be developed in the common interest. This insistence bore fruit in TVA. He relentlessly exposed the efforts of powerful lobbies to pervert the processes of popular government; and his exposure assisted in the passage of corrective legislation.

At a time when collective bargaining was regarded by many as inconsistent with the American way of life, he insisted upon legislative protection for the rights of men in factory and mine, to associate themselves together for mutual aid and defense of their economic interests. This insistence bore fruit in the labor legislation which is now accepted as the foundation-rock of national labor policy. At a time when the abolition of the sweatshop was regarded by many as unconstitutional, Senator Black pioneered in the preparation and introduction of legislation to protect the common man against wages, hours and working conditions inconsistent with the basic premises of economic democracy. This work bore fruit, in the Fair Labor Standards Act, which bears his name, and which alone would have earned for him the grateful remembrance of all humble folk who live by toil and sweat. . . .

It is especially appropriate that these ceremonies should take place under the auspices of a Southern Conference for Human Welfare. A passion for human welfare is woven like a thread through Hugo Black's entire life.

Likewise he has been a pre-eminent Southerner. Every man is the product of his environment, and even those of us who live somewhat closer to the Mason and Dixon line like to believe that the South cannot fail to leave her imprint on any of her sons. Least of all has it failed to leave its imprint on Hugo Black. He has ever been conscious of his south—of her special social and economic problems, of her peculiar political traditions, of her sensitive and self-conscious pride.

And yet he has never been provincial. He has realized and led in helping his fellow-southerners to realize that the South cannot fulfill her destiny in isolation or in withdrawal from the destiny of the nation. Rather, he has struggled to obtain for the South a fuller heritage and a fuller opportunity to contribute to the enlargement and enrichment of that heritage.

Thus he has transcended the limitations of sectionalism and established himself as an unmistakably Southern but genuinely national statesman.

Mr. Charles H. Houston

Attorney, Vice-President, American Council on Race Relations

Justice Black has grown to be a great stabilizing force in the Negro's struggle for equal rights and an inspiration to all forces striving to achieve true democracy in America . . .

Mr. Justice Black's record on the United States Supreme Court is its own testimonial. Invariably he has taken the stand, whether it involved denial to Negroes of equal educational opportunity, jury service, equal accommodations in public transportation, exercise of the franchise, picketing for jobs or fair representation of minority rights under collective bargaining statutes, that constitutional guarantees must be respected . . . The constitution under his interpretation is a dynamic influence fostering, and not choking, all reasonable attempts of the people to adapt governmental controls to the variable conditions and complexities of modern life.

The greatest compliment I can pay to Mr. Justice Black is to say that he is a southerner who is sufficiently sure of himself, who is sufficiently sure of the South and its people, who believes in democracy so deeply, that he is willing to give the future its chance.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt

I know that all of us here are deeply conscious of the service which Justice Black has rendered to the liberal causes which everybody here honors in his heart, and we are happy, therefore, to do him honor tonight. We are happy that the Southern Conference for Human Welfare has given Justice Black this award. The Thomas Jefferson Award must mean a great deal, I think, to any Southerner because Thomas Jefferson, to all of us who believe in liberal ideas in this country, will always be the great leader of our early days, who still remains the great leader of those who want justice for the common man, justice for all the people and a chance to earn a good life, a chance to stand equally as citizens of the United States, for all the people of this country.

So, Justice Black, I am very happy to have the chance to say to you, as my husband did, how happy he is for your honor tonight, in which we all take pride.

Judge Sherman Minton

Circuit Court of Appeals

Senator Black came to the Senate with the experience of a great trial lawyer, and bearing in his sensitive nature deep seared the scars left from his experience among the tenant farmers of the hill country and the wage slaves of industry. He knew it was power in the hands of the few that was responsible for the oppression of the many and the ever grinding down of the weak, the poor and unorganized masses. . .

Power in the hands of the few always leads to the oppression of the many. That was his yardstick. Economic power in the hands of the few meant slavery. He knew that the War between the States had freed the Negroes, but it had not abolished slavery on the cotton plantations and in the lumber mills and factories of the South, any more than it had in the sweat shops of the New York garment workers, the New England textile mills and the coal mines of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky. Wherever men used power to oppress his fellows, Senator Black would use whatever power he possessed to break that oppression. He had fought the good fight of liberalism at every turn of his senatorial career.

He has been slow to interfere with the acts of state legislatures when only property interests were involved, but he has voted to strike down state legislation in a high percentage of cases where civil rights and liberties were involved. He has been quick to leave state courts to declare and apply their own law where life or liberty were not involved, but he strikes with a furious blow a violation of one's civil liberties. He respects a jury's verdict with a fidelity heretofore unknown when the issue is damages, but no jury's findings binds him when the powerful oppress the weak, poor and friendless or the victims of passion, discrimination or prejudice.

Senator Claude Pepper

United States Senator

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare has chosen well to honor the greatest Southerner since the birth of Woodrow Wilson, in Hugo L. Black. Hugo Black will be remembered not as a radical, but as a conservator, a conservator of human values, of those things of the body and the mind and the spirit and of our resources which last forever in the indissoluble and indestructible quality of the good.

Hugo Black represents the South, for in its heart the South feels as Hugo Black feels. Yes, it has been choked and stifled, and it has been belied and misunderstood, but the throbbing heart of the South is proud of Hugo Black and down deep they cherish the aspiration that his tribe may increase.

Senator Alben Barkley

United States Senator

I greatly appreciate the honor accorded me by the suggestion that I act as Toastmaster at this testimonial dinner to Justice Hugo Black. I came into the Senate with him on the 4th of March, 1927. Not only did we become great personal friends, but we became identified during his entire incumbency in the Senate with what we have come to call liberalism in government. . . .

I wish to congratulate the Southern Conference for Human Welfare for the great work it has done, is doing and will continue to do.

Msgr. John O'Grady

We thank Thee for the strength Thou has given to this nation and its leaders in this the most critical period of its history. We thank Thee especially this evening for the many favors Thou hast given to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The objectives of this Conference are especially dear to Thy divine heart. They are a reflection in human relations of Thy Fatherhood and of the brotherhood of all men in Thee. This Conference accepts the principle that every human personality is a reflection of the Divine . . . We ask that we may be granted the strength and the courage to carry on with a new vigor, a new determination in a sacred cause which transcends all human values. Amen. . . . . Benediction.

Justice Black Calls for World Resurgence of Democratic Faith

Acceptance of Thomas Jefferson Award

Mr. Toastmaster, Mrs. Roosevelt, and, may I say, friends, who have gathered here this evening:

It would be impossible for one not to be deeply moved by the kind expressions and the warm manifestations of friendship which have come to me this evening. I cannot, however, accept the award as a mere personal offering to me. It implies to me rather a recognition that we, all of us, share common hopes and ideals, all of which rest on a belief in the essential dignity of men. It was that belief, I think, which led Jefferson to strive unceasingly that our nation might establish, in his words, "equal and exact justice to all men of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political." A government with this faith is democracy at its best; a government without this faith leads straight to fascism.

This democratic ideal has sustained our nation for more than a century and a half. Unfortunately, our daily practices sometimes have fallen short of the dream, but viewed in the broad perspective of history, there is little reason for us to doubt that our long-run movement has been in the direction of our goal.

The democratic faith is now being tested in the crucible of war. It has not been and it will not be found wanting. Intelligence, energy, unity and faith will bring victory to our cause. But when victory comes on the battlefield, there will yet remain very much to do. The laying down of arms could again be but an armistice between this and a bloodier, more destructive war to snuff out the lives of the next generation. Should this occur, democracy will have achieved a hollow victory, for peace, not war, is the ultimate goal toward which democracy must move.

Idealism, a hope that the future may be better than the past, is part and parcel of the democratic faith. In that hope this nation was founded. While it abides in the human heart, men of good will must strive to outlaw the scourge of war. The peace to which we now look will further test that democratic faith. It will not be enough to stamp out anti-democratic practices in the land of our enemies. The conditions which created fascism there must not pass unnoticed here. Their first and most dangerous symptom is always the same everywhere: an abandonment of equal justice to all, the placing of some groups in a preferred class of citizenship at the expense of other groups. True democracy must continue to war on all such beliefs.

Like most of the great values of life, the ideals of democracy, and peace can be won or maintained only by constant struggle, for democracy is a fighting thing. No man with a conscience can be so far removed from that struggle as not to feel the compulsion of joining in it. Each of us in our own way has a job to do in that fight.

The principles of fascism and all that fascism stands for, with its barbaric denial of human values, must be obliterated and destroyed. To accomplish this, there must be an emphatic reassertion of democratic values and a resurgence of democratic faith at home and throughout the world. There WILL be, and all of you will join in bringing that to pass.

'The Living Law'

Under our constitutional system, courts stand against any winds that blow as havens of refuge for those who might otherwise suffer because they are helpless, weak, outnumbered or bcause they are nonconforming victims of prejudice and public excitement . . . No higher duty, no more solemn responsibility, rests upon this Court than that of translating into living law and maintaining this constitutional shield deliberately planned and inscribed for the benefit of every human being subject to our Constitution—of whatever race, creed or persuasion.—Chambers v. Florida, 1938.

'Equal Protection to All'

It is part of the established tradition in the use of juries as instruments of public justice that the jury be a body truly representative of the community. For racial discrimination to result in the exclusion from jury service of otherwise qualified groups not only violates our Constitution and the laws enacted under it, but is at war with our basic concepts of a democratic society and a representative government. . . . If there has been discrimination, whether accomplished ingeniously or ingenuously, the conviction cannot stand.—Smith v. Texas, 1940.

'Cooperate . . . Completely'

Cooperation with our fighting Allies is of equal importance with cooperation among ourselves. This cooperation must be complete and sincere. But for them, who can say what disasters might have befallen us? But for China's five embattled years, all of Alaska, and not merely its western tip, might by now be in the hands of the Japanese. But for England's refusal to yield when in the summer and fall of 1940 she bravely stood alone against the full force of Hitler's fury, our east coast today might be another Coventry. But for Russia's millions of heroic dead, the whistling of falling bombs might already be as familiar to us as to the people of London.

The debt we owe to our fighting Allies we can never fully repay; the very least we can do is cooperate with them completely and sincerely.

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
WASHINGTON 25, D. C.

In the Matter of EDITORIALIZING BY BROADCAST LICENSEES. } DOCKET NO. 8516

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION

BY THE COMMISSION (CHAIRMAN COY AND COMMISSIONER WALKER NOT PARTICIPATING; ADDITIONAL VIEWS BY COMMISSIONER WEBSTER; SEPARATE OPINION BY COMMISSIONER JONES; COMMISSIONER HENNOCK DISSENTING):

1. This report is issued by the Commission in connection with its hearings on the above entitled matter held at Washington, D. C., on March 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, and April 19, 20, and 21, 1948. The hearing had been ordered on the Commission's own motion on September 5, 1947, because of our belief that further clarification of the Commissioner's position with respect to the obligations of broadcast licensees in the field of broadcasts of news, commentary and opinion was advisable. It was believed that in view of the apparent confusion concerning certain of the Commission's previous statements on these vital matters by broadcast licensees and members of the general public, as well as the professed disagreement on the part of some of these persons with earlier Commission pronouncements, a reexamination and restatement of its views by the Commission would be desirable. And in order to provide an opportunity to interested persons and organizations to acquaint the Commission with their views, prior to any Commission determination, as to the proper resolution of the difficult and complex problems involved in the presentation of radio news and comment in a democracy, it was designated for public hearing before the Commission en banc on the following issues:

1. To determine whether the expression of editorial opinions by broadcast station licensees on matters of public interest and controversy is consistent with their obligations to operate their stations in the public interest.

2. To deermine the relationship between any such editorial expression and the affirmative obligation of the licensees to insure that a fair and equal presentation of all sides of controversial issues is made over their facilities.

2. At the hearings testimony was received from some 49 witnesses representing the broadcasting industry and various interested organizations and members of the public. In addition, written statements of their position on the matter were placed into the record by 21 persons and organizations who were unable to appear and testify in person. The various witnesses and statements brought forth for the Commission's consideration, arguments on every side of both of the questions involved in the hearing. Because of the importance of the issues considered in the hearing, and because of the possible confusion which may have existed in the past concerning the policies applicable to the matters which were the subject of the hearing, we have deemed it advisable to set forth in detail and at some length our conclusions as to the basic considerations relevant to the expression of editorial opinion by broadcast licensees and the relationship of any such expression to the general obligations of broadcast licensees with respect to the presentation of programs involving controversial issues.

3. In approaching the issues upon which this proceeding has been held, we believe that the paramount and controlling consideration is the relationship between the American system of broadcasting carried on through a large number of private licensees upon whom devolves the responsibility for the selection and presentation of program material, and the congressional mandate that this licensee responsibility is to be exercised in the interests of, and as a trustee for the public at large which retains ultimate control over the channels of radio and television communications. One important aspect of this relationship, we believe, results from the fact that the needs and interests of the general public with respect to programs devoted to new commentary and opinion can only be satisfied by making available to them for their consideration and acceptance or rejection, of varying and conflicting views held by responsible elements of the community. And it is in the light of these basic concepts that the problems of insuring fairness in the presentation of news and opinion and the place in such a picture of any expression of the views of the station licensee as such must be considered.

4. It is apparent that our system of broadcasting, under which private persons and organizations are licensed to provide broadcasting service to the various communities and regions, imposes responsibility in the selection and presentation of radio program material upon such licensees. Congress has recognized that the requests for radio time may far exceed the amount of time reasonably available for distribution by broadcasters. It provided, therefore, in Section 3 (h) of the Communications Act that a person engaged in radio broadcasting shall not be deemed a common carrier. It is the licensee, therefore, who must determine what percentage of the limited broadcast day should appropriately be devoted to news and discussion or consideration of public issues, rather than to the other legitimate services of radio broadcasting, and who must select or be responsible for the selection of the particular news items to be reported or the particular local, State, national or international issues or questions of public interest to be considered, as well as the person or persons to comment or analyze the news or to discuss or debate the issues chosen as topics for radio consideration, "The life of each community involves a multitude of interests some dominant and all pervasive such as interest in public affairs, education and similar matters and some highly specialized and limited to few. The practical day-to-day problem with which every licensee is faced is one of striking a balance between these various interests to reflect them in a program service which is useful to the community, and which will in some way fulfill the needs and interests of the many." Capital Broadcasting Company, 4 Pike & Fischer, R.R. 21; The Northern Corporation (WMEX), 4 Pike & Fischer, R.R. 333, 338. And both the Commission and the courts have stressed that this responsibility devolves upon the individual licensees, and can neither be delegated by the licensee to any network or other person or group, or be unduly fettered by contractual arrangements restricting the licensee in his free exercise of his independent judgments. National Broadcasting Company v. United States, 319 U.S. 190 (upholding the Commission's chain broadcasting regulations, Section 3.101–3.108, 3.231–3.238, 3.631–3.638), Churchhill Tabernacle v. Federal Communications Commission, 160 F. 2d. 244 (See, rules and regulations, Sections 3.109, 3.239, 3.639); Allen T. Simmons v. Federal Communications Commission, 169 F. 2d. 670, certiorari denied 335 U.S. 846.

5. But the inevitability that there must be some choosing between various claimants for access to a licensee's microphone, does not mean that the licensee is free to utilize his facilities as he sees fit or in his own particular interests as contrasted with the interests of the general public. The Communications Act of 1934, as amended, makes clear that licenses are to be issued only where the public interest, convenience or necessity would be served thereby. And we think it is equally clear that one of the basic elements of any such operation is the maintenance of radio and television as a medium of freedom of speech and freedom of expression for the people of the Nation as a whole. Section 301 of the Communications Act provides that it is the purpose of the act to maintain the control of the United States over all channels of interstate and foreign commerce. Section 326 of the act provides that this control of the United States shall not result in any impairment of the right of free speech by means of such radio communications. It would be inconsistent with these express provisions of the act to assert that, while it is the purpose of the act to maintain the control of the United States over radio channels, but free from any regulation or condition which interferes with the right of free speech, nevertheless persons who are granted limited rights to be licensees of radio stations, upon a finding under Sections 307 (a) and 309 of the act that the public interest, convenience, or necessity would be served thereby, may themselves make radio unavailable as a medium of free speech. The legislative history of the Communications Act and its predecessor, the Radio Act of 1927 shows, on the contrary, that Congress intended that radio stations should not be used for the private interest, whims, or caprices of the particular persons who have been granted licenses, but in manner which will serve the community generally and the various groups which make up the community.[1] And the courts have consistently upheld Commission

[1] Thus in the Congressional debates leading to the enactment of the Radio Act of 1927 Congressman (later Senator) White stated (67 Con. Rec. 5479, March 12, 1926):

"We have reached the definite conclusion that the right of all our people to enjoy this means of communication can be preserved only by the repudiation of the idea underlying the 1912 action giving recognition to and fulfilling that intent of Congress. KFAB Broadcasting Association v. Federal Radio Commission, 47 F. 2d 670; Trinty Methodist Church, South v. Federal Radio Commission, 62 F. 2d 850, certiorari denied, 288 U.S. 599.

6. It is axiomatic that one of the most vital questions of mass communication in a democracy is the development of an informed public opinion through the public dissemination of news and ideas concerning the vital public issues of the day. Basically, it is in recognition of the great contribution which radio can make in the advancement of this purpose that portions of the radio spectrum are allocated to that form of radio communications known as radiobroadcasting. Unquestionably, then, the standard of public interest, convenience and necessity as applied to radiobroadcasting must be interpreted in the light of this basic purpose. The Commission has consequently recognized the necessity for licensees to devote a reasonable percentage of their broadcast time to the presentation of news and programs devoted to the consideration and discussion of public issues of interest in the community served by the particular station. And we have recognized, with respect to such programs, the paramount right of the public in a free society to be informed and to have presented to it for acceptance or rejection the different attitudes and viewpoints concerning these vital and often controversial issues which are held by the various groups which make up the community.[2] It is this right of the public to be informed, rather than any right on the part of the Government, any broadcast licensee or any individual member of the public to broadcast his own particular views on any matter, which is the foundation stone of the American system of broadcasting.

7. This affirmative responsibility on the part of broadcast licensees to provide a reasonable amount of time for the presentation over their facilities of programs devoted to the discussion and consideration of public issues has been reaffirmed by this Commission in a long series of decisions. The United Broadcasting Co. (WHKC) case, 10 FCC 675, emphasized that this duty includes the making of reasonable provision for the discussion of controversial issues of public importance in the community served, and to make sufficient time available for full discussion thereof. The Scott case, 3 Pike & Fischer, radio regulation 259, stated our conclusions that this duty extends to all subjects of substantial importance to the community coming within the scope of free law that anyone who will, may transmit and by the assertion in its stead of the doctrine that the right of the public to service is superior to the right of any individual to use the other * * * the recent radio conference met this issue squarely. It recognized that in the present state of scientific development there must be a limitation upon the number of broadcasting stations and it recommended that licenses should be issued only to those stations whose operation would render a benefit to the public, are necessary in the public interest or would contribute to the development of the art. This principle was approved by every witness before your committee. We have written it into the bill. If enacted into law, the broadcasting privilege will not be a right of selfishness. It will rest upon an assurance of public interest to be served." (Italics added.)

And this view that the interest of the listening public rather than the private interests of particular licensees was reemphasized as recently as June 9, 1948, in a unanimous report of the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on S. 1333 (80th Cong.) which would have amended the present Communications Act in certain respects. See S. Rept. No. 1567, 80th Cong. 2nd Sess., pp. 14–15.

discussion under the first amendment without regard to personal views and opinions of the licensees on the matter, or any determination by the licensee as to the possible unpopularity of the views to be expressed on the subject matter to be discussed among particular elements of the station's listening audience. Cf., National Broadcasting Company v. United States, 319 U.S. 190; Allen T. Simmons, 3 Pike & Fischer, R.R. 1029, affirmed; Simmons v. Federal Communications Commission, 169 F. 2d 670, certiorari denied, 335 U.S. 846; Bay State Beacon, 3 Pike & Fischer, R.R. 1455, affirmed; Bay State Beacon v. Federal Communications Commission, U.S. App. D.C., decided December 20, 1948; Petition of Sam Morris, 3 Pike & Fischer, R.R. 154; Thomas N. Beach, 3 Pike & Fischer R.R. 1784. And the Commission has made clear that in such presentation of news and comment the public interest requires that the licensee must operate on a basis of overall fairness, making his facilities available for the expression of the contrasting views of all responsible elements in the community on the various issues which arise. Mayflower Broadcasting Co., 8 F. C. C. 333; United Broadcasting Co. (WHKC) 10 F. C. C. 515; Cf. WBNX Broadcasting Co., Inc., 4 Pike & Fischer, R.R. 244 (memorandum opinion). Only where the licensee's discretion in the choice of the particular programs to be broadcast over his facilities is exercised so as to afford a reasonable opportunity for the presentation of all responsible positions on matters of sufficient importance to be afforded radio time can radio be maintained as a medium of freedom of speech for the people as a whole. These concepts, of course, do restrict the licensee's freedom to utilize his station in whatever manner he chooses but they do so in order to make possible the maintenance of radio as a medium of freedom of speech for the general public.

8. It has been suggested in the course of the hearings that licensees have an affirmative obligation to insure fair presentation of all sides of any controversial issue before any time may be allocated to the discussion or consideration of the matter. On the other hand, arguments have been advanced in support of the proposition that the licensee's sole obligation to the public is to refrain from suppressing or excluding any responsible point of view from access to the radio. We are of the opinion, however, that any rigid requirement that licensees adhere to either of these extreme prescriptions for proper station programing techniques would seriously limit the ability of licensees to serve the public interest. Forums and roundtable discussions, while often excellent techniques of presenting a fair cross section of differing viewpoints on a given issue, are not the only appropriate devices for radio discussion, and in some circumstances may not be particularly appropriate or advantageous. Moreover, in many instances the primary "controversy" will be whether or not the particular problem should be discussed at all; in such circumstances, where the licensee has determined that the subject is of sufficient import to receive broadcast attention, it would obviously not be in the public interest for spokesmen for one of the opposing points of view to be able to exercise a veto power over the entire presentation by refusing to broadcast its position. Fairness in such circumstances might require no more than that the licensee make a reasonable effort to secure responsible representation of the particular position and, if it fails in this effort, to continue to make available its facilities to the spokesmen for such position in the event that, after the original programs are broadcast, they then decide to avail themselves of a right to reply to present their contrary opinion. It should be remembered, moreover, that discussion of public issues will not necessarily be confined to questions which are obviously controversial in nature, and, in many cases, programs initiated with no thought on the part of the licensee of their possibly controversial nature will subsequently arouse controversy and opposition of a substantial nature which will merit presentation of opposing views. In such cases, however, fairness can be preserved without undue difficulty since the facilities of the station can be made available to the spokesmen for the groups wishing to state views in opposition to those expressed in the original presentation when such opposition becomes manifest.

9. We do not believe, however, that the licensee's obligations to serve the public interest can be met merely through the adoption of a general policy of not refusing to broadcast opposing views where a demand is made of the station for broadcast time. If, as we believe to be the case, the public interest is best served in a democracy through the ability of the people to hear expositions of the various positions taken by responsible groups and individuals on particular topics and to choose between them, it is evident that broadcast licensees have an affirmative duty generally to encourage and implement the broadcast of all sides of controversial public issues over their facilities, over and beyond their obligation to make available on demand opportunities for the expression of opposing views. It is clear that any approximation of fairness in the presentation of any controversy will be difficulty if not impossible of achievement unless the licensee plays a conscious and positive role in bringing about balanced presentation of the opposing viewpoints.

10. It should be recognized that there can be no one all embracing formula which licensees can hope to apply to insure the fair and balanced presentation of all public issues. Different issues will inevitably require different techniques of presentation and production. The licensee will in each instance be called upon to exercise his best judgment and good sense in determining what subjects should be considered, the particular format of the programs to be devoted to each subject, the different shades of opinion to be presented, and the spokesmen for each point of view. In determining whether to honor specific requests for time, the station will inevitably be confronted with such questions as whether the subject is worth considering, whether the viewpoint of the requesting party has already received a sufficient amount of broadcast time, or whether there may not be other available groups or individuals who might be more appropriate spokesmen for the particular point of view than the person making the request. The latter's personal involvement in the controversy may also be a factor which must be considered, for elementary considerations of fairness may dictate that time be allocated to a person or group which has been specifically attacked over the station, where otherwise no such obligation would exist. Undoubtedly, over a period of time some licensees may make honest errors of judgment. But there can be no doubt that any licensee honestly desiring to live up to its obligation to serve the public interest and making a reasonable effort to do so, will be able to achieve a fair and satisfactory resolution of these problems in the light of the specific facts.

11. It is against this background that we must approach the question of "editorialization"—the use of radio facilities by the licensees thereof for the expression of the opinions and ideas of the licensee on the various controversial and significant issues of interest to the members of the general public afforded radio (or television) service by the particular station. In considering this problem it must be kept in mind that such editorial expression may take many forms ranging from the overt statement of position by the licensee in person or by his acknowledged spokesmen to the selection and presentation of news editors and commentators sharing the licensee's general opinions or the making available of the licensee's facilities, either free of charge or for a fee to persons or organizations reflecting the licensee's viewpoint either generally or with respect to specific issues. It should also be clearly indicated that the question of the relationship of broadcast editorialization, as defined above, to operation in the public interest, is not identical with the broader problem of assuring "fairness" in the presentation of news, comment or opinion, but is rather one specific facet of this larger problem.

12. It is clear that the licensee's authority to determine the specific programs to be broadcast over his station gives him an opportunity, not available to other persons, to insure that his personal viewpoint on any particular issue is presented in his station's broadcasts, whether or not these views are expressly identified with the licensee. And, in the absence of governmental restraint, he would, if he so choose, be able to utilize his position as a broadcast licensee to weight the scales in line with his personal views, or even directly or indirectly to propagandize in behalf of his particular philosophy or views on the various public issues to the exclusion of any contrary opinions. Such action can be effective and persuasive whether or not it is accompanied by any editorialization in the narrow sense of overt statement of particular opinions and views identified as those of licensee.

13. The narrower question of whether any overt editorialization or advocacy by broadcast licensees, identified as such is consonant with the operation of their stations in the public interest, resolves itself, primarily into the issue of whether such identification of comment or opinion broadcast over a radio or television station with the licensee, as such, would inevitably or even probably result in such overemphasis on the side of any particular controversy which the licensee chooses to espouse as to make impossible any reasonably balanced presentation of all sides of such issues or to render ineffective the available safeguards of that overall fairness which is the essential element of operation in the public interest. We do not believe that any such consequence is either inevitable or probable, and we have therefore come to the conclusion that overt licensee editorialization, within reasonable limits and subject to the general requirements of fairness detailed above, is not contrary to the public interest.

14. The Commission has given careful consideration to contentions of those witnesses at the hearing who stated their belief that any overt editorialization or advocacy by broadcast licensee is per se contrary to the public interest. The main arguments advanced by these witnesses were that overt editorialization by broadcast licensees would not be consistent with the attainment of balanced presentations since there was a danger that the institutional good will and the production resources at the disposal of broadcast licensees would inevitably influence public opinion in favor of the positions advocated in the name of the licensee and that, having taken an open stand on behalf of one position in a given controversy, a license is not likely to give a fair break to the opposition. We believe, however, that these fears are largely misdirected, and that they stem from a confusion of the question of overt advocacy in the name of the licensee, with the broader issue of insuring that the station's broadcasts devoted to the consideration of public issues will provide the listening public with a fair and balanced presentation of differing viewpoints on such issues, without regard to the particular views which may be held or expressed by the licensee. Considered, as we believe they must be, as just one of several types of presentation of public issues, to be afforded their appropriate and nonexclusive place in the station's total schedule of programs devoted to balanced discussion and consideration of public issues, we do not believe that programs in which the licensee's personal opinions are expressed are intrinsically more or less subject to abuse than any other program devoted to public issues. If it be true that station good will and licensee prestige, where it exists, may give added weight to opinion expressed by the licensee, it does not follow that such opinion should be excluded from the air any more than it should in the case of any individual or institution which over a period of time has built up a reservoir of good will or prestige in the community. In any competition for public acceptance of ideas, the skills and resources of the proponents, and opponents will always have some measure of effect in producing the results sought. But it would not be suggested that they should be denied expression of their opinions over the air by reason of their particular assets. What is against the public interest is for the licensee "to stack the cards" by a deliberate selection of spokesmen for opposing points of view to favor one viewpoint at the expense of the other, whether or not the views of those spokesmen are identified as the views of the licensee or of others. Assurance of fairness must in the final analysis be achieved, not by the exclusion of particular views because of the source of the views, or the forcefulness with which the view is expressed, but by making the microphone available, for the presentation of contrary views without deliberate restrictions designed to impede equally forceful presentation.

15. Similarly, while licensees will in most instances have at their disposal production resources making possible graphic and persuasive techniques for forceful presentation of ideas, their utilization for the promulgation of the licensee's personal viewpoints will not necessarily or automatically lead to unfairness or lack of balance. While uncontrolled utilization of such resources for the partisan ends of the licensee might conceivably lead to serious abuses, such abuses could as well exist where the station's resources are used for the sole use of his personal spokesmen. The prejudicial or unfair use of broadcast production resources would, in either case, be contrary to the public interest.

16. The Commission is not persuaded that a station's willingness to stand up and be counted on these particular issues upon which the licensee has a definite position may not be actually helpful in providing and maintaining a climate of fairness and equal opportunity for the expression of contrary views. Certainly the public has less to fear from the open partisan than from the covert propagandist. On many issues, of sufficient importance to be allocated broadcast time, the station licensee may have no fixed opinion or viewpoint which he wishes to state or advocate. But where the licensee, himself, believes strongly that one side of a controversial issue is correct and should prevail, prohibition of his expression of such position will not of itself insure fair presentation of that issue over his station's facilities, nor would open advocacy necessarily prevent an overall fair presentation of the subject. It is not a sufficient answer to state that a licensee should occupy the position of an impartial umpire, where the licensee is in fact partial. In the absence of a duty to present all sides of controversial issues, overt editorialization by station licensees could conceivably result in serious abuse. But where, as we believe to be the case under the Communications Act, such a responsibility for a fair and balanced presentation of controversial public issues exists, we cannot see how the open espousal of one point of view by the licensee should necessarily prevent him from affording a fair opportunity for the presentation of contrary positions or make more difficult the enforcement of the statutory standard of fairness upon any licensee.

17. It must be recognized, however, that the licensee's opportunity to express his own views as part of a general presentation of varying opinions on particular controversial issues, does not justify or empower any licensee to exercise his authority over the selection of program material to distort or suppress the basic factual information upon which any truly fair and free discussion of public issues must necessarily depend. The basis for any fair consideration of public issues, and particularly those of a controversial nature, is the presentation of news and information concerning the basic facts of the controversy in as complete and impartial a manner as possible. A licensee would be abusing his position as public trustee of these important means of mass communication were he to withhold from expression over his facilities relevant news or facts concerning a controversy or to slant or distort the presentation of such news. No discussion of the issues involved in any controversy can be fair or in the public interest where such discussion must take place in a climate of false or misleading information concerning the basic facts of the controversy.

18. During the course of the hearing, fears have been expressed that any effort on the part of the Commission to enforce a reasonable standard of fairness and impartiality would inevitably require the Commission to take a stand on the merits of the particular issues considered in the programs broadcast by the several licensees, as well as exposing the licensees to the risk of loss of license because of "honest mistakes" which they may make in the exercise of their judgment with respect to the broadcasts of programs of a controversial nature. We believe that these fears are wholly without justification, and are based on either an assumption of abuse of power by the Commission or a lack of proper understanding of the role of the Commission, under the Communications Act, in considering the program service of broadcast licensees in passing upon applications for renewal of license. While this Commission and its predecessor, the Federal Radio Commission, have, from the beginning of effective radio regulation in 1927, properly considered that a licensee's overall program service is one of the primary indicia of his ability to serve the public interest, actual consideration of such service has always been limited to a determination as to whether the licensee's programing, taken as a whole, demonstrates that the licensee is aware of his listening public and is willing and able to make an honest and reasonable effort to live up to such obligations. The action of the station in carrying or refusing to carry any particular program is of relevance only as the station's actions with respect to such programs fits into its overall pattern of broadcast service, and must be considered in the light of its other program activities. This does not mean, of course, that stations may, with impunity, engage in a partisan editorial campaign on a particular issue or series of issues provided only that the remainder of its program schedule conform to the statutory norm of fairness; a licensee may not utilize the portion of its broadcast service which conforms to the statutory requirements as a cover or shield for other programing which fails to meet the minimum standards of operation in the public interest. But it is clear that the standard of public interest is not so rigid that an honest mistake or error in judgment on the part of a licensee will be or should be condemned where his overall record demonstrates a reasonable effort to provide a balanced presentation of comment and opinion on such issues. The question is necessarily one of the reasonableness of the station's actions, not whether any absolute standard of fairness has been achieved. It does not require any appraisal of the merits of the particular issue to determine whether reasonable efforts have been made to present both sides of the question. Thus, in appraising the record of a station in presenting programs concerning a controversial bill pending before the Congress of the United States, if the record disclosed that the licensee had permitted only advocates of the bill's enactment to utilize its facilities to the exclusion of its opponents, it is clear that no independent appraisal of the bill's merits by the Commission would be required to reach a determination that the licensee has misconstrued its duties and obligations as a person licensed to serve the public interest. The Commission has observed, in considering this general problem that "the duty to operate in the public interest is no esoteric mystery, but is essentially a duty to operate a radio station with good judgment and good faith guided by a reasonable regard for the interests of the community to be served." Northern Corporation (WMEX), 4 Pike & Fischer, R.R. 333, 339. Of course, some cases will be clearer than others, and the Commission in the exercise of its functions may be called upon to weigh conflicting evidence to determine whether the licensee has or has not made reasonable efforts to present a fair and well-rounded presentation of particular public issues. But the standard of reasonableness and the reasonable approximation of a statutory norm is not an arbitrary standard incapable of administrative or judicial determination, but, on the contrary, one of the basic standards of conduct in numerous fields of Anglo-American law. Like all other flexible standards of conduct, it is subject to abuse and arbitrary interpretation and application by the duly authorized reviewing authorities. But the possibility that a legitimate standard of legal conduct might be abused or arbitrarily applied by capricious governmental authority is not and cannot be a reason for abandoning the standard itself. And broadcast licensees are protected against any conceivable abuse of power by the Commission in the exercising of its licensing authority by the procedural safeguards of the Communications Act and the Administrative Procedure Act, and by the right of appeal to the courts from final action claimed to be arbitrary or capricious.

19. There remains for consideration the allegation made by a few of the witnesses in the hearing that any action by the Commission in this field enforcing a basic standard of fairness upon broadcast licensees necessarily constitutes an "abridgment of the right of free speech" in violation of the first amendment of the United States Constitution. We can see no sound basis for any such conclusion. The freedom of speech protected against governmental abridgment by the first amendment does not extend any privilege to government licensees of means of public communications to exclude the expression of opinions and ideas with which they are in disagreement. We believe, on the contrary, that a requirement that broadcast licensees utilize their franchises in a manner in which the listening public may be assured of hearing varying opinions on the paramount issues facing the American people is within both the spirit and letter of the first amendment. As the Supreme Court of the United States has pointed out in the Associated Press monopoly case:

It would be strange indeed, however, if the grave concern for freedom of the press which prompted adoption of the first amendment should be read as a command that the Government was without power to protect that freedom * * * That amendment rests on the assumption that the widest possible dissemination of information from diverse and antagonistic sources is essential to the welfare of the public, that a free press is a condition of free society. Surely a command that the Government itself shall not impede the free flow of ideas does not afford nongovernmental combinations a refuge if they impose restraints upon that constitutionally guaranteed freedom. Freedom to publish means freedom for all and not for some. Freedom to publish is guaranteed by the Constitution but freedom to combine to keep others from publishing is not. (Associated Press v. United States, 326 U.S. 1 at p. 20.)

20. We fully recognize that freedom of the radio is included among the freedoms protected against governmental abridgment by the first amendment. United States v. Paramount Pictures, Inc., et al, 334 U.S. 131, 166. But this does not mean that the freedom of the people as a whole to enjoy the maximum possible utilization of this medium of mass communication may be subordinated to the freedom of any single person to exploit the medium for his own private interest. Indeed, it seems indisputable that full effect can only be given to the concept of freedom of speech on the radio by giving precedence to the right of the American public to be informed on all sides of public questions over any such individual exploitation for private purposes. Any regulation of radio, especially a system of limited licensees, is in a real sense an abridgment of the inherent freedom of persons to express themselves by means of radio communications. It is however, a necessary and constitutional abridgment in order to prevent chaotic interference from destroying the great potential of this medium for public enlightment and entertainment. National Broadcasting Company v. United States, 319 U. S. 190, 296; cf, Federal Radio Commission v. Nelson Brothers Bond & Mortgage Co., 289 U. S. 266; Fisher's Blend Station, Inc. v. State Tax Commission, 277 U. S. 650. Nothing in the Communications Act or its history supports any conclusion that the people of the Nation, acting through Congress, have intended to surrender or diminish their paramount rights in the air waves, including access to radio broadcasting facilities to a limited number of private licensees to be used as such licensees see fit, without regard to the paramount interests of the people. The most significant meaning of freedom of the radio is the right of the American people to listen to this great medium of communications free from any governmental dictation as to what they can or cannot hear and free alike from similar restraints by private licensees.

21. To recapitulate, the Commission believes that under the American system of broadcasting the individual licensees of radio stations have the responsibility for determining the specific program material to be broadcast over their stations. This choice, however, must be exercised in a manner consistent with the basic policy of the Congress that radio be maintained as a medium of free speech for the general public as a whole rather than as an outlet for the purely personal or private interests of the licensee. This requires that licensees devote a reasonable percentage of their broadcasting time to the discussion of public issues of interest in the community served by their stations and that such programs be designed so that the public has a reasonable opportunity to hear different opposing positions on the public issues of interest and importance in the community. The particular format best suited for the presentation of such programs in a manner consistent with the public interest must be determined by the licensee in the light of the facts of each individual situation. Such presentation may include the identified expression of the licensee's personal viewpoint as part of the more general presentation of views or comments on the various issues, but the opportunity of licensees to present such views as they may have on matters of controversy may not be utilized to achieve a partisan or one-sided presentation of issues. Licensee editorialization is but one aspect of freedom of expression by means of radio. Only insofar as it is exercised in conformity with the paramount right of the public to hear a reasonably balanced presentation of all responsible viewpoints on particular issues can such editorialization be considered to be consistent with the licensee's duty to operate in the public interest. For the licensee is a trustee impressed with the duty of preserving for the public generally radio as a medium of free expression and fair presentation.

ADDITIONAL VIEWS OF COMMISSIONER E. M. WEBSTER

I adopt the majority opinion and file the following additional views. In my opinion, the report and attached separate views of Commissioner Jones still leaves a licensee in a quandary and a state of confusion in that he must follow with his own interpretation of an involved academic legal treatise to determine what he can or cannot do in his day-to-day operation. He is entitled to know from the Commission just that—"what he can or cannot do"—in as concise and unequivocal language as possible.

The issue is simply stated: "Can a licensee of a broadcasting station be an advocate over his own station?"

At the risk of oversimplification, but in the interest of the licensee, I consider the answer to this question to be as follows:

1. Freedom of speech over the radio is not at issue. The right or privilege of access to the radio microphone is an issue.

2. No individual has the right of access to a radio microphone (except for such rights as may be conferred by Section 315 of the Communications Act—"Facilities For Candidates For Public Office"). Each individual licensee has the privilege of and responsibility for determining the particular persons or groups to be granted access to the microphone, which includes denial of access, and the specific program material to be broadcast over his facilities.

3. This privilege and responsibility is not unrestricted, however, but represents a sacred trust which must be exercised in a manner consistent with the basic policy of the Communications Act that broadcasting stations be licensed to serve the interests of the public at large rather than the personal or private interests of the licensee.

4. The public interest requires that the listening public secure a reasonable opportunity to hear differing and opposing positions on the controversial public issues of interest and importance in the community. Where a licensee affords time over his facilities for the expression of any one opinion on such issues, he is under an obligation to insure that opposing points of view will also be presented or at least that a reasonable opportunity be afforded for the presentation of such views.

5. The licensee is free to exercise his privilege of selection of persons to be given access to the microphone to present his own views of controversial public issues or to select persons to broadcast over his facilities whom he knows or has reason to believe share his views. However, where the licensee grants the privilege of access to the microphone to himself or his spokesman, such broadcasts must be handled in the same manner as all other broadcasts of controversial issues and the licensee may not utilize his authority to select the persons to have access to his microphone to advance his own ideas or opinions to the exclusion of others.

6. The particular format or formats for the presentation of controversy must be determined by the individual licensee in the light of the particular circumstances of each case. There can be no mechanical formula or test which can be prescribed to insure the essential fairness which is the prerequisite of any successful operation in the public interest. The decision which have to be made by licensees in this field are in many cases difficult ones. But, any licensee making a sincere and reasonable effort to serve the needs of his listening audience as a whole in conformity with the precepts set out above should be able to meet his obligation as a licensee of providing service in the public interest, convenience, or necessity.

SEPARATE VIEWS OF COMMISSIONER JONES

1. I agree that radio station licensees may editorialize over their own facilities. I believe that any document establishing this policy requires a reversal of the Mayflower Broadcasting Co. decision, 8 FCC 333, which fully and completely suppressed and prohibited the licensee from speaking in the future over his facilities in behalf of any cause. All licensees considered this Mayflower decision as applicable to each of them. I believe that the Commission thus violated the first amendment and that the Commission should acknowledge the unconstitutionality of the Mayflower decision and rule that the licensee may speak.

2. Since the majority do not acknowledge the applicability of the first amendment in determining whether the licensee may use his own microphone to advocate causes, it is not surprising that the Mayflower decision is quoted with apparent approval. They seem to urge that any relaxation of complete suppression is by the sufferance or leave of the Commission. They have proscribed their permission with prospective conditions in terms of fairness, several examples of which are described seriatim, and then they conclude: "It should be recognized that there can be no one all embracing formula which licensees can hope to apply to insure the fair and balanced presentation of all public issues." Nor do I find any assistance to the licensee or any clarification of the constitutional questions in the separate opinion of Commissioner Webster. When the Commissioner picks legal assumptions from the ether, as "Freedom of speech over the air is not at issue. The right or privilege of access to the radio microphone is the issue," the ceiling of oversimplification is unlimited to reach most any unconstitutional conclusion.

3. The Commission connotes "editorialization" with "news" and "comment." The relationship of commentators and licensees, including network licensees, is such that under the majority view commentator editorialization cannot be ignored and fairness should attach to them if their opinion is to have any meaning of consequence to the industry.

4. In taking the position I do in this matter that licensees shall be free without previous restraint to exercise their constitutional right to editorialize, I wish to make it clearly understood that I also believe that in a revocation or renewal proceeding the Commission has the right to review the overall past performance of the licensee including now a review of one additional facet—editorialization over his own facilities by a licensee and according to my view by commentators—to determine whether a finding can be made that he will operate his radio facilities in the public interest, convenience and necessity. This power of the Commission to review the overall operations of the licensee as the steward of the public is as far as the poles from an ambiguous prospective guide the majority is adopting here to cover a specific segment of the licensee's obligations under the act.

5. Even if the Commission could attach prospective conditions upon the licensee's right to editorialize, such conditions should not be couched in ambiguous terms. Further, the Administrative Procedure Act and the rules and regulations of the administrative committee issued pursuant to the Federal Register Act (44 USC subchapter 8B) require policy statements to be published in codified form. Since I have come to these conclusions in disposing of the right of licensees to editorialize, I am constrained to state my reasons therefor as follows:

6. Neither the questions here presented nor their resolution can be adequately understood without a discussion of the case of Mayflower Broadcasting Co. 8 F. C. C. 333. In the Mayflower case, the Commission had before it a situation where a licensee had used the facilities of his station to promote ideas and political candidates of his own choosing. The Commission, in reviewing the licensee's operation, held that a licensee could not, under any circumstances, consonant with the public interest, act as an advocate. The Commission said "a truly free radio cannot be used to advocate the causes of the licensee. * * * it cannot be devoted to the support of principles he happens to regard most favorably. In brief, the broadcaster cannot be an advocate." 8 F. C. C. at 340. While some question has been raised from time to time as to whether these broad statements constituted only dictum, examination of the Commission's disposition of the proceedings in that case makes it clear that the broad language of the Commission prohibiting advocacy by licensees over their facilities was intended to be part of the ratio decidendi. Thus in concluding to grant the application for renewal of station WAAB's license, the Commission expressly relied upon the licensee's unequivocal representations that no editorials had been broadcast since September 1938, that the licensee did not intend to depart from this uninterrupted policy and that the station had no editorial policy. In view of the language of the Mayflower decision and the Commission's basis of disposition of the proceedings, I cannot see how the Mayflower decision can be read in any other way but as a square holding that a licensee cannot use his microphone for personal advocacy. The Commission, in my opinion, fully and completely suppressed and prohibited the licensee from speaking in the future over his microphone in behalf of any cause.

7. It is true that protests were heard outside of the Commission's meeting room, but for 7 years no one formally challenged the decision of the Commission,[1] and the Commission took no steps to disclaim the ban created on editorialization by licensees. It is therefore reasonable to say that at the time of the commencement of these proceedings, it was the unimpaired ruling of this Commission that editorialization over the facilities of a station by the licensee was contrary to the public interest. I would now expressly repudiate any such doctrine and explicitly make clear that to the extent that Mayflower created such a ban it is now overruled. The failure of the majority to discuss Mayflower and to repudiate the ban on editorialization created by Mayflower is under such circumstances extraordinary. It may not be without significance that the majority report cites the Mayflower decision with apparent approval. In view of the majority's decision I do not see how it can consistently appear to leave the effect of Mayflower unimpaired while at the same time hold that editorialization by licensees is not contrary to the public interest. The majority report in failing to discuss the effect of Mayflower on the main problem here presented either indicates a reluctance to admit the error of the earlier decision or a desire to perpetuate its evil effect. In either case I cannot approve.

8. In concluding that editorialization by licensees is not prohibited, the majority report does not expressly say that such conduct is permitted in the public interest. The Commission, without any reference to the effect of Mayflower, merely comes to the conclusion that overt licensee editorialization, within reasonable limits and subject to the general requirements of fairness, is not contrary to the public interest. This conclusion thus appears to be based solely on the requirement created by this Commission that licensees be fair and objective in the presentation of controversial issues of public importance. I believe that in resting this holding solely on that ground, the Commission overlooks the more important and determinative factor of the first amendment of the Constitution of the United States. If as the majority states "radio is included among the freedoms protected against governmental abridgment by the first amendment" and if as is made clear by the majority it must be made available to "all responsible elements in the community," then it follows that governmental prohibition of editorialization by licensees, who certainly are a responsible element of the community, constitutes an unconstitutional abridgement of free speech.[2] I, therefore, rest my decision that editorialization by licensees is in the public interest not on any policy requirement created by the Commission but upon the inviolate terms of the first amendment. For whether or not the Commission is willing to follow the rule that licensees must be fair and objective in the presentation of controversial issues of public importance, a prohibition of editorialization by licensees would, in my opinion, be contrary to the first amendment and therefore invalid as an unconstitutional abridgment of free speech.

9. It is, however, suggested that since licensees are in effect trustees of the airwaves for the public, the Commission may condition the grant of the radio station license on the duty of the licensee to refrain from editorializing. I cannot, however, subscribe to this content. In my opinion, cases such as United Public Workers v. Mitchell, 330 U.S. 75, and McAuliffe v. Mitchell, 155 Mass. 216, dealing with prohibitions on political activities by Civil Service employees are not at all applicable here. Those decisions rest solely on the peculiar nature of the relationship of the Government, as an employer, to persons in its employ. The United Public Workers case makes clear that the extraordinary evil of political partisanship by classified employees of Government is so substantial as to warrant an interference with the normal freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution. I do not believe that any such evil is here involved. Whatever the evil that may result from editorializing by licensees, I do not believe it is so substantial as to warrant the deprivation of the civil rights of the licensee. Accordingly, I believe that any condition imposed on a radio station licensee which prohibits editorialization by the licensee constitutes the imposition of an unreasonable and unconstitutional condition in violation of the first amendment.

10. My objection to the manner in which the majority approaches the problems presented does not constitute a mere preference as to the route by which it reaches its decision. It reflects rather what I believe to be a fundamental difference in approach to the Commission's regulatory powers with respect to the programing policies of licensees. Whatever may be the constitutional validity of the approach the Commission takes, I believe the fundamental policy against previous restraint of speech requires the Commission to meticulously avoid the imposition of prospective conditions upon speech of licensees that is entitled to the protection of the first amendment.

[2] Both the Communications Act and the decisions of this Commission and the courts make it clear that radio station licensees are required to be responsible members of the community. Irresponsible licensees are, of course, not qualified to be the holders of radio station licenses and the problem of editorialization by licensees in a context of irresponsibility presents an entirely diffeernt problems from those involved in a ban on all editorialization by licensees. Cf. Trinity Methodist Church, South, v. Federal Radio Commission, 62 F. 2d 850, cert. den., 288 U.S. 599.

11. We should, I believe, pay particular attention to the manner in which the body of law with respect to the Commission's powers over the programing policies of licensees has arisen. Section 326 of the Communications Act expressly prohibits the Commission from exercising any powers of censorship. The Commission on the other hand has been given full power in connection with its licensing functions to determine whether an application for a station license or for renewal of such a license would serve the public interest, convenience or necessity. Moreover, application of the policy against previous restraint on speech is not at all inconsistent with this power, and the body of law with respect to the Federal Radio and Federal Communications Commission has grown upon the assumption that no previous restraint should be imposed upon radio speech but that the Commission may in connection with its regular review of each station's operation determine whether or not the operation of the station has been in the public interest. In the words of Justice Groner: "It may, therefore, bet set down as a fundamental principle that under these constitutional guarantees [of free speech] the citizen has in the first instance the right to utter or publish his sentiments although, of course, upon condition that he is responsible for any abuse of that right. Near v. Minnesota Ex Rel Olson, 283 U.S. 697, 51 S. Ct. 625, 75 L. Ed. 1357." Trinity Methodist Church, South, v. Federal Radio Commission, 62 F. 2d 850, cert. den. 288 U.S. 599.[3]

12. Thus, it is clearly within the scope of the Commission's authority to refuse to grant a renewal of license to one whose operation is extensively conducted in his personal interest rather than the public interest. Cf. KFKB Broadcasting Association v. Federal Radio Commission, 47 F. 2d 670. Likewise the Commission does not deny freedom of speech by refusing to renew the license of one who in an irresponsible manner has abused the privileges conferred upon him by broadcasting defamatory and untrue matter and has obstructed the administration of justice by attempting by means of radio to impose his will upon the courts. Trinity Methodist Church, South, v. Federal Radio Commission, 62 F. 2d 850, cert. den. 288 U. S. 599.

13. Thus, the powers of the Commission and the responsibilities of the licensee have, without any necessity for violation of the policy against previous restraint, been defined by the courts on a case-to-case basis where the necessity for such decision has been presented. I am in complete agreement with the standards of licensee conduct imposed by these decisions. I would not, however, deviate from the past method of procedure in handling such problems on the basis of adjudicatory proceedings arising out of individual factual situations. I cannot subscribe to the action of the Commission in expressly imposing prospective conditions on the exercise of the licensee's right to use the facilities of a station for purposes of editorialization. I would not say to the licensee as does the Commission's decision, "You may speak but only on the prospective conditions that are laid down in our report." For my part, I would merely say to the licensee, "You may speak."

[3] I should, however, like to make completely clear that I believe the Government has full authority by proper measures to prohibit the use of radio in connection with activities which it may under the police powers prohibit. Cf. Shenck v. United States, 249 US 47. Hence Congress has prohibited the utterance of any obscene, indecent or profane language by means of radio communication (Sec. 1364 of the U.S. Criminal Code (18 USC 1364; 48 Stat. 1091), formerly Sec. 326 of the Communications Act) and the broadcast of lottery information (Sec. 1304 of the U.S. Criminal Code (18 USC 1304; 48 Stat. 1088), formerly Sec. 316 of the Communications Act).

14. However, even if I were willing to adopt the approach which places express prospective conditions on the right to editorialize, I could not subscribe to a condition as vague as the concept of the duty to be fair. For where constitutionally valid conditions are imposed on speech by governmental authority, the standards by which one is required to act should be stated in such a way as to be clearly ascertainable. Cf. Winters v. New York, 333 U.S. 507. I do not believe that the conditions imposed here are made clear enough to serve as an adequate guide to the conduct licensees will be required to follow if they are to avail themselves of the right to editorialize. Insofar as the doctrine of fairness has been announced and applied in particular cases, that doctrine may well have concrete meaning. Cf. In re United Broadcasting Company (WHKC), 10 F. C. C. 515. But outside the context of particular circumstances, I do not believe that an a priori standard so broad and vague has significant meaning. We all, of course, can agree that licensees should be fair in the operation of their stations. But in the absence of past examples of the application of the standard fairness to particular situations involving editorialization by licensees, I do not see how licensees will be in a position to ascertain the meaning of the doctrine of fairness as it must be applied to the myriad of factual situations which arise in connection with the day-to-day operation of a radio station.[4] Nor do I believe that the citation of decisions involving network regulations, network programing, overcommercialism, radio advertising of liquor or broadcasts relating to atheism, furnishes any guide as to the manner in which the doctrine of fairness may apply to situations involving editorialization by licensees.

15. I believe that the problems with respect to editorialization can only and should only be determined a posteriori in connection with specific situations involving editorialization.[5] I would there-

[4] A few examples of questions raised:

If a licensee editorializes with respect to issue A, is he required under all circumstances to afford radio time to all responsible persons with views contrary to his with respect to issue A? Or is it enough that on most issues the licensee affords time to reply to his own editorial views? Is the licensee required to afford such persons free time or can he require payment for the time? If views contrary to his have been expressed freely on other stations in his community is he required to also afford time on his station? Can the programs of commentators either of his own choosing or of the choosing of his sponsors serve as replies by opposing views? What restrictions can he impose on the manner in which opposing views may reply? Can opposing views reply in the form of song or drama? What restrictions with respect to censorship by the licensee of the opposing script does the Commission intend to apply? These are but a few of the many practical questions faced by the licensee who wishes to editorialize but left unanswered by the Commission's decision.

[5] While it is very true the flexible standards have served very useful functions in Anglo-American law, it must be pointed out that they usually have evolved not by a priori announcements by courts but out of decisions arrived at on a case-to-case basis. Cf., e.g., the history the development of the legal standards in the common law of negligence. These standards fore continue the past procedure of this Commission in handling similar problems on the basis of adjudicatory proceeding arising out of individual factual situations. In this connection the statement of the Supreme Court of the United States in Securities and Exchange Commission v. Chenery Corporaion, 332 U.S. 194, 202–203 is pertinent:

> Not every principle essential to the effective administration of a statute can or should be cast immediately into the mold of a general rule. Some principles must await their own development, while others must be adjusted to meet particular unforeseeable situations. In performing its important functions in these respects, therefore, an administrative agency must be equipped to act either by general rule or by individual order. To insist upon one form of action to the exclusion of the other is to exalt form over necessity.
> In other words, problems may arise in a case which the administrative agency could not reasonably foresee, problems which must be solved despite the absence of a relevant general rule. Or the agency may not have had sufficient experience with a particular problem to warrant rigidifying its tentative judgment into a hard and fast rule. Or the problems may be so specialized and varying in nature as to be impossible of capture within the boundaries of a general rule. In those situations, the agency must retain power to deal with the problems on a case-to-case basis if the administrative process is to be effective.

16. But even if the Commission's approach to the problems here presented is correct, the form in which the Commission's decision is cast is entirely improper. Neither the general policy created nor the qualifications on the right to editorialize are made clear in terms free from ambiguity. Background, policy, example, qualification are all commingled. Indeed, it is, I believe, fair to state that it takes more than merely a careful reading of the report to ascertain the Commission's disposition of the issues presented. Under these circumstances I believe the Commission should speak more clearly. Sound administrative policy pursuant to the mandate of Congress requires the formulation of the standards here created in the form of clear and separately stated rules and regulations which can serve as a clear guide to licensees as to the conduct which the Commission deems it necessary for them to follow. Clearly the uncertainty with respect to the matters here presented should be removed and not augmented by a formless policy statement issued in the mold of a report.

17. Whatever may be our personal preferences with respect to the final form the Commission's decision here should take, I believe that Congress has by statute commanded, where a general policy is created independently of adjudication, that the form be grew out of findings by juries on a case-to-case basis that eventually were molded into general standards. See Holmes, The Common Law, pp. 122–129. This is especially significant where as here we are dealing with the problems of free speech.

"The subject in its more general outlook has been the source of much writing since Milton's Aeropagitica, the emancipation of the English press by the withdrawal of the licensing act in the reign of William the Third, and the Letters of Junius. It is enough now to say that the universal trend of decisions has recognized the guaranty of the amendment to prevent previous restraints upon publications, as well as immunity of censorship, leaving to correction by subsequent punishment those utterances or publications contrary to the public welfare. In this aspect it is generally regarded that freedom of speed and press cannot be infringed by legislative, executive, or judicial action, and that the constitutional guaranty should be given liberal and comprehensive construction. It may therefore be set down as a fundamental principle that under these constitutional guaranties the citizen has in the first instance the right to utter or publish his sentiments, though, of course, upon condition that he is responsible for any abuse of that right. Near v. Minnesota ex rel. Olson, 283 U.S. 697, 51 S. Ct. 625, 75 L. Ed. 1357." Trinity Methodist Church, South, v. Federal Radio Commission, 62 F. 2d 850, cert. den. 288 U.S. 599.

in a separately stated and currently published codified rule. Section 3 (a) (3) of the Administrative Procedure Act expressly requires each agency to separately state and currently publish in the Federal Register "substantive rules * * * and statements of general policy or interpretations formulated and adopted by the agency for the guidance of the public." If the report of the Commission does not enact a substantive rule it at least constitutes a general statement of policy formulated and adopted for the guidance of the public. It is to avoid just the type of procedure here followed that the Administrative Procedure Act contained requirements as to the publication of policy statements in rule form.

18. Not only has Congress provided in the Administrative Procedure Act for publication in such form but the rules and regulations of the administrative committee of the Federal Register, issued pursuant to the Federal Register Act (44 U.S.C. subchapter 8B) clearly require policy statements such as that adopted here to be published in the Federal Register in codified form. See Federal Register, October 12, 1948, pp. 5929 et. seq. Rule 1.32 of the Federal Register regulations provides:

> Documents having general applicability and legal effect. Every document, issued under proper authority prescribing a penalty or a course of conduct, conferring a right, privilege, authority or immunity, or imposing an obligation, and relevant or applicable to the general public, the members of a class or the persons of a locality, as distinguished from named individuals or organizations, is hereby determined to have general applicability and legal effect. Such documents shall be filed in the office of the director and published in the Federal Register. (Applies sec. 5 (a), 49 Stat. 501; 44 U.S.C. 305 (a) (2)).

And Section 1.10 of the Federal Register regulations provides:

> Document subject to codification. Document subject to codification means any regulatory document which has general applicability and legal effect and which is in force and effect and relied upon by the issuing agency as authority for, or invoked or used in the discharge of, any of its functions or activities.

The style of preparation of documents subject to codification is provided for in subpart H of these rules. This style is the same as the form of the rules and regulations of the Commission.

19. Accordingly, there is no question that the policy statement here adopted in the form of a report should be separately stated and published in codified form in the Federal Register. The report in its present form may constitute a sufficient statement of the reasons or grounds for such a codified rule, but it cannot under any circumstances be said to comply with the procedural provisions relating to publication provided for in the Administrative Procedure Act and the Federal Register rules issued pursuant to the Federal Register Act. As such the failure to comply with these statutes and rules raises serious questions as to the validity of any substantive programing requirements now created by the Commission. And further, this doubt only increases the uncertainty of licensees with respect to the matters here presented. Accordingly, I believe that if the Commission is to announce prospective standards, it should proceed to issue codified rules in proper form for the benefit and guidance not only of licensees but the public at large.

20. It seems to me that the Commission is gagging at a gnat when its opinion is confined to the licensee's personal use of his own microphone to advocate causes of the licensee. Since the adoption of the Mayflower decision licensees in general remained silent and supinely submitted to the Commission; however, many licensees, including network licensees who operate the most valuable radio facilities, selected commentators to do their editorializing for them. In fact, they have commercialized the commentators to positions of power and influence upon public opinion which dwarf the power and influence of any licensee or any group of licensees. In fact, this commentator commercialization has reached the point where newspaper licensee network affiliates carry regular broadcasts which they apparently reject and ridicule as proper news or comment for the newspaper columns. This is all the more significant because the majority has treated the term "editorialization" as comprehending "news" and "comment." Since the majority couch the conditions of the licensee's right to editorialize upon terms of "fairness," it is hard to understand why their opinion fails to come to grips with the licensees' standard practice of editorialization through commentators. The Commission files are literally filled with legitimate complaints of unfairness by such professionals, the alter egoes of licensees, who have become identified with them over a period of years as inextricably as the trade name of the station or network. The ambiguous doctrine of fairness has never been attached to them; the Commission has never felt it had the power to demand the kind of practice it now asserts against their principals—the licensees—in this decision. And the majority completely avoids discussing licensee-commentator fairness.

21. In view of the majority decision, the Commission should give special attention to the extent to which the selection of commentators constitutes an aspect of editorialization by licensees. Any appraisal of the realities must take into consideration the fact that licensees in effect editorialize through the mouths of commentators who by reason of their continued use of the facilities make known their views to the licensee and thus broadcast their views with the implied consent of the licensee.[6] The importance of such editorialization is made clear by the special treatment afforded commentary programs. Commentators are known to be associated with particular networks or stations for long periods of time. While the broadcast hour of other types of programs varies from time to time, networks and stations make every effort to leave the broadcast hours of commentator programs unaffected by overall changes in programing schedules. Sponsors may come and go, but the same commentators broadcast at the same hour over the same stations as they have done for years.

[6] "When a radio station hires radio commentators and pays them and puts them on, they editorialize on the news, and sometimes not only editorialize on the news, but they give out editorial opinions about every conceivable subject, many of which they don't know anything about." Comment of Chairman Wheeler in Senate Hearing on S. 814 (78 Cong. 1st Session) p. 1413.

One wonders whether it is not appropriate to call such commentators mere chattels of the networks or stations. Certainly, they are valuable pieces of radio property. When the voices of such program fixtures are available to networks and stations, are we to be surprised that the broadcasting industry has suffered in silence the ban on editorialization created by the Mayflower decision?

22. I want to make it clearly understood that in discussing commentators as alter ego editorialists for licensees, the Commission has no more power of previous restraint over commentators than it does over licensees in view of the first amendment and Sec. 326 of the Communications Act. However, I do believe that the Commission has the power to require segregation of objective news from comment and editorialization by commentators and licensees. If fairness to the public is to be the test, then certainly the public is entitled to know what is news and what is opinion from both licensees and commentators.

23. In the first place the Commission must put itself in a position to determine on appropriate occasion the character of editorialization by licensees whether through their own mouths or through the mouths of commentators. It should be realized that at present there is no radio format equivalent to the editorial page of our newspapers. Accordingly, neither the Commission nor radio listeners are in the same position as newspaper readers to identify editorial comment. The problem of labeling is all the more serious in radio by reason of the frequent practice of commingling editorial views with programs dealing with objective presentation of the news. This is especially true in the case of commentator programs. They do not, in fact, constitute merely news broadcasts nor on the other hand do they constitute purely editorial comment. They are rather a combination of editorial opinion based upon so-called factual news stories, which all too frequently result in "loaded" news stories.

24. While there are differences between the programs of different commentators, and there are good commentators and bad commentators, in the main listeners believe that they are being furnished with critical news summaries by all commentator programs. And it is the failure of many such programs to represent themselves as "loaded" news programs that constitutes the vice herein. While I believe that the Commission cannot under the Constitution and should not in any event prohibit the commingling of such editorial opinion and new stories, nevertheless I believe it clear that it has the authority to require the labeling of editorial comment. Furthermore, that many so-called commentary programs, although not all, are obvious deceits on the listener has been alluded to frequently both in Congressional hearings and by prominent public officials. For example, the use of date lines, indicating that the item about to be read originated in Moscow, Berlin, Singapore or the White House, are transparent falsities to informed persons. Nevertheless, thousands of listeners believe, if letters received in Congress and by the Commission are evidence, that such news items are coming hot over the wire at that instant. Similarly, the use of sound effects lends a false and misleading impression. The Commission might well promulgate standards which will insure honest and factual reporting of news and honest and accurate labeling of what is news and what is opinion. I believe, therefore, that the Commission should, by way of a codified rule and regulation, establish standards for the labeling and identification of editorialization over the air. The Commission should specifically describe in such a rule the exact identifying language and the exact times at which the identifying announcement should be made during the program. Cf., e.g., Sections 3.187 and 3.189 of the rules and regulations relating to station identification and announcement of sponsored programs. Such a rule should make clear that in a program where commingling of news and editorial comment is made, that portion of the program dealing with editorial comment should be labeled as such. I do not believe it is sufficient to merely require a general statement that such a program contains editorial comment.

25. The Commission has full power to review charges of continued irresponsibility by specific commentators in broadcasts over the facilities of individual stations. Licensees are completely responsible for the selection of those who regularly use their facilities and therefore when commentators are continually irresponsible, their programs reflect the conscious permission of the licensee to permit such irresponsibility to be a part of the station's programing. Clearly placing the treatment of news commentaries in the hands of persons who continually in an irrepsonsible fashion present their commentaries cannot be considered consistent with the public interest. Commentators who regularly make statements unsupported by fact and who regularly attack public figures by innuendo, without support in fact, are offering false news to the public. There is no constitutional right to broadcast false news and the broadcast of false news, just as the broadcast of false advertising is contrary to the public interest. Accordingly, the irresponsibility of broadcasts by commentators of necessity reflects upon the qualifications of the licensee who permits such commentators to regularly use his facilities.[7] And it is unfortunate that the more shocking the technique of the commentator the more valuable he becomes to the station or network and the less the desire of the network or licensee to rid their programs of the irresponsibility.

26. The Commission's power to take action with respect to the past use of radio facilities for purposes of irresponsibility is clear enough. The Commission is not required to renew licenses of persons who permit irresponsible professional editorialists to broadcast false news and to make continued attacks upon person after person without foundation in fact. Trinity Methodist Church, South, v. Federal Radio Commission, 62 F. 2d 850, cert. den. 288 U.S. 599. It should be pointed out that the mere fact that many of the commentators broadcast over the facilities of networks does not place the irresponsibility outside the powers of the Commission. It should be remembered that networks are also licensees. In fact, one of the main arguments networks advance as to the need for network-owned stations in key cities is that such stations constitute a necessary originating source for network programs. Accordingly, to the extent that networks are licensees they are subject to the regular licensing powers of the Commission. Where a network permits the continued use of its facilities by irresponsible commentators, this fact should be considered by the Commission as evidence of the network's lack of qualification to hold a radio station license. Further, licensees affiliated with such networks must be held strictly accountable for irresponsibility broadcast over their facilities even though such irresponsibility is of network origin. Licensees cannot abdicate their responsibility for determinations with respect to the continued use of their facilities by irresponsible commentators whose irresponsibility becomes a valuable commercial asset of the stations involved. Accordingly, the Commission should consider irresponsibility on the part of both the network and the individual licensee with network affiliation in placing responsibility for the reckless statements that are frequently broadcast over the air. In this connection it should be pointed out that in the KFKB Broadcasting Association case, supra, the court approved the action of the Commission in refusing to renew the license of KFKB even though it was found that much of the station's programs were entertaining and unobjectionable in character. 47 F. 2d at 672.

DISSENTING VIEWS OF COMMISSIONER HENNOCK

I agree with the majority that it is imperative that a high standard of impartiality in the presentation of issues of public controversy be maintained by broadcast licensees. I do not believe that the Commission's decision, however, will bring about the desired end. The standard of fairness as delineated in the report is virtually impossible of enforcement by the Commission with our present lack of policing methods and with the sanctions given us by law. We should not underestimate the difficulties inherent in the discovery of unfair presentation in any particular situation, or the problem presented by the fact that the sole sanction the Commission possesses is total deprivation of broadcast privileges in a renewal or revocation proceeding which may occur long after the violation.

In the absence of some method of policing and enforcing the requirement that the public trust granted a licensee be exercised in an impartial manner, it seems foolhardy to permit editorialization by licensees themselves. I believe that we should have such a prohibition, unless we can substitute for it some more effective method of insuring fairness. There would be no inherent evil in the presentation of a licensee's viewpoint if fairness could be guaranteed. In the present circumstances, prohibiting it is our only instrument for insuring the proper use of radio in the public interest.

Methodist Resolution Condemns Publication

By LAURA BARRE
Constitution Staff Writer

The North Georgia Methodist Conference passed a resolution Thursday condemning One Methodist Voice, a periodic publication edited by the Rev. Blake Craft, Clayton, and expressing confidence in the "Christian integrity and patriotic loyalty" of the ministers attacked in the publication.

The resolution followed a statement by the Rev. Mr. Craft that in order for him to receive an appointment, "to which I am justly entitled," Bishop Arthur J. Moore had required that he cease editing the controversial publication.

He charged that his right as a Methodist preacher to speak and to use his pen according to his conscience were on trial.

"POLITELY REFUSED"

Bishop Moore replied that he had suggested the Rev. Mr. Craft as a pastor for several churches and all the churches had "politely but firmly" refused to accept him. Finally, the bishop said, one church agreed to take him on condition that he cease publication of One Methodist Voice.

"I have been publishing the paper for three years," the Rev. Mr. Craft said, "exposing teachings of socialism, a world federalism and a treasonable pacifism within the Methodist church. I have pointed out how some of the leading officials have Communist front affiliations.

"Not one man has made any demand on me to ask me to retract anything I have said. I take that to mean they think what I say is true."

In their resolution, the ministers said "we have sought sincerely to practice Christian charity toward members of our fellowship. For more than two years, however, this spirit of charity has placed North Georgia Methodism in the position of seeming to approve, or, at least, to condone, the spirit and statements contained in One Methodist Voice. We now believe the time has passed when silence is Christian.

"We therefore declare that One Methodist Voice does not speak for, nor represent the spirit nor the mind of North Georgia Methodists.

"COMPLETE CONFIDENCE"

"We declare our complete confidence in the integrity of our brethren who have been attacked by One Methodist Voice, such as Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Bishop Bromley Oxman, Dr. E. Stanley Jones, Dr. Lester Rumble, Dr. Nat G. Long, Dr. E. G. Mackay and Mrs. M. E. Tilley.

"We declare our opposition to the use of the name "Methodist" by such independent organizations and publications as the Methodist Federation for Social Action (unofficial) and One Methodist Voice (unofficial)."

Sid Williams, a layman from Austell, moved to table the resolution condemning the publication, but his motion failed for want of a second.

FAVORED RESOLUTION

M. G. Dunaway, a layman from Rockmart, said the laymen favored the resolution as strongly as did the ministers.

The Rev. W. J. Culpepper, Warrenton, moved that the conference re-affirm its love for the Rev. Mr. Craft and request him to re-consider his relationship to the conference and to his brethren. The motion was passed.

"I will stop publishing my paper," Craft replied, "when the bishop appoints a committee to work with me to study what is going on in the church."

The bishop made no reply.

Rev. Blake Craft Gets A Deserved Rebuke

The North Georgia Methodist Conference is to be congratulated for turning thumbs down on that package of prejudice published by the Rev. Blake Craft under the title "One Methodist Voice."

Mr. Craft's protest that his freedom of press is being violated has no foundation in fact. No one is trying to keep him from circulating his views. The Methodist denomination is within its rights in denying him the right to proclaim those views from the press or from the pulpit in the name of Methodism. The church must do something to prevent careless, selfish use of the fine word "Methodist" by those individuals or organizations with special axes to grind.

It is significant that when the Rev. Mr. Craft proffered his services on his own terms, Bishop Arthur J. Moore, head of the conference, reported that the churches to which the pastor had been offered "politely but firmly" had declined him.

North Georgia Conference Rebukes Publisher of 'One Methodist Voice'

ATLANTA, June 25 (AP)—The North Georgia Methodist Conference today overwhelmingly condemned a newspaper, "One Methodist Voice," published by the Rev. Blake Craft of Clayton.

Craft was given a year's sabbatical leave by the conference yesterday.

Bishop Arthur J. Moore of Atlanta said it had been impossible to find any Methodist church in Georgia which would accept Craft as its pastor.

The otherwise calm, orderly meeting was thrown into momentary confusion today when Craft asked for the floor.

He said that since he had been granted a leave some of his friends didn't understand the move and he wanted to explain.

Thereupon he read a copy of a telegram he had sent Moore in which he accused the bishop of refusing to give him an appointment.

Moore then rose to answer Craft's charges. He explained that the Methodist Conference cabinet, composed of bishops and district superintendents, had tried to work out an appointment for Craft.

He said the minister wrote to him early in June asking for a new assignment when appointments were announced at the current conference.

The bishop added that he had contacted chairmen of the board of stewards in several churches in Georgia asking that they receive Craft as minister but in each case was turned down.

Then the cabinet met with Craft and, in a "friendly discussion" asked him to name some churches which would receive him. Craft named one, but this church also refused to accept him. Moore continued, unless he would stop publishing "One Methodist Voice."

Craft told the cabinet he must follow his conscience and the members agreed but, said Moore, they didn't see how he could construe that to mean he should continue to criticize his brother ministers.

Moore said the cabinet had tried to work with Craft "but he has refused to co-operate."

When Moore finished, the convention gave him a standing ovation.

The Rev. J. C. Callaway of Athens, secretary of the cabinet, called on each member of the cabinet to stand and confirm the bishop's sentiment. They did.

The conference then adopted a resolution introduced by Dr. Dow Kirkpatrick, Athens pastor. It condemned "One Methodist Voice" and said:

"It does not speak for nor represent the spirit nor the mind of north Georgia Methodists" and declared "complete confidence in the Christian integrity and patriotic loyalty of our brethren who have been attacked by "One Methodist Voice."

The resolution said the paper had attacked such men as Bishop Moore; Bishop Bromley Oxnam of Washington; Dr. E. Stanley Jones, Methodist missionary; Dr. Lester Rumble, Augusta minister; Dr. Nat G. Long, Atlanta pastor; Dr. E. G. MacKay, district superintendent of the Decatur-Oxford district, and Mrs. M. E. Tilley, prominent Methodist worker of Atlanta.

The conference yesterday voted to raise retirement pay of ministers from $30 per service year to $35.

Rev. Blake Craft of Clayton Denies Slander, Says Press Freedom Censored

By SARAH MYRICK

A stern resolution condemning One Methodist Voice, a periodic publication edited by the Rev. Blake Craft of Clayton was passed overwhelmingly at the North Georgia Conference Thursday morning.

The resolution came after an attack by the Rev. Mr. Craft that he had been denied his freedom of the press and the right of a Methodist minister to express freely his opinion on matters relating to his church.

The Rev. Mr. Craft Wednesday was granted a requested sabbatical leave. On the conference floor Thursday morning, he contended the bishop had not given him an appointment.

In reply, Bishop Moore explained to the conference that he could not get a church to accept the Rev. Mr. Craft unless he would cease to "slander his brethren."

THE RESOLUTION declared "that One Methodist Voice does not speak for nor represent the spirit nor the mind of North Georgia Methodists."

It declared "complete confidence" in the Christian integrity and patriotic loyalty of our brethren who have been attacked by One Methodist Voice."

Bishop Moore called the publication a "disturbing influence." He said, "We do not want our church to be the center of the disturbance."

"We told Brother Craft that we might persuade a church to accept him if he would desist from slandering his brethren.

"BROTHER CRAFT," he said, "replied that he must follow his conscience. I said, 'Brother Craft, that is right, follow your conscience. But I did not see how that can be construed to mean continuing to criticize your brethren.'

"He believes he is being persecuted. I stand in your presence and his to say that is not true. We have tried to co-operate with him and to give him an appointment, but he has refused to co-operate."

As the bishop concluded the conferen . gave him a rising ovation.

What Happened at New Orleans

Statement of Aubrey Williams, Editor and Publisher

ON MARCH 19TH, I appeared as a witness in response to a subpoena at New Orleans before the Jenner committee. I feel that I owe it to all subscribers of SOUTHERN FARM & HOME to give a full account of why I was summoned before this committee and what came out of the hearings, in so far as I was involved.

The stated purpose of the hearing was to investigate the activities of the Southern Conference Educational Fund. I am president of that organization. However, it was not so much the activities of the Southern Conference Educational Fund that the committee was interested in, but the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare, an organization which was prominent in the South from 1938 to 1948, but which now no longer exists, having gone out of existence in 1948 or 1949.

Repeatedly, Senator Eastland and committee counsel asked questions about the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and sought to connect the present Southern Conference Educational Fund with it.

As a matter of record, these two organizations were definitely connected. The Southern Conference Educational Fund was set up by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in 1946 to carry on research and make various studies. Since that time, it has devoted its efforts to fighting all forms of racial discrimination in the South. This fact was, and is, a matter of public record and it required no Senate subcommittee to find it out. Likewise, the activities of the old, now nonexistent Southern Conference for Human Welfare are matters of public record and are well-known.

Aubrey Williams

What then, the reader naturally asks, was the reason the Jenner committee felt called upon to go to all of the expense of making a long study of these organizations and staging this expensive hearing at New Orleans?

THIS is something that only the Senators who voted to send what they now ominously call a "task force" to New Orleans can answer.

Having been so personaly involved, I think it is probably more fitting if I allow some others who were not personally among those who were "put in the dock" to set forth the meaning and significance of what happened at New Orleans. To do this, I am selecting two editorials which have appeared since the "trial." The first is by Allen Rankin, columnist for The Montgomery Advertiser-Alabama Journal (Montgomery, Ala.), and the second is by Nelson Poynter, editor and publisher of The St. Petersburg Times, St. Petersburg, Fla. These editorials are as follows:

The Witch Trial At New Orleans

By Allen Rankin

INCREDIBLE is the word for the so-called "Communist hearings" in New Orleans last week.

Incredible is the word for this witch trial and inquisition inflicted on three Montgomery (and incidentally, American) citizens in the name of "democracy."

Last week we saw the amazing spectacle of a U. S. Senator, James Eastland, of Mississippi, allowed to try by inconveniencing, browbeating and humiliating Alabama and its citizens in the name of "communism."

To his Senate Internal Security subcommittee, "investigating communism" Eastland summoned three Montgomerians: Aubrey Williams, publisher; Clifford J. Durr, former Federal Communications Commissioner, and his wife, Virginia Foster Durr.

Eastland admitted to a newsman: "I don't think either of the Durrs or Williams are Communists."

Yet these people were summoned to New Orleans for a tragi-farce which purported to be a Senate probe into "alleged Communist influence in the Southern Conference Educational Fund."

They were inconvenienced by being called away from their jobs and their normal lives for three or four days.

They were accused and insulted and browbeaten.

Undoubtedly many ignorant and unthinking people were made to suspect that these three Montgomerians were the more "Communistic" because they were called to this hearing and attempts were made to place them in an unfavorable spotlight. Certainly they were not more "Communistic" for this reason.

We repeat: Senator Eastland himself admits that he doesn't think any of them are Communists . . .

More Votes For Demagogues?

Is this kind of political witch-hunting and citizen-baiting a true "investigation of communism in any sense?"

It is not.

The U. S. Constitution provides a very effective system of law courts for the trial of any U. S. citizen dangerous to his fellows or his country. The Smith Act further authorizes the trial of any suspected Communist in our established law courts.

Why, then are citizens allowed to be embarrassed and humiliated in extra-legal "courts" that function mainly for the political glory or vainglory of such demagogues as Senator Eastland?

Eastland and McCarthy are not "trying" their "victims" for communism. They are trying them for the same thing the Spanish Inquisition tried them for —heresy—for disagreeing with them.

It is no news to recall that the U. S. Constitution guarantees freedom of thought and expression. Lamentably, we have of late developed a band of witch-hunters who, nonetheless, are allowed to "try" and harass their fellow Americans to place themselves, the accusers, in the political spotlight.

We believe and hope that demagogues who try to capitalize on such persecution as this are on the way out.

Nine reporters who covered the New Orleans "trials" informally voted that the trials themselves were a greater threat to our American system than anyone who was or could be on trial under such circumstances.

Did they have a right to "try" these judges? As much right as these "judges" had to try those before them.

Fortunately, the U. S. courts so far have consistently "acquitted" all Amercans accused simply of speaking their own opinions. The legal courts do not convict Americans for heresy. This is the startling privilege only of political demagogues.

Eastland Follows McCarthy

The St. Petersburg, Florida, Times

WITH a smugness which is both irresponsible and shocking, many Democratic members of Congress—the Senate particularly—have been saying blandly that Sen. Joseph McCarthy is a "Republican problem." Some have said frankly that they're not in favor of restraining their Wisconsin colleague because he is making Democratic votes for the fall.

Aside from the amorality of this position, the trouble is that McCarthyism is a virus not confined to any one senator nor to any one party. In New Orleans last Saturday Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss.), sitting as a one-man investigating committee, committed or permitted investigative abuses just as flagrant as any McCarthy ever perpetrated.

Eastland, an ultra-conservative even among Southern Democrats, allowed a once-convicted ex-Communist publicly to brand Clifford Durr, a former high U. S. official, and his wife, sister-in-law of Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black, as Communists. Aubrey Williams, onetime head of the National Youth Administration, was likewise so accused.

Mr. and Mrs. Durr and Mr. Williams all denied the charges under oath, and Mr. Durr called for a showdown as to who was committing perjury. In addition, Mr. Durr, a mild and scholarly attorney, who is suffering from a heart ailment, was so outraged that he attempted to attack his accuser, one Paul Crouch.

The Durrs are native Alabamians, from prominent and prosperous families. They and a few other Southerners like Aubrey Williams, now president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, took seriously the fact that 20 years ago the South held most of the nation's "ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clad" one-third.

They saw in the economic and social conditions of the South a real breeding ground of communism. And they worked hard and long to correct those conditions. They believed that the Bill of Rights applied to the South as it did elsewhere in the nation, and they fought discrimination and segregation based on color.

Mr. Durr, as an attorney for RFC, approved many of the loans which started the South up the economic hill—quite a number here in Florida. He fought against monopoly—a fight he kept up after being appointed to the Federal Communications Committee.

In so doing, Mr. Durr stepped on a number of conservative toes. So did Aubrey Williams in his administration of NYA. But the work that they, and men like them, did rescued the South from being ripe for the persuasive dialectics of Communists who were seeking to move in. Undoubtedly some Communists did infiltrate the NYA and the Southern Conference of Human Welfare, predecessor to the Southern Conference Educational Fund. But they never ran them.

We don't know how many Communists there are in the South now. FBI reports indicate that this region is less infested than any other. And we are confident that this would not have been the case had it not been for the work of persons like the Durrs and Aubrey Williams.

Sen. Eastland is pursuing the same path of political opportunism followed by Sen. McCarthy—attempting to discredit the liberal wing of Southern Democrats by the Communist label.

Responsible Southern senators cannot pass the buck in this case. Sen. Eastland is their problem fully as much as McCarthy is a Republican problem.

There is a matter of Southern honor involved here. A Southern gentleman and lady have been publicly branded with the most opprobrious term of the hour. They have denied it under oath and called for a showdown. Sen. Eastland has shown no disposition to face such having merely said that the investigation of a "communism in the South" will be resumed in Birmingham in June.

Meantime, presumably, the Durrs and Mr. Williams are to be branded by implication both as Communists and perjurers.

This is a type of "character lynching" which responsible Southern senators should deeply resent. If they do not actively lead a movement to restrain their own reckless colleague operating in their own territory, then they certainly cannot point a finger of scorn at the GOP for permitting Sen. McCarthy to go on with his campaign of including them, along with all Democrats, as members of the "party of treason."

THE KEPT WITNESSES

RICHARD H. ROVERE

At least eighty-three people have been set up by the government in the trade of "professional witnesses." One calls it "a racket" . . . three are confessed liars . . . and all of them are exempt from security clearance.

ON FEBRUARY 3, 1955, a press conference was called at the Hotel Biltmore in New York City for the purpose of providing a young man named Harvey Matusow with an opportunity to make a public confession of fraud and perjury. Along with the confession—and necessary as a foundation for it—went some items of biography.

In 1947, Matusow, who was then twenty, joined the Communist party. He claims to have taken this step as a dedicated revolutionist. Within a year or two, he said, he became disillusioned and penitent. The way of transgressors is hard. Matusow did not leave the party he no longer believed in. Instead, he stayed on as a voluntary agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. In 1951, he abandoned this masquerade and in 1952 appeared as a witness for the prosecution in the trial, in Federal Court, of thirteen leaders of the Communist party charged with conspiracy under the Smith Act.

Matusow's performance under oath—some 700 pages in the trial record—pleased the government attorneys, who won their case, and gained him an honored position as a kept, or professional, witness. That is to say, he made his living—and a very good one, he now maintains, for a man of his age and station—by being sworn and saying what those who paid him wished to have him say. Between 1951 and 1954, his services were sought, and easily obtained, by the United States Department of Justice; the Subversive Activities Control Board; the Permanent Investigations Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Government Operations; the Internal Security Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee; the House Committee on Un-American Activities; the Ohio Committee on Un-American Activities; and the New York City Board of Education. He claims to have testified in twenty-five trials, deportation proceedings, and the like, and to have made 180 identifications of Communists, or of persons he chose to call Communists, for the various agencies that employed him. He found a good deal of additional employment. He hired out as a speaker in Congressional campaigns, in which, for a fee, he would damage this candidate or that one with intimations of subversion. He composed memoirs and revelations for the Hearst newspapers, lectured on the American Legion circuit, and now and then exploited himself and his past as a night-club entertainer and radio disc-jockey.

In his New York press conference and in subsequent testimony before a Federal Grand Jury and two committees of Congress, Matusow repudiated his career as a professional witness. He explained that he had walked down a city street one day and had been deeply moved by an eloquent call to piety and virtue which he found inscribed on a sign outside a synagogue. He had not been living the good life. The testimony he had given was riddled with lies. In case after case, he told the assembled reporters, he had fabricated evidence, sometimes on his own initiative, sometimes at the instigation of government lawyers.

He was now filing affidavits in support of requests for new trials for many of those he had helped convict. Such was his remorse that he was willing, he said, to risk the penalties of perjury to undo the damage he had done.

THIS, AT ANY RATE, is Matusow's story. And it appears to have something in common with the stories of at least two other people. Mrs. Marie Natvig and Lowell Watson, government witnesses in a recent proceeding before the Federal Communications Commission, have given the lie to their testimony. Both swore before the FCC that they had known as a Communist, one Edward Lamb, an Erie, Pennsylvania, newspaper publisher whose right as a television licensee had been called into question. Mrs. Natvig, a gaudy triple divorcee from Miami Beach, now says she lied not only about Lamb's Communist record but about her own. She had invented a Communist past for herself in order to identify others as Communists. Watson, a Kansas farmer who, like Matusow, had worked often for the Justice Department, disowned only his avouchments in the Lamb case.

The recantations necessarily leave many matters in doubt. It is the misfortune of skillful dissemblers that their fellows can never give full faith or credit to anything they say. The regeneration of Matusow, Mrs. Natvig, and Watson may be causing unbounded joy in Heaven, but here it must be received with the cool skepticism that should have greeted their sworn testimony. "A liar is always lavish of oaths," Pierre Corneille wrote three hundred years ago in Le Menteur, one of the great definitive works on the subject. The courts, the committees, the commissions, and the security panels before which Matusow and Mrs. Natvig were lavish of oaths will be a long time working over the tangled skein of evidence put in the record by this bedeviled youth and this odd woman.

And certainly in Matusow's case those who preside will, if they are possessed of the thoughtfulness the task requires, be haunted by the possibility that he has not really recovered his amateur standing—that he is, in point of fact, as much a professional as ever. Now he has written a book about his experiences. His press conference was called by the publishers of the book, the firm of Cameron & Kahn. There was a distinctly promotional air about the whole enterprise, and there was a distinctly Stalinist air about it, too. Cameron & Kahn is a house that up to now has specialized in Communist literature. In any case, Matusow, whether genuinely purified or merely reverting to form, is once again capitalizing on the confidences of former associates; now he is putting the finger not on Communists but on anti-Communists—on Senator Joseph McCarthy, on Roy M. Cohn, on all his collaborators of the last four or five years. Is he once again on somebody's payroll? It is an uncharitable thought but an inescapable one.

"This is a good racket, being a professional witness," Matusow told the reporters when Cameron & Kahn broke out the Scotch at the Biltmore. Immediately the conference was over, he hurried to the Columbia Broadcasting Company studios for a telecast.

PARTNERS IN THE RACKET

THE DEPARTMENT of Justice announced, soon after Matusow's confession, that it would be among the agencies reviewing and re-evaluating the recanted testimony. The anonymous spokesmen for the Attorney General were a bit grudging and condescending about it. They pointed out that Matusow had given only "corroborative" testimony, as though this were some unimportant species of testimony, hardly worth the bother of looking into. (Actually, there is no special category of evidence known as "corroborative." It merely means, in this instance, that Matusow testified to facts also testified to by one or more other witnesses. Not only can two witnesses be wrong, but there are circumstances in which the withdrawal of one witness's testimony destroys the legal value of another's.) But after Matusow appeared before the Grand Jury, and after Mrs. Natvig and Watson revealed their fabrications, the Department of Justice promised a full investigation. Bearing the honorable name it does, it could hardly do less. Men are in prison today in part because of evidence drawn from a confessed perjurer by Department lawyers.

Neither the Department of Justice nor any other agency of government, however, has given any indication that the Matusow incident has led it to reconsider the moral, juridical, and political effects of the whole practice of retaining professional witnesses. On the contrary, it would appear that the government's principal concern at this stage is to prevent Matusow's latest set of confessions from discrediting the testimony of its other professionals. A federal judge has jailed him on the ground that his recantation is false and contemptuous and the Department has indicted Mrs. Natvig, not for the perjury she admits, but for having lied to its lawyers.

IN A SENSE, of course, the government is profoundly right in wishing to protect its employees. One embezzler does not make thieves of all bankers. One spy in the State Department does not prove all diplomats disloyal. One perjurious witness for the government does not make liars of all the rest. Yet there is a difference. Matusow was asserting not the unverifiable but the self-evident when he said that it had been "a good racket, being a professional witness." As rackets must be judged, it was a good one for him, certainly; and, since Matusow's talents are unusual but not unexampled, it may, at this moment, be equally good for others. And if it is a good racket for anyone, it is a racket for which the government of the United States must bear the heaviest responsibility. For it is the government of the United States—"that august conception," as Samuel Taylor Coleridge once called it—that originated this racket and that continues to encourage and pay for it. Matusow was in partnership with the government.

The government's use of professional witnesses has at least this much in common with a racket—that information about it is exceedingly difficult to come by. The whole affair is veiled in secrecy. The government won't talk. It does not, because plainly it cannot, plead that the safety of the nation would be imperiled if it revealed the number and the identity of those whom it hires to testify according to the wishes of its lawyers. It does not plead the right to withhold the names on the ground that these people are confidential informers; obviously it cannot do that in the case of men and women who appear in open court. The government gives no reasons for its unwillingness to discuss or even to defend this phase of its operations, but it evidently holds to the view that it would not be in the public interest to make any sort of public accounting in this matter.*

In mid-1954, though, some enterprising Washington journalists came into possession of a Department of Justice list which contained the names and earnings of thirty persons "regularly used as witnesses" and of fifty-three "occasionally used" in the period, spanning two Administrations, between July 1, 1952 and May 31, 1954. This list has been made public, and the Department has not to date challenged its authenticity.

Whether the list was complete is not known. It was specified that the eighty-three named were all under contract to the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Department. There are others in other bureaus of the Department and in other executive agencies, and there are known to be several working for the legislative branch and the state governments. American public life on almost every level today is characterized by what can only be described as an obsession with problems of loyalty and internal security; it is a rare public agency that does not have at least one division devoting itself to these problems, and it is a downright underprivileged one that does not have some judicial or semi-

* On December 20, 1954, I wrote the Attorney General to request facts on the use of professional witnesses and the Department's "response, if it has made one, to critics of the practice." I pointed out that there had been, even then, a good deal of public discussion of the question, and I noted that it suffered from the lack "of the kind of solid information I imagine the Department of Justice could provide." I got no reply until February 10 of this year, which was a few days after the Matusow recantation. I then received a letter from William F. Tompkins, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the new Internal Security Division. Mr. Tompkins merely acknowledged receipt of my letter and enclosed copies of two speeches, one by Assistant Attorney General Warren Olney, III, delivered before the Michigan Association of Prosecuting Attorneys on July 23, 1954, and one by himself, delivered before the Camden County, New Jersey, Bar Association on September 28, 1954. Both speeches are addressed to the problem, but neither really deals with it. Both assume that the sanction the courts have given to paid informers can be extended to professional witnesses. Both contain some rather handsome specimens of question-begging. For example, Mr. Tompkins: "The testimony of these witnesses has been weighed by numerous American juries and found to be credible. Of the eighty-four defendants who have been tried thus far for conspiring to violate the Smith Act, eighty-one have been convicted and only one has been acquitted by a jury. A more convincing yardstick of the credibility of those witnesses I cannot imagine." Neither speech provides any solid information. More recently in testimony before a Senate Committee, Tompkins has said: "It has become increasingly clear that the current attack against government witnesses . . . has its roots in a Communist effort." judicial apparatus for making the kind of distinctions the ruling obsession demands. These apparatuses require witnesses.

At all odds, the Department of Justice had at least eighty-three kept witnesses in 1954. It seems wholly reasonable to assume that, despite the defection of Harvey Matusow, the number is not smaller today. More likely than not, it is larger, for the new Internal Security Division of the Department, which came into being on July 9 of last year, has announced that it plans greatly to accelerate its work in this field and aspires to produce an ever-mounting volume of prosecutions under the Smith Act, the Communist Control Act of 1954, and all other available statutes.

Of the eighty-three persons retained by the Department in 1954, all were, by their own admission, former members of the Communist party. Some, like Benjamin Gitlow, one of the first American Bolsheviks and once Communist candidate for Vice President, had been true believers; others, like Matthew Cvetic, whose exploits as an undercover agent were celebrated in a radio serial called "I Was a Communist for the FBI," had been quite the opposite but had infiltrated the party at the direction of Mr. Hoover's famous agency. A few, like Harvey Matusow, had made the transition from revolutionist to counter-revolutionist inside the party. Those who are public servants now receive twenty-five dollars a day plus nine dollars "in lieu of expenses." These, at least, are the sums that have been brought out on cross-examination in several trials and hearings. Some witnesses may receive more, others less; thirty-four dollars a day appears to be the prevailing fee.

THE WAGES OF REPENTANCE

BY GOVERNMENT standards, this is fairly high pay. And it is high in comparison with what some of the kept witnesses made before entering government service. Harvey Matusow was earning thirty-five dollars a week in 1951. The job formerly held by Paul Crouch—who earned $9,675 from the Department in two years of witnessing—was as an air-line employee at eighty-five cents an hour. Leonard Patterson was a New York taxi-driver. Many of the others were paid functionaries of the Communist party, which means that their pay was low and infrequent. To satisfy the statute under which the payments are authorized—the General Services and Administrative Act of 1949—the people who receive them are carried on the books not as kept witnesses but as "expert consultants." But kept witnesses is what in fact they are; such usefulness as they may be said to have derives from their ability and readiness to identify people as Communists, to describe Communist activities for the enlightenment of judges, juries, and security panels; and to interpret Communist doctrine in such a way as to bring it within the area proscribed by the Smith Act.

Some critics—notably Joseph and Stewart Alsop, who first brought the problem of kept witnesses to public attention—have urged that a distinction be made between those who have been paid large sums and those who have been paid small sums. It is proper, they point out, to describe a witness such as Manning Johnson, who is credited with earnings of $9,096 in a two-year period, as a professional. However, some on the Department list are credited with amounts that can only be considered as pin money: two or three hundred dollars in twenty-six months. Obviously, some sort of distinction ought to be made between those who earn enough to live on and those who do not. But because of the Department's refusal to provide information, it is impossible to do this. In an act of high magnanimity, the Alsops accepted the bootlegged list from the Department and concluded that there were only twelve witnesses "who have earned enough so that one may reasonably presume the sums were meaningful to them." Harvey Matusow was not one of the twelve, for the Department of Justice had him down as a witness "occasionally used" and listed his earnings as only seventy-five dollars. It has since developed that the one list so far circulated tells only part of the story. Matusow got seventy-five dollars from the Immigration and Naturalization Service and $1,407 from a separate account with the Attorney General's office.

There are certain ironies connected with the purely procedural aspects of the Department's relations with its paid witnesses. The General Services Act, which provides the legal authority for their retention, was passed by the Eighty-first Congress very largely because it had the formidable endorsement of the Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of Government, headed by Herbert Hoover. The Hoover Commission had been distressed to learn that certain agencies of the federal government very often had to forgo the advice of eminent American specialists in such fields as science and education because they lacked any means for retaining them on a part-time basis. The Commission prepared a plan to enable certain agencies to draw up and offer contracts retaining specialists on a per diem basis. It was accepted with enthusiasm by the Congress.

An additional advantage of the scheme, it was thought, was that it made it possible to obtain the services of qualified advisers without the delays and embarrassments caused by the protracted rituals of loyalty and security checks. So far, the most conspicuous use to which the law has been put is the hiring as "expert consultants" of the former Communists and police agents who make up the Department's corps of professional witnesses. And one of the most conspicuous uses to which the professional witnesses are put is in establishing by sworn testimony that certain other employees of the government are loyalty and security risks.

THUS, the key figures in the field of loyalty and security clearance are men and women who are themselves—almost alone in the whole teeming structure of federal bureaucracy—exempt from the need for clearance. More than that, they compose a group whose individual members would have almost no chance of getting clearance if it were required of them. It reflects not at all on their present condition of rectitude and probity to say that their pasts reek of subversion and sedition and that a number of them are convicted felons. One of the most prominent, for example, is Morris Malkin, formerly a union hoodlum and twice convicted for felonious assault. Another is Paul Crouch, generally regarded as the professional witness with the most experience and the highest earnings, who was once court-martialed for offenses against the Military Code of Justice, sentenced to forty years of hard labor on Alcatraz Island, and dishonorably discharged from the Army. Fortunately relieved of any accountability for these aspects of their past, they play a crucial role in determining who is and who is not of sufficient uprightness to work for the United States government.

And as witnesses in other proceedings, the professionals play a crucial role in determining many things. There is, indeed, no end to the number of places where they may turn up in the course of their service to the Department of Justice and apparently in fulfillment of their agreement with it. While under contract to the Department, Matusow was a witness in departmental trials of a number of New York public school teachers. Paul Crouch, the dishonorably discharged buck private, filed with Senator McCarthy's Committee on Government Operations a bizarre memorandum describing a plot to subvert our entire military establishment which he claims to have hatched with the late Mikhail Tukhachevsky, Marshal of the Red Army, thirty years ago. This bit of delayed intelligence provided, according to Roy M. Cohn, the impetus for the investigation of the Army Signal Corps' radar laboratories at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey—a piece of work that uncovered not a single Communist but did incalculable harm not only to government research but to the government's relationship with the whole scientific community. Called by Congressmen hostile to the admission to statehood of the territory of Hawaii, Crouch took the oath before the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and deposed at length on Communism on the islands. William Garfield Cummings, one of the most ubiquitous of the breed, testified, along with Mrs. Natvig and Lowell Watson, before the FCC in the Lamb case. In Louisville, Kentucky, an obscure journalist was indicted for promoting civil disorder; to the good fortune of the state attorney trying the case, there chanced to be on the Department of Justice's list a Mrs. Alberta Ahearn, who was prepared to say that she knew the defendant as a Communist. Manning Johnson and Leonard Patterson, seasoned performers on the Smith Act wheel, appeared as witnesses against Dr. Ralph Bunche of the United Nations Secretariat.

UN-AMERICAN?

BECAUSE the government takes the view that its dealings with its professional witnesses are privileged, it is impossible to take the true measure of their influence. But it is clear beyond all dispute that one agency, the Department of Justice, is subsidizing testimony not only in many of the cases it is legitimately prosecuting as the legal arm of the federal government but in a number of other cases, some of them flagrantly political. Even the subsidy it provides for witnesses in its own prosecutions is a problem serious enough to warrant investigation and examination.

It is a novel arrangement, this hiring of people to take a solemn oath and testify favorably to the government. American history offers no precedent for it. The use of paid informers by police departments and federal agencies such as Internal Revenue is neither precedent nor true parallel. The paid informer's job is to aid the authorities in the uncovering of crimes and the apprehension of criminals. He may sometimes be called as a witness, just as the paid witness may sometimes be used as an informer, but generally speaking the functions are separate, and the witness enters upon the scene only when the work of the informer is done. It has long been recognized that the maintenance of order in a society such as ours requires the use of paid informers, but the professional witness up to now has made an appearance only as the creature of disreputable law firms and private detective agencies and of certain businesses, reputable except in this particular, which are frequently engaged in litigation.

Up to now, he has not been associated with the United States government. Circumstances may justify the association today, but it nevertheless violates the spirit of our law and jurisprudence. We do not ask witnesses to meet rigorous tests of disinterestedness, as the Romans did, but we have always insisted that the giving of testimony is a bounden duty of citizenship, like the payment of taxes. It is expected that it will be done freely and in good faith. When expectations fail, the law steps in. The subpoena power exists to compel testimony. Our courts are empowered to require witnesses to furnish bonds under certain conditions, and witnesses may be jailed to assure their appearance and prevent their being tampered with. Failure to meet certain prescribed rules and standards may lead to citations for contempt of court. It is recognized that the discharge of this responsibility of citizenship is in many ways onerous and that it generally entails some financial sacrifice; the courts, therefore, pay modest witness fees. But these, like payments to jurors, are deliberately kept so low that they cannot in any sense be regarded as rewards or even as just compensation. Four dollars a day is the regular Department of Justice fee.

IN CERTAIN cases, it is true, the courts tolerate payment by one side or the other to witnesses who can provide highly specialized knowledge. The general rule of law is that this may be done in the case of men upon whose observation and counsel, outside the courtroom, society itself sets a price. Doctors, alienists, and property appraisers are perhaps the most frequently encountered types. These may be paid by principals in the case, provided the fact of their payment is made known to the court and provided there is no contingency basis for the agreement; the payment of witnesses can under no circumstances be made to depend upon the outcome of the case.

But even with these conditions the practice has always been regarded as a dubious one, and jurors are allowed to give whatever weight they choose to the fact that a witness testifying before them is being paid for his version of the truth. "The experience of the ages," Justice Chadwick of the Supreme Court of the State of Washington once wrote, "sustains the legal conclusion that where the truth is made to depend upon the pecuniary interest of a witness . . . his utterances wear a cloak of suspicion, and they should not be accepted unless the taint is removed by the testimony of credible witnesses or by circumstances that cannot be denied."

THE CLOAK of suspicion is a garment that must be wrapped several times around the witnesses for whose services the Department of Justice has contracted. For one thing, their pecuniary interest—assuming, for the moment, that thirty-four dollars a day constitutes one—has the unusual character of a continuum. Ordinarily, where the possibility exists that the cupidity of a witness, or even his simple exigency, will color his testimony and thereby thwart justice, it exists only for a specific case at a specific time. The experience of most men and women just is not rich or varied enough to give them direct knowledge of more than a few matters that may be subject to litigation during their lives. But an accident of history puts the ex-Communist, whether his faith was feigned or authentic, in possession of an extraordinarily negotiable thing —his past.

As Whittaker Chambers, who has given testimony but has never become a professional and who has confronted the problem of negotiable pasts with candor and deep insight, has written, "He [the ex-Communist anti-Communist witness] risks little. He sits in security and uses his special knowledge to destroy others. He has that special information to give because he knows those others' faces, voices, and lives, because he once lived within their confidence. . . ."

Such an ex-Communist has acquired an expertise for which the demand is, apparently, inexhaustible. His patron, the Department of Justice, seems to measure its usefulness by the number of people it has jailed, by the number of deportations it can claim, by the number of loyalty and security risks it can process out of the government. It appears to be the Department's hope to prosecute the thirty thousand or so American Communists one by one; it recently got a start in this direction by convicting one Claude Lightfoot in Chicago for violation of the Smith Act—not as a leader of the Communist conspiracy, not as a teacher of the doctrine of violent overthrow of the government, but as a mere member of the conspiracy, a mere adherent of the doctrine. With this conviction, which may well be justified by both the law and the public interest, whole new horizons open up for the Department and its witnesses.

CONVENIENT MEMORIES

WHAT IS wanted now, what is likely to be wanted more and more in the immediate future, is identifications—identifications in great numbers. Plainly enough, there could be rewards for an elastic memory. The possibility exists, almost without end, of the truth being made to depend on the pecuniary interest of witnesses. Putting aside what may be the singular case of Matusow, there have been, to date, no clear instances of fraudulent identifications. But certain matters of record suggest the nature of the lurking dangers.

Louis Budenz, a former editor of the Daily Worker, who has testified that his income from all sources as an anti-Communist witness and publicist has exceeded $10,000 a year, spent what he maintains was three thousand hours giving the names of Communists to the FBI.

In none of those sessions, Budenz has conceded, did he offer the name of John Carter Vincent or Owen Lattimore. But when Senator McCarthy named both these men in various connections, all of them unfavorable, it came to Budenz, quite certainly, that they were Communists. He so testified before several Congressional committees and grand juries. Likewise, Paul Crouch talked to the FBI on many occasions, testified in numerous trials, and submitted to Congressional committees the names of all Communists he had known aside from rank-and-file members. Not once did he list a certain Jacob Burck, a Chicago newspaper cartoonist. When, however, Burck was the subject of a deportation hearing, Crouch testified that he had encountered him often at meetings of the Central Committee of the Communist party.

The memory is notoriously the most vagrant of human faculties, but there are few cases on record of a bent for mnemonic topicality as powerful as that revealed by Paul Crouch. In some instances, it is possible to rule out avarice altogether as an explanation for the weather changes his recall has undergone. In a large number of documents that he prepared and read in evidence before the Subversive Activities Control Board and a number of Congressional committees, he recounted at length his experiences in the Soviet Union during the period in which he was preparing the campaign to subvert the American military establishment. In these, he mentioned associations with Russian leaders so numerous and so mighty in power as to expose himself to reproaches for name-dropping. Up to 1953, there was one name that did not turn up on any of the lists—that of Georgi Malenkov. In March of 1953, Malenkov succeeded to the Premiership of the Soviet state, and in March of 1953, Crouch, filing the statement that led to the Fort Monmouth investigation with the Committee on Government Operations, revealed for the first time that the new Premier was among those with whom he had conferred in 1927.

Crouch has acknowledged a weakness that may in his case help explain such quirks. Before an Army court martial in 1925, he testified: "I am in the habit of writing letters to my friends and imaginary persons, sometimes to kings and other foreign persons, in which I place myself in an imaginary position. I do that to develop my imaginary powers." In the Leviathan, Hobbes wrote that "Imagination and memory are but one thing, which for divers considerations hath divers names." No free man's rights are put in jeopardy, no principle of law is dishonored when Crouch either imagines or abruptly recalls Georgi Malenkov as an old comrade-in-arms. But he has had frequent lapses and recoveries involving persons who do qualify for our law's protection. At the trial of Harry Bridges in 1949, Crouch denied acquaintance with a Communist agitator named David Davis. "I have never heard of David Davis," he told the court. "I had no knowledge of David Davis." By 1951, however, he had not only heard of David Davis, he had encountered him as early as 1928. He was examined by a federal judge about a Communist meeting allegedly held in 1928:

Q. "Was Mr. Davis present?"

A. "Yes, your honor."

On May 6, 1949, Crouch testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities and was asked if he knew a man named Armand Scala, an officer of Miami Local 500 of the Transport Workers Union:

A. "Very well, with Local 500."

Q. "Is he a member of the Communist party?"

A. "I do not know . . . I do not know of my own knowledge what his party affiliations are."

But on May 11, five days later, Crouch put into the record of the Committee a statement and several affidavits amplifying his earlier testimony. In one, he said: "Another member and officer of Local 500 I knew to be active in Communist work in Miami is Armand Scala. Scala had been the chief Communist courier to Latin American countries." In an article published in the Hearst newspapers a few days after that, he made an even more explicit identification of Scala as "the chief courier of the party in Latin America . . . traveling to Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro frequently on party business." In a subsequent libel suit, he swore to the truth of these assertions. Since the newspaper stories had not been privileged, Scala was awarded $5,000.

It may well be that Crouch was, as he presently insists, testifying to the best of his recollection on each specific occasion. No more can be asked of anyone. But the fact cannot be blinked that the use of subsidized testimony increases the danger of subsidized perjury. The rule of law against contingent fees is not directly violated by the contractual agreements the Department of Justice has with Crouch and other witnesses. These agreements are signed, sealed, and delivered in advance of testimony—sometimes very far in advance. A witness named Daisy Van Dorn has testified that she received $125 a month for two years simply to hold herself ready to take the witness stand. However, the clear moral principle upon which the rule of contingency rests is abused by the practice.

The Department's list of the names and earnings of the "persons regularly used as witnesses" shows wide variation in income among the professionals. An element of contingency accounts for the variations. A witness gets his fee whether the case is settled favorably or unfavorably for the government, but common sense—and even the solicitousness for the taxpayer of which the government boasts—must suggest that the witness who can assist in the production of the greatest number of convictions is the witness who should get the most work. In the Department of Justice—as, for that matter, in most lesser prosecuting agencies throughout the country—success is quantitatively measured. It has been customary in this country to take what steps we can to prevent the quantitative measurement of truth. The use of professional witnesses, though it may be warranted by many present needs, should at least be recognized as a step in the other direction.

RISING ABOVE TRUTH

JUSTICE CHADWICK'S cloak of suspicion is becoming to the professional witness for reasons other than those of pecuniary interest. If a heavy risk is run of his memory being stimulated by the prospect of increased emoluments, there is an equally heavy risk that he will visit, not the truth as he knows it, but the fury of disenchantment as he feels it on those against whom he testifies. There is no way of being certain of how many of the professional witnesses are genuine apostates and how many are merely former police agents.

(It is FBI policy never to confirm or deny an individual's statement regarding instructions he claims to have had from the Bureau, and this has led to a certain amount of confusion. Matthew Cvetic told the House Un-American Activities Committee that George Dietz and Joseph Mazzei were members of the Communist party in Pittsburgh. Dietz and Mazzei, fired from their jobs, indignantly declared that they, too, were FBI agents and had in fact been reporting to the Bureau on Cvetic's numerous subversive connections. Similarly, doubts were cast on the bona fides of William Garfield Cummings as an FBI agent when it was revealed that his membership in the Communist party antedated his recruitment by the Bureau and that he encouraged continued service to the party by friends and relatives after he left it.)

In any event, a considerable number of the professional witnesses are disaffected Communists and clearly carry the stigmata and disabilities, along with the special insights, of their kind. Many of them display what may be regarded as a touching eagerness to serve the society they once sought to destroy; in some of their cases, this laudable sentiment is fused with what may more reasonably be described as a thirst for revenge. Men's defects are often only the flaws in their virtue; the flaw may render the virtue nugatory. Manning Johnson, once an ardent Communist and more recently an ardent patriot, testified before the Subversive Activities Control Board that it is an article of his present faith that some things are more important than truth:

> Q. In other words, you will tell a lie under oath in a court of law rather than run counter to your instructions from the FBI. Is that right?
> A. If the interests of my government are at stake. In the face of enemies, at home and abroad, if maintaining secrecy of the techniques of methods of operation of the FBI who have responsibility for the protection of our people, I say I will do it a thousand times.

Again Manning Johnson, this time in a sedition trial in Pennsylvania and undergoing examination on his testimony in a deportation proceeding that had taken place earlier:

> Q. That testimony was not correct, was it, Mr. Johnson?
> A. No, it wasn't, precisely, because I could not at that time reveal that I had supplied information to the FBI. . . . I think the security of the government has priority over . . . any other consideration.

The fear of systems of priorities such as Mr. Johnson's has given rise to the legal doctrine of testis unus, testis nullus—one witness is no witness. But a difficulty raised by the Justice Department's use of professionals, and by its policy of withholding information about it, is that two or more witnesses may share this view, or a similar one. We do not know how many people have been convicted, deported, and discharged from government service on evidence supplied wholly by kept witnesses.

THROUGHOUT the history of societies living, or trying to live, under the rule of law, the role of the witness has been a vexatious problem for judges, lawyers, and all others who have concerned themselves with it. Broadly speaking, the tendency in most Western nations has been a steady easing of restrictions. When systems of law are young, jurists cling to the hope that truth will be received only from undefiled sources. This is sooner or later found to be an impossible aspiration, and in some respects a false one, though it is unquestionably noble in spirit. The judicial process, to be sure, must always be, or should always be, a relentless search for the truth. But we know from long experience that the truth is often found in the unlikeliest places. The fact that a Manning Johnson hates and fears Communists, feels betrayed by them, and regards every living one of them as a menace to the whole of humanity does not mean that he is incapable of ever telling the truth about them. What it does mean is that he may possibly tell something other than the truth—and that those who use him as a source of information must be vigilant against the possibility of receiving misinformation.

It is doubtless necessary to use the Manning Johnsons of this world. Society has little choice in the matter. As police and prosecuting officials like to point out—when they are rebuked for their use of low, untrustworthy characters as informers and witnesses—it is very seldom possible to find bishops and cardinals who are widely acquainted among felons and well-informed on the workings of vice syndicates, counterfeiting gangs, dope peddlers, smuggling rings, and the like. Society, through its law-enforcement agencies, must deal with these aspects of itself, and it cannot afford to scorn information about them that comes from persons it regards with distaste and does not entirely trust—even from persons deeply implicated in the crimes under review. Though it would be agreeable to adhere to the view of Lord Langdale, who ruled in a famous nineteenth-century judgment, that "a witness has no business to concern himself with the merits of the case in which he is called," we must realize that in many cases no such witness exists.

Because truth often turns up where it is the least expected, and because we have a steady need of truth from whatever source, we have progressively reduced the number of factors disqualifying witnesses and progressively increased our reliance on the power of the witness's oath, the perjury laws, and cross-examination. Up to now, though, we have not accommodated ourselves to the idea of witnesses who make a business of being witnesses. It may be that the time has come when we must do so. It may be that internal security is our over-riding need and that we must accept this device for coping with it. But if this is the case, it would seem as if the problem ought to be squarely faced. The Department of Justice should, in that event, abandon its present furtiveness and give a full public accounting of the terms and conditions upon which it purchases testimony. It should recognize, as Justice Holmes did in his weighing of the merits of wire-tapping, that the government is caught in a conflict of competing "objects of desire"—the desire to catch criminals and the desire to maintain governmental integrity. ("We have to choose," Holmes said, "and for my part I think it a less evil that some criminals should escape than that the government should play an ignoble part.") There may be an equitable and decent way of resolving the conflict, but no conflict can be resolved without first acknowledging that it exists.

THE LARGEST QUESTION

IN ANY serious weighing of the issues, it would be necessary, also, to recognize that more is at stake than justice to individuals. That is, of course, the largest question of all in any free and open society. But it is not the only one. When the federal government subsidizes a group such as its present corps of professional witnesses, it finds itself, willy-nilly, subsidizing a special political interest. Many of the larger categories of cases tried under federal law involve political principles, political ideas, political organizations. The Communist cases manifestly do, and not the least of the effects of the government's policy has been to give those professional witnesses who are also professional politicians and ideologues an opportunity to exert a considerable influence on public opinion and public policy in matters on which they have a special, if not an eccentric, outlook.

It should not strain credulity to suggest that if there has been prevalent in recent years a somewhat distorted view of the dimensions of the problem of domestic Communism the fault can in large part be charged to the account of the Department of Justice and its professional witnesses.

No man, for example, has had any greater influence on the public view of the Communist problem than Louis F. Budenz. On the basis of his reputation as the government's leading witness in Smith Act cases and before Congressional committees, he has established an almost universal acceptance of himself as a high authority and of his books, articles, lectures, and television discourses as bearing some imagined seal of official approval. Elizabeth Bentley, J. B. Matthews, Benjamin Gitlow, Howard Rushmore, Bella Dodd, and Joseph Kornfeder run not very far behind. (Whittaker Chambers has also been enormously influential, but of him it must be said that his writings lend more authority to his testimony than his testimony lends to his writings. He is not, therefore, of this company.)

Lesser witnesses have established lesser reputations on the strength of their endorsement by the government. Moreover, they have had and are having a direct influence on policy and law—not through appeals to public opinion but through direct appeals to the governing powers. Paul Crouch tells the Senate what to do about Hawaii and how the Army should be run. Matthew Cvetic is called by the Senate Rules Committee to advise on the thorny question of rules for Congressional investigations. Maurice Malkin, the ex-convict, himself eligible for deportation and denaturalization, is called before the Senate Subcommittee on Naturalization and Immigration to make recommendations. (He thought there were too many avenues of appeal. He said that once it is proved that anyone is a member "of a certain organization, he should be deported without further hearings of any sort.") Almost the entire membership of the Department corps was summoned before the Internal Security Subcommittee to help produce the enormous and enormously influential report, "Interlocking Subversion in Government Departments"—a document that more perhaps than any other has formed the prevailing image of Communist infiltration in the nineteen-thirties and forties. The kept witnesses have been given an opportunity to foul American due process and quite a bit else besides.

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 21, 1956, concerning the Southern Regional Council.

For your information, the Southern Regional Council has not been cited as subversive or un-American by this Committee nor by the Attorney General.

CONFIDENTIAL

Confidential Memo

From: SRC Atlanta

To: ~~Friends of SRC~~ Norman Jungersen Ala C H-R

Re: Anonymous attack on SRC ~~xxx~~ (unsigned pamphlet, "Communist, Negroes & Integration)

There follows a section by section commentary on ~~xxxxxx~~ this attack.

I. Introduction

~~1.~~ 1. ~~xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx~~ As a general introduction to the subject of "Communist infltration" and this type of attack see the attached ~~column by Ted Lippman from the Atlanta Constitution of December 22, 1961, and the~~ editorial from the (Greenville, Mississippi) Delta-Democrat Times of August 25, 1957.

2. The FBI, the Justice Department and other federal agencies keep a very close watch on the activities of Communist individuals and groups and those suspected of subversive activities. At no time has the SRC been listed by the FBI, on the U.S. Attorney General's list of subversive organizations or on the similar list issued by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

By contrast the U.S. Attorney General's listing of subversive organizations includes the "Ku Klux Klan". Under the very questionable and illogical procedure of guilt by association it might be assumed that the present governor of Alabama was suspect since it is generally known that he received the full and public support of the KKK when elected.

(Source:U.S. Depratment of Justice, "Organizations Designated Under Executive Order # 10450" & House un-American Activities Committee "Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications, re-issued".)

3. It is a well known fact that the Communist party in the U.S. has been active in seeking support. Negro citizens As no less an authority than J. Edgar Hoover has repeatedly testified, it is a fine commentary on the good sense and deep patriotism of this group of Americans that the Communist have failed so completely in this effort. (Source: Masters of Deceit, J. Edgar Hoover; Henry Holt & Co NY 1958 1958)

4. The pamphlet, Communist, Negroes & Integration" ~~is prepared~~ gives ~~in a skillful way with~~ the impression of substantial documentation. Yet it is interesting that no individual or organization is identified as author or sponsor. It is a highly questionable proceedure to accept at face value any document for which its author(s) will not accept public responsibility. Particularly, when such a document raises serious questions as to the loyalty of established citizens and organizations.

By contrast, this memo is being prepared by the staff of SRC for use by ~~our~~ your friends who do not have the information herein readily available. It is not done to dignify the irresponsible charges made by a person or person who would refuse to associate themselves with their serious charges.

This memo is interested exclusively in SRC and SRC board and staff. We do not subscribe to the methods and charges in the "report" and do not presume to speak in defense of, or to place guilt on, any other organizations or individuals mentioned.

Section II - U.S. House of Representatives, Sub-Committee of the Committee on Un-American Activities.

1. This section of the "report" does not refer to SRC. However, it is of interest that this hearing was held in Atlanta, site of the offices of the SRC, and that no member of the board or Staff of SRC was called to testify.

There is in the SRC files a letter from Congressman Francis E. Walter which states "....the Southern Regional Council has not been cited as subversive or un-American by this Committee nor by the Attorney General."
(Source: Letter, Congressman Walter to George S. Mitchell, copy attached)

Section III- Southern Conference for Human Welfare:

1. As the "report" states, the SCHW was formed - in a spirit of great hope and promise - in 1938. Not until 1944 - some 6 years later - was any question seriously raised about the organization. During that time a number of outstanding and loyal Americans were a part of it. To question their motives or loyalty is absurd. For a fur her interpretation, see the attached editorial from The Atlanta Constitution of May 12, 1953.

2. This section of the report refers to a November 1938 meeting of the SCHW in Birmingham. Mrs. Roosevelt did speak and the President of the United States did send a letter to the meeting. This in itself should give an indication of the nature of that meeting. ~~and the organization~~.

Thereafter - and as an excellent example of the methods of this "report" - the unknown author(s) begin to choose only those facts which fit the purpose at hand.

Since serious charges are being made, under the guise of fact, would not it have been more fair to list all the major participants of this meeting?

From the same source as that listed in the "report" we learn that among those people conveniently ommitted as having participated in the November 20-23, 1938 meeting of the SCHW, are the following:

Judge Louise O. Charlton - General Chairman (Judge, Birmingham, Ala., U.S. Commissioner and Member of State Democratic Exectuve Committee.)

Mrs. William Hughes Tarpley - Vice Chairman, Publicity Committee (president, Jefferson County (Ala.) League of Women Voters)

W. Cooper Green - Chairman, Finance Committee (Postmaster, Birmingham, Ala.)

The Hon. Luther Patrick - Chairman, Sponsorship and Participation Committee (Congressman, Birmingham, Ala.)

The Hon. John H. Bankhead - Honorary Chairman, Farm Tenancy Section (~~tx~~ U.S. Senator, Democrat, Alabama)

John Temple Graves, II. - Co-chairman, Race Relations Section (The late Mr. Graves is most widely known as a writer and newspaper columnist in Birmingham, Ala.)

The Hon. Bibb Graves - Chairman, Frieght Rate Differentials (At that time Mr. Graves was Governor of the State of Alabama)

The Hon. Hugo L. Black - recepient of Award - (Justice, U.S. Supreme Court)

~~The Hon W. Cooper Green - Member of Rules Committee (Mayor of Birmingham, Ala.)~~

From the listing of these prominent and honorable citizens of Alabama one could prove - as readily and as illogically - that the Democratic party of Alabama was subversive. Does more need to be said of the methods used in this report?

(Source - Report of Proceedings of the SCHW - Birmingham, Ala., Nov.20-23, 1938)

3. As late as 1945 (March 24) at a Washington meeting of the SCHW there appeared as speakers or at the speakers table the Vice-President of the United States, a number of Senators ~~and~~, Congressmen and members of the Cabinet and no less a "Suspect" person than the Hon. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina.

Section IV - Southern Conference Education Fund

No mention of SRC

Section V - The Southern Regional Council

1. ~~xxxxx~~ The description of SRC ~~beginning~~ history and functions are largely correct; having been taken in good part from SRC reports.

2. The National Americanism Committee of the American Legion did attack SRC in its publication The Firing Line of May 15, 1957. The attack, like the "report" - except that its authors took responsibility for it - was erroneous and misleading. SRC promptly issued a detailed reply. Copy attached.

Some members of the American Legion were and are in opposition to this sort of attack ~~activity~~. For instance, in 1958, the American Legion of Minnesota appointed a new Subversive Activities Committee composed of a member of the state Selective Service Commission, the Sheriff of Hennepin County and the Chief of police of St. Paul. This committee issued a report, published in the Legion's official journal without dissent, which said in part:

".....your Committee refuses to be a part of unsupported attack on individuals or organizations. We feel that such practices are unfair, undemocratic and in effect, subversive in themselves because they are contrary to America's fundamental precept of innocence until guilt has been proved under due process of law.

"The American Legion, nationally and in Minnesota, has sacrificed some of its prestige and esteem by its zeal in declaring things to be un-American. All too often we have adopted the technique of the dictators when the machinery of democracy would have better served the cause."

3. The SRC does not have available records of the proceedings of the Florida erroneous

Legislative Investigating Committee - 1959 and 1961. However, no member of the board or staff of SRC were called to testify and no records of SRC activities were requested. Under these circumstances, it is most unlikely that any serious investigation of SRC could have been conducted.

4. Prior to his association with SRC, Dr. George S. Mitchell was employed by the C. I. O. ~~Any number of loyal Americans are.~~ (See back for insert)

5. The Southern Regional Council does issue a monthly magazine, New South. Stetson Kennedy did write an article for New South in late 1946. At th t time Stetson Kennedy had written for a number of national publications and had at least two books published by reputable houses. Mr. Kennedy's article on voting in the South is on file for anyone who wishes to read it. A factual analysis of the contributors to the magazine would reveal a distinguished group of Southerners; ~~one of the most recent being the chief of police of Lexington, Kentucky.~~

6. The SRC has received no support from the Fund for the Republic since 1958. However, all references to this support are accurate - though not complete - and the Council is most grateful to the Board of the Fund for this support. Anyone interested in this aspect of the "Report" might find it of interest to read the full report of the Fund. These reports are public and readily available. They show, for instance, that practically every major religious body in the U.S. received aid from the Fund for the Republic, including the Southern Baptist.

7. The Rev. Robert Hughes was the director of the Alabama Council through 1960. Mr. Hughes is now a Methodist missionary in Africa.

8. Frederick B. Routh, formerly Assistant Director of SRC, was at a meeting at Highlander Folk school in 1957. During that year, Mr. Routh probably attended thirty or more conferences and meeting. None of his other appearances proved that Mr. Routh - or SRC - was Baptist, Catholic, Democrat, Republican, or Rotarian, yet he appeared before groups in each category during 1957. His valuable services to his country in military and civilian life needs no documentation here. Mr. Routh is currently executive director of the Michigan FEPC, an official state agency.

9. This section of the "report" ends with a list of persons connected with SRC. Following is a list of these individuals, date of service on the SRC Board, and an identification of them.

Albert W. Dent - 1944 - present. President, Dillard University, New Orleans, La., (See Who's Who - current edition)

Section VI - Directors of SRC

Most of the individuals listed in this section have been referred to in Section V though the accident of that meeting is otherwise incorrect.

Among those not mentioned are:

Leslie W. Dunbar. Mr. Dunbar is Executive Director of SRC. He ~~did speak~~ spoke at Miles College on May 9. 1961. It is of interest that the "report" can find no further comment to make about Mr. Dunbar.

The Rev. C. H. Oliver. Mr. Oliver is prominently associated with the Alabama Council on Human Relations although he is not has never been "Chairman". ~~The SRC is at a loss to explain the information that is reported to have been "sent" Mr. Oliver, although it has no reason to contradict that information.~~

The members (Board of Directors) of the Southern Regional Council are loyal and dedicated Americans. By contrast to unsupported and irresponsible charges it seems appropriate to conclude this section with the full text of a telegram from President John F. Kennedy, sent on the occasion of SRC's annual meeting in 1961. (True copy attached) (repeat telegram)

VII. Alabama Council on Human Relations

The Alabama Council on Human Relations (ACHR) is fully capable of defending itself. However, it may be of vaue to stress the following:

1. The ACHR is not "The Alabama Organ of the SRC." The SRC does give financial assistance to the ACHR but the Alabama Council is completely autonomous with its own directors, staff, and members. Some years ago SRC determined, when helping these state councils become established, that all should be completely independent. This was done with the thought that not only could Southerners best solve their own problems - but that responsible citizens of each state and community could best assess their own needs; the region being an area of great contrast in which no single program or policy could be apprpriate for all.

Insert: Since the founding of SPRC in 1944 it is of interest that out of approximately 300 distinguished Southerners who have served on the board this "report" feel that it could comment on only 19. And, those 19 are discussed without any reference to dates of service.

2. Mr. Hughes was jailed in Bessemer, Alabama. His confinement was the result of his refusal to cooperate with the methods of the grand jury. The "report" does not mention the fact that the Rev. Mr. Hughes was later released and that no charges were or have been brought against him or the ACHR. His appearance was as a witness called in a suit against the New York Times and did not legally concern itself with the ACHR or its membership.

3. Koinonia Kiononia Farms is not - so far as we know - listed by any of the organizations concerned with subversive activity. Mr. Conrad Browne's comment on being "Communist" should have been reproduced without benefit of dots and dashes. It might lead to better evaluation.

4. We are not familar with Cluade Williams of Helena, Alabama though we note that he is said to be only a member and none of the long section devoted to him indicates any influence Mr. Williams has on the ACHR programs or policy.

5. The ACHR is a tax exempt organization. This means of course, that the Internal Revenue Service has carefully surveyed its operations and methods and ruled accordingly.

6. The Rev. Norman C. Jimmerson is the current director of ACHR. He is a Baptist Minister. He was formerly employed as Chaplain of Hopewell Prison, Virginia. If these are the most serious charges that can be brought again the Rev. Mr. Jimmerson, then he must indeed be "as clean as a hounds tooth."

Conclusion:

SRC has not been happy about preparing this memo, for to do so gives a dignity to the anonymous "report" which it does not deserve. However, we have done so in the interest of our friends and supporters in Alabama.

As a final though we would like to agree with the concluding sentence of the report."

"There seems to be little excuse for any reasonably well-informed citizen to continue to associate with these organizations unless said association is knowingly intended."

We wholeheartedly agree.

We have been organized as dedicated and concerned Southerners; dedicated to the belief that the region's problems can be solved by the best of its people and deeply concerned with the enormity and seriousness of the racial problems of the region. An association with these organizations should be in full awareness of and dedication to these ideals. Such is the right - and indeed the duty - of concerned and responsible members of a democratic society.

In October of 1961 Mr. J. Edgar Hoover concluded a report prepared for the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee with these observations:

"Unfortunately there are those who make the very mistake the Communists are so careful to avoid. These individuals concentr te on the negative rather than on the positive. They are merely against co unism without being for any positive measures to eliminate the social, political, and economic frictions which the Communists are so adroit at exploting.

"These persons would do well to recall a recent lesson from history. Both Hitler and Mussolini were against communism. However, it was by what they stood for, not against, that history judged them."

End.

PUBLIC NOTICE

USE OF BROADCAST FACILITIES BY CANDIDATES FOR PUBLIC OFFICE
(Revised)

On September 8, 1954, the Commission issued a Public Notice (FCC 54-1155) entitled "Use of Broadcast Facilities by Candidates for Public Office." Experience has shown that this document has been of great assistance to candidates and broadcasters in understanding their rights and obligations under section 315 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended. Since the above date, many interpretations of section 315 and of its rules have been issued by the Commission. These interpretations have been reviewed carefully; cumulative and repetitious rulings have not been reported while significant rulings have been added to this document. At the same time, a small number of editorial and other revisions have been made with respect to some of the interpretations previously issued.

The information contained herein does not purport to be a discussion of every problem that may arise in the political broadcast field. It is rather a codification of the determinations of the Commission with respect to the problems which have been presented to it and which appear likely to be involved in future campaigns. The purpose of this report is the clarification of licensee responsibility and course of action when situations discussed herein are encountered. In this way, resort to the Commission may be obviated in many instances, and time—which is of such importance in political campaigns—will be conserved. We do not mean to preclude inquiries to the Commission when there is a bona fide doubt as to a licensee's obligations under section 315. But it is believed that the following discussion will, in many instances, remove the need for such inquiries and that licensees will be able to take the necessary prompt action in these cases involving election campaigns in accordance with the interpretations and positions set forth below.

It is to be emphasized that this discussion relates solely to obligations of broadcast licensees under section 315 of the Communications Act and is not intended to treat with the wholly separate question of the treatment by broadcast licensees in the public interest of political or other controversial programs or discussions not falling within the specific provisions of that section. With respect to the responsibilities of broadcast stations for insuring fair and balanced presentation of programs not coming within section 315, but relating to important public issues of a controversial nature including political broadcasts, licensees are referred to the Commission's Report, "Editorializing by Broadcast Licensees" (Vol. 1, Part 3, R. R. 91-201) and the cases cited therein. In this respect it is particularly important that licensees recognize that the special obligations imposed upon them by the provisions of section 315 of the Communications Act with respect to certain types of political broadcasts do not in any way limit the applicability of general public interest concepts of political broadcasts not falling within the provisions of section 315 of the Communications Act. On the contrary, in view of the obvious importance of such programming to our system of representative government it is clear that these precepts, as set forth in the Report referred to above, are of particular applicability to such programming.

We have adopted a question-and-answer format as an appropriate means of delineating the section 315 problems. Wherever possible,[1] references to Commission decisions or rulings are made so that the researcher may, if he desires, profit by the more thorough or expansive statement of the Commission's position found in such decisions. Copies of rulings not otherwise available may be found in a "Political Broadcast" folder kept in the Commission's Public Reference Room. Citations in "R. R." refer to Pike and Fischer, Radio Regulations.

I. The statute. Section 315 of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, provides as follows:

SEC. 315. (a) If any licensee shall permit any person who is a legally qualified candidate for any public office to use a broadcasting station, he shall afford equal opportunities to all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting station: Provided, That such licensee shall have no power of censorship over the material broadcast under the provisions of this section. No obligation is hereby imposed upon any licensee to allow the use of its station by any such candidate.

(b) The charges made for the use of any broadcasting station for any of the purposes set forth in this section shall not exceed the charges made for comparable use of such station for other purposes.

(c) The Commission shall prescribe appropriate rules and regulations to carry out the provisions of this section.

II. The Commission's rules and regulations with respect to political broadcasts. The Commission's rules and regulations with respect to political broadcasts coming within section 315 of the Communications Act are set forth in §§ 3.120 (AM), 3.290 (FM), 3.590 (Non-Commercial Educational FM), and 3.657 (TV), respectively. These provisions are identical (except for elimination of any discussion of charges in § 3.590 relating to non-commercial educational FM stations) and read as follows:

Broadcasts by candidates for public office—(a) Definitions: A "legally qualified candidate" means any person who has publicly announced that he is a candidate for nomination by a convention of a political party or for nomination or election in a primary, special, or general election, municipal, county, state or national, and who meets the qualifications prescribed by the applicable laws to hold the office for which he is a candidate, so that he may be voted for by the electorate directly or by means of delegates or electors, and who

(1) Has qualified for a place on the ballot or

(2) Is eligible under the applicable law to be voted for by sticker, by writing in his name on the ballot, or other method, and

(i) Has been duly nominated by a political party which is commonly known and regarded as such, or

(ii) Makes a substantial showing that he is a bona fide candidate for nomination or office, as the case may be.

(b) General requirements. No station licensee is required to permit the use of its facilities by any legally qualified candidate for public office, but if any licensee shall permit any such candidate to use its facilities, it shall afford equal opportunities to all such other candidates for that office to use such facilities; provided, that such licensee shall have no power of censorship over the material broadcast by any such candidate.

(c) Rates and practices. (1) The rates, if any, charged all such candidates for the same office shall be uniform and shall not be rebated by any means direct or indirect. A candidate shall, in each case, be charged no more than the rate the station would charge if the candidate were a commercial advertiser whose advertising was directed to promoting its business within the same area as that encompassed by the particular office for which such person is a candidate. All discount privileges otherwise offered by a station to commercial advertisers shall be available upon equal terms to all candidates for public office.

[1] A few of the questions taken up within have been presented to the Commission informally—that is, through telephone conversations or conferences with station representatives. They are set out in this Report because of the likelihood of their recurrence and the fact that no extended Commission discussion is necessary to dispose of them; the answer in each case is clear from the language of section 315.

(2) In making time available to candidates for public office no licensee shall make any discrimination between candidates in charges, practices, regulations, facilities, or services for or in connection with the service rendered pursuant to this part, or make or give any preference to any candidate for public office or subject any such candidate to any prejudice or disadvantage; nor shall any licensee make any contract or other agreement which shall have the effect of permitting any legally qualified candidate for any public office to broadcast to the exclusion of other legally qualified candidates for the same public office.

(d) Records; inspection. Every licensee shall keep and permit public inspection of a complete record of all requests for broadcast time made by or on behalf of candidates for public office, together with an appropriate notation showing the disposition made by the licensee of such requests, and the charges made, if any, if request is granted. Such records shall be retained for a period of two years.

In addition, the attention of licensees is directed to the provisions of §§ 3.119 (b), 3.289 (b) and 3.654 (b) which provide in identical language:

(b) In the case of any political program or any program involving the discussion of public controversial issues for which any records, transcriptions, talent, scripts, or other material or services of any kind are furnished, either directly or indirectly, to a station as an inducement to the broadcasting of such program, an announcement shall be made both at the beginning and conclusion of such program on which such material or services are used that such records, transcriptions, talent, scripts, or other material or services have been furnished to such station in connection with the broadcasting of such program: provided, however, that only one such announcement need be made in the case of any such program of five minutes' duration or less, which announcement may be made either at the beginning or the conclusion of the program.

III. Programs coming within section 315. In general, any use of broadcast facilities by a legally qualified candidate for public office, imposes an obligation on licensees to afford "equal opportunities" to all other such candidates for the same office.

A. Types of uses.

1. Q. Does section 315 apply to one speaking for or on behalf of the candidate, as contrasted with the candidate himself?

A. No. The section applies only to legally qualified candidates. Candidate A has no legal right under section 315 to demand time where B, not a candidate, has spoken against A or in behalf of another candidate. (Felix v. Westinghouse Radio Stations, 186 F. 2d 1, cert. den. 341 U. S. 909.)

2. Q. Does section 315 confer rights on a political party as such?

A. No. It applies in favor of legally qualified candidates for public office, and is not concerned with the rights of political parties, as such. (Letter to National Laugh Party, dated May 8, 1957.)

3. Q. Does section 315 require stations to afford "equal opportunities" in the use of their facilities in support of or in opposition to a public question to be voted on in an election?

A. No. Section 315 has no application to the discussion of political issues, as such, but is concerned with the use of broadcast stations by legally qualified candidates for public office.

B. What constitutes a "use" of broadcast facilities entitling opposing candidates to "equal opportunities"?

4. Q. If a legally qualified candidate secures air time but does not discuss matters directly related to his candidacy, is this a use of facilities under section 315?

A. Yes. Section 315 does not distinguish between the uses of broadcast time by a candidate, and the licensee is not authorized to pass on requests for time by opposing candidates on the basis of the licensee's evaluation of whether the original use was or was not in aid of a candidacy. (WMCA, Inc., 7 R. R. 1132.)

5. Q. Must a broadcaster give equal time to a candidate whose opponent has broadcast in some other capacity than as a candidate?

A. Yes. For example, a weekly report of a Congressman to his constituents via radio or television is a broadcast by a legally qualified candidate for public office as soon as he becomes a candidate for reelection, and his opponent must be given "equal opportunities" for time on the air. Any "use" of a station by a candidate, in whatever capacity, entitles his opponent to "equal opportunities." (Station KNGS, 7 R.R. 1130.)

6. Q. If a candidate appears on a variety program for a very brief bow or statement, are his opponents entitled to "equal opportunities" on the basis of this brief appearance?

A. Yes. All appearances of a candidate, no matter how brief or perfunctory, are a "use" of a station's facilities within section 315.

7. Q. If a candidate is accorded station time for a speech in connection with a ceremonial activity or other public service, is an opposing candidate entitled to equal utilization of the station's facilities?

A. Yes. Section 315 contains no exception with respect to broadcasts by legally qualified candidates carried "in the public interest" or as a "public service." It follows that the station's broadcast of the candidate's speech was a "use" of the facilities of the station by a legally qualified candidate giving rise to an obligation by the station under section 315 to afford "equal opportunities" to other legally qualified candidates for the same office. (Letter to CBS (WBBM), dated October 31, 1952; Letter to KFI, dated October 31, 1952.)

8. Q. If a station arranges for a debate between the candidates of two parties, or presents the candidates of two parties in a press conference format or so-called forum program, is the station required to make equal time available to other candidates?

A. Yes. The appearance of candidates on the above types of programs constitutes a "use" of the licensee's facilities by legally qualified candidates and, therefore, other candidates for the same office are entitled to "equal opportunities." (Letter to Harold Oliver, dated October 31, 1952; Letter to Julius F. Brauner, dated October 31, 1952.)

9. Q. Are acceptance speeches by successful candidates for nomination for the candidacy of a particular party for a given office, a use by a legally qualified candidate for election to that office?

A. Yes. Where the successful candidate for nomination becomes legally qualified as a candidate for election as a result of the nomination. (Progressive Party, 7 R. R. 1300.)

10. Q. Does section 315 apply to broadcasts by a legally qualified candidate where such broadcasts originate and are limited to a foreign station whose signals are received in the United States?

A. No. Section 315 applies only to stations licensed by the FCC. (Letter to Gregory Pillon, dated July 19, 1955.)

11. Q. If a station owner, or a station advertiser, or a person regularly employed as a station announcer were to make any appearances over a station after having qualified as a candidate for public office, would section 315 apply?

A. Yes. Such appearances of a candidate are a "use" under section 315. (Letters to KUGN, dated April 9, 1958; to KTTV, 14 R. R. 1227; and to Kenneth Spengler, 14 R. R. 1226b, respectively.)

12. Q. When a station, as part of a newscast, uses film clips showing a legally qualified candidate participating as one of a group in official ceremonies and the newscaster, in commenting on the ceremonies, mentions the candidate and others by name and describes their participation, has there been a "use" under section 315?

A. No. Since the facts clearly showed that the candidate had in no way directly or indirectly initiated either filming or presentation of the event, and that the broadcast was nothing more than a routine newscast by the station in the exercise of its judgment as to newsworthy events. (Letter to Allen Blondy, 14 R. R. 1199.)

IV. Who is a legally qualified candidate?

13. Q. How can a station know which candidates are "legally qualified?"

A. The determination as to who is a legally qualified candidate for a particular public office within the meaning of section 315 and the Commission's rules must be determined by reference to the law of the state in which the election is being held. In general, a candidate is legally qualified if he can be voted for in the state or district in which the election is being held, and, if elected, is eligible to serve in the office in question.

14. Q. Need a candidate be on the ballot to be legally qualified?

A. Not always. The term "legally qualified candidate" is not restricted to persons whose names appear on the printed ballot; the term may embrace persons not listed on the ballot if such persons are making a bona fide race for the office involved and the names of such persons, or their electors can, under applicable law, be written in by voters so as to result in their valid election. The Commission recognizes, however, that the mere fact that any name may be written in does not entitle all persons who may publicly announce themselves as candidates to demand time under section 315; broadcast stations may make suitable and reasonable requirements with respect to proof of the bona fide nature of any candidacy on the part of applicants for the use of facilities under section 315. (§§ 3.120; 3.290, 3.657; Socialist Labor Party, 7 R. R. 766; Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., 7 R. R. 1189; Press Release of November 26, 1941 (Mimeo 55732).)

15. Q. May a station deny a candidate "equal opportunities" because it believes that the candidate has no possibility of being elected or nominated?

A. No. Section 315 does not permit any such subjective determination by the station with respect to a candidate's chances of nomination or election. (Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., 7 R. R. 1189.)

16. Q. May a person be considered to be a legally qualified candidate where he has made only a public announcement of his candidacy and has not yet filed the required forms or paid the required fees for securing a place on the ballot in either the primary or general elections?

A. The answer depends on applicable state law. In same states persons may be voted for by electorate whether or not they have gone through the procedures required for getting their names placed on the ballot itself. In such a state, the announcement of a person's candidacy—if determined to be bona fide—is sufficient to bring him within the purview of section 315. In other states, however, candidates may not be "legally qualified" until they have fulfilled certain prescribed procedures. The applicable state laws and the particular facts surrounding the announcement of the candidacy are determinatives. (Letter to Senator Earle C. Clements, dated February 2, 1954.)

17. Q. Must a station make time available upon demand to a candidate of the Communist Party, or a candidate who is a member of the Communist Party, if it has afforded time to that candidate's opponents for the office in question?

A. If the person involved is a legally qualified candidate for the office he is seeking, section 315 requires that "equal opportunities" be afforded him. It will be recognized that who is a legally qualified candidate is dependent upon federal, state, and local law pertaining to the elective process and is not based upon provision of the Communications Act or the rules of the Commission.

The question of the specific applicability of these principles, in the light of the enactment of the Communist Control Act of 1954, to candidates of the Communist Party or who are members of the Communist Party has not yet been determined.

18. Q. When is a person a legally qualified candidate for nomination as the candidate of a party for President or Vice President of the United States?

A. In view of the fact that a person may be nominated for these offices by the conventions of his party without having appeared on the ballot of any state having presidential primary elections, or having any pledged votes prior to the convention, or even announcing his willingness to be a candidate, no fixed rule can be promulgated in answer to this question. Whether a person so claiming is in fact a bona fide candidate will depend on the particular facts of each situation, including consideration of what efforts, if any, he has taken to secure delegates or preferential votes in state primaries. It cannot, however, turn on the licensee's evaluation of the claimant's chances for success. (Letter of May 28, 1952 to Julius F. Brauner.)

19. Q. Has a claimant under section 315 sufficiently established his legal qualifications when the facts show that after qualifying for a place on the ballot for a particular office in the primary, he notified state officials of his withdrawal therefrom and then later claimed he had not really intended to withdraw, and where the facts further indicated that he was supporting another candidate for the same office and was seeking the nomination for an office other than the one for which he claimed to be qualified?

A. No. Where a question is raised concerning a claimant's legal qualification, it is incumbent on him to prove that he is in fact legally qualified. The facts here did not constitute an unequivocal showing of legal qualification. (Letter to Lar Daly, dated April 11, 1956; letter to American Vegetarian Party, dated November 6, 1956.)

20. Q. If a candidate establishes his legal qualifications only after the date of nomination or election for the office for which he was contending, is he entitled to equal opportunities which would have been available had he timely qualified?

A. No, for once the date of nomination or election for an office has passed, it cannot be said that one who failed timely to qualify therefor is still a "candidate." The holding of the primary or general election terminates the possibility of affording "equal opportunities", thus mooting the question of what rights the claimant might have been entitled to under section 315 before the election. (Letter to Socialist Workers' Party, dated December 13, 1956; letter to Lar Daly, 14 R. R. 713, appeal sub. nom. Daly v. U. S., Case No. 11,946 (C. A. 7th Cir.) dismissed as moot Mar. 7, 1957; cert. den. 355 U. S. 826.)

21. Q. Under the circumstances stated in the preceding question, is any post-election remedy available to the candidate, before the Commission, under section 315?

A. None, insofar as a candidate may desire retroactive "equal opportunities." But this is not to suggest that a station can avoid its statutory obligation under section 315 by waiting until an election has been held and only then disposing of demands for "equal opportunities." Idem.

22. Q. When a state Attorney General or other appropriate state official having jurisdiction to decide a candidate's legal qualification has ruled that a candidate is not legally qualified under local election laws, can a licensee be required to afford such "candidate" "equal opportunities" under section 315?

A. In such instances, the ruling of the state Attorney General or other official will prevail, absent a judicial determination. (Telegram to Ralph Muncy, November 5, 1954; letter to Socialist Workers' Party, dated November 23, 1956.)

V. When are candidates opposing candidates?

23. Q. What public offices are included within the meaning of section 315?

A. Under the Commission's rules, section 315 is applicable to both primary and general elections, and public offices include all offices filled by special or general election on a municipal, county, state or national level as well as the nomination by any recognized party of a candidate for such an office.

24. Q. May the station under section 315 make time available to all candidates for one office and refuse all candidates for another office?

A. Yes. The "equal opportunities" requirement of section 315 is limited to all legally qualified candidates for the same office.

25. Q. If the station makes time available to candidates seeking the nomination of one party for a particular office, does section 315 require that it make equal time available to the candidates seeking the nomination of other parties for the same office?

A. No, the Commission has held that while both primary elections or nominating conventions and general elections are comprehended within the terms of section 315, the primary elections or conventions held by one party are to be considered separately from the primary elections or conventions of other parties, and, therefore, insofar as section 315 is concerned, "equal opportunities" need only be afforded legally qualified candidates for nomination for the same office at the same party's primary or nominating convention. (KWFT, Inc., 4 R. R. 885; Letter to Arnold Petersen, 11 R. R. 234; Letter to WCDL, April 3, 1953.)

26. Q. If the station makes time available to all candidates of one party for nomination for a particular office, including the successful candidate, may candidates of other parties in the general election demand an equal amount of time under section 315?

VI. What constitutes equal opportunities?

27. Q. Generally speaking, what constitutes "equal opportunities?"

A. Under section 315 and §§ 3.120, 3.290, and 3.657 of the Commission's rules, no licensee shall make any discrimination in charges, practices, regulations, facilities, or services rendered to candidates for a particular office.

28. Q. Is a licensee required or allowed to give time free to one candidate where it had sold time to an opposing candidate?

A. The licensee is not permitted to discriminate between the candidates in any way. With respect to any particular election it may adopt a policy of selling time, or of giving time to the candidates free of charge, or of giving them some time and selling them additional time. But whatever policy it adopts it must treat all candidates for the same office alike with respect to the time they may secure free and that for which they must pay.

29. Q. Is a station's obligation under section 315 met if it offers a candidate the same amount of time an opposing candidate has received, where the time of the day or week afforded the first candidate is superior to that offered his opponent?

A. No. The station in providing "equal opportunities" must consider the desirability of the time segment allotted as well as its length. And while there is no requirement that a station afford candidate B exactly the same time of day on exactly the same day of the week as candidate A, the time segments offered must be comparable as to desirability.

30. Q. If candidate A has been afforded time during early morning, noon and evening hours, does a station comply with section 315 by offering candidate B time only during early morning and noon periods?

A. No. However, the requirements of comparable time do not require a station to make available exactly the same time periods, nor the periods requested by candidate B. (Letter to D. L. Grace, dated July 3, 1958.)

31. Q. Is it necessary for a station to advise a candidate or a political party that time has been sold to other candidates?

A. No. The law does not require that this be done. If a candidate inquires, however, the facts must be given him. It should be noted here that a station is required to keep a public record of all requests for time by or on behalf of political candidates, together with a record of the disposition and the charges made, if any, for each broadcast. (§§ 3.120 (d), 3.290 (d), 3.657 (d).)

32. Q. If a station offers free time to opposing candidates and one candidate declines to use the time given him, are other candidates for that office foreclosed from availing themselves of the offer?

A. No. The refusal of one candidate does not foreclose other candidates wishing to use the time offered. However, whether the candidate initially declining the offer could later avail himself of "equal opportunities" would depend on all the facts and circumstances. (Letter to Leonard Marks, 14 R. R. 65.)

33. Q. If one political candidate buys station facilities more heavily than another, is a station required to call a halt to such sales because of the resulting imbalance?

A. No. Section 315 requires only that all candidates be afforded "equal opportunities" to use the facilities of the station. (Letter to Mrs. M. R. Oliver, 11 R. R. 239.)

34. Q. If the candidate has received free time for a period of time and subsequently a second candidate announces his candidacy, is the second candidate entitled to equal facilities retroactive to the date when the first candidate announced his candidacy?

A. Normally, yes. Once the station has made time available to one qualified candidate, its obligation to provide equal facilities to future candidates begins. A candidate cannot, however, delay his request for time and expect to use the "equal opportunities" provision to force a station to turn over most of the last few pre-election days to him in order to "saturate" pre-election broadcast time. (Letter to Congressman Hunter, dated May 28, 1952; Letter to Congressman Frelinghuysen, 11 R. R. 245.)

35. Q. If a station has a policy of confining political broadcasts to sustaining time, but has so many requests for political time that it cannot handle them all within its sustaining schedule, may it refuse time to a candidate whose opponent has already been granted time, on the basis of its established policy of not cancelling commercial programs in favor of political broadcasts?

A. No. The station cannot rely upon its policy if the latter conflicts with the "equal opportunities" requirement of section 315. (Stephens Bctg. Co., 3 R. R. 1.)

36. Q. If one candidate has been nominated by Parties A, B, and C, while a second candidate for the same office is nominated only by Party D, how should time be allocated as between the two candidates?

A. Section 315 has reference only to the use of facilities by persons who are candidates for public office and not to the political parties which may have nominated such candidates. Accordingly, if broadcast time is made available for the use of a candidate for public office, the provisions of section 315 require that "equal opportunities" be afforded each person who is a candidate for the same office, without regard to the number of nominations that any particular candidate may have. (Letter to Thomas W. Wilson, dated October 31, 1946.)

37. Q. If a station broadcasts a program sponsored by a commercial advertiser which includes one or more qualified candidates as speakers or guests, what are its obligations with respect to affording "equal opportunities" to other candidates for the same office?

A. If candidates are permitted to appear without cost to themselves, on programs sponsored by commercial advertisers, opposing candidates are entitled to receive comparable time, also at no cost. (Letter to Senator Monroney, 11 R. R. 451.)

38. Q. Where a candidate for office in a state or local election appears on a national network program, is an opposing candidate for the same office entitled to equal facilities over stations which carried the original program and serve the area in which the election campaign is occurring?

A. Yes. Under such circumstances an opposing candidate would be entitled to time on such stations. (Letter to Senator Monroney, dated October 9, 1952.)

39. Q. Where a candidate appears on a particular program—such as a regular series of forum programs—are opposing candidates entitled on demand to appear on the same program?

A. Not necessarily. The mechanics of the problem of "equal opportunities" must be left to resolution of the parties. And while factors such as the size of the potential audience because of the appearance of the first candidate on an established or popular program might very well be a matter for consideration by the parties, it cannot be said, in the abstract, that "equal opportunities" could only be provided by giving opposing parties time on the same program. (Letter to Harold Oliver, dated October 31, 1952; Letter to Julius F. Brauner, dated October 31, 1952.)

40. Q. Where a station asks candidates A and B (opposing candidates in a primary election) to appear on a debate-type program, the format of which is determined by the station but with no restrictions as to what issues or matters might be discussed, and candidate A accepts the offer and appears on the program and candidate B declines to appear on the program, is candidate B entitled to further "equal opportunities" in the use of the station's facilities within the meaning of section 315 of the act? If so, is any such obligation met by offering candidate B, prior to the primary, an opportunity to appear on a program of comparable format to that on which candidate A appeared, or is the station obligated to grant candidate B time equal to that used by candidate A on the program in question unrestricted as to format?

A. Since the station's format was reasonable in structure and the station put no restrictions on what matters and issues might be discussed by candidate B and others who appeared on the program in question, it offered candidate B "equal opportunities" in the use of its facilities within the meaning of section 315 of the act. The station's further offer to candidate B, prior to the primary, of its facilities on a "comparable format" was reasonable under the facts of the case, consistent with any continuing obligation to afford candidate B "equal opportunities" in the use of the station which he may have had. (Letter to Congressman Bob Wilson, dated August 1, 1958.)

41. Q. In affording "equal opportunities", may a station limit the use of its facilities solely to the use of a microphone?

A. A station must treat opposing candidates the same with respect to the use of its facilities and if it permits one candidate to use facilities over and beyond the microphone, it must permit a similar usage by other qualified candidates. (Letter to D. L. Grace, dated July 3, 1958.)

42. Q. Can a station contract with the committee of a political party whereby it commits itself in advance of an election to furnish substantial blocks of time to the candidates of that party?

A. Neither section 315 nor the Commission's rules prohibit a licensee from contracting with a party for reservation of time in advance of an election. However, substantial questions as to a possible violation of section 315 would arise if the effect of such prior commitment were to disable a licensee from meeting its "equal opportunities" obligations under section 315. (Letter to Congressman Karsten, dated Nov. 25, 1955.)

VII. What limitations can be put on the use of facilities by a candidate?

43. Q. May a station delete material in a broadcast under section 315 because it believes the material contained therein is or may be libelous?

A. No. Any such action would entail censorship which is expressly prohibited by section 315 of the Communications Act. (Port Huron Bctg. Co., 4 R. R. 1; WDSU Bctg. Co., 7 R. R. 769.)

44. Q. If a legally qualified candidate broadcasts libelous or slanderous remarks, is the station liable therefor?

A. In Port Huron Bctg. Co., 4 R. R. 1, the Commission expressed an opinion that licensees not directly participating in the libel might be absolved from any liability they might otherwise incur under state law, because of the operation of section 315, which precludes them from preventing a candidate's utterances. In two recent decisions, the courts have agreed with the Commission's holding in the Port Huron case, holding that since a licensee could not censor a broadcast under section 315, Congress could not have intended to compel a station to broadcast libelous statements of a legally qualified candidate and at the same time subject itself to the risk of damage suits. (Farmers Educational & Cooperative Union of America v. WDAY, Inc., ___ N. D. ___, 89 N. W. 2d 102 (Petition for cert. filed); Lamb v. Sutton, ___ Fed. Supp. ___ (D. C. Tenn., 1958.))

45. Q. Does the same immunity apply in a case where the Chairman of a political party's campaign committee, not himself a candidate, broadcasts a speech in support of a candidate?

A. No. Licensees "are, therefore, not entitled to assert the defense that they are not liable because the speeches could not have been censored without violating section 315 and that accordingly they were not at fault in permitting the speeches to be broadcast." (Felix v. Westinghouse Radio Stations, 186 F. 2d 1, cert. den. 341 U. S. 909.)

46. Q. If a candidate secures time under section 315, must he talk about a subject directly related to his candidacy?

A. No. The candidate may use the time as he deems best. To deny a person time on the ground that he was not using it in furtherance of his candidacy would be an exercise of censorship prohibited by section 315 (WMCA, Inc., 7 R. R. 1132).

47. Q. If a station makes time available to an office holder who is also a legally qualified candidate for re-election and the office holder limits his talks to non-partisan and informative material, may other legally qualified candidates who obtain time be limited to the same subjects or the same type of broadcast?

A. No. Other qualified candidates may use the facilities as they deem best in their own interest. (Letter to Congressman Allen Oakley Hunter, 11 R. R. 234.)

48. Q. May a station require an advance script of a candidate's speech?

A. Yes, provided that the practice is uniformly applied to all candidates for the same office using the station's facilities, and the station does not undertake to censor the candidate's talk. (Letter to H. A. Rosenberg, Louisville, Ky., 11 R. R. 236.)

49. Q. May a station have a practice of requiring a candidate to record his proposed broadcast at his own expense?

A. Yes. Provided again that the procedures adopted are applied without discrimination as between candidates for the same office and no censorship is attempted. (Letter to H. A. Rosenberg, Louisville, Ky., 11 R. R. 236.)

VIII. What rates can be charged candidates for programs under section 315?

50. Q. May a station charge premium rates for political broadcasts?

A. No. Section 315, as amended, provides that the charges made for the use of a station by a candidate "shall not exceed the charges made for comparable use of such stations for other purposes."

51. Q. Does the requirement that the charges to a candidate "shall not exceed the charges for comparable use" of a station for other purposes apply to political broadcasts by persons other than qualified candidates?

A. No. This requirement applies only to candidates for public office. Hence, a station may adopt whatever policy it desires for political broadcasts by organizations or persons who are not candidates for office, consistent with its obligation to operate in the public interest. (Letter to Congressman Diggs, Jr., dated March 16, 1955.)

52. Q. May a station with both "national" and "local" rates charge a candidate for local office its "national" rate?

A. No. Under §§ 3.120, 3.290 and 3.657 of the Commission's rules a station may not charge a candidate more than the rate the station would charge if the candidate were a commercial advertiser whose advertising was directed to promoting its business within the same area as that within which persons may vote for the particular office for which such person is a candidate.

53. Q. Considering the limited geographical area which a member of the House of Representatives serves, must candidates for the House be charged the "local" instead of the "national" rate?

A. This question cannot be answered categorically. To determine the maximum rates which could be charged under section 315, the Commission would have to know the criteria a station uses in classifying "local" versus "national" advertisers before it could determine what are "comparable charges." In making this determination, the Commission does not prescribe rates but merely requires equality of treatment as between 315 broadcasts and commercial advertising. (Letter to Congressman Simpson, dated Feb. 27, 1957.)

54. Q. Is a political candidate entitled to receive discounts?

A. Yes. Under §§ 3.120, 3.290 and 3.657 of the Commission's rules political candidates are entitled to the same discounts that would be accorded persons other than candidates for public office under the conditions specified, as well as to such special discounts for programs coming within section 315 as the station may choose to give on a non-discriminatory basis.

55. Q. Can a station refuse to sell time at discount rates to a group of candidates for different offices who have pooled their resources to obtain a discount, even though as a matter of commercial practice, the station permits commercial advertisers to buy a block of time at discount rates for use by various businesses owned by a single advertiser?

A. Yes. Section 315 specifically provides that a station need not permit the use of its facilities by candidates, and neither that section nor the Commission's rules require a station to sell time to a group of candidates on a pooled basis, even though such may be the practice with respect to commercial advertisers. (Letter to WKBT-WKBH, dated Oct. 14, 1954.)

56. Q. If candidate A purchases ten time segments over a station which offers a discount rate for purchase of that amount of time, is candidate B entitled to the discount rate if he purchases less time than the minimum to which discounts are applicable?

A. No. A station is under such circumstances only required to make available the discount privileges to each legally qualified candidate on the same basis.

57. Q. If a station has a "spot" rate of two dollars per "spot" announcement, with a rate reduction to one dollar if 100 or more such "spots" are purchased on a bulk time sales contract, and if one candidate arranges with an advertiser having such a bulk time contract to utilize five of these spots at the one dollar rate, is the station obligated to sell the candidates of other parties for the same office time at the same one dollar rate?

A. Yes. Other legally qualified candidates are entitled to take advantage of the same reduced rate. (Letter to Senator Monroney, dated October 16, 1952.)

58. Q. Where a group of candidates for different offices pool their resources to purchase a block of time at a discount, and an individual candidate opposing one of the group seeks time on the station, to what rate is he entitled?

A. He is entitled to be charged the same rate as his opponent since the provisions of section 315 run to the candidates themselves and they are entitled to be treated equally with their individual opponents. (Report and Order, Docket 11092, 11 R. R. 1501.)

59. Q. Is there any prohibition against the purchase by a political party of a block of time for several of its candidates, for allocation among such candidates on the basis of personal need, rather than on the amount each candidate has contributed to the party's campaign fund?

A. There is no prohibition in section 315 or the Commission's rules against the above practices. It would be reasonable to assume that the group time used by a candidate is, for the purposes of section 315, time paid for by the candidate through the normal device of a recognized political campaign committee, even though part of the campaign funds was derived from sources other than the candidates' contributions. (Letter to Edward de Grazia, dated Oct. 14, 1954.)

60. Q. When a candidate and his immediate family own all the stock in a corporate licensee and the candidate is the president and general manager, can he pay for time to the corporate licensee from which he derives his income and have the licensee make a similar charge to an opposing candidate?

A. Yes. The fact that a candidate has a financial interest in a corporate licensee does not affect the licensee's obligation under section 315. Thus, the rates which the licensee may charge to other legally qualified candidates will be governed by the rate which the stockholder candidate actually pays to the licensee. If no charge is made to the stockholder candidate, it follows that other legally qualified candidates are entitled to equal time without charge. (Letter to Charles W. Stratton, dated March 18, 1957.)

IX. Issuance of interpretations of section 315 by the Commission.

61. Q. Under what circumstances will the Commission consider issuing declaratory orders, interpretive rulings or advisory opinions with respect to section 315?

A. Section 5 (d) of the Administrative Procedure Act, Title 5, U. S. C. A., provides that "The agency is authorized in its sound discretion, with like effect as in the case of other orders, to issue a declaratory order to terminate a controversy or remove uncertainty." However, agencies are not required to issue such orders merely because a request is made therefor. The grant of authority to agencies to issue declaratory orders is limited, and such orders are authorized only with respect to matters which are required by statute to be determined "on the record after opportunity for an agency hearing." See Attorney General's Manual on the Administrative Procedure Act, pp. 59, 60; also, In re Goodman, 4 Pike & Fischer R. R. 98. In general, the Commission limits its interpretive rulings or advisory opinions to situations where the critical facts are explicitly stated without the possibility that subsequent events will alter them. Rather, it prefers to issue such rulings or opinions where the specific facts of a particular case in controversy are before it for decision. (Letter to Pierson, Ball & Dowd, dated June 18, 1958.)

FCC 60-1050
PUBLIC NOTICE

September 8, 1960

SUPPLEMENT TO USE OF BROADCAST FACILITIES BY CANDIDATES FOR PUBLIC OFFICE (Revised)

On October 1, 1958, the Commission issued its Public Notice (FCC 58-936) revising its earlier Public Notice (54-1155) on the "Use of Broadcast Facilities by Candidates for Public Office." This document set forth in question and answer form Commission rulings and interpretations with respect to section 315 of the Communications Act. It is the purpose of this Supplement to apprise licensees and other interested parties of important changes in the law and the Commission's rules governing political broadcasts which have occurred since the last revision of the Public Notice on this subject, and of additional significant rulings thereunder.

Statutory changes. On September 14, 1959, section 315(a) of the Communications Act, 47 U.S.C. 315(a), was amended[1] to exempt appearances by legally qualified candidates on certain types of news programs from the "equal opportunities" requirements of section 315. Section 315(a), as amended, provides as follows:

SEC. 315(a) If any licensee shall permit any person who is a legally qualified candidate for any public office to use a broadcasting station, he shall afford equal opportunities to all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting stations: Provided, That such licensee shall have no power of censorship over the material broadcast under the provisions of this section. No obligation is hereby imposed upon any licensee to allow the use of its station by any such candidate. Appearance by a legally qualified candidate on any—

(1) bona fide newscast,

(2) bona fide news interview,

(3) bona fide news documentary (if the appearance of the candidate is incidental to the presentation of the subject or subjects covered by the news documentary), or

(4) on-the-spot coverage of bona fide news events (including but not limited to political conventions and activities incidental thereto), shall not be deemed to be use of a broadcasting station within the meaning of this subsection. Nothing in the foregoing sentence shall be construed as relieving broadcasters, in connection with the presentation of newscasts, news interviews, news documentaries, and on-the-spot coverage of news events, from the obligation imposed upon them under this Act to operate in the public interest and to afford reasonable opportunity for the discussion of conflicting views on issues of public importance.

On August 24, 1960, Senate Joint Resolution 207 was signed by the President. Said Resolution reads as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That that part of section 315(a) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, which requires any licensee of a broadcast station who permits any person who is a legally qualified candidate for any public office to use a broadcasting station to afford equal opportunities to all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting station, is suspended for the period of the 1960 presidential and vice presidential campaigns with respect to nominees for the offices of President and Vice President of the United States. Nothing in the foregoing shall be construed as relieving broadcasters from the obligation imposed upon them under this Act to operate in the public interest.

(2) The Federal Communications Commission shall make a report to the Congress, not later than March 1, 1961, with respect to the effect of the provisions of this joint resolution and any recommendations the Commission may have for amendments to the Communications Act of 1934 as a result of experience under the provisions of this joint resolution.

Changes in rules. On July 31, 1959, the Commission amended §§ 3.120, 3.290, 3.590 and 3.657 of its rules (FCC 59-797) by adding two new subsections, reading as follows:

(e) A request for equal opportunities must be submitted to the licensee within one week of the day on which the prior use occurred.

(f) A candidate requesting such equal opportunities of the licensee, or complaining of non-compliance to the Commission, shall have the burden of proving that he and his opponent are legally qualified candidates for the same public office.

In light of the above amendments to the Act and the rules, the rulings in the Commission's Public Notice of October 1, 1958, insofar as they are inconsistent with said amendments, are modified accordingly.

Additional rulings.

A. Q. A Philadelphia TV station had been presenting a weekly program called "Eye on Philadelphia." This program consisted of personalities being interviewed by a station representative. Three candidates for the office of Mayor of Philadelphia, representing different political parties, appeared on the program. Would a write-in candidate for Mayor be entitled to "equal opportunities?"

A. No, since it was ascertained that the appearances of the three mayoralty candidates were on a bona fide, regularly scheduled news interview program and that such appearances were determined by the station's news director on the basis of newsworthiness. (Telegram to Joseph A. Schafer, November 2, 1959.)

B. Q. A local weathercaster who was a candidate for re-election for Representative in the Texas Legislature was regularly employed by an AM and TV station in Texas. His weathercasts contained no references to political matters. He was identified over the air while a candidate as the "TX Weatherman." Would his opponent be entitled to "equal opportunities?"

[1] Public Law No. 86-274, 86th Cong., 73 Stat. 557. Section 2(a) of Public Law No. 86-174 declares it to be the intention of Congress "to reexamine from time to time the amendment to section 315(a) * * * to ascertain whether such amendment has proved to be effective and practicable." To assist Congress in such re-examinations, Section 2(b) requires the Commission to report annually to Congress regarding "(1) the information and data used by it in determining questions arising from or connected with such amendment, and (2) such recommendations as it deems necessary in the public interest."

A. No. The Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit ruled that the weathercaster's appearance did not involve anything but a bona fide effort to present the news; that he was not identified by name but only as the "TX Weatherman"; that his employment did not arise out of the election campaign but was a regular job; and that the facts did not reveal any favoritism on the part of the stations or any intent to discriminate among candidates. (Letter to KWTX Broadcasting Co., March 16, 1960; Brigham v. FCC, 276 F. 2d 828 (C.A. 5), April 19, 1960.)

C. Q. A sheriff who was a candidate for nomination for U.S. Representative in Congress conducted a daily program, regularly scheduled since 1958, on which he reported on the activities of his office. He terminated each program with a personal "Thought for the Day." Would his opponent be entitled to "equal opportunities?"

A. Yes. In light of the fact that the format and content of the program were determined by the sheriff and not by the station, the program was not of the type intended by Congress to be exempt from the "equal opportunities" requirement of Section 315. (Letter to Station WCLG, April 27, 1960.)

D. Q. Certain networks had presented over their facilities various candidates for the Democratic nomination for President on the programs "Meet the Press", "Face the Nation" and "College News Conference." Said programs were regularly scheduled and consisted of questions being asked of prominent individuals by newsmen and others. Would a candidate for the same nomination in a state primary be entitled to "equal opportunities?"

A. No. The programs were regularly scheduled, bona fide news interviews and were of the type which Congress intended to exempt from the "equal opportunities" requirement of Section 315. (Letter to Andrew J. Easter, April 28, 1960; letters to Charles V. Falkenberg, May 12 and June 13, 1960.)

E. Q. A candidate for the Democratic nomination for President was interviewed on a network program known as "Today." It was shown that this was a daily program emphasizing news coverage, news documentaries and on-the-spot coverage of news events; that the determination as to the content and format of the interview and the candidate's participation therein was made by the network in the exercise of its news judgment and not for the candidate's political advantage; that the questions asked of the candidate were determined by the director of the program; and that the candidate was selected because of his newsworthiness and the network's desire to interview him concerning current problems and events. Would the candidate's opponent be entitled to "equal opportunities?"

A. No, since the appearance of the candidate was on a program which was exempt from the "equal opportunities" requirement of Section 315. (Telegram to Lar Daly, July 6, 1960.)

F. Q. A candidate for the Democratic nomination for President appeared on a network variety show. A claimant for "equal opportunities" showed that his name had been on the ballots in the Democratic presidential primary elections in two states; that the network had shown him a film on a program concerned with the various 1960 presidential candidates; and that he was continuing his efforts as a candidate for the Democratic nomination. Would the claimant be entitled to "equal opportunities?"

A. Yes, since the appearance of the first candidate was on a program which was not exempt from the "equal opportunities" requirement of Section 315 and the claimant had shown that he was a "legally qualified" candidate for the nomination for the same office. (Telegram to NBC, July 6, 1960.)

G. Q. A former President expressed his views with respect to a forthcoming national convention of his party. A candidate for that party's nomination for President called a press conference to comment on said views, which conference was broadcast by two networks. Would said candidate's opponent for the same nomination be entitled to "equal opportunities?"

A. No, since the appearance of the first candidate was on a program which was exempt from the "equal opportunities" requirement of Section 315. (Telegram to Falkenberg & Falkenberg, July 7, 1960.)

Adopted: September 7, 1960.

41st ANNUAL REPORT

The Union's 1960-61 Annual Report is on the press and will be mailed to all members in December. CIVIL LIBERTIES will not appear next month but will resume publication in January.

Union Sees Danger in Questioning Teachers

Dangers inherent in disclosures made by college teachers when questioned about individual students by government security agents or private employers are dealt with in an ACLU policy statement published in the October 7th issue of School and Society.

Prepared by the Union's Academic Freedom Committee, headed by Professor Louis M. Hacker of Columbia University, and approved by the Board of Directors, the statement represents more than a year's study.

"Habituation to this proliferating process of interrogation and response," says the ACLU, "has tended to obscure possible dangers to education. . . . Those who think of education primarily as the delivery of information by teachers to students will find no danger here. But if probing, sharing, and hypothesizing are regarded as essential; if education requires uninhibited expression and thinking out loud; if tentative and spontaneous ideas are to be encouraged as conducive to learning, then disclosures of expressed opinion . . . can become a threat to the educational process. . . .

"Ordinarily, questions relating to what the student has demonstrated as a student—for example, the ability to write in a certain way, to solve problems . . . to reason consistently, to direct personnel or projects—pose no threat to educational privacy. But, questions relating to the student's loyalty and patriotism, his political or religious or moral or social beliefs and attitudes, his general outlook, his private life, may well jeopardize the teacher-student relation."

Reprints of the statement are available from the Union's national office at 5¢ each postpaid. Quantity prices are lower. Single copies will be sent free on request to Contributing Members (dues of $5 or more) so identifying themselves.

Congress Acts on Number of Anti-Civil Liberties Measures

In a study completed early this month, the ACLU finds that in its recently-completed first session the 87th Congress acted on a number of anti-civil liberties bills. The heaviest adverse pressure occurred in the anti-crime and internal security fields.

Anti-Crime Legislation

While recognizing the growing problem of organized crime, the Union urged—sometimes successfully—that unconstitutional procedures not be adopted in anti-racketeering legislation. One example was a bill—signed into law by the President—to broaden federal jurisdiction over persons who cross state lines to avoid state prosecution. The ACLU asked, without success, that the bill be changed to avoid double jeopardy—trying a man in the federal and state courts for the same crime. The Attorney General did, however, promise to use this increased power sparingly.

Mauldin, St. Louis Post-Dispatch

"Maybe It Will Go Away If We Put Out the Light?"

Anti-Gambling Bills

Another bill signed by President Kennedy forbids use of wire communications—telephone and telegraph—for gambling, and provides for discontinuance of their use upon mere notice by a law enforcement officer that they are being so used. The ACLU objected, saying that a citizen could be deprived of the use of his phone without a hearing to establish that it was actually being used for illegal purposes.

Another measure prohibiting the interstate transportation of gambling paraphernalia was passed by Congress and signed by the President, with an amendment suggested by the Union. As originally worded, it would have allowed newspapers like The New York Times which report racing results to be classed as gambling paraphernalia. Warning of the danger to freedom of the press, the ACLU successfully urged an amendment exempting the press.

Immunity for Witnesses

A bill granting immunity to witnesses in labor racketeering cases was approved by the Senate but has not yet passed the House. While acknowledging its constitutionality, the ACLU opposed the measure as one more example of undermining the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination and said it was a "sign of government insecurity," since it implies our inability to bring wrongdoers to justice in accordance with traditional criminal due process.

Wiretapping

The Union voiced strong opposition to a number of bills pending in the Senate to permit wiretapping. Calling for a ban on all

Civil Rights Commission Urges Legislative Action

The Civil Rights Commission, whose life was extended for another two years in the closing days of Congress's recent session, has issued four powerful calls for action during the past few weeks:

1. It asked for legislation declaring a sixth-grade education conclusive evidence of literacy, so that a would-be voter could not be put to any further tests of his ability to read or "interpret."

2. It called for a law directing every segregated school district to produce within six months a plan for desegregation.

3. It urged President Kennedy to issue an executive order banning racial discrimination in federally aided housing and by federally supervised mortgage lenders.

4. It asked Congress to enact laws ending racial discrimination by labor unions.

Congress Acts on Anti-Civil Liberties Bills

wiretapping, the ACLU said it violates the Fourth Amendment guarantee against illegal search and seizure, endangers personal privacy, and creates opportunities for extortion and shakedowns. "To make such practices lawful," said the Union, "is to move closer toward a police state. . . ."

Immigration

After strong opposition, including the ACLU's, had been expressed to an immigration bill making judicial review of deportation orders more expensive and inconvenient and in some cases banning it entirely, it was tacked on to a separate bill liberalizing the admission of alien orphans.

Right to Strike

A measure making it a federal crime to obstruct or delay messages over any commercial communication system used for military or civil defense purposes, the Union felt, could easily be interpreted to limit the First Amendment rights of employees of such a system to strike or peacefully picket. At the ACLU's urging, an exemption for lawful strike activity was written into the bill—which the President later signed into law.

District of Columbia Bills

A number of bills which would adversely affect due process rights in the District of Columbia passed the House but are expected to die in the Senate. One opposed by the Union would limit an insanity defense appeal to the century-old McNaghten Rule which makes a defendant criminally responsible if he "could distinguish right from wrong," and rejects the ruling in the Durham case that an accused is not responsible if his crime "was the product of mental disease. . . ."

Another bill would overrule the Mallory decision of the U.S. Supreme Court by permitting confessions obtained during illegal detention of a suspect to be given in evidence. The ACLU argued that a man must be brought promptly before a judicial officer after arrest to prevent the use of the third degree.

Internal Security Measures

Several measures aimed at increasing internal security were passed by the House, but it is still too early to determine whether they will receive Senate approval and become law. One would amend the National Science Foundation Act of 1950 by barring members of organizations required to register with the Subversive Activities Control Board. While not opposing security check-ups for scientists working with classified data, the ACLU said it was "unwarranted and unwise" to extend such investigation to the "general run of scientists who apply for NSF fellowships."

Strengthening the Smith Act

The Union also registered strong disapproval of a bill passed by the House to amend the Smith Act by defining "organize" to include continuing recruiting activities. The Supreme Court, in its 1956 Yates decision, had interpreted the word to cover only the actual organizing of the Communist Party after World War II. Still opposing the Smith Act as an unconstitutional abridgement of freedom of speech and association, the ACLU said the new amendment would make it worse.

Disclaimer Affidavit Remains

The National Defense Education Act remained as before, with the widely-criticized disclaimer affidavit still in it. The Union backed a number of bills eliminating the onerous loyalty provision, but they failed.

Censorship

A House bill to amend the definition of obscenity to include publications in the District of Columbia mainly devoted to scandals, lechery, assignation, intrigue, immoral conduct, etc., passed the House, but this expanded definition was dropped in the Senate. The ACLU said it would allow police officers to be "monitors of our literary and artistic tastes."

The Union also objected to a measure creating a Commission on Obscene and Noxious Matters and Materials which passed the Senate and is now pending in the House. The bill, the ACLU charged, would in effect create a national censorship board.

Little Civil Rights Legislation

The 87th Congress has done very little in the area of civil rights. It extended the Civil Rights Commission for two years and put off until the second session the question of amending the Senate's rules on cloture so that filibusters could not block consideration of minority rights measures.

UTAH MEETING

The ACLU of Utah recently held a meeting at which the HUAC's film "Operation Abolition" was shown and discussed. Up to 100 people were expected, but three times that number came.

"Besides the large audience," reported the Utah affiliate's Secretary, Mrs. Pat Coontz, "we were cheered by the fact that two churches and at least one PTA have shown the movie, preceded by a speaker who analyzes it. . . . Remarkable, isn't it, how many people can say 'No' after one has the courage to? We were told prior to our meeting that there'd be a riot, we'd be red-baited, threatened in our jobs, etc., and etc. Nothing yet. Our only casualty was our literature table. Have you ever been run over by 300 people? They took everything—bulletins, membership envelopes, yearly reports, bulletins from other affiliates—I literally have nothing left."

NYCLU Protests Bans By N.Y. City Colleges

The NYCLU last month asked the State Supreme Court to order the Board of Higher Education to continue to rent an auditorium at Hunter College to National Review, a strongly conservative weekly. The New York ACLU acted after the magazine's editor, William F. Buckley, Jr., was informed by Hunter College that, because of their controversial nature, the National Review Forums could not be held this year—as they have been, at Hunter College, for several years.

The NYCLU explained that it is representing National Review because it feels that "the City and its agencies should be fostering, rather than restricting, free speech, and that the responsible administrators of municipal colleges should not assume the role of censors."

The Union's New York affiliate also protested the ban imposed by all municipal colleges on speeches by known Communists. The colleges' Administrative Council said its decision was based on recent rulings of the U.S. Supreme Court upholding the federal law which makes membership in the Communist Party a crime.

Arizona ACLU Hits Tucson 3-Year "War on Vagrants"

In a recent report, the Arizona ACLU sharply criticized Tucson's three-year-old "War on Vagrants," a special campaign for broader and more rigorous enforcement of state vagrancy statutes and city loitering ordinances intended, in the words of Police Chief Bernard Garmire, to reduce the number of "not-so-well-heeled tourists."

The ACLU affiliate points out that "neither the loitering ordinance nor the vagrancy statute makes provision for trial by jury. In fact, in Tucson if the person arrested pleads not guilty he will ordinarily be incarcerated, awaiting trial, for a considerably longer term than he would spend serving the customary sentence for the offense." It said, further, that "for the vagrant, the possibility of being released on bail is virtually precluded since, according to the statute, a vagrant is a person with no address, no money, and no visible means of support. No particular acts are described for this offense—merely the status of poverty and lack of connections."

FOUR LEADERS MOURNED

The ACLU noted with sorrow in October the passing of four affiliate leaders:

Henry C. Berlin, Treasurer of the C.L.U. of Massachusetts.

Harold K. Guinzburg, a member of the N.Y.C.L.U. Board.

Edward Meyerding, former Executive Director of the Illinois Division.

Donald Paterson, Associate Director of the Minnesota Branch.

HISTORY'S LESSON

Because communism thrives on turmoil, the party is continuously attempting to exploit all grievances—real or imagined—for its own tactical purposes. It is, therefore, almost inevitable that, on many issues, the party line will coincide with the position of many non-Communists. The danger of indiscriminately alleging that someone is a Communist merely because his views on a particular issue happen to parallel the official party position is obvious. The confusion which is thereby created helps the Communists by diffusing the forces of their opponents.

Unfortunately, there are those who make the very mistake the Communists are so careful to avoid. These individuals concentrate on the negative rather than on the positive. They are merely against communism without being for any positive measures to eliminate the social, political, and economic frictions which the Communists are so adroit at exploiting.

These persons would do well to recall a recent lesson from history. Both Hitler and Mussolini were against communism. However, it was by what they stood for, not against, that history judged them.

—the concluding paragraphs of "The Communist Party Line," a report prepared last month for the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee by J. Edgar Hoover.

California Vagrancy Laws Repealed; New Act Passed

California's vague and often abused vagrancy laws—long under attack by the Northern California ACLU—have been repealed. A law punishing disorderly conduct recently replaced them.

In signing the new bill, Governor Brown said, "Our vagrancy laws were without doubt the most often abused and at the same time the most difficult ones with which to obtain a conviction in court." A former San Francisco District Attorney illustrated the Governor's point by explaining that his office dismissed between 1700 and 1800 vagrancy charges a year—about 70% of all such cases in San Francisco. However, thousands of persons were thus given arrest records that could not be erased.

The Northern California ACLU believes that the new disorderly conduct law is not as subject to abuse by police as the vagrancy laws—but that some of its sections may still jeopardize civil liberties.

Virgin Islands Applies Bias Law to Private Eating Clubs

A unique civil rights law has been adopted by the Virgin Islands Legislature, bringing for the first time in U.S. jurisdiction private clubs under anti-discrimination statutes. Clubs licensed to sell food and liquor are held to be places of public accommodation and, while they may choose their members, are not permitted to deny to others services publicly licensed. The population of the Islands is largely Negro, but most of the private clubs are for whites only.

The ACLU, which has long aided efforts for expanded home rule in the Virgin Islands, has expressed to the commission enforcing the new law its interest in watching the effect of this novel legislation.

CHARTER EUROPEAN FLIGHTS AGAIN OFFERED TO MEMBERS

Last summer's flights were so successful that the Union is again planning charter flights to Europe for ACLU members living in three states. C.A.B. regulations require that an organization with an enrollment of over 10,000 may offer such flights only on a state basis. Thus the trips are being planned for three of the Union's most populous states —Massachusetts, New York, and Pennsylvania — and members of affiliates in these states may now apply for reservations for themselves and their immediate families (spouse and dependent children.)

Round trip fare—New York-London, London-New York—will be approximately $285 per person. Tentative dates:

Massachusetts—Leave June 25, return July 23
Pennsylvania—Leave July 16, return August 13
New York—Leave July 26, return September 3

All flights will probably be via BOAC jet-prop Brittania. Accommodations will be as on tourist flights; meals will be first-class. Children under two travel free—bassinets provided. For older ones, full fare will be charged, since cost is figured on a per-capita basis.

The ACLU national office is now accepting flight reservation deposits of $100 per person, on a first-come-first-served basis. Balance of payment will be due May 1, 1962. Until that date, deposit is refundable—less a $5 service charge. After final payment date, no refund can be made unless there is a waiting list. When sending in your deposit, please use the coupon below so that your check will be clearly identified as a flight deposit.

South Carolina: When asked how he felt about N.A.A.C.P. Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall's appointment as a federal judge last month, South Carolina's Governor Ernest Hollings replied: "I'm just as glad Martin Luther King doesn't have a law degree."

Minnesota: Richard Wyman, an English teacher in Wrenshall, Minn., was reinstated on October 27, one week after he had been dismissed for having his students read "1984."

Massachusetts: Robert H. W. Welch, Jr., founder of the John Birch Society, told the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston last month that "not yet more than one-half of one per cent" of the Catholic priests in the U.S. are Communist sympathizers.

Texas: Under a new Abilene, Texas, ordinance, both parents and theatre operators are liable to fines up to $200 for allowing children to see movies rated "objectionable."

New York: Radio station WMCA has filed suit in federal court challenging the apportionment of seats in the New York State Legislature as favoring rural districts.

Tennessee: The Tennessee Supreme Court upheld the revocation of the Highlander Folk School's charter and ordered that the privately-owned adult interracial school be closed; the U.S. Supreme Court has refused to review. A new charter will be applied for soon.

Ohio: Robert K. Carr, president of Oberlin College, warned incoming students in September that academic freedom does not include the freedom to dress like "beatniks."

District of Columbia: The House Government Information Subcommittee discovered recently that 33 out of 37 federal agencies permit telephone monitoring and that 17 do not always require that the outside party be warned that what he is saying is being taken down.

Michigan: State Attorney General Paul L. Adams recently ruled that Bible instruction in the public schools violates both the state and federal constitutions.

Indiana: Governor Matthew W. Welsh of Indiana recently attacked U.S. ultra-conservatives as "super patriots" who pose as serious a threat to the country's freedom as Communists.

Washington State's ACLU Acts in Deportation Case

The power of the Attorney General to deport an alien to a country in which she was not born and has never visited is being tested in federal court in the state of Washington. The local ACLU has filed an amicus brief challenging the proposed deportation of Mrs. Hazel Anna Wolf who, under the 1952 immigration law, lost her status as a naturalized American for alleged membership in the Communist Party during 1938 and 1939.

At issue is the constitutionality of a clause in the 1952 law which allows the Attorney General to deport a denaturalized person to any country which will accept him if his native country refuses to do so.

For Mrs. Wolf it will mean that although Canada and the United States are the only countries in which she has lived, she will at 63 be forced to spend the rest of her years in England, where she has never been.

In its brief the Washington ACLU argues that the law violates the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment and that deportation is being used as a punishment.

WIRIN HONORED

Almost a thousand Southern California ACLU members joined in paying tribute to A. L. Wirin Sept. 17 on his completing three decades of service as Counsel to the Union, both in the national office and in Los Angeles, at a garden party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Sieroty in Beverly Hills.

Attached is the document being used against at least one and possibly three well known white members of the Alabama Council. Please (at your earliest convenience) mark on the margins of this document any notations which you consider appropriate, write me with respect to any ideas you may have, note which of the Board members listed were actually Board members, and, if known, which of them were not members of organizations attributed to them.

It would also be appreciated if you would advise me as to any members of the Board, past or present, who are not here listed whose names might bolster our position. Quote by Maddox Doesn't Hold Up

WASHINGTON—In his advertisement in last Saturday's Atlanta Constitution, Lester Maddox made this statement: "The Communists are dedicated to, and have publicly stated, their intention to destroy the South and America by bringing about complete racial integration." Is that true?

The day before I read that sentence, I had lunch here with two very active anti-Communists. One is Gene Methvin, a native of Vienna, Ga., who had been digging into the Communist conspiracy for about two years. The other is Donald L. Miller, editor of Freedom's Facts, who has been fighting Communists for 20 years.

We had been talking about just what Maddox wrote about. Both Methvin and Miller had said that there had been very little Communist infiltration of the Negro movement toward civil rights or, if you prefer, integration.

So, when, the next day, I saw Maddox's statement, I called Miller and Methvin and asked them if that could be true. It seems it couldn't be.

"No Communist ever said that. It doesn't exist in Communist literature," Methvin said.

Methvin has made an exhaustive study of Red literature. He should know. But, there has been a lot of Communist literature. It is possible he might have overlooked something.

Just to be sure, I called the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee (which is headed by Sen. Eastland of Mississippi), asked researcher Ben Ma[illegible] knowledged leader in this area. Was such a statement true?

"It sounds," he said, "wholly mythical."

The issue of civil rights is one that Communists would love to take over and use for their own cause. They have not been able to, according to these three experts, despite the fact that they have tried. Now and then Communists more interested in strife than in rights have gotten into the movement. But for the most part, to use Mandel's words, "the Negro leaders have kept the Commies at arm's length."

As a matter of fact, the Communists have been more successful in "using" the Klan, the Citizens Councils and the Lester Maddoxes of the South than they have in using Negro organizations and leaders. In 1959 Moscow printed a handbook that called on Communists to get the racial radicals to take up the anti-Communist line. Reds figured if known irresponsibles, like Maddox, could be duped into being anti-Communist as well as anti-Negro, it would discredit the honest, knowledgeable anti-Communists.

If Maddox really read such a [illegible]ment as the one he quoted, [illegible] a plant.

VOL. 4 — NO. 3 ATLANTA, GEORGIA AUGUST, 1962

17 Years A

An Editorial . . .

The Atlanta political machine is out to get Marvin Griffin. The wealthy brain washed bankers and their Negro bloc vote would be extended to the entire state, if "Johnny come lately" Carl Sanders is elected.

This is the same crowd that put Ivan Allen in as Mayor of Atlanta. The fact that the mayors office was bought has never been successfully denied.

This crowd is supported by the Southern Regional Council and the Urban League, another radical Negro integration organization, aimed at the destruction of our Southern way of life. Other organizations who are not known for their Southern sympathies like the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Yankee owned Atlanta Newspapers edited by Southern scallawags such as Eugene Patterson and Ralph McGill. It is well known that this crowd is behind the candidacy of the captive candidate Carl Sanders. This crowd must not be allowed to get control of our state government. Former Governor Marvin Griffin can and will win this election come September 12. Eugene Patterson's prediction notwithstanding. Mr. Griffin made Georgia one of its greatest Governors.

Communist in high post with King's mixing group

Birmingham News Washington Bureau 10/26/62

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26—A Communist has infiltrated to the top administrative post in the Rev. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

He is Jack H. O'Dell, acting executive director of conference activities in Southeastern states, including Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana. From his birth in Detroit in 1923 until as late as 1958, he was known as Hunter Pitts O'Dell. O'Dell, by whatever name, operates as a concealed member of the national committee of the Communist party, U. S. A., according to a highly authoritative source.

Until a few weeks ago, O'Dell was regional consultant to the conference staff, which has headquarters in Atalnta. He became acting director recently. Main functions of the staff are to set up voter registration schools, "workshops" for promotion of civil rights activities and public meetings.

AFTER ATTENDING Xavier University, New Orleans, La., O'Dell for several years was a sailor in the Merchant Marine. In July, 1950, however, he was expelled from the National Maritime Union at Galveston, Tex. The union took exception to his circulation of pro-Soviet peace petitions attacking the government of the United States.

On April 12, 1956, identifying himself as Hunter Pitts, O'Dell, a New Orleans waiter, he testified before the Senate internal security subcommitte. He invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to say whether he was a Southern district organizer for the Communist Party.

Robert Morris, counsel for the subcommittee, said information had been received that O'Dell was in fact, a district organizer for the Communist Party in New Orleans; that O'Dell gave "directives to the professional group" in that city, and that he operated under three different names—the two other names being John Vesey and Ben Jones.

It was learned that hundreds of documents seized at O'Dell's residence, 2319 Louisiana Ave., by New Orleans police clearly established his key position in the Communist movement in the South.

ON JULY 30, 1958, identifying himself as Hunter Pitts O'Dell, a Montgomery, Ala., insurance man, he appeared before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in an Atlanta hearing. An Associated Press story reported that O'Dell "tried unsuccessfully to turn the hearing into a discussion of mistreatment of Negroes in the South."

O'Dell invoked the First and Fifth Amendments and declined to answer committee questions about his Communist activities.

In recent years, it was learned, O'Dell has tried to remain in the background in carrying out his Communist Party assignments.

Officers of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference are the Rev. Dr. King, president; the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, formerly of Birmingham, Ala., secretary, and the Rev. Ralph Abernethy, formerly of Montgomery, Ala., treasurer.

Dr. King has said that the organization's budget for this next year is $300,000. This does not include a $100,000 grant from the Field Foundation, to be used exclusively for voter registration. At least half the expected $300,000 will come from outside the South, King has said. He has explained, too, that he takes no salary from the conference, but "volunteers service as part of my ministry." He is minister of the Ebenezer Baptist Church, Atlanta. He has been president of the conference since its organization in New Orleans in 1957.

Bills Opposed By Labor Get Final Approval

House Okays Ban On 'Strike Benefits,' Clears Way for Suits

By ERNEST VALACHOVIC
Of the Gazette Staff

Two Senate bills which labor unions oppose strongly went through the House yesterday and on to Governor Faubus.

Passed were SB 3 which makes labor unions liable to lawsuits and SB 221 to deny to strikers unemployment insurance benefits.

It's Up to Governor

Governor Faubus must decide whether to approve the bills. He saw a delegation yesterday from the Arkansas State AFLCIO, which urged him to veto SB 3, but this was before the House vote on SB 221. Organized labor has opposed this measure as strenuously as it did the other.

Mr. Faubus said he advised the labor delegation to submit an analysis on their views on SB 3 and that he would have his own analysis prepared.

Racial Issue Injected

The House voted for SB 3 after a heated debate into which the racial issue was injected. The vote was 52 for and 36 against.

Representative John P. Bethell of Prairie County, arguing for the bill, said national labor unions were discouraging the relocation in the South of many industrial plants and were encouraging racial unrest in the South as a part of this program.

Bethell said Walther Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, was a vice president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and that the NAACP had been helped financially by national unions.

Stiles Opposes It

Representative Dewey D. Stiles of Hot Spring County contended that the bill was discriminatory. He said the relationship between labor and management was good and the bill could only create some bad feeling.

Senate Okays Limit on Area Of Planning

With one vote to spare, the Senate passed a bill yesterday shrinking the planning jurisdiction of Arkansas cities to their city limits.

The bill (SB 172) by Senator Artie Gregory of North Little Rock passed 19-13 and went to the House.

It would amend Act 186 of 1957 which gives cities authority to plan for future expansion five miles beyond their boundaries.

Senator Max Howell of Little Rock, pushing the bill for Gregory, said it had been endorsed by "some members" of the Little Rock and North Little Rock plan-

Alford Blames Reds For Unrest; Queried About Faubus' Past

Lawmaker Jabs At Ashmore; Editor Replies

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP).—Representative Dale Alford today referred to Harry S. Ashmore, executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette, as a "renegade journalist."

Alford, a former member of the Little Rock School Board, has supported Governor Orval E. Faubus' action in using National Guard troops to prevent court-ordered integration at Little Rock Central High School. The Little Rock congressman had Mr. Faubus' behind-the-scenes support when he defeated Democratic incumbent Brooks Hays as a write-in candidate in the November general elections.

The Gazette has criticized Alford and the Arkansas governor.

Mentions 'Communist'

Alford, in a House speech, mentioned that Ashmore was a director of a foundation providing funds for an organization which Alford said was set up by a Communist.

This drew a defense of Ashmore from two House members in a subsequent colloquy.

And at Little Rock, Ashmore declared that the charge was "wholly erroneous and the record which so proves it was available to Dr. Alford when he prepared his speech."

Under questioning on the House floor, Alford indicated that he did not intend to imply that the Gazette editor was a Communist.

Washington, Feb. 17.—Representative John Bell Williams (Dem., Miss.) said today he had grave doubts that Representative Dale Alford's charges that Communists were behind racial agitation would be communicated through the press "because a paper curtain has been drawn around the Southern side of this controversy."

Other Southern congressmen demanded that the press give wide publicity to Alford's remarks.

The press complied—but it wasn't easy. Alford had only one copy of the speech and he gave that to the Washington correspondent of the Arkansas Democrat.

The Little Rock congressman's office was deluged with telephone calls from reporters requesting a text of the speech. But additional copies weren't made available until 5:45 p. m. (EST)—3 hours and 15 minutes after Alford finished speaking.

Southerners Applaud Talk On Race Issue

By ELIZABETH CARPENTER

Gazette Washington Bureau

Washington, Feb. 17. — Representative Dale Alford told the House today that Communists were responsible for the racial troubles in Arkansas and the South. He said Communists and their dupes had "flitted in and out" of Arkansas for years.

Alford promptly was confronted with an observation that his "documentation is not as complete as it might be." Representative Frank Thompson (Dem., N. J.) noted that the Little Rock congressman, in detailing accusations of what he called a Communist conspiracy to create racial unrest, had failed to mention Commonwealth College.

Thompson asked Alford if he was aware that the now-defunct school at Mena, Ark., had been cited by the United States attorney general as a "subversive organization" and that "the present chief executive" of Arkansas—Governor Orval E. Faubus—had attended Commonwealth.

Alford said he had knowledge of such information. He had, he said, lived as a child "not many miles" from the institution.

But he said that Commonwealth existed "nearly 40 years ago—I believe that is correct"—and that Mr. Faubus was there "only several days." He contended that little was known about the College at the time Mr. Faubus went there and that the governor had stated "several times" that he left the College when he discovered the nature of its teachings.

Fort Bragg, N. C.

Stanley Arnold, Democratic state senator, introduced a bill in the California legislature at Sacramento which would require a hunter who shot another hunter to file a written report with the Fish and Game Department in 48 hours.

Governor William G. Stratton of Illinois revealed at Springfield that he and New York Governor Nelson A. Senator Theodore Francis Green (Dem., R. I.), 91, who resigned recently as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in favor of Senator J. William Fulbright (Dem., Ark.), was designated as chairman-emeritus of the Committee, which lauded him for his initiative and statesman-ship."

Senator Stephen M. Otherwise it is difficult to see any good that is accomplished."

John Thomas Freeman, 40, a native of Oklahoma City who is described as a drug addict and a heavy drinker with a 22-year crime record, was added at Washington to the FBI's roll of "10 most wanted men."

Stiles was joined by Representative Mattie L. Hackett of Lafayette County. She contended that the bill could only result in bitterness and resentment on the part of labor groups and sympathizers.

"Discrimination doesn't belong on the floor of the House of Representatives," she said. "A union is a union of people, it is no different from a bar association, medical society or teachers organization." She was applauded.

Lined up with Bethell to speak for the bill was Representative Harry B. Colay of Columbia County. Representative Glenn F.

Dr. Richard Porter, head of the United States satellite panel for the International Geophysical Year, said today's launching was "the beginning of a new era in weather research." President Eisenhower congratulated "all who participated in the successful launching."

The basketball-size satellite is streaking along with Russia's huge Sputnik III and three American satellites. Its two electronic eyes peer out of its shiny shell. Other delicate instruments are packed inside the sphere.

A remodeled version of the Vanguard rocket, which was a $100,000,000 fizzle in six or seven earlier tries, shot the satellite into orbit. Cape Canaveral, Fla., was the launching spot.

The 72-foot rocket surged upward without a hitch. All three stages fired smoothly.

Two hours and 20 minutes later, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced at Washington that Vanguard II was in orbit.

NASA Director T. Keith Glennan said the artificial moon was circling the earth every 126 minutes at altitudes varying from 335 to 2,050 miles. The speed varies from 14,000 to 18,000 miles an hour, with the satellite traveling faster when it is closer to the earth.

Trailing along behind was the 50-pound third stage of the rocket.

Vanguard II isn't as far out in space as Vanguard I, and hence is in denser atmosphere. The first Vanguard, a grapefruit-size moonlet launched last March, is expected to last perhaps 1,000 years.

Glennan said the new satellite swung 34 degrees north and south of the Equator on each circuit of the earth. On that basis, Vanguard II should be able to check every day on nearly a fourth of the earth's sunlit surface. Most of the area will be north of the Equator.

Better Than Expected

Dr. Joseph Sirey, another NASA official, told newsmen that early calculations "indicated that the performance is somewhat in excess of what we had expected."

He said the satellite reached the point in its orbit nearest the earth a little after noon, when it was north of the equator. This means, he said that conditions are particularly good for recording cloud cover over the sunlit portion of the world.

The photelectric cells the scientists said should be able to distinguish between clouds, oceans, snow-covered ground and other features. That is because the reflection from each type of surface is different.

How It Works

The information is handled this way:

The reflections are converted into electrical signals which are tape recorded by the satellite. When ground stations give a signal, the stored information is transmitted to them and again recorded on tape.

The tapes will be rushed to Army Signal Corps experts at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and fed into machines that will convert the data into crude pictures. The films can be patched together, much as a large aerial photograph is made up.

With reference to the potential value of the system, Dr. Edgar Cortright of NASA said scientists hoped to get more specific information on the height and layers of clouds, on rain and snow, and to develop techniques for locating electrical storms.

Launchings are planned for three more Vanguards. One will have a bigger third stage, designed to launch a 42-pound satellite.

The next launching is scheduled to carry aloft a device to measure the earth's main magnetic field and record its fluctuations.

Coin Machine Man Describes Beating, Deal Forced on Him

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP).—A Brooklyn man told senators today he was beaten mercilessly until he agreed to sign away the biggest part of his holdings in a coin machine business.

Weeping as he spoke, Sidney Saul testified to the Senate rackets committee that three strongarm men cornered him in a Brooklyn restaurant December 19, 1957.

While they fed coins into a jukebox to smother the sound of his pleas, Saul said, one of the trio pummeled him without letup. He said other customers in the place seemed to ignore what was going on.

Saul named his assailant as Ernest (Ernie Kippy) Filocomo. As he told it, Filocomo "didn't stop—he was like a wild man." Twice, Saul said, another member of the group stopped the beating so he could be revived with coffee. And once, the witness said, this second man—identified as Charles Panarella—wiped blood from Saul's ears, mouth and nose with a wet towel.

"I didn't cry—I just pleaded." Saul told the committee. "My nose was completely out of shape. It was shaped like a horseshoe, a complete 'U.' As a matter of fact, it is still out of shape now. One eye was closed * * * I couldn't chew food for almost three weeks."

SIDNEY SAUL

In the end, Saul said, he agreed to the demands of his assailants for three-fourths of his interest in a route of 26 machines. But he did not make clear whether he kept that agreement. His occupation was listed at today's hearing as a salesman.

Besides Filocomo and Panarella Saul listed the other member of the group as Anthony (Dutch) Tuzio. He said the three are awaiting trial in Brooklyn for the alleged assault.

Committee Counsel Robert F. Kennedy said the men Saul accused have passed up an invitation to testify. He said they had not been subpoenaed because of the pending trial. Placed in committee evidence was a staff investigator's report that Tuzio recently was freed after serving a sentence for murder. The report said Filocomo and Panarella also had long criminal records.

Saul said he has been under police protection since the beating 14 months ago. He related the beating to what he said were repeated efforts by various persons to cut themselves in for a share of his business as a coin machine distributor.

Senate Okays Limit on Area Of Planning

With one vote to spare, the Senate passed a bill yesterday shrinking the planning jurisdiction of Arkansas cities to their city limits.

The bill (SB 172) by Senator Artie Gregory of North Little Rock passed 19-13 and went to the House.

It would amend Act 186 of 1957 which gives cities authority to plan for future expansion five miles beyond their boundaries.

Senator Max Howell of Little Rock, pushing the bill for Gregory, said it had been endorsed by "some members" of the Little Rock and North Little Rock planning commissions and by "the Real Estate Board."

Waves Letters

Gregory waved a sheaf of letters he said he had received in support of the bill

After it was introduced January 30, several groups and persons came out against the proposed planning limitation. Among them were the Little Rock City Manager Board, the North Little Rock planning director, the Little Rock Real Estate Board and the Arkansas Home Building Association.

Senator Morrell Gathright of Pine Bluff said the Pine Bluff Planning Commission opposed it.

Senator Robert Hays Williams of Russellville, a member of the Russellville Planning Commission, spoke against it. He said the present law limited cities to "putting its plans on a map" and did not allow them to put into law zoning regulations outside city limits.

Supported by Screeton

Senator Jerry Screeton of Hazen defended Gregory's bill, saying he "couldn't conceive" a city's having power outside its boundaries.

Vietnam Frontier Attack Reported

Saigon, Feb. 17 (AP). — The South Vietnam government news agency today reported attacks by two armed bands of Cambodians at points in South Vietnam near the Cambodian border.

The report said a band of 60 attacked an agricultural development center near the frontier on January 29, apparently to destroy tractors. Local defense units repulsed the invaders, the account said.

On February 4 another band reportedly shot up a small restaurant, killing a South Vietnam army lieutenant and several civilians dining in the cafe. The report said the Cambodians withdrew toward the nearby border.

Faubus action in using National Guard troops to prevent court-ordered integration at Little Rock Central High School. The Little Rock congressman had Mr. Faubus' behind-the-scenes support when he defeated Democratic incumbent Brooks Hays as a write-in candidate in the November general elections.

The Gazette has criticized Alford and the Arkansas governor.

Mentions 'Communist'

Alford, in a House speech, mentioned that Ashmore was a director of a foundation providing funds for an organization which Alford said was set up by a Communist.

This drew a defense of Ashmore from two House members in a subsequent colloquy.

And at Little Rock, Ashmore declared that the charge was "wholly erroneous and the record which so proves it was available to Dr. Alford when he prepared his speech."

Under questioning on the House floor, Alford indicated that he did not intend to imply that the Gazette editor was a Communist.

'Renegade' Blast

What Alford said concerning Ashmore was:

"One of the incorporators of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations is Harry Ashmore, the renegade journalist who is editor of the Arkansas Gazette in Little Rock, and who has profited quite materially in the capitalistic line by writing detrimental articles about his native Southland.

"This same Harry Ashmore was, and still is, a director of the foundation which provided approximately a half-million dollars to finance and operate the Southern Regional Council."

Discusses Jackson

Earlier, Alford had discussed James E. Jackson Jr., whom he identified as a Moscow-trained Negro. Jackson, he said, was credited with forming the Southern Regional Council. This Council, he said, had auxiliary groups known as state councils on human relations.

Ashmore's Statement

Ashmore said Alford's "innuendoes are as demonstrably false as the only alleged fact he presented in his remarks about me."

His statement continued:

"He [Alford] charged that I am associated with a foundation which has financed a Southern organization which in turn has employed one James E. Jackson Jr., a Negro with a Communist record.

"This is wholly erroneous, and the record which so proves it was marks.

The press complied—but it wasn't easy. Alford had only one copy of the speech and he gave that to the Washington correspondent of the Arkansas Democrat.

The Little Rock congressman's office was deluged with telephone calls from reporters requesting a text of the speech. But additional copies weren't made available until 5:45 p. m. (EST)—3 hours and 15 minutes after Alford finished speaking.

House Averts Bitter Fight Over U of A

A bitter fight involving the University of Arkansas was averted at the last minute in the House yesterday.

The uneasy peace came when Representative J. H. Moody of White County withdrew HR 18 which propounded a series of racial and policy questions at University officials.

Moody pulled the resolution at the suggestion of Representative Chadd L. Durrett of Union County who said he opposed "a show" as set up under Moody's proposal.

Moody agreed and said he intended to seek a 7-member committee to investigate the allegations he made in his original resolution.

In this measure he asked University officials to explain their 5,000-member staff for 5,300 students, participation of university professors in interracial meetings and in a meeting at which atheism was discussed, alleged mixing of races and sexes in dormitories during the past two summer terms and about the alleged employment of a draft dodger.

Hits at 'Bad Apples'

Moody said his resolution was not a smear against the University. He said he felt if any of these allegations are true the House and the people deserved to know about it.

"I'd like to have the opportunity to purge a few bad apples out of that institution," Moody said after warning the House it cannot afford to let its defenses down against unAmerican concepts and those advocating them.

Durrett Applauded

Durrett said he didn't question Moody's sincerity and that the allegations warranted investigation, but not in a public name-calling before the House.

"There is another method than this to aid our dirty linen, if dirty linen there is," Durrett said. "A smaller committee should out of Arkansas for years.

Alford promptly was confronted with an observation that his "documentation is not as complete as it might be." Representative Frank Thompson (Dem., N. J.) noted that the Little Rock congressman, in detailing accusations of what he called a Communist conspiracy to create racial unrest, had failed to mention Commonwealth College.

Thompson asked Alford if he was aware that the now-defunct school at Mena, Ark., had been cited by the United States attorney general as a "subversive organization" and that "the present chief executive" of Arkansas—Governor Orval E. Faubus—had attended Commonwealth.

Alford said he had knowledge of such information. He had, he said, lived as a child "not many miles" from the institution.

But he said that Commonwealth existed "nearly 40 years ago—I believe that is correct"—and that Mr. Faubus was there "only several days." He contended that little was known about the College at the time Mr. Faubus went there and that the governor had stated "several times" that he left the College when he discovered the nature of its teachings.

1954 Campaign Recalled

Thompson reminded Alford that Commonwealth still was in existence in 1940. And Representative Wayne L. Hays (Dem., O.) observed that Mr. Faubus was enrolled long enough "to be elected president of the student body" and "long enough to later swear in a political campaign that he never attended the College."

Mr. Faubus' attendance at Commonwealth was raised as a campaign issue in the summer of 1954 by Francis A. Cherry, the incumbent governor whom Mr. Faubus defeated.

On August 1, 1954, Mr. Faubus said in speeches at Bald Knob, Tuckerman, Newport, and Searcy that "I have never been a student or faculty member at the school [Commonwealth] and never have attended a class there."

Two days later, he admitted that he had visited Commonwealth in the spring of 1935 and was "elected president of the Student Association." But he contended that he never enrolled and went home without paying his tuition or attending a class.

More recently, Mr. Faubus said that he left Commonwealth after hearing a member of the faculty attack the institution of marriage.

In February 1935, an Arkansas legislative committee investigated Commonwealth and listed it as "subversive." The United States attorney general's office drew the same conclusion a few years later.

Commonwealth, Alford said, attracted students from the "hill section" of Arkansas "where the economic status of the people was very low." Mr. Faubus was born and reared in Madison County, in Arkansas's hill section. Alford said Commonwealth's appeal was to farm youth to whom it offered an education in exchange for work on the College's farm.

Refers to Lorches

Alford's speech was made at the close of the day's session. He had reserved 50 minutes for it.

There is a Communist conspiracy, he said, to create racial unrest and so divide the country that it could be made part of a one-world government operated from Moscow.

Alford said he was "alarmed at the complacency of some officials toward the menace of communism" and that he is concerned that the Justice Department yields, as he put it, to the pressure of such "an organization as the NAACP [National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.]"

He said "a few good Negro citizens have become pawns of this international conspiracy without being conscious, in the beginning, of its vicious intent of creating mass agitation to divide and conquer."

Alford named several persons whom he identified as Commun-

Reassessment Probe Reveals Utility Taxes Cut by Millions

The legislature's Joint Committee on Reassessment heard an estimate yesterday that the state's utilities and railroads were saving millions of dollars a year in property taxes under a 1956 change in the method of figuring their assessments.

It was suggested that the other taxpayers were paying more to take up the slack. A further suggestion hovering in the background was that the utilities and railroads had not lowered their rates to pass their tax savings on to the consumers.

Earl Berry, assistant director in charge of utilities in the Arkansas Assessment Co-ordination Department, agreed under questioning that the utilities and railroads had been able to reduce their total assessments in Arkansas "possibly" $60,000,000 to $80,000,000. One legislator, Representative Marion H. Crank of Little River County, estimated that would save them $6,000,000 a year in taxes.

Another Committee member, Representative Paul Van Dalsem of Perry County, said he believed the reduction in assessments would run nearer $100,000,000 to $120,000,000.

An essential question not answered yesterday was whether the utilities and railroads deserved this tax break.

These and other questions—like the exact amount of the savings to the utilities—are to be explored further by a special subcommittee of Van Dalsem, Crank and Senator Robert Hays Williams of Russellville. The subcommittee is to meet with Berry, study the matter and report its findings Tuesday.

An overall question becoming more pressing each day is whether the mass of questions being raised by the Committee can be answered, and answered well enough, to save the reassessment program. There is a feeling on the Committee that if the "right" answers are not forthcoming the legislature will kill the appropriation for the Assessment Co-ordination Department. That would kill the program unless

Reds Cited For Stirring Race Unrest

WASHINGTON —(UPI)— Rep. Dale Alford (D-Ark) told the House Tuesday that Communists are stirring up racial discord in the South and have been since 1928.

The Little Rock segregationist said Communists and their dupes have "flitted in and out" of his state for years.

He noted that an Arkansas investigating committee charged that Communists were behind Little Rock's School crisis.

Alford also charged that James Jackson, whom he identified as a Southern regional director of the Communist Party, had made a survey of activity needed to divide Arkansas residents.

He said a woman identified as a Communist was seen with a Negro girl outside Central High School during the 1957 integration dispute.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr. (D-NJ) recalled that Arkansas Gov. Orval E. Faubus once attended Commonwealth College, which Thompson said had been cited as subversive. Thompson said Faubus would be "indicted" for this under Alford's reasoning.

Alford Tells House Reds Stir South's Racial Strife

By Richard L. Lyons
Staff Reporter

Rep. Dale Alford (D-Ark.) yesterday delivered the House speech which he had said would present evidence that subversive elements were behind the South's school and other racial troubles.

Some Southern members praised the speech as "well documented," "courageous" and "long overdue." Some Northern members said they were still waiting for the evidence, suggested that Alford tried to establish guilt by association and expressed "regret" that he had brought communism into the difficult race problem.

Alford, write-in victor over Brooks Hays last fall and an outspoken segregationist supporter of Gov. Orval E. Faubus, told the House that Communists have been stirring up racial strife in the South for 30 years. He made these statements:

• James Jackson, now a Communist Party official, once made a survey of Arkansas for the Party to devise ways to set the races against each other.

• Grace Lorch, a white woman who comforted a Negro school girl when she ran the gauntlet of jeering white adults at Little Rock's Central High School, was identified nine years ago at a hearing as a Communist organizer, Alford said. He said the Little Rock episode was "staged." (The FBI which investigated Little Rock has never said Communists were behind its school trouble.)

• Daisy Bates, head of the Arkansas National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, is a national official of NAACP. Many of NAACP's national officials have "records of Communist activity," said Alford.

• Harry Ashmore, editor of the Arkansas Gazette, which opposed Faubus and urged compliance with court desegregation orders, is a director of the Fund for the Republic which has given half a million dollars to the Southern Regional Council which an American Legion publication said contained some members who had belonged to Communist-front organizations. The Council is a bi-racial Southern group dedicated to furthering political and economic equality. It has denied the Legion charge.

• Carl Braden, convicted in Louisville in 1954 for fomenting racial strife, is "roaming the South" as field secretary of the Southern Conference Education Fund, successor to the Southern Conference on Human Welfare which the Un-American Activities Committee had called a Communist front.

Rep. Frank Thompson Jr. (D., N. J.) recalled that Gov. Fabus once attended Commonwealth College in Arkansas, which has been cited as subversive. He said Faubus would be "indicted" for this under Alford's reasoning. Alford said Faubus stayed "only a few days" and left when he found out what it was like. Rep. Wayne Hays (D., Ohio) said Fabus stayed long enough to be elected president of the student body.

Rep. John V. Lindsay (R., N. Y.) said there was no excuse for putting "responsible men like Harry Ashmore in the same bed with Communists."

"ALFORD BLAMES REDS FOR SOUTH'S TROUBLES"

By: Gordon Brown

Representative Dale Alford, (Dem.-Ark.), Little Rock segregationist charged in the House yesterday that Communists are responsible for racial trouble in the South.

There is a Communist conspiracy, he said, to create racial unrest. He said that it is a part of a one-world government operated from Moscow. Alford's speech made at the close of the day's session, and for which he had reserved fifty minutes, provoked a lively discussion among some Northerners and Southerners.

Alford said he is "alarmed at the complacency of some officials toward the menace of Communism and that he is concerned that the Justice Department yields," as he put it, "toward pressure of such an organization as the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Negroes Called Pawns

He said, "a few good Negro citizens have become pawns of this international conspiracy without being conscious in the beginning of its vicious intent of creating mass agitation to divide and conquer."

At one point in his talk, Alford mentioned Harry Ashmore, editor of the Arkansas Gazette of Little Rock. He referred to him as "the renegade editor of the Arkansas Gazette who has benefited quite materially from the Capitalists' line by writing detrimental articles about his Southland."

Alford said Ashmore was an incorporator of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations and that he was a director of a foundation which raised funds for the Southern Regional Council.

Previously, Alford had said that the Southern Regional Council was founded by James E. Jackson whom he identified as a "Moscow-trained Negro." "Jackson,"he said, "is now in Moscow."

Another Defends Ashmore

Later, Representative John V. Lindsey, (Rep.-N.Y.), said there is no doubt that Communists have used racial unrest to further their cause. "But," he said, "that is no excuse for the type of indictment that has occurred where responsible men, such as Harry Ashmore, are placed in the same boat with members of the Communist Party."

Alford said that in referring to Ashmore he had "stated nothing relative to Communism."

But Representative Wayne Hays, (Dem.-Ohio), observed that as he understood Alford's reference, "I got the impression it was not favorable to Mr. Ashmore."

In Little Rock, Ashmore said, "Dr. Alford's innuendos are as demonstrably false as the only alleged fact he presented in his remarks about me."

Editor Refutes Remarks

Ashmore said Alford's remarks about the Southern Regional Council and Jackson were wholely erroneous and the record which so proves it was available to Dr. Alford when he prepared his speech.

"The only foundation with which I have any connection is the Fund for the Republic," Ashmore said. "I am a member of its board of directors."

"The Fund for the Republic in past years has made grants to the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta, a reputable organization which is concerned, as all Southerners must be, with a resolution of our racial problems. This is the organization Dr. Alford refers to."

Dear Doug:

Here is what I am sending Dick Bolling. The draft may be over-written and stylistically unsuited to use in the House, but I think all the necessary rebuttal is there.

Many thanks for calling Bolling and for your willingness to see the matter through with him.

I called Wilma Stokely yesterday; the article on Magnolia McCarthyism is still uncommissioned, and she said she would write you at once. Also, I'm enclosing the newspaper article on Bill Gordon, who may also be writing you about the possibility of doing a Reporter piece.

All the best.

Honorable Richard Bolling
Member of Congress
The House of Representatives
Washington, D. C.

Dear Dick:

As one old-time AVCer to another, I'm most grateful for your willingness to help us counteract the charges made against the Council by Dale Alford. As Doug Cater will have explained, we are especially concerned for two reasons. First, Alford's speech is bound to be reprinted from the Record and used over the South to confuse and intimidate those who are beginning, however cautiously, to take a positive stand for compliance. Secondly, the use of such allegations as Alford makes has become virtually epidemic in the South in the past few months; this is a measure of desperation, of course, but it can take a heavy toll failing firm counteraction.

The draft I am enclosing may be completely unusable, but it will at least give you the line of argument that we feel is called for. The editorials from the Richmond Times-Dispatch and the Chattanooga Times might well be inserted in full into the Record. The other enclosures are merely to give you more detailed background on the McCarthyist campaign against the Council.

Whatever you decide you can do will be of tremendous help to the Council and to many other Southerners who feel similarly.

With best personal regards,

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming

In his remarks of February 17 on the floor of the House of Representatives, Rep. Dale Alford advanced the thesis that the racial difficulties of his state and the South generally are the results of Communist agitation. The burden of his statements was that efforts to facilitate desegregation and compliance with court rulings are part of a gigantic Communist plot. Surely such a charge can assist no one but the Communists themselves, who like nothing better than to appear in the fraudulent guise of champions of justice and progress.

There is no question that international Communist propaganda benefits from discord and disruption within this country. It benefits, too, from the persistence of racial discrimination and segregation. America is weakened, intentionally or not, by those who perpetuate racial injustices and those who seek to exploit our remaining racial problems, even at the cost of violence. No thoughtful person can believe accusations that the Communist cause is served by those individuals and groups that are working soberly to promote interracial harmony, compliance with law, and the orderly elimination of segregation and discrimination from American life.

The gentleman from Arkansas has made damaging and unwarranted accusations against just such constructive efforts in the South. The charges which he made against the Southern Regional Council -- and by extension against Harry Ashmore -- have long since and repeatedly been refuted. Yet their use once again on the floor of the House will provide the extremists with more spurious ammunition to be directed against those whose moderate views they oppose.

The Southern Regional Council is a respected organization of white and Negro Southerners founded in 1944 as the successor to the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. Its founders and its subsequent leaders have been men and women of unchallengeable integrity. Its incorporators were Bishop Arthur J. Moore of The Methodist Church, Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University, the late Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, and the late Dr. Howard W. Odum, distinguished educator of the University of North Carolina. The organization's stated aim is the achievement of "equal opportunity for all the South's people."

Since this auspicious beginning, the Council's membership has included outstanding Southerners from all walks of life. Dr. Odum was the first president. He was succeeded by Paul D. Williams of Richmond, Va., a prominent Catholic layman and co-founder of the Catholic Committee of the South. Mr. Williams served as president for six years -- from 1945 until 1951. His successor was Marion A. Wright, widely known attorney and civic leader of Linville Falls, N. C. The current president is James McBride Dabbs, farmer and author of Mayesville, S. C.

As Ralph McGill wrote recently: "The Southern Regional Council is a highly respected and efficient organization, on no attorney general's list and free from any taint of being any sort of 'front' ....The council has been attacked strongly by the Klan groups and the White Citizens Councils as being an instrument of desegregation. The men who signed its charter of incorporation, including a Methodist bishop and university teachers, have been harried and subject to abuse." (Atlanta Journal-Constitution, 9/7/58)

The attacks upon the Council by these extremist groups have taken the form of the unfounded accusations echoed a few days ago in the House. They were originated by a few discredited professional witnesses, employed by segregationist state committees to impeach those Southerners who dared speak out for compliance with the law of the land. So spurious was the web of association spun by these paid accusers, so malicious were their untruths, distortions, and innuendoes that even some ardent segregationists have repudiated their testimony.

For example, the highly conservative Richmond Times-Dispatch, on August 21, 1958, devoted a lengthy editorial to the refutation of charges against the Southern Regional Council -- the very same charges that were repeated within the past few days by the gentleman from Arkansas. This staunchly segregationist newspaper said, in part:

"... the Southern Regional Council was not an offshoot of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.... The Council was the successor to the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, founded in 1919 by leading churchmen. To repeat, it not only was no 'offshoot' of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; it was criticized in some quarters because it was more conservative than that organization and suspected of being in competition with it."

As to the second charge against the Council -- allegedly based on a statement by the Daily Worker -- the Times-Dispatch commented:

"As to the allegation of the Communist Daily Worker that James E. Jackson, chief of the Southern branch of the U. S. Communist party, was a 'co-founder of the Southern Regional Council,' there is nothing to support this.... he was not at any time an officer, director, or member of that agency. The Daily Worker's statement that he was a 'founder' is as unreliable and inaccurate as nearly everything else in that Communist sheet."

And the editorial concludes: "While we disagree strongly and completely with its [the Council's] present position on this [racial] issue, we feel obligated to point out, in fairness, that it was in no sense Communist in its origins. The Southern Regional Council was established because of a sincere desire on the part of white and Negro leaders in the South to eliminate many of the disabilities and discriminations from which Negroes were suffering."

Another respected Southern newspaper, The Chattanooga Times, has commented as follows on these same unprincipled charges:

"The Arkansas Legislative Council, concluding that a Communist plot is substantially responsible for the Little Rock desegregation crisis, has aired some charges so grossly unjust as to recall the McCarthyist nightmare. There was J. B. Matthews, himself a former Communist-front leader, declaring that the Southern Regional Council had Red sympathizers in its ranks. Just 20 years ago, Mr. Matthews was accusing Shirley Temple of aiding the Bolsheviks... The SRC, as is well known, is made up of foremost Southern educators, clergymen, business, labor and professional leaders... Now the Arkansas Legislative Council, with never a peep about the role of its own Gov. Faubus, concludes on the word of former Communists, who are professional name callers, and others, most of them from out of the region, that little more than a Red plot is the cause of their difficulties."

On the one hand, then, we find the Southern Regional Council, an organization of responsible Southerners dedicated to the solution of racial problems; an organization founded and led by men whose character and patriotism are above serious question; an organization that commands the support of the major religious bodies and the respect of many leading newspapers in the South and elsewhere; an organization whose unblemished history and activities are extensively recorded in newspaper files and other public records, available to any sincere inquirer.

On the other hand, we find a handful of desperate extremists and their hired witnesses seeking by whatever means they can contrive to destroy the reputation of this organization and all others who speak for obedience to law. Regardless of one's position on segregation or civil rights, the principles of elementary fairness and decency demand that the record be set straight.

Alford's Blasts Don't Contribute To State Prestige

By Elizabeth Carpenter
Gazette Washington Correspondent

CONGRESSMAN Dale Alford may be thrilling a small and undistinguished network of Southern hotheads on the floor of the House of Representatives but he is also jeopardizing the political prestige of Arkansas in that body.

His speech on the alleged subversive elements behind the Little Rock school crisis—largely a rehash of Senator Jim Eastland's fodder—allied him completely with the small group of agitators on Capitol Hill who are trying so frantically to change the complexion of the NAACP from black to rosy Red.

The NAWPS, they are laughingly called, by their colleagues in the cloakroom: Native American White Protestant Southerners!

But while Dr. Alford's speech may have brought joy to the hearts of men like Mississippi Representatives John Bell Williams and Bill Colmer, who cheered him on from the sidelines, it is extremely doubtful if his benefactors—Representatives Wilbur Mills of Kensett and Oren Harris of El Dorado — were overjoyed at the spectacle.

Arkansans in Washington

Dr. Alford is holding his seat — precarious, at best — because of the powerful influence and high standing of Representatives Mills and Harris who stuck their neck out for him. So far they have managed to hold off an investigation of his unusual 7½ day paste-in election which the House Administration Committee was called upon to make.

He is not making it any easier for them. Washington has heard the "I-have-here-in-my-hand documentation" routine before. As the Washington Post & Times Herald commented: "There was another fellow who made similar noises awhile back and both the Senate and the country got pretty tired of his stuck whistle."

Representative Wayne Hays (Dem., O.) put it even blunter to Alford. A member of the House Administrations Committee which has shelved the Alford investigation, Representative Hays told him, "I am trying to keep an open mind on you but there is such a thing as overpleading your case. As far as I'm concerned you've already done it."

Hays told the Gazette that "definitely" the next time the House Committee meets (the third week in March), someone will make the long-delayed motion for the investigation to be held.

As Alford talks himself into an investigation, friends of Mills and Harris are becoming considerably more worried over their support of the Little Rock man.

After all, they have quite a bit at stake. Both have worked long and hard to reach their positions of esteem in the Congress. Unlike Dr. Alford, they didn't wait until they had reached 43 years of age and have the support of a comfortable income to decide to devote themselves to public service. And they didn't win their seats by any 7½-day wonder campaigns. They have become skilled practitioners of the art of government by the long, hard climb. They have promising futures in the House that is sure to add lustre to the state.

It is too bad that their own prestige should be jeopardized. It it — as a Southern congressman put it so well — a sad day for Arkansas.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Denominational Social Action Secretaries

FROM: Will D. Campbell

SUBJECT: Proposed News Release

DATE: February 25, 1959

Enclosed is a copy of a news story reporting Congressman Dale Alford's maiden speech in the United States House of Representatives. It received wide coverage throughout the nation.

There seems to be a current wave of this kind of Southern McCarthyism. Some of us have felt that there is a need for something to be said in protest which would at least indicate that there is an awareness of what is going on.

The denominational social action secretaries seem to represent an homogeneous group who might agree upon a common statement.

The enclosed draft represents the thinking of several Nashville based individuals; viz. Dr. A. C. Miller, Christian Life Commission, Southern Baptist Convention; the Reverend J. Nets Rollins, Staff Representative, Department of Social Education and Action, United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A. and myself. The Reverend Cornelius Tarplee and the Reverend James Lawson have agreed to sign it, if they agree to the text. It is not intended as a finished statement.

Will you join us in such a release? We would release it as individuals with affiliation listed only for purposes of identification. Of course, you are invited to make criticisms, corrections, comments, or to change any part of it.

Time is of the essence if it is to be news worthy... You may call me collect if you care to discuss it. Otherwise, will you please wire your agreement along with suggestions for change.

means formidable. But no one will deny that it will take a long time. Two things are required: education and time.

One can of course provide education and institutions which will foster the growth of social consciousness. But the process is necessarily a slow one. I admit, however, that we have not the time to do so considering the existence of other voices, the Communists, promising better things in quicker time than democracy can offer. The competition is therefore very stiff indeed and I think time is, in this case, not on our side.

Southern Regional Council

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. RICHARD BOLLING

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, March 2, 1959

Mr. BOLLING. Mr. Speaker, a sense of fairness impels me to insert the following editorials from two respected southern papers. These editorials from the Richmond Times-Dispatch and the Chattanooga Times discuss certain attacks on the good name of the Southern Regional Council and deserve the careful attention of every fair-minded citizen regardless of his views:

[From the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Aug. 21, 1958]

A RACE AGENCY AND THE FACTS

Inaccurate statements as to its origins of the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta appeared recently in the Times-Dispatch, and should be corrected. They appeared—inadvertently, we are sure—in one of the series of articles by Edward B. Simmons, of the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard-Times, concerning Communist efforts to incite racial strife in the United States.

Mr. Simmons stated in the article appearing in our paper on August 5 that the Southern Regional Council, established in Atlanta in 1944 was an "offshoot of the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare, which was dissolved in 1948 after twice being described by the Federal Government as Communist front." He also said: "The Communist Daily Worker openly boasted that James E. Jackson, chief of the southern branch of the U.S. Communist Party, was a cofounder of the regional council."

Taking these two charges in order, the Southern Regional Council was not an offshoot of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. It was established in response to an appeal from respected southern Negro leaders, who met at Durham, N.C., in October 1942, on the call of Dr. Gordon B. Hancock, of the Virginia Union faculty here, and Dr. P. B. Young, of Norfolk, publisher of the Norfolk Journal and Guide. These Negro leaders did not ask for the elimination of segregation in the schools or anywhere else; they asked that separate but equal be made a reality.

Responding to their appeal, a group of white leaders met in Atlanta in the spring of 1943, and expressed a desire to cooperate. Out of this grew the Southern Regional Council. The council was the successor to the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, founded in 1919 by leading churchmen. To repeat, it not only was no offshoot of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; it was criticized in some quarters because it was more conservative than that organization and suspected of being in competition with it.

We must remember, too, that when the Southern Conference for Human Welfare was established in 1938, it was not suspected of having any Communist connections, and many well intentioned and patriotic southerners participated in its early meetings. A number of these later joined the Southern Regional Council when they discovered the true purposes of the Conference for Human Welfare.

As to the allegation of the Communist Daily Workers that James E. Jackson, chief of the southern branch of the U.S. Communist Party, was a cofounder of the Southern Regional Council, there is nothing to support this.

A James E. Jackson is listed as having attended the Durham meeting of Negro leaders in October 1942, but is not mentioned by the Norfolk Journal and Guide as having been on the committee which drew up the statement then issued. Jackson did not participate in the meetings of white and Negro leaders in 1943 and 1944 which led to the establishment of the Southern Regional Council, and he was not at any time an officer, director, or member of that agency. The Daily Worker's statement that he was a founder is as unreliable and inaccurate as nearly everything else in that Communist sheet.

The late Dr. Howard W. Odum, noted and respected member of the University of North Carolina faculty, was the first president of the council. He was succeeded in 1945 by Paul D. Williams, prominent Catholic layman of Richmond and cofounder of the Catholic Committee of the South, who served until 1951. Mr. Williams was succeeded in that year by Marion A. Wright, South Carolina attoreny, former chairman of the South Carolina Library Board and past president of the University of South Carolina Alumni Association.

It should be emphasized that SRC worked within the framework of separate but equal for 7 years, and did not announce for integration until 1951.

While we disagree strongly and completely with its present position on this issue, we feel obligated to point out, in fairness, that it was in no sense Communist in its origins. The Southern Regional Council was established because of a sincere desire on the part of white and Negro leaders in the South to eliminate many of the disabilities and discriminations from which Negroes were suffering.

It was hoped that if these could be substantially lessened, the colored South would not look to the colored North for leadership. Insufficient progress was made, unfortunately, and the NAACP moved in and launched its drive for the complete elimination of segregation—sooner than it probably would have done if SRC's accomplishments had been larger.

That is where we stand today.

[From the Chattanoga (Tenn.) Times, Dec. 20, 1958]

MATTHEWS AND THE SRC

The Arkansas Legislative Council, concluding that a Communist plot is substantially responsible for the Little Rock desegregation crisis, has aired some charges so grossly unjust as to recall the McCarthyist nightmare.

There was J. B. Matthews, himself a former Communist-front leader, declaring that the Southern Regional Council had Red sympathizers in its ranks.

Just 20 years ago, Mr. Matthews was accusing Shirley Temple of aiding the Bolsheviks. The former chief counsel of the Dies committee is primarily remembered, however, for his July 1953 article in the American Mercury labeling "at least 7,000 Protestant clergymen" as "party members, fellow travelers, espionage agents, partyline adherents, and unwilling dupes." The protest, from President Eisenhower and others, was so strong that Senator Joe McCarthy, who by then had carried his campaign of vilification directly to the White House, was forced to fire Mathews, whom he had just hired as executive director of his subcommittee.

In the Little Rock hearings, other familiar names in the business of smear were trotted out. The Southern Regional Council was a frequent target, though no one dared go so far as to impugn its motives as a whole.

The SRC, as is well known, is made up of foremost southern educators, clergymen, business, labor, and professional leaders. A discussion and research group, it was organized in 1943, as a result of Negro leaders' efforts to see that the "separate but equal" doctrine in southern education be made a reality. It grew also out of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, founded in 1919 by leading churchmen.

Since then it has favored gradual compliance with the Supreme Court's decision, but even so staunchly segregationist a newspaper as the Richmond Times-Dispatch recently said: "The Southern Regional Council was established because of a sincere desire on the part of white and Negro leaders in the South to eliminate many of the disabilities and discriminations from which Negroes were suffering."

Now the Arkansas Legislative Council, with never a peep about the role of its own Governor Faubus, concludes on the word of former Communists, who are professional name-callers, and others, most of them from out of the region, that little more than a Red plot is the cause of their difficulties.

have if they are to support the bill. We cannot see the necessity for bribing the public on this legislation. An antiracketeering measure is needed and the people should not have to bargain for it.

The administration bill, S. 748, comes nearer to an effective answer to this need. Provision is not made for bringing unions under antitrust laws or controlling the use of union funds for political purposes but the bill is otherwise an acceptable answer to the problem. S. 748 is already an example of compromise and we feel that it is the least that the American people can be asked to accept.

We are now at a turning point in the control of labor racketeering. Either something effective must be done this year or the racketeers will know that they have a clear field. The working men and women of this country deserve more than that.

Our committee is not able to study legislation in this field and obtain approval as fast as the various bills are being introduced.

However, we believe that S. 748 is a bill with which labor and management can both live and we urge the members of this committee to support this type of labor bill.

Respectfully submitted,

J. REECE FUNDERBURK, JR., D.D.S.
Chairman, Legislative Action Committee, Lancaster Chamber of Commerce, Lancaster, S.C.

Don't Kill the Goose

If labor unions insist that they have a right to a bigger and bigger share of the income of corporations, the Government will lose in two ways:

First, every wage expense is a deduction on which the Government suffers a 52-percent loss of revenue.

Second, the increased revenue from individual income taxes does not make up for all the losses suffered by the Treasury from a drop in corporation profits. In the current fiscal year, for instance, individual income tax receipts, as estimated by the Treasury, have gone up by $2.2 billion at the same time that the corporation taxes have declined by $3.1 billion.

The dependence of the Federal Treasury on the profits of business is not fully appreciated or realized throughout this country. President Eisenhower said on this point at his press conference last week:

"We shouldn't be so prone, I think, to talk about and decry profits in our economy.

"You must remember that the people now expect all sorts of services from the Federal Government, starting with that of national defense and go right on down to the last item that you want to find in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

"We tax largely profits. We don't tax industrial activity as such—we tax profits. That is what the income tax is. So if you are trying to get profits down to zero, you are going to have to find some other way of finding Federal revenue, if we are going to this Government, I assure you."

America has achieved her greatest progress under the system of private initiative. Experience proves that Government operation of business projects is wasteful. Also, a big volume of tax dollars that would otherwise be collected is lost to the Treasury.

President Eisenhower has stated the issue plainly: How can there be appropriations for social welfare unless the Government takes in enouhg money from taxes to pay its bills? The President said last week in a speech to the U.S. Savings Bond Conference:

"Now, we have among us those who are calling for heavier and heavier expenditures, saying that these heavier expenditures on the part of the Federal Government would mean and, in effect, would cause, economic expansion. I cannot think of any doctrine or statement that is so false as this one. * * *

"When the Government spends more money than it is getting in the form of taxes, the Treasury must do just exactly what a family or a business would have to do, under similar circumstances: It must go out and borrow whatever is needed to finish paying the bills. When part of the borrowing it must undertake comes from commercial banks, the money supply is increased and the conditions are created for an inflationary price rise.

"Inflation weakens the economy. It brings serious hardships to those of our citizens who are living on pensions or other fixed incomes, and works against those who are unable to bargain effectively for higher wages. Most dangerous of all, inflation weakens the incentive to save. It gives rise to a fear that the dollar will continue to decline in value and that speculation will be the only way to keep ahead of the game."

What is the answer? It is to be found in one word—self-restraint. Business must restrain itself on prices. Labor must restrain itself on wages. The spenders in Congress must restrain themselves on appropriations for social welfare.

Steady growth and a stable dollar are certain to result from such restraint.

But what must be borne in mind above all else is that profits derived from private business are necessary to support the Government. We must never kill the goose that lays the golden egg."

OF
HON. JOHN H. DENT
OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, March 2, 1959

Mr. DENT. Mr. Speaker, as usual, opposition to the present administration on reciprocal trades and the Buy American Act, draws editorial comment, as well as a batch of misinformation, which serves to further confuse the minds of the public as to the realities of the situation. I am submitting for the RECORD today two editorials appearing in local papers which would appear to cover the subject to the uninformed, but to those of us who have made a thorough study of the situation the answer is not so simple. I submit, therefore, Mr. Speaker, my reply to these editors and their editorials:

OPEN LETTER TO THE PITTSBURGH POST-GAZETTE

FEBRUARY 27, 1959.

To the EDITOR.

DEAR SIR: I don't write Letters to the Editor very often. When I do, it's because either the information is in error, or I am badly informed.

On Wednesday, February 25, your editorial appears to put my fight for the awarding of large contracts to foreign governments in a bad light.

Personally, I've been an advocate for liberal trade policies. However, I always felt that the promises of every President, every Secretary of State, and every Secretary of Commerce—since the passage of the original reciprocal trade bills and the foreign aid legislation—were being kept.

Every assurance was and is still being given that no arguments on trade would be made that would prove to be injurious to any American industry.

The facts do not bear out these assurances:

Most of our troubles are of recent vintage, the Buy American Act has been openly and flagrantly abused since the Presidential order of December 1954, decreasing the American differential allowance from 25 percent to 6 percent.

The escape clause has been invoked 60 times by industry and minor relief has been granted only 19 times and no relief in the other 41 cases.

This record was compiled in spite of the fact that in 31 cases the Tariff Commission ruled unanimously in favor of tariff relief for the injured industries.

Two classic examples are the binocular and watch industries. After many protests against the competition from abroad, they closed shop and are no longer producing in the United States. The prediction is that all the watch industry will fold unless something is done.

These are not isolated cases, they are the rule, and not the exception.

Insofar as your figures for export and import of electrical equipment, the testimony given us is that of all the export business done by American producers all but $200,000 worth was paid for by our own money under mutual aid, ICA, and other Government spending and lending agencies.

Even this market is now threatened by new regulations being put into effect.

I believe a trade agreement has to be mutually beneficial and mutually respected.

Dear Dick:

I was glad to have a chance to talk with you this morning and thank you personally for your willingness to help.

With regard to the "police-record" charges against Daisy Bates, I am enclosing copies of two newspaper stories -- from the Arkansas Gazette and the New York Times -- in which Mrs. Bates' reply to the charges is quoted.

I take it Mrs. Bates' connection with the NAACP needs no documented defense, since J. Edgar Hoover and others have been repeatedly quoted in rebuttal to the charges Alford makes against the NAACP.

Alford's only other remark about Mrs. Bates was that her husband, L. C. Bates, serves on the board of the Southern Conference Educational Fund. As far as I know, this is true -- as it is of a number of reputable Negro leaders. While I personally am not very enthusiastic about SCEF, Alford's use of this relationship strains the guilt-by-association technique.

I am also enclosing a current list of the Southern Regional Council's board members, showing their principal identifications.

Do let me know if any further questions arise.

With appreciation and best regards,

Sincerely,

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
WASHINGTON, D. C.

mination on the part of many Members of this Body, I feel that this Congress offers the best opportunity the citizens of the District have ever had for home-rule legislation. It is my sincere hope that the legislation which I am sponsoring will be given early hearings by the District Committee and will be reported out of Committee in the near future so that the total House membership will have an opportunity to vote on this critically important measure.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced legislation to give back to the people of the District of Columbia something that Congress "temporarily" took away from them 80 years ago—their right to run their own local affairs.

I do not think any Member of this House would challenge the basic principle of this legislation—that local government belongs to local people. But my concern is practical, as well as one of principle.

Congress has a national responsibility. Every year, the burden of our work as a national legislature becomes heavier. We do justice neither to the Nation as a whole, nor to the people of Washington in particular, when we take time from our duties to try to function as a city council for the District.

In spite of the demands of great national issues and their duties to their own constituents, the members of the District Committee have given unselfishly of their time and energy to the many details of the municipal government of the District. Yet in spite of their fine service, I believe they would agree that Washington, as a city, faces serious municipal problems which need the vigor and the local concern that only a full-time, elected city government possesses. It is simply too much to ask busy Members of this House, more familiar with their own States and districts, and properly more concerned with them, to provide an adequate full-time government for the District. I am sure that the members of the District Committee believe with me that the best government is self-government.

I do not think any of us who has lived long in Washington, who reads local papers, who talks to local people and who observes for himself, can doubt the real problems that exist here. I hope every Member of this House has had an opportunity to read a recent article on Washington from the highly respected Kiplinger Changing Times magazine, which I believe has been reprinted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. It is convincing evidence of the need for a vigorous local government, elected by the people, with their support and with power to tackle the problems of this city.

These are facts that need no argument; we can see them around us. The decay of the core city is a fact that should, and I am sure does, concern every merchant with a stake in doing business in Washington. The spreading blight of slums in Washington is a sad spectacle in the Nation's Capital—but it is also a real, practical problem for the people who live here and who must pay the social and economic price for a deteriorating city. I believe the people of Washington are concerned and want the opportunity to tackle these problems. I think they are best equipped to do it, because it is their local community. I think we should give them the chance and the power.

I know that Washington is more than a local community. It is also the Capital of the United States. And while the people of Washington can and should be given the right and opportunity to meet their local problems, and run their local affairs, I think they and we must continue to recognize the great national interest in the District of Columbia. I do not believe Congress can give up the ultimate responsibility and I am sure no one will argue that point. It is not at issue. The legislation being introduced today recognizes the national interest in the District and it recognizes and provides for the responsibility of Congress. It leaves final control over the District where it must remain—with Congress. But it puts the immediate responsibility for local affairs where it too must properly be—with the nearly 1 million people who live in Washington. I believe this legislation is a practical and sound way of realizing the interests and the rights of both the Nation and the local community. It is a practical and sound plan for local self-government within the framework of ultimate congressional responsibility for the Nation's Capital. As such, I believe it will benefit the people of Washington and of the Nation and will reduce the job of Congress, as the ultimate trustee of the District, to a size we can more competently and wisely manage.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I would like to insert in the RECORD a brief history of the municipal government of our Nation's Capital. As will be seen from a reading of this summary, the first government of our Nation's Capital as conceived and implemented by President George Washington was almost identical to the form of government proposed in the bill which I am introducing today. It is in the spirit of the Founding Fathers that this legislation is proposed, and it is with a sincere belief on my part in basic democracy that I sponsor this vital legislation.

The controlling constitutional provision respecting the District is article I, section 8, clause 17:

"Congress shall have power * * * To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever, over such District, (not exceeding 10 miles square) as may, by cession of particular States, and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the Government of the United States."

The first government of the city of Washington consisted of a mayor, appointed by the President, and a city council, elected by the people of the city. This was in 1802. In 1812, the city council was permitted to elect the mayor of Washington, and in 1820 and thereafter the mayor was elected by the people. This government continued until 1871.

By an act of Congress, February 21, 1871, the corporations of Washington and of Georgetown were abolished and a territorial form of government, consisting of a Governor and board of public works, and a legislative assembly, was set up. The legislative assembly consisted of a council of 11 members, and a house of delegates of 22 members. The District also had a Delegate in the House of Representatives. The Governor, the Board of Public Works, and the Council were appointed by the President. The 22 members of the house of delegates were elected by the people. The District of Columbia had a Delegate in the House of Representatives until 1875.

This form of government lasted 3 years, or until June 20, 1874, when Congress provided that the District of Columbia should be governed by 3 Commissioners, appointed by the President. This was known as a temporary form of government, and lasted until July 1, 1878, when the present permanent commission government was set up. In the creation of the temporary commission form of government in 1874, and the permanent form in 1878, no provision was made for the franchise and so, for the first time in three-quarters of a century, no part of the District exercised the right of suffrage.

In 1878 the expense of the Federal City was borne jointly by the District and the United States, on a 50–50 basis. In 1922, this was changed to a 60–40 ratio, and in 1938 the share of the United States was changed legally to a lump sum, which today is approximately 14 percent of the general fund.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITY IN THE SOUTH

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ALFORD] is recognized for 50 minutes.

Mr. ALFORD. Mr. Speaker, I humbly beg the indulgence of this distinguished body in my "speaking out," as it were, so soon in the 86th Congress, but I am concerned that our Justice Department yields to pressure from an organization such as the NAACP and strikes out with lightninglike speed within the past month to overturn the will of a majority to satisfy the propagandizing desires of a minority of a minority. We must never forget that majority rule is the democratic way in America—not rule by minority or dictatorship. Are there no rights beholden to the majority?

I wish to preface these remarks with the statement that I am certainly not one of those individuals who looks under the bed at night to ascertain whether a Communist is hiding there.

Frankly, however, I am alarmed at the complacency of some officials toward the menace of the Communist conspiracy—to transform our representative government into a centralized, totalitarian dictatorship, to abolish property rights, and to make this great Nation of ours part of a one-world government, operated from Moscow.

The Director of our respected and most efficient Federal Bureau of Investigation—the Honorable J. Edgar Hoover—has told us that the two great dangers to this country are communism and corruption. May I say here that any inference which might be gleaned from any public utterance which I have ever made must not and should not be construed or interpreted as being uncomplimentary to the FBI and its loyal agents. I am critical of their political superiors, the Justice Department, but until this present moment the Federal Bureau of Investigation is without a peer in its efficiency. Our FBI Director, as we all know, has published a very fine book—a book which I personally believe should be required reading in every high school in the land. Its title is "Masters of Deceit." In this great contribution to the security of America, he has documented well the Communist objective to destroy the Government of the United States, as well as other representative, free governments of the world. I repeat that Mr. Hoover has told us that the two great dangers to this country are communism and corruption—and I respectfully call your attention to the fact that the Director mentions communism as the first of these two great dangers.

I shall respectfully present today proof that racial agitation is a major weapon of the Communist party—and that many of the racial incidents of the past 25 or 30 years can be traced directly to Communist leadership and direction.

I have here an offset reproduction of a pamphlet, published in 1928, entitled "American Negro Problems." It is a program to promote racial strife in the United States, presented by a representative of Moscow. His original name was Joseph Pogany. He has masqueraded in our country under such aliases as John Pepper, John Schwartz and John Swift. One page 12 of this document, this Communist leader, tells plainly that the propaganda line for work among the Negroes is to emphasize plans for establishment of a Negro Soviet Republic in the South.

America has grown great with the traditional social system that has been maintained until the present time. Our social system with respect to races has been part of the very fiber of our social structure in every section of our country—although more strictly adhered to in some sections because of the large percentage of a particular minority. There was nothing mean or violent or malignant about our social structure; good will among all men was practiced every day in the easygoing boundaries of our social life. The Negro was encouraged in his education and we shared his joy and his sorrow; we were there when he was sick and ready to counsel when called upon. A healthy social system was developed, the like of which has never been known before. Under this system the Negro made more progress than in any other country in the world. We of the Southland were for the Negro with our hearts and not just with bayonets. But, in more recent years, especially since the militant strides of international communism, there have been a few leaders who pushed a few well-meaning people into militant action. I am convinced that a few of our good Negro citizens have become pawns of this international conspiracy without being conscious, in the beginning, of its vicious intent of creating mass agitation to divide and conquer the greatest democracy that has ever appeared on the scene of world history. The white friends were not disturbed at first over the militant march of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Southern people are traditionally and basically friendly, and no intelligent Southern white would ever think of being cruel or unkind. It would have been a sign of improper upbringing. The South, both white and colored, was happy with the evolutionary method of progress, but illegal and military enforcement of destruction of age-old social customs with overnight speed has played into the hands of the Communist Party.

Yes, it was back in the 1920's that Communists began telling Negroes about plans to take over the southern part of the United States, secede from the rest of our country, and establish a "black Soviet." Fantastic? Yes, but not fantasy. This is a well-established fact, documented by the official Communist press by former Communists who have left the party and testified before congressional committees and Government agencies, and by undercover agents of the FBI, who went into the party to obtain proof of its subversive activity. And these same sources have produced the proof that since 1928, when the Sixth World Congress of the party sent out the Communist program for propagandizing the American Negroes, the Communists have been exploiting the Negro to divide the people of the United States.

I am sure that many Members of this House will recall, when Federal troops occupied Little Rock in the fall of 1957, that the television newsreels and press of the Nation carried a scene that purported to show a white woman "befriending and comforting" a young Negro girl who had left her new modern Horace Man High School to enter the 33-year-old Central High School. Of course, the reporters and photographers had no way of knowing that scene was a staged affair. However, an inquiry would have revealed that the white woman was the notorious Grace Lorch—the well-known former Grace Lonergan, a Communist functionary, whose record is in the files of the FBI, the Senate Internal Security Committee and the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Files of both the House and Senate committees mentioned contain evidence that Mrs. Lorch was identified in Boston, 9 years ago, as a Communist organizer, that she attended the Massachusetts Communist Convention in 1943, and that she was a member of the New England District of the Communist Party in 1945. Her yeoman service to the Communist apparatus was so great that she was sent to Arkansas, via Nashville, Tenn., and other points, to help create racial incidents in my State. She and her husband, Lee Lorch, moved into a home in the neighborhood of Daisy Bates of the NAACP.

Grace and Lee Lorch were in Little Rock in the summer of 1957—just before the school crisis in the fall—where Lee Lorch was a teacher at Philander Smith College, a Negro institution. He was placed on the faculty of Philander Smith after having been fired from Fisk University, a Negro college at Nashville, Tenn. Fisk authorities declined to renew his contract after he had hidden behind the first and fifth amendments in refusing to answer questions at hearings regarding his Communist affiliations. Lee Lorch, during the early period he spent in Little Rock, was financed, in part, by an appropriation from Congress, since the National Science Foundation provided a grant of $9,800 made toward the salary of Professor Lorch. The shocking thing about this is that the grant was made after Lorch had been separated from the faculties of City College of New York, Pennsylvania State University, and Fisk University because of his refusal to answer questions concerning his Communist affiliations. Professor Lorch was identified as a Communist in 1950 hearings of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. The identification was by two former FBI undercover agents. He and Grace Lorch have figured in other congressional hearings since he was unfrocked in 1950. While teaching at Fisk University in 1954, he declined to answer questions of the House Committee on Un-American Activities concerning his Communist affiliations. Withing hours after this defiance, Fisk authorities announced his contract would not be renewed.

Shortly thereafter, Professor Lorch was employed by Philander Smith College in Little Rock, a Negro institution, by its president, M. Lafayette Harris, who is a director of the southern conference educational fund. Public records, on file with the House Committee on Un-American Activities, show that M. Lafayette Harris has been identified in activity of Communist-front groups, no less than a half-dozen times.

Grace Lorch proved she is an expert at racial agitation when she staged the exhibition of alleged friendship by putting her arms around the Negro girl, being very careful to receive the full attention of unsuspecting newsreel cameramen. This is the scene with which you are all so familiar. Grace Lorch performed her assignment well, for she was rewarded for this stunt when the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee transported her to New York and there sponsored a $10 per plate dinner in her honor. The Emergency Civil Liberties Committee is a shock-troop or commando-type group allied with Communist-dominated civil liberties agitation. The Communists have developed a great money-raising vehicle in their program of race agitation in the South. They encourage and promote racial incidents, create and ballyhoo a hero or heroine, then bring them to the East for a series of rabble-rousing dinners and rallies. Of course they pass the hat around at these meetings to bring in the filthy lucre of this, as they dub us, "imperialistic, capitalistic Nation."

In this objective the Communist bosses have succeeded well. Never before, in the history of mankind, has a nation become so divided by such a propaganda campaign—known in modern-day parlance as psychological warfare.

Let us look at Daisy Lee Bates, the head of the NAACP in Little Rock, and her husband, Lucius Christopher Bates. Records of the Louisiana State police show that they were arrested in Monroe, La., on November 16, 1934. Lucius was convicted of carrying a concealed weapon and was fined $100. Daisy was held for investigation and was released with Lucius when he paid the fine. Back in 1952 before the Bateses became so prominent in the NAACP they were both arrested by Little Rock police and paid fines for gambling. Each was also convicted of contempt of court in North Little Rock. The name of Lucius Bates is listed as a member of the board of directors of an organization known as the Southern Conference Educational Fund which was established after its predecessor, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, was declared a Communist-front by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, 1947.

This same Daisy Bates is also a national officer in the NAACP, the same organization whose national officers and national committee members, I am reliably informed, have a record of some 2,000 instances of Communist activity; 145 out of 236 national officers and national committee members have records of Communist activity.

Very convincing is the record of James E. Jackson, Jr., a Moscow-trained Negro, who has been in the forefront of Communist organization work in a number of States, both North and South, for some 15 or 20 years or more. Unless he has left Russia in the past few days, this Communist, James Jackson, is even now in Moscow. He went to the Soviet Union several days ago to attend the 21st world congress of the Communist Party. The National Americanism Commission of the American Legion, in its publication, The Firing Line, calls attention to testimony , in the files of the Lousiana Legislative Committee, reflecting that the southern regional council was formed by James E. Jackson, identified as a southern organizer of the Communist Party. Permit me to quote from the May 15, 1957, issue of The Firing Line.

Records of the American Legion reveal a definite trend of interrelationship between the Southern Regional Council and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, a defunct Communist-front organization.

That is the Southern Conference for Human Welfare—the organization which went out of business after it was cited and was placed by the Southern Conference Educational Fund. James Dombrowski was executive secretary of SCHW. He holds the same position with the SCEF, which continued in the same headquarters at New Orleans and with the same telephone number that was formerly assigned to the SCHW. After hearings in New Orleans, in 1954, the Senate Internal Security Committee issued a report, stating that the SCEF—and I quote—"is operating with substantially the same leadership and purposes as its predecessor organization," the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

But let us return briefly to the Communist, James Jackson, the man who was credited by the Communist Daily Worker on December 2, 1954, with having formed the Southern Regional Council. Parenthetically, permit me to remind you that Daisy Bates, the head of the NAACP in Arkansas, is a director in the Southern Regional Council setup. This council established 12 auxiliary groups, known as State Councils on Human Relations. These State councils, mind you, were established only in 12 Southern States. Not one chapter was established outside the South.

One of the incorporators of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations is Harry Ashmore, the renegade journalist who is editor of the Arkansas Gazette in Little Rock, and who has profited quite materially in the capitalistic line by writing detrimental articles about his native Southland. This same Harry Ashmore was, and still is, a director of the foundation which provided approximately a half million dollars to finance and operate the Southern Regional Council.

I have here with me the highlights of the record of James Jackson, Jr. It shows that he has been an active top Communist Party worker in Virginia, Louisiana, Arkansas, Alabama, Michigan, New York, California, and other States. One of the titles he held was as southern regional director of the Communist Party. He was also the moving influence behind an organization called the Southern Negro Youth Congress. He once headed communistic activity in Louisiana. And after Pine Bluff, Ark., and Little Rock, Ark., had been designated by Moscow as areas to be colonized for Communist-led race agitation, this James Jackson conducted the Arkansas survey to determine the intensity of agitation necessary to divide the people of my State. His yeoman service brought him advancement to alternate membership of the Communist National Committee. He has conducted Communist training schools and lecture courses in the party's program to brainwash and indoctrinate American Negroes.

James E. Jackson was one of the Communists convicted in New York in July 1956 for violating the Smith Act. Evidence showed he and his comrades had conspired to overthrow the Government of the United States by force and violence. But his 2-year sentence was set aside by the Warren-Myrdal Supreme Court in August 1958. The Court has freed a number of Communists convicted of conspiracy to overthrow our Government by force, under a ruling that mere teaching of forcible overthrow did not measure up to a call to action. And so, this Communist, Jackson, was freed to return to the South, to help promote race agitation in Arkansas, and to go to Moscow this year as a representative of the Communist Party, U.S.A., at the 21st World Congress of the Communists.

I have in my possession more detailed records concerning the communistic activity of this man, James Jackson. He has spearheaded the organization and promotion of the Communist conspiracy at the Ford Motor Co. in Detroit; served as a delegate and emissary to national and international meetings and conventions of the party; taught in Communist brainwashing and indoctrination schools, and helped to establish and promote front organizations to enlist the unwitting support of well-intentioned, but oft-misguided, dupes.

Traveling about the South today, distributing the doctrine of totalitarian government, is a husband-wife team by name of Carl and Ann Braden. Carl Braden is free to roam the Nation, these days, because of a ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court that Federal statutes against sedition have preempted State sedition laws. Braden is now a field secretary for the Southern Conference Educational Fund, which was formed after the SCHW was revealed as a Communist front. As a Communist boss in Louisville, Ky., Carl Braden was indicted on charges of sedition in Jefferson Circuit Court, State of Kentucky. He was convicted in December 1954, subsequently sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment and fined $5,000. Evidence at the trial, with the prosecution conducted by State's Attorney Scott Hamilton, showed that Braden purchased a home in a suburban Louisville community occupied exclusively by white families and, then, transferred ownership to a Negro named Wade. It was further shown at the trial that the home was dynamited on June 27, 1954, and the grand jury determined, after visiting the scene of the crime, that the dynamiting was "an inside job" perpetrated to create an incident. The prosecution maintained that Braden was the "common denominator" of the explosion. Shortly after this home purchasing and bombing incident, Carl Braden received a letter from a comrade who signed his name as "Al," otherwise unidentified in the trial record. The letter stated that the latest project of the Bradens—the Wade home acquisition—constituted a "breach in the wall" of what Comrade Al referred to as "the real estate trust." Al told Carl and Ann their project "left us breathless."

Prosecutor Scott Hamilton and Kentucky Attorney General Jo M. Ferguson appeared before the Senate Internal Security Committee at Memphis in October, 1957, to urge that Congress pass legislation to restore State antisedition laws. Mr. Hamilton repeated at the hearing the story of the dynamiting in June 1953 of a Negro store at Manchester, Ky. The Commonwealth's attorney was asked by the Internal Security Committee Counsel whether he was "making the point that perhaps the Communists, themselves," were responsible for the bombings. Mr. Hamilton replied: "That is the construction we put on it."

As I stated before, Carl Braden is now working as field secretary for the Southern Conference Educational Fund. The Supreme Court ruling in the Steve Nelson sedition case in Pennsylvania gave Braden his freedom from conviction in the case of the Kentucky dynamiting. But Comrade Carl has another conviction hanging over him today. Last summer, he was summoned as a witness at hearings in Atlanta of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. There he refused to answer questions concerning his Communist activity. The committee was investigating Communist influences in industrial plants of the South. Braden and his comrade, Frank Wilkinson, a party leader from Los Angeles, were indicted by a Federal grand jury for contempt of Congress. They were tried and convicted at the January term of court in Atlanta.

And while we are on this Atlanta hearing of last July, Mr. Speaker, permit me to respectfully call to the attention of the House the most praiseworthy results obtained by the Committee on Un-American Activities from this investigation. When the committee chairman, the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER, of Pennsylvania, announced the investigation of Communist infiltration of southern industries, there was immediately instistituted a propaganda campaign ridiculing the suggestion that there might be Communist influences in industrial plants of the South. Editorials of prominent newspapers were published, apparently designed to discourage the investigation. News stories about plans for the hearing were brief, many being buried on the inside pages. But before the hearings were concluded, the story was transfrred to page 1, column 8. The investigation produced evidence that Communist colonizers had taken jobs in industries of our section of the country. One reluctant witness, a Mrs. Madge Cole, who holds a bachelor's degree from Cornell and a master's from Syracuse, was shown to be working on a loom in a Greensboro, N.C., textile plant. She was identified by Armando Pehna, former undercover agent for the FBI, as a colonizer for the party. Her application for a textile worker's job made no reference whatever to her university degrees. Another witness. equally as reluctant, was a young man named William Robertson III, a graduate of the University of North Carolina, where he has also pursued postgraduate studies.

He was employed as a sweeper in a Durham textile mill, and his application for employment also conveniently omitted information about his college training.

The attitude of all the hostile witnesses, with Communist or "front" records, who were summoned to the Atlanta hearings, was that they had been subpenaed because they were supporting the move for forced racial integration.

Mr. Speaker, before I conclude these remarks, I desire to point out that there existed in certain southern colleges and universities Communist cells, where even faculty members, with Communist records, were leaders in race agitation.

Proof of the existence of a Communist cell at the University of Tennessee School of Medicine in Memphis was uncovered at the October 1957, hearings of the Senate Internal Security Committee. Dr. Ralph Franklin, a reputable physician now practicing at Morehouse, Mo., told the committee he had been influenced by a Dr. Vincent Myers to become a comrade while he was studying medicine in Memphis. He said he was shocked into quitting the party after learning of its subversive objectives. I wish to add my commendation of Dr. Franklin for the clean breast he made when he testified and for his patriotic contribution to the security of our country in publicly standing up to reveal ramifications of the insidious Communist conspiracy in our section of the Nation.

Mr. Speaker, while I am alarmed at the seeming general lack of concern by the American people toward this menace of Communist subversion, I am most gratified that we have in this country—in the Congress and in private life, from every section of our great Nation—patient patriots, who refuse to become discouraged.

The Legislature of the great State of Tennessee, only a few days ago, authorized an investigation of Communist influences in Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn. This school was founded in 1932 by Myles Horton and Don West. It is a southern meeting place for persons who have been leaders in race agitation for many years. Many who have gone in and out of Highlander Folk School meetings have records of affiliations with Communist and Communist-front organizations that, when listed, would cover several pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There is an impression among some of our citizens outside the South that leaders of our section, who are dedicated to resistance to forced integration, have sought to raise the issue of Communist influences in race agitation as a smoke screen to hamper the integration movement. Little notice has been taken of the startling revelations by the Louisiana Legislative Committee, the Georgia Commision on Education, the Arkansas Investigating Committee, the Florida Legislative Investigating Committee, and other leadership groups.

I quote in part from the conclusion of the special education committee of the Arkansas Legislative Council, which held hearings at the State capitol in Little Rock on December 16 through December 18, 1958:

The basic question presented for determination by this committee is: "Has there been subversion present in Arkansas which has encouraged racial unrest?"

It is a matter of common knowledge that communism thrives where strife, tension, turmoil, and chaos is present. Arkansas became a State of the Union in 1836; peace, progress, and tranquillity marked the attitude of all our people for the next 122 years. This committee has found that the incident which occurred at Little Rock on September 2, 1957, was not something that just happened overnight. It was planned, schemed, calculated, and had as its motivating factor the international Communist conspiracy of world domination squarely behind the entire shocking episode.

The people of Arkansas are basically men of good will. Communism heretofore has always been something that happened elsewhere, but the record reflects that for a number of years fellow travelers, dupes, and those who make a career out of being duped, have flitted in and out of Arkansas, and while here, they sowed the seeds of dissension and discord.

The committee has wondered who sent for Clarence Laws, discredited field representative of the NAACP and who was discharged from the Army for security reasons; who sent for Dr. Vernon McDaniel, protege of the notorious Gomillion, who travels in harness with Communists such as Aubrey Williams, Abner W. Berry, James A. Dombrowski; and who sent for Grace and Lee Lorch, identified Communists; and who paid Clarence Laws for his work in Arkansas. In answering these questions, the committee learned which individuals actively worked for a political party whose candidate would not sign a non-Communist affidavit; that known Communists—Farmer and Pushkarsky—worked in such close accord with the candidate and the above individuals that it makes incredible a claim of innocence. One of these individuals was the State president of the NAACP, and her husband, who has been a national director of an organization which is a successor to an organization listed as subversive for a number of years.

To answer these questions one need merely read the transcript of the sworn testimony produced in public at the 3-day hearing. The testimony under oath and the documentary evidence introduced in connection therewith, makes it apparent that there has been and now is subversion present in the racial unrest in our State.

End of quotation from the conclusion of the special education committee of the Arkansas Legislative Council.

Mr. Speaker, it behooves patriotic American citizens from every section—North, East, West, and South—to take a long, serious objective look at the well-organized, well-financed campaign of the Communist Party to divide the people of our great Nation, destroy our representative form of government and establish a Moscow-dominated totalitarian dictatorship in Washington.

This great Republic was established by our Founding Fathers as an indestructible union of indestructible, sovereign States. So long as we perpetuate the principles of State sovereignty and local self-government, we need have no fear that ideologies from across the sea will destroy us.

Mr. FLYNT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. FLYNT. I commend the gentleman from Arkansas on his courageous, forthright, and well-documented presentation of the facts he has brought to the attention of the House today. Too many times during recent months an entirely different and an incorrect picture has been painted of the situation which existed and which prevailed in the gentleman's home city of Little Rock, Ark.

It is my hope that those same media of mass communication, newspapers, news magazines, radio, and television, will give to the comments the gentleman has delivered today a reasonable degree of the same prominence and the same publicity which they gave to the dark days when the 101st Airborne Division invaded Central High School in Little Rock, Ark.

I know from my own research that many, if indeed not all, of the instances cited pertaining to these avowed and self-described Communists and Communist sympathizers that the gentleman has named in his speech relate to those who have sought to stir up this agitation where harmony and good will existed before. This, the Communists always try to do.

The gentleman has pinpointed and has, I believe, opened his files on this subject for public inspection to show the Communist and Communist-front affiliations of many of those who played leading parts in creating strife, discord and turmoil in his home city. Those persons named by him and many others have participated in a number of Communist activities and have belonged to, helped organize and helped sponsor countless subversive organizations which are nothing more or less than Communist fronts which often under the guise of respectability bring in unsuspecting persons whose beliefs are just as far from communistic as day is from night. In many instances, these Communist-front organizations have been denounced and listed as subversive by both the House Committee on Un-American Activities and the United States Department of Justice. That infamous group of organizations, spearheaded by these same Communists and Communist sympathizers, when exposed has often gone under cover and risen again and like the Gorgon Medusa grows another snake head as soon as one has been cut off.

Mr. Speaker, I think that it is time that this true and correct picture of well-documented facts be made public to the people of the United States. It is, of course, true that not all persons who favor forced integration are Communists, but it is undeniable that the influence of Communists and Communist sympathizers manifested itself in virtually every instance where strife and turmoil supplants longstanding relations of harmony and good will.

It is well that the lines be drawn so that those of us who believe in America and the American way of life can stand up and be counted. If there are those who sympathize or espouse communism and Communists—then those who desire to do so may take their stand. That is their right, but it should be equally well understood that the underlying principle behind every Communist, every Communist group and the whole Communist ideology is to overthrow and destroy the United States Government and the American way of life.

So let those who may sympathize with communism and Communists know full well of their position—one which if carried to the end aspired to by the Communists would be to destroy every last vestige of individual liberty and freedom not only in this country but throughout the world.

Mr. ALFORD. I sincerely appreciate the remarks of the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALFORD. I yield.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Following the next special order, I propose to ask for time, at which time I would like to address some questions on this very important subject to the gentleman, if he will remain.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALFORD. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Arkansas does nothing more during his congressional career, he has already justified the confidence that the people of Arkansas placed in him by electing him to this great body. The speech that he has made is one which has been long overdue in this House.

Like the gentleman from Georgia, however, I have grave doubts as to whether the facts, which he so well documented in his speech, will be communicated through the press and through the other means of public communication to the people throughout the country. I entertain these doubts because a paper curtain has been drawn around the South's side of this story as well as the serious constitutional question involved. The National Broadcasting Co., for instance, devoted, by their own admission, several hours of time on the Dave Garroway show in the morning to the presentation of what they called "Violence in Little Rock" during the Little Rock crisis. Fortunately, there was very little violence in Little Rock, as the gentleman well knows, and what little violence did take place, so I am informed, occurred as a result of the invasion of Little Rock by Federal troops. By the same token, when a frustrated school professor committed suicide in Brooklyn and there followed a daily series of race riots, interracial stabbings, yokings, cuttings, and even homicides as the result of race hatreds generated by conditions in these integrated schools, it was only after protests against such one-sided presentations of the news that NBC finally devoted about 5 minutes to the subject of racial unrest and violence in Brooklyn. As the gentleman knows, the Louisiana Joint Legislative Committee, which is an official agency of the State of Louisiana, was forced to purchase a full-page advertisement in the New York Herald-Tribune 2 years ago in order to present the South's side of the integration case to the people of that area. They had to buy advertising space because they were unable to break through the paper curtain drawn around their position in the regular news sections of the New York papers. As the gentleman also knows, just a month or so ago a group of patriotic, devoted citizens from Alabama sought to purchase advertising space in the Washington Post and Times Herald in order to print an open letter, which a former president of Chicago & Southern Airlines had written to the President of the United States, giving good and valid arguments in support of the South's case. They were refused the privilege of buying that space in the Washington Post and Times Herald. I believe the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HUDDLESTON] commented about that in the House about a month ago.

As the gentleman well knows, the South has been the victim of some of the most false, vicious, and malicious propaganda campaigns that this country has ever known. When these obviously biased northern magazines, such as Time and Life, who self-righteously and piously advocate freedom of speech and press, who loudly and aggressively denounce any type of censorship, who advocate that even Communists should have their day in court to present their case, perfunctorily claim to present the point of view of the South, it is usually presented by Ralph McGill, Hodding Carter, or Harry Ashmore, all of whom claim to be moderates.

I can assure the House that these men do not speak for the South or the people of the South.

I repeat that the good people of the South have been unable to break through the paper curtain to tell their story to the Nation, because they have been denied access to the means with which to present it. It is my hope, and I am sure it is the hope of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ALFORD] that the several States of the South, as well as States throughout the rest of this country, will assert their sovereignty, as guaranteed to them by the Constitution, to prevent further destruction of our basic and fundamental system of government in this country.

Mr. ALFORD. I thank the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALFORD. I yield.

Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina. I want to congratulate the gentleman on the very fine, well-written, well-documented story of the South. I think the "doubting Thomases," who wanted to deny you your rightful seat in this House of Representatives, see now that DALE ALFORD won his own election. I do not believe they will care to tangle with you in debate. You have done a good job. We can see now your election was no accident.

Mr. ALFORD. I thank the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. GATHINGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. GATHINGS. I just want to say to the gentleman that he won a race that was most remarkable. In a period of 7½ days he put on an outstanding and successful campaign in our State. I concur with the observations of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RIVERS]. The people have a right to make their choice which they have done in this instance. You are doing a splendid job here, and I commend you for a fine presentation today.

Mr. ALFORD. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. JOHANSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALFORD. I yield.

Mr. JOHANSEN. Because there is no question as to the desire of the Communists to agitate differences between races, and to play upon any controversies that have developed, I think the gentleman has rendered an important service in documenting that fact in his address.

I should like to address two questions to the gentleman, because I share the concern of the overwhelming membership of the House that there be found resolutions for these problems that will be in the interest of the tranquility of the Nation and of progress for all of our American citizens.

My first question is: Does the gentleman feel that the possibility of effective communication and cooperation between responsible leaders—as opposed to the type the gentleman has stated—between responsible leaders of both races, has been fatally impaired as a result of the controversies of the last 2 or 3 years?

The second question is this: Having in mind—and I cannot at the moment cite names, but they are of record—having in mind the fact that there have been Negro citizens who have been Communists, who have become disenchanted with communism, and in one instance I recall from the testimony before the Senate Internal Security Committee have presented a most vigorous and emphatic warning to the fellow citizens of his race as to the false promises and the completely fatal effects to their own race of pursuing the Communist course, I wonder if there has been any effort made by the leaders of both races to bring to the attention of the colored citizens that side of the story, and provide an opportunity for that type of person of their own race to present in their own way and from their own bitter experience the lessons and the disenchantment they have experienced with communism.

Mr. ALFORD. May I say to the gentleman in answer to his first question that I do not think that relationships have been completely severed because of the good will that has existed particularly in our section of the country since the founding of this country. I would like to say in the terms of a distinguished jurist of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, St. Louis, Judge Gardner: "Evolution, not revolution is the answer to our present question."

To the gentleman's second question may I say I am aware of the fact that there are certain leaders such as the gentleman has mentioned, but time does not permit documenting all those facts here. I was trying to make my remarks pertinent to my section of the country. There is a great deal of evidence to support the gentleman's claims.

Mr. JOHANSEN. Mr. Speaker, may I say with respect to the gentleman's answer to my first question that I am most worried and concerned that good will and cooperation be not completely destroyed and frustrated and I am glad for the assurance he gives.

With reference to the second question, while I realize that it is not entirely apropos the gentleman's remarks, but I trust it is not presumptuous to express the hope that some constructive contributions along this line may be explored and exploited.

Mr. ALFORD. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me briefly?

Mr. ALFORD. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. I should like to join with those who have complimented the gentleman upon his statements here today; at the same time I would like to point out to those who sit in this Chamber and honor the gentleman with their presence this afternoon who are not from this section known as the Southland, that this is not entirely a southern problem; this is a problem that goes to the very foundation and the perpetuation of this glorious young Republic of ours. I do not care whether it is regimentation or centralization in the field of integration or any other field in which our Government operates, it all amounts to the same thing. When the powerful arm of the Federal Government with all of its police power reaches out into every hamlet as well as every metropolitan center in this country and begins the regimentation of the people, it can lead only, in the final analysis, to a totalitarian form of government.

The gentleman has been speaking of communism in this movement. I do not know whether I ought to say this or not, but I am going to say it with some reservations: I must confess that I suspect I have had the high privilege of serving in this House about as long as anyone I see here with the exception, of course, of the gentleman who presides over this House, the Honorable Speaker. I was here when the thing started. Who was the man who walked down this aisle on every possible occasion 10 and 15 years ago to offer amendments on integration? He was neither Republican nor Democrat although he usually sat over on this Democratic side of the aisle. His name was Vito Marcantonio. I say this with some reservation because, unfortunately for him, he has answered the last call that we must all some day answer.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

(By unanimous consent (at the request of Mr. COLMER), Mr. ALFORD was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. ALFORD. Mr. Speaker, it was the gentleman from New York who first offered these amendments repeatedly year after year and advocated forced integration of the races. I think the history of this House reflects the political philosophy of the gentleman to whom I refer.

Finally, let me say for the benefit, not for those who reside in that particular section of our country, the South, but to those of you who live in other sections of this great country, those of you who have witnessed the national prohibition era, the attempt by the strong arm of the Federal Government to regiment man's habits in the field of temperance. I doubt if there are a half dozen men on the floor here today who would favor national prohibition. Yet many of them would use that strong arm of a powerful centralized government—yes, even the Armed Forces—against people with whom they have to associate, with whom they have to live, with whom their children have to attend school. I say to you that I would oppose that type of punitive legislation if there were not a Negro in my once-sovereign State of Mississippi, because it violates every concept of the principles upon which this Government of ours was founded.

While I would prefer that sectionalism were left out of the discussion, I will point out that we were living peacefully down there in the South. The white man was extending a helping hand to his less fortunate colored brothers. This is all a relative problem, you understand. It is no problem where you have a few of one race and many, many of another. But down there in this particular section of our great common country we have a problem that is aggravated. We were getting along very nicely. That period of evolution, referred to by the learned justice whom the gentleman from Arkansas quoted, was going along well. The leaders of the colored people appreciated the help of the white people in this evolutionary period.

What has happened now? I will be perfectly frank with you, Mr. Speaker, I have to search my own soul to prevent animosity from arising in my heart against my colored brother because of some of the things that are going on. I say to my people in Mississippi, as I say to you here and now, if I have to be placed in the category of a Negro hater or a Negro lover, put me in the category of the lover of my less fortunate brothers.

Mr. Speaker, the greatest tragedy of all of this misconceived effort to force integration is the fact that an evil wedge is being driven between the two races. I think future history will record the fact that the Negro will be the biggest loser.

Here is a race of people who were brought to this country against their will. They have made the greatest progress of any race of people in the history of the world under the guidance of their white brothers, their southern white brothers mostly. Now, these self-styled liberals, the politicians, and these other people who would reform us overnight—not the South, the Nation—would take a race of people who just a few generations ago, unfortunately, were—well, I do not want to use the word "savage," but were uncivilized in the jungles of Africa and just a few years ago were serfs in bondage—they would take them and by a statute enacted in this body and in the other body, or by an edict of the Court, place them overnight upon an equality with another race of people who for thousands of years have enjoyed all of the benefits of Christianity, civilization, education, and culture. This is not fair to them and it is not fair to the other race, the white race. Neither is it possible. The Negro must trod the hard and slow path of progress, civilization, and culture—the same road traveled through the centuries by the white man. No waving of a magic wand, no legislation, no Court decree is the answer.

I thank the gracious and respected gentleman from Arkansas for his courtesy in yielding to me.

THE SOUTHERN STORY

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RIVERS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, it is not often in these days of a paper curtain as tight as the Iron Curtain that the voice of the South can be heard through our land. While the South has a position on grave issues confronting our Nation today, and has clear, logical and intelligent reasons for its position, most of the people of the United States outside the South have no idea what is that position, or why it exists.

The reason for this, Mr. Speaker, is of course that the newspapers of the North and the magazines of national circulation see fit to suppress the story of the South—and even to suppress news in their own communities, news of racial troubles, of the high incidence of crime and disease among Negroes, which would show the reasons for the southern position.

But Mr. Speaker, this paper curtain now has been penetrated. Through the National Broadcasting Co., and one of its commentators, Mr. Chet Huntley, the southern story—told by one of the South's most articulate and knowledgeable men—has been laid before a nationwide audience.

That the story has been told once is not, of course, sufficient to get it across to the country, Mr. Speaker, but that it has been told at all is a credit to the National Broadcasting Co. and to Mr. Huntley. Mr. Huntley's own views are not those of the South, but he has been fair enough, Mr. Speaker, to let the South have its say.

Reaction to that story, told by Thomas R. Waring, the distinguished editor of the News and Courier, a newspaper in my hometown of Charleston, S.C., has been highly favorable, not just from the South, but from all parts of the country.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina. I will be delighted to.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the gentleman will read the annual report of the NAACP put out for the year 1957, he will find that the NAACP claims credit for assisting and acting in an advisory capacity in the production of CBS programs on race relations in the South. I wonder if the legitimate and honorable Citizens Councils of the South or any prosegregation group was called in also as advisers. I can assure you they were not.

Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina. We live too far below the Mason-Dixon line.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HAYS. I saw the program to which the gentleman refers, and I would like to say to the gentleman that I thought the distinguished editor did a very fine job in presenting his points of view. The other side was presented on that same program.

Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina. That is right.

Mr. HAYS. In a very dignified way.

Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina. That is right.

Mr. HAYS. I would say that if we had more of that kind of argument in which both sides respected the other side's view and presented their own, that there would be a lot more possibility of solving some of these problems instead of some of the ways that the problem has been approached.

Mr. RIVERS of South Carolina. That is the first time we have had a chance to get to the eyes and ears of well-meaning and well-intending people throughout the Nation.

I am going to include in my remarks a copy of Mr. Waring's statement on that program, and I ask those gentlemen who are interested to read it and see how tempered, how dignified and how objective was his presentation.

(The matter referred to is as follows:)

TEXT OF STATEMENT BY THOMAS R. WARING, EDITOR OF THE CHARLESTON (S.C.) NEWS AND COURIER, ON CHET HUNTLEY SHOW, OVER NATIONAL BROADCASTING CO. NETWORK, FEBRUARY 8, 1959

Mr. Huntley's proposal that the NAACP withdraw from the South would meet with hearty approval, I believe, among most southerners, but not for the reasons Mr. Huntley has expressed. As I understand it, Mr. Huntley believes that mingling of the races could be accomplished with more speed and harmony if the NAACP removed itself. Mr. Huntley has presented legal and other reasons why mixing the races is right. I would like to offer a different viewpoint.

I am a spokesman for no organization or group of people. I am a newspaper editor in a position that offers opportunities to observe and report on people in the region where I live.

I believe it is a fact that the overwhelming majority of southern people are unalterably opposed to mixing races in public schools. They are opposed to it now or later.

They hold this view not on account of hatred or bigotry, as you may have been told. They hold it because they sincerely believe, on the basis of firsthand experience, that separate schools are best for both races.

In presenting this as the view of the majority of southerners, I refer to white southerners, because they are about 75 percent of the population. But the proportion varies greatly. In my home community, for instance, the population is about 50–50. In some neighborhoods, Negroes outnumber whites 10 to 1. In many school districts integration would mean sending white children to Negro schools.

While I do not pose as a spokesman for the colored people, nor pretend to read their minds, I believe that most of them are happy and satisfied. I do not believe the NAACP by any means represents a unanimous feeling among the southern Negroes.

If some southerners are willing to accept token integration rather than shut down their schools it does not mean that they approve, or accept it permanently. Even token integration brings tension and constant threat of disorder, as well as fear of other evils.

If integration is wrong, as we believe it is, we do not concede that a little bit of it is right. The strength of resistance testifies to the depth of this belief. The choice between separate schools and no schools is an agonizing one for people who have spent years developing an education system.

Cordons of police ringed the school at Arlington to enforce admission of four colored children. Not even parents were allowed near the schoolhouse. An Associated Press reporter said the scene presented a picture of "Alcatraz, southern style." The trappings of the police state were mounted within sight of the U.S. Capitol.

It is not alone the entrance of a few colored children at Arlington or elsewhere that created all this furor. White southerners are more accustomed to Negroes than people in other regions. It is the seizure of rights and powers for local self government that makes southern hearts turn cold.

The Supreme Court has rewritten the Constitution it swore to uphold. Chief Justice Holmes, Justice Brandeis, and other liberals accepted the law of the land to mean the States had a right to operate separate but equal schools.

Whether the South closes public schools under threat of mixing, or struggles in some regions with the perils of integration, public education will be damaged.

For white pupils, standards of education will decline. This has been the experience in Washington, D. C., and in other places that have undergone mass integration. The statement is well documented and I haven't time to explore it further.

For colored pupils, the relaxed and familiar conditions of their own schools are lost. Discipline breaks down. We have no blackboard jungles in the South, and we do not want them.

Though not all southern schools, white or Negro, have achieved the highest standards, they have vastly improved in recent years. Southerners have spent billions of dollars on them. They had a contract with the Federal Government that guaranteed separation of the races. They would not have taxed themselves for mixed schools. And nobody knows how long they would continue to support schools they don't control. In any event, public education is bound to suffer.

Local self-government, through division of State and Federal powers, is the keystone of our Republic. It is being torn apart for the sake of a sociological experiment. If a police state is substituted for the Republic, no race will gain.

Once before, in prohibition, the United States experimented with sociology. Prohibition was a failure. It brought on bootlegging and a crime wave. Eventually the people came to their senses. They repealed prohibition. At least, it had the authority of lawful constitutional amendment. This time the experiment is with the lives of children—on the basis of court decrees.

Southerners are concerned for the welfare of both races. They realize the need to educate colored people as well as white. They need colored citizens for manpower in the burgeoning new industries. They want to build the earning power of Negro workers so they can carry more of their share of the economy.

In his inaugual address last month, South Carolina's young Governor, Ernest F. Hollings referred to these problems. He said, and I quote:

"I shall not dwell on the subject of segregation as it affects race relations. We have all heard too much on this subject and there is too much to be done in the days ahead for us to waste our energies and arouse our tempers over a subject upon which we, in South Carolina, are in essential agreement.

"We are fortunate in having a well-nigh boundless store of good will and understanding among all races and beliefs in South Carolina. In our schools, peace patrols the school corridors; unlike New York, we do not need armed guards. The Negroes of our State feel that schools are intended for education. They feel that their Governor and general assembly are doing everything possible to provide them the best educational program and the best opportunity to succeed on an individual basis. Let alone, we shall continue to do this.

"As a practical matter, this can only be done in the segregated pattern, and for those who would by integration destroy the education, culture, opportunity and friendship of both races, I simply state that our position of determined resistance remains unchanged."

Southern people are not, as you may have been told, captives of blind leaders who will not or cannot read the signs of progress.

The people demand that their public schools be separate. We hear sometimes about southern moderates. A moderate is an integrationist who isn't in too big a hurry. Fast or slow, most southerners are convinced that mingling the schools would be disastrous.

What is the aim of integration?

It is not improvement for white pupils. Educational standards in mixed schools would have to be reduced to the lowest common denominator.

It will not improve education for Negro pupils. An atmosphere of tension does not promote learning. Discipline would have to suffer when any classroom incident is likely to explode into a racial incident.

It would not promote good relations between the races. Both North and South, integration or attempts at it have created racial trouble.

It will not create respect abroad for the United States. Internal squabbles involving troops, police, and constant arguments over rights and freedoms are signs of unstable conditions.

If the aim of integration is to sustain legal and sociological theories, without regard to practical effects on human beings, it is not defensible.

If the aim is to humiliate the white southerners, it is beneath contempt.

If the aim is to raise the status of the Negro, it won't work. The Negro needs many things more than he needs association with white people on an involuntary basis.

While national diplomacy courts favor in foreign countries, on the domestic front the American Government is not seeking to win friends and influence people in Southern States.

I shall not attempt to explore the reasons for those policies. They are in large measure political.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has been able to exploit these political forces. It has achieved a balance of power out of all proportion to its actual worth. Millions of white southerners have become an unorganized and oppressed minority.

The NAACP creates division and animosity. Some of its leaders have official records of contacts with subversive organizations. Their names have been published in reports of congressional committees.

With its political allies, the NAACP has set up a virtual censorship on race.

One minor bit of evidence is the removal of dialect from magazines, books, and newspapers. Though Negro dialect is forbidden, a California cartoonist who lampooned the Southern speech of Governor Faubus was singled out recently for some kind of freedom award.

Negro crime in cities is appalling, but the facts are being deliberately disguised in the paper curtain press.

Superior force may overwhelm the South, as it has done before. But troops and police cannot forever suppress millions of resourceful people.

I do not believe the rest of the country wants some of the States to become concentration camps for the sake of mixing white and colored children against their parents' will.

MASTERS OF DECEIT IN THE SCHOOL CRISIS

(Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey asked and was given permission to address the House for 10 minutes and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. ALFORD], if his documentation, which I have not seen, is accurate, has performed, I think, a useful service. I am sure that all of us in the House of Representatives are absolutely opposed to communism and to subversion in any of its forms.

The gentleman told the House several days ago that he would present to this body evidence that subversive forces are the real masters of deceit behind this school crisis in the South and the so-called civil-rights issue in America today; and today he has ben discussing these matters.

I wonder if the gentleman could tell the Members of the House whether in his listing of the Communist cells alleged to have existed in certain educational institutions in the South, he is familiar with Commonwealth College, a former educational institution in his State which was cited by the Attorney General as a subversive organization.

Mr. ALFORD. May I say to the gentleman from New Jersey that I know that institution well. As a child I lived not many miles from that institution.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Is the gentleman aware that this institution has been listed by many groups as a Communist front and subversive?

Mr. ALFORD. Yes. May I say to the gentleman in answer to his question that this Commonwealth College, which existed nearly 40 years ago, I believe—that is correct?

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. It was still in existence, however, as recently as 1940, was it not? Indeed, was it not founded in 1923 and closed in November 1940? Actually, it was cited as a Communist enterprise in 1944 by the House Un-American Activities Committee, and cited by Attorney General Clark in 1949 as Communist.

Mr. ALFORD. I do not know the exact date, but I know that it was practically unheard of by 1940. To answer the gentleman's question, he well knows that 40 years ago or 35 years ago certainly very little was known of the Communist conspiracy in this country.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. That is so; but, as a matter of fact the conspiracy existed, just as it does today. Was it less dangerous then than it is now? I think not.

Mr. ALFORD. May I say to the gentleman why that institution was in Arkansas? It was in a hill section, a very poor section of the State, where the economic status of the people was very low at that time and there was no publicity at that time as to the type of institution it was. It was widely circularized at that time that that institution would offer to boys and girls in the hill section of the country an education if they would merely work on the farms of that area. I am well familiar with it.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Is the gentleman aware that the present Chief Executive of his State attended that college?

Mr. ALFORD. I am well aware of the fact that the gentleman was going to get to the distinguished Governor of our State.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I did not ask the gentleman that. But if you anticipated my remarks, then you must have been aware of the facts regarding your Governor. I'm wondering why you failed to mention these facts yourself, since you are giving us the facts regarding the subversive forces behind the school crisis and the so-called civil rights issue in America today.

Mr. ALFORD. May I say to the gentleman——

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I decline to yield further, if the gentleman will not respond to the question. I did not ask whether the gentleman was aware of my intentions, but whether he was aware that the Chief Executive of his State attended that college.

Mr. ALFORD. May I answer the gentleman?

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Yes.

Mr. ALFORD. The gentleman was there only several days—that is, the distinguished Governor of the State of Arkansas. He has stated many times that after he found out the nature of the group, he left there. He was a poor boy who went to this institution; and I think it is very admirable that this man, the present Governor of Arkansas who, by the way, has a very honorable and outstanding war record and who has served his country well, has been cleared in every way possible by all the security agencies that are necessary. I think it is distinctively due him that I should at this moment call attention to the fact that a Gallup Poll recently listed him as one of the 10 most outstanding men in the world.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I saw that, and I thank the gentleman.

Without having the facts at hand to know how long the Governor attended or under what circumstances, I make the point, however, that in this type of thing one can indict anyone who attended a college or university where there was a cell, perhaps. One can indict, if he is not fair, anyone who attended, especially, an institution which was listed.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HAYS. Just to show how far you could go with that indictment, Governor Faubus was there long enough to be elected president of the student body, was he not?

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Yes, he was.

Mr. HAYS. He was there long enough to later in a political campaign swear he never attended the college.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. That is my understanding. Governor Faubus is quoted in the Arkansas Gazette of August 1, 1954, as follows:

> I have never been a student or faculty member at the school (Commonwealth College) and never have attended a class there.

Mr. HAYS. That is documented. Understand, I am not saying by the process of guilt by association that the Governor of Arkansas was a Communist, but I am pointing out that by the process of guilt by association the facts are there, and they are there in documentation.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. That is right.

Mr. HAYS. He must have known a little bit about it or he would not later have denied that he went there.

Mr. ALFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I decline to yield at this time. I want to answer the gentleman from Ohio.

I do not subscribe to guilt by association any more in the case of the attendance of the Governor of Arkansas at Commonwealth College, which was listed as subversive, than by implication that anyone who belongs to the NAACP is subversive because it may have had subversives in it. I simply take this time to call attention to the fact that there are two edges to this sort of a weapon, and that if a person is to be indicted for having gone to the University of North Carolina, where at one time there existed, according to the gentleman from Arkansas, a cell, then thousands upon thousands of students at that great university are under indictment. If the gentleman from Arkansas would indict anyone by this method, then surely he must indict his great friend, Governor Faubus.

Mr. HAYS. I want to make it perfectly clear that I am not charging the Governor of Arkansas with anything at all. I am merely using this as an illustration of what you could do if you set out to prove something by the doctrine of guilt by association.

I am sensitive about this because of some past hearings in this Congress under a committee that was set up allegedly to investigate foundations. They attempted to show that my university was at one time a Communist-front organization, Ohio State University, which, of course, is absurd. I am a little sensitive about this business of saying, "Well, someone went somewhere where there once was a Communist, ergo, he is automatically a Communist." I did not mean any reflection on the Governor of Arkansas. I certainly do not agree with a great many of his opinions, but I say he has a right to have them however much I may disagree with him.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I quite agree with the gentleman from Ohio. I did not take this time to indict the Governor of Arkansas, either. I think that on the basis of simply his attendance such an indictment would be unfair; as a matter off act, it would be outrageous. I do take the time, however, to point out that the gentleman from Arkansas has cited what he thinks, apparently, and which I am looking forward to seeing in the RECORD, is chapter and verse. If by the same motive he is indicting, or by implication or inference his remarks can be used to indict, the Governor, I think the Governor should be cleared.

Mr. ALFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. ALFORD. May I say that the distinguished Governor of Arkansas has never denied the fact that he has attended that school. The Governor of Arkansas has never denied the fact that he was elected the first 2 weeks as president of the student body.

May I ask the gentleman to point out anywhere in my remarks today where by inference I declared anyone to be a Communist? I am seeking the truth. It is high time that some patriot in America stood up on the floor of this House instead of playing pure and simple politics. We are asking for the truth for all America.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. That is right. And if we are going to have the truth, let us have all of it. I quite agree with the gentleman. I said at the outset that if his documentation is accurate, he has done a great service. I simply took this time to point out that, perhaps, his documentation is not as complete as it might be. I have already quoted the story in which the Governor denied having attended the school. Later, I understand, he admitted not only attending, but, as you have said, admitted he was elected president of the student body of Commonwealth College.

Mr. MEYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I yield.

Mr. MEYER. It seems to me quite regrettable that when this Nation faces a problem, and we do have a problem, in racial relations and the problem of human justice that instead of attempting to solve these problems with our hearts and with our minds and perhaps with a few laws also, but more in our hearts and in our minds, that we have to drag in the issue of communism into everything that we do. It seems to me it is quite regrettable on both sides. That is about all I have to say.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I agree with the gentleman that it is regrettable. I look forward with great interest to reading the remarks of the gentleman from Arkansas in some detail to see just what was said.

Mr. LINDSAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I yield.

Mr. LINDSAY. I should like to say I agree with the gentleman from Mississippi in that, unquestionably, this is a subject which is not a local responsibility or a sectional responsibility, but it is a national responsibility. It becomes a national responsibility when we view what our brethren abroad think of us when they see racial unrest in this country and argumentation of this sort. But, I would say also that argumentation is necessary and desirable. Undoubtedly, members of the Communist Party have attempted to use racial unrest as a means of furthering their own cause. But, that is no excuse for the type of indictment such as has just occurred, as pointed out by the gentleman from New Jersey, where responsible men such as Harry Ashmore and responsible citizens of a local community who support men such as Harry Ashmore are placed in the same bed, so to speak, with members of the Communist Party. I cannot understand any broad statement to the effect that Harry Ashmore, or his supporters, are being used by members of the Communist Party who may be capitalizing on racial unrest for their own insidious purposes. Such statements beg the point.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Does the gentleman belive that all the members of the NAACP are Communist led because it may be that there are some fellow travelers or other odd-ball characters of that sort in that organization? Although I do not know that there are, nor have I seen a single fact proving that there are such disreputable characters in the NAACP.

Mr. LINDSAY. Of course not. The point that I am trying to make is that I hope the gentleman from Arkansas does not mean to suggest that Harry Ashmore and his supporters are guided by anything except their own idealistic motives, the furthering of the best interests of the community, and the creation of equal justice and opportunity for all.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey has expired.

INTEGRATION

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to ask for permission to address the House, but some things have developed here so I think we ought not to just end this little discussion on a note of frustration, you might say, until a couple of more things are said. Now, I do not want to prejudge anybody, but I would say from having listened very attentively and very carefully to the remarks of the gentleman from Arkansas—and I want you to know and I would like the gentleman from Arkansas to know and his friends from the South can testify to this—that I have never taken this floor in the 10 years that I have been here to talk about racial relations or talk about segregation or desegregation or to talk about the FEPC or anything that most of my southern friends might consider repugnant. I have voted sometimes in a way that they did not approve of, but I have not demagoged about it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS. In just a moment.

I would like to say that I think the cause of the South, from which my mother came and in which I have many relatives, would be far better served by the kind of discussion that was had on television by the distinguished editor of a South Carolina newspaper, than it will be by some of the things that were said here this afternoon.

I believe that we have a problem in racial relations that we must solve. I think the Communists are going to exploit it in the world if we do not solve it. I think there are ways of solving it rather than pointing an accusing finger at people.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I want to congratulate the gentleman in what he has just said. He has not agitated against the South. I would also like to congratulate the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. THOMPSON], because both of you gentlemen have managed to work this problem out very satisfactorily for yourselves and your districts. I notice both reside in segregated Virginia, rather than the District of Columbia, where you could enjoy what I am sure you will tell your people back home are the "blessings" of a checkerboard-integrated society.

Mr. HAYS. I thought when I yielded to the gentleman that I might get more than a needle. In my hometown where my daughter will go to school at least half the year, if I am so fortunate as to be reelected to this body, when she is old enough to go to school 2 years hence, is a desegregated school, as it has been since before the War Between the States. I attended a desegregated school in the grades, in high school, and at the university. Some of my colleagues at Ohio State University were members of the Negro race. One in particular is one of the great scientists of this country, one of our great cancer research experts. I am proud to say that he is an alumnus of our outstanding university.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS. Not at this time. I will say to the gentleman that Ohio State was and is desegregated. The area in which I live when in Washington is going to be desegregated most any minute, if it has not already.

I want to say right here that I am very proud of the way the State of Virginia has handled the problem when it was faced with something that was repugnant to a great many of the citizens of that great State. I am proud of the fact that while they fought it as far as they could in the courts, because they did not believe in it, when the chips were down and the Governor was faced with the alternative of civil strife or legal compliance, he chose, although he did not like it, to meet the thing in a civilized, lawful, and legal manner.

I want to say to my distinguished colleague from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] that I am not ashamed of the fect that I live in Virginia when Congress is in session. It is well known back home. It was in the paper when we purchased property over there. I do not feel that I should offer him or anybody else any apology for living in Fairfax County.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS. I yield.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey. I, too, am proud of the fact that I live in Fairfax County. I would like to state to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] that my children go to schools which are in the process of integration. They will remain in those schools if they are kept open. I am also very proud of the manner in which the Governor of Virginia has conducted this process. I have absolutely no objection, having gone to integrated schools, to my children going to integrated schools. I am delighted that they are going. I hope they admit more Negro children in northern Virginia to the school which my children attend.

Mr. ALFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYS. I yield.

Mr. ALFORD. I would like at this point respectfully to call attention to the fact that we have gotten a little bit off the subject of my original remarks this afternoon, and to the fact that it has been implied here that we would by inference besmirch someone. The name of Harry Ashmore has been mentioned. I would like respectfully to submit that in no instance did we state anything relative to communism. We related about the national agitation. We sincerely believe in the presentation we made.

Mr. HAYS. I listened very carefully to the gentleman's statement. While I could not repeat exactly what he said I gained the very definite impression that it was not very favorable to Mr. Ashmore. I am going to read the gentleman's statement in the RECORD to see exactly what he did say.

I may be a little guilty of getting off the subject but I have had a great deal of feeling in the matter. As a matter of fact, I notice some Members got off onto the subject of elections, a matter which is properly before the Committee on House Administration. I do not want to prejudge anything said as I said in the beginning, but I do not think too much should be made of getting a little off the subject.

I would like to say to the gentleman with all the sincerity I possess that I believe the way to solve this problem is through the approach that was made on the television program the other night. I would like to congratulate not only the editor of the paper in South Carolina but also the secretary of the NAACP for their very moderate approach to this. I think they both deserve a great deal of credit; and I want to say in the presence of my colleague from South Carolina [Mr. RIVERS] that I thought his editor made a most moderate approach and a most sensible approach and a most convincing approach to defending his convictions perhaps more moderate, more sensible, and more convincing than anyone I have seen or heard either in this body or anywhere else.

Mr. RIVERS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield I just want to thank the gentleman for his very kind, generous, and statesmanlike statement.

TRAVEL EXPENSES OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

(Mr. TOLLEFSON asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. TOLLEFSON. Mr. Speaker, our Federal expenditures are rising fast enough without being jet propelled.

A businessman friend of mine has just returned from Europe on one of the new jetplanes. He informed me that there were two categories of passengers on the plane—the "deluxe" and the "economy" classes. The round trip fare for the deluxe is $903.40. For the economy class it is $478.70.

Most of the economy class passengers, he informs me, were businessmen who either paid their own way or were on expense account.

Most of the deluxe passengers were U.S. Government personnel. Uncle Sam paid the bill.

While I believe that Government personnel traveling on Government business should do so in average comfort, I doubt that the average citizen would approve their traveling in deluxe fashion. If the economy class is adequate for businessmen—and my friend says it is excellent—then it should be good enough for Federal employees. The savings on a round trip would be $427.70 per person.

A BILL TO PROVIDE FOR A COMMITTEE OF INDEPENDENT UNIONS AND UNRECOGNIZED LABOR GROUPS

(Mr. CURTIS of Missouri asked and was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.)

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I have introduced today a bill that would provide for a committee on independent unions and unrecognized groups. This committee for independent unions would be comparable to the House Committee on Small Business.

Today there are two well-defined types of unions; namely, those directly affiliated with the AFL–CIO and those that are not affiliated with that organiaztion.

Of the more than 65 million gainfully employed people in this country, the AFL–CIO claimed from 15 to 16 million. This was prior to the big layoffs that have reduced their membership substantially and extensive automation in industry in recent years. Further reduction resulted from loss of the Teamsters and several other unions that were eliminated for various reasons, including racketeering and unethical practices. With the exception of those left in the AFL–CIO, the remainder of the 65 million American workers are either in independent unions or as yet unorganized.

The proposed resolution would create a committee composed of 21 Members of the House. It would provide the smaller unions with a means whereby their problems could receive desired attention. It is my contention that these smaller unions are not presently receiving the attention which they rightfully deserve due to the fact that the governmental agencies dealing with labor are unduly influenced or dominated by current or former AFL–CIO officials. For example, it has been brought to my attention that the U.S. Department of Labor, where the Advisory Committee is located, is under the domination of the AFL–CIO.

It is my contention, therefore, that there is a present and pressing need for such a committee to deal with and for these independent unions and unrecognized groups. I am hopeful that the Congress will act on this matter.

To illustrate the point of view of small unions, I am placing in the RECORD a portion of the testimony of Roger Rettig, president, National Independent Union Council, which represents many small and independent unions, given before the Joint Economic Committee in its hearings on the President's 1959 Economic Report to the Congress:

STATEMENT OF ROGER M. RETTIG, PRESIDENT, NATIONAL INDEPENDENT UNION COUNCIL, BEFORE THE JOINT ECONOMIC COMMITTEE ON THE PRESIDENT'S ECONOMIC REPORT, CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES, FEBRUARY 9, 1959

My name is Roger M. Rettig. At this hearing I will present the position of the National Independent Union Council as president. I

Citizens Council Circulates Handbill on 'Arrest Record' Of State NAACP Leader

By the Associated Press

A handbill purporting to list the arrest record of Mrs. L. C. Bates, president of the Arkansas National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was being distributed at Little Rock yesterday.

The printed handbill bore the notation "paid for and distributed by Capital Citizens Council. Julian Miller, director."

The handbill had a facsimile reproduction of a police record from Arkansas State Police showing that a Daisey Bates (sic), Daisey Lea Bates, Daisy Bates had been arrested five times—once at Monroe, La., for investigation, twice for "contempt of court" at Little Rock, once for failing to register as head of the Little Rock and once for failing to register Little Rock ordinance NAACP in violation of a recent Little Rock ordinance.

Amis Guthridge, attorney for the Citizens Council, said the circular "speaks for itself" when the handbill, which carried a picture of Mrs. Bates with numbers across the front of the photograph, said: "There is a vicious campaign in process at Central High School, whereby the white children are being told that at anytime a white child has trouble with a Negro student that the white students must take care of the Negro leader previously Daisy Bates and be cross-examined by her."

Guthridge asked why it was being distributed. As to where the Citizens Council obtained the police photo, Guthridge said that "there is a vicious rumor that I had forgotten them." Guthridge would say only that they came from a law enforcement agency.

Capt. Leon Gershiner, head of the State Police Records Bureau, said the Citizens Council did not get its information there and that the State Police gave such information only to other law enforcement bodies.

Explanation Given

Mrs. Bates scoffed at the charges and gave the following explanation for each arrest:

"Some of these things were so minor that I had forgotten them. I remember that L. C. (her husband), several relatives and my self were traveling and a service station operator spotted a gun in the car—and he had a permit to carry the gun.

"The only thing the police asked me was my name. I told them 'Daisy.' They were questioning L. C. Bates, and assumed that my name was Bates also. I was only 14 and L. C. and I were not married at that time.

Was Case on Appeal

"I spent six hours in jail in 1946 on the contempt of court charge. That's the only time I've ever been in jail in my life. I later won my case before the Arkansas Supreme Court.

"The gaming charge—well, I laughed at that one. That was in 1952 when the police were trying to crack down on gambling and houses without warrants. I was in a penny ante poker game at a neighbor's house and they [the police] walked in. I was fined $5."

The 1946 contempt of court charge was filed against Mrs. Bates and her husband by then Circuit Judge Lawrence C. Auten because of an article published in their newspaper, the Arkansas State Press, about a ruling by Auten in a court case involving three Negro CIO leaders. Later the same year the Arkansas Supreme Court overturned that co

NEGRO SUSPENDED AT CENTRAL HIGH

Girl Dumps Food on White Boys in Little Rock—New Attack on N.A.A.C.P. Aide

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 17 (AP)—A Negro girl at integrated Central High School was suspended today because "she lost her temper and dumped food" on two white boys.

Virgil T. Blossom, school superintendent, disclosed this today. He would not give the name of the students involved in the cafeteria incident, but other sources identified the suspended girl as Minnie Jean Brown, 16 years old.

Mr. Blossom gave this account:

"There was a white boy who scooted his chair back and partially blocked the aisle of the colored girl student. Another chair was inadvertently pushed back into the aisle, partially blocking the aisleway to a colored girl student.

"She lost her temper and dumped food on the white boy, and it got on two white boys.

"The colored student has been suspended from school. She will have to come to my office about this offense.

"The suspension is automatically three days as a minimum. It can be made more than that after a final analysis of the details."

Jess Matthews, principal, had indicated earlier that the incident was accidental. He quoted the boys as having said "it could have been an accident."

Nine Negroes are attending the school with 2,000 whites. Some whites have been suspended or expelled for offenses against them.

Meanwhile, handbills listing the arrest record of Mrs. L. C. Bates, Negro leader in the integration dispute were being circulated.

Mrs. Bates, state head of the National Asociation for the Advancement of Colored People, scoffed at what she jokingly called her "police record." She admitted the arrests and offered explanations for each.

The printed handbills bore police-style photos of Mrs. Bates. A line at the bottom said: "Paid for and distributed by Capital Citizens Council, Julian Miller, director."

The New York Times

TARGET OF HANDBILL: Mrs. L. C. Bates, Arkansas leader of the N. A. A. C. P.

Mrs. Bates said she had been absolved in three of the five cases, all minor offenses. Another case, involving her failure to register as head of the Arkansas N. A. A. C. P., is pending. She said she had spent six hours in jail for contempt of court in 1946 for an article printed in the weekly newspaper operated by her and her husband, but had won the case before the Arkansas Supreme Court.

She said she had paid a $5 fine for participating in a penny-ante poker game at the home of a neighbor.

The reasons for the arrests listed in the handbills were "investigation," two contempt charges, gaming and failure to register as head of the N. A. A. C. P.

Churchmen Decry Red Link Charges

Say Southern Trend Would Tie Desegregation to Communism

There is a disturbing new Southern trend among some segregation leaders to link desegregation with subversion, 11 Protestant leaders, including five Nashvillians, charged here yesterday.

The charge was made in a statement released by one of the signers, the Rev. Will D. Campbell of Nashville. He is associate executive of the department of racial and cultural relations of the National Council of Churches.

Seven denominations, including Southern Baptist, Episcopal, Methodist, Church of the Brethren, Presbyterian, Disciples of Christ and Congregational Christian, were represented by signers.

Other Nashvillians signing the statement are the Rev. Charles Boyles, executive of the National Conference of Methodist Youth; Dr. Herman Long, director of the race relations department of the American Missionary association; Dr. A. C. Miller, executive secretary of the Christian Life commission of the Southern Baptist convention; the Rev. J. Metz Rollins Jr., staff representative of the department of social education and action of the United Presbyterian church in the U.S.A.

The statement said:

"We raise our voices in protest against a new and disturbing trend in the South: The cynical attempt by some who oppose racial desegregation to label those who disagree with them as Reds, fellow-travelers, or dupes of the Communist conspiracy.

"Through inuendoes, half-truths and distortions, doubts are cast on the motivation and background of individuals or groups seeking compliance with the law of the land. The charges are made, the headlines follow: 'Communist Activities Charged' or 'Subversive Influence Seen.'

"This Southern version of McCarthyism was first directed against the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The disease now spreads to new areas: the white Southerner, the educator, the newspaperman, the minister, the businessman, or the attorney who tries to work at this sensitive problem.

"The goal is the same: To silence those who do not accept the extremist position on segregation. The charges follow the now-familiar pattern of guilt by association, by innuendo, by distortion. . . . The nature of the charge is: The willful attempt to discredit and embarrass honorable men, to discourage others from speaking out, and most of all to enforce silence on a subject which needs so badly to be discussed."

The statement represented the thinking of the individual signers and no official action. Campbell said they acted in harmony with the position on desegregation already taken by every major religious body in America.

Other signers included:

The Rev. Lewis Deer, national director of social education and intercultural relations for the Christian churches (Disciples of Christ), Indianapolis, Ind.; the Rev. Henry I: Louttit, bishop of South Florida, Winter Park, Fla.; Dr. John H. Marion, staff representative of the department of social education and action, United Presbyterian church in the U.S.A., Richmond, Va.; the Rev. Ralph Smeltzer, social action director, Church of the Brethren, Elgin, Ill.; Miss Thelma Stevens, executive secretary, department of Christian social relations, Methodist Woman's division of Christian service, New York city; the Rev. Galen Weaver, secretary, race relations department of the Congregational Christian church, New York city.

NASHVILLE GROUP HITS EXTREMISTS

Protestant Leaders Point to Subversion Charges of Segregationists

Special to The Chattanooga Times

NASHVILLE — Eleven Protestant leaders in the field of social action, including seven clergymen, issued a joint statement Sunday denouncing segregationists who attempt to identify desegregation proponents with subversion.

The denominational signers were identified with Southern Baptist, Episcopal, Methodist, Church of Brethren, Presbyterian, Disciples of Christ and Congregational Christian religious organizations.

A spokesman for the group emphasized that the statement represented the thinking of the individual signers and constituted no official action. He stressed, however, that the signers "acted in harmony with the position on desegregation already taken by every religious body in America."

Referring to what they termed "a Southern version of McCarthyism" that had "first been directed at the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People," the group expressed alarm that "the disease now spreads to new areas: the white Southerner, the educator, the newspaperman, the minister, the businessman, or the attorney who tries to work at this sensitive problem."

Should Report Facts

The group warned that those who made vague charges of Communist plots should adopt the responsibility of reporting factual knowledge to the FBI or else check the facts on which they based their accusations, for otherwise "they themselves are doing the real service to communism, which battens on confusion, false charges, and the blind defense of racial injustices in our country."

The statement made direct reference to the initial speech in Congress of Rep. Dale Alford of Arkansas, who defeated Brooks Hays, race relation moderator and president of the Southern Baptist Convention, in last fall's election. According to the group, Alford's speech sought "to cast aspersions on the good name of Harry Ashmore, executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette, and upon the reputation of the Southern Regional Council," an interracial organization employing education and persuasion methods to foster better race relations.

Alford Talk, McCarthyism in South Denounced by 11 Church Leaders

From Gazette Press Services

Eleven Protestant ministers and church workers, including seven from the South and some of high office, issued a statement yesterday denouncing "a resurgence of McCarthyism in the South" and a speech by United States Representative Dale Alford of Little Rock.

They described "the cynical attempt by some who oppose racial desegregation to label those who disagree with them as Reds, fellow travelers or dupes of the Communist conspiracy."

The 11 signed the statement as individuals and not on behalf of their organizations.

The statement apparently was prompted by Dr. Alford's maiden speech in Congress. Calling it "the latest expression of this type of wanton attack," the statement said the speech "seeks to cast aspersion on the good name of Harry Ashmore, executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette, and upon the reputation of the Southern Regional Council."

"Neither is charged with an improper word or deed, it said," "yet the allegation is made that the Council was 'founded by a Communist.' This allegation is both stale and discredited. No less a Southern conservative than Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, has vouched for the honorable origins of the Council."

'Vague Plots' Noted

Still referring to Dr. Alford's speech, the 11 continued:

"He speaks of vague plots and names specific individuals and organizations, with no evidence that they are connected. We protest this. We feel it is immoral. We feel the time has come for the public to be made aware of the resurgence of McCarthyism in the South. If there is in fact a Communist threat in the South, then Dr. Alford and others like him have a responsibility to report their knowledge to the FBI; if not, they have a duty to check their facts. Otherwise, they themselves are doing the real service to communism, which battens on confusion, false charges and the blind defense of racial injustices in our country."

The 11 saw the "McCarthyism" trend in the South as "new and disturbing."

Released at Nashville

The statement was released at Nashville by Rev. Will D. Campbell of Nashville, Tenn., associate executive of the Department of Racial and Cultural Relations of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA. Other signers were.

Rev. Charles Boyles of Nashville, executive of the National Conference of Methodist Youth; Rev. Lewis Deer of Indianapolis, national director of Social Education and Intercultural Relations of the Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ); Dr. Herman Long of Nashville, director of the Race Relations Department of the American Missionary Association; Right Rev. DRAFT OF PROPOSED NEWS RELEASE BY

DENOMINATIONAL SOCIAL ACTION STAFF

We raise our voices in protest against a new and disturbing trend in the South: the cynical attempt by some who oppose racial desegregation to label those who disagree with them as reds, fellow-travelers, or dupes of the Communist conspiracy. Through innuendoes, half-truths, and distortions, doubts are cast on the motivation and background of individuals or groups seeking compliance with the law of the land. The charges are made, the headlines follow: "Communist Activities Charged" or "Subversive Influence Seen."

This Southern version of McCarthyism was first directed against the NAACP. The disease now spreads to new areas: the white Southerner, the educator, the newspaperman, the minister, the businessman, or the attorney who tries to work at this sensitive problem. The goal is the same: to silence those who do not accept the extremist position on segregation.

The charges follow the now-familiar pattern of guilt by association, by innuendo, by distortion. The refutation, the denial, the clarification may come later. They are sadly always a little late and a little more complicated than the simple charge. They merit a less auspicious place in the newspaper. Meanwhile, the damage is done. The "facts" in the charge are not important. The nature of the charge is: the willful attempt to discredit and embarrass honorable men, to discourage others from speaking out, and most of all to enforce silence on a subject which needs so badly to be discussed.

The latest expression of this type of wanton attack is the maiden speech in the U.S. House of Representatives by Dale Alford of Arkansas, in which he seeks to cast aspersion on the good name of Harry Ashmore, Executive Editor of the Arkansas Gazette, and upon the reputation of the Southern Regional Council. The speech has a familiar ring, the prolonged references to a grave conspiracy and then quick references to Mr. Ashmore and the Council. Neither is charged with an improper word or deed; yet the allegation is made that the Council was "founded by a Communist." This allegation is both stale and discredited. No less a Southern conservative than Virginias Dabney, editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, has vouched for the honorable origins of the Council. The Library of Congress and libraries in Arkansas are stocked with the facts on this subject. But this does not deter Dr. Alford, who is understandably sensitive about his own status these days and is apparently attempting to focus attention elsewhere.

For one supposedly alarmed about the communistic threat, Dr. Alford behaves oddly. He does not explain how the threat operates, who the real leaders are, why the FBI has failed to find them, why he has not urged the FBI on to greater efforts. And of course he never explains why, if desegregation is a Communist plot, he went along so willingly as a Little Rock school board member with the original plan to desegregate Central High School.

He speaks of vague plots and names specific individuals and organizations, with no evidence that they are connected. We protest this. We feel it is immoral. We feel the time has come for the public to be made aware of the resurgence of McCarthyism in the South. If there is in fact a Communist threat in the South, then Dr. Alford and others like him have a responsibility to report their knowledge to the FBI; if not, they have a duty to check their facts. Otherwise, they themselves are doing the real service to communism, which battens on confusion, false charges and the blind defense of racial injustices in our country.

VOL. NO. VI, NO. 10 May 15, 1957

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL, INC.

Beneficiary of the largest single grant ever awarded by the Ford Foundation's Fund For The Republic is the Southern Regional Council, Inc. (SRC), whose headquarters is located in the Wesley Memorial Building, 63 Auburn Avenue, N.E., Atlanta 3, Georgia. As of last year, the Council received a total of $445,000 "in support of studies and activities to promote interracial improvements" in the South. According to The Fund For The Republic's Three-Year Report, dated May 31, 1956, page 22, the SRC "has concentrated on building strong state organizations, so that each of its groups will be able to stand on its own feet when Fund support is terminated." (See "The New York Times", 12-16-56, page 117.)

Founded in January 1944 as a successor to the Commission On Interracial Cooperation, Inc., the Council's original corporation papers reflected its following "objects and purposes": "...to organize and maintain a Regional Council for the improvement of economic, civic and racial conditions in the South, in the endeavor to promote a greater unity in the South in all efforts towards regional and racial development; to attain through research and action programs the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region; to reduce race tension, the basis of racial tension, racial misunderstanding, and racial distrust; to develop and integrate leadership in the South on new levels of regional development and fellowship..."

This document, filed in the Superior Court of Fulton County, State of Georgia, listed the names of five incorporators of the Council as follows: DR. RUFUS E. CLEMENT, RALPH McGILL, and BISHOP ARTHUR J. MOORE, Atlanta Georgia; DR. CHARLES S. JOHNSON, Nashville, Tennessee (now deceased); and DR. HOWARD W. ODUM, Chapel Hill, North Carolina. (See Petition of Incorporation, Book 062, pages 64-67, 1-6-44; and "The New York Times", 10-17-55.)

Today, the Council has expanded its activities into 12 states. Virtually supported by the enormous grant from The Fund For The Republic, the SRC "has strengthened its head office in Atlanta and organized Councils on Human Relations with interracial boards and staffs" in the following states: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. (See Fund For The Republic "Three-Year Report," 1956, page 22.)

Formerly entitled The Southern Frontier, SRC's official organ is called New South, a 16-page monthly journal published in Atlanta, Georiga. With the approval of the United States Treasury Department, the Council enjoys tax-exempt status and all contributions to the organization can be treated as Federal income tax deductions. According to a revised roster dated April 1957, the SRC's

"RED FRONT"

Readers of the April 15, 1957 issue of the Firing Line will recall the Council was identified as a "Southern Red front by MANNING JOHNSON on March 8, 1957 before the State of Louisiana Legislative Committee On Segregation." The Firing Line report also revealed testimony which reflected the Council was "formed by JAMES E. JACKSON, a southern organizer of the Communist Party" and "is affiliated with the Mississippi Council On Human Relations."

Records of The American Legion reveal a definite trend of interrelationship between the SRC and the Southern Conference For Human Welfare, a defunct Communist front organization. According to the files of the National Americanism Commission, the following 16 former Directors of the SRC have been supporters of this aforementioned subversive organization: CHARLOTTE H. BROWN, LOUIS E. BURNHAM, GEORGE E. CLARY, HERBERT DAVIDSON, J. M. ELLISON, CLARK H. FOREMAN, GUY B. JOHNSON, DAVID D. JONES, GEORGE S. MITCHELL, HOWARD W. ODUM, F. D. PATTERSON, EDWIN A. The files of The American Legion reflect the following 9 current SRC Directors have also been affiliated with the subversive Southern Conference For Human Welfare: RUFUS B. ATWOOD, PAUL R. At the conclusion of a 1954 investigation, the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee reported the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc. (of 822 Perdido Street, New Orleans 12, Louisiana), "was initially an adjunct of the Southern Conference For Human Welfare. After the exposure of the Southern Conference For Human Welfare as a Communist front, it began to wither and was finally dissolved, but the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., continued." The Subcommittee found that after "an objective study", the "Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc. is operating with substantially the same leadership and purposes as its predecessor organization, the Southern Conference For Human Welfare." (See Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, Hearings, Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., 1955, pages V and VIII.)

For the information of Firing Line readers, the following 8 current Directors of the Council have been affiliated with the aforementioned Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., which was fully exposed in the July 1, 1955 issue of this publication: F. WOODS BECKMAN, BLAILSFORD R. BRAZEAL, RUFUS E. CLEMENT, JAMES M. DABBS, CHARLES G. GOMILLION, DUNCAN HUNTER, BENJAMIN E. MAYS and JOSEPHINE WILKINS. It may be of interest to recall that former SRC Director AUBREY WILLIAMS has been President of the Southern Conference Educational Fund since 1948. He was named as a member of the Communist Party during the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee's 1954 hearings. (See Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, Hearings, Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., 1955, pages VI, VII and 102; and Southern Conference Educational Fund, leaflets and letterheads, 1953-1956.)

REPORT FROM THE SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES CONTROL BOARD

Due to the increasing number of petitions filed by the United States Attorney General with the Subversive Activities Control Board (SACB), the National Americanism Commission has compiled the following statistical report on the status of 24 cases which this quasi-judicial body has received since it creation by the Subversive Activities Control (Internal Security) Act of 1950:

The SACB has ordered six organizations to register under the Subversive Activities Control Act. In a Modified Report dated December 18, 1956, the Board "recommended that the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit affirm the Board's Order entered April 20, 1953, requiring the Communist Party of the United States to register as a Communist-action organization under section 7 of the Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950." The Board also ordered each of the following groups to register as a Communist-front organization: Jefferson School of Social Science (1955), Labor Youth League (1955), National Council of American-Soviet Friendship (1956), United May Day Committee (1956) and Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade (1955.)

Subject to review of the whole Board, Recommended Decisions have been issued to require each of the following groups to register as a Communist-front organization: American Peace Crusade (1957), California Labor School (1957), Civil Rights Congress (1955), and the Washington Pension Union (1956.)

In various procedural stages are the cases of the following 7 alleged Communist-front organizations: American Committee For Protection of Foreign Born, California Emergency Defense Committee, The Colorado Committee To Protect Civil Liberties, Committee To End Sedition Laws, The Connecticut Volunteers For Civil Rights, National Negro Labor Council, and Save Our Sons Committee. Cases of the following two alleged Communist-infiltrated organizations are also pending: International Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers and the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America.

After extensive hearings, the Board ordered dismissal of the following petitions on the grounds that evidence reflected these organizations to be defunct: American Slav Congress, The Committee For A Democratic Far Eastern Policy, Council On African Affairs, International Workers Order, Inc., and the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee. According to the Sixth Annual Report of the SACB, dated June 30, 1956, six organizations have appealed Board decisions to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, namely: Communist Party, U.S.A., Labor Youth League, Jefferson School of Social Science, National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Inc., Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, and the United May Day Committee.

TODAY'S ASSOCIATES - "PROGRESSIVE LITERATURE" OUTLET

In her January 1957 issue of Today, MISS ANNA LOUISE STRONG declared her periodical will be converted from its present form to a monthly column of the same title scheduled for future appearances in the National Guardian. Mimeographed on legal colored paper, Today has used the following mailing addresses: Post Office Box 161, Montrose, California, and Post Office Box 87, Altadena, California. For the information of readers, MISS STRONG is a long time supporter of the international Communist conspiracy. An identified member of of the Communist Party, U. S. A., she has "collaborated with agents of the Soviet Intelligence apparatus" and has written for Communist Party publications. (See Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, Report, Institute of Pacific Relations, 1952, page 158.)

On March 14, 1957, BETTY CHESLEY, Secretary of the apparent newly formed Today's Associates of Post Office Box 87, Altadena, California, wrote the following message to Today readers: "This is a plan to share good progressive literature. It grows from the letters that came to ANNA LOUISE STRONG'S Today. Some people wrote offering books and magazines; they take many progressive periodicals and are willing to share them. Other people want progressive literature but have little means to buy it and live miles from any source. The staff which handled the volunteer mailing of Today have worked out a plan by which they hope to supply the names of those wanting good reading matter to those having good reading matter to give away...If you are able to help in this project, please fill out the coupon...and return to us at above address."

This plan listed the following "progressive literature": Catholic Worker, I. F. Stone's Weekly, Manchester Guardian, The Nation, National Guardian, New Republic, New Statesman & Nation, Monthly Review and The Progressive.

FACTS ON CHESLEY

According to The American Legion files, one MRS. ELIZABETH R. CHESLEY of Pasadena, California was listed as a signer of a quarter-page advertisement which appeared in the September 20, 1951 edition of The Los Angeles Times, demanding a reduction of bail for Communist Party leaders who have been involved in Smith Act prosecution cases. The Daily Worker of April 13, 1951, page 5, reflected that a MRS. BETTY CHESLEY, Chairman of the Pasadena Non-Partisan Peace Committee, led a "two hour vehicular parade through the main streets of Pasadena", California. On May 8, 1954, a MRS. ELIZABETH CHESLEY was honored at a "Mother's Day Testimonial For Peace", which was announced by the Southern California Peace Crusade, an identified subversive organization. (See "Daily People's World", 5-5-54, page 6; and HUAC, Guide To Subversive Organizations and Publications, 1957, page 80.)

COMMUNIST PARTY MEMBERSHIP: According to FBI Director J. EDGAR HOOVER, Party membership as of January 1, 1957 totaled 17,360. This represents a drop of 14.4% from last year's total of 20,289. He warned against discounting Party strength based on actual membership.

File Critiques in "The Firing Line"

AN ANALYSIS OF THE ATTACK ON SRC
IN THE FIRING LINE OF MAY 15, 1957

The Firing Line is the publication of the American Legion's National Americanism Commission, P. O. Box 1055, Indianapolis, Indiana. It seems to accept without question the testimony and charges of professional accusers (e.g., Manning Johnson, the late Paul Crouch) even though they have long since been discredited and much of their specific testimony has been found by such official groups as the Subversive Activities Control Board to be false and unreliable.

In the issue of May 15th, the Firing Line contains an article on the Southern Regional Council. This article presents in the guise of facts allegations against SRC and various of its past and present board members that range from outright falsehoods to cunning distortions designed to support utterly unfounded conclusions. Following is a point by point analysis; the indented paragraphs are quoted verbatim from the Firing Line.

> Readers of the April 15, 1957 issue of the Firing Line will recall the Council was identified as a "Southern Red front" by MANNING JOHNSON on March 8, 1957 before the State of Louisiana Legislative Committee on Segregation." The Firing Line report also revealed testimony which reflected the Council was "formed by JAMES E. JACKSON, a Southern organizer of the Communist Party" and "is affiliated with the Mississippi Council on Human Relations."

The Louisiana State body referred to here was set up to combat desegregation and is headed by State Senator William M. Rainach, who is also the chief leader of the White Citizens Councils in that state. Manning Johnson is a self-styled ex-Communist whose testimony has been repudiated by the U.S. Department of Justice and the Subversive Activities Control Board. His testimony about SRC is demonstrably false. The founding of SRC by a group of outstanding Southerners is a matter of public record. The incorporators were Bishop Arthur J. Moore of The Methodist Church, Ralph McGill, editor of The Atlanta Constitution, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University, the late Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, and the late Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina. Any claim that these men would have permitted the James E. Jackson in question or any other person of Communistic persuasion to play any part in the founding of the organization is fantastic. The founding of SRC is a matter of extensive public record, as reported in the press and official documents, all clearly showing that this charge is an outright falsehood.

The statement that SRC "is affiliated with the Mississippi Council on Human Relations" is both inaccurate and irrelevant. The Mississippi Council is a thoroughly respectable body of citizens of that State, including among its officers the wife of a cotton broker and the Catholic Bishop of Mississippi. It was for a time affiliated with the Southern Regional Council (not vice versa) though it now functions as an independent group.

> Records of the American Legion reveal a definite trend of interrelationship between the SRC and the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, a defunct Communist front organization. According to the files of the National Americanism Commission, the following 16 former Directors of the SRC have been supporters of this aforementioned subversive organization: CHARLOTTE H. BROWN, LOUIS E. BURNHAM, GEORGE E. CLARY, HERBERT DAVIDSON, J. M. ELLISON, CLARK H. FOREMAN, GUY B. JOHNSON, DAVID D. JONES, GEORGE S. MITCHELL, HOWARD W. ODUM, F. D. PATTERSON, EDWIN A. PENICK, HOMER P. RAINEY, IRA DeA. REID, FORRESTER B. WASHINGTON and AUBREY WILLIAMS.

The charge that SRC was related to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare continues to be used by the detractors of this organization although it has long since and repeatedly been refuted. SRC was the official successor to the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, founded in 1919 by a group of outstanding Southern churchmen. SRC came into existence at a time when the Southern Conference had been operating for six years, and it was attacked by some persons on the grounds that it was a more conservative organization set up in competition with the Southern Conference. It was never in any way connected with the Southern Conference.

The spurious technique of connection-by-association used here was exposed for what it is by the Atlanta Constitution in 1953. At that time, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, the distinguished president of Atlanta University, had announced his candidacy for the Atlanta Board of Education. Pro-segregationists sought to have him disqualified, using as the Firing Line does the charge that he had once served on the board of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The Atlanta Constitution on May 12, 1953 editorialized as follows:

ATTACK ON CLEMENT IS DIRTY POLITICS

> ...A member of the /City Executive Committee/ board has charged that Dr. Clement is a Communist sympathizer because he once belonged to the now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare.
> This newspaper is proud of the fact that it contributed largely to the demise of that organization. We were twice threatened with lawsuits because of our exposure of it; therefore, we believe we have some authority to speak.
> The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was organized by honest, loyal Americans, with a viewpoint to organizing all constructive forces in the South to improve the South's economic and social status. It later was infiltrated by Communists, but for a good many years it was composed of and led by persons of unquestioned loyalty, during which time its membership was about 99.95 per cent loyal. It offers the typical example of a few rotten Communists spoiling a good barrel of apples.
> Even so, it was not until a good many years had passed, and after most of the membership had withdrawn, including Dr. Clement, that persons of suspected communistic tendencies took over what remained of the organization. They did not long endure, largely because this newspaper exposed them and kept upon them the full light of publicity. Therefore, we feel free to say that this smear attack on Dr. Clement was false and unworthy, and those conducting it reflect no credit on themselves, our city, state and region. ...

Suffice it to say that Dr. Clement's qualifications were upheld by the City Executive Committee, he was overwhelmingly elected in the primary, and he has recently been re-elected to the Atlanta Board of Education.

In this incident and in the Atlanta Constitution's editorial reproduced above lies the full explanation of the dishonest technique used by the Firing Line and SRC's racist critics in their attempts to discredit this organization.

It might further be noted that among the 16 former directors whose past presence on the board of SRC is supposed to have infected it with subversive sympathies are the following:

Dr. George E. Clary, Executive Secretary of the Southeastern Jurisdiction of the Methodist Church;

Mr. Herbert Davidson, Editor and Publisher of the Daytona Beach News and Journal;

Dr. J. M. Ellison, Chancellor of Virginia Union University;

The late Dr. Howard W. Odum, nationally famous scholar of the University of North Carolina;

The Reverend Edwin Penick, the presiding Episcopal Bishop of Raleigh, North Carolina.

The distinguished positions held by these individuals and their impeccable reputations in the South and North alike are enough, in themselves, to refute the insinuations of the Firing Line.

The files of The American Legion reflect the following 9 current SRC Directors have also been affiliated with the subversive Southern Conference For Human Welfare: RUFUS B. ATWOOD, PAUL R. CHRISTOPHER, RUFUS E. CLEMENT, A. W. DENT, BENJAMIN E. MAYS, H. COUNCILL TRENHOLM, E. C. PETERS, JOSEPHINE WILKINS and MARION A. WRIGHT.

The same answer as that given above also applies here. Consider the positions held by these nine current directors:

Dr. Rufus B. Atwood, president of the state-supported Kentucky State College;

Mr. Paul R. Christopher, regional director of the AFL-CIO who serves by appointment of Governor Clement on an official state commission of Tennessee;

Dr. R. E. Clement, identified above;

Dr. Albert W. Dent, president of Dillard University of New Orleans;

Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College and one of this nation's most prominent leaders in the World Council of Churches;

Dr. H. Councill Trenholm, president of the state-supported Alabama State College in Montgomery;

Dr. E. C. Peters, president emeritus of Methodist-supported Paine College in Augusta, Georgia;

Miss Josephine Wilkins, former administrator of the Fact-Finding Movement of Georgia and past president of the League of Women Voters of Georgia;

Mr. Marion A. Wright, respected attorney, former chairman of the South Carolina Library Board, past president of the University of South Carolina Alumni Association.

If the worst that can be charged against the Southern Regional Council is that these distinguished Southerners served on its board, the organization can be proud indeed.

For the information of Firing Line readers, the following 8 current Directors of the Council have been affiliated with the aforementioned Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., which was fully exposed in the July 1, 1955 issue of this publication: F WOODS BECKMAN, BRAILSFORD (sic) R. BRAZEAL, RUFUS E. CLEMENT, JAMES M. DABBS, CHARLES G. GOMILLION, DUNCAN HUNTER, BENJAMIN E. MAYS and JOSEPHINE WILKINS. It may be of interest to recall that former SRC Director AUBREY WILLIAMS has been President of the Southern Conference Educational Fund since 1948. He was named as a member of the Communist Party during the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee's 1954 hearings.

The Southern Conference Educational Fund is the successor to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Three of the individuals names in this paragraph were named in the preceding one. The others include the Dean of Morehouse College, an honorably retired Federal Government employee, a South Carolina planter who is a leading layman of the Southern Presbyterian Church, the Dean of Tuskegee Institute, and a Methodist clergyman of Alabama. A special case is made of Aubrey Williams, who once served on the SRC board and is now president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund. It is reported that charges of past Communist affiliation were made against Mr. Williams in 1954. Mr. Williams resigned from SRC's board more than ten years ago, long before these charges were made. However, it should be noted that he categorically and under oath denied the charges made against him in 1954 and his sworn denial still stands unchallenged in the official record. The charge was made by a professional witness, another self-styled ex-Communist whose testimony on other occasions was proved false.

Allen Rankin, columnist for the conservative Montgomery Advertiser, wrote of the hearing at which Mr. Williams was accused: "(Senator) Eastland admitted to a newsman: 'I don't think either of the Durrs or Williams are Communists.' Yet these people...were accused and insulted and browbeaten."

It should be clear to any thoughtful person that the cynical technique of guilt by association used here in its most far-fetched form to indict the Southern Regional Council can be used at least as damagingly against any honest, patriotic body of citizens.

It is possible, for example, to extend the charges of the Firing Line to "prove" that the Catholic Church is under the influence of Communist sympathizers. Several Catholic clergymen took part at one time in the activities of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. One of the founders of the SRC was then Bishop, now Archbishop Gerald P. O'Hara, one of the leading Catholic dignitaries in the United States. From the very beginning, the Executive Committee of the Southern Regional Council has included a Catholic clergyman. Among the contributors to SRC have been two Catholic bishops and two archbishops. The president of SRC from 1945 to 1951 was Mr. Paul D. Williams of Richmond, Virginia, a co-founder of the Catholic Committee of the South, a Knight of St. Gregory, and one of the leading laymen of his Church. In 1953, the Catholic Committee of the South conferred its annual award on Dr. George S. Mitchell in recognition of his work as executive director of the Southern Regional Council. It would be interesting to see what the Firing Line would make of this "definite trend of interrelationship."

The same artificial case could, of course, be made against the Methodists, the Presbyterians, and other religious and civic groups that have been heavily represented on the board and in the activities of SRC.

The use of past associations with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare can be carried to even greater lengths. On April 3, 1945, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare staged a dinner in Washington, D.C., honoring Justice Hugo Black. This affair is reported in detail in the Southern Conference publication, The Southern Patriot, special supplement May 1945, and in contemporary newspaper accounts. The toastmaster on this occasion was then Senator, later Vice President, Alben W. Barkley. At the speaker's table was none other than the Honorable James F. Byrnes, who has since crowned his distinguished career with a term as Governor of South Carolina and is one of the leading champions of segregation. Among the sponsors of the dinner were Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, Secretary of Defense James Forrestal, President Harry S. Truman, and other distinguished Americans. Senator Barkley congratulated the Southern Conference on the "great work" it was doing.

This affair is mentioned only to demonstrate how the false standard of association applied by the Firing Line and other critics of SRC can be applied to discredit a host of reputable individuals and the organizations on whose boards they serve. Clearly, past affiliation or association with the Southern Conference cannot honestly be used to impeach the integrity of individuals whose careers testify to their character and patriotism. Still less can the presence of such individuals on the board of another organization be honestly used as evidence against the character of that organization.

Finally, it should be noted that nowhere in the charges against the SRC is there the slightest evidence or word or deed that would suggest Communist or subversive tendencies within the organization. The reason, of course, is that no such evidence exists. From the beginning, the SRC has been squarely opposed to the Communist doctrine and every other totalitarian philosophy. It has worked constructively and responsibly for full enjoyment of legal and human rights by all the people of the South. Those who seek to discredit the patriotism of the Southern Regional Council do so either out of inexcusable ignorance or because they are opposed to the democratic principles for which it stands.

Dear Pickus:

I was delighted to receive the Analysis of the attack on S.R.C. in The Firing Line of May 15th, 1957.

I wonder if you could send me one half dozen additional copies thereof for my use in publicizing the contents of the Analysis here in The American Legion.

I desire also to take the matter up with our National Department.

I suggest that copies of this document be sent throughout the entire mailing list of The Fund for The Republic. They have been supplied by me with the names and addresses of the necessary Legion Organization, and prominent, influential individuals in The Legion, to effectuate such a purpose.

Nothing but good can come of such an effort.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Breakstone:

Robert Pickus has passed on to us your helpful suggestions regarding the article on the Southern Regional Council which appeared in the May 15 issue of The Firing Line.

Enclosed are additional copies of our analysis of this attack. I am also getting in touch with the Fund for the Republic about possible distribution of our memorandum to its mailing list.

I might be worth noting that our memorandum was inserted in the Congressional Record on July 26 by Senator Douglas, acting on his own initiative. Our findings on Negro registration and voting had figured largely in the civil rights debate, and one of the Southern senators cited The Firing Line article in an effort to discredit us; this provided the occasion for Senator Douglas' use of our answer.

We are more grateful than I can say for your interest and help.

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming

Dear Art:

I am attaching another copy of the Southern States Industrial Council Bulletin, and with it a bulletin that is even more disturbing, so far as I am concerned, titled, "Firing Line", which is apparently published by the American Legion. Talk about reactionary outfits - the next thing I know they will claim that the Southern Regional Council is communistic! If it is, I have been fooled for the past ten years. It's true that I don't go to many meetings, but I read "The New South" like a hawk. As a lawyer, I have been trained to read carefully, though rapidly, and believe me - there is nothing communistic about "The New South". It represents a truly constitutional approach to civil rights and freedom, the whole reason for establishing the colonies and for establishing our nation. If the Southern Regional Council is communistic, I would definitely state that it is all on an underground basis!

I might add: if Ralph McGill is a communist, I will start eating your hat!

I will appreciate your comments, if any.

Sincerely,

W. H. Frey

(Amended)

WHEREAS, it now appears that there may be certain individuals, organizations or corporations designedly creating and fomenting strife and racial unrest, and;

BE IT, THEREFORE, RESOLVED that the Arkansas Legislative Council by affirmative motion, hereby authorizes the Special Education Committee heretofore appointed by Resolution to conduct such hearings of subversion present in Arkansas which has encouraged racial unrest and that the Committee invite the Attorney General of Arkansas to conduct such interrogation of witnesses that may be called at such hearings; that the Attorney General of Arkansas use his subpoena power to secure such witnesses, documents and papers that may be of value in such hearings; that after such hearings are conducted, the said Special Education Committee shall report its findings to the Legislative Council.

OPENING STATEMENT OF BRUCE BENNETT, ATTORNEY GENERAL

GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE, I feel that we are gathered here today on a very serious occasion. I respectfully ask your indulgence in order that I might make a statement with reference to the purpose for which this meeting has been called, the objects thereof, and what the Resolution of the Arkansas Legislative Council directed this Committee to do.

The Resolution authorized the Special Education Committee to "conduct such hearings of subversion present in Arkansas which has encouraged racial unrest", and invited the Attorney General of Arkansas to conduct the interrogation of witnesses that might be called at such hearings.

Congressional committees conducting investigations on the same subject matter have the power of nationwide subpoena; the subpoena power of this investigation, by law, does not extend further than the borders of our State. As a further comparison, this Committee does not have the power to cite a balky witness for contempt. So we must of necessity proceed with those witnesses within the borders of Arkansas and with those that will come into our State by invitation.

Last year, the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Pennsylvania v. Nelson, 350 U.S. 497, 100 L.Ed. 640, directed its opinion at "suspending the enforceability" of state laws imposing criminal sanctions on subversive activity directed against the Federal government. In the Nelson decision, the Court pointed out that it did not void provisions of state law insofar as they made it a crime in the States to attempt to overthrow the Federal government by unlawful means, but merely suspended their enforceability while the Federal Smith Act remained on the books.

We are probably in the second most serious crisis that our State has undergone in its entire 124-year history. For many decades the different races in Arkansas have lived in peace; they have made progress in the educational, cultural and economic fields. Our people in this State have always lived in peace. The recent emotional explosion here was not the result of something that occurred overnight. It will be the purpose of this Committee to learn - - - and I believe the witnesses will so establish, who did what, where, when, and how - - - on world, national, regional and local basis, as related to racial unrest in Arkansas.

It is expected that the witnesses will prove by their testimony and official press, programs, resolutions and pictures, that Little Rock, Pine Bluff, and other Arkansas cities, are segments in the international scheme of the Russian Kremlin - - - which has used communists, pro-communists, fellow travelers, dupes, and those who make a career out of being duped - - - to create confusion and turmoil here.

The Honorable J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, once stated:

> "To me, one of the most unbelieveable and unexplainable phenomena in the fight on Communism is the manner in which otherwise respectable, seemingly intelligent persons, perhaps unknowingly, aid the Communist cause more effectively than the Communists themselves. The pseudo-liberal can be more destructive than the known Communist because of the esteem which his cloak of respectability invites."

It has also been said:

> "If a barnyard goose is lured into a flock of wild geese, he may be excused for his mistake only IF HE LEAVES THE FLOCK. But if he FLIES IN FORMATION with them day after day he is a wild goose at heart. Likewise, if a man is unwittingly drawn into a Communist organization, he can be excused for his gullibility only IF HE LEAVES THE GROUP AND DENOUNCES ITS PURPOSES. But if he "flies in formation" with them he is a Communist at heart, irrespective of his loud noise to the contrary."

The Communist Party uses individuals, organizations, high-sounding front names, and any other means in its avowed program of international conquest by force.

It is expected that the witnesses here will show the local relationship of various individuals and organizations with that of national, regional and local organizations. It will be shown beyond a doubt that the race agitation in the Southern United States is a communist conspiracy adopted in October, 1930, by resolution passed by the Communist International. At that time Moscow laid down the proposition that race agitation in the Southern United States was to be pursued full speed ahead. Its purpose was to bring about a revolution in the United States on racial lines climaxed with land division similar to the agrarian reform in China, which was on an economic and land basis, and which has resulted in the death of 20,000,000 Chinese in the past 15 years.

The communist resolution of 1930 outlined a plan wherein those counties in the states of the South where the Negro is or was in numerical majority were to be target areas; the Negro was to rise up, drive off or kill the landowners and each receive, as was done in China, a portion of land. The general scheme of the plan involved the proposition that "all people who are a majority but do not own the land are Colonials." The "Southern" American Negro was defined to be a Colonial, and as such, he must be "liberated" through the "Black Republic". This was to be accomplished by violence. Experts in the field of communism will testify that insofar as the communist interest goes, schools and other integration objectives were and are tactics. In pursuance of this "Black Republic" proposal, the communists planned and have used non-communists with good intentions.

The witnesses to be presented will prove, by official communist documents, pamphlets and press clippings, that Little Rock and Pine Bluff were predetermined trouble areas and designated officially by the Communist Party many years ago to be developed for trouble purposes. Since 1925, the testimony will show some of our people have been wittingly or unwittingly consorting with, collaborating or cooperating with the communist apparatus. These people knew who or what they were cooperating with, and it is my thought that those who claim they did not are not worthy of public conficence and leadership. The records to be introduced will make incredible a claim of ignorance or innocence. Those who have been consorting with communists, communist fronts, or organizations are doing more for the known subversives and their cause than can be or was done by all the outside communists combined. I am reliably informed that there are now only about 9,000 hardcore communists in the United States. They are dedicated - - - they are past masters in the recruitment and use of dupes and others whose intentions may be good, but in reality, they are aiding and abetting the scheme to foment revolution in the United States.

It is expected that the witnesses will establish interlocking memberships, interlocking boards of directors, meetings of same - - - in and out of Arkansas - - - and other actions that tie Little Rock into an almost incredible combination of individuals and organizations who help to create and "maintain Little Rock." We will attempt to document a record that will prove that from 1928 to 1958 an intensive communist conspiracy climaxed in Little Rock, and that the purpose of these incidents is to attract and use the Negro - - - not to help the Negro.

Some individuals in Arkansas have become officers, directors of national and regional organizations that are loaded to the hilt with other individuals who have aided and abetted communists and communist front organizations time after time.

The United States House Committee on Un-American Activities has, at present, listed more than 469 organizations as subversive. In addition, the United States Attorney General, under the power vested in him by executive order 10450, has listed many other organizations as communist or communist front.

This Committee is concerned with the word "subversion". Basic to this investigation should be the definition of that word. Webster's Unified Dictionary defines "subversion" as:

> "To turn upside down, overthrow, destroy. To subvert is to overthrow as if from a foundation; to overturn often implies throwing with force from a base or position; to overthrow usually denotes complete destruction, as, to overthrow a government;"

Some of the witnesses that will appear before this Committee will detail the program of world conquest as drafted by the Marx-Engels-Stalin-Khrushchev combine. They will describe the communist apparatus as it pertains to executing the program of Russian Communism - - - they will substantiate the plan of execution as it pertains to the organization in use of those hundreds of front organizations that have been organized and used by the communists.

Most of our people have a past acquaintance with the name of Gerhart Eisler, Stalin's personal representative to the United States, who was to work with the communists to overthrow our government and who later, after conviction, fled to his country on the communist ship "Batory"; Harry Bridges, the West Coast Communist; Alger Hiss, Whittaker Chambers, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, and many other notorious communists.

The names of Charles Gomillion, Aubrey Williams, Abner W. Berry, Claude C. Williams, Pete Seegar, James A. Dombrowski, and others, whom I will refrain from naming at this time, will crop up during these hearings.

Certain individuals in this State have been the willing or unwilling tools of subversion; they have joined organizations shot through and through with individuals who have been cited for aiding and/or abetting communist or communist front organizations, periodicals and other aspects of the apparatus.

An occurrence that appears to be isolated will not necessarily arouse the public mind, but when numerous incidents occur - - - when the same individuals are found at the forefront of those incidents - - - when it is proven that all of the incidents, all of the contacts, all of the interlocking directorships, and other occurrences point to the general scheme of communist penetration, there can be but one conclusion. That conclusion is that subversion is present.

The witnesses to appear before you will talk of many organizations, some of which perhaps you have never heard. They will talk of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare, the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., the Southern Regional Council, the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, the NAACP, the Highlander Folk School, the National Negro Congress, the African Blood Brotherhood, the American Negro Labor Congress, the Southern Youth Congress, and many others. Some of these have been listed as subversive and others are shot through and through with officers and directors cited innumerable times for lending aid and support to communist organizations and fronts.

In the basic Resolution passed by the Legislative Council, the Attorney General was invited to conduct the interrogation of the witnesses. The subject of subversion is a delicate matter. It has been said that a man may be robbed of his money and worldly goods, but when you rob him of his good reputation you have stolen his most valuable treasure. With this thought in mind, your Attorney General has insisted that any statement by a witness be substantiated with pertinent documentary evidence, but I believe it to be my duty and your duty, under our oath of office, to submit proof of those who "fly in formation with the wild geese," and noisy disclaimers to the contrary will not refute the fact that he, she or the organization is subversive at heart if time after time they are found flying in formation with others who teach, preach and follow the communistic line.

Today America is spending billions of dollars on National Defense and Foreign Aid in an effort to prevent the iron curtain from being located nearer and nearer the borders of the free world. With over half the world's population now held in Russian slavery, it behooves the free men of the world to do all within our power to aid in this fight. Make no mistake, the Russian plan of domination has not deviated from its original concept. You will be told on good authority that the communists are master fishermen for the minds of men in troubled waters. Communism breeds on chaos and turmoil.

In the entire history of the civilized world, nowhere has so much peace and progress been enjoyed between the white and black people as that in the South. The Negroes of the South are the leaders of the black race throughout the world. This pre-existing peace is something that has been treasured by all men of goodwill. It is more than just a working relationship, and it bottoms on a deep affection and mutual respect that all of you who have lived in this State have known and enjoyed.

I feel sure that it is the hope of this Committee that the normal peace and tranquillity between our people will be strengthened, restored and preserved so that those generations to come will benefit therefrom.

III.

BACKGROUND MATERIAL

ORGANIZATIONS

1. NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is a New York corporation organized in 1911. Daisy Bates of Little Rock, Arkansas, has been president of the Arkansas Conference of Branches of this organization for approximately 10 years. The NAACP received contributions in Arkansas of $182.00 in 1957, yet it spent over $50,000.00 in this State during that year on litigation and other integration endeavors. It is a well known fact that the NAACP has been the moving factor in filing integration suits in this State, designed not only to integrate the schools, but the public parks, swimming pools and golf courses, and has the ultimate goal of invalidating the statutes forbidding intermarriage among the races. Many of the officials of this organization, both local and national, have an almost incredible tie-in with communist and communist front organizations.

2. FUND FOR THE REPUBLIC. The Fund for the Republic received a grant of fifteen million dollars from the Ford Foundation several years ago, but the Ford Foundation subsequently decided not to make further grants. The Fund for the Republic has made grants totaling $497,000.00 to the Southern Regional Council, which in turn has made grants to the Arkansas Council on Human Relations. Harry Ashmore is one of the directors of the Fund for the Republic, and was one of the three incorporators of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, and as such, made two direct grants from the Fund for the Republic to the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, which was organized for the purpose of instigating and pushing integration in Arkansas.

3. SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL. This organization is based at Atlanta, Georgia, and Jim Jackson, a notorious Negro communist, participated in its organization. Many of its officers and directors are also national officers of the NAACP and other organizations that have been cited as subversive by the House Un-American Activities Committee, the Senate Internal Security Committee, and the Attorney General of the United States. Daisy Bates is also a director of this organization. It appears that the main purpose of this organization is to push for integration of everything in the South.

4. ARKANSAS COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS. The Arkansas Council on Human Relations was incorporated in Arkansas in 1955. Harry Ashmore was one of the three incorporators, as well as Christopher C. Mercer, who at that time was legal counsel for the NAACP in Arkansas. Its articles of incorporation recite that it is beholden to the Southern Regional Council. Its avowed purpose is to assist in the integration activities in Arkansas. It is highly significant that after the Fund for the Republic—with Harry Ashmore as director—started making grants to the Southern Regional Council in 1954—with Daisy Bates as a director—the Arkansas Council on Human Relations was organized in Arkansas—with Harry Ashmore and Daisy Bates as officers—to participate in the receipt of these grants. At the height of the Little Rock incident in September, 1957, the Fund for the Republic by-passed the Southern Regional Council and sent direct grants to the Arkansas Council on Human Relations. None of the television, radio or newspaper people of Arkansas knew the objectives or financial setup of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations; however, the Council has received contributions of over $30,000.00 in the past three years but the disposition thereof is unknown.

5. SOUTHERN CONFERENCE EDUCATIONAL FUND. The headquarters of this organization is New Orleans, Louisiana. The notorious James A. Dombrowski is executive secretary. He has been cited dozens of times for his subversive activities, and has participated in practically every left wing, communistic front that has been organized in the South for the past 20 years. L. C. Bates, husband of Daisy Bates, Dr. Albert Howard Carter, and Dr. M. Lafayette Harris, all of Arkansas, are directors of this organization. In a policy statement issued by the organization on June 12, 1954, the directors stated: "The Fund has devoted its efforts to the elimination of racial segregation and discrimination."

INDIVIDUALS

1. DAISY BATES. Daisy Bates has been president of the Arkansas Conference of Branches of the NAACP for a number of years. She is also a national director of the NAACP, is a director of the Southern Regional Council and the Arkansas Council on Human Relations. In 1948, Daisy Bates, L. C. Bates, and Ladislav Pushkarsky were three of the 74 people who signed a petition to place Henry Wallace on the ballot in Arkansas as a presidential candidate for the Progressive Party. In 1954, Daisy Bates attended a meeting in Little Rock, at which Dr. Vernon McDaniel of Tuskegee, Alabama, was on the panel. McDaniel was sent into Arkansas by the National NAACP to make a survey of cities which that organization thought might be targets for its activities. Gloster B. Current, Stephen Gill Spottswood, Dan Byrd, and other individuals from the national office of the NAACP were also present at the meeting. According to the press, plans were made at this meeting for the solicitation of plaintiffs and subsequent filing of lawsuits which precipitated the racial unrest as evidenced by the Central High School incident. Daisy Bates has also worked in close association with Clarence Laws of New Orleans, Louisiana, in furtherance of the NAACP in Arkansas.

2. L. C. BATES. L. C. Bates is the publisher of the Arkansas State Press, a Negro weekly newspaper published in Little Rock. He is a director of the Southern Conference Educational Fund. On July 31, 1958, he signed an ad in the Washington Post petitioning the House Un-American Activities Committee not to hold hearings in Atlanta, Georgia, designed to investigate subversion in the South. The record of the Atlanta hearing reflects that numerous witnesses took the stand under oath, and subsequently invoked the First and Fifth Amendments on questions as to their communist membership or activities. A clipping from his newspaper, the Arkansas State Press, dated March 26, 1954, bemoans the findings of the Jenner Committee that resulted from the hearings in New Orleans, wherein it was found that the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., is the successor to the Southern Conference on Human Welfare, which is subversive, with the same address, executive director and officers.

3. HENRY WALLACE. Wallace was a presidential candidate on the Progressive Party ticket in 1948. When he came to Arkansas that year, he refused to sign an affidavit, which is required by Arkansas law, to the effect that his party is not affiliated with, associated with, or controlled by the Communist Party. He was accompanied by Daisy Bates, L. C. Bates, Ladislav Pushkarsky, and Leonard Farmer when he appeared at the Capitol, and left the Secretary of State's office arm in arm with Daisy Bates. Pictures were made on the front steps of the Capitol, wherein Daisy Bates appeared on Wallace's left; L. C. Bates, Ladislav Pushkarsky and Leonard Farmer also appeared in the picture. The electors of Wallace were subsequently placed on the ballot as independents, and L. C. Bates, Daisy Bates and Ladislav Pushkarsky were three of the 74 signers of the petition.

4. LEONARD FARMER. Leonard Farmer was a communist in the State of Arkansas from at least 1948 through 1951. When Henry Wallace came to Arkansas, Farmer gave an inter-racial breakfast for him at his home on West Markham. Farmer is a man of means, and told a deliberate falsehood to the Supreme Court of Arkansas when he applied for admission as an attorney after graduating from the University of Arkansas in 1951. He graduated from Harvard prior to coming to Arkansas, and although he has at least two college degrees, he is now working as a truck driver for the Pepperridge Bread Company in Connecticut.

5. LADISLAV PUSHKARSKY. Ladislav Pushkarsky was associated in the Wallace movement in 1948. He signed the petition for Wallace and appeared at the Capitol with him. He actively supported the communist philosophies in Arkansas in 1947 and 1948, and at the present time is voluntarily behind the Russian iron curtain in Poland, and has renounced his American citizenship.

6. CLARENCE LAWS. Clarence Laws is field secretary for the NAACP, and works actively for that organization in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi. He has been quoted extensively in the past year by the Little Rock morning newspaper, and has worked in close association with Daisy Bates. He was discharged from the United States Army as a reserve commissioned officer "under the provisions of paragraph 6B(8), Army Regulations 140-175, which authorizes discharge for security reasons when such action is necessary in the interest of national security." The discharge was predicated upon his activity in connection with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, predecessor of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Southern Negro Youth Congress, and the Committee Against Jim Crow in Military Service and Training, all of which have been cited as communist fronts. He was the principal spokesman for the NAACP in connection with the racial trouble at Van Buren, Little Rock and Hoxie.

7. VERNON McDANIEL. Dr. Vernon McDaniel, on a leave of absence from the Tuskegee Institute granted by Dr. Charles Gomillion, Dean, made a survey of 20 cities in Arkansas in 1954 and 1955 to determine "community attitudes toward integration." He was paid an annual salary of $6,000.00 by the NAACP, and remained in Arkansas for over a year. He participated in the conference in Little Rock on October 24, 1954, along with Daisy

Bates, Gloster Current, Stephen Gill Spottswood, Wiley A. Branton, and others, at which time a program was laid down for the filing of further integration suits in Arkansas, and which resulted in the case of Aaron v. Cooper, the Little Rock Central High School integration suit. Spottswood and Current have been cited numerous times as aiding and abetting communist and communist front organizations.

8. DR. CHARLES GOMILLION. Dr. Charles Gomillion is Dean of Tuskegee Institute and was the organizer of the boycott at Tuskegee. He is president of the Tuskegee Civic Association which organized the boycott and the racial trouble there. He was a supporter of Rev. Martin Luther King in the Montgomery bus boycott, and the two of them attended a communist gathering at Monteagle, Tennessee, of the Highlander Folk School in 1957. He has worked in close accord with Aubrey Williams, an individual who assisted Commonwealth College in 1934. Williams also attended the Monteagle Conference, as did Abner W. Berry, an identified member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of America. Claude C. Williams, a former resident of Paris, Arkansas, in the thirties who was active in the organization of the Workingmen's Union of the World, which was stirring up racial unrest then, also attended the Conference.

9. THURGOOD MARSHALL. Thurgood Marshall is general counsel for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, a subsidiary of the NAACP. He contracted for that organization to pay Dr. Vernon McDaniel to come into Arkansas and make a survey to determine the target cities for integration in Arkansas. This was arranged by Thurgood Marshall and Dr. Charles Gomillion.

10. HARRY ASHMORE. Harry Ashmore is Editor of the Arkansas Gazette and former Chief Editorial Writer. In 1948, he urged through editorial columns of his paper that Henry Wallace's name be placed on the ballot in Arkansas. He was subsequently named a director of the Fund for the Republic, and as such, assisted in channeling $450,000.00 to the Southern Regional Council, a portion of which was channeled to the Arkansas Council on Human Relations. In 1957, at the height of the Little Rock Central High School incident, the Fund for the Republic sent contributions directly to the Arkansas Council on Human Relations. He was one of the three incorporators of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations.

IV.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. COMMONWEALTH COLLEGE, A SUBVERSIVE ORGANIZATION, OPERATED IN ARKANSAS, CREATING RACIAL UNREST, FROM AT LEAST 1925 THROUGH 1941, WHEN IT WAS CLOSED AS THE RESULT OF A STATE COURT ORDER.

Hon. J. L. "Bex" Shaver testified that he is a former member of the Arkansas Legislature, Lt. Governor of the State of Arkansas, and former President of the Arkansas Bar Association. When he was a member of the General Assembly, he interrogated witnesses as a member of a special committee which investigated Commonwealth College in 1935. He introduced the official transcript from the House Journal of that investigation. His testimony and the transcript reflect the following:

In 1925, Commonwealth College settled west of Mena, Arkansas. This school had no particular academic requirements, tuition or qualifications for students or faculty. No attempt was made to belie the fact that it was communistic in nature, and to a large extent was supported by organizations with subversive backgrounds. In about 1932, Lucien Koch became the director (president) of the school. He subsequently engaged in creating racial tension in connection with the formation of the East Arkansas Sharecroppers Union, and the Workingmen's Union of the World in and about Fort Smith and Russellville. Koch, Bob Reed and Autry Delaney went into East Arkansas, especially in Cross and Poinsett Counties, and made inflamatory speeches denouncing the landowners, the federal government and the administration of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. In this connection, one Claude Williams wrote Koch a letter while the latter was in the Tyronza jail, wherein he talked of the "united front" that had been promulgated by the Communist and Socialist Parties. Claude Williams at that time was actively engaged in the organization of the Workingmen's Union of the World at Paris, Arkansas. The representatives of Commonwealth College who went into East Arkansas promised prospective members of the East Arkansas Sharecroppers Union 40 acres, a mule and a plow, and advanced a plan similar to the agrarian reform plan of China which has resulted in the death of over 20 million Chinese during the past two decades.

Thus we find a subversive organization operated in Arkansas, creating racial unrest, from at least 1925 through 1941, when Commonwealth was closed as the result of a State court order.

2. COMMUNISTS AND THEIR ASSOCIATES IN ARKANSAS ACTIVELY SUPPORTED THE PROGRESSIVE PARTY IN 1948.

Hon. C. G. "Crip" Hall, Secretary of State, State of Arkansas, testified that the presidential nominee of the Progressive Party, Henry Wallace, applied to him to have his name placed on the ballot of the November General Election. Mr. Hall asked Wallace to comply with Act 33, Ark. Acts of 1935, as amended by Act 293, Ark. Acts of 1941, which provides that a candidate must sign an affidavit that his party "is not directly or indirectly affiliated by any means whatsoever with the Communist Party of the United States, the Third Communist International, or any other foreign agency, political party, organization or government." Wallace refused to comply with the act. Mr. Hall further testified that pictures made in his office and on the front steps of the Capitol Building at that time have been in his personal possession since 1948. He introduced the pictures, and from the one made on the front steps of the Capitol Building, he identified Daisy Bates, State President of the National Association of the Advancement of Colored People for a number of years, as the person standing immediately next to Wallace; he also identified L. C. Bates, husband of Daisy Bates, and a white man on Wallace's right called Ladislav or "Laddie" Pushkarsky. Mr. Hall testified that Daisy Bates left "arm in arm" with Wallace when they retired from his office inside the Capitol to the front steps. This bit of testimony belies the assertion that Daisy Bates was at the Capitol that day merely as a reporter for her husband's newspaper. Wallace wanted to make a speech on the front steps of the Capitol, but Mr. Hall denied him that privilege as contrary to State law. Mr. Hall also introduced a newspaper clipping from the Arkansas Gazette dated October 22, 1954, wherein it recited an account of a meeting of the NAACP at Mount Zion Baptist Church, Little Rock; it stated that Gloster B. Current, Vernon McDaniel, Daisy Bates, and others were present.

Mr. Hall further testified that the names of Daisy Bates, L. C. Bates, and Laddie Pushkarsky appeared on the petition of electors to place the name of Henry Wallace on the ballot.

A newspaper article from the Times Dispatch entitled, "Inter-racial Breakfast" was introduced by Mr. Hall, which stated that Wallace attended a breakfast for Negroes and Whites at the home of a Little Rock supporter, Leonard Farmer, hereafter identified as then and now, a communist.

Hon. Guy E. Williams, former three-term Attorney General of the State of Arkansas and present Chancellor and Probate Judge of the First Chancery District of Arkansas, testified that he was acquainted with Leonard Farmer by virtue of a divorce suit filed by Farmer against his wife in the Pulaski Chancery Court. A divorce was granted but was subsequently set aside and separate maintenance was granted to the wife of Leonard Farmer. An opinion written in connection with the setting aside of the divorce by Judge Williams was introduced, wherein it stated that Leonard Farmer was a member of the Communist Party and had been for several years.

Robert E. Diles, presently a Referee for the Arkansas Workmen's Compensation Commission, testified that he attended Little Rock Junior College in 1947, and one of his classmates was Ladislav or "Laddie" Pushkarsky. That Pushkarsky's philosophy of government was communistic in nature. He was informed by a member of one of the federal agencies that Pushkarsky is now in Poland, has renounced his American citizenship, and is a member of the Communist Party in Poland.

From the foregoing, we find that L. C. and Daisy Bates, along with two known communists, Farmer and Pushkarsky, actively supported Henry Wallace in his campaign in Arkansas in 1948.

3. MANY ORGANIZATIONS OF A SUBVERSIVE NATURE HAVE OPERATED IN THE STATE OF ARKANSAS FOR SEVERAL YEARS WITH THE GOAL OF CREATING RACIAL TENSION AND UNREST.

(A) MANY OFFICIALS, BOTH LOCAL AND NATIONAL, OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE HAVE BEEN CONNECTED WITH OR ACTIVELY PARTICIPATED IN COMMUNIST OR COMMUNIST FRONT ACTIVITIES.

Honorable Bruce Bennett, Attorney General of the State of Arkansas, testified that he has made an investigation of the matters before this Committee. He introduced a letter signed by C. J. Hauch, Jr., Brig. Gen., United States Army, stating that Clarence Laws, Field Secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People assigned to Arkansas, had been discharged from the United States Army for security reasons. Mr. Bennett also introduced an article which appeared in the Arkansas Gazette September 7, 1957, identifying Clarence Laws as Field Secretary for the NAACP in Arkansas; he also introduced a letterhead showing the national officers and board of directors of the NAACP, and an answer to an interrogatory in a suit filed against the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund by the State of Arkansas, which showed that Dr. Vernon McDaniel, an associate of Dr. Charles Gomillion, made a survey regarding racial integration in 20 cities and towns in Arkansas, including Little Rock and Pine Bluff, and was paid $6,000.00 by the NAACP.

Hon. Oren Harris, who has been a Member of Congress for 18 years, testified that upon the request of Bruce Bennett, he secured from the House Un-American Activities Committee information concerning the officers and directors of the NAACP, and introduced it at the hearing. It reflects that practically all of the national officers and directors of the NAACP have been cited at least five, and up to 176 times as being affiliated with communist or communist front organizations.

From the testimony of the above witnesses and exhibits, we therefore find that the national and local officers and directors of the NAACP are extremely sympathetic with communist or communist front organizations.

(B) MANY ORGANIZATIONS WHICH HAVE BEEN CITED AS SUBVERSIVE OR WHICH HAVE BEEN INFILTRATED WITH COMMUNISTS AND COMMUNIST SYMPATHIZERS HAVE INTERLOCKING DIRECTORS AND OFFICIALS WITH THE NAACP AND OTHER ORGANIZATIONS WHICH HAVE BEEN ACTIVE IN ARKANSAS.

Dr. J. B. Matthews testified that he was Director of Research between the years of 1938 and 1945 for the Special Committee on Un-American Activities (Dies Committee) of the House of Representatives in Washington, D. C. Dr. Matthews called particular attention to the fact that the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., was not to be confused with the Southern Regional Educational Board, the latter a valid, highly ethical organization composed of 17 State government instrumentalities formed as the result of an educational compact.

Dr. Matthews testified that the Southern Conference on Human Welfare was an organization set up by the communists, and was the first major thrust of the communists in the South; this was succeeded by the Southern Conference Educational Fund, of which James A. Dombrowski is the executive director and is noted for his communistic activities. Dombrowski is also quite active in Highlander Folk School. L. C. Bates is on the board of directors of the Southern Conference Educational Fund at present, and at least 221 individuals associated with the Southern Conference Educational Fund have been cited for their connections with communists or communist activities. Aubrey Williams was president of this organization, and has been cited many times for his communist and communist front activities. Dr. Matthews further stated that many communists were officers of these organizations.

Dr. Matthews further testified that the following organizations have been infiltrated by communists and/or communist sympathizers: (1) The Southern Regional Council; (2) The Emergency Civil Liberties Committee; (3) various state councils on human relations; (4) Highlander Folk School; (5) The Southern Conference for Human Welfare; (6) The Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc.

The Southern Regional Council is sponsored and directed by some members who have been cited numerous times for belonging to organizations listed as subversive by either the House Un-American Activities Committee, Senate Internal Security Committee, or the Attorney General of the United States. The Arkansas Council on Human Relations is a branch of the Southern Regional Council, which latter organization has received several hundred thousand dollars from The Fund for the Republic as a grant; the Fund has been lavish in its contributions to communist and near communist organizations. Harry Ashmore is on the Board of Directors of the Fund for the Republic, and one of the three incorporators of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations. The Emergency Civil Liberties Committee is closely affiliated with the Southern Conference Educational Fund; Grace Lorch was given an honorarium by that Committee. Lee Lorch has been discharged from several universities for his alleged communist party affiliation, and has invoked the Fifth Amendment many times. At least 50 high officials and leaders of the Southern Regional Council have been affiliated in one capacity or another with the Southern Conference on Human Welfare and Southern Conference Educational Fund. Among those named were Daisy Bates of Little Rock, Arkansas, a member of the board of directors of the Southern Regional Council. One Clark Foreman, who was Henry Wallace's campaign manager, has been a member of the board of directors of the Southern Regional Council and Southern Conference Educational Fund, and has headed the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee. He has been identified as a member of the Communist Party in sworn testimony before a Committee of the Senate of the United States. M. Lafayette Harris has been on the board of directors of the Southern Regional Council and on the board of directors of the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

The Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tennessee, has been used for communist and communist front purposes for the past 25 years.

Dr. Matthews further testified that the Southern Conference Educational Fund has penetrated 94 white colleges and universities of the South. He defined the term "penetration" as meaning that these institutions had at least one employee who belonged to the Southern Conference Educational Fund. He further stated that the fact that a person belongs to only one subversive organization does not necessarily mean that such a person is a communist or pro-communist. He recited the method by which the Communist Party exploited individuals in the educational field; that these individuals became dupes of the party apparatus, their prestige thereafter being exploited by aiding in making the organization respectable. These dupes, wittingly or unwittingly, oft times are of far more value to the Communist Party than an avowed member of the Party. Whether they are pro-communistic is a matter of relevancy; the great damage they do to the United States lies in their clothing a communist-penetrated organization with a degree of respect it would not otherwise enjoy. In order for a communist front to operate, there must be members who are not communistic or pro-communistic in order for such organizations to operate with any degree of respect. He again emphasized that the mere fact that a university or college had one or more employees who belonged to these cited organizations did not mean that the institution had become communistic per se. He stated, however, that the Communist Party deemed it "penetration" of an institution if they could secure faculty or employee memberships in organizations which they, the communists, controlled either directly or indirectly. Dr. Matthews emphasized that this is no particular condemnation of a school or school authorities where it is evident an officer, faculty member or employee had joined a subversive organization; but condemnation should be visited where it is shown there is continued affiliation after exposure.

Herbert R. Byrd and Rusty Ralston, with a radio and television station respectively, testified that they had been actively engaged in gathering news for a number of years, and that when they recently called on the Little Rock Office of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, they asked Nat

Griswald, Executive Secretary of the Corporation, what its objectives and program are. They testified that Griswald refused to give them any information whatsoever, was evasive, and so far as they could learn, no one in the communications field in Arkansas has been able to learn anything at all about the Arkansas Council on Human Relations.

Therefore, it is apparent that the Southern Conference Educational Fund, successor of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare—which has been cited as a subversive organization—, the Southern Regional Council—which has been infiltrated with known communists and communist sympathizers—are of their very nature pro-communists. The Arkansas Council on Human Relations, child of the Southern Regional Council, necessarily follows the aims and goals of its parent organization. True, some of the individuals who belong to these organizations may be willing or unwilling dupes, but in most instances, either through ignorance or inclination, have remained members; consequently, they are not worthy of the public confidence and leadership.

4. THE GOALS, AIMS AND OPERATIONS OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY ARE MANIFESTED IN ORGANIZATIONS WHICH HAVE BEEN USED TO CREATE RACIAL UNREST IN ARKANSAS.

Manning Johnson testified that he is a former member of the Communist Party; he belonged to the Communist Party between 1930 and 1940, and reached the position of member of the executive committee of the Communist Party of the United States, which is the highest ranking committee of the American Communist Party. He testified that in 1928, the Communist Party Comintern of Moscow by resolution ordered the American Communist Party to use every means to cause racial unrest in the South, and laid down a program encompassing a concept of a "Black Republic" in the South. A group of cities in the South were designated by the Communist Party in 1932 as critical areas where the Party could more effectively create racial tension and strife. Among these cities were Little Rock and Pine Bluff, Arkansas. One of the aims of the Communist Party was to infiltrate and organize as many organizations as possible that are concerned with the Negro race; included among these was the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

He also testified that every organization and association supposedly organized for the purpose of benefiting the Negro, had, to some extent, been infiltrated by the Communist Party, or its sympathizers. These organizations included the NAACP. In some instances the Communist Party itself created the organization, and in other instances it merely infiltrated. Among other methods used to create racial unrest, the Communist Party adopted certain positions which it felt would create racial unrest in order to attract members of the Negro race, and to pressure other organizations with similar aims to adopt similar positions. An example of this was the position toward integration adopted by the Communist Party calling for immediate integration, and within an extremely short time the NAACP changes its position of "gradualism" to immediate integration. He attributed this to the fact that the NAACP had many communist sympathizers in its high ranks.

Some direct quotes from Manning Johnson's testimony are as follows:

> " . . . The NAACP and the Communist are responsible for the racial turmoil and strife. . . . I am saying this, as far as Little Rock is concerned the NAACP is backed by the Communist and set up this situation and they are using Little Rock as a place where they can make a test battle. . . . Not only Little Rock and Pine Bluff but a large section of Arkansas including Pine Bluff and Little Rock was described as areas of concentration. * * * The Reds are going to do all their devlish work in and through the NAACP.

In other words, the Reds let it be known all their energies and as much money as they can raise is going to the support of the NAACP as a vehicle to carry out their so-called National Liberation Program. . . . The leaders of the NAACP are quick to denounce anybody who dares to expose or investigate the Communist infiltration of the NAACP. Why? Because most of them have skeletons in their closets. Fearing exposure they yell Smear. There is a saying among Communist that the best defense is an offensive. That is attack the other fellow. The NAACP leaders are very adept in attacking others. When a reporter spoke to Daisy Bates about this hearing one of the first words she used was 'Smear'. . . . The NAACP because it has kept its skirts clean while wearing dirty underwear is a good front for the reds. It has a mass base among negroes. It operates like an arm of the federal government, it demands everything, gives nothing. It is an effective agitator, it stirs up hate, it throws negroes into fights that are ruinous in the long run. It demands equal rights while it shuns negro responsibility. Such an organization is made to order for the Reds. The Supreme Court and the NAACP have set the stage for a long period of race bitterness, hate, frustration. Already much progress in race relations has been wiped out. Trends is back to the dark days following reconstruction. Americans are taking side. The reds are shifting into high gear in the expectation that a spark by an extremist on either side may be the one that can start violent race conflicts all over the country. The number of northern politicians are walking in these muddy waters to flatter the negro votes in the north so as to get elected to office. There are others who are using the race issue to centralize more power in Washington thus laying the foundation for a dictatorship either of the left or right, depending on who gets control of the government. Indeed the NAACP, their red backers and supporters are taking the Negro on a ride. A ride to economic social and political ruin. Thanks again to the Supreme Court for freeing the red leaders, scuttling the Smith Act, on wiping out the state sedition acts, wrecking the entire internal security apparatus, making it impossible to deport red aliens and elevating the reds to a preferred status all in the name of preserving the bill of rights which the reds are pledged to destroy along with all free government. A check of all those who scream for the democratic rights of the reds will reveal that they are reds, fellow travelers, sympathizers, fronters, apologists, eggheads, fuzzy headed intellectuals, etc. They are the same people who back and support the NAACP. They are the same ones responsible for all the racial strife in our country. They are the modern day carpet baggers, who have no interest in the south and only pretend to have an interest in the negro so that they can use him. It is quite possible that the preservation of our Republic is being fought out in Arkansas because here is being challenged the excesses of federal power. . . . The NAACP backers are pressing the federal government to turn the F.B.I., our fine security agency into a gestapo to hound and arrest all dissenters except reds. The negro is but a mere pawn in the game. He will be the loser and the sufferer. Any victory he may win will be a pathetic one. White Americans will lose too because they will have lost their great heritage, the American Republic. . . . There was a time when the NAACP believed in gradualism but the line has changed and today the NAACP is marching right down the avenue that the communists have mapped out for them to take. . . . "

Hon. W. Guy Banister, former Special Agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation with 20 years service, testified that the Communist Party, as part of its operation procedure, is out to smear all investigating committees, including this Special Education Committee, plus the F.B.I., House Un-American Activities Committee, and the Senate Internal Security Committee. He stated that all of the witnesses at these hearings would be subject to smear. He stated that organizations listed as subversive always attempted to bring in people of good reputation and standing in the community, and used them as a front for the nefarious operation of the communist apparatus. It was his testimony that the Mississippi Council on Human Relations, the counterpart of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations—and both beholden to the Southern Regional Council—dissolved itself immediately after subversive hearings were held by the Louisiana Legislative Council. The objective of the communist conspiracy was world domination, by force, including the United States, and the destruction of our government. Mr. Banister recited the duties of a Special Agent for the F.B.I., and paid extremely high compliments to the Bureau and Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, its director. He quoted Mr. Hoover as saying: "To dismiss lightly the existence of subversion or to deal lightly with it is to commit national suicide." He recited the fact that the Communist Party exploits everything that is going on, if it can get into the organization. In answer to a question: "Is it your opinion that there has been some subversion in the difficulty we have had here in Little Rock, Arkansas, in the past few months?" Mr. Banister answered: "It is my opinion and there are certain indications it was started deliberately with these subversive influences in this part of the country." He stated that the communists create incidents, and then exploit them for their benefit; create unrest and ultimately divide and conquor; to create hate is the main thing. Mr. Banister stated that it was not surprising to him to learn that there was an organization operating under the name of "Arkansas Council on Human Relations." He stated there used to be a communist printing plant in Little Rock which was prepared to go underground "if some organization or some group like the Supreme Court (of the United States) didn't bail them out."

Mr. Banister outlined a smear campaign that would be leveled at the F.B.I., J. Edgar Hoover, and the various Congressional Committees that investigate subversion this year by the Fund for the Republic, Emergency Civil Liberties Union, and others. He stated that the main objective of the Southern Regional Council and its subsidiaries, the various state councils on human relations in the Southern States is "to engage in mischief" and "to create friction between the races", and "that communism thrives on friction between the races." Mr. Banister specifically testified:

> ". . . Such activities as the various communist fronts engage in and such organizations as the Fund for the Republic and other fronts have this large amount of money to give away and it is given away not without checking of course. It seems it is usually done to further some project that is set up adversely affecting the things we believe to be worth while in this country. . . ."

Mr. Banister testified that he is convinced that there has been subversion in the racial unrest we have experienced here in Arkansas.

It seems evident to this Committee that the Communist Party has used many organizations that cater to the Negro race in order to create racial strife and unrest. Other organizations that are not communist are forced to adopt the same position as the Communist Party by means of infiltration, or by pressure created by communists and communist sympathizers.

CONCLUSION

The basic question presented for determination by this Committee is: "Has there been subversion present in Arkansas which has encouraged racial unrest?"

It is a matter of common knowledge that communism thrives where strife, tension, turmoil and chaos is present. Arkansas became a State of the Union in 1836; peace, progress and tranquility marked the attitude of all our people for the next 122 years. This Committee has found that the incident which occurred at Little Rock on September 2, 1957, was not something that just happened overnight. It was planned, schemed, calculated, and had as its motiving factor the international communist conspiracy of world domination squarely behind the entire shocking episode.

The people of Arkansas are basically men of good will. Communism, heretofore, has always been something that happened elsewhere; but the record reflects that for a number of years an almost incredible number of communists, pro-communists, fellow travelers, dupes and those who make a career out of being duped, have flitted in and out of Arkansas, and while here, they sowed the seeds of dissension and discord.

The Committee has wondered who sent for Clarence Laws, discredited field representative of the NAACP and who was discharged from the Army for security reasons; who sent for Dr. Vernon McDaniel, protege of the notorious Gomillion who travels in harness with communists such as Aubrey Williams, Abner W. Berry, James A. Dombrowski; and who sent for Grace and Lee Lorch, identified communists; and who paid Clarence Laws for his work in Arkansas. In answering these questions, the Committee learned which individuals actively worked for a political party whose candidate would not sign a non-communist affidavit; that known communists—Farmer and Pushkarsky—worked in such close accord with the candidate and the above individuals that it makes incredible a claim of innocence. One of these individuals was the State President of the NAACP, and her husband, who has been a national director of an organization which is a successor to an organization listed as subversive for a number of years.

To answer these questions one need merely read the transcript of the sworn testimony produced in public at the three-day hearing. The testimony under oath and the documentary evidence introduced in connection therewith, makes it apparent that there has been and now is subversion present in the racial unrest in our State.

The Committee is convinced that the racial unrest in Arkansas was deliberately planned by the Communist Party as part of the directive handed down by Moscow in 1928. The communist apparatus has used many organizations in our State. Some of them have been found subversive by appropriate governmental instrumentalities; others include in their officers and directors those individuals who have been cited as aiding and supporting communist or communist front organizations. We find it noteworthy that these organizations, infiltrated with communists and pro-communists, have actively supported racial unrest in Arkansas. They tried, and were successful, in making Little Rock a world-wide incident. From the evidence introduced at the hearings it is quite apparent, when once perceiving the goals and operations of the Communist Party, that the Little Rock incident was certainly another link in its chain of created incidents designed for its benefit alone, which was mapped out four decades ago.

The Committee further finds—based on credible evidence from the files of the House Un-American Activities Committee, the United States Attorney General's Subversive List, the Senate Internal Security Sub-Committee and others—that many of the top officers of the national NAACP have been cited numerous times for aiding and abetting communist or communist front organizations. These top officials have sent individuals of very questionable loyalty to our government to Arkansas as their paid employees. In turn they met with local officials of the NAACP and planned the events which culminated in the so-called Little Rock incident. We believe that the NAACP is and has been sympathetic toward communist causes, and that the goal of the communist is not to help the Negro as such, but merely to use him. In that desire to use the Negro, we find that the communists have always tried to infiltrate organizations attractive to the Negro race.

The Committee feels that it would be amiss of its duty should it not report its findings in regard to various corporations that worked in Arkansas. We have been unable to learn of any public or private good that the Arkansas Council on Human Relations has ever rendered, and the same may be said of the Southern Regional Council. Both of these organizations have been subsidized by the Fund for the Republic. The NAACP appears to have been heavily infiltrated with subversives and, wittingly or unwittingly, is now a captive of the communist apparatus. The Fund for the Republic, with Harry Ashmore of Arkansas on the national board of directors, has given considerable money to the NAACP. It has also given about one-half million dollars to the Southern Regional Council—with Daisy Bates on the board of directors, who in turn channeled part of the money to the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, which had the same Ashmore and Bates as incorporators. A former F.B.I. agent of 20 years service, when questioned at the hearings about the activities of these three organizations, summed up his disgust at their nefarious schemes by simply answering, "to create mischief."

The Committee has become aghast at the viciousness with which some segments of the press have attacked the purposes of the hearings. We feel that the people of the world are entitled to know that a peaceful people have been torn asunder by the communist conspiracy. But some members of the press seem determined to becloud the issue, smear the purposes of the hearings, and reach any conclusion other than the fact that there was subversion present in our difficulties here. This the Committee deplores.

It is the conclusion of this Committee that from the evidence presented before it, and from the findings of fact which this Committee has made, that subversion was present in the racial unrest in our State. We further conclude that had it not been for the communists, pro-communists, fellow travelers and dupes—along with the organizations above listed—that the harmony and peace existent between the races for over 100 years would not have been interrupted. We pray for a restoration of that peace and harmony so that all the people of Arkansas may march forward to a more abundant and proud life under our Creator, Almighty God.

College Heads Discount Slap From Witness

Comments by Arkansas college officials and faculty members who were listed by J. B. Matthews in connection with the Southern Conference Educational Fund:

★ John T. Caldwell, president of the University of Arkansas—I repudiate unequivocally the imputation that the University of Arkansas has been penetrated by Communists and express the fullest confidence in the members of our faculty. I am apalled that a discredited professional witness should be invited into the state to smear its institutions and citizens. This so-called expert witness was fired by a Uinted States Senate committee, largely because of his smear on the Protestant clergy of the nation.

★ Lawrence A. Davis, president of A M and N College at Pine Bluff—I don't know whether any of our staff is affiliated with the Fund. I know very little about it. If I knew it was a Communist organization or a Communist-dominated organization I would object to any of my staff being members of it. I have no personal evidence that it is. The college is in no way associated with Communist activities. It is devoted to and stands for the highest principles of democracy. I'm surprised that we would be involved in the hearing in the first place. The implications are unfortunate and regrettable and can damage the good work that has been done by the College.

★ M. Lafayette Harris, president of Philander Smith College at Little Rock—The college has not been penetrated (by any Communist group). We have been rather zealous on that point. I do not know if any of my faculty and staff are members of the Fund. Inasmuch as they don't attend any meetings or participate actively, they may have gotten snagged by some sort of circular or letter asking for funds. And they may have thought they were helping some worthy cause and sent a check — I'm sure a small one. We are a Christian College. Communism and Christianity are at opposite polls as we see it.

★ Winslow S. Drummond, president of the College of the Ozarks at Clarksville — I have no comment because I don't even know what it (the Fund) is. It's a new thing to me.

★ Stephen Paul Spottswood, administrator of Walters Institute at Warren—There is no point in commenting on that type of accusation. I don't give very much credence to the investigation as such. If there was something definitive and of a nature that had a substantial basis * * * it would be worthy of comment. If I was called to testify, I certainly would have an awful lot to say.

Rev. Oscar Allan Rogers Jr., president of Arkansas Baptist College at Little Rock, could not be reached.

★ J. R. Booker, attorney for Arkansas Baptist College at Little Rock — Most certainly we have no evidence of Communism in Arkansas Baptist College and we deny fully and completely the statement made by the professional and paid witness. We expect to discuss the matter further at our next Board meeting in January.

Booker made the statement on behalf of Dr. Fred T. Guy, president of the Consolidated Baptist Convention (Negro) of Arkansas, and Rev. Roland Smith, chairman of the Board of Trustees of Arkansas Baptist College, both of whom were out of town.

Organizations Identified

The organizations mentioned by J. B. Matthews in his testimony:

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE FOR HUMAN WELFARE

(Said by Bruce Bennett to have been cited as subversive).

Organized in 1938. Disbanded about 1946.

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE EDUCATIONAL FUND

(Said by Matthews to have been cited as subversive).

822 Perdido Street, New Orleans. President, Aubrey W. Williams of Montgomery, Ala., publisher of the Southern Farm and Home Journal. Executive secretary, James A. Dombrowski of New Orleans. Organized in 1946.

Purpose is "through education, to eliminate all forms of segregation and discrimination based on race, religion or national origin."

SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL

63 Auburn Avenue, Atlanta, Ga. President, James McBride Dabbs of Sumter County, S. C. Executive director, Harold Fleming. Organized in 1945 as successor to the Southwide Commission on Inter-racial Co-operation, founded in the 1920s. It is an inter-racial group of civic and religious leaders in 13 southern states. The Council's aim is "Equal opportunity for all the South's people."

ARKANSAS COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

1220 West Capitol Avenue President, Mrs. Kyle Engler of Fayetteville. Executive director N. R. Griswold. Organized in 1955 as the Arkansas affiliate of the Southern Regional Council. It receives some money from the Southern Regional Council but, says Griswold, is not controlled by the Regional Council. Its incorporation papers call it a non-profit, non-political, non-denominational organization with the aim of improving economic, civic and racial conditions in the state through "research and action."

Says He Gave to Fund

Albert Howard Carter, a Ph.D. professor of English at the University since 1947, said he was a member of the Southern Conference Education Fund and that he sent money to it "once in a while" but got nothing out of it.

The Fund's objective, he said, is "simply to forward desegregation" but he was not aware that it was on any list of allegedly subversive organizations.

T. W. Coggs, former president of Arkansas Baptist College, said he was not a member of the Southern Conference Educational Fund and didn't recall ever having been a member or contributing to the Fund.

Coggs said he was surprised at Matthews' accusations. Coggs, 71, of 1523 Bishop Street, was president of the College for 18 years until May 31, 1955. He now is executive secretary of the Arkansas (Negro) Teachers Association.

Other alleged Fund members could not be reached. Horace Evans of Arkansas A M and N College at Pine Bluff was listed on a College directory as being "on leave of absence."

John R. Bross, Martha G. Boswell, H. W. Kloepfer and Buckley Rudd, all said to be on the faculty of the College of the Ozarks at Clarksville, were not listed in the Clarksville telephone directory and the College telephone number went unanswered.

Franz Adler, another University faculty member mentioned at the hearing, no longer lives at the address listed in the Fayetteville directory for him and he, too, could not be located.

Charges Draw Denials, Blasts

Several persons were linked at yesterday's hearing with either subversion or subversion organizations. Here are the persons, the accusations against them and their comments:

Clarence A. Laws of New Orleans, field secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, charged by Attorney General Bruce Bennett as having been discharged from the Army Reserve as a security risk—"I flatly refute the allegation made by Mr. Bennett. I was honorably discharged." (Laws also said he would mail to Little Rock newspapers a copy of his discharge papers.)

"By failing to make provisions for people to testify who might have something to say for integration and to say something to defend their own good name these persons [who are conducting the hearing are using the very technique that the Communists use to discredit anyone with whom they disagree," Laws added. "The decent citizens will not be mis-led by tactics employed in what is clearly a smear campaign."

Dr. Lee Lorch, a former mathematics professor at Philander Smith College at Little Rock, now a visiting lecturer at Wesleyan University at Middletown, Ct., whose wife J. B. Matthews said had been identified as a Communist and whose record Matthews said stacked up with hers — Dr. Lorch did not deny the charges. Instead, he issued a 400-word statement blasting the hearings and the methods used in conducting it, Bennett, Matthews and Governor Faubus.

Dr. Katharine Dodd, former professor of pediatrics at the University Medical School and now professor of pediatrics at the University of Louisville, who was identified by Matthews as a member of the Board of the Southern Conference Educational Fund and a founder of the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee of New York City, both of which Matthews said were subversive groups — "I'm not going to talk about this sort of thing on the telephone." She added that she had been on the Educational Fund Board about three or four years but that if she was one of the founders of the Civil Liberties Committee, she didn't know it.

M. Lafayette Harris, president of Philander Smith College at Little Rock, who Matthews said was a member of the Southern Conference Educational Fund and the Southern Regional Council and whose "prestige has been exploited by the Communists": "I am a member of the Southern Regional Council. I was for a year a member of the Fund and resigned simply because it was beginning to get a bit involved in political issues. I am definitely anti-Communist. I have never knowingly lended myself to anything that had any taint of Communism about it."

N. R. Some Background On A Professional Witness

By Elizabeth Carpenter

Gazette Washington Bureau
1322 National Press Building

As a timely public service, we are reprinting this April 28, 1958, column on J. B. Matthews, who testified yesterday before the special legislative committee investigating charges of Communist influence in Arkansas.

In his recent surprise charge that "outside forces" — possibly Communist - inspired — helped create the Little Rock integration crisis, Governor Faubus relied heavily on a source whose veracity has been challenged officially by:

1. Senator John L. McClellan of Arkansas.

2. Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia.

3. President Eisenhower.

4. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish clergymen.

It was an article by the man in question, J. B. Matthews, that Mr. Faubus cited in support of his accusation, made in a speech to the Southwest Little Rock Kiwanis Club April 10.

The governor quoted an article by Matthews in the Easter 1958 issue of "Christian Crusade" to the effect that Lee Lorch, white professor of mathematics at Philander Smith College, and his wife, Mrs. Grace Lorch, "have been identified as members of the Communist Party." Mr. Faubus said the Lorches "were active behind the scenes and then openly in the Little Rock affair."

The governor's introduction of the "Communist issue" in the Little Rock controversy surprised some political observers, since the same issue was raised against Mr. Faubus in the 1954 gubernatorial campaign. The perplexity may have been greater among those who knew that it was Matthews who directed an investigation of Communist activities practically every government intelligence agency."

But the matter came to a crux on the afternoon of July 9 when the White House received a telegram signed by a priest, a rabbi, and a Presbyterian minister, speaking for the National Conference of Christians and Jews. The telegram called Matthews' attack on the Protestant ministry "unjustified and deplorable."

President Eisenhower, who had been reluctant to be drawn into the battle of the McCarthy era, entered this one unhesitatingly, allying himself with those taking strong issue against the Matthews' article.

The president made public his reply which stated he "fully agreed" with the three clergymen that the attack on the Protestant clergy "is unjustified and deplorable."

The president went on to say, "If there be any American among us, whatever his calling, guilty of treasonous action against the state, let him legally and properly be convicted and punished. This applies to every person, lay or clergy."

As the telegrams were being made public at the White House, McCarthy "very reluctantly" accepted the resignation of Matthews.

The following morning, the Wisconsin senator tried to save face by getting the Republican majority of the committee to vote to give him complete power to hire and fire all staff employes.

It was a straight party - line vote, 4-3, and shortly afterwards, the three Democratic members of the committee, after obtaining the full backing of the Senate Democratic leadership, resigned in bloc.

Senator McClellan told the press at the time, "This committee's work is so sensitive and so delicate that it should try to work in complete harmony. Any

Mr. Faubus has admitted reluctantly that he attended the Communist - tainted college, at least for a few days as a freshman in the '30s.

Who, then, is J. B. Matthews? This is a question which Washington asked back in the summer of 1953 when Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep., Wis.) then chairman of the Senate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee, hired Matthews as staff director and found himself in the middle of one of the hottest controversies that ever broiled during the controversial heyday of the Wisconsin senator.

Actually, Matthews was not new on the scene in 1953. Between 1938 and 1945, he was director of research for the House Committee on Un-American Activities. And it was under his direction during those years that the Committee investigated Commonwealth.

But it wasn't his Commonwealth College probe that put Matthews' name in headlines.

It was, an article which he wrote for the American Mercury Magazine's July 1953 issue entitled, "Reds and Our Churches," the article opened with this sentence: "The largest single group supporting the Communist apparatus in the United States today is composed of Protestant clergymen."

The article went on to charge that the Communist Party had "enlisted the support" of "at least 7,000 Protestant clergymen" as "party members, fellow travelers, espionage agents, party-line adherents and unwitting dupes" during the last seventeen years.

McCarthy offered him the $11,000-a-year job on his committee almost simultaneously with the publication of the attack on the Protestant clergy.

The attack by Matthews brought a swift rebuttal from the three Democratic members of the committee — McClellan, Stuart Symington of Missouri, and Henry M. Jackson of Washington and what amounted to a demand for Matthews' ouster.

Jointly, McClellan, Symington, and Jackson called the Matthews article a "shocking and unwarrantable attack against the American clergy" which, they said, "cannot be supported by the facts." They requested a committee meeting to call for "appropriate action."

Their attack on Matthews was joined by the leaders of Southern conservatives. Democratic Senator Byrd of Virginia, who issued a statement declaring that Matthews "should give names and facts to sustain his charge or stand convicted as a cheap demagogue willing to blacken the character of his fellow Americans for his own notoriety and personal gain."

McCarthy defended his aide, calling him "an outstanding authority" on subversion who had been a "constant consultant to strong issue against the Matthews' article.

The president made public his reply which stated he "fully agreed" with the three clergymen that the attack on the Protestant clergy "is unjustified and deplorable."

The president went on to say, "If there be any American among us, whatever his calling, guilty of treasonous action against the state, let him legally and properly be convicted and punished. This applies to every person, lay or clergy."

Senator McClellan told the press at the time, "This committee's work is so sensitive and so delicate that it should try to work in complete harmony. Any member of the staff who might be objectionable to any member on any reasonable grounds should be subject to a discharge by a majority of the committee."

Not until the following January when Congress reconvened and Senator McCarthy surrendered his "one-man" rule, with the repeal of the Committee regulation allowing him to hire and fire employes, did the three Democrats return.

Such was the Matthews epoch in Washington. Since then, he has taken his desk set inscribed with the words, "To J. B. Matthews, a Star-Spangled American from one of his pupils and admirers, Joe McCarthy" to New York where he is associated with the Hearst publications and still writes occasional articles, such as the one recently quoted by Governor Faubus.

About three months after his forced resignation from the McCarthy Committee, Matthews made a conspicuous appearance in Arkansas. Addressing a Freedom Forum session at Harding College of Searcy October 23, 1953, Matthews discussed in more qualified terms his charges against the Protestant clergy and contended that his article and earlier remarks on the subject had been exaggerated by the press.

Expanding into other fields, Matthews said he had information that American aircraft parts were being smuggled to Russia. He quoted a "high undisclosed source" as saying a Russian MIG airplane surrendered by a North Korean pilot to United Nations Forces was made "largely of American parts." Military leaders "didn't dare bring the plane to this country" because they were afraid to let the American people know" this secret, he added.

The Air Force immediately denied Matthews' charge. Within weeks the plane had been brought to the United States and put on public display at Air Force bases throughout the country.

Reds, Integration Linked By Ex-aide to McCarthy

By ROY REED
Of the Gazette Staff

J. B. Matthews of New York, an aging associate of the late Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, came to Arkansas yesterday as a paid witness in a legislative hearing to help piece together more links in an alleged chain between racial integration and communism.

When he had finished testifying he had spoken of a "bridge" between Southern liberals and communism, further connections between the L. C. Bateses of Little Rock and "Communist" organizations, and a much-publicized gesture of sympathy by Mrs. Grace Lorch as "a Communist act."

He also had thrown out scores of names that he tied to Communist causes, including the names of 10 persons connected with five Arkansas colleges.

The names of several Little Rock residents were brought into the hearings in various ways.

Attorney General Bruce Bennett, the chief questioner, offered evidence of a "security" discharge from the Army Reserve as a further link between the international Communist conspiracy and school integration in Arkansas.

Hearing Extension Hinted

Two prominent members of the investigating group, the Special Education Committee of the Arkansas Legislative Council, hinted that more hearings may be held before the 1959 General Assembly convenes. Representative Paul Van Dalsem of Perry County, Committee chairman, said that if the Committee wanted to there may be further hearings to "develop local conditions." Senator Charles F. (Rip) Smith of West Memphis, vice chairman, also told newsmen that the hearings might pick up again before the legislative session.

The hearings today, which may be the last of the current series, are expected to feature testimony on the disturbance at Central High School in September 1957. Two newsmen who were on the scene, Herbert R. (Herbie) Byrd, news director for radio station KLVC, and C. H. (Rusty) Ralston, news photographer for KARK-TV, will testify today, Bennett said.

Matthews, who was fired from the McCarthy committee a few years ago at the insistence of Senator John L. McClellan (Dem., Ark.) and others who didn't trust him, was sprung as a surprise witness. He wove a delicate chain of association to back up his contention that the Communist movement had penetrated into Arkansas institutions, and thence into the integration situation.

Sees Red Links in Dixie

First, he said he would establish a link between a defunct and now largely discredited organization called the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and another highly respected organization called the Southern Regional Council.

He said the Southern Conference for Human Welfare had been succeeded in 1948 by a third group known as the Southern Conference Education Fund. Both of these, according to Bennett, have been cited as subversive, the first by the United States Attorney General and the

Beef-up Voted For Defenses In NATO Area

Allies Authorize More Missiles, Men and Planes

Paris, Dec. 17 (AP).—The North Atlantic Treaty Organization voted today to beef up its defenses with more missiles, planes and divisions.

The alliance took the decision in a formal resolution to do its best to bring the defense forces up to the minimum figure declared necessary by Gen. Lauris Norstad, supreme allied commander in Europe.

But the goals for increased defensive might were listed in the resolution as objectives. And the history of NATO is that objectives are usually ahead of achievements.

The annual military review estimated there was no reduction in the extent of the Russian war machine nor any reduction in its threat. The Russians were pictured as able to pour 1,000,000 troops quickly into central Europe in any showdown.

The threat itself was brought home to the allies by the Russian warning last month that by June West Berlin would be declared a free city and its supply channels surrendered to Communist East German control.

To Reject Red Demand

An answer to this threat was being drafted by experts of France, Britain, West Germany and the United States. There was no expectation that a completed draft will be ready for discussion by the NATO meeting.

The note, a short one, will reject the Russian demand that West Berlin be made an unarmed free city but will express a willingness to negotiate on East-West tensions, informed sources said.

But the four powers will say they refuse to negotiate under an ultimatum. They will ask if the June deadline set by the Soviet Union is an ultimatum.

The day's developments in the NATO foreign ministers' conference were few except for Norstad's report—a sober statement that his 17 combat divisions were barely half what he insists is a bare minimum.

second by the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee.

The successor organization has many of the same officers and members as the Southern Regional Council, Matthews said. He said 50 persons in the Southern Regional Council either were in the Southern Conference Educational Fund or had been members of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

The clincher is that the Southern Regional Council has affiliates in each Southern state. In Arkansas it is the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, Matthews pointed out.

Bennett Calls Names

After Matthews left the stand Bennett introduced documents listing the names of the officers, Board members and staff of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations. Among those mentioned specifically by Bennett were Fred K. Darragh Jr., former president; Rev. C. C. Walker and Harry S. Ashmore, executive editor of the Gazette, vice chairmen; Christopher C. Mercer Jr., one of the incorporators, and Nat R. Griswold, executive director.

Ashmore was mentioned earlier by Matthews as a member of the Board of Directors of the Fund for the Republic, an organization Matthews claimed had been "cut off" from its parent group, the Ford Foundation. The Fund for the Republic, Matthews said, had given $445,000 to the Southern Regional Council (a group that Matthews conceded had not been cited as subversive).

With Bennett drawing him out, Matthews said this money was spent on salaries and to build up the state affiliates.

Fires at NAACP

Matthews brought in the names of L. C. Bates, publisher of the State Press, a Negro weekly, and his wife, state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the organization most heavily backing integration in the South. Matthews said Bates had been a member of the Board of the Southern Conference Educational Fund and that Mrs. Bates had been a member of the Board of the Southern Regional Council.

Bennett had brought in witnesses at the first day's hearings Tuesday to testify that the Bateses had been connected—in a picture and at an interracial breakfast—with two former Arkansas residents identified as "known Communists." The two were identified as Leonard Farmer, now of Connecticut, and Ladislav Pushkarsky, now in Poland.

Matthews climaxed his argument of Red infiltration by asserting that the Southern Conference Educational Fund seemed to serve chiefly as "a bridge between the Communist Party and misguided Southern liberals."

Matthews said there was a connection also between the Southern Conference Educational Fund and a group in New York called the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, which he said was subversive.

That brought out another prominent name from Arkansas, Dr. Katharine Dodd. Dr. Dodd once taught at the University of Arkansas School of Medicine and now teaches at Louisville University at Louisville, Ky. Matthews said she was a member of the Board of the Southern Conference Educational Fund and the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee.

Under questioning by Bennett, Matthews said the racial unrest in the South had been planned as early as 1928 by the Communist International. He backed up a repeated assertion by Bennett that the Communists intended to set up a "Black Republic" in the South where the Negroes would rise up and take the land away from the white landlords.

The "Black Republic" was a strong theme in similar Communist hearings last year in Louisiana. Much of the information presented in the Arkansas hearings has come up in hearings in other states.

The Arkansas educators listed by Matthews as members of the Southern Conference Educational Fund were Albert Howard Carter and Franz Adler of the University of Arkansas; John R. Bross, Martha G. Boswell, H. W. Kloepfer and Buckley Rudd of the College of the Ozarks; Horace Evans of AM and N College of Pine Bluff; M. Lafayette Harris, president of Philander Smith College of Little Rock; T. W. Coggs, listed by Matthews as president of Arkansas Baptist College of Little Rock, although Rev. Oscar Allan Rogers Jr. now is president, and Stephen Paul Spottswood, administrator of Walters Institute at Warren.

(An official of Arkansas Baptist College said last night that Coggs left the College three years ago after serving 18 years as president. Coggs is now executive secretary of the Arkansas [Negro] Teachers Association.)

Matthews read the names of 94 white colleges and 51 Negro colleges which he said had been "penetrated" by the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

Recalls CHS Incident

Matthews resurrected an incident at Central High which drew worldwide publicity in September, 1957. That was the protection and help offered one of the nine Negro students caught in the mob, Elizabeth Eckford, by Mrs. Grace Lorch.

Matthews called this "a Communist act" and said Mrs. Lorch had acted on instructions from "her Communist masters." He berated the New York Times for its "mawkish sentimentality" in an editorial on the incident.

Matthews said Mrs. Lorch had "been identified as a Communist" and that her husband, Dr. Lee Lorch, had "a Communist record that stacks up with his wife's."

The Lorches moved from Little Rock to Middletown, Ct., earlier this year. He is a visiting teacher at Wesleyan University there for the 1958-59 year.

Bennett said during a recess that Matthews, who is 63, would be paid. But for "his research, not his testimony," Bennett said. He wouldn't say how much. He referred reporters to the auditor's office. A voucher for $475 was issued Friday in Matthews' name.

Bennett took the stand early yesterday to present a copy of a letter from Brig. Gen. C. J. Hauck Jr., chief of legislative liaison of the Army Reserve to Representative F. Edward Herbert (Dem., La.). The letter said Maj. Clarence A. Laws had been discharged from the Army Reserve as a security risk. It listed several purported Communist connections that Laws had.

Laws is field secretary for the NAACP in the five-state Southwest region, including Arkansas.

Performance Delayed

The hearing was delayed 30 minutes after lunch when a movie projector failed to operate. The projector was repaired in about five minutes, but meanwhile KATV, which is televising the hearings, had begun a 30-minute network program. So Bennett held up the proceedings until 2 p. m. when the TV program ended.

He showed a short film taken September 2, 1957, at the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn. He said the movie was taken during a meeting "of Communists and Communist sympathizers" there. He and Matthews pointed out several persons in the film whom they had connected previously with left-wing organizations.

The main value of the film appeared to be emotional. It showed white girls in the company of Negro men.

The hearings, Bennett has said, are to prove that Communists are behind the racial unrest that brought on the disturbance at Central High School last year. The Arkansas Legislative Council instructed the Special Education Committee, made up of the chairmen of all the Council's standing committees, to study racial unrest and report to the 1959 General Assembly.

Vice Chairman Smith continued in the chairman's seat yesterday while Chairman Van Dalsem did nothing. Actually, Bennett held most of the spotlight when Matthews was not in it.

The same was true Tuesday when the Committee heard testimony from Representative Oren Harris of El Dorado, former Lieutenant Governor J. L. Shaver of Wynne, Secretary C. G. Hall, Pulaski Chancellor Guy E. Williams and Robert E. Diles, a referee for the state Workmen's Compensation Commission.

These first day witnesses laid the groundwork for the rest of the investigation.

KATV Not Sure on Question Of Time to Answer Probers

Ark. Gazette

KATV telecast every word of the Legislative Council committee's hearings on alleged subversion in Arkansas, but whether the individuals and organizations mentioned in the testimony have a right to equal television time for a reply is in question.

John H. Fugate, general manager of the Channel 7 station, said yesterday that nobody had asked for equal time so far. And that if any request came it would be passed on to the station's lawyers. He didn't know whether the station would give, or was obligated to give, equal time.

Fugate said under Federal Communications Commission rules the station was required to grant equal time under certain conditions. He said the station's lawyers were the best judges of that.

As to whether the committee itself would give anybody a chance to a make a public reply, that is yet to be decided also.

Chairman Paul Van Dalsem said that anybody who wanted to make such a reply before the Committee, would have to submit it under oath in advance and that then the Committee would decide about a public presentation of it.

Telecasts Praised

Fugate said the telecast earned the station considerable praise. KATV telecast the three days of hearings at its own expense as a public service.

The station, he added, received a few complaints from housewives disappointed because network programs were suspended.

"We had a lot less of these complaints than we had anticipated," Fugate said.

The station made no effort to try to determine the audience the telecast had.

The Red Threat In Arkansas

Ark. Gazette 12/19/58

It now appears that the real backbone of Attorney General Bruce Bennett's educational "expose" of Communist influence in Arkansas was the testimony of J. B. Matthews, a professional witness whose competence has been attacked by Senator John L. McClellan, among others on a long list of conservative public officials.

Mr. Matthew's allegations were old hat without any significant exception — all long since spread across the record of similar hearings in Louisiana and other Southern states, and most challenged or discredited when they were substantial enough to be subjected to test.

For this educational experience the people of Arkansas have now paid Mr. Matthews $475 in public funds, and Mr. Bennett has indicated that there will be further payment, although he has declined to reveal how much.

This shabby performance strikes us as more an occasion for sadness than for outrage. It is a tragic sight to see the reputations of various public and private citizens smeared by innuendo under a procedure which denies them the elemental right to face their accusers or even refute the charges against them.

Beyond this there is the phony character of the whole undertaking, with its unmistakable odor of politics. If Mr. Bennett is in fact persuaded that there is a widespread Communist conspiracy in Arkansas he should call before his Committee those who are in position to testify directly to the point. This he has not done and by his own definition does not plan to do, since he limits himself to those he calls "friendly witnesses."

Consider, for example, the case of Commonwealth College, the only officially certified Communist institution that has ever existed in Arkansas. If there was any point at all in picking over the bones of that defunct institution, it is obvious that the Committee should have invited or subpoenaed witnesses who are in position to testify of their own knowledge about what went on there. One such was present in the statehouse when the hearing opened — Governor Orval Faubus, who has admitted that he attended the College briefly and who has lately taken to referring publicly to his experience there as a manifest of his own credentials as an expert on subversion. Yet the Committee devoted more than half a day to Commonwealth without a single reference to Mr. Faubus—and consumed the time by droning into the record the findings of an earlier investigation, all dealing with persons long departed from the state and all repeatedly publicized over the years.

What this proved was that back in the depression-ridden '30s the president of the College said that he thought the plantation system in Arkansas should be destroyed. Well, the plantation system is still there—changed only by the non-Communist revolution brought on by tractors, cotton-pickers and chemicals.

So it went with other lengthy testimony concerning the 1948 period and Henry Wallace's short-lived Progressive Party. The Progressives, as Mr. Wallace has since conceded, were pretty much taken over by the Communists—which was well known at the time and probably explains why the splinter party suffered such an ignominious fate in Arkansas. The total vote in that campaign: Truman 149,659; Dewey 50,959; Thurmond 40,068; Wallace 751.

The scattered, inconclusive testimony concerning later events and persons directly connected with the Little Rock school troubles has not so far brought out anything that was not commonly known and generally publicized. And in that regard Mr. Bennett might undertake to answer this simple question:

If there was in fact a Communist conspiracy involved in the integration controversy at Central High School, would not the FBI, which sent scores of agents here to investigate every aspect of the case, have done something about it?

12/19/58 ARK.

To the Editor of the Gazette:

The so called hearings now being telecast from the state Capitol, will ultimately destroy the political opportunity and moral influence of the officials sponsoring them. The people over the state will in time resent this effort to fill their minds with deliberate distortions and positive falsehoods. One sympathizes with officers who begin to doubt the security of their hold on the confidence of their voting constituency, but honorable citizens demand to be treated as intelligent and worthy of trust.

It could be shown in the case of many, if not all, of the organizations thus far listed during the floodlight hearings that the effort is to create a false impression rather than present the truth. Otherwise, why not preserve a basic right in our democracy by letting the accused face his accusers? Our country has tried to make that a basic protection, remembering that Sir Walter Raleigh went to his death pleading to know who accused him of being disloyal. I shall take only one example.

The Emergency Peace Campaign of the '30s was characterized in these hearings as a Communist conspiracy. It happens that I was one of the men who met at Buck Hill Falls in Pennsylvania to see what could be done to arouse America to the fact that Europe was again drifting toward war. Our hope was that the United States would use her influence to halt the drift and prevent the bloody tragedy which soon befell the world.

This Emergency Peace Campaign had no more connection with Communism than it had with outer space. The general chairman and principal speaker for the campaign was Admiral Byrd, as loyal an American as ever graced a uniform. If the sponsors of these hearings really care to give the people the truth about this peace effort, let them invite the Honorable O. K. Armstrong, former congressman from Missouri, down to testify. He was Admiral Byrd's publicity secretary as the distinguished admiral spoke here and there across America. Mr. Armstrong can tell the committee what the famous officer said and what was his purpose. [Mr. Armstrong also accompanied General MacArthur on his 1951 "Return" to Little Rock.] I might add also that I solicited funds for the campaign from churches and individuals here in Little Rock. I also helped to employ a brilliant young minister from Fayetteville who had shortly returned from graduate study in Berlin. I had heard him address the Little Rock Rotary Club and shared his observations regarding what was happening in Germany under Hitler. We employed this young man, bought him a used car off a lot in Little Rock, and asked him to visit Arkansas colleges and explain to college young people Europe's drift toward war and the need that America try to check the drift rather than be sucked into it. This man's name was brought blurringly into the hearings on Wednesday. He is Dr. John Thompson, Dean of the Chapel at the University of Chicago, and one of the finest and ablest Presbyterian ministers of our time.

One more paragraph. I spent many years in this city trying to help young people and teachers by giving courses at the Little Rock Junior College and for the Extension Service of the University of Arkansas. I can not sit idly by and fail to protest when blatant untruths are broadcast to the community. I must be true to the young people and teachers whom I have had in classes. I believe in democracy, that the people will make the right decisions and do the right thing if they are told the truth. Those who spread untruths in a democracy undercut the foundation of our society and the institutions of government through which we seek security and freedom.

Bennett Demands Inter-racial Council Open Up or Disband

By ROY REED
Of the Gazette Staff

The Special Education Committee of the Arkansas Legislative Council finished a three-day Communist investigation yesterday with the legislative leaders apparently confident they had proved that communism was behind integration and racial unrest in Arkansas.

Attorney General Bruce Bennett, chief questioner for the hearings, wound up his part by calling on an inter-racial Arkansas organization to "disband or tell what they are doing." He threatened to subpoena the records of the group, the Arkansas Council on Human Relations.

Witnesses on the last day were Manning Johnson of New York, a Negro former Communist who has testified at several Red hearings; W. Guy Banister of New Orleans, private investigator and former FBI agent; C. H. (Rusty) Ralston, news photographer for KARK-TV, and Herbert R. (Herbie) Byrd, news director for radio station KVLC.

(Related Pictures and Articles on Pages 1B, 2B.)

Johnson and Banister continued to weave an intricate pattern of associations in an effort to show that Communists had infiltrated Southern institutions as part of their move toward world domination. Other witnesses had done the same the first two days.

Byrd and Ralston told of being tricked by a phony telephone call into trying to cover a meeting of the Board of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations.

The gist of this phase of the hearing was that Bennett, Byrd and Ralston had been unable to learn much about the Council, which led Bennett to observe that the organization was trying to keep its operation under cover.

Hint of More Hearings

The Committee went into executive (closed) session at the end of the day and came out hinting at a possibility of more hearings before the 1959 General Assembly convenes.

Representative Paul Van Dalsem of Perry County, committee chairman, said there might be "another phase" but said that was up to the full Committee. Apparently the decision will be made after the testimony from these hearings has been summarized for Committee study.

Van Dalsem said the investigation had "definitely succeeded" in proving Communist infiltration in Arkansas.

Senator Charles F. (Rip) Smith of West Memphis, Committee vice chairman, said "I'm convinced" that the Communist Party was behind racial unrest in the state.

Plan for 'Black Republic'

Johnson, 50, who said he quit the Communist Party in disillusion in 1940 after 10 years of membership, testified that the Russian Communists planned to establish a "black republic" in the American South after a violent revolution. This plan was conceived about 1930," he said, and still is a goal of the Communists.

The idea was to provoke the Negroes to overthrow the landlords and take over the land and the government in the South, Johnson said.

The Southern Tenant Farmers Union, which once had a large membership among East Arkansas sharecroppers, was part of

The Council on Human Relations was new to them.

that plan, Johnson said. The Union was formed during the 1930s.

On the Little Rock integration crisis, Johnson took a view not heard much among Negro leaders. He said Governor Faubus was right in calling out the National Guard in September 1957. The nine Negro children who tried to enter Central High School and were turned away were "taken from a much better school" and thrust into Central to stir up strife, Johnson said.

He said the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, backed by the Communists, were using Little Rock as a "test battle."

Johnson spoke repeatedly of the NAACP's being "Communist dominated."

Johnson's testimony mainly was for the benefit of the television audience. Only five of the 12 Committee members were there during the morning. KATV televised the hearings "live."

Johnson followed much the same line used Wednesday by J. B. Matthews of New York, a one-time colleague of the late Senator Joseph R. McCarthy. Both men testified about the intensity of the Communist threat in the South.

Johnson testified in a similar vein before a Louisiana legislative committee in March 1957.

Banister also testified at the Louisiana hearings. His testimony at Little Rock was much the same. He talked about the history of communism, its goal of world domination, its methods of infiltration, deceit and "smear."

Banister backed up an assertion by Bennett that the Arkansas hearings probably would be "smeared" in an effort to discredit them. Any such "smear" will be the work of the Communists, directly or indirectly, they said.

Banister recalled from his FBI days that Little Rock once had a Communist organization. He said he used to know where the Party hid its printing supplies and literature.

Banister and Johnson said they were convinced that communism was behind racial unrest in Arkansas. As other witnesses had, they linked the names of persons cited as "subversives" with organizations reaching into Arkansas.

Ford Foundation Bulletin

Bennett introduced a bulletin of the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Republic—again pointing out that Harry S. Ashmore, executive editor of the Gazette, was a member of the Fund's Board—showing that the Fund had contributed more than $31,000 directly to the Arkansas Council on Human Relations.

Then he said Ashmore and Mrs. L. C. Bates, state president of the NAACP, were on the Board of the Council. He described the Council as "a hotbed of all those involved" in the integration movement in Arkansas.

Bennett had gone to considerable trouble the first two days to try to tie the Southern Regional Council, affiliated with the

GUY BANISTER

Arkansas Council on Human Relations, to Communist influences.

Bennett said the Mississippi Council on Human Relations, another affiliate of th. Southern Regional Council, had dissolved the day after the end of the Louisiana hearings last year. It had been a target of those hearings, he said.

Called to Council Office

Under questioning by Bennett, Byrd and Ralston told of being called to a meeting of the Board of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations two or three months ago. They said a man identifying himself as Nat Griswold, executive director of the Council, telephoned.

When they arrived at the Council office at 1220 West Capitol Avenue, Griswold said he hadn't called any newsmen, they said. Other newsmen showed up and they made moving pictures and tried to find out what the organization was, they said. Griswold said he would tell them about it later but wouldn't set a date, Byrd said.

Ralston said some white and Negro persons left the building while the newsmen waited.

Bennett said after the hearings that he would subpoena the records of the Council if the Arkansas Supreme Court ruled that he had the right. A case is pending on Bennett's attempt to subpoena the records of the NAACP.

Committee to Meet

The Committee is expected to meet as soon as the testimony of the hearings have been transcribed and summarized. Under the instructions of the Arkansas Legislative Council, it is to prepare a report on the investigation for the 1959 General Assembly.

Communist History—Oren Harris' Version

Ark. Gazette 12/30/58

Congressman Oren Harris, whose own investigative experience has been largely confined to chivvying errant capitalists, unaccountably turned up as an expert witness in the Arkansas Legislative committee hearing on Communism.

Unless our cursory ear deceived us, Mr. Harris achieved the considerable feat of giving a brief (too brief) rundown on the history of the world Communist movement without mentioning the name of Lenin, an omission akin to trying to explain the Christian movement without mentioning Saul of Tarsus.

The chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee said that the present-day Communist movement is based on the Gospel of Karl Marx, which is true only in the sense that modern-day ecumenical Christianity is based on the Old Testament.

Actually, the one apostle-epistoler whose name recurs with reverence in every Communist text everywhere is that of Lenin. Marx himself may be relegated to the status accorded an ikon in the bad old days of the Czars; "Stalinism" may be regarded as a sometime thing which the individual party may be for or against at a particular time or in a particular country; Lenin remains the constant.

And the expanded attempt to communize the world through the agency of the Comintern and its successors did not date from the "advent" of Stalin, as Mr. Harris put it. It was Lenin who thought at the beginning that the world revolution was at hand, who did his utmost to bring it about and founded the Comintern. Although the process of temporarily adapting to the realities of the time had begun even before Lenin's death, it was Stalin who turned the Russian Party inward upon itself. This policy may have paid off at Stalingrad, and on other World War II fronts but along the way Stalin's policy of withdrawal to regroup had also widened the first and greatest schism in this new secular religion. To overlook this schism is to ignore an important chapter in world history, the effects of which are still with us in one way or another.

The re-emergence of Russian Communism as a full-time proselytizing movement came only when the world was choosing sides for World War II, in the period of the "Popular Fronts," the Spanish Civil War and, coincidentally, in the middle of a world depression. For our purposes here in Arkansas, this may help explain why Commonwealth College appeared to be directionless in the Twenties but came under Communist domination in the mid-Thirties, a fact emphasized by testimony before the state legislative committee at the time.

None of this is to say that the Communists haven't had their eyes on America from the beginning. Marx's strictures were written against the background of a mid-19th Century British industrial society which was only beginning to feel the effects of rudimentary political reform and was still far from any economic reforms. But even Marx had his eyes on America as an emerging factor in world affairs, and purportedly once sought an interview with Lincoln.

By the time of the Russian Revolution, America had arrived as the World's No. 1 industrial power. It is natural that the peddlers of a revolutionary doctrine which originally was tailored to order for a highly industrialized urban society should have looked longingly at America as a potential target.

The Communist goal of eventual world revolution has remained unchanged throughout all the convolutions of Stalinism, Trotskyism, and so on. But the extent of its failure in this corner of the world was pointed up by Congressman Harris's perhaps inadvertent observation before the Arkansas legislative committee that the American people had nothing to fear from Communist subversion so long as they keep their eyes open. We agree.

Faubus Against Any New Probe If Generalized

Governor Faubus said yesterday he questioned the value of further generalized hearings into alleged subversion in the racial unrest in Arkansas.

Mr. Faubus said he felt any further hearings should be more specific. He said this didn't minimize the value of the hearings completed Thursday by the Special Education Committee of the Legislative Council.

"If these hearings create an awareness on the part of the public that there is a Communist movement active in Arkansas, they will have served their purpose," Mr. Faubus said.

Thinks State Is Target

The governor said he was certain the Communists had decided to concentrate on Arkansas to create tension between the races.

"I believe that very strongly," Mr. Faubus said.

"But," he said, "unless such activity can be pinpointed to specific acts and individuals, I don't see the purpose of further hearings."

The governor said that unless a subsequent investigation was based on specific acts, the criticism which usually follows such hearings would damage their value in the public mind.

The governor said he had not studied the testimony heard by the Committee.

"I heard part of what the witness Johnson [Manning Johnson of New York, a Negro ex-Communist] said and I agree with him," Mr. Faubus said. "He said persons who permit themselves to be used by the Communists often are more effective instruments than the Party members themselves."

Has Studied Movement

The governor said he had studied the Communist movement since his days at Commonwealth College near Mena. He has said he spent a short time at the school. The College, closed now, has been called communistic and is listed as subversive by the United States attorney general's office.

The governor said his brief stay at Commonwealth—he again declined to be specific on the further generalized hearings into alleged subversion in the racial unrest in Arkansas.

Mr. Faubus said he felt any further hearings should be more specific. He said this didn't minimize the value of the hearings completed Thursday by the Special Education Committee of the Legislative Council.

"If these hearings create an awareness on the part of the public that there is a Communist movement active in Arkansas, they will have served their purpose," Mr. Faubus said.

The governor said his brief stay at Commonwealth—he again declined to be specific on the length of his visit—and his later training as an intelligence officer in the Army made him aware of the dangers of Communism.

"The movement is more dangerous now than it has ever been," Mr. Faubus said.

He attributed this to a change in tactics by the now outlawed Communist Party. He said that instead of concentrating on the masses the Communists were working to indoctrinate political, church and communications leaders.

Probe Leaders Satisfied

Attorney General Bruce Bennett said yesterday it would be up to the Legislative Council's Special Education Committee whether there would be further hearings on subversive activities.

Bennett questioned witnesses in the three days of public hearings before the Committee this week.

Bennett and Representative Paul Van Dalsem of Perry County, the Committee chairman, expressed satisfaction with the results of the hearings.

Bennett said public reaction to the hearings had been good and many persons had thanked him for his part in exposing the Red threat. The public proceedings were televised.

The attorney general said it was doubtful, even if there were more hearings, that he would summon any of the persons mentioned in the just-ended hearings to testify. But Van Dalsem said any person who felt his reputation had been damaged by the hearings would be allowed to file a sworn statement for the Committee's consideration.

Griswold to Have Statement

One agency mentioned at the hearing indicated yesterday that it would make some form of rebuttal today.

Nat R. Griswold, executive secretary of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, said some members met yesterday to discuss reaction to testimony alleging that the group held secret, bi-racial meetings and was connected through its parent organization, the Southern Regional Council, to subversive organizations.

"I'll have something for the press tomorrow," Griswold said.

President Unable To Find Traitors At Negro College

Lawrence A. Davis, president of the all-Negro AM and N College of Pine Bluff, said yesterday he had not been able to find a trace of a person tied to his school Wednesday by a witness in hearings on subversion at the state Capitol.

J. B. Matthews of New York, an associate of the late Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, told the Special Education Committee of the Arkansas Legislative Council that a Horace Evans or Adams who was currently or formerly on the faculty of AM and N had been a member of the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

The Fund has been cited as subversive by the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, Attorney General Bruce Bennett said.

Davis said a search of AM and N records for several years back had failed to turn up a Horace Evans or Adams.

Listeners disagreed on whether Matthews said Evans or Adams. The official transcript of the hearings by the official reporter won't be compiled for several days.

The alleged AM and N faculty member was one of 10 persons at five Arkansas colleges that Matthews listed as a member of the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

MATTHEWS AND THE SRC

The Arkansas Legislative Council, concluding that a Communist plot is substantially responsible for the Little Rock desegregation crisis, has aired some charges so grossly unjust as to recall the McCarthyist nightmare.

There was J. B. Matthews, himself a former Communist-front leader, declaring that the Southern Regional Council had Red sympathizers in its ranks.

Just 20 years ago, Mr. Matthews was accusing Shirley Temple of aiding the Bolsheviks. The former chief counsel of the Dies Committee is primarily remembered, however, for his July 1953 article in The American Mercury labeling "at least 7,000 Protestant clergrymen" as "party members, fellow travelers, espionage agents, party line adherents and unwilling dupes." The protest, from President Eisenhower and others, was so strong that Sen. Joe McCarthy, who by then had carried his campaign of vilification directly to the White House, was forced to fire Matthews, whom he had just hired as executive director of his subcommittee.

In the Little Rock hearings, other familiar names in the business of smear were trotted out. The Southern Regional Council was a frequent target, though no one dared go so far as to impugn its motives as a whole.

The SRC, as is well known, is made up of foremost Southern educators, clergymen, business, labor and professional leaders. A discussion and research group, it was organized in 1943, as a result of Negro leaders' efforts to see that the "separate but equal" doctrine in Southern education be made a reality. It grew also out of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, founded in 1919 by leading churchmen.

Since then it has favored gradual compliance with the Supreme Court's decision, but even so staunchly segregationist a newspaper as the Richmond Times-Dispatch recently said: "The Southern Regional Council was established because of a sincere desire on the part of white and Negro leaders in the South to eliminate many of the disabilities and discriminations from which Negroes were suffering."

Now the Arkansas Legislative Council, with never a peep about the role of its own Gov. Faubus, concludes on the word of former Communists, who are professional name callers, and others, most of them from out of the region, that little more than a Red plot is the cause of their difficulties.

Bennett 'Commie' Hunt Draws Ire of State Editors

The Legislative Council Education Committee's probe into communism took top billing last week in the editorial columns of the state's newspapers.

Editor Dorothy D. Stuck of the Marked Tree Tribune wrote:

We stand with every redblooded American who is opposed to the doctrine of Communism and its infiltration in our country. But we prefer to stand apart from the political opportunists who seek to further their own ambition with the irresponsible use of the Communist label to smear anyone and everyone who disagrees with them.

In the past year in our state we have seen the words "Communist" and "left wing" applied to many people who did not deserve the insult. Ministers, teachers and other dedicated individuals have been lambasted and labeled followers of an ideology they decry as vehemently as their persecutors.

The charges hurled so glibly, designed to catch a headline and the fancy of a following horde, are never substantiated by proof or upheld by logic. They can't be because such charges are for a selfish purpose, not an unselfish cause.

We are opposed to the use of Communist as a "dirty word" for the purposes of smear and the attempt to confuse the public with a bigot's misinterpretation of the rights of a dissenter to speak his or her view in a democracy.

Editor Robert Fisher of the Crossett News Observer commented:

After much fanfare and noises that sound like the next political campaign is already under way, Attorney General Bruce Bennett this week opened his long talked about investigation of Communist activity in connection with the Little Rock school crisis.

Terming his red probe as "educational" in nature, Mr. Bennett has thus far failed to come up with any earth-shaking revelations about how the Commies infiltrated the state and brought about the integration mess, and somehow or other we seriously doubt that he ever will.

From their very beginning the Reds have made no secret of their desire to create unrest among the races of this nation as well as the world. Their divide-and-conquer policy is well known, and even if Mr. Bennett finds there was a Communist in it to the writer to say will only keep alive a prejudice feeling.

Editor David Pryor wrote in the Ouachita Citizen at Camden:

Cecil B. DeBennett's investigation-production of alleged subversive activities of pinks and Commies stirring up race trouble in Arkansas has developed into somewhat of a spectacle. * * *

If there are communistic influences instigating racial unrest in Arkansas, then we hope that this Committee will ferret them out and bring them to the public's attention.

It is our opinion, however, to the witness list should be added Governor Faubus, because of his seeming knowledge of communistic influences in the realm of racial strife. At least his accusations of Communistic influences should be proven and not be allowed to remain unattached.

Did Alford Really Win?

There was comment also on the seating of Dr. Dale Alford as representative from the Fifth Congressional District of Arkansas.

Editor Fisher wrote in the Crossett News Observer:

Just how tight the bonds are that tie members of a political party together may be fully tested in the next few weeks when the final word is given as to whether Dr. Alford really defeated Congressman Brooks Hays and, if so, whether he will even then be seated as a member of the Democratic Party. * * *

It now appears likely that a full congressional recount of the Hays-Alford vote will be taken and it could prove slightly embarrassing to some high echelon Democrats if the finger was pointed at them for having their hands in the political cookie jar.

The reason for the blushing faces of course would be that Mr. Alford ran as an "independent" and then following his victory claimed he was and had been a Democrat all along.

Even though there appears to be a good many folks on the state scene who will buy this double talk, it does not appear to be salable merchandise in Washington, where this week the good doctor was snubbed when invitations to attend the annual Democratic caucus were sent out.

When that group meets January 6, with Dr. Alford absent, they will no doubt vote as to whether they consider him a true Democrat or not. If they brand him an independent, then the state will pay a high price for their small pleasure in kicking out Mr. Hays. As an independ-

Communist as a dirty word for the purposes of smear and the attempt to confuse the public with a bigot's misinterpretation of the rights of a dissenter to speak his or her view in a democracy.

From their very beginning the Reds have made no secret of their desire to create unrest among the races of this nation as well as the world. Their divide-and-conquer policy is well known, and even if Mr. Bennett finds there was a Communist in the Daisy Bates woodpile, what will it prove other than what the Communists have said all along?

Thus far about the only thing to be brought out in the investigation, which is being sponsored just like a true-to-life TV drama, by a Special Education Committee of the Arkansas Legislative Council, is that Orval Faubus' old alma mater, Commonwealth College, was a hotbed of conspiracy back in the thirties. This is hardly news, seeing as how the legislature already investigated the matter in 1935 and a fellow named Francis Cherry took great pains to tell one and all about the same matter in 1954.

Thus far Mr. Bennett has had little success in directly linking Mr. Faubus with the Communists, but we can't help but wonder if that is not his goal. After all, it was Mr. Faubus who did attend the Communist College, even though for but a brief period, and it was Mr. Faubus who directly challenged the full authority of the United States government, as few men other than Communists have ever done before, and it was Mr. Faubus who closed the Little Rock schools, thus bringing about the present stalemate between state and federal authority.

If Mr. Bennett is successful in tying the Red tag on Mr. Faubus, it could certainly elevate his own political star and at the same time put an end to any future aspirations of our present governor.

Whether or not this is his goal in conducting the present investigation, time will tell; however, it is our hope that in the present frustration about the Supreme Court ruling the Legislative Committee does not turn its probe into a McCarthy-like "witch hunt" and brand any and everyone a Communist who does not see eye to eye with them on the civil rights issue.

To follow such a course will surely accomplish as much for the Communist cause as if they were calling the tune thmselves.

Walter C. Yeager of the Sharp County Record at Cave City said:

The Legislative Council, with little else to do, and headed by Chairman Paul Van Dalsem of Perry County, the most publisized legislator in Arkansas, has rekindled the long outdated Communistic inclined defunct Commonwealth College that was said to exist at Mena in about 1935. It might be said in passing that Van Dalsem only recently coaxed the Highway Department into the buying of Toadsuck Ferry on the Arkansas River which separates Perry and Faulkner Counties, and for which the state paid $10,000. It will be recalled that ex-Governor Cherry who made the Commonwealth College a major issue against Governor Faubus led to his defeat for a second term. This investigation is not expected to accomplish a single objective, and if you leave when the final word is given as to whether Dr. Alford really defeated Congressman Brooks Hays and, if so, whether he will even then be seated as a member of the Democratic Party. * * *

It now appears likely that a full congressional recount of the Hays-Alford vote will be taken and it could prove slightly embarrassing to some high echelon Democrats if the finger was pointed at them for having their hands in the political cookie jar.

If they brand him an independent, then the state will pay a high price for their small pleasure in kicking out Mr. Hays. As an independent, Mr. Alford will be almost voiceless and might just as well stay at home. He will receive no important committee assignments and his chances for advancement and influence will be nil.

Editor Robert L. Newton of the Warren Eagle Democrat had this to say about Dr. Alford's election:

It was interesting to note this week end that only one Arkansas lawmaker was willing to risk his political future in order to honor an old friend, Brooks Hays, who leaves the House of Representatives the end of this year.

A group of Hays' friends are having a testimonial dinner for him in Washington, but only one Arkansas lawmaker is on the guest list: the fiercely independent Senator J. W. ("Bill") Fulbright of Fayetteville. [Representative James W. Trimble of Berryville also bought a ticket but could not attend because he was attending an appreciation dinner in his own honor on that date.]

Fulbright has never been accused of not having personal courage ever since he ran and passed Arkansas over SMU in the Hogs' first homecoming game in 1924.

Representative "Took" Gathings of West Memphis has announced that he would not attend the dinner, which isn't at all surprising, but most of the other congressional delegates from Arkansas have just kept their mouths shut.

Frankly, we think they are placing too much emphasis on the segregation-integration angle in the defeat of Congressman Hays by Dr. Dale Alford. Brooks Hays wasn't beaten just because of his stand on the Little Rock school crisis—not by a long shot.

We think people in his District were getting just a little tired of Congressman Hays. He preached to them every Sunday afternoon about happenings in Washington, but they didn't read much about him in the national publications. He was a great Baptist leader, but there are more people in the district who are members of other churches.

And here came Dr. Alford; handsome, attractive, the possesson of a clean record, the father of good children, the husband of a nice lady. And most of all, the owner of "Doctor" in front of his name. Arkansas people trust a man more if he's got "Doctor" in front of his name than if he has "Reverend" or just about anything else. Doctors, to the layman, are something almost superhuman.

Just remember this. Amis Guthridge, the mightiest segregationist of them all, couldn't beat Hays this summer. It took more than the integration problem to beat him this fall. That "more" was Hays' record in other fields, plus the alternative of a "non political" candidate for Central Arkansas voters.

Human Relations Council Strikes Back at Accuser

The Arkansas Council on Human Relations made an answer yesterday to Attorney General Bruce Bennett about the testimony dealing with the Human Relations Council given during last week's hearings on alleged subversion in Arkansas.

In a letter the Council said that its purpose was in accord with that of the Legislative Council sponsor of the hearings, in trying to eliminate the influence of Communists.

It also said that the investigating committee had not asked the Human Relations Council for information before the hearings and that this was to be regretted.

The letter, signed by Nat R. Griswold, executive director, was read to Bennett by a reporter but it did not satisfy his curiosity about the organization.

Bennett introduced testimony in the Legislative Council hearings to show that the organization had had an income of about $31,000 since its formation in 1955, that one radio reporter and one television cameraman had never heard of it until two or three months ago and that it is affiliated with the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta.

The radio and television men testified that, responding to what turned out to be fake messages by telephone, they were not admitted to a Human Relations Council Executive Committee meeting at the office at 1220 West Capitol Avenue a few weeks ago.

Bennett admitted yesterday that he too was on the scene in front of the Human Relations Council office that afternoon, but said he just happened to be driving by and saw the radio-television men. He stopped and talked with them and watched the persons leaving the house.

Griswold was asked yesterday if Bennett has asked him about the Human Relations Council's finances. He said Bennett had not. Later, Bennett said he had asked Griswold for a financial report before the hearings but that Griswold had not supplied one.

The text of the letter to Bennett follows:

The Arkansas Council on Human Relations by its nature is in accord with the declared general purpose of the Arkansas Legislative Council in its investigation: the elimination of the influence of Communists in race relations in Arkansas today. Communist logic and strategy can result only in discord and destruction in the South. Since this is the sincere position of the Council on Human Relations we regret that your committee did not seek and secure additional available facts about our organization from our office at 1220 West Capitol.

You have put into the record a list of our Board members without identifying them. These forty-one Arkansas citizens from both Southern racial groups represent a wide range of professions, occupations and churches. They hold quarterly meetings. The Executive Committee meets monthly. These two groups are autonomous and determine policy and program for guidance of the staff. Members of the staff are all native Arkansans, known to many persons who could advise your Committee about them and their activities. At present they are Nat R. Griswold, executive director; John W. Walker, associate director; Mrs. Velma Powell, secretary. Officers of our Board are Mrs. Thelma Engler, president, Dr. T. C. Cothran and Mrs. Floy Sparling, vice presidents; Mrs. Adell Woods, secretary; and Reverend Charles C. Walker, treasurer.

As is generally known, we have benefited from grants from the Fund for the Republic, channelled through the Southern Regional Council. This distinction is shared by us with religious groups associated with all major faiths, with educational, professional, and patriotic organizations, as the Fund's Report filed by you shows.

Our Constitution, revised, filed in 1957 in the Pulaski Circuit Court, makes clear our relation to other similar groups: "The Council, an independent and autonomous organization, shall co-operate with other intergroup agencies in the South, especially with the Southern Regional Council." This has actually been the working relations from the beginning between ACHR and SRC.

The general purpose of the organization stated in the Constitution makes clear that the organization seeks to reduce tension between human groups: "to attain through programs of research and action the ideals and practices which will result in the greatest good for all peoples in the state; to reduce intergroup tensions and their causes * * *"

The Council has never deviated from its purpose of helping Arkansas communities to get through these years of transition with a minimum of disturbance and harm. Education and democratic interaction of individuals are its methods. The Council would foster a climate of opinion in which people of different views may work amicably toward a better life for all. The Council advocates the workshop and conference table before tensions tighten between the races. It believes the opportunities guaranteed in our Constitutions (state and federal) can be actualized for all citizens in local communities through the working together of the majority and minority leaders in mutual respect and good faith.

The staff and the state office of the Council seek to be a service agency: a clearing house of literature and films, funded experience and facts from research suggestive to local communities and groups.

The Council's printed and mimeographed materials since its beginning in 1955 have made clear these purposes and methods. As an educational group the Council is not a news-maker. But it certainly is not a secret group. The Council opened its office in May 1955 with full stories and pictures in the papers. In the spring of 1956 newsmen were invited to a Koffee Klatch on the occasion of the releasing of our pamphlet, "Simple Steps." In May 1956 at a symposium of six ministers news media were invited and TV cameras took pictures of audience and literature table. Newsmen have never been excluded from the annual meetings of the Arkansas Council. Newsmen have been present at numerous meetings under Council auspices.

The position of the Council on Human Relations is in accord with the declared faith of every major religious body. This is not a new or peculiar view. There is abroad in the world a Communist dynamics. It is powerful. Its spirit is that of arrogance and distrust. It is dangerous because it divides men and ruthlessly crushes persons. Opposed to it is a Christian dynamics. It is more powerful. It is beneficial because it unites men and gently exalts persons. To this latter we of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations are devoted. We pray we may have its spirit of humility and love sufficient to be worthy of its past.

Sincerely,
Nat R. Griswold
Executive Director.

Dear Mr. Ochs:

I can't tell you how grateful we are for the fine editorial in last Saturday's Chattanooga Times. Being a target for people like Matthews and his employers is a depressing business. We tell ourselves that reasonable people aren't going to be taken in -- at least not for long -- by this kind of rabid nonsense.

Still, cheering oneself up is a hard job. It can't compare with the morale-building effect of an editorial in the sound, well reasoned vein of your newspaper. We appreciate it all the more, knowing that these battles aren't fought with impunity even by as sturdy a champion of decency as the Chattanooga Times.

All the best to you and John Popham for the holiday season and the coming year.

Many thanks for your letter.

Admittedly touchy as the issue is, I really was quite depressed myself that so few Southern newspapers spoke out on the Arkansas Legislative Council's hark-back to the McCarthy madness.

At any rate, best wishes to you and the Council. Johnny Popham has often talked of you, and I hope I shall be seeing you sometime.

IT'S JUST POSSIBLE THEY AREN'T INFALLIBLE

"Where is the man," asked John Locke in his classic Essay on Human Understanding, "that has incontestable evidence of the truth of all he condemns; or can say that he has examined to the bottom all his own, or other men's opinions?"

Well, events of the last week suggest that there is one man in Tennessee and another in Arkansas who, in their own estimation at least, feel qualified to step up and answer, "Right here." And there is more of a connection between the two men than might meet the eye of a casual observer.

The Tennessean is Mr. Harry Lee Senter, a state representative from Bristol. The Arkansan is Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett. On a single day last week, these two asserted their own infallibility by urging the suppression of ideas and opinions that differ from their own.

Ostensibly, Mr. Senter was speaking in behalf of his resolution to investigate the Highlander Folk School. But he took the occasion to make a passionate denuciation of "the left-wingers, the Communists, the do-gooders and the one-worlders" -- everybody, in other words, who doesn't necessarily believe that Harry Lee Senter is always right.

And he made it plain that it was his desire to silence these dissidents by harassing them with the kind of investigation he was even then proposing. "Our central purpose," he explained, "is to root out that which is evil."

Mr. Bennett was even more direct, for he submitted to the Arkansas legislature a bill that would make it unlawful for anyone to encourage nonconformance with the established traditions, customs and usage of the state.

This is, of course, a segregation measure. But it is one of the most extreme proposals that has yet been laid before any Southern legislature and could, if enacted, go far beyond the segregation question to strike at the very fundamentals of a free and democratic society.

It is, in essence, a thought control bill of the most vicious kind. And it assumes special significance for Tennessee because its sponsor, Mr. Bennett, is the very person who encouraged Tennessee to undertake the investigation that Mr. Senter urged to "root out that which is evil."

It is beside the point that Highlander Folk School feeds on the kind of publicity Mr. Senter, at Mr. Bennett's prodding, is giving it.

The point is that the school has a right to its opinions and ideas, however unpopular they may be. So do all other Americans, and any attempt to pour everybody into one mold and enforce a single line of thought is thoroughly alien to the democratic concept.

Strange though it may seem to the Messrs. Senter and Bennett, it is possible that they do not have a monopoly on truth. That being the case, we would call to their attention--and to the attention of any others infatuated with their own infallibility--an observation that is no less timely now than it was when John Stuart Mill made it more than a century ago:

"The peculiar evil of silencing the expression of an opinion is that it is robbing the human race; posterity as well as the existing generation; those who dissent from the opinion still more than those who hold it. If the opinion is right, they are deprived of the opportunity of exchanging truth for error; if wrong, they lose what is almost as great a benefit, the clearer perception and livelier impression of truth, produced by its collision with error."

Council Director: Democracy, Segregation Cannot Coexist

By PATRICK J. OWENS
Of The Commercial Staff

LITTLE ROCK—The Negro has rejected inequality and has thus made it impossible for segregation and democracy to survive side by side, the executive director of the Southern Regional Council said yesterday.

Leslie W. Dunbar of Atlanta spoke at the annual meeting of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations at Hotel Grady Manning.

He said Negro acquiescence to segregation had made possible the existence of white supremacy under "slipshod" observance of the federal Constitution. The Negro now demands equality, and America must grant it or give up its traditions of democratic government, Dr. Dunbar contended.

In Dunbar's view, the nation risks destruction of the Constitution in three ways:

1—Through the suppression of free speech and other liberties, as Dunbar contended is happening in Mississippi.

2—Through the failure of Congress to respond to the "major domestic challenge of the times"—the demand of Negroes for equality. Dunbar said it had been obvious for 10 years that civil rights was the major domestic problem but that Congress had done little about it.

3—Through a failure, over the next few years, to undertake seriously the integration of the Negro into American life.

Unless the Negro is fully integrated into American society, Dunbar contended, "we shall be creating a minority, a strong minority, who will not look to America for their welfare."

He said the United States was "terribly lucky" that Negroes asked to be integrated. "They're not asking to get out and they're not asking to get over the white people," he said. "They're making revolutionary demands for a harmonious solution."

Dunbar said he was encouraged that some Southern state governments, after 300 years of white supremacy, were moving toward neutrality on the issue of racial equality. He listed Kenturcky, North Carolina, Tennessee and "even Georgia" as examples of this trend.

The South's major problem always has been the race issue, Dunbar said, but "we could not work out our most important problem ... through the normal channels of politics .... We forced the biggest problem into the courts ... the streets ... economic boycotts."

"The time has come, if we are interested in our constitutional democracy ... our peace ... to go back into politics with that problem," he asserted. He added:

"I think the time is past in most of the South when liberals, whether white or Negro, need to be apologetic about their aims, their principles, their goals ....

"White Southerners today can choose only between integration on the one hand and madness on the other. For Negro Southerners, the choice is the same ....

"Our generation of Americans has the awful responsibility of saving the dream of free men governing themselves."

Dunbar called for Southern liberals on the race issue to become politically active. He said Arkansans could work toward a good voter registration law to replace the poll tax.

He noted Governor Faubus's ideological differences with his father and his sister. "I'm pleased to be here in the home of Governor Faubus, his father and his sister," Dunbar said.

The Arkansas Council on Human Relations gave a silver tray to Reverend Colbert S. Cartwright at the luncheon and held an open house for him last night. Cartwright, a race relations leader long active in the council, is leaving his Little Rock pulpit this week for a church at Youngstown, Ohio.

THE UGLY TRUTH ABOUT THE NAACP
An Address by
ATTORNEY GENERAL EUGENE COOK
Before The 55th ANNUAL CONVENTION
Of The
PEACE OFFICERS ASSOCIATION OF GEORGIA
HELD IN ATLANTA
* * * * *

PRESIDENT REDDING, DISTINGUISHED GUESTS AND MY FELLOW MEMBERS OF THE PEACE OFFICERS ASSOCIATION OF GEORGIA:

It is always a source of genuine personal satisfaction for me to have the opportunity of appearing before this group. Of all the organizations to which I have the privilege of belonging, none has accorded me a greater degree of support and cooperation than the Peace Officers Association of Georgia.

This rapport, I feel, is due principally to the fact that we share common professional objectives and personal convictions. As servants of our fellow citizens, we are made acutely aware of the grave responsibility inherent in protecting the rights and liberties of the people through vigorous and impartial enforcement of the law. As individuals charged with this solemn duty, we are able to see more clearly than others the threat to those rights and liberties posed by those who would substitute government by men for government by law.

It is because of your demonstrated discernment in this regard that I have chosen this occasion as the proper forum for revealing, for the first time, the authenticated details of the most ominous of these threats to arise during our lifetime. I refer to the subversive designs behind the current crusade of the misnamed National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and its fellow-traveling fronts to force upon the South the Communist-inspired doctrine of racial integration and amalgamation.

It shall be my purpose in this speech to totally disrobe the NAACP and to present this sinister and subtle organization in all its nakedness.

The ugly truth about the NAACP and its origin, aims and manipulators is so shocking as to stagger the imagination, but it is borne out by incontrovertible facts which can be established as matters of official record. These facts have been uncovered, checked, assembled and correlated through many weeks of intensive investigation and cooperative effort by my Staff and the Staffs of Congressman James C. Davis of Georgia and Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi.

I am prepared to prove everything I shall say. And I wish to state for the benefit of those who undoubtedly will attempt to smear me and discredit my findings and conclusions that I would welcome the opportunity to present the evidence I have in hand for determination before a trial jury in a court of law.

At the outset I wish to make it clear that the issue involved is one not of race but rather of subversion. None of the organizations which have exploited the race issue in this country has ever had the welfare of the negro people at heart. They have seized upon this issue as a convenient front for their more nefarious activities and as one with which they could dupe naive do-gooders, fuzzy-minded intellectuals, misguided clergymen and radical journalists to be their pawns.

The record shows that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was neither founded nor is presently directed by colored people. It was originated in New York City 46 years ago as the brain child of a Southern scallawag journalist and Russian-trained revolutionary named William E. Walling. Its principal personalities during its early years were descendants of the rabble-rousing abolitionists who fomented the strife which precipitated the War Between the States, a conflict which could have been avoided but for the activities of those abolitionists.

Of its five founders only one was a negro -- a Communist-sympathizing lawyer named W. E. B. DuBois whose record of participation in Communist, Communist-front and subversive organizations and activities taken from the files of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the United States House of Representatives requires eight pages of single-spaced, typewritten copy to outline. Among his more recent activities of this nature was the donation of his services in the preparation of legal briefs defending since-executed Communist spies Julius and Ethyl Rosenberg and the imprisoned leaders of the Communist Party of the United States. In 1953 he was awarded the International Peace Prize by the "Communist front" World Peace Council in recognition of his participation in the sponsorship of the series of Communist-dominated World Peace Conferences held since 1949 in an attempt to undermine the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

DuBois was Director of Research for the NAACP until 1949 and now is referred to by its officers and members as the organization's "Honorary Chairman."

In addition to Walling and DuBois, the other NAACP founders -- all white -- were Dr. Henry Moskowitz; Socialist Oswald Garrison Villard, grandson of Abolitionist William Lloyd Garrison; and Miss Mary Ovington White, also a descendant of an old-time abolitionist. The first president of the Association was a white Boston lawyer, Moorfield Storey, who was identified in his youth with the abolitionist movement and who served as secretary to the original race-baiter, Massachusetts Senator Charles Sumner.

From that day to this, South-hating white people with long records of affinity for, affiliation with and participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling and subversive organizations, activities and causes have directed and subsidized the NAACP. Its present president, Arthur B. Spingarn of New York City, is a white man as are a large number of the current officers, directors and principal contributors.

The files of the House Un-American Activities Committee reveal records of affiliation with or participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling or subversive organizations or activities on the part of the following present officials of the NAACP -- the President, the Chairman of the Board, the "Honorary Chairman," 11 of the 28 Vice Presidents, the Treasurer, 28 of 47 Directors, the Chairman of the National Legal Committee, the Executive Secretary, the Special Counsel, the Assistant Special Counsel, the Southeast Regional Secretary, the West Coast Secretary, the Director of the Washington Bureau, the Director of Public Relations and two Field Secretaries.

The transcript of this evidence numbers 121 pages of single-spaced, typewritten copy and would require more than six hours to be read aloud. Time being a factor, it is impossible to present all of this material; but, to give you an idea of the backgrounds and ideologies of the policy-making officials and personnel of the NAACP, I shall cite chapter and verse on the activities of this organization's principal personalities.

(The designations which I shall use in describing the organizations and activities with which these individuals have been identified are those applied to them by the Attorney General of the United States, the House Un-American Activities Committee or the Special House Un-American Activities Committee.)

President Spingarn was a participant in the Conference on Africa held April 14, 1944, in New York City by the "subversive and Communist" Council on African Affairs. In 1945 and 1946 he signed statements favoring the granting of Army commissions to Communists and opposing the use of injunctions in labor disputes sponsored by the "viciously subversive" National Federation of Constitutional Liberties. He is listed as a sponsor of the "Communist front" Public Use of Arts Committee.

Board Chairman Channing H. Tobias was a member of the Executive Board and Co-Chairman of the New York Committee of the "Communist front" Southern Conference for Human Welfare which was charged in 1947 with "serving the Soviet Union and its subserveient Communist Party in the United States." He belonged, prior to 1949, to the "subversive and Communist" Council on African Affairs and was a member of the Editorial Advisory Board of the "Protestant Digest" -- a magazine which "has faithfully propagated the Communist Party Line." He sponsored the "subversive and Communist" People's Institute of Applied Religion and the American Committee for Yugoslav Relief and was a member of the Executive Board of the American League for Peace and Democracy, "the largest of the Communist-front movements in the United States." He has sponsored confer nces and activities of the "viciously subversive" National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, and the "Communist front" New York State Conference on National Unity and the "subversive and Communist" American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born and the National Committee to Win the Peace.

Roy Wilkins -- successor to the late Walter White as NAACP Executive Secretary -- was quoted on June 17, 1936, by the New York Daily Worker, the official publication of the Communist Party in this country, as attaching "greatest significance" to the 1936 National Communist Party Convention and stating that the Communist Party's racial program had had "a very wholesome effect" in the United States. He was further quoted by the Daily Worker on July 15, 1949, as boasting that he had voted in New York City elections that year for since-convicted Negro Communist Benjamin J. Davis. He is listed as a member of the National Committee of the "Communist front" International Juridical Association which has "actively defended Communists and consistently followed the Communist Party line." He was a sponsor of the "subversive and Communist" Conference on Pan American Democracy and of a joint meeting in 1937 of the "subversive and Communist" American League Against War and Fascism and the "Communist front" American Friends of the Chinese People. He has spoken for the "subversive and Communist" International Labor Defense and the Workers' Alliance, the former of which is regarded as the "legal arm of the Communist Party" in this country.

Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall -- the negro lawyer responsible for the NAACP's court attacks upon segregation in the public schools -- as late as 1950 was a member of the Executive Board of the "Communist front" National Lawyers Guild which has been described as "the foremost legal bulwark of the Communist Party, its front organizations and controlled unions." Since its inception, the Guild "has never failed to rally to the legal defense of the Communist Party and individual members thereof, including known espionage agents." And, as a member and policy-making official of this Communist Front, Marshall has served as Associate Editor of the "Lawyers Guild Review" and has criticized this nation's loyalty program. He also is listed as a member of the National Committee of the "Communist front" International Juridical Association which has "actively defended Communists and consistently followed the Communist Party line." And he was among a group of attorneys who, in 1947, protested the issuance of contempt citations against pro-Communist Hollywood writers who refused to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The director of the NAACP's Washington Bureau, Clarence M. Mitchell, protested against being asked whether he was or ever had been a member of the Communist Party at a hearing on proposed legislation to outlaw the Communist Party held before the House Un-American Activities Committee on May 3, 1950. Although he stoutly denied being a Communist, he was quoted as saying that such a question was "unfair" because it "immediately precludes from appearing before this Committee many of the people who would be on trial under a bill of this kind." The transcript further quoted him as saying that: "Presumably there are people who may, for sincere and personal reasons, wish to be members of the Communist Party. They may want to come here and object to this bill, but, I suppose, if they had to answer that question, they very likely would not come."

Director of Public Relations Henry Lee Moon, the Association's propaganda chief, is listed as a member of the "subversive and Communist" Washington Book Shop and the likewise-designated National Negro Congress which is "the Communist-front movement in the United States among negroes." His book, "Balance of Power: The Negro Vote," was praised by the Daily Worker and he was listed in 1949 as a nominee to be commentator for the "subversive and Communist" Voice of Freedom Committee.

Of the NAACP's 28 Vice Presidents, the following 11 have records of Un-American activities:

John Haynes Holmes, 23 citations; A. Philip Randolph, 20 citations the late Mary McLeod Bethune (who still is listed as a vice president) and William Lloyd Imes, 16 citations each; Oscar Hammerstein, II, the composer, and Bishop W. J. Walls, seven citations each; Ira W. Jayne and L. Pearl Mitchell, two citations each; and Willard S. Townsend, T. G. Nutter and Grace B. Fenderson, one citation each.

Of the 47 members comprising the Association's Board of Directors, the following 28 have records of the Un-American activities:

Earl B. Dickerson, 25 citations; Algernon D. Black, 18 citations; Lewis Gannett, 15 citations; Roscoe Dunjee, 13 citations; S. Ralph Harlow and Chairman Channing H. Tobias, 10 citations each; William H. Hastie, nine citations; Hubert T. Delaney, eight citations; Benjamin E. Mays, president of Atlanta's morehouse College, six citations; Robert G. Weaver, five citations; Buell G. Gallagher, four citations; President Arthur B. Spingarn, Earl G. Harrison, James J. McClendon Ralph Bunche, Allen Knight Chalmers and W. Montague Cobb, three citations each; J. M. Tinsley, Wesley W. Law of Savannah, Ga., Norman Cousins , Z. Alexander Looby, Harry J. Greene and Alfred Baker Lewis, two citations each; and H. Claude Hudson, Carl R. Johnson, A Maceo Smith, James Hinton and Theodore M. Berry, one citation each.

Two other Vice Presidents and three other Directors are well-known apologists for left-wing causes. The two Vice Presidents are Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon and Eric Johnston of the Motion Picture Industry. The three Directors are Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, CIO President Walter Reuther and Senator Herbert H. Lehman of New York.

Other officers of the NAACP with Un-American activity records are:

Lloyd Garrison, chairman, National Legal Committee, five citations; Treasurer Allan Knight Chalmers and Branch Department Director Gloster B. Current, three citations each; Southeast Regional Secretary Ruby Hurley, West Coast Regional Secretary Franklin H. Williams, Field Secretary Madison S. Jones and Assistant Special Counsel Robert L. Carter, two citations each; and Field Secretary Tarea Hall Pittman, one citation.

But of all the NAACP officials and policy-makers listed in the files of the House Un-American Activities Committee, none has a record as notorious as that of W. E. B. DuBois to whom I have previously referred as one of the founders and present "Honorary Chairman" of the Association. No less than 72 citations of Communist, Communist-front and subversive activity are entered against his name -- the latest of which was the statement he issued upon the death of Joseph Stalin reading: "Let all negroes, Jews and foreign-born who have suffered in America from prejudice and intolerance, remember Joseph Stalin."

Yet this same W. E. B. DuBois was one of the "modern scientific authorities" whose writings were accepted by the United States Supreme Court as the basis for its decision of May 17, 1954, prohibiting segregation in the public schools. DuBois contributed to 82 different portions of the book, "An American Dilemma," which was cited in its entirety by the Supreme Court as an authority for its ruling.

And, speaking of that decision, let me emphasize in passing that 15 other contributors to "An American Dilemma" also have lengthy records of pro-Communist activity in the files of the Un-American Activities Committee. The same thing is true of two of the six individual authorities cited by the High Court -- Theodore Brameld and E. Franklin Frazier -- who between them have been members of or identified with 28 organizations declared to be Communist, Communist fronts or Communist dominated.

Another of the six individual authorities cited by the Supreme Court -- K. B. Clark -- was, at the time of the arguments before the Court, on the payroll of the NAACP as a so-called "social-science expert."

These records of individual officials and members of the NAACP are not the only source of proof of the subversive influences on and in that organization.

Elizabeth Dilling reported in her book, "The Red Network," that, during the seven years from 1923 to 1930, the NAACP received some $43,000 from the radical Garland Fund among whose directors were Communists William Z. Foster and Elizabeth Gurley Flynn. She also disclosed that the official report of the Fourth National Convention of the Communist Party of the United States held in 1925 stated that "the Party had penetrated the NAACP."

Official records show that the NAACP has consistently affiliated itself with Communist and left-wing movements.

It was a member of the American Youth for a Free World which was organized in 1942 and, in 1948, was described by the California Un-American Activities Committee as "heavily infiltrated and effectively dominated by the Communist Party." The House Un-American Activities Committee in its 1951 Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications described the AYFW as "a Communist clearing house."

In 1945, the NAACP sent its Branch Department Director, Gloster Current to London as an official delegate representing the Association at the founding of the World Federation of Democratic Youth. This Federation was cited by the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1948 as "part of the Communist International "solar system."

A report made at a meeting of the Communist Party of the United States on July 16, 1946, showed that the NAACP was one of a group of left-wing organizations invited by the National Committee of the Communist Party to a meeting held in Chicago to form a "third party." That report, as detailed on pages 150-51 of the 1947 Report of the House Un-American Activities Committee, lists the NAACP as an active participant in the conference at which the Progressive Citizens of America was formed.

And earlier this month, according to the United Press, the NAACP picketed a hearing on Communist propaganda conducted in Chicago by Senator Eastland for the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee.

A pamphlet outlining the Program of the Communist Party of the United States, published in September 1954 by New Century Publishers of New York City, made specific reference on Page 22 to a link between the Communist Party and the NAACP. It stated:

"We call upon wage workers, working farmers, the Negro people, small business and professional people, upon the women and the youth, to join hands in a common fight...for the democratic demands of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Former Negro Communist Foster Williams, Jr., testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee about this matter on June 17, 1954, in Seattle, Wash. He said:

"The Communist Party very sneakily manipulates the negro people for their own purposes..The NAACP has had this trouble."

The racial aims of the Communist Party of the United States and those of the NAACP are virtually identical. The Communist program, as reported in the May 26, 1928, issue of the Daily Worker, calls for :

"Full racial equality.

"Abolition of all laws which result in segregation of negroes.

"Abolition of laws forbidding intermarriage of persons of different races.

"Abolition of all laws and public administration measures which prohibit, or in practice prevent, Negro children from attending general public schools or universities.

"Full and equal admittance of negroes to all waiting rooms, restaurants, hotels and theaters."

Those are the identical demands being made today, 27 years later, by the NAACP.

On the basis of the evidence now in hand -- a minute portion of which I have related to you this afternoon -- no other conclusion can be drawn but that the NAACP is being used as a front and tool by subversive elements in this country. Either knowingly or unwittingly, it has allowed itself to become part and parcel of the Communist conspiracy to overthrow the democratic governments of this nation and its sovereign states.

Through its activities, the NAACP is fomenting strife and discord between the white and negro races in the South and is disrupting relations between these races which heretofore have been -- and at present are -- harmonious and friendly in every respect. These activities, carried to their ultimate conclusion, can only result in conflict, bloodshed and internal revolution, delivering this nation into the hands of international Communism.

The NAACP is being aided and abetted in its agitation by three "front" organizations on the Southern scene -- the Southern Conference Education Fund; the Southern Regional Council; and the SRC's affiliate, the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation. The Southern Conference Education Fund and the Southern Regional Council are both dominated by individuals who, like the officials of the NAACP, have long records of affinity for and participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling, left-wing and subversive organizations and activities. Sworn testimony taken by both House and Senate Committees has placed known Communists in both organizations and the Southern Conference Education Fund may soon be designated a subversive organization.

The Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation is a perfect example of an organization formed for the purpose of exploiting the names, reputations and services of well-intentioned do-gooders. It is composed of some of Georgia's most distinguished clergymen and most prominent civic and social leaders who have been duped into doing the bidding of the more sinister elements manipulating the Southern Regional Council.

Investigations currently are being made of all three organizations -- the results of which will greatly embarass those good citizens who unwittingly have become involved in their activities. I urge all such persons to take immediate steps to disassociate themselves from these groups and to disavow their programs and leaders before they, their friends and their congregations are exposed to the anguish and embarrassment which exposure of these groups will necessarily mean.

The activities of the NAACP and its local fronts pose a serious threat to the peace, tranquility, government and way of life of our State. And for that reason it is my intention to present the evidence which already has been, and currently is being, compiled about the subversive nature of these activities to the 1956 session of the General Assembly of Georgia convening next January for appropriate action by the elected representatives of the people of this State.

In the meantime I pledge the full resources of my Office to the enforcement of all existing State laws and constitutional provisions relating to subversive activities and our traditional pattern of race relations. And, toward that end, I solicit -- and know I can count on -- the full support and cooperation of you, the peace officers of Georgia.

I thank you.

Dear Board Member:

October 19th the Attorney General of Georgia, one Eugene Cook, made a speech to the Georgia Peace Officers Association. It was mainly a misinformed blast at the NAACP. In addition, it had in it the paragraphs attached. These were answered by press releases, as also attached.

As the Board meets November 9th, we thought this material should be in your hands ahead of time.

Excerpts from Attorney General Cook's Speech before the Georgia Peace
Officers Association, October 19, 1955

GEORGIA COMMITTEE ON INTERRACIAL COOPERATION
63 AUBURN AVENUE

For the Attorney General to label the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation a "front" organization is not only ridiculous, but it is a libel on those Georgia leaders he labels as "dupes" and on Georgia officials as well.

True, the Georgia Committee is composed of "some of Georgia's most distinguished clergymen and most prominent civic and social leaders." And it is these same leaders who make up the board of directors and the executive committee of the group. It is these same leaders who plan and direct the policy and program of the Georgia Committee and are sincerely trying to help solve a difficult Southern problem.

The Georgia Committee has a history dating back to 1919. If, as the Attorney General claims, an investigation is being made of the Georgia Committee, why should it come at this time? The answer is obvious when one stops to consider the fact that there are some irresponsible people today who claim the Supreme Court of the United States is under the influence of Communists. Who could better claim the label of subversive -- those who seek to uphold the supreme law of the land or those who seek to circumvent it? The Attorney General is seeking to delay the solution and impugning the motives of those who seek to help work out a solution.

On a monument to the British soldiers who died on King's Mountain, S. C., is this inscription, "They came 3000 miles to keep the past on the throne." There are still those who fight to keep the past on the throne.

The Georgia Committee will welcome any investigation by responsible people. It has nothing to hide.

Guy H. Wells
Executive Director

Any charges that the Southern Regional Council has Communist connections or is influenced by Communist ideas are poppycock. The Southern Regional Council is made up of reasonable, tolerant, and forward-looking citizens who wish to see the states in the South do a sober, responsible job of accomodating themselves to the changes in the world around us. As to investigations, they are perfectly welcome. We have nothing to hide. All that will result will be red faces for those who set on the investigators.

The Southern Regional Council is made up of some eighty people, who are members of its Board of Directors. Some of them are white and some are Negro. All of them are distinguished for their active and thoughtful careers within the South. What a tragedy for a state attorney general, sworn to uphold the law, to attack one of the few efforts which proceeds within the South to deal truthfully and in mutual respect with the problems which the region confronts! Watch the birdie. Who is proposing conduct subversive of the Constitution and courts of our land?

Davis of Georgia and Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi.

I am prepared to prove everything I shall say. And I wish to state for the benefit of those who undoubtedly will attempt to smear me and discredit my findings and conclusions that I would welcome the opportunity to present the evidence I have in hand for determination before a trial jury in a court of law.

At the outset I wish to make it clear that the issue involved is one not of race but rather of subversion. None of the organizations which have exploited the race issue in this country has ever had the welfare of the negro people at heart. They have seized upon this issue as a convenient front for their more nefarious activities and as one with which they could dupe naive do-gooders, fuzzy-minded intellectuals, misguided clergymen and radical journalists to be their pawns.

The record shows that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was neither founded nor is presently directed by colored people. It was originated in New York City 46 years ago as the brain child of a Southern scallawag journalist and Russian-trained revolutionary named William E. Walling. Its principal personalities during its early years were descendants of the rabble-rousing abolitionists who fomented the strife which precipitated the War Between the States, a conflict which could have been avoided but for the activities of those abolitionists.

Of its five founders only one was a negro -- a Communist-sympathizing lawyer named W. E. B. DuBois whose record of participation in Communist, Communist-front and subversive organizations and activities taken from the files of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the United States House of Representatives requires eight pages of single-spaced, typewritten copy to outline. Among his more recent activities of this nature was the donation of his services in the preparation of legal briefs defending since-executed Communist spies Julius and Ethyl Rosenberg and the imprisoned leaders of the Communist Party of the United States. In 1953 he was awarded the International Peace Prize by the "Communist front" World Peace Council in recognition of his participation in the sponsorship of the series of Communist-dominated World Peace Conferences held since 1949 in an attempt to undermine the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

DuBois was Director of Research for the NAACP until 1949 and now is referred to by its officers and members as the organization's "Honorary Chairman."

In addition to Walling and DuBois, the other NAACP founders -- all white -- were Dr. Henry Moskowitz; Socialist Oswald Garrison Villard, grandson of Abolitionist William Lloyd Garrison; and Miss Mary Ovington White, also a descendant of an old-time abolitionist. The first president of the Association was a white Boston lawyer, Moorfield Storey, who was identified in his youth with the abolitionist movement and who served as secretary to the original race-baiter, Massachusetts Senator Charles Sumner.

From that day to this, South-hating white people with long records of affinity for, affiliation with and participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling and subversive organizations, activities and causes have directed and subsidized the NAACP. Its present president, Arthur B. Spingarn of New York City, is a white man as are a large number of the current officers, directors and principal contributors.

The files of the House Un-American Activities Committee reveal records of affiliation with or participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling or subversive organizations or activities on the part of the following present officials of the NAACP -- the President, the Chairman of the Board, the "Honorary Chairman," 11 of 28 Vice Presidents, the Treasurer, 28 of 47 Directors, the Chairman of the National Legal Committee, the Executive Secretary, the Special Counsel, the Assistant Special Counsel, the Southeast Regional Secretary, the West Coast Secretary, the Director of the Washington Bureau, the Director of Public Relations and two Field Secretaries.

The transcript of this evidence numbers 121 pages of single-spaced, typewritten copy and would require more than six hours to be read aloud. Time being a factor, it is impossible to present all of this material; but, to give you an idea of the backgrounds and ideologies of the policy-making officials and personnel of the NAACP, I shall cite chapter and verse on the activities of this organization's principal personalities.

(The designations which I shall use in describing the organizations and activities with which these individuals have been identified are those applied to them by the Attorney General of the United States, the House Un-American Activities Committee or the Special House Un-American Activities Committee.)

President Spingarn was a participant in the Conference on Africa held April 14, 1944, in New York City by the "subversive and Communist" Council on African Affairs. In 1945 and 1946 he signed statements favoring the granting of Army commissions to Communists and opposing the use of injunctions in labor disputes sponsored by the "viciously subversive" National Federation of Constitutional Liberties. He is listed as a sponsor of the "Communist front" Public Use of Arts Committee.

Board Chairman Channing H. Tobias was a member of the Executive Board and Co-Chairman of the New York Committee of the "Communist front" Southern Conference for Human Welfare which was charged in 1947 with "serving the Soviet Union and its subserveient Communist Party in the United States." He belonged, prior to 1949, to the "subversive and Communist" Council on African Affairs and was a member of the Editorial Advisory Board of the "Protestant Digest" --a magazine which "has faithfully propagated the Communist Party line." He sponsored the "subversive and Communist" People's Institute of Applied Religion and the American Committee for Yugoslav Relief and was a member of the Executive Board of the American League for Peace and Democracy, "the largest of the Communist-front movements in the United States." He has sponsored conferences and activities of the "viciously subversive" National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, the "Communist front" New York State Conference on National Unity and the "subversive and Communist" American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born and the National Committee to Win the Peace.

Roy Wilkins -- successor to the late Walter White as NAACP Executive Secretary -- was quoted on June 17, 1936, by the New York Daily Worker, the official publication of the Communist Party in this country, as attaching "greatest significance" to the 1936 National Communist Party Convention and stating that the Communist Party's racial program had had "a very wholesome effect" in the United States. He was further quoted by the Daily Worker on July 15, 1949, as boasting that he had voted in New York City elections that year for since-convicted Negro Communist Benjamin J. Davis. He is listed as a member of the National Committee of the "Communist front" International Juridical Association which has "actively defended Communists and consistently followed the Communist Party line." He was a sponsor of the "subversive and Communist" Conference on Pan American Democracy, and of a joint meeting in 1937 of the "subversive and Communist" American League Against War and Fascism and the "Communist front" American Friends of the Chinese People. He has spoken for the "subversive and Communist" International Labor Defense and the Workers' Alliance, the former of which is regarded as the "legal arm of the Communist Party" in this country.

Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall -- the negro lawyer responsible for the NAACP's court attacks upon segregation in the public schools-- as late as 1950 was a member of the Executive Board of the "Communist front" National Lawyers Guild which has been described as "the foremost legal bulwark of the Communist Party, its front organizations and controlled unions." Since its inception, the Guild "has never failed to rally to the legal defense of the Communist Party and individual members thereof, including known espionage agents." And, as a member and policy-making official of this Communist Front, Marshall has served as Associate Editor of the "Lawyers Guild Review" and has criticized this nation's loyalty program. He also is listed as a member of the National Committee of the "Communist front" International Juridical Association which has "actively defended Communists and consistently followed the Communist Party line." And he was among a group of attorneys who, in 1947, protested the issuance of contempt citations against pro-Communist Hollywood writers who refused to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The director of the NAACP's Washington Bureau, Clarence M. Mitchell, protested against being asked whether he was or ever had been a member of the Communist Party at a hearing on proposed legislation to outlaw the Communist Party held before the House Un-American Activities Committee on May 3, 1950. Although he stoutly denied being a Communist, he was quoted as saying that such a question was "unfair" because it "immediately precludes from appearing before this Committee many of the people who would be on trial under a bill of this kind." The transcript further quoted him as saying that: "Presumably there are people who may, for sincere and personal reasons, wish to be members of the Communist Party. They may want to come here and object to this bill, but, I suppose, if they had to answer that question, they very likely would not come."

Director of Public Relations Henry Lee Moon, the Association's propaganda chief, is listed as a member of the "subversive and Communist" Washington Book Shop and the likewise-designated National Negro Congress which is "the Communist-front movement in the United States among negroes." His book, "Balance of Power: The Negro Vote," was praised by the Daily Worker and he was listed in 1949 as a nominee to be commentator for the "subversive and Communist" Voice of Freedom Committee.

Of the NAACP's 28 Vice Presidents, the following 11 have records of Un-American activities:

John Haynes Holmes, 23 citations; A. Philip Randolph, 20 citations the late Mary McLeod Bethune (who still is listed as a vice president) and William Lloyd Imes, 16 citations each; Oscar Hammerstein, II, the composer, and Bishop W. J. Walls, seven citations each; Ira W. Jayne and L. Pearl Mitchell, two citations each; and Willard S. Townsend, T. G. Nutter and Grace B. Henderson, one citation each.

Of the 47 members comprising the Association's Board of Directors, the following 28 have records of the Un-American activities:

Earl B. Dickerson, 25 citations; Algernon D. Black, 18 citations; Lewis Gannett, 15 citations; Roscoe Dunjee, 13 citations; S. Ralph Harlow and Chairman Channing H. Tobias, 10 citations each; William H. Hastie, nine citations; Hubert T. Delaney, eight citations; Benjamin E. Mays, president of Atlanta's morehouse College, six citations; Robert G. Weaver, five citations; Buell G. Gallagher, four citations; President Arthur B. Spingarn, Earl G. Harrison, James J. McClendon, Ralph Bunche, Allen Knight Chalmers and W. Montague Cobb, three citations each; J. M. Tinsley, Wesley W. Law of Savannah, Ga., Norman Cousins, Z. Alexander Looby, Harry J. Greene and Alfred Baker Lewis, two citations each; and H. Claude Hudson, Carl R. Johnson, A. Maceo Smith, James Hinton and Theodore M. Berry, one citation each.

Two other Vice Presidents and three other Directors are well-known apologists for left-wing causes. The two Vice Presidents are Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon and Eric Johnston of the Motion Picture Industry. The three Directors are Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, CIO President Walter Reuther and Senator Herbert H. Lehman of New York.

Other officers of the NAACP with Un-American activity records are:

Lloyd Garrison, chairman, National Legal Committee, five citations; Treasurer Allan Knight Chalmers and Branch Department Director Gloster B. Current, three citations each; Southeast Regional Secretary Ruby Hurley, West Coast Regional Secretary Franklin H. Williams, Field Secretary Madison S. Jones and Assistant Special Counsel Robert L. Carter, two citations each; and Field Secretary Tarea Hall Pittman, one citation.

But of all the NAACP officials and policy-makers listed in the files of the House Un-American Activities Committee, none has a record as notorious as that of W. E. B. DuBois to whom I have previously referred as one of the founders and present "Honorary Chairman" of the Association. No less than 72 citations of Communist, Communist-front and subversive activity are entered against his name -- the latest of which was the statement he issued upon the death of Joseph Stalin reading: "Let all negroes, Jews and foreign-born who have suffered in America from prejudice and intolerance, remember Joseph Stalin."

Yet this same W. E. B. DuBois was one of the "modern scientific authorities" whose writings were accepted by the United States Supreme Court as the basis for its decision of May 17, 1954, prohibiting segregation in the public schools. DuBois contributed to 82 different portions of the book, "An American Dilemma," which was cited in its entirety by the Supreme Court as an authority for its ruling.

And, speaking of that decision, let me emphasize in passing that 15 other contributors to "An American Dilemma" also have lengthy records of pro-Communist activity in the files of the Un-American Activities Committee. The same thing is true of two of the six individual authorities cited by the High Court -- Theodore Brameld and E. Franklin Frazier -- who between them have been members of or identified with 28 organizations declared to be Communist, Communist fronts or Communist dominated.

Another of the six individual authorities cited by the Supreme Court -- K. B. Clark -- was, at the time of the arguments before the Court, on the payroll of the NAACP as a so-called "social-science expert."

These records of individual officials and members of the NAACP are not the only source of proof of the subversive influences on and in that organization.

Elizabeth Dilling reported in her book, "The Red Network," that, during the seven years from 1923 to 1930, the NAACP received some $43,000 from the radical Garland Fund among whose directors were Communists William Z. Foster and Elizabeth Gurley Flynn. She also disclosed that the official report of the Fourth National Convention of the Communist Party of the United States held in 1925 stated that "the Party had penetrated the NAACP."

Official records show that the NAACP has consistently affiliated itself with Communist and left-wing movements.

It was a member of the American Youth for a Free World which was organized in 1942 and, in 1948, was described by the California Un-American Activities Committee as "heavily infiltrated and effectively dominated by the Communist Party." The House Un-American Activities Committee in its 1951 Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications described the AYFW as "a Communist clearing house."

In 1945, the NAACP sent its Branch Department Director, Gloster Current, to London as an official delegate representing the Association at the founding of the World Federation of Democratic Youth. This Federation was cited by the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1948 as "part of the Communist International solar system."

A report made at a meeting of the Communist Party of the United States on July 16, 1946, showed that the NAACP was one of a group of left-wing organizations invited by the National Committee of the Communist Party to a meeting held in Chicago to form a "third party." That report, as detailed on pages 150-51 of the 1947 Report of the House Un-American Activities Committee, lists the NAACP as an active participant in the conference at which the Progressive Citizens of America was formed.

And earlier this month, according to the United Press, the NAACP picketed a hearing on Communist propaganda conducted in Chicago by Senator Eastland for the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee.

A pamphlet outlining the Program of the Communist Party of the United States, published in September 1954 by New Century Publishers of New York City, made specific reference on Page 22 to a link between the Communist Party and the NAACP. It stated:

"We call upon wage workers, working farmers, the Negro people, small business and professional people, upon the women and the youth, to join hands in a common fight...for the democratic demands of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Former Negro Communist Foster Williams, Jr., testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee about this matter on June 17, 1954, in Seattle, Wash. He said:

"The Communist Party very sneakily manipulates the negro people for their own purposes..The NAACP has had this trouble."

The racial aims of the Communist Party of the United States and those of the NAACP are virtually identical. The Communist program, as reported in the May 26, 1928, issue of the Daily Worker, calls for:

"Full racial equality.

"Abolition of all laws which result in segregation of negroes.

"Abolition of laws forbidding intermarriage of persons of different races.

"Abolition of all laws and public administration measures which prohibit, or in practice prevent, Negro children from attending general public schools or universities.

"Full and equal admittance of negroes to all waiting rooms, restaurants, hotels and theaters."

Those are the identical demands being made today, 27 years later, by the NAACP.

On the basis of the evidence now in hand -- a minute portion of which I have related to you this afternoon -- no other conclusion can be drawn but that the NAACP is being used as a front and tool by subversive elements in this country. Either knowingly or unwittingly, it has allowed itself to become part and parcel of the Communist conspiracy to overthrow the democratic governments of this nation and its sovereign states.

Through its activities, the NAACP is fomenting strife and discord between the white and negro races in the South and is disrupting relations between these races which heretofore have been -- and at present are -- harmonious and friendly in every respect. These activities, carried to their ultimate conclusion, can only result in conflict, bloodshed and internal revolution, delivering this nation into the hands of international Communism.

THE NAACP isbeing aided and abetted in its agitation by three "front" organizations on the Southern scene -- the Southern Conference Education Fund; the Southern Regional Council; and the SRC's affiliate, the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation. The Southern Conference Education Fund and the Southern Regional Council are both dominated by individuals who, like the officials of the NAACP, have long records of affinity for and participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling, left-wing and subversive organizations and activities. Sworn testimony taken by both House and Senate Committees has placed known Communists in both organizations and the Southern Conference Education Fund may soon be designated a subversive organization.

The Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation is a perfect example of an organization formed for the purpose of exploiting the names, reputations and services of well-intentioned do-gooders. It is composed of some of Georgia's most distinguished clergymen and most prominent civic and social leaders who have been duped into doing the bidding of the more sinister elements manipulating the Southern Regional Council.

Investigations currently are being made of all three organizations -- the results of which will greatly embarass those good citizens who unwittingly have become involved in their activities. I urge all such persons to take immediate steps to disassociate themselves from these groups and to disavow their programs and leaders before they, their friends and their congregations are exposed to the anguish and embarrassment which exposure of these groups will necessarily mean.

The activities of the NAACP and its local fronts pose a serious threat to the peace, tranquillity, government and way of life of our State. And for that reason it is my intention to present the evidence which already has been, and currently is being, compiled about the subversive nature of these activities to the 1956 session of the General Assembly of Georgia convening next January for appropriate action by the elected representatives of the people of this State.

In the meantime I pledge the full resources of my Office to the enforcement of all existing State laws and constitutional provisions relating to subversive activities and our traditional pattern of race relations. And, toward that end, I solicit -- and know I can count on -- the full support and cooperation of you, the peace officers of Georgia.

I thank you.

My dear Mr. Cook:

Thank you for mailing me a copy of the speech you made on October 19 to the Peace Officers Association of Georgia.

You will perhaps realize that I do not agree with the argument presented in this speech. I am positive that any impartial investigation will reveal that neither the NAACP nor the Southern Regional Council is communist-inspired or communist-controlled. The same can be said about the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation.

I am very active in the Southern Regional Council and in the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation. The Council can trace its origin back to 1919 when Negro and white men and women of courage and of good will decided that they should come together to form an organization whose main purpose would be to ease the racial tensions prevalent through the South following World War I. Some of the South's most distinguished Christian men and women were members of that organization.

More recently the Southern Regional Council was organized as a successor to the earlier organization which was called the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. I believe the Council was chartered in Georgia by four people--two Negro and two white. The record will show, I believe, that Bishop Arthur Moore of the Methodist Church was a charter member of the Council.

I know personally about 90 per cent of the members of the Southern Regional Council. For anyone to state that the Council is dominated by individuals who "have long records of affinity for and participation in Communist, Communist-front, fellow-traveling, left-wing and subversive organizations and activities" reveals that the person speaking simply does not know what the facts are.

As Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Southern Regional Council I want to assure you that an unbiased investigation of the Council would be welcomed provided the results of the investigation would be publicized without restriction.

What I have said about the Southern Regional Council applies just as much to the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation. The distinguished

FROM: GSM

At approximately 4:00 p.m., George Mitchell, on October 24th, telephoned U. S. District Attorney James Dorsey and asked for an appointment when Mitchell and one or two friends might come over and expound to him the truth of the charges erroneously made by Georgia's Attorney General Eugene Cook. Mr. Dorsey said that he would be willing to receive a social visit, but such a visit would have no official quarter as a record, would establish nothing, and more to that effect.

Finding him thus unreceptive to the purpose of the visit, I did not persist to make one.

October 26th, Wednesday, Guy Wells and George Mitchell called on Solicitor Paul Webb of Fulton County by appointment. Mr. Webb earlier expressed himself as thoroughly familiar with the Georgia Interracial Commission, but as not having much background on the SRC. Mitchell recalled to him W. W. Alexander (whose newspaper Webb used to deliver!) and traced the growth out of the Interracial Commission to the SRC. Mitchell carefully disassociated SRC from the SCHW or the SCEF. Spoke of the request of the Cox Committee for information on many things, including our past Board members, and of Mitchell's assumption that they, Craft and friends) had mined this material, taking and mis-taking what they wished.

Mitchell reviewed the possibility that a single former Board member, Louis Burnham, formerly had some communist links, but stated that Burnham had not been a member of the Board since some such date in 1945 or 1946. Similar charges had been made against Clarke Foreman, who also went off the Board in 1946 or 1947. But Mitchell regarded these charges as not established.

Mr. Webb expressed himself as mildly surprised that we had thought the charges made by Attorney Eugene Cook worth anyone's interest and excitement, as in his (Webb's) view they were political in nature. Mitchell explained that such charges, if not refuted circulated widely and could be the source of legislative attacks, or of added difficulty in raising money.

The Solicitor expressed himself as appreciating our visit, and as being glad to have this additional information. His response to it he said was to move in the case of suspected violation of any of the criminal statutes,and that was his only duty.

Dear Mr. McGovern:

Pursuant to my conversation with you in your office this morning, I am enclosing a copy of address delivered by Attorney General Eugene Cook before the Peace Officers Association of Georgia at a meeting in Atlanta on October 19, 1955. The references to the Southern Regional Council and its affiliate, the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation are found on page 6.

We can fully appreciate the reasons which prompt you not to investigate general allegations of the kind made by Mr. Cook. However, we do wish the files of your office to show that we invited your attention to Mr. Cook's address and stated our desire that his imputations as to us should receive your investigation.

We are taking the liberty also of enclosing copy of a statement which the Council has written in reply to Mr. Cook's allegations. Both of these documents are also being sent to Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Washington, D. C., as per enclosed copy of letter to Mr. Hoover.

We should like for both you and Mr. Hoover to have our assurance that all documents, records, and any other relevant material will be promptly made available to any representative of your organization upon request, and that all of our personnel will be glad to cooperate at any time in any investigation that you may later wish to make.

Dear Mr. Shoemaker:

Enclosed is a resume of a meeting that the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation, an affiliate of the Council, held with Governor Marvin Griffin. We thought it might be of interest to you.

Incidentally, we were disappointed that the Southern School News of November did not carry statements by the Council and the Georgia Committee concerning charges made by Attorney General Eugene Cook. These statements were released to the press prior to Mr. Cook's speech and were carried in the wire service reports of the speech. I enclose copies of the statements for your information.

In the future, we will make an effort to see that Mr. Parham gets copies of all of our releases personally rather than relying on the wire services.

Dear Mr. Constable:

Thank you for your letter of Nov. 8 and for your enclosures. I certainly plan to use something about the meeting between Gov. Griffin and the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation in my next report for Southern School News.

I had so many clippings on Attorney General's speech and on reactions to his speech that I inadvertently overlooked the statements of the SRC and of the Committee. Space limitations would have permitted only brief quotation but something should have been carried. I am filing the statements you sent me and perhaps opportunity will yet arise to give them circulation through Southern School News.

Dear Mr. Mitchell:

Thank you for your letter of November 10th.

I shall be pleased to receive the history of the Southern Regional Council.

It seems to me that some counter should be made to Mr. Eugene Cook's position in which he would be taken to task for speaking for the colored people as to their aims.

Would he like to see any group of American citizens without ambitions and hopes to better themselves? If either the whites or the colored have weaknesses they should be brought out so that each side can have an opportunity of correcting them.

Be this as it may, I am sure that you are continuing to do constructive work.

With assurance of my high regard, believe me,

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM

TO: STAFF

FROM: GSM

November 15th, about noon, received telephone call from one Bill Burson, who described himself as an assistant to one Attorney General Eugene Cook. Said he had been instructed by the Attorney General to obtain from us a list of our present officers. Had thought of coming over during his lunch hour to pick it up.

I told him that he would be perfectly welcome to them, and to come ahead. About 12:20 p.m., he came in. Small fellow.

I had him seated and asked him what in the world had come over his boss that the man should depart so far from any reasonable course of action. Poor Mr. Burson stated that he was an executive assistant to Mr. Cook and was not in position to have any opinions on the matter. He did venture on his own that the factual charges, as to the record of various persons named as having records, would stand, would they not? Asked if we had seen the story in the Journal-American, and offered to send us a copy. I said that we had a copy. I said that this was perfectly libellous, and he said that as a former newspaper man, he was inclined to agree.

I asked him if he would send us a list of persons appointed by the Attorney General of Georgia to assist in segregation cases. He said that these persons now numbered seventeen, and he would be glad to send us a list.

I handed him a copy of the mimeographed manuscript, "The Attack on Free Opinion," with a corrected copy of our current letterhead, showing the officers and the principal staff members. Was at pains to include Leonard Haas as Counsel.

On the list of all persons who had ever served on the Executive Committee, I marked those who were currently officers, plus, also, those who were, as of October, members of the Executive Committee.

I was unable to resolve in the few moments available whether the Reverend Andrew Turnipseed was a member of the Executive Committee, and did not so mark him. My card shows him as having been elected to the Board and to the Executive Committee May 14, 1953, and as having accepted August 6, 1953, and as in the class of 1955.

I incline to the view that he is a member of the Executive Committee, although Mrs. Brantley tells me that he has never been on any list currently used by her. This may explain the mystery of why he never comes to meetings. He may never have been notified of meetings.

Name 21 Pro-Reds on Board Of Dixie Race Study Council

By LEON RACHT and JEFFREY ROCHE

The board of directors of a Southern organization granted $240,000 by the controversial Fund for the Republic includes 21 members with past pro-Communist affiliations, a survey revealed today.

Investigation of the background of the Southern Regional Council also revealed that 13 of these supported the now-defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare, cited as an arm of the Communist Party by two Congressional committees.

The Council, with headquarters in Atlanta, operates in 12 Dixie states. Its stated aims, in substance, have been to explore relationships between white and Negro in the South.

Early last year, the Council received the grant from the Fund which has been under strong attack recently for alleged left-wing activities. The Fund was set up by the Ford Foundation under $15,000,000 no-strings-attached grant.

Out of 14 members of the Council's executive committee, four were found to have supported pro-Communist enterprises in one form or another. They are:

George S. Mitchell, executive director: sponsor of the Civil Rights Congress, cited subversive by the Attorney General.

Rufus E. Clement, chairman: sponsor of American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born, one of the oldest subversive organizations in the U. S. In addition, Clement has been a member of many other Communist fronts.

The Rev. A. S. Turnipseed, connected with the National Committee of Methodist Federation for Social Action, cited subversive by the House UN-American Activities Committee.

Paul R. Christopher: signed protest against Dies Committee, under auspices of National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, cited subversive by Attorney General.

Besides these commie-fronters who boss the Council, the partial records of other board members follow:

Rufus B. Atwood: signed statement supporting Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, according to Daily Worker, Feb. 8, 1939.

B. R. Brazeal: Civil Rights Congress sponsor.

W. C. Brooke: sponsored Bill of Rights Conference, cited by House Un-American Activities Committee.

G. E. Clary: signed statement for Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact, cited by Congress as Communist front.

Charles Clingman: sponsored dinner forum on behalf of Protestant Digest, cited by California Un-American Activities Committee.

Herbert Davidson: sent greetings to Mother Bloor (Communist heroine) Celebration Committee.

J. M. Ellison: Signed statement for National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions according to Daily Mirror, June 29, 1951. Organization is on Attorney General's subversive list.

Albert D'Orlando: Signed Amicus Curiae on behalf of the Rev. John Howard Mellish when latter was before Supreme Court fighting his ouster from a Brooklyn church for alleged pro-Communist activities.

Charles G. Gomillion: On advisory board and secretary of Southern Negro Youth Congress on Attorney General's subversive list.

Charles S. Johnson: Sponsor of American Committee for Foreign Born. Has other affiliations in same direction.

Ralph O'Hara Lanier: Also on board of Southern Negro Youth Congress.

Benjamin L. Mays: Has long list of affiliations with organizations cited by Attorney General and House Un-American Activities Committee.

Florence S. Sytz: sponsor, National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions.

L. E. Thomas: signer of First Line of Defense, according to Daily Worker, Aug. 29, 1948.

H. Councill Trenholm: sponsored program for W. E. B. Dubois, Feb. 23, 1951. Dubois is a veteran pro-Communist.

Carter Wesley: sponsored dinner honoring Communist leader Ferdinand C. Smith.

Josephine Wilkins: sponsored Council of Young Southerners, cited as Communist-front by House committee.

Those who were members of the openly pro-Communist Southern Conference for Human Welfare include Atwood, Christopher, Clary, Clement, Davidson, Johnson, Mitchell, Trenholm, Wilkins, Gomillion, Mays and Ellison.

Disclosure of the Southern Regional Council's heavily pro-Communist tinge is the latest blow at left-wing activities of the Fund for the Republic.

Earlier, the Fund came under strong anti-Communist attack for its allegedly slanted bibliography on communism in the U. S.; its employment of Earl Browder, former secretary of the American Communist Party, as a "paid informant;" and employment of Amos Landman as publicity man, three weeks after he took the 5th Amendment when asked if he ever was a Communist.

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover

Department of Justice
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I enclose copy of an address delivered by Attorney General Eugene Cook of this state before the Peace Officers Association of Georgia at a meeting in Atlanta on October 19, 1955. Your attention is directed to certain references to the Southern Regional Council and its affiliate, the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation, which are found on page 6. We are also enclosing copy of a statement which the Council has issued in reply to Mr. Cook's allegations.

We naturally do not wish to rest under imputations of the sort made by Mr. Cook. For that reason, this morning I conferred with Mr. James L. McGovern, assistant special agent in charge, at the Atlanta office of the F.B.I. The purpose of my visit was to invite your organization to make some investigation of the Cook charges. We gather that it is not your policy to conduct investigations of general allegations of the kind made by Mr. Cook. Quite obviously this would be an onerous task. We do feel under the necessity, however, of having your files show that investigation was sought by us.

If, at any time in the future, you should feel disposed to conduct any investigation, you have our assurance that all relevant information will promptly be made available to you and your personnel will be pleased to render any assistance you desire.

Very truly yours,

M. A. Wright
President

My dear George:

You have done me a real favor in sending me these statements on the Georgia's Attorney General's attack on the Council. Something of the same kind of demagoguery occasionally erupts in Arkansas, and I need this material.

We are finishing our work here at the UN about December 10th. Will spend some time in Arkansas then and will be back in Washington for the reconvening of Congress, January 1. Hope to see you shortly after that. Power to you.

Hon. Eugene Cook
Attorney General of Georgia
State Capitol, Atlanta

Dear Gene:

I have your letter and the copy of the alleged account of my Augusta talk. The written statement bearing the name of C. C. Prescott is in no sense an accurate account of what I said. It is a distorted, garbled account, obviously dictated by the bias of the writer. Neither you, the Governor, nor any member of the General Assembly were even mentioned by name.

I did deplore the passage of the so-called "private school" laws which most people believe are unconstitutional. At no time did I recommend violence or extreme measures, but suggested cooperation between the two groups to work out a satisfactory solution. Dr. Lester Rumble, President E. C. Peters, and others present can verify these facts.

Your implied threat to my retirement benefits, earned by my forty years of service as an educator, is unworthy of the Eugene Cook that I have known in the past. It can only be interpreted as an attempt to stifle freedom of speech.

Yours sincerely,

Guy H. Wells

Dear Mr. Wells:

Mr. Carl C. Prescott of Millen, Georgia, handed me a typed statement, copy of which is herewith enclosed, respecting some alleged inflamatory and disparaging remarks you made at a meeting of the Inter-Racial Committee at Paine College a few days ago.

Please examine these alleged statements attributed to you and others present and advise me whether they are true. Should you fail to unconditionally deny them, I feel it is my duty to transmit them to the Government and members of the General Assembly, properly sworn to by Mr. Prescott.

I sincerely hope that you who are honored by the State to hold the position of President Emeritus of one of our highest institutions of learning and the recipient of a substantial retirement fund, did not so discredit Georgia's official segregation plan and libel members of the General Assembly, the Governor and me.

Incidentally Mr. Prescott advised me that his brother accompanied him and will verify the charges made.

Sincerely yours,

Eugene Cook

Guy Wells Urging Georgia Rotary To Back NAACP, CIO And Eisenhower

Democratic Party Will Go Down In Face Of Onslaught Of Eisenhower, Labor Unions, Negro Bloc Vote In 1956

Warren Bought Vote Of Africans For GOP In Anti-Segregation School Decisions

The Democratic Party is headed for the rocks again in 1956.

The issue of integration of the races is bound to sink the ship in 1956.

The Democratic Party is foolish to try to outbid the Republicans for the Negro vote in 1956. Eisenhower lost ninety percent of the Negro vote in 1952 and won by a landslide of electoral college votes.

Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic candidate, was wide open for integrating the races and for an FEPC Bill and other civil rights measures. He got the Negro vote and he lost every state outside of the South.

People Were Tricked

Eisenhower kept quiet and led the people of the nation to think that the question of integration and the question of civil rights was a matter to be left to the States.

He not only carried every state North of the Mason-Dixon Line, but several Southern states as well.

This time, Eisenhower will be bidding for the Negro vote. He will be bidding higher than the Democrats will even go.

All Negroes For Ike

Eisenhower is bound to get the Negro vote in 1956.

A Negro writer by the name of Ralph L. Roy, writing in the February 27, 1956, issue of the New Leader, intimates that the Negro will vote Republican this time.

Up until Roosevelt's time, the Negro always voted Republican and 1932 was the first year when the Democrats got the Negro vote. It looks as if they have headed back home.

Adam Clayton Powell, a Negro Congressman from Harlem and one of the Negro leaders of the country, speaking in Boston, on February 3, 1956, said that President Eisenhower has made "the greatest contribution to civil rights in the history of the United States."

Support Is Promised

Charles C. Diggs, Jr., of Detroit, another Negro Congressman, said on the floor of the House in February, 1955 that "if the present President elects to run again" the Negroes would vote for him again unless the Democratic leaders in Congress outmatch what Eisenhower has done for the Negro.

Of course, this will not be done because the places of leadership in the Congress are held by Southerners.

Ike's Bright Stars

This Negro writer points out the following things in favor of the Eisenhower administration:

1. Abolition of segregation in the District of Columbia.
2. Integration in the civil service po-

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

The George campaign headquarters has adopted a slogan:

"Georgia for George."

That reminds me of a story they tell on Abraham Lincoln. They say that some good lady called at the White House to see Lincoln during the War Between the States.

At that time things were going bad for the Union Army and the South was having all the success.

Lincoln and his visitor discussed the awful plight of their situation at that time. Finally, the good lady said, "Well, Mr. Lincoln, we have the satisfaction of knowing that God is on our side."

Old Abe modestly replied, "My good lady, I hope we are on God's side."

Now, it seems that the George headquarters wants to move Georgia over on George's side.

Their desire is that we be for George.

Now what we need in Georgia is not somebody to be for George. What we need is somebody in the United States Senate to be for Georgia.

That being the case, I am going to propose a different slogan.

Let's have a Senator who is for Georgia.

Of course, I don't have much influence and will have little to do with it, but I propose this slogan:

"Talmadge for Georgia."

There is something funny about a long period of service in Washington. Those who stay there a long time get an inflated ego and think that the weight of the world rests on their shoulders and that they are indispensable.

This condition is produced, according to a friend of mine who ought to know, by a disease known as "Potomac fever."

Victims of the "Potomac fever" forget who elected them, forget where they come from and forget their states.

They become embroiled in grandiose schemes for ruling and controlling the world. To further their grandiose schemes they give away billions of dollars of your money. They tax us to support the world.

They become obsessed with the idea that it is their duty to tell the rest of the world what to do and to be in the midst of some asinine scheme to control the whole world.

It reminds me of a Senator from another state. A friend of mine from this Senator's state and I were interested in something in Washington and I asked the question if he thought the Senator would help us.

He replied in effect that this Senator had forgotten his own state and that he couldn't think about any problem unless it involved some grand international scheme. With a man whose mind is so occupied, he

Negroes Told To Use "Crowbar On Heads Of White People, Then They'll Respect You"

Dr. Guy Wells, a former President of Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville, has turned into a complete renegade.

He heads the Interracial Committee in Georgia appointed by the Southern Regional Council and financed with Ford money.

He is going over the state taking advantage of the Rotary Clubs and former friends on a speaking tour seeking to sell the white people on mixing with the Negroes.

While engaged in this nefarious and hateful enterprise, he is a retired President of the school and is drawing retirement pay from the State of Georgia.

Wells Is A Traitor

If there ever was a traitor to the white people of Georgia, it is Guy Wells and if there ever was a Southern renegade, he is it.

The things advocated by Dr. Wells, are the things sought by the NAACP, Eisenhower, Stevenson and the CIO.

On February 13, 1956, he came to Augusta, Georgia, to hold an interracial meet at Paine College.

This meeting was attended by about a dozen renegade whites and twenty-five Negroes.

It was presided over by Dr. Lester Rumble, Pastor of the St. John's Methodist Church of Augusta, Georgia. In introducing the renegade Wells, Dr. Rumble looked at the mixed audience and said, "What a beautiful setting this is."

This news comes to us from two farmer brothers. One lives in Burke County and the other in Jenkins County. They are both Methodists and take an active part in their own church.

They knew that their former district superintendent was a member of the renegade Wells' Interracial Committee and they knew that they worked out of Wesley Memorial Methodist Church in Atlanta. They knew that Paine College was supported by the Methodist Church for Negro students. They knew that Dr. Lester Rumble was a prominent member of the Methodist Church.

Newspapers Were Present

When the newspapers carried a story that this meeting would take place and that Dr. Rumble would preside, they decided to attend and see what happened.

They are C. O. Prescott, of Perkins, Georgia, and Eugene Prescott, of Waynesboro, Georgia.

They attended and they have written for The Augusta Courier an account of this meeting.

They state that being members of the

HARRIS' POINT SOUND

(From the Savannah Evening Press, February 20, 1956.)

Roy V. Harris came to Savannah Saturday afternoon as a member of the Georgia Board of Regents and by invitation delivered an address at Savannah State College, the occasion being the dedication of two new buildings at that well-known and rapidly advancing Negro institution of higher learning.

Mr. Harris is against integration, a position which is also the official stand of the state government as expressed in legislative acts, statements by the executive, and actions of state agencies, such as the Board of Regents. Mr. Harris took occasion in his address on Saturday afternoon to expound this position and the reasoning behind it. He was given a most courteous hearing and reports from the meeting indicate his remarks were well received, winning applaus and compliments for the speaker.

The atmosphere was calm and the visiting regent made his address without any untoward incident of any sort despite the efforts of certain sources to work up hostility to Mr. Harris and to embarrass him and the college authorities who invited him to speak. It is not surprising that in this city with its history of amicable relations between the races and the long recognition of the right of a person peacefully to speak his piece that the efforts to disturb came to naught.

The address of Mr. Harris was in large part a review of some historical truths, namely, that the white people and the Negro people have gotten along well in the South when left to handle their own affairs and way of life without outside interference, that this relationship has resulted in unsurpassed advances on both sides during and since the years they worked to overcome the devastation of the War Between the States. There is, as we see it, no denying these facts. Progress in the South, as it relates to all the inhabitants, testifies to this and stands as a concrete example, substantial and real as opposed to a status more wordy than factual in many other sections where criticism of the South is indulged in for political and other motives of expediency.

Mr. Harris, as we view it, was on sound ground in sounding a warning against the danger in interference by outsiders who would exploit situations for reasons beneficial to themselves rather than to the racial welfare in this region. Such problems as still exist are not going to be helped toward a mutually satifactory solution by government fiat, by corecion, by harangues from those from afar who do not understand the situation at all. That the progress and the happiness of both races in the South will be maintained by actions and decisions of the home folks working with an understanding of the problems based on long experience was Mr. Harris' point, clearly and eloquently made.

MR. HARRIS' TALK

Savannahians can look with pride, we think, to the fact that a state leader in the pro-segregation field could have appeared here, sans disorder or disturbance, before an audience which normally would have been considered hostile. We refer to the address of Mr. Roy V. Harris of Augusta, a member of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia, before the student body and alumni of Savannah State College. Mr. Harris appeared despite violent protest of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The occasion marked a notable advancement in the field of higher education in Savannah. It also marked, we think, a notable advancement in the cause of race relations in our city. It proved for one thing that members of the two races can sit down, without rancor or confusion, and listen to the outline of the other fellow's problem.

Would such a thing be possible today in "enlightened" New York or Chicago? We sincerely doubt it.

MICHIGAN'S HYPOCRITE

(From the Chicago Daily Tribune, Chicago, Ill.)

No matter how often the hypocrisy of "Soapy" Williams is exposed, that over-age juvenile always bounces back with more of the same. The CIO's captive governor of Michigan has now recklessly called upon the President and the attorney general to enforce the federal civil rights law in southern states where Negroes have been subjected to violence, as at the University of Alabama, altho he knows that nothing short of a military occupation by federal troops could at present ensure compliance.

Williams is a pretender in this instance, irresponsibly playing to the galleries as he has so often done. He knows what his proposal implies and he realizes it could not be effected without bringing chaos to a section of the country, but if he can delude some voters into thinking he is their champion he will be satisfied.

"Soapy" wouldn't dream of calling out his state guard to stop worse excesses than those in Alabama if committted by any of the CIO unions who keep him in the state house at Lansing. He has protected one CIO goon in Sheboygan, Wis., for beating two men—one of whom died later—early in the Kohler strike, by refusing to permit his extradition from Michigan. That matter is still in the courts, where Williams has already been rebuked for his action. He is only against lawlessness when he hopes to garner a few votes by denouncing it.

WELCOME, GOVERNOR GRIFFIN

(From the Shreveport Journal, Shreveport, Louisiana)

On behalf of all Shreveport citizens who are opposed to integration of the races in the classrooms of our public schools as ordered by the Supreme Court—and we are convinced these include an overwhelming majority of the city's residents—The Journal welcomes Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia and members of his party.

This newspaper urges its readers to attend a mass meeting sponsored by the Shreveport Citizens' Council in the Byrd High School Auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight and hear Governor Griffin spell out the South's case against desegregation.

The Shreveport Citizens' Council has as its president Attorney Robert G. Chandler and as its directors many of the city's most prominent church, civic, fraternal and business leaders. They deserve the encouragement of YOUR attendance at this highly important meeting tonight.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

said, how in the world do you think we can get him to think about two little individuals like me and you?

These are the symptoms of "Potomac fever."

We need somebody in Washington to represent Georgia people. We need somebody who is on Georgia's side.

So, instead of trying to push Georgia over on somebody else's side, let's get us a man who's on Georgia's side.

Now, I have nothing against Senator George. I have nothing but the kindest feelings towards him. As a matter of fact, I have helped him in every campaign he has had and I recognize that in the past he has rendered great service in the Senate.

At the same time, I have been sorely disappointed in him in recent years. I think I can list most of the things that caused me disappointment:

1. He supported the Republican farm program. He and the group with which he plays in the Senate could have defeated the Republican farm program.

Now, as a result of cooperation of some Democrats from the South with the Republican Party, the farmers of the South are almost prostrate. The farmers of Georgia have been given no protection.

During the Eisenhower Administration, the prices of farm products have gone way down, and coupled with the droughts we have had and the declining market, the farmer is getting squeezed. As a matter of fact, we have got a labor government in Washington. Both the Democrats and the Republicans are bidding for the labor vote and they are letting the farmer go.

With the Republican Administration, the farmer is the forgotten man and the cooperation that George and others have given the Republicans in this respect has been a sore disappointment.

2. While the farmers have been thrown to the dogs, we have been giving away billions of dollars to the people of foreign nations.

It seems to be the keynote of the Republicans that we must feed and support the foreigners and turn this country over to minority groups while the rest of us are cast aside.

In view of all the billions of dollars that the Eisenhower Administration has spent abroad, it certainly seems that they would be willing to do a little something for our own people.

When did it become a crime to do something for our folks? When did it become a crime to do something for the American farmer?

3. Senator George has been the main cog in the Republican foreign policy parade. He has headed the committee in the Senate and he has been instrumental in helping shape the Republican foreign policy.

CIO Using Negro In Effort To Grab Power -- Editor Says

Union Is Seeking To Get Strangle Hold On South, Writer Declares

Davis Lee, the Negro publisher of the Newark, New Jersey, Telegram, in his issue of February 26, 1956, says that the fight for integration is a smokescreen to conceal the fact that the CIO is using the Negro as a tool to organize, control and dominate the South.

"This is a grab for power, and it is the kind of game that the Negro is not trained to play," says Lee.

Lee reminds the Negroes that the North and South split once before and the Negro was the cause. The first split resulted in a war and while the white people killed one another, the Negroes stayed home and minded the kids. In the first conflict, Lee says, the Negro had everything to gain and nothing to lose. This time he has everything to lose and nothing to gain.

Used As A Tool

According to Lee, this time the Negro is being used as a tool.

His editorial in this respect in full follows:

The North and the South are split once more, and again the Negro is the cause. The last time it was a declared war, and while the white folk killed one another, the Negroes minded the kids.

In that conflict the Negro had everything to gain and nothing to lose. This time he has everything to lose and very little to gain. This time the Negro is a tool, he is being used.

CIO Backs Plan

This fight for integration and so called civil rights is a smoke screen set up to conceal the real issues. The carpet baggers are headed south again, but this time their goal is unionization. The CIO didn't pour all of that money into the support of this integration fight out of altruism.

That money given to finance the school cases before the United States Supreme Court was an investment. The labor boys have been trying to organize the south for sometime, but have not been able to scratch the surface, but now the Negro is obligated, he will be organized, and his dues for membership will repay that money a thousand fold.

His vote will help change the south and the nation, and before we realize it we will be living under a virtual dictatorship. This is a grab for power, and it is the kind of game that the Negro is not trained to play.

Southern Negro

The Southern Negro will not be told that Northern Negroes are denied membership in practically every important phase of unionism; that they are even denied membership in the craftsmen, engineers, electricians unions, at Government operated ship yards. They won't tell them that many of the top Negro union officials head up Jim Crow unions.

Negro Top Brass

No, the Southern Negro is going to be sold a bill of goods, and any Negro who dares to oppose this program, and questions the motives, will be branded a traitor to his race.

Negro top brass in this fight for integration have resorted to the Hitler methods to get results. Negro leaders throughout the nation have been forced to fall in line or face being branded a traitor.

After viewing from ringside the pressure tactics being employed, and being a victim, too, you wonder if the Negro believes in justice, fair play. Does he believe in freedom of expression, of thought? Does he grant to the other fellow those rights which he claims for himself. No, these Negroes who are fighting for integration are motivated by prejudice, by hate for a people whom they feel enslaved, sold, raped and murdered their fore parents.

Might Be Killed

They are not susceptible to reason. And if you attempt to reason with them, you might lose your life. These agitators will not stop at anything, even murder to achieve their goal. They are willing tools of these labor boys who intend to make our country over to their liking.

There are lots of well meaning men and women throughout this nation who are going along blindly with this movement not realizing that it is going to result in a dictatorship, and that we will end up with a regimented, thought-control, expression-control system of Government.

To further illustrate how serious the situation has become, and to show how warped our leaders are, and to what extent they will go to muzzle and to silence the opposition, I wish to quote from a letter written by the President of the San Diego Race Relations Society of California to a Negro in Newark about me:

"The occasion of this writing results from my reading of an article printed in my January 17, 1956, issue of the Congressional Record, to wit: 'L. Mendel Rivers, Congressman from South Carolina, in the Appendix section of the Record quotes one Davis Lee, Publisher of the Newark, New Jersey Telegram, who in an article of the Telegram goes all out in lauding what he describes 'the good people of Mississippi.'

Called Brazen Effort

"I consider this article the most brazen effort to the colored people of America, a shocking disgrace blurted out and doubtless condemned by all respectable citizens of our country, and these regardless of color, religion or racial identity. We out our way in bewilderment pause in questioning if the writer of this article is mentally ill, or just what is behind the scenes to motivate the publication? Personally I consider this writing by Davis Lee an approval of the murder of the colored baptist preacher, the colored farmer, the poor little Emmett Louis Till. However, bag and baggage—body and soul—I feel that Davis Lee should some night between sun-down and sun-up scamper off to the State of Mississippi and forthwith file application for membership in the White Citizens Council. Please advise me on just what are the colored citizens of Newark doing about this article? Were such an article written and published by a colored publisher in California, I doubt he would find even one advertiser continuing an ad in his paper, more over, he would doubtless lose all subscribes. I am at least interested in knowing the reaction of our people in Newark. Please advise. Signed: Dennis V. Allen."

Negro Will Lose

It is obvious from the foregoing the type of pressure that is being applied to deprive Negroes of their rights of freedom of thought, expression and opinion. No man who believes in our system of constitutional Government would urge a boycott against another, and put him out of business just because they have diffrent points of view.

I haven't gone along with these agitators because there are 10,000,000 Negroes in the south who are wholly dependent upon white people for everything, and these agitators are not in a position to offer a tangible substitute for the assistance these Negroes get from white friends.

I haven't gone along with these agitators because I feel that in the end the Negro is going to lose more than he will gain. I haven't gone along with these agitators because I have absolute faith and confidence in the system of Government that our fore fathers left us. I could not conscientiously support a movement that I felt would destroy our way of life, and this present movement is not only going to do that, it is going to make enemies of our tried and trusted friends.

It was he who called for a meeting of the top leaders at Geneva and as a result of his call, Eisenhower arranged for our allies to meet with the Russians at the Geneva Conference.

They were met at Geneva with a lot of smiles and bowing and scraping by the Russians and we took a licking.

The Geneva Conference once again proved Will Rogers' old statement that we have never lost a war nor won a conference.

George and the Republicans have let the Russians outsmart them on every point and once again they have made monkeys out of us.

The essence of our foreign policy has been the giving away of money. It has been based on the idea that we could bribe nations and peoples to be our friends.

Bribery never pays. It never has and never will. An old timer once told me never to try to bribe anybody. He said that if you ever once buy a man you have got to keep buying him. He said that you could always find somebody that would sell, but any man who would sell wouldn't stay sold. You have to keep buying him and every time he ups the price. That is exactly the same experience we have had in trying to buy friends by this give-away program. They want more the next time to stay your friend and then when they have milked the cow dry they turn against you. That's what's happened in Greece. That's what's happened in England and that's what's happening the world over.

To begin with, we started out sending our Army to Greece to protect them from the communists. We have given them millions of dollars in aid and now they have upped the price. They say if we don't give them the Island of Cyprus in the Mediterranean they are going communist.

Italy and France have been working on us with the threat of going communist and you can't keep buying them.

The time has come when we ought to take some of this money and spend it looking after our own folks. Either that or we should reduce taxes and let some of our people keep some of this money in their own pockets.

4. Senator George had a chance to bring about a reduction of taxes and, yet, once again, he went Republican.

He voted against the bill to reduce the little man's income taxes. It would have given about twenty dollars' savings to every taxpayer. Yet at the same session of Congress he voted to increase his own pay by seventy-five hundred dollars a year. If I recall the figures correctly, he raised his own pay from $15,000 to $22,500.

If there ever was a time when we ought to stop some of our give-away programs and reduce taxes on the little fellow, it is now.

We need a reduction in federal taxes more than anything else. They keep promising the people of the states federal aid for this and federal aid for that in order to keep the high tax rate. When the federal government takes money to Washington for the purpose of sending it back to the states to operate or build schools or roads, or something else, at least half of it sticks to somebody's fingers in Washington. We never get back what we pay.

It is time that we recognize that the states are now able to take care of themselves and the government should let the states operate their own business.

This bunch in Washington are keeping taxes high so that they can have a lot of money to give to the states for the sole purpose of controlling the states.

They are trying now to pass a bill to give the states a lot of money for the schools. The sole purpose of this drive is to get control of the schools.

We all know that if they ever get control of our schools that they will mix the races in the public school systems and that Washington will dictate what is taught to your children.

The only way to keep them from doing this is to keep them from having enough money to do the job.

The way to insure this is by cutting taxes and keeping the money out of Washington.

You can rest assured that if Washington ever controls the purse strings of your schools that they will control the schools.

The only way to keep local control is to support the schools with local sitions of the government.

3. The appointment of dozens of Negroes to high offices.

4. Outlawing segregation by government contractors.

5. Chief Justice Warren's decision destroying segregation.

6. "Ebony", a Negro magazine, in an article in June, 1955, entitled "Negroes in White House Society", commended Eisenhower for dropping all the remaining social barriers at the White House.

Reasons For Support

This same Negro writer points out several other things which he says will cause the Negro to vote Republican. They are:

1. Reluctance of Northern Democrats in Congress to fight with Southern Congressmen.

2. Adlai Stevenson favors mixing us up gradually instead of all at once.

3. Southerners are now criticizing Eisenhower and that gets the Negro on the other side.

4. Republicans are courting the Negro vote and seeking to divide the Democrats.

5. That Brownell and the President will advocate that Congress pass a lot of so-called "civil rights" measures.

Hungry Republicans

The Republicans are going after the Negro vote because they want to control the politics in a few big cities like New York, Chicago, and Boston which usually go Democratic. They believe by taking the Negro away from the Democrats they can control these big cities.

Roosevelt could have won every time without the Negro vote and Eisenhower won in 1952 without the Negro vote. The Democrats can win this time without the Negro vote if they will carry an appeal to the white people and will refuse to engage in trying to outbid the Republicans like an auction sale for the Negro vote.

If they try to outbid the Republicans they will alienate the South and there is no telling what the Southern people may do.

The Southern people might, out of disgust, vote the Republican ticket feeling that it is safer on economic grounds and to show their resentment against their own party's stabbing them in the back.

New Movement Seen

Then too, it is still possible for a movement to originate in the South similar to the movement which backed Strom Thurmond for President in 1948 and resulted in his carrying four states as a protest against the position of the Democratic Party.

The Democrats are divided on the integration issue. The Republicans are united.

If the Democrats continue to fight among themselves and with the Republicans putting up a united front on this issue, the Democratic Party is headed for disaster.

Stevenson can't pacify the South by saying that he wants to mix the races up a little bit at the time instead of all at once as Eisenhower seeks to do.

Texas Baptist Minister Brands Race Mixers As Idiots

Northern People, National Council Of Churches Are Meddling Again

Dr. W. A. Criswell, of Dallas, Texas, Pastor of the largest Southern Baptist Church, in speaking at Columbia, South Carolina, recently, said that the stuff that the integrationists are trying to ram down our throats in the South is all "foolishness" and "idiocy."

The people of the North ought to leave the South alone, he declared.

In striking out at integration he also hit the National Council of Churches for their spurious doctrine.

State-Wide Meeting

Dr. Criswell addressed a state-wide conference on evangelism meeting at the First Baptist Church in Columbia, South Carolina, on the subject of segregation. He said that the integrationists had tried to make him feel cheap and did everything they could to give him an inferiority complex.

"They try to make me feel like a dirty, lowdown, mangy louse of a dog," he said.

"They tell me that if I am a Christian I must agree with them," he declared.

NAACP After Them

Speaking further, he said:

"Why the NACCP has got those East Texans on the run so much that they dare not pronounce the word chigger any longer; it has to be cheegro.

"I want to look at this thing called desegregation. I have been on the mission fields around the world and there are places where desegregated life is just marvelous. In Arizona we support a college which accepts Mexicans, Negroes and anyone else. In heaven we'll all be together.

"But this thing they are trying to ram down our throat now is all foolishness; it is idiocy.

"I was asked by the editor of the Dallas News to write a letter on segregation and the churches. So I sat me down and wrote him. I told him that a man who says he is altogether desegregated is soft in the head. We have one daughter and you never saw such segregation as my wife and i try, so we can place around her just those friends and companions that will bless her life. We want no promiscuous relationships for her. And don't think that colored people have anything to do with it; we have some poor white trash, from whom we segregate her.

"In our home we have certain friends. Why not be the great democrat and invite everybody in! That wouldn't be a home! The point of a home is that it is man's castle where he lives with a woman he loves and his children and from which he excludes what would be harmful. He lives there in a segregated society.

"The same thing applies to our churches. (And he gave as an illustration a Roman Catholic cathedral near his church and said it wouldn't be right for the Catholic bishop to intrude on Baptist services and vice versa. "We don't hate or despise Catholics; we just mutually agree to worship apart as we feel we should.

Right To Worship

"It is the same way about colored brethren; we don't look down on them or despise them. (And he described some Negro churches near his own and said they had every right to dress and worship and conduct their services in their own way, different as that might be from the way of the First Baptist Church of Dallas).

"All we ask is for them to let us meet together and sing a hymn and rejoice in Jesus. We will have the same attitude toward them. And we'll all get along famously together . . . This is a free America. God bless them.

"What shall we do when a colored family comes down the aisle and asks to join our churches? I'll tell you what we do in my church. We say: 'We are grateful to God for these friends; God loves them and Christ died for them. But if they belonged to this church, all their lives they would labor under a great handicap. This man could never be a deacon in our church; these children couldn't grow as they should. If they will go over to one of these good colored Baptist churches nearby, this man can be a deacon, this woman can teach in Sunday School; they can grow and God will bless them and they will be happy in heart. It is a kindness and goodness to them for them to go over there while we try to develop our people here."

Southern Baptists

In reference to the National Council of Churches, he also said:

"In our day we (the Southern Baptists) are looked upon as peculiar, queer people. All the enlightened ones, all the intelligentsia are saying that we gotta all be together in local and national and world councils of churches. They tell us, 'Brother, if you have any vision of the Kingdom and love the brethren, you will come along.'

"And they teach that spurious doctrine of the universal Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man—which is a denial of everything in the Bible. They tell us to join in and have a great super church. Once there was such a super church and we call its time the dark ages.

"What do they want to do with us when we join up? They want to swallow us up and speak for us, going before committees of congress to espouse this and that in our name. But the things that they speak—half of them—are just as blasphemous and unbibical as they can be . . .

"If they can't consume all our thoughts and energies, they will try to make us look cheap . . . They have a funny doctrine; they take one little failure and add him to another little failure and another and another and then they say, 'Just look at this great thing we have.'" money.

5. If the State of Georgia ever needed a spokesman in Washington, we have needed him during the last five or six years.

The federal government, under the Republicans and the Democrats, has been trying to destroy our way of life in the South and to mix the white and Negro races.

They have done everything that they could do.

During all of this time we have heard not one single word from Senator George.

Not one single time has he risen to the floor of the United States Senate and with his thundering eloquence denounced the Democrats or the Republicans, or done anything to stave it off.

He has failed to present the case for the South to the people of the nation from the eminence of the position which he occupies.

During the last few years every word that he has uttered has been played in the newspapers all over the nation with glaring headlines.

If he had presented the case for the South on the floor of the United States Senate every person in America would have had the opportunity to read it and the fact that the presentation came from a man who occupied his position would have commanded respect and attention.

He has had a greater opportunity to do a service for his people than any Georgian has ever had since before the War Between the States.

Yet, he failed to do it. He saw the opportunity. He knew the oppority was there.

The Augusta Courier for years has been calling on Senator George, and the other members of the delegation from Georgia, to do this very thing.

I know he gets a copy of the Courier. He couldn't help but know that somebody was calling on him to come to the rescue of his people.

But he kept quiet. He said nothing. He refused to join up with Jim Davis, "Tic" Forrester, Jack Flynt and the others that we have had in the Congress trying to present our side of the picture.

The first utterance Senator George made was when the Supreme Court came out outlawing segregation.

The Senator then said in effect that the Supreme Court said go slow, but it said go.

That statement of his left the implication in the minds of the people that since the nine buzzards on the Supreme Court had handed down their edict that there was nothing we could do but go along with them slowly.

Then later, he changed his tune a little. He says it is not a national problem. He says that it is a problem to be handled on the local level.

Now, we didn't get this decision from the local level. This edict was handed down from the national level.

It has got to be fought on the national level.

The newspapers and magazines have brainwashed the people of the nation outside of the South against us. We must counteract the nationwide publicity.

I say this because we have got to win the battle in the field of public opinion.

Now, we have been calling on Senator George from his eminence to help us combat the propaganda against us. We have been calling on him week after week to speak out.

We have been calling on him to use the eminence of his position to tell the people of the nation about the case for the South.

The Augusta Courier has written open letters to Senator George and the other members of the delegation calling on them to do this very thing.

The Senator has treated the appeal of The Augusta Courier not only with silence, but with contempt.

He seems to take the position that his eminence is so great that he can't be bothered with such trifling matters.

He seems to take the position that it is a matter to be handled on the local level, in the counties, towns and communities.

His position seems to be that the people of the state should be thrown to the wolves. Let the matter be handled in the communities—on the local level, when it is the national level that's making the fight against us.

What can the people of Vienna, Georgia, do—or the people of any other community do—when their leaders lie down and say boy, this ain't my fight, it's yours.

I say frankly to you we need a champion in the United States Senate and we need someone who will sound off from that lofty position and tell the people of the nation the facts of life as they exist in the South.

Methodist Church they were anxious to know what was going on by this Interracial Committee since it was getting such support from prominent Methodists.

Says Griffin Is Crazy

After being introduced, Dr. Wells started out by praising the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation. He apologized for the stupid members of the legislature and the stupid Governor of Georgia.

About Wells' speech they write:

"Dr. Wells praised the Supreme Court decision. He told this group that he wanted to apologize for the crazy, stupid legislators and the Governor of this State.

"He said someone once asked to see a peanut and was shown a member of the Georgia legislature. He then asked to see a mule and they showed him Marvin Griffin and at this the audience applauded vigorously.

"Most People Are Colored"

"Dr. Wells stated that two-thirds of the people of the world were colored people and that it was time for the white people to look up to them. He also told of three politicians going to heaven. One of the politicians was Eugene Cook, Georgia's Attorney General. Wells says that Gene asked St. Peter if there was any segregation there and St. Peter said, 'Get back to Hell, Gene, where you belong,' and there was great applause from the audience again.

"Wells said that they must work on the women as the women were more favorable to their cause. He also stated that Bishop Moore was with them one hundred percent and that most of the daily newspapers, preachers, and educators were with them.

"He assured the audience that although the Atlanta newspapers have not come out as boldly for race mixing as he would like on account of business and economic reasons, that he was sure they were with him.

"He told the group that the educators of the state could not express themselves in favor of race mixing on account of the governor and he hoped that soon the governor would be eliminated.

"Dr. Wells also told the group how to get the white people to agree to mixing the races. He told them a story to illustrate.

"He said a man once bought some mules that had not been broke and he asked the seller to break them for him. He said the seller put a halter on one and then took a crowbar and knocked the mule to his knees and said that was the first thing you had to do to make a mule respect you. Dr. Wells then pointed his finger at the club and said, 'Now that is what you have got to do to make some white people respect you.'

"He also said that they would not be able to organize in some areas on account of the criticism and the hostile feeling of the people, but they would get to all the communities before they were through with it.

"Dr. Wells stated that he was afraid to go in Bill Bodenhamer's home county of Tift. (Dr. Bodenhamer is Executive Secretary of the States' Rights Council of Georgia, Inc.)

Scattering Hate

"The unbelievable thing about this Interracial Committee is that it is broadcasting prejudice and hatred over the state and trying to wash it down the throats of the people with religion.

"They are simply making tools of the Negro and we wonder how long the good colored people are going to let a few white scalawags, like Guy Wells and Dr. George Clary, be the cause of stirring up strife between the white and Negro races.

Methodist In Mess

"We have no ill feeling towards the Negro, but we know that Guy Wells and his group are stirring up hatred and bitterness and it will eventually lead to bloodshed.

"We hate to see some of our good Methodist preachers going along in this kind of a movement.

"If we get rid of these scalawags and double-talking white people, we can have peace and harmony between the races in Georgia."

COOK ATTACKS CIVIL RIGHTS BILLS BEFORE SENATORS

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee in Washington July 13 in opposition to all of some 10 civil rights bills before that group on grounds they are not needed.

Mr. Cook told the committee, headed by Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.), that the bills represented further attempts for the federal government to usurp the sovereign rights of the individual states.

He noted that as of the date of his appearance in Washington there were over 50 of these civil rights bills pending before Subcommittee two of the House Judiciary Committee and about 10 before the Senate Judiciary group.

"The only inference to be drawn from this vast array of highly punitive, far-reaching legislation is that the idea prevails in certain quarters that the several sovereign states of this Union constitute inherently evil, oppressive, callous and tyrannical wielders of power which must be checked . . .," he said.

Mr. Cook said "it is certainly a sad commentary" that these bills go "much further in policing and restraining states' rights and individual liberty than was done with respect to the Communist Party . . . "

"I think," he said, "it is also not without significance that the multitude of these 'civil rights' proposals are systematically ignored for long periods and then suddenly resurrected with unerring faithfulness during election years."

He said the proposals in election years apparently are part of "a mad scramble to corral the minority bloc votes."

"This fact alone," he said, "is sufficient to indicate that the majority of Congress realizes there is no need for such legislation, but on the contrary, is tacit recognition of the existence of blocs and pressure groups which are concerned with their self-interests . . . "

Mr. Cook said "that all of this election year agitation is politically inspired is further evidenced by recent newspaper reports that the public relations director of Citizens for Eisenhower has announced their strategy to be exploitation of the race issue during the coming campaign."

"The Supreme Court decision on segregation in the public schools has already set us back 50 years in race relations," he said, "and I earnestly and respectfully urge this body and all political candidates not to take any action that would further impair the excellent understanding that has prevailed between the two races in the South for so long and is now being seriously threatened."

The Georgia legal officer said "all of the bills come before the Congress concealed in a hypocritical cloak of self-righteous and pious protestation against bigotry and prejudice by those who would wave the Constitution on high whenever it suits their purpose."

Mr. Cook said "a study of the many and all embracing civil rights laws presently on the books will readily demonstrate the absence of need for the proposed legislation."

"If these measures succeed," he said, "it will be only a matter of time before the next move will be federal legislation touching the substantive law of torts, property and the administration of estates."

"I do not conceive it to be the proper function of this Congress or any other branch of the Federal government to be constantly sniping at the powers and sovereignty of the states, for it is by their remaining sovereign that the liberties of all our people will be best preserved."

He told the committee he doubted whether the anti-lynch proposal, S. 900, would be constitutional even if it should be passed by Congress and signed into law by the President.

Mr. Cook said the bill "is so revolutionary and contrary to our established federal-state scheme of government that I for one marvel that anyone would propose such a measure."

Under provisions of this bill, he said, where a member of a minority race group commits violence against a member of the majority race, such action would merely constitute assault and battery under state law.

"But if a member of the majority similarly violated the rights of a member of the minority . . . it would rise to the level of a federal offense, and the accused could be punished not only under federal law, but also in state courts."

"For committing identical acts," he said, "the white man would be tried in two courts and given two prison sentences whereas the Negro would be tried only in state court and receive only one."

Mr. Cook said that in his opinion "this bill does not guarantee equal protection; it assures unequal protection."

"Under the pretense of vindicating the Constitution, the sponsors of S. 900 would justify legislative defiance of the Eleventh Amendment's commands that suit may not be brought in federal court against a state without its prior consent."

Passing to another of the bills, Mr. Cook said apparently the proponents urging passage of S. 906, calling for creation of a five-member Civil Rights Commission, "desire creation of a Gestapo. . ."

He said the commission would be able to "pry into the affairs of the states and their citizens, and intimidate a majority of our children solely to appease the politically powerful minority pressure groups inspired by the Communistic ideologies of the police state."

Mr. Cook pointed out in the minority report on H.R. 627, on omnibus bill embracing the provisions of S. 906 and other proposals that the commission would have a right to hold hearings in some far-off remote place and require attendance of witnesses at their own expense.

Similarly, he said, the report noted that the commission would be authorized to utilize the "services, facilities, and information of other government agencies, as well as private research agencies."

The report concluded, he said, with the observation that these "'private agencies" would probably be the NAACP, the American Civil Liberties Union, and other like partisan political-action groups.

"Thus, the situation would be created where governmental powers would be delegated to these private groups to investigate and harass other citizens and organizations," Mr. Cook stated. "The awful power of the state would thereby be given to a few as against the many."

He said that before the Congress authorizes the government to enter into such an unholy partnership with these minority groups, it would do well to study some of their pronouncements.

"Save only the Communist Party . . . the most aggressive proponent of these civil rights measures is the NAACP," Mr. Cook related, "and while this self-proclaimed pious group fervently crusades against prejudice and race bigotry out of one side of its mouth, it conducts a conspiracy against the white man out of the other."

Mr. Cook said that in the October, 1955 edition of the NAACP's publication, The Crisis, "quotes are made gleefully predicting the downfall of the white race, and urging the colored people to revolt and take up arms against their white brothers."

In its November, 1955, issue, he said the magazine "vehemently justifies the merciless slaughtering and raping of innocent white French inhabitants in Oued-Zem by the Colored Berber tribesmen on the ground that the Frenchmen deserved such treatment."

The Georgia Attorney also opposed S. 902 which would elevate the civil rights section of the Department to the status of a Civil Rights Division. An additional assistant attorney general would direct its activities.

Mr. Cook said that in view of U. S. Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell's "own admission that civil rights complaints are at an all time low, it seems difficult at this time to justify expanding this phase of the Justice Department's activities."

"This very fact," he said, "will encourage meddling and baseless suits by the new board of bureaucrats who will surely perceive that they must stir up litigation to justify the expense of their existence."

" . . . It is anticipated that additional personnel will be required should other proposed civil rights measures be enacted, this apparently having reference to the bills which would confer unheard - of - injunctive powers on the (U.S.) attorney general," he said.

"Reduced to simple language," he said, "the police state must have an adequate supply of storm troopers to keep the states and their citizens under constant fear of being enjoined, sent to jail, called up before some commission in far off places in a hostile surrounding, and kept in a general state of intimidation to appease the vociferous minorities which by their militant organizations have now apparently wrested control of our government from the people."

Mr. Cook spoke of the dangers of S. 903, which relates to voting. He said the "most disturbing" part of S. 903, which would give the U. S. attorney general "power to institute injunction suits on his own election, and without regard to whether the party whose rights are affected actually desires such litigation."

He said that "such a procedure is contrary to every recognized principle of English and American jurisprudence."

He noted that the first provision of the bill attempts to amend the Hatch Act, 18 U.S.C.A. 594, by adding to the section penalizing attempts to interfere with voting by anyone in a national election, the words "primary election," so as to include same within the section's coverage.

"Laying aside all other questions," he stated, "the amendment here sought to be added is not necessary. In Terry v. Adams (1953), the Supreme Court has already construed 42 U.S.C.A. 1981 as being applicable to primaries."

"Traditionally, under our system of government," he said, "the Court decisions have followed the legislation, but apparently some believe that procedure to be old fashioned, and that now, the courts are empowered to legislate initially to be then followed by Congressional recognition in the form of statutory enactment."

Mr. Cook said that Section 3 of S. 905 "attempts to do exactly what the Court in the Slaughter House cases . . . said could not be done—and that is to make every violation of law a federal offense."

He said "a judge who makes an error in deciding a case in state court could be prosecuted in federal court and sentenced to jail because of his honest mistake of judgment as to what constituted a denial of due process."

"This section would require a state court judge to outguess the Supreme Court by predicting what it would eventually hold, on pain of imprisonment."

He said Paragraph 3 of the illegal obtaining of confessions likewise subject to prosecution.

"Paragraph 4," he said, "would make every illegal arrest a federal offense." Mr. Cook added that "the legality of an arrest is determined under state law, and the effect of this proposed paragraph will be to make one arrest a federal offense in one state while the same arrest would not constitute such an offense in another state."

Mr. Cook branded S. 901, which would outlaw the poll tax as a condition of voting in a national election, as "nothing less than another political gesture toward the pressure groups accustomed to insistent wailing about the poll tax."

He noted that Georgia abolished its poll tax in 1945 but the state constitution still authorizes the legislature to levy a poll tax.

"So far as I know," he said, "there is no likelihood in Georgia of such (poll tax) legislation but in view of the rising costs of government and the tendency of the Supreme Court to dry up sources of state taxation, it may some day . . . become necessary for all states to levy such taxes to defray election expenses."

He added that "at a time when national income is at an all time high, it is difficult to see how the small exaction represented by a poll tax could prevent ayone who so desires from voting."

Mr. Cook said he saw "no immediate objection" to S. 904 which relates to returning or placing one in peonage by enlarging coverage of the section to cover attempts to do such acts."

But he added that "while I see no immediate objection to this amendment, I likewise see no need for it, since the number of prosecutions under these laws are becoming progressively smaller."

On S. 907, an omnibus bill including in one all the others and adding a provision for a Joint House Senate Committee on Civil Rights, Mr. Cook said "there is no reason apparent as to just why the question of civil rights requires creation of a joint committee any more than other subjects of legislation."

He said "this bill would also add provisions outlawing segregation in interstate commerce. In view of the recent action by the I.C.C. (Interstate Commerce Commission), it is difficult to see how this law is needed, unless the proponents, like I, believe the I.C.C. to have exceeded its statutory powers."

He said S. 3605, the administration version of the "Civil Rights Commission," is "even more explicit in authorizing payments to private individuals and organizations."

Mr. Cook stated that "this bill is otherwise similar to S. 907 and the remarks previously made with regard thereto will apply here also."

The Georgian quoted statistics which he said indicated a great disparity between the number of Negro law violators as compared to the percentage of the Negro population.

Despite this, he said, "no one has even remotely suggested the need for federal legislation to protect the white people against the disproportionate number of Negro criminals."

"Although there are very few reported crimes of violence committed by whites against Negroes in Fulton County — Georgia's most populous county — hardly a day goes by without some report of a white person being raped, robbed, assaulted or murdered by a Negro in the Atlanta area," Mr. Cook said.

Nevertheless, he said, Georgia is confident it "can adequately protect the rights of all in keeping with repeated holdings of the Supreme Court that it is the States who are the primary guarantors of all civil rights under our form of government."

Mr. Cook noted that his office "has not hesitated to take quick action to protect all citizens against lawlessness."

He all called attention to the fact that Georgia revoked the charters of the Ku Klux Klan and the Columbians several years ago when both were found to be advocating private assumption of governmental powers.

"The only reports of incitement to violence we have had in Georgia," Mr. Cook told the committee, "have come not from the foes of racial amalgamation, but from its proponents."

He noted that on Feb. 13, 1956 at Paine College in Augusta the Chairman of interracial committee appointed by a left-wing organization named the Southern Regional Council, whose predecessor, the now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare advised all Negroes in Georgia "to use crowbars on the heads of white citizens in order to enforce their respect."

Talmadge Memorial Can't Hold Mental Patients Against Their Will

The Attorney General has ruled that the Eugene Talmadge Memorial Hospital in Augusta will need special statutory authority in order to retain custody of mental patients against their will.

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook pointed out in his ruling of June 8, 1956 that such authority thus far had been granted only to the Milledgeville State Hospital.

The Attorney General's official opinion was issued at the request of Chancellor Harmon Caldwell of the University system. The State Board of Regents operates the Talmadge Hospital as the State Medical College which is part of the University system.

Chancellor Caldwell pointed out that the hospital is planning to accept mental patients for psychiatric treatment.

He wanted to know whether the hospital had the authority to retain custody of mental patients who voluntarily enter the hospital but decide they want to be released even when such release would be dangerous.

Mr. Cook advised the Chancellor that the Board of Regents may desire to seek such authority for the Talmade Hospital at the next session of the General Assembly.

Until such authority is granted, he ruled, "there is always the avenue of having a person committed to the Milledgeville State Hospital through the Court of Ordinary in the event that an unsafe mental patient should voluntarily desire to leave Talmadge Hospital.

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook has ruled that the State Game and Fish Commission is without authority to issue honorary lifetime hunting and fishing licenses to anyone except persons over 65 years of age.

Mr. Cook made the ruling June 26, 1956 at the request of Director Fulton Lovell, director of the Game and Fish Department.

Dear Mr. Haas:

Leonard has very kindly sent us this bulletin from the Georgia Department of Law with the passage on page 3 marked.

We have drafted a proposed letter to Mr. Attorney General Cook and we request your judgement as to the propriety of dispatching the letter as is or in altered form.

The history of the matter contains an address made by Mr. Cook October 19, 1955, to the Peace Officers Association of Georgia in which (page 8) he spoke denouncingly of the Southern Regional Council and the Georgia Committee for Interracial Cooperation. The Council dispatched to its Board members on October 20, 1955, the attached counter-information.

We suppose that Roy Harris and his paper, The Augusta Courier, are Mr. Cook's sources for the charges often repeated by Mr. Cook that the Southern Regional Council is a successor to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. In this connection a fairly recent quotation from Senator Eastland (enclosed) is of interest.

The matter about a speech at Paine College is raised in the enclosed issue of the Augusta Courier. In connection with that, here is correspondence which passed between Mr. Cook and Guy Wells, Executive Director of the Georgia Committee for Interracial Cooperation.

I enclose, as additional information, a copy of a letter from the President of the Council to Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, and Mr. Hoover's reply.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

Proposed Letter to Attorney General Cook
August 10, 1956
(As submitted to Mr. Joseph Haas)

Honorable Eugene Cook
Attorney General of Georgia
State Capitol
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Cook:

We note in the July 15, 1956, issue of the official publication of the Georgia Department of Law that, in a speech before the Senate Judiciary Committee, you took occasion to repeat untrue statements concerning the Southern Regional Council and one of its state chairmen.

To set the record straight -- the Southern Regional Council is not a "left-wing" organization nor is it the successor to "the now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare." Our predecessor was the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Inc. (1919-44).

As to the speech at Paine College in Augusta, we believe that you had already been informed that the account of the speech you quote is entirely untrue. We think it is unfortunate that the chief law enforcement officer of Georgia should use himself to spread garbled reports and vicious untruths.

We would appreciate it if you would set the record straight in your publication.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell
Executive Director

The Honorable Eugene Cook
Attorney General of Georgia
State Capitol
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Cook:

We note in the July 15, 1956, issue of the official publication of the Georgia Department of Law that, in a speech before the Senate Judiciary Committee, you took occasion to repeat untrue statements concerning the Southern Regional Council and the state chairman of one of its affiliates.

To set the record straight -- the Southern Regional Council is not a "left-wing" organization nor is it the successor to "the now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare." Our predecessor was the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Inc. (1919-44).

As to the speech at Paine College in Augusta, we believe that you had already been informed that the account of the speech you quote is entirely untrue.

Inasmuch as these erroneous statements appeared in an official publication, we are confident that you will be glad of the opportunity to correct the record.

Sincerely,

George S. Mitchell

THE SEGREGATION DECISION --

ITS PRESENT EFFECT AND FUTURE THREAT

An Address By

ATTORNEY GENERAL EUGENE COOK

It shall be my purpose to analyze for you the United States Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954 and its implementation decree of May 31, 1955 respecting segregation of the races in our public schools, and to give you some of my views respecting the application of the decision and decree to our State Constitution, laws, schools and people.

This decision affects 22 sovereign states and the District of Columbia. Its impact upon our social order is so violent that one hesitates even to consider the possible public reactions in Georgia and other Southern States when enforcement proceedings are instituted under it. The very least to be expected is that litigation resulting from it will consume the better part of the next century.

Before we proceed to the specific position of the State of Georgia under this ruling, let us thoroughly understand the background of the five cases which prompted it and the factors considered by the Court in framing it.

The suits were filed by negro parents in the States of Kansas, South Carolina, Virginia and Delaware and the District of Columbia. The basis of the cases from the four states was that segregation of the races -- by and of itself -- denies negro children the equal protection of the laws guaranteed them by the Fourteenth Amendment even though physical facilities for education are absolutely equal. The District of Columbia petition challenged school segregation on the contention that it denies negroes their liberty without due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment.

When the cases finally reached the Supreme Court, they were consolidated and argued together. The Court, when it acted, issued only one ruling.

The question which the Court had to resolve, so far as the States were concerned, was whether the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment was violated by State requirements for segregated public schools. This meant the Justices found it necessary to determine the intention of the framers and ratifiers of that Amendment.

In arguments before the Court, it was established as a matter of incontrovertible history that the same Congress which submitted the Fourteenth Amendment enacted legislation before, during and frequently after submission providing for segregated schools in the District of Columbia; that 23 of the then-existing 37 states either continued or instituted segregation upon ratification of the Amendment; and that three of the five states which discontinued segregation upon adoption of the Amendment later re-established it.

Up to the time of these cases, segregation as manifested by "the separate, but equal, doctrine" had been upheld at least five times by the Supreme Court, at least 13 times by lower federal courts and 59 times by the highest courts of the several states. A Supreme Court of Republican judges decided that doctrine of separate, but equal, facilities in 1896 in the classic case of Plessy v. Ferguson.

Yet, despite this persuasive legislative history and judicial precedent, the Supreme Court pled ignorance by declaring it "inconclusive." And, instead of holding that the "separate, but equal, doctrine" of the Plessy Case was wrong, it concluded that it was not supported by "modern authority."

This "modern authority" was cited by the Court in a footnote to consist, not of case decisions, but rather of treatises on psychology and sociology by authorities of questionable character and doubtful loyalty.

Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi disclosed -- in a speech from the floor of the Senate last May 26, -- that two of the six principal authorities listed by the Court have no less than 28 citations of communist-front activity in the files of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the United States House of Representatives. Furthermore, he reported, 16 of the contributors to the book, "The American Dilemma," which was cited in its entirety as an authority by the Supreme Court justices, have long records of affiliation with and participation in communist and subversive organizations and activity.

The origin of the doctrines accepted by our nation's Highest Tribunal as "modern scientific authority" can be traced to Karl Marx and it can be proved that their propagation is part and parcel of the conspiracy to divide and destroy this government through internal controversy.

It is difficult indeed for a true American to understand how the members of the Supreme Court of the United States could issue a bald decree overriding the Constitution solely on the basis of the writings and teachings of pro-Communist agitators and enemies of our republican form of government.

Since the original decision dealt only with the abstract principle of law, the cases were set for reargument on the question of putting it into effect. The decree issued on May 31 of this year is the result of those rearguments.

Briefly, the holding of the Court wasthis:

First, all public school segregation laws of the states which were parties to the suits were voided.

And, second, the Supreme Court remanded the cases to the Federal District Courts for the framing of decrees and determining of time-tables for the admission of negroes to public schools on a non-segregated basis.

The Court did not set a date by which segregation must be abolished. Nor did it set a specific deadline for the District Courts to do so.

Instead, the Court declared that the lower courts should require "a prompt and reasonable start toward full compliance" with the ruling. It provided that if, after such a start was made, the defendant states could show a need for additional time, the lower courts were authorized to grant it. It stated that the various administrative problems encountered in a transition from a segregated to a non-segregated basis could be considered in formulating the final decrees in those cases in which it is established that segregation exists because of race or color.

In its broad application, the effect of this decree was to constitute the Federal District Courts as super boards of education in those school districts where cases are pending. And those misguided persons who have publicly rejoiced at the reference to "local solution of the problem" had best look again. "Local solution" as used in this instance simply means that the Federal District Courts are to stand over local school boards with the threat of contempt proceedings.

To put it bluntly -- there will be about as much exercise of free will as in a shotgun wedding.

Subsequent to the rendition of this decision and decree, my office has been deluged with correspondence from public officials and private citizens requesting clarification as to what effect, if any, they have had upon Georgia's segregated school system.

Many have asked whether Georgia's constitutional and statutory provisions requiring segregation have been invalidated.

Others have asked whether city and county boards of education are required to begin desegregation.

And some have asked whether local officials should hold conferences with representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People with a view toward working out voluntary agreements for effecting integration.

My answer to each of these questions has been in the negative.

To properly understand Georgia's present position with respect to the Supreme Court decision, one must first understand the peculiar nature of a judicial decree.

Courts do not render judgments which bind or affect the public generally. Their pronouncements are confined to what the law terms "parties to the record" -- a designation given to the specific individuals named in the pleadings against whom relief is prayed.

Although four of the segregation cases originated in the States of Kansas, South Carolina, Virginia and Delaware, the states themselves were not defendants because, under the Eleventh Amendment to the United States Constitution, states cannot be sued by private citizens.

Instead, in each case, only one county board of education in each of the four states was named defendant. And, as a result, the only entities bound by the ruling in these cases are the county boards of education specifically named in the suits; for instance, the Board of Education of Clarendon County, South Carolina.

In the implementation arguments before the Court last April, Justice Black specifically raised the question of who would be bound by the decision. He asked United States Solicitor General Sobeloff whether South Carolinians outside Clarendon County could be affected by the Court's ruling. To which Mr. Sobeloff replied:

Obviously no. Under no view of the class action rule can people in other districts be affected, either entitled to relief or bound by the proceedings in these cases."

That is a candid admission by the Solicitor General of the United States who appeared in court supporting the cause of the NAACP that not only would other states not be affected by the decrees but also that even the other counties in the states involved would not be touched.

The Supreme Court itself previously had held that an injunction decree -- which is the type issued in the segregation cases -- cannot legally bind persons not parties to a suit. And it further had ruled in an earlier case that an injunction cannot be issued in such broad language as to bind an entire state in a case affecting only one of its political subdivisions.

Georgia was not a party to the segregation cases and declined to participate upon invitation in the implementation arguments before the Supreme Court. In so refusing, it was sought by responsible state officials to avoid any possible holding that Georgia had thereby become bound and to give solemn recognition to the policy of the State -- as evidenced by action of the Legislature and vote of the people -- that segregation would not be abolished in Georgia schools.

There are both constitutional and statutory provisions in the laws of this State which require segregation in our public schools. Since Georgia was not a party to these suits, these laws are still in effect and, until they are declared otherwise, are presumed to be constitutional.

Even should a suit be brought in Georgia, any one action could affect only one of our 204 city and county school systems.

To bind all of these systems, 204 separate suits would have to be brought. And -- even assuming a decree should be issued striking down this state's statutory and constitutional provisions requiring segregation -- the other 203 school districts could still legally require segregation as an exercise of the inherent powers vested in the local boards of education to govern their respective systems.

Under Georgia law, the control and management of the various school systems are confided to local boards of education which are given "wide discretionary powers" and the right to determine "what is best for school pupils."

Moreover, the District Courts to which the South Carolina and Virginia cases were remanded stressed the fact that Clarendon and Prince Edward County school officials were not bound to proceed with desegregation until final decrees ordering it are issued. Both Courts allotted time for the two systems to make studies of the problems which would arise should integration be required.

Unfortunately, many people have gotten the idea that the Supreme Court ordered immediate integration of the races in our schools -- an impression initiated, aided and abetted by the NAACP.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

Actually, in its usually-subtle manner, the NAACP has substituted the word "integration" for the word "discrimination."

The Court, in handing down its decision, was dealing with the question of whether denial of admission of a negro to a white school on account of race or color was an unconstitutional act of discrimination. In fact, as the District Courts in South Carolina and Virginia have been quick to point out, the phrase "integration of the races" is not to be found in the U. S. Supreme Court's decision or subsequent decree.

A study of the Supreme Court's ruling and its interpretation by the Federal District Courts brings out three significant facts:

1. Any steps designed to integrate the white and negro races in the public schools are premature and not demanded by the decision if segregation be justified on any reasonable grounds other than race or color.

2. Neither the original decision nor the subsequent decree ordered integration of the races in the public schools but simply held that admission could not be denied on account of race or color.

3. Segregation of the races may be continued on account of numerous factors and problems wholly unrelated to race or color.

The District Courts in Virginia and South Carolina recognized another factor which must figure in any final implementation decrees; that is, that local school trustees in most Southern States will be without funds to operate public schools when, and if, integration of the races in the classrooms is ordered.

That is the situation here in Georgia.

Local school authorities are helpless to effect classroom integration -- even should it be ordered -- because state law denies state funds to any school system which permits integration of the races. The local school authorities are without authority to force the Legislature to change its position. By the same token, the United States Supreme Court and District Courts have no authority to force a State Legislature to levy taxes for the support of public education, whether segregated or otherwise.

That should make it crystal clear that -- even after many years of initial litigation here in Georgia -- we will be confronted with a choice not between segregated and integrated public schools, but rathe between segregated public schools and private schools.

You will recall that, in the general election of November 1954, the people of Georgia adopted the so-called "private school" amendment to the State Constitution. This amendment authorizes the Legislature to appropriate grants to individuals for educational purposes. If implemented, it would result in Georgia school children attending segregated private schools at State expense.

Therefore, it would be inappropriate for school authorities to seek meetings with representatives of the NAACP to devise ways and means of working out a plan of classroom integration of the races.

If any good were to come from such conferences, it is apparent that the participants would have to meet on a common ground of purpose The purpose of our school officials by law is promoting the welfare of our public school system. So long as the radical and uncompromising leaders of the NAACP refuse to confer on this basis -- but are insistent on encouraging a forced intermixing of the races for their own sake -- nothing could be gained through conversations with them.

It is my view that the local school authorities are fully qualified to do that which is in the best interests of the public and the pupils and that an anti-Southern New York group should have no voice in the manner in which these authorities act.

Another fact which needs to be emphasized is that the State of Georgia does have the right and authority to require that teachers in the public schools do not subscribe to or teach any theory of social relations contrary to the Constitution and laws of Georgia.

Although much has been said about the "right to teach," it has been generally overlooked or ignored that that right is a state-created right and, as such, is conditional. There is nothing violative of a teacher's rights of freedom of speech and belief in the requirement that he or she swear to uphold the Constitution and laws of this State and not to subscribe to or teach anything contrary to them.

The State-created right to teach in the public schools is conditioned by law upon the meeting of four requirements. They are:

1. the issuance of a certificate of qualification by the State Department of Education.

2. the issuance of a license to teach by the local school authorities.

3. the execution of a contract of employment between the local authorities and the teacher.

4. the taking of an oath by the teacher that he or she does not subscribe to and will not teach any theory of social relations contrary to the Constitution and laws of Georgia.

It odes not seem to me to be out of harmony w ith our democratic way of doing things for the State to require by law that the men and women who teach our sons and daughters be sincere believers in Constitutional government and the Southern way of life. Certainly, I think it is proper for the State to make certain that no teacher contributes a portion of his or her salary as dues to any organization which, in turn, uses that money to file suits seeking to disrupt or destroy our segregated public school system.

In conclusion let me say that I believe that segregation can be maintained in Georgia within the framework of the law.

If it be said that we are circumventing the Supreme Court, the unqualified answer is "yes". Congress and the people have furnished many precedents for this.

The Fourteenth Amendment, upon which the Court's decision rested was itself designed to circumvent the decision of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case which held a negro could not be a citizen.

Previously, the people ratified the Eleventh Amendment so as to circumvent the Court's decision in Chisholm v. Georgia, holding the states subject to suit in the federal courts by private citizens. Subsequently, the people ratified the Sixteenth Amendment to get around Supreme Court decisions holding the Federal Government powerless to levy an income tax. And, very recently, the Congress circumvented the Court's decision by passing the Tideland's Legislation.

Even, however, if it should be found that we are violating the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court, our only reply to the Court will be, "You have shown us the w ay."

Segregation, like all other social problems is not something that can be abolished by judicial decree. It will exist in Georgia as long as the people desire it, the United States Supreme Court to the contrary notwithstanding.

As it was said in Plessy v. Ferguson:

". . . The argument also assumes that social prejudices may be overcome by legislation, and that equal rights cannot be secured to the negro except by an enforced comingling of the two races. We cannot accept this proposition. If the two races are to meet on terms of social equality, it must be the result of natural affinities, a mutual appreciation of each other's merits and a voluntary consent of individuals - - - Legislation is powerless to eradicate racial instincts or to abolish distinctions based upon physical differences, and the attempt to do so can only result in accentuating the difficulties of the present situation. If the civil and political rights of both races be equal, one cannot be inferior to the other civilly or politically. If one race be inferior to the other socially, the Constitution of the United cannot put them upon the same plane."

Whether you happen to approve or disapprove of segregation as a personal matter is of no concern.

Those whose honest beliefs may be against segregation have lost just as much by the Court's decision as those who favor it.

The preservation of liberty through an honest and conscientious interpretation of the Constitution by the Court transcents all other considerations of personal likes or dislikes.

If the Court interprets the Constitution according to its own notion of what the law ought to be, rather than what the law is, we no longer have a government of laws, but of men.

If the Court can disregard the Constitution to accomplish a result you approve, it likewise can ignore it to reach a result you disapprove.

And therein lies the most ominous threat of the decision we have just discussed to our Republic.

I thank you.

Ford Foundation Gives 1-4 Million To Atlanta Anti-Segregation Group

Talmadge Reviews Five Years Of Progress In Georgia To County Commissioners Association In 1954 Meeting

Segregated Schools, Colleges Will Be Kept, Governor Promises Again

In a speech to the County Commissioners of Georgia, meeting in Savannah, Governor Talmadge reviewed the progress made in Georgia during the last five years and voiced the opinion that the people of Georgia are steadfastly determined "in our course that mixed schools and colleges shall not come to pass in Georgia."

His speech is as follows:

"At no time in the 40-year history of this organization have we met less feeling of frustration and more sense of real accomplishment.

"As individuals, and through the good offices of your Association, you all are entitled to a large share of the credit for the unparalleled progress your State has made during the last five years.

"Working with your officers, members and attorneys, during the course of my administration, has been both pleasant and productive.

"Through great programs which you and I, and your General Assembly, have inaugurated, each and every county government in Georgia is much stronger and more serviceable to the people than was the case a few years back.

"This one fact, I consider, the true index of the success of my tenure as governor.

"You have had an administration which was actually spawned in the county courthouses of the State, a product of the grassroots, so to speak.

"You have had an administration which, without any reservation whatsoever, believes in local self-government.

"We have acted in scores of ways to render effective help to our county and city governments.

"Such a constant, active policy has paid dividends to the people. We have completed now or have under way a gigantic amount of public building totalling over three-quarters of a BILLION dollars.

"These schools, roads, hospitals, health centers, college buildings, institutional structures and many others are lasting improvements. They are out there in brick, steel, stone and concrete to serve present and future generations of Georgians. They will continue to provide vital service as our State grows and prospers to take its rightful high place on the roll of the sisterhood of States.

"Your government, State and County, is keeping pace with the advancement going on about us. In fact, we believe, that we have to a great degree, helped stimulate the growth of new industry and business, as well as the improvement of our agriculture.

"This is shown by the fact that Georgia led the entire South last year in industrial development with the establishment

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

We have been trying to tell you from time to time that everybody who leads the fight on communism in this country finds that he immediately becomes a victim of a nation-wide effort to destroy him in every way possible.

We have called our readers' attention to the fact that Martin Dies, the Texas Congressman, became the victim of a vicious, organized campaign which resulted in destroying his health, breaking him financially and defeating him politically.

In the campaign to destroy Dies there was enlisted thousands of well-intentioned, but little thinking, citizens all over the nation.

It was a nation-wide campaign and millions of dollars were spent to literally crush Martin Dies.

Back in Congress today, Dies says that he is neither physically or financially able to undertake the fight again. He lost everything on the former occasion and the good, decent, patriotic people of America failed to come to his rescue.

The people of America let Martin Dies become a victim of the campaign run by the communists and their sympathizers.

We have also called your attention to the fact that the communists have shrewdly maneuvered all of us to the point to where we are now fighting one another over the methods employed by Senator Joe McCarthy.

Here we are today lined up and scrapping one another over Joe while the communists are forgotten and they are shrewdly carrying on a nation-wide campaign to tear us assunder and then pitch us all to the wolves.

Now, J. Edgar Hoover, the boss of the F. B. I., makes a speech and confirms everything we have been trying to tell you.

In a speech to the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington on April 22, 1954, Hoover said that everyone who has dared to expose the communist threat has become the target of "experts in character assassination."

No truer statement was ever made. All public people who today stand firm in their fight against the communist threat are constantly the victims of these character assassins.

The funny thing about it is that most of the dirty work isn't done by the communists themselves or those who are closely aligned with them. Most of the character assassination is done by people who have a reputation for respectibility and for some unknown and unexplained reason have aligned themselves on the side of some of the communist objectives in this country.

In this group are to be found newspaper people, radio and television commentators, a lot of writers, a few ministers and an innumerable amount of crackpots of every known variety.

And of this group, J. Edgar Hoover said:

"One of the most unbelievable and unexplainable phenomena in the fight on communism is the manner in which otherwise respectable, seemingly intelligent persons, perhaps unknowingly, aid the Communist cause more effectively than the Communists themselves."

Concluding this thought, Hoover also said:

"The psuedo liberal can be more destructive than the known Communist because of the esteem which his cloak of respectibility invites."

The communists are always crusading for something. They adopt some immediate objectives and some catchy slogan. As soon as they do, this group of so-called liberals over the country joins in the chorus.

Then when someone undertakes to expose the communists for what

Talmadge, Byrnes Attacked; McGill Southern Regional Council Leader

The Southern Regional Council, of Atlanta, has been granted nearly a quarter of a million dollars by the Ford Foundation. (1)

The basic objective of the council is to destroy racial segregation in Georgia and other southern states. It was incorporated under the laws of Georgia, January 6, 1944: its principal office and place of business is in the City of Atlanta. Its charter authorizes the establishment of branch offices elsewhere within or without the State of Georgia.

Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, and Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Negro, of Atlanta University, are two of the incorporators of the Southern Regional Conference, Inc.; they are charter members.

McGill is a bitter foe of racial segregation in public schools in Georgia and in other southern states: he is an avowed enemy of racial segregation in any form.

McGill was recently appointed a member of the Executive Committee of the Ford Foundation. (2)

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, former chancellor of the University of Chicago, now is associate director of the Ford Foundation. Like McGill, he is a bitter foe of racial segregation and fights it at all times and under all circumstances.

Hutchins, as principal speaker at the annual Urban League dinner meeting at Temple Israel auditorium, of Saint Louis, Mo., on February 26, 1954, said that segregation in public schools is on the way out and there is very little opponents of desegregation can do to prevent the breakdown.

Taking the position that school segregation is doomed on economic, legal and moral grounds, Hutchins declared that threats by Governor Herman Talmadge of Georgia and Governor James Byrnes of South Carolina, to abolish public schools in their states probably will not come about.

"If they (Governors Byrnes and Talmadge) get away with it, they won't get get away with it long," Hutchins said, stating that Federal authorities could not condone such acts.

What significance could there be about the large gift of money to the Southern Regional Council, of Atlanta, by the Ford Foundation recently, in view of the fight underway in Georgia to preserve racial segregation in the public schools of the State?

McGill, a charter member of the Council, is opposed to racial segregation. He has fought it openly at times and under cover for years.

GOV. TALMADGE PROVES A GOOD AMBASSADOR

(From The Atlanta Constitution, April 15, 1954)

Gov. Herman Talmadge proved a good spokesman for Georgia accomplishments, her ideals and aspirations in his address Tuesday before the Traffic Club of New York City. While there specifically to tell the nation's shippers of the opportunities afforded by the state's new port facilities at Savannah, he proved a fine ambassador for all aspects of Georgia life and progress.

He began his speech in a manner we like. "I am not here," he declared, "as an apologist like some of my predecessors on the rostrums of the North and East. Neither have I come as a critic. I rather am here as an ambassador of a great state and a sturdy people."

The Georgia governor denied the charge that the state is attempting to improve itself at the expense of others. "We are not trying to bribe industry from any other parts of the country," he declared. " We offer only our resources and our people — but not for exploitation, human or otherwise. We offer nothing not offered to our own citizens."

The governor was able to offer the proof of his statements—proof that all Georgians already know well.

He was able to tell them the ramarkable story of the development of the Georgia port at Savannah, which is now handling more tonnage than at any time in recent history. The Georgia Ports Authority, the agency created to operate the facility, has "in four years financed the construction of modern wharves, transit sheds and handling equipment while at the same time earning its purchase price three times over."

The governor brought credit to himself and to Georgia in his New York appearance. We applaud him for it. We need more ambassadors who will tell the real Georgia story.

of 270 new or greatly expanded plants, each representing additional capital investment of over $50,000. These new factories are affording new employment to 15,000 persons and are adding $50 million a year in payrolls to the overall economy.

"A goodly share of these plants are locating in the smaller cities and towns, many of which previously had no industry. They are being welcomed as new citizens and a valuable addition to the community. They furnish, for the first time, steady opportunities to female workers in the towns and help round out the income of farm families through part-time employment. Others, which have been most helpful, buy and process products of the farm as well as afford employment.

"This new purchasing power means added markets for finished goods. Properly encouraged and backed by an aggressive State administration, this will continue. Growth will beget growth. Let us keep up the good works.

"Perhaps the most outstanding contributions this administration has made toward strengthening local government in Georgia is through the following programs:

"1. Leaving property tax to the counties and cities.
"2. Allocation of Gas and Tag Tax receipts to roads.
"3. Doubling grants to counties for road work.
"4. Unprecedented support to Education.
"5. $225 million in new school and college buildings.
"6. Highway Reform.
"7. Trebling of Welfare program.
"8. Hospital and Health Center construction.
"9. Medical Center for indigent sick.
"10. Expansion and improvement of institutional care.
"11. Statewide forestry protection.
"12. New Farm Market facilities.
"13. Making prison population productive through segregation of offenders.
"14. All-out backing to youth activities.
"15. Interest in and support to soil conservation and farm extension work.

Of all these, education has claimed our first attention. We are providing 53 per cent of our total annual State revenues for school and college operation and capital outlay. This percentage is unmatched effortwise by no other State in the Union. Teachers' salaries have been increased 125 per cent in the last five years.

"The Talmadge administration has supplied more money for education than all other preceding administrations combined since public schools were founded in 1871.

"Even in spite of the fact that appropriations to all agencies except education were trimmed last year by six per cent so that we could continue to operate on a solvent basis, the appropriation for schools has been paid in full and the minimum foundation program is being carried forward.

"I am happy to report to you this morning that relations between the races in Georgia are the best they have been in over half a century. We are making progress and getting along well. We Georgians believe that unmolested, without outside interference and agitation, we can work out all our problems to the best interests of all concerned.

"Every thoughtful person knows that social equality is a relative thing unobtainable through court decision or government edict. But we all know that equality before the law and in opportunity is a fair concept possible of achievement.

"The major concern of my administration has been to advance the education, health, welfare and prosperity of all our people.

"To that end, lies the only road to happiness and contentment — the American way.

"It is regrettable that all of the strides we have made in the last few years toward equality of opportunity within our existing pattern of life stand in grave jeopardy.

"The separate but equal doctrine, which has stood the test of time and judicial decision for lo these eighty-eight years, is now being frontally challenged before the Supreme Court of the United States.

"You, ladies and gentlemen, have heard my late father, Eugene Talmadge, and myself discuss this issue and warn of the impending consequences.

"Vast forces with heavy financial backing are still arrayed against us. Only through unity, thick skins and stout hearts can we win through in this crisis.

"You will recall that in 1950 when you elected me your governor the principal plank in my platform was the solemn promise:

"SO LONG AS I AM YOUR GOVERNOR, THERE WILL BE NO MIXED SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES IN GEORGIA!

"That promise will be kept by me inviolate and can be kept in the future by any chief executive who will stand by his guns and fight and not throw in the towel as some of the weak sisters have done.

"At my request, the Legislature during its adjourned session created the Georgia Commission on Education. About half of its 21 members were designated by the Assembly and I appointed the other half. It is composed of some of the most distinguished educators in the State and other outstanding Georgians.

"Honorable Durwood Pye, Atlanta attorney and an authority on Constitutional law, who I believe addressed you earlier, is Secretary to the Commission. Honorable B. D. ("Buck") Murphy, noted lawyer of Fayetteville and Atlanta, is attorney for the Commission.

"I don't think that you need have any fears that this counsel will explore and exhaust every legal remedy available to us.

"The Commission will study any decision which the high federal court passes down in the segregation cases. Ultimately, the responsibility for recommendations to the General Assembly to overcome an adverse decision, if it should be forthcoming, rests with the Commission.

"The Attorney General of Georgia and other competent legal authorities have advised me on two definite propositions of law in the event of an adverse decision on public school segregation in a Georgia case. They are:

"A. Under our State Constitution and laws, the power of our State and Counties to levy taxes for public schools would fail the moment the races are mixed in them.

"B. Having thus failed, the Legislature could proceed to provide for subsidizing the children of Georgia in attendance at segregated private schools meeting all of the standards now current in our present system for both pupils and teachers.

"Now, this is an interpretation of the State Constitution and our law as it exists. How the federal courts would construe it is something else.

"So that there can be no room for doubt about the authority of the Legislature to act in case it becomes necessary to preserve separate schools in Georgia, over two-thirds of the membership of the General Assembly, at its last session, voted to submit a constitutional amendment to the people which would serve to further strengthen and re-enforce the existing law in this regard.

"The amendment, if adopted, would take no affirmative action whatsoever.

"Its language is permissive only.

"It would not affect our present public school system.

"It would be inoperative until and unless an adverse decision on segregation in a Georgia school case forced the Legislature to take counteraction.

"Thus, it is plain for all to see, including the Justices who now transiently compose this nation's highest tribunal, that if our public school systems in Georgia and throughout the South are ever harmed or destroyed, it will be by the Supreme Court.

"It can only come through the ignominy of a court of law handing down a purely political decision.

"It can only come if this court should seek to substitute unsound and unrealistic ideas of social relations for long-established law and the federal and State Constitutions.

"We pray that such a calamitious day will not be forced upon us for it will destroy civilization as we have known it in the South. Such a decision would rend our nation asunder in this hour of international peril. Having been thus divided, we would be easier prey for our red foes.

"Let us not delude ourselves for one moment. If the Court outlaws segregation in the public schools, no amount of gerrymandering or legal fiction, as have been suggested by some, will delay the immediate application of federal judicial power in all cases thereafter when the question is presentel to federal district courts.

"There will be no protracted litigation and judges, where their responsibility has been so recently defined, cannot be relied upon to grant supersedeas to delay the hour of final decision.

"My friends, we face extreme threats, and if they come, only extreme measures can meet them.

"In any event, the present administration stands with calmness and dispassion.

"But we are deliberate and steadfastly determined in our course that mixed schools and colleges shall not come to pass in Georgia."

of policy are:

"The South of the future, toward which our efforts are directed, is a South free of stultifying inheritance from the past. It is a South where . . . segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and no longer will be imposed . . . We have no illusion that it can be realized in the South quickly or easily or perfectly. Nor do we imagine that the Southern Regional Council can play more than a modest but creditable part towards its achievement. Yet it is the ideal toward which we strive and, short of which, we have a duty to remain dissatisfied, for it is nothing else than the American ideal."

Hutchins, associate director of the Ford Foundation, like McGill and the Southern Regional Conference, of Atlanta, is a bitter foe of racial segregation.

McGill and Hutchins hold in common their determination to end racial segregation in Georgia and in other southern states. The focal point of their attacks now is on the public school systems. Both of these men are officials of the Ford Foundation.

Hutchins told his Saint Louis audience that the United States Supreme Court's decision that "separate cannot be equal," in its ruling on the Sweat case in Texas, will have some bearing on the five school cases now pending in the high tribunal.

Formerly, the Southern Regional Council was financed in the main by substantial grants from the Rosenwald Foundation.

The Rosenwald Foundation, according to Dr. Lessing J. Rosenwald, of Philadelphia, chairman of the board of trustees, devoted its major activities to:

"Creation of equality between whites and Negroes and to the promotion of interracial relations in the South."

It was during the late 30's and 40's that the first large scale direct attack was made on segregatin in the South: it was made by Rosenwald Fund workers.

Since the death of the Rosenwald Fund, the Southern Regional Conference has been existing on grants from individuals and certain out-of-state groups. Now, its coffers have been handsomely replenished by a huge sum of money from the Ford Foundation.

Dr. George S. Mitchell has headed up the Council as its executive director since 1947. He came to Georgia in 1944, the year in which the Southern Regional Conference, of Atlanta, was incorporated in Fulton County Superior Court.

Prior to coming to Georgia, Mitchell had seen considerable service in the Federal government: he was in the Department of Interior, Department of Agriculture and the Foreign Economic Administration.

Mitchell's first job after coming to Atlanta was Southeastern Regional Director of the CIO-Political Action Committee from which he became Director of Veterans Service of the Southern Regional Council.

The Southern Regional Council was incorporated in Fulton County, Georgia, Superior Court January 6, 1944: its objects and purposes as set out in its petition for incorporation are:

"The objects and purposes of said corporation are to exist and function as an eleemosynary organization, and more particularly to organize and maintain a Regional Council for the improvement of economic, civic and racial conditions in the South, in the endeavor to promote a greater unity in the South in all efforts towards regional and racial developments; to attain through research and action programs, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the region; to reduce race tension, the basis of racial tension, racial misunderstanding, and racial distrust; to develop and intergrate leadership in the South on new levels of regional development and fellowship: and to cooperate with local, state and regional agencies on all levels in the attainment of the desired objectives."

The petition for charter sets out that the Council's membership is self perpetuating and shall be composed of the incorporators and others as the incorporators shall designate according to such rules and by-laws as may be adopted by the corporation.

The Council is a non-pecuniary corporation with no capital stock. It has the right to receive donations, endowments, devises and bequests, etc.

The petition for incorporation of the Council was filed by Haas, Lyons & Hurt, attorneys of Atlanta. The petition was filed in Fulton Superior Court, January 6, 1944; the order of incorporation was signed by Superior Court Judge Frank A. Hooper, Jr., January 6, 1944, for a period of 35 years. It is recorded in Book 062, page 46, Clerk's office, Superior Courts, Atlanta Circuit.

Does the large grant of money to the Council from the Ford Foundation mean that funds will be expended by the Council in an effort to propagandize against racial segregation in Georgia's public schools and to try to defeat the proposed amendment to Georgia's constitution, to be voted on in the General Election this fall?

That proposed amendment to Georgia's constitution provides:

"Section 1. That Article VII of the Constitution of Georgia be amended by adding thereto a new section, to be numbered Section XIII, as follows:

'Section XIII. Paragraph I, Grants for Education:

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Constitution, the General Assembly may by law provide for grants of State, county or municipal funds to citizens of the State for educational purposes, and in discharge of all obligation of the State to provide adequate education for its citizens.' "

The Association of County Commissioners of Georgia, in its annual convention at Savannah, April 20, 1954, unanimously endorsed that proposed amendment to the State's constitution. The resolution of the commissioners endorsing the proposed amendment said in part:

"The experience of generations and the lessons of history have demonstrated that where the two races live together in great numbers as in this State, the best interest of both are promoted by their education in separate schools. Upon the principle of parallel civilizations our institutions are erected, having as their goal their excellence of the individual rather than the reduction of the mass to some undetermined level."

Will the people of Georgia allow the millions accumulated by the Ford Motor Company and expended through the Ford Foundation and the Southern Regional Council, of Atlanta, to destroy the white man's civilization in Georgia?

they are and to expose the movements for what they are, then the great band of liberals all over the country joins hands with the communists and their fellow travelers in a mighty crusade to assassinate the character of any individual or person who seeks to expose the communists' objectives.

The liberals in this country helped the communists destroy Martin Dies. The so-called liberals in this country are today calling for Joe McCarthy's scalp.

The so-called liberals can see no harm in the communists, but to them, old Joe is a terrible monster to be destroyed. If you don't believe what I am saying just listen to the news commentators on your radio. Listen to the news commentators on your television set. Just read the columns of the Drew Pearson type of liberal in this country.

Every one of them has joined in every character assassination campaign conducted by the communist party and their sympathizers.

Just listen to Edward R. Murrow some night. Even Malenkov wouldn't sound near as bad as does Edward R. Murrow.

It is a strange thing that these liberals never criticize the communists. They are always after the enemies of the communists.

These so-called liberals belong to Truman's crowd who holler "red herring." They defended Hiss and every one of the rest of the traitors until they were caught red-handed and convicted.

They now swell the chorus of the communist hymns of hate and the communists' attempts to destroy and assassinate the character of every individual who fights the communist cause.

You will notice that you have never heard Harry Truman talk about any of this group. On the contrary, he hollered "witch hunt" and "red herring" and tried to stop every effort on the part of Congress to expose the communists in government.

You will recall that Adlai Stevenson always played along with this bunch of liberals and talked about the witch hunt and the red herring and the attempt to determine guilt by association.

They always associated with this so-called liberal group and followed their line.

They minimized from the very beginning the influence of the communists in government even though they knew that the communist scientists had delivered to Russia every secret discovery in the field of atomic energy.

They weren't concerned about it at all.

It reminds me of a rape story in the Georgia Law Reports. The Judge who wrote the decision on the Court of Appeals bench said that the young lady in question wasn't seriously concerned about her virtue and that the only signs of concern that she exhibited during the time of the escapade was that her sister's dress which she was wearing not be mussed up in any manner, shape, form or fashion to the extent that she took it off and hung it up in the tourist court.

These so-called liberals are in the same position today. They are not worried about the government being destroyed by the communists or overthrown in a communist movement.

Their first concern is the destruction of those who fight the communists and the efforts to divide and conquer the American people.

And talking about dividing the American people, we have a recent example that makes you want to vomit.

Recently, the Ford Foundation granted the Southern Regional Council of Atlanta two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Now, the object and purpose of the Southern Regional Council is to divide the people of the South and to create chaos, confusion and violence.

Its objective as stated in its charter is the destruction of the pattern of segregation.

As soon as the charter was granted they issued a statement of policy. This statement said that they looked forward to a South of the future where "segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit" and no longer will be imposed.

That is the object of the Southern Regional Council. It was so stated at the time it was created.

Now it is anticipated that the Ford Foundation gave this one quarter of a million dollars to the Southern Regional Council to carry out its avowed purpose.

Now mind you, this grant is given at a time when an adverse decision from the Supreme Court of the United States is anticipated and at a time when we all look forward to chaos, confusion and violence as a

Dear Sir:

In answer to questions that have arisen regarding the reciprocal agreement between South Carolina and the State of Georgia on the Clark Hill impoundment, I offer the following in an effort to make it clear as to just what waters may be fished in under this agreement.

It will be noted in the agreement and I quote, "It is the desire of the States of Georgia and South Carolina to adopt and enforce rules and regulations covering the preservation, propagation and taking of fish in and from the waters of the Savannah River, between Clark Hill Dam, the highway bridge between Calhoun Falls, South Carolina, and Elberton, Georgia, including the waters impounded by the Clark's Hill Dam, but not in streams running into said body of water."

The words "Including the waters impounded by the Clark Hill Dam" mean all of the Lake whether it be on some particular creek where the lake backs up this creek or river.

There seems to be some confusion that maybe only the Savannah River may be fished according to this agreement; however, by the impoundment of the Clark Hill Dam means any area including the actual high water mark, and streams running into the lake are not covered by this agreement. The stream running into the lake is no longer a stream after it reaches the actual lake level.

I trust this will clarify this situation.

Yours very truly,

Talmadge Scored Big Hit With N. Y., Pittsburgh Talks

ATLANTA,—For sometime many Georgians have been convinced that Herman Talmadge is the most progressive governor in Georgia's history. Now they are hailing him as the state's No. 1 ambassador of good will; a salesman par excellence for our commonwealth. And for good reason, too. His latest public performance above the Mason-Dixon offered convincing evidence of that. In New York and Pittsburgh, where he delivered speeches and made several television and radio speeches, he made a big hit.

In all his talks he did a good job of spreading the virtues of his native Georgia, never missing a trick. But in Pittsburgh especially he laid it on the line for industrialists who may be looking southward. On that score he had this to say to the Pittsburgh Personnel Assn., a 37-year-old organization composed of some 650 members representing a cross-section of manufacturing, business and educational leaders:

"We of the South are particularly interested in the attitudes and motivations of financiers and industrialists. We are interested because we are in the midst of a tremendous industrial revolution and we are eager to attract the plants of responsible firms to locate in our region. But we are looking for that industry which will come in as one and join in full partnership in our development. That which would exploit our people, our resources and our vast potential while giving nothing in return is not welcome.

"Of course, I can speak only for my own state. But I can tell you without equivocation that we are innocent of charges of offering unfair inducements to industries to relocate their plants in Georgia. We have not consciously raided industry from any other section of the country. Neither have we offered any handout except the outstretched hand of help and cooperation.

"We do not wish to profit by the loss of any other section. The industry which has come to Georgia has done so voluntarily and officials of our new plants tell us they are glad they have come."

Talmadge cited the City of Rome in Northwest Georgia as an example of the state's growing industrial might. He gave details of the $100-million industrial expansion under way in the area. One by one he told of the many advantages Georgia has to offer. He reviewed in much detail the great progress that has been made under his administration on all fronts. He closed with a stern warning against the spread of Communism in America and expressed confidence in the American people to meet head-on the problems that lie ahead.

All in all, Georgia's young governor was at his best in representing his state on the national scene.

Gillis Tells Of Wonderful Progress In Roadbuilding

Highway Chairman Is Given Rousing Demonstration By County Officials

Georgia has made wonderful progress in roadbuilding during the past five years and for the first time in the history of the state, every county has shared in the road funds.

This statement was made by Jim L. Gillis, Chairman of the State Highway Department to the county commissioners meeting in Savannah on April 19, 1954.

At the conclusion of his speech the county commissioners gave a rousing demonstration for Gillis and the speech he made.

To some, the demonstration by the county commissioners meant that they were anxious for him to be a candidate for Governor and others interpreted it as being a demonstration of the respect and devotion on the part of the county commissioners towards Gillis.

It is true that Gillis has made a remarkable record as chairman of the highway department and Georgia, for the first time in its history, has a real roadbuilding highway department.

Gillis' speech in full follows:

It may be that I will make two speeches to you today for I feel like the colored man who got his nerve together and took a flight in an airplane. As he climbed out after the ride, he turned to the pilot and said: "Suh, Ah has to thank yuh fo' both dem rides."

"What are you talking about?" said the pilot. "You had only one ride."

"No, suh," returned the passenger, "Ah done had two—mah fust and mah last."

It is an honor for me to be here and discuss with you our road problems.

I think we should proceed on the assumption that our problems are financial in character. Our job has been to provide the ever-growing physical needs of an economy that during the past few years has been undergoing great change. Growing population, higher levels of employment, more production, expanding consumer income have revolutionized the transportation requirements of our country.

The changing economic picture has been one predominantly of growth. The most important single factor in the growth picture is population. There are 30 million more people in the United States today than there were in 1940. Every person in the nation requires an average of about 16 tons of materials per year to keep him going. He eats ¾ of a ton of food. Another 2 tons of agricultural products are needed per person each year to provide clothing, paper and miscellaneous products.

This means transporting 2-¾ tons of materials 30 million times from farm to market, transporting the produce to factory and processing center, trucking the goods to the retail store and driving to the store to keep the home supplied. Heat, light, power for the home and factory and transportation system requires another 7 tons of fuel per year per person and each of our 30 million new inhabitants requires 5 tons of building materials—stone, sand, gravel, cement and lumber—per year.

Every additional person in the nation means an additional 5000 miles of travel per year.

That is what recent growth has meant to the nation. Our State has been affected proportionately and that is the burden that growth has imposed on our transportation system and in turn on the highway department and you as county commissioners, who are called upon to provide the facilities.

Georgia, with a 73% increase in automobile registrations since 1940, is 7th among all the states in growth in car registrations. One reason for this growth in highway use is that the places people like best are the places where the motor vehicle is needed most. The suburbs of our metropolitan areas have been growing three times faster than the central cities and the states that show the most rapid growth are the states where the automobile and truck have come to be relied upon to a major degree to support expanding business and industry.

In these areas, walking to the store or to work has not only become unfashionable, but in many cases unthinkable. Homes, schools, businesses and shopping centers are being located on the assumption that people move on wheels. Industries have been locating out of town where land is cheaper and more plentiful, and the great size of the modern factory requires that workers be attracted from widely scattered areas, by highways.

Along with the rise in population, there has been a rapid growth in the amount of goods and services produced by the State's economy. Transportation requirements have also been multiplied by the changing distribution of income.

A recent survey showed that for every 100 households receiving $5,000 income per year, 85 had at least one car and 15 had two cars or more.

The revolutionary changes in our economy have not been limited, however, to the growth brought about by the population and income factors. In addition, there have been tremendous strides in science and industry in the last few years. Among these are the whole field of electronics, synthetics and a host of chemical products that have meant new demands for materials, new factories and new requirements for transportation.

Many of these factories have been established in the South, and particularly in our own state. You, as county officials, have no doubt been instrumental in having these industries located in our State. You are to be commended for this for we can justly be proud that our State has been recognized as having many possibilities for industrial expansion.

In the area of finance, our problem is that of raising the extraordinary amounts of capital needed to permit the construction of highways to take care of emergencies resulting from these conditions.

Under the new bill, just passed by the Congress, Georgia will receive in Federal aid about $20,299,000 per year for highway purposes, an increase of $7,038,000 over the present amount, most of this increase being for work on the primary system.

The new bill provides $7,796,000 for Federal-aid primary roads in Georgia, an increase of $1,737,000; it sets aside $5,954,000 for Federal-aid secondary roads, an increase of $1,326,000; it earmarks $2,515,000 for work in cities with a population of 5,000 or more (but still on the primary system), an increase of $559,000; and it makes available $4,034,000 for Interstate routes in Georgia, an increase of $3,416,000 for this work.

The bill requires that every dollar of Federal funds be matched with a dollar of state or local funds, with the exception of Interstate funds, which are to be matched on a ratio of 60% Federal and 40% State funds.

We are all aware of the wonderful progress we have made during the past five years. More actual road building has been done than in any other like period. For the first time in the history of the State, every county has shared in the road funds. The progress we have made to date could not have come about without the understanding, cooperation, advice and influence of the county commissioners. For this we are grateful.

The needs of the highway department have had the sympathetic attention of our Governor and we extend to him our sincere acknowledgement of his friendly interest in the road problems of the State and the individual counties. His help in carrying the program to this point in his administration has been invaluable. For his patience, tolerance and vigorous assistance when required, we offer our sincere thanks.

The members of the general assembly have shown a very constructive interest in highway problems and they have been active in authorizing steps designed to aid in solving financial problems. We are honored to have this confidence and understanding.

The Bureau of Public Roads have been most cooperative. They have said on a number of occasions that Georgia has the best operated highway department in the southeast. For this we are grateful.

Georgia is a great State! With God's help and your continued cooperation we will build from the mountains to the sea the greatest system of roads in the United States!

I thank you.

result of the effort made to abolish segregation in the public schools.

Now why would the Ford Foundation grant this money at this particular time?

It can be for only one purpose and that is to help them to wage a fight to destroy segregation in the South and to mix and mingle the races.

Now mind you, this money which the Ford Foundation gave them came from you people who buy Ford automobiles. Every time you buy an automobile you contribute money into this Ford Foundation and the Fords in turn take the money to destroy you and your children.

The next time you think about buying a Ford automobile, just think about that.

Now the money the Ford Foundation has is not their money. The Ford Foundation has this money to dish out due to a loophole in the federal taxing laws and while it was legal, it is nothing more or less than stolen from the federal government even though the stealing is legalized.

Here is why I say it. These giant corporations can set up a foundation devoted to what they call charitable and eleemosynary purposes and then it isn't subject to taxation.

These giant corporations can take money which would go to the Federal government in the way of taxes and put it in a foundation and then spend the money as they see fit.

That is exactly what the Fords have done. They have set up a foundation and instead of paying the money to the government in the way of income taxes, they put it in the foundation and then use it for any purpose that they see fit.

Now they have taken this money which should have gone to the United States Government, put it in a foundation and turned it over to the Southern Regional Council to spend it to destroy segregation in Georgia.

Now what can you do about this situation?

There are two things you can do. You don't have to buy a Ford automobile the next time, for one thing. Then the other, you can sit down and write your congressman a letter today and tell him that these foundations should no longer be exempt from taxation.

The tax exemption of these foundations is a crying shame.

Now if you or I would like to help some poor devil by helping send his sick child, his wife or himself to the hospital and contribute to the cost, we must pay income tax on the money we contribute. We can't deduct it from our income tax returns.

If you have an aged father or mother and are contributing to their support this cannot be deducted from your income tax return. You must pay it.

If you had a little spare money and would like to contribute it to help a niece, a nephew or grandson or granddaughter, you must then pay income tax on the amount you contribute.

But the Ford Foundation can put millions of dollars every year into the Ford Foundation and they can deduct it from their tax returns. This means that they take the money which would have otherwise gone to the federal government, put it in a foundation and they can spend it where they believe that it will help their business of selling Ford automobiles.

They do it by making grants to all kinds of crackpot organizations like the Southern Regional Council.

This Southern Regional Council picked up one of the platforms of the Communist Party in America and that was the destruction of the pattern of segregation in the South.

This Southern Regional Council is helping the Communists carry out this part of their platform.

The Communists care nothing for the negro or the South. Their only hope and only aim is to divide Southern people and keep us in a fight.

The Southern Regional Council is helping them in their objective and the Ford Foundation is financing their activities.

Now, sit down and write your congressman today and insist that he sponsor a movement in congress to make these giant corporations which are now setting up these foundations pay income taxes just like you and I do.

We are allowing these giant corporations to set up these foundations, take millions of dollars and use it to control and influence the thinking of the people of the nation and to aid the communists and the wildcat liberals in the darndest wildcat schemes ever dreamed about.

Unless these foundations like the Ford foundations are curbed and made to pay taxes like you and I, they will eventually destroy this great country.

You haven't forgotten about the Rosenwald Fund. The Rosenwald Fund was set up by old Julius Rosenwald for the sole purpose of starting this fight to destroy segregation.

Now, it looks like the Ford Foundation has taken up where the Rosenwald Foundation left off. Sit down and write your congressman and senator and unless they are willing to do something about these foundation funds, let's elect somebody to the Senate and Congress who will do something about it.

Georgia's Traffic Death Toll Higher Now Than Year Ago

ATLANTA,—The death toll on Georgia's highways and streets continues to mount. Evidence of this is seen in the latest figures of the State Department of Public Safety's Accident Reporting Division, just released by Lieut. R. V. Richards, director. Here's what they showed:

From the first of the year through April 12 a total of 253 persons died in Georgia as a result of traffic accidents. That compares with 241 killed in the same period a year ago, or an increase of five per cent.

As in the past many of this year's victims were children. And in that connection the Georgia Citizens Council, sponsors of the state-wide traffic safety campaign, issued this warning to motorists: "Expect the unexpected where children are concerned. Drive slowly. Children move fast. Be especially alert in areas where schools, playgrounds and residences are located."

The Citizens Council urges teachers and parents to impress upon youngsters the importance of being alert in traffic at all times. Tell them over and over again to cross streets at crosswalks and with traffic lights, and never to play in the streets.

Southern Regional Council Financed By Ford Exposed As Haven For Commies

Atlanta Constitution's Ralph McGill One Of Incorporators Of Bi-Racial Group

The Southern Regional Council, a bi-racial organization and recipient of a $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation, is a haven for known communist fronters and could well become the Communist Party apparatus in the South.

That conclusion was reached by this newspaper only after a thorough and searching study of the council's history and activities since it was chartered and headquartered in Atlanta, January 6, 1944.

Our investigation has established the following concerning the organization:

1. It is the successor, in fact, to the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a Communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the SCHW.

Branded as Communists

2. Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as Communists in testimony before congressional committees by former associates in the party.

3. At least 38 officers, members of the executive staff or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as Communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in the report citing it as a Communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to "promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions" to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been solely a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist Party line as laid down for the South.

These are serious charges but we have the uncontrovertible proof of them all.

Ford Foundation Funds

The Ford Foundation is, in effect, financing communization of the South and ultimate destruction of this country and her free enterprise system under which all of the Ford fortune was accumulated.

Taking our investigation of the Southern Regional Council up, chapter and verse, let us first start by considering Dr. George S. Mitchell, an incorporator of the Council, its director of veterans services during the period 1945-'47 and its executive director since that time.

Born in Richmond, Va., Mitchell studied at University of Delaware, Johns Hopkins and at Oxford University in England. He is a Ph. D. and taught economics at Columbia 1929-'35. After that he went into federal government service.

It is interesting and indicative to note that his career from 1935 to 1944 closely parallels that of other "liberals" of the time who served in the Agriculture Department under Henry Wallace and later

Even the buzzards who have been clamoring for the Supreme Court to destroy segregation are finding now that the implications of the Supreme Court decision are even more than they can stomach.

Some of these buzzards are beginning to find out that they have fallen into a trap and they have a decision based on a line of reasoning which they don't like.

Even the old Saturday Evening Post is crying because the Supreme Court didn't base its decision on the Constitution of the United States instead of upon the writings of a few crackpot sociologists and psychologists.

In its issue of June 19, 1954, the Saturday Evening Post said:

"The court might well have based its decision exclusively on the Constitution without the precedent which Chief Justice Warren established by citing, along with a few legal cases, works like Effect of Prejudice and Discrimination on Personality Development, by K. B. Clark, and Personality in the Making, by Witmer and Kotinsky."

And amidst their tears they also quote from the Washington correspondent of the New York Times, James Reston, who wrote:

"'Relying more on the social scientists than on legal precedents—a procedure often in controversy in the past—the court insisted on equality of the mind and heart rather than on equal school facilities.'"

And in this editorial, the Saturday Evening Post wallows in its own tears when it laments that Chief Justice Warren said that separate schools for colored people generate "a sense of inferiority which affects the motivation of a child to learn."

Now, why do they finally cry over this decision?

Well, they are just beginning to wake up.

They are just now finding out that the Supreme Court decision was not justified by either the constitution or the precedents of the past. To find something to base their decision on, the Supreme Court Justices had to dig down in a few books written by crackpot sociologists and psychologists and come up with a decision.

Now here's why the Saturday Evening Post cries. But, let's let you read what they say. Here it is:

"However, it is also true that the fact that A lives in a bigger house than B can engender a feeling of inferiority in the latter. Reliance on sociology alone, particularly in view of the socialistic thinking of many modern sociologists, might well establish the doctrine that 'equal protection of the laws' necessitates equal housing facilities, equal incomes and parity in motor-vehicle horsepower."

Now you see the trap that the private enterprise advocate in the person of the Saturday Evening Post has fallen into.

They are just waking up and they are about to realize that eventually they will have to wallow in the slime which they created like a big fat pig wallowing in the filth of his own pen.

It is no more than this bunch of buzzards deserve. But it is awful to contemplate when we know that this bunch of buzzards have drug all the rest of us down by this kind of a crazy line of reasoning.

Now the Supreme Court ought to do something about me. I think I have been badly discriminated against and I once had a bad inferiority complex.

I can remember 'way back when I was a small kid along between 1900 and 1906 or 1907 when I lived 'way out in the sticks. Occasionally, we went to town in a buggy or in the old surrey with my father and we stood around town looking at all the folks who lived in town. I thought that they were all way above me and all I had was a nickel to get a bag of gum drops and I had a bad inferiority complex.

We later moved to town and some of the town kids looked down upon and made fun of the young kids from the sticks.

I went to school when we moved to town under these conditions but my sense of inferiority didn't affect my motivation to learn. Instead, it created within me a dogged determination to show these young up-starts something.

As I go back in my mind over the period of the last fifty years and think about those who made fun of us who happened to be children from

Board Of Education Is Following The Law

(From The Atlanta Journal, June 16, 1954.)

THE STATE BOAD of Education has pledged formally not to spend any money on nonsegregated schools. The board says in a resolution written Tuesday that it will void all commitments and allotments to any school system which fails to maintain separate schools for white and colored races.

The resolution actually is not a new statement of policy occasioned by the recent United States Supreme Court decision, but a restatement of policy already written into Georgia law.

The General Assembly provided in the appropriations act, passed early in 1953, that state funds cannot be paid to any county or independent school system or to any unit of the University System in which segregation is not maintained.

The law is based on the separate school clause of the State Constitution and was passed in anticipation of possible court action that might force some school system or University System unit in Georgia to end segregation.

The State Board of Education's resolution was, technically, unnecessary, since the appropriations act would automatically take care of any situation arising.

Nevertheless, the board's action is useful. It serves to refresh Georgians' memories on provisions of the appropriations act. It shows also that the board is aware of its obligations under state law and intends to uphold the law. Citizens naturally expect this of a state agency.

There are other aspects of the situation which might well be pointed out in the interest of clarity:

First, that the appropriations act, as now written, would not stop all state funds for all public schools in event school segregation is ended somewhere in Georgia. It would stop only funds going to the particular, individual county or independent system, or University System unit, where segregation actually was discontinued.

Second, that school building funds would not be withheld in any circumstances, even from the nonsegregated system. This is state law; it also is the State Board of Education's policy as defined in the resolution.

This provision protects Georgia's great school building program and assures the soundness of bonds issued by the State School Building Authority. This program, designed to raise the level of all public school facilities in Georgia, both white and Negro, may prove to be one of the state's greatest aids in meeting segregation problems.

Third, that budget increases voted by the state board—$7,401,869 for the next fiscal year—were not made necessary by the Supreme Court ruling. They are normal, automatic increments arising under the Minimum Foundation Program.

The State Board of Education is proceeding under the law. The Georgia Education Commission, which is specifically charged with recommending ways for Georgia to meet school segregation problems, also is proceeding according to law.

This is the orderly working of government, and a pattern worth maintaining as the state faces the difficult decisions ahead.

ANOTHER ERROR

(From The Hattiesburg (Mississippi) American, May 31, 1954.)

The Supreme Court made an error in ruling out segregation in public schools.

And now some thoughtless Negro agents of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People are making another error. They met in Jackson Sunday and adopted a program calling for an immediate campaign to end segregation in Mississippi schools.

Obviously these Negroes are unaware of the situation in this State. They are doing the very thing that will produce the worst possible racial relations. They should be denounced by the more intelligent members of their race.

No amount of force will enable the Negroes to attend white schools, even though they might wish to. They ought to realize this and save themselves and others a lot of distress.

The problem shapes up something like this:

The Negroes say they are prepared to go to court to have the segregation decision enforced. What happens when they go to court? The judges, the court officers, the people who will compose the juries are Mississippians. If a criminal charge is filed the Federal district court grand jury will have to consider it. Is any Mississippi citizen, white or black, so stupid as to believe that such a grand jury will return an indictment? If the grand jury were called up before the United States Supreme Court itself and reprimanded the jury foreman would reply about as follows: Your Honors, we will have to indict ourselves, if necessary, because we will continue to refuse to bring in an indictment in this case or any case like it. transferred, almost as a group, to the Foreign Economic Administration.

Incorporation of SRC

Mitchell jumped from government service in 1944 to the job as Southeastern Regional Director of the CIO-Political Action Committee. He served for nearly two years in this job before taking a position on the executive staff of the Southern Regional Council which he now heads.

Dr. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Mr. Ralph McGill, Editor of The Atlanta Constitution. Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Dr. Howard W. Odum applied for the SRC charter to Fulton County Superior Court, January 6, 1944. The Atlanta law firm of Haas, Lyons and Hurt, of which Leonard Haas is senior member, were attorneys for the applicants for the charter. It was granted for a period of 35 years.

Records and reports of proceedings of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities reveal Dr. Mitchell as a member of the top-level "Board of Representatives" of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; Dr. Rufus E. Clement is listed as a member of the powerful executive board of the SCHW; Dr. Charles S. Johnson is named also as a member of the executive board of the SCHW and was extremely active in promoting the affairs of the conference, while the name of Dr. Howard W. Odum appeared on the list of sponsors for the second Southern Conference for Human Welfare held in Chattanooga, Tenn., as contained in the call for the conference.

Group Switched Over

Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, was an early member of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare but wrote later after discovering communist infiltration into the group that "when this happended I knew enough to get out and knew enough to know that the Southern Conference was finished even as it began."

Thus, it is apparent that when the heat of public inquiry was turned on the SCHW by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, its leading lights set up the SRC to catch the ball after the SCHW was exposed as a red-front and its usefulness was at an end. This will become more and more apparent as our story unfolds.

The real policy makers and directors of the old SCHW were Clark Howell Foreman, its president, and Aubrey Williams, ex-officio member of its board of representatives. Both these men have been listed on official publications of the SRC as members of its Board of Directors. Both of them have been branded as known communists in testimony before congressional committees.

Clark Foreman Named

Louis Budenz, former communist, testifying before the House Committee investigating tax-exempt foundations December 23, 1952, identified Clark Foreman "as a communist party member."

Aubrey Williams was nailed "as a secret communist" earlier this year at the New Orleans hearings held there by Sen. James O. Eastland for the Senate Internal Security Committee.

John Butler, Dallas nursery operator and a former red, testified: "I heard his name mentioned time and time again as a communist member." Paul Crouch, another former Communist, testified that he knew Williams as a "secret member of the Communist Party."

Investigation discloses that others who held high office or took an especially active part in the Communist-front SCHW are now either officers, directors or executives of the SRC.

Listed In Daily Worker

Marion A. Wright, President of the SRC, was listed in the DAILY WORKER of May 20, 1947 (page 5) "as having signed a statement of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare," according to records of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

Albert W. Dent, Vice-president of SRC,

DR. GEORGE S. MITCHELL

President Dillard Univ., New Orleans La., identified "as a member of the Southern Council of the SCHW; sponsor 2nd SCHW and sponsor Southern Negro Youth Conference, a red-front."

P. B. Young, ex-vice-president SRC, Publisher, Norfolk, Va., JOURNAL and GUIDE, signed statement of SCHW, according to DAILY WORKER, May 20, 1947.

Guy B. Johnson, ex-vice-president, Southern Regional Council, Chapel Hill, N. C., Institute for Research in Social Science, University of North Carolina, was a consultant on Panel IV—Citizenship and Civil Liberties of the SCHW as shown by official records of the group.

Director of SRC

Directors of the SRC who also held important posts or were active in the SCHW include the following: Dr. Howard W. Odum, Univ. of N. C., Chapel Hill, N. C.; F. D. Patterson, Pres., Tuskegee Inst., Tuskegee, Ala.; Paul Christopher, Regional Director, CIO-PAC, Knoxville, Tenn.; Miss Josephine Wilkins, Atlanta, Ga.; Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Ala.; Clark H. Foreman, New York, N. Y.; Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Pres., Atl. Univ., Atlanta, Ga.; Louis E. Burnham, Birmingham, Ala.

Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Pres., Palmer Inst., Sedalia, N. C.; Dr. Ira De Reid, professor, Atl. Univ., Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. C. S. Johnson, Pres., Fisk Univ., Nashville. Tenn.; Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Pres., Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga.; Guy B. Johnson, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C.; William E. Cole, Knoxville, Tenn.; Donald Comer, industrialist, Birmingham, Ala.; David D. Jones, president, Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C.; Rt. Rev. E. A. Penick, Bishop, Diocese of North Carolina, Raleigh, N. C.; and Glenn W. Rainey, professor, Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta.

The above lists prove beyond the shadow of any doubt that the SRC is the successor group to the exposed communist-front SCHW. The same people who organized and operated the latter group are now manipulating political action on the part of the SRC.

Carefully Camouflaged

The House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities concluded following its investigation of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare as follows:

"The Southern Conference for Human Welfare is perhaps the most deviously-camouflaged communist-front organization. When put to the following acid test it reveals its true character:

"1. It shows unswerving loyalty to the basic principles of Soviet foreign policy.

"2. It has consistently refused to take sharp issue with the activities and policies of either the Communist Party, USA, or the Soviet Union.

"3. It has maintained in decisive posts persons who have the confidence of the communist press.

"4. It has displayed consistent anti-American bias and pro-Soviet bias, despite professions, in generalities, for love of America.

"In the light of the fact that a significant number of the leading lights of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare are associated with organizations or campaigns for the defense of the Communist Party or individual Communists, or with organizations defending the Soviet Union, or its policies—issues which have nothing to do with the South—one is forced to the conclusion that, by and large, the common bond among its supporters is a certain degree of sympathy for the Soviet Union and/or the Communist Party, rather than any primary interest in human welfare in the South. One is further forced to conclude that the professed interest in southern welfare is simply an expedient for larger aims serving the Soviet Union and its subservient Communist Party in the United States."

Two Known Commies

The AUGUSTA COURIER had anticipated, when beginning its investigation of the Southern Regional Council, that it would find a handful of people in it with Communist front associations. But the Courier was, to say the least, amazed to find two known Communist on its Board of Directors and 38 others who have associations with Communist fronts in varying numbers and degrees. It would be impossible to congregate this many people with such backgrounds and affiliations except by design.

When the U. S. Supreme Court announced its ruling declaring segregation unconstitutional in the public schools of the South SRC chief, Dr. Mitchell, was quoted in the press as hailing the decision. He said integration would "give every child equal opportunity . . . and would enrich this and every other Southern community."

Besides Dr. Mitchell's top policy job in the SCHW, his name has also cropped up in connection with other communist-front organizations such as the Civil Rights Congress, the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, the Communist-infiltrated Brookwood College and others, according to records and reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

We are informed by a reliable source, who has knowledge of the inner-workings of the Southern Regional Council, that a group of project personnel has been named to spend the $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation.

Morris B. Abram

This list includes the names of Morris B. Abram, Atlanta attorney, and newly-named Director of SRC, as a worker on the field staff of the Ford project, and Philip G. Hammer, Executive Officer, Committee of the South, also of Atlanta, presumably as a paid employee of the central staff of SRC's project personnel which will work to mix the races in the classrooms of Southern public schools.

Hammer was a speaker at a recent meeting of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia. Apparently officials of this group did not know about Hammer's record of association with communist fronts.

Hammer was president of the Washington, D. C., Committee of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and was also listed as a member of the Washington Bookshop, another subversive communist front. No one could have held such a high office in the Washington SCHW organization unless he could be fully trusted to carry out instructions.

This same Hammer was born in Philadelphia, Pa. He studied under Dr. Frank Graham at the University of North Carolina and at Harvard. Upon coming to Washington, he was employed in the office of Bob LaFollette, liberal Senator from Wisconsin. From there he went with the Farm Security Administration in the Department of Agriculture under Henry Wallace. He later was included in the mass transfer of "liberals" to the State Department for work in the Foreign Economic Administration and the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

In spite of the fact that Hammer held responsible government positions all during World War II, even though he was of military service age, he terminated his employment abruptly in late 1945. He is reported to have come to Atlanta in 1946 in an effort to get a magazine started which he hoped to edit, but could not make financial arrangements and left, only to return in 1947 as a business analyst for the Atlanta firm of Joseph K. Heyman.

He resigned from this position in March 1950 to become Director of the Metropolitan Planning Commission and as such was author of the "Plan of Improvement" legislation which took most of the effective governmental powers away from Fulton County and vested them in the Mayor of Atlanta who twice has been elected to office not by a vote of white people but by the bloc vote.

Hammer's Activities

Our investigation shows that Mr. Hammer, in addition to his Communist front affiliations, was named as a member of the National Executive Council of United World Federalists in early 1949. This is an organization which proposes the surrender of our national sovereignty to a super world government which would have police powers and could arrest individual citizens of member nations.

During the summer of 1953, Hammer took a three months' leave from his job as Director of the Committee of the South to direct an intensive study for the Ford Foundation Educational Fund. Main purpose of the study was to convince the Supreme Court that a ruling by it outlawing segregation could be implemented and enforced. This work was known as the "Ashmore Project" under which school segregation in the Southern States was studied with a view towards devising ways and means to eliminate it.

Hammer has been a frequent guest at the "Hungry Club," a negro luncheon group, where he has dined with its members. He told delegates to the recent Southern Interstate Conference of the National Council of Jewish Women that plans to preserve separate schools in Georgia "won't last as long as the white primaries."

Voters League Official

His wife Jane is First Vice President of the Georgia League of Women Voters and is Editor of "GEORGIA VOTER" a bi-monthly publication of the organization, in which its policy is enunciated. The announcement bulletin of Spelman College for 1952-53 lists Mrs. Hammer as a teacher of Philosophy there. Both the Hammers have been very active in directing the fight against the county unit system in Georgia.

Another so-called "liberal" who will help SRC spend the Ford grant is Morris B. Abram. While Abram has never been associated with any organization which has been branded as a communist front, he was a member of the National Executive Council of the United World Federalists.

UWF, according to an article printed in the Congressional Record, "was created by communists, fellow-travelers and communist sympathizers whose whole purpose is to so weaken us as a nation that we become impotent."

Abram's other activities include lectures at negro colleges, attendance at negro banquets, inflamatory addresses before NAACP groups, legal representation of publishers and producers of questionable books, magazines and motion pictures seeking to destroy the morals of our youth and segregation in the South. He now is a candidate for Congress in the Fifth District of Georgia on a platform recommending abolition of the county unit system.

A member of President Truman's notorious Civil Rights Commission is field secretary of the Woman's Division of the Southern Regional Council. She is well-known to Georgians as Mrs. M. E. Tilly of Atlanta.

Methodist Federation

Records of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities show that Mrs. Tilly was an active member of the Methodist Federation for Social Action, a communist front. In the report on that group branding it as such, Mrs. Tilly's name appears throughout the context.

Other communist-front activities with which she has been connected according to House Committee records include the following:

"A facsimile of the signature of Mrs. Dorothy Tilly (Mrs. M. E. Tilly) is found on a Jan. 19, 1951, letterhead of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act; on this letterhead, another dated May 25, 1951, and in the Daily Worker of Dec. 27, 1950 (page 9), her name appears as an initiator of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act; the Daily Worker referred to identified her with the Southern Regional Council, Atlanta.

"In the Statement of Policy, issued by the National Committee for Peaceful Alternatives in December 1950, Mrs. M. E. Tilly was named as a member of the Executive Board of that Committee. The Daily Worker of July 28, 1950 (page 8), reported that she signed a statement of the same committee, regarding Korea. A letterhead of the National Committee . . . dated Sept. 16, 1950, also named Mrs. Tilly as a member of the organization's Executive Board (from the Committee's Report on the Communist 'Peace' Offensive which was released on April 25, 1951, (page 56). Identified as being associated with the Southern Regional Council, Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. Tilly was named as one of the sponsors of the Mid-Century Conference for Peace held in Chicago, May 29-30, 1950 (from the Conference Program printed in the 'Peace' Offensive Report, (pages 143-151).

Aid To Communists

"The Committee for Peaceful Alternatives . . . was formed to further the cause of 'Communists in the United States' doing 'their part in the Moscow campaign' (report on the Communist 'Peace' Offensive referred to above.) The Mid-Century Conference for Peace (May 29-30, 1950), was cited as having been 'aimed at assembling as many gullible persons as possible under Communist direction and turning them into a vast sounding-board for Communist propaganda' (report of the Committee on Un-American Activities dated April 1, 1951)."

Harold C. Fleming, director of information and a spokesman for the Southern Regional Council, was quoted recently as terming the decision of the Supreme Court outlawing school segregation as "wholesome and healthy since it gives responsible Southern leadership a chance to work this thing out in a climate that can be relatively free of dissention and dispute and to what is the law of the land."

Mr. Fleming's statement reinforces what we have said all along—that this Ford Foundation money will be used to force an end to segregation upon us and for political action to elect candidates for office who are in sympathy with the Council's pro-communist, anti-Southern aims and ideals.

Grant of $75,000

Further along this line the Ford Foundation has made a more recent grant of $75,000 to Editor Virginius Dabney of the Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch for an information agency to "condition the minds of Southern people" that nothing can be done to prevent the destruction of segregation.

"News" releases extolling methods used by various Southern States to end segregation in schools will be ground out by this organization known as the "Southern Educational Reporting Service." It will be staffed by liberal "newsmen" with headquarters in Nashville, Tenn. Its real purpose is to coordinate the activities of various groups and organizations which seek an end to public school segregation.

It also is revealing to note that Constitution Editor McGill, an incorporator and leading apologist for the SRC, has been appointed by the Ford Foundation to a membership on the Board of Directors of the subsidiary Fund for the Advancement of Education. The Fund was established by the Ford Foundation in 1951 to support "new and experimental programs in formal education."

The SRC has been anticipating a ruling adverse to segregation and received the Ford grant for the purpose of conditioning the minds of Southern people to the idea of mixing the races in the classrooms of the South.

Commie Party Platform

Stripped of all its window-dressing, the aims, purposes and platform of the Communist Party, the defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare and now the Southern Regional Council are one and the same. They are identical on all points.

the sticks, I can hold no resentment against them and I am glad they did it.

I can say that because we have done better than those who laughed at us and we have been luckier than those who laughed at us. Somehow, I believe that the fun they poked at us gave us a motivation that we would not have had and created within us a dogged determination to get ahead.

Now I tell you this story which applied to me and my brothers and sisters for the sole purpose of showing you how ridiculous the Supreme Court decision is.

According to the Supreme Court decision, we were discriminated against and were entitled to go to court and do something about it. But what could have been done?

Now, the whole idea illustrates how ridiculous it is for the Supreme Court of the United States to undertake to create a state of equality of the mind and heart throughout all of the one hundred and sixty million people in this country.

How many white people are discriminated against today? How many can gain admittance to the fine country clubs and golf clubs over the country? How many of you could become a member of the Augusta National where the President of the United States belongs and where he comes to play golf and relax with his millionaire cronies?

Now aren't you discriminated against when you are kept out of the Augusta National Golf Club?

Following the line of reasoning of the Supreme Court decision, you and I ought to sue Ike and the Augusta National for discriminating against us.

Frankly, I couldn't sue them because it does not create within me an inferiority complex because I am so discriminated against. I have lived through such a turbulent career and have had such a hard time until I have finally found out some of the facts of life. And I now don't give a damn about belonging to such organizations.

I have no objection to their existence. They are fine. I like to see them and I like to see those who are able, be able to enjoy such. I am proud that Ike comes here for his vacation and to find some rest and relaxation from his worries.

But the point I am trying to drive home is the ridiculousness of the line of reasoning which led to this Supreme Court decision.

A lot of people have inferiority complexes because a lot of other people have bigger houses and better homes than they do. So, following the same philosophy involved in this Supreme Court decision, the Supreme Court should now see to it that everybody has the same size house.

Likewise, it is discrimination against me that I am forced to drive a Chevrolet and a lot of other people are driving Cadillacs.

Now, when is Chief Justice Warren and the Supreme Court Justices going to furnish me with my Cadillac so that I will not have a feeling of inferiority when all these Cadillacs pass me by?

Now, here is where we are headed and the Saturday Evening Post sized it up thusly:

"The rise of the sociology textbook on the horizon suggests the possible beginning of judicial toleration for the notion that the reserved rights of individuals as guaranteed in the Bill of Rights could be subordinated ments. It would do this through abolition of white party primaries, county unit voting system and the checks and balances provided by our system of constitutional government. It would overthrow segregation in all phases of Southern life, socialize industry and divide up the property of the people.

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare, as Mr. McGill admits, was dominated by those who advocated and fought for such a program.

SRC's Policy Statement

The Southern Regional Council has picked up the ball and is now working to destroy us. It seeks the defeat of officials like Byrnes and Talmadge and every conservative senator and congressman in the South. It seeks the election in their stead of left-wingers "who will go along" with their communistic programs. In other words, it is an effort to destroy us from within.

The SRC's avowed statement of policy calls for the destruction of the South as we have known it. It says:

"The South of the future, toward which our efforts are directed, is a South freed of stultifying inheritance from the past. It is a South where . . . segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and will no longer be imposed . . . We have no illusion that it can be realized in the South quickly or easily or perfectly. Nor do we imagine that the Southern Regional Council can play more than a modest but creditable part towards its achievement. Yet it is the ideal toward which we strive and, short of which, we have a duty to remain dissatisfied, for it is nothing else than the American ideal."

Plant News Stories

The main purpose of the Southern Regional Council during the period immediately preceding the Supreme Court decision was to convince the Court through statements from sympathetic agencies, planted news stories and other activity that the people of the South would bow down and accept a decision abolishing segregation.

During the years since its establishment, the Southern Regional Council has centered its fire on white primaries, poll taxes, election laws and other projects designed to pave the way for the election outlawing segregation itself.

Principal financial support for SRC during its early years prior to 1948 came from the Rosenwald Fund Foundation. This Fund was dedicated to "the creation of social equality" among the races in the South, according to Dr. Lessing T. Rosenwald of Philadelphia, chairman of its Board of Trustees. It provided SRC with an annual grant of $25,000 for its operations.

With the demise of the Rosenwald Fund a hasty mobilization of communist fronters sought other means to continue financing SRC's anti-segregation activities.

Tennessee CIO Director

Among those attending these fund-raising drive meetings was Paul Christopher, Tennessee CIO director. From his presence and the continuing interest of CIO-PAC officials in posts of key responsibility in SRC, it is evident that the group has received financial support as well as active cooperation from the powerful labor political organization.

Records of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities show that Paul R. Christopher was a vice president for 1947-48 for the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and was also listed as a member of that organization's National Committee. Other documentary evidence shows that Christopher's name appeared in a list of individuals who signed the January 1943 Message of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties.

The National Federation has been cited as an organization "by which communists attempted to create sympathizers and supporters of their programs and as subversives and communists." A Special Committee on Un-American Activities cited it as "one of the most viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party."

Another notorious communist fronter who has been particularly active in fund-raising for the SRC, a collaborator in its administration, is Dr. Channing H. Tobias, formerly of Augusta and Atlanta and now president of the Phelps-Stokes Fund in New York City.

Communist Fronts

A digest of Dr. Tobias' record of affiliations with communist fronts, as contained in records of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, takes up nearly four single-spaced typewritten pages.

He was a member of the Executive Board and held other high functionary positions in SCHW.

The House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities in a report to a Committee of the U. S. Senate, furnished documentary evidence showing Tobias to be linked with nine organizations cited as communist fronts by the Committee.

The Southern Regional Council also has worked closely with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in all of its activities. A. T. Walden, Atlanta negro attorney and counsel for the NAACP in Georgia, has been notably active in helping raise funds for SRC's anti-segregation activities.

Civil Rights Group

While it is not known whether Walden was a member of SCHW, the Daily Worker of Oct. 7, 1952, (page 3) reported that he would lead a workshop discussion on civil rights at a meeting in New York City of the National Lawyers' Guild. The Guild has been cited by the House Committee on Un-American Activities as a communist front and the foremost legal bulwark of the Communist Party in the United States.

This same Walden also signed a letter addressed to the U. S. House of Representatives opposing the Mundt Anti-Communist Bill as shown on the mimeographed letter which includes a list of individuals who signed the same dated May 12, 1948.

Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University and the first negro ever to be elected to Atlanta's City Board of Education, has been extremely active in SRC's operations since it was founded by him and others in 1944. He is generally regarded as a protege of Atlanta Constitution Editor Ralph McGill.

Clement ran for his Education Board post against a white man and with every support possible in the news columns of the Atlanta papers and the Hartsfield-Walden organization won the election. He did this even in spite of the fact that records of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and documentary evidence possessed by it show that he has been active in at least 12 communist-front groups and movements.

Source of Ford's Money

No one knows exactly how many active, paying members SRC has on its rolls. It claims "around 3,000 or 4,000." However, some observers are doubtful whether its real membership extends much further than its so-called "Board of Directors" and "project personnel" who will spend the Ford Foundation's grant.

It would be interesting indeed to see a list of members of the Southern Regional Council compared with a membership list of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Certainly, if the officers of both groups are practically identical, one could conclude with assurance that the same is true for the membership.

Many Southern taxpayers have raised the point that SRC's pro-communist, anti-segregation activities are financed by money good law-abiding Americans pay in federal taxes. They say this because donations to SRC are exempt from taxation due to its classification as a "charitable organization."

This is also true in regard to the grant from the Ford Foundation. Profits made by the Ford Motor Company on the sale of Ford automobiles and tractors go tax free to the Ford Foundation as dividends on common, non-voting stock held by the Foundation.

So, in reality, taxpayers of the United States and purchasers of Ford products are financing this activity to destroy Southern institutions.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

to policies which a majority might think 'socially' necessary. Such doctrine would break down an important roadblock to the socialization of the United States, which nobody, including the nine justices of the Supreme Court, wants."

Now, Chief Justice Warren and the dumbbells who sit on the Supreme Court bench with him have catapulted us further towards socialism in this one decision than all of the other forces and circumstances put together during the last one hundred years.

Something must be done to curb the unbridled license and ruthlessness of the Supreme Court and in this connection even the Saturday Evening Post says:

"Somebody is certain to remind the justices that even social progress will be better safeguarded if Congress reads the sociology textbooks, since it is Congress which passes the laws."

So, it looks to me as if I will continue to have my feeling of inferiority until the Supreme Court gives me the nicest house in town and my Cadillac.

Suppose you write your Senator and Congressman and demand yours now. Don't wait until you are dead with old age. Get it while you can enjoy it.

Most of these writers on sociology are socialists anyhow and what are we going to do when the socialists say that it is necessary that we have socialism and everybody have the same things?

That is where the decision leads to and it creates a serious situation in this country.

It is time that the Saturday Evening Post and a lot of other dumbbells wake up and realize that all of this clap-trap is leading us into socialism at a mile a minute.

And don't forget that communism is the Russian style of socialism. Socialism means government ownership and operation with everybody working for the government. Communism simply means that you have socialism with a one-party system and a little handful of dictators running the party.

When everybody works for the government and the government can assign you to a job and a place to live, then who is going to vote against the government? It can't be done.

That, my friends, is the Russian style of socialism. Communism is the inevitable result of socialism.

A lot of people in Georgia have been calling people like me demagogues, race haters, race baiters and everything else. It is about time that you realized we have been telling you the truth.

State's Greatest Natural Resource Is Forest – Herman

ATLANTA, — What is Georgia's greatest natural resource? It's her timber, in the opinion of Gov. Herman Talmadge, himself a farmer, who offers as proof of its value the fact that last year 35 new forest industries representing a combined investment of more than $140.8-million were established in the state.

Addressing an estimated 5,000 persons attending the recent 60th Anniversary celebration of the City of Kingsland, the farmer-governor said Georgia's economic future—particularly that of South and Coastal Georgia—depends "in large measure upon a coordinated program of development and conservation of our timber resources." He cited evidence of the "remarkable strides toward that end" made during his administration. Said he:

"The greatest natural resource we possess in Georgia is our forests. Two out of every three of our acres are devoted to timber in some form. And because of the combined advantages of a mild climate and abundant rainfall, we can produce pulpwood in about twelve years and saw logs in 20 to 25 years.

"Proof of the economic potential of this resource is the fact that last year 35 new forest industries representing a combined capital investment of $140,863,500 were established in Georgia. These new industries include three pulp mills valued at almost $100-million; eleven lumber firms and factories producing oak flooring, blinds and awnings, handles, doors, windows and sashes and boxes. They will add new millions to Georgia's payroll every year."

Declaring that unfortunately Georgia neglected its timber resources to a great degree until recent years, Talmadge said:

"As late as 1948, we had fire protection in only 32 of our 159 counties. We were exercising few, if any, sound forestry practices and were realizing about $300-million annually from timber, pulpwood and naval stores.

"Happily our legislature realized that our greatest resource was being neglected and in a period of four years we have advanced from 46th to first among the states in the number of privately-owned timber under fire protection. Now we are havesting some $600-million worth of timber products each year.

"As laudable as this is, think what we could be doing had we initiated our conservation practices 25 or 30 years ago. Instead of realizing $600-million a year from our forest resources, we would be getting about $1.5-billion this year. Thus it is easy to see that our timber resources, properly utilized, are capable of making us one of the wealthiest states in the Union."

As an excellent example of the development of Georgia's timber industry, the Governor cited the St. Mary's Kraft Corp. plant located in Camden County near Kingsland. It has, he said, contributed immeasurably to the growth and prosperity of Coastal Georgia, employing 850 workers with an annual payroll of some $4-million.

Talmadge Reviews State's Progress; Warns Of Threats

ATLANTA, — In two unrelated speeches, delivered on successive days within a few miles of each other, Gov. Herman Talmadge made these pertinent observations:

1. "There is no more convincing proof of the tremendous progress Georgia has made since 1948 than the achievements of your state government in promoting the education, health and welfare of all the people. I am proud that I can report to you that during my term of office the State of Georgia has spent almost three-quarters of a billion dollars on permanent and lasting improvements."

2. "At the present time Georgia and other Southern states face the most critical situation in their history as far as education is concerned. Grave threats loom ahead because of the recent decision of the U. S. Supreme Court which seeks to abolish segregation in our schools. This is a question which affects the future of every citizen and I hope that its menacing import will be set forth at all public political meetings we are to hold in the near future."

You can readily deduce from these remarks that Gov. Talmadge is (1) very proud—and justly so—of the great strides that have been made on virtually all fronts in Georgia in recent years and (2) he is extremely disturbed over these outside threats and how the next administration will face up to them.

THE AUGUSTA COURIER: AN ANALYSIS

(Issue of May 3, 1954, the Augusta Courier, published by Roy V. Harris.)

1. "SRC, of Atlanta, had been granted one quarter of a million dollars by the Ford Foundation."

The grant referred to was not made by the Ford Foundation, but by the Fund for the Republic.

2. "[Ralph] McGill was recently appointed a member of the executive committee of the Ford Foundation."

McGill has never been so appointed. He is a member of the Board of the Fund for the Advancement of Education.

3. "This SRC picked up one of the platforms of the Communist Party in America and that was the destruction of the pattern of segregation in the South."

Anybody who is even slightly familiar with the Communist party platform knows this is false. The official Communist doctrine as formulated decades ago calls for the establishment of an independent Negro republic encompassing the so-called black belt of the Southern U.S. This objective, which has never been repudiated by the Communist Party, is about as far as you can get from the program of the SRC. The SRC, like its predecessor the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, has always worked soberly and quietly; the Communists have carried on noisy campaigns designed to exploit injustices to Negroes for their own purposes. The SRC was established during World War II (1943 and 1944) at a time when the Communists professed no concern for the status of the Negro in the South, since they wanted to see all national energies devoted to assisting Soviet Russia by opening a second front against Germany. Statements by the Soviet press as well as analyses by American experts on international affairs make it clear that the Communists are exploiting discrimination and segregation in this country among colored people elsewhere in the world. It is the pro-segregation extremists in the South who aid their purpose, not responsible Southerners like those in SRC who seek harmonious progress.

4. "The object and purpose of the SRC is to divide the people of the South and to create chaos, confusion and violence."

SRC's purpose demonstrably is, and always has been, to unite the people of the South and to avoid chaos, confusion and violence. This is borne out by everything the Council has ever said or done, and Harris, of course, produces no evidence to the contrary.

(Issue of June 28, 1954)

1. "SRC is the successor of the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a Communist-front by the House Committee investigating un-American activities."

This constantly repeated falsehood by Harris is refuted by a whole army of facts. SRC is the official successor to the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, which was founded in 1919. SRC was organized in 1943 and chartered in 1944, at a time when the SCHW had been in existence since 1938 and was still going strong; they were generally regarded as rival organizations. Most of the principal founders of SRC had never had any connection with SCHW. The approach and program of SRC is markedly different from that of the old SCHW. The SCHW has a clear and acknowledged successor in the Southern Conference Educational Fund. Attempts to label SRC as a second, unacknowledged successor are obviously absurd. Evidence on this point in SRC's files include official records of its organization and letters from such founders as Msgr. T. J. McNamara, Goodrich C. White, J. McDowell Richards and Howard W. Odum.

2. "Two top members of the SRC's Board of Directors, who are also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as Communists in testimony before Congressional Committees by former associates in the party."

This frequently repeated charge by Harris is amplified elsewhere as a reference to Aubrey Williams and Clark Foreman. It is false on two counts. First, neither of these men was a member of the SRC Board at the time they were accused before Congressional Committees. The accusations against them were made by Louis Budenz and Paul Courch in 1953. Clark Foreman, who moved out of the South, was dropped from the SRC Board in 1949, and Aubrey Williams resigned, also in 1949 -- ironically because he did not feel that SRC went far enough in opposition to segregation. Secondly, neither Foreman nor Williams could conceivably be described as "top members" of SRC's Board, even during their terms of membership. Neither held any office or served at any time on the Executive Committee, and neither at any time played any significant part in formulating SRC's policy. Since the charge of Communist affiliation was made against these two men long after they ceased to serve on SRC's Board, it is not the business of this organization either to defend or denounce them. But it should be noted that both Williams and Foreman, under oath before congressional committees, branded their accusers as liars, and no charge of perjury was brought against either Williams or Foreman. Of course, Harris, with his usual lack of regard for accuracy and the reputations of others, makes no mention of these facts.

3. "At least 38 officers and members of the executive staff or directors of the SRC's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as Communist fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee investigating un-American activities."

(a) A culling of names from this issue turns up the following as persons referred to in this charge:

George S. Mitchell*	Ira Reid	Carter Wesley*
Howard Odum	Benjamin Mays*	Gordon Hancock*
Charles Johnson*	William Cole	J. M. Ellison
Rufus Clement*	Donald Comer	Florence Sytz*
Marion A. Wright*	David Jones	W. W. Alexander
A. W. Dent	Aubrey Williams	Harry Stanley Brav
P. B. Young, Sr.	Clark Foreman	R. B. Atwood*
Guy Johnson*	Bishop E. A. Penick*	Grace Hamilton*
F. D. Patterson	Glen Rainey	Luther Jackson
Paul Christopher*	Mrs. M. E. Tilly*	D. V. Jemison
Josephine Wilkins*	Virginius Dabney	Z. A. Looby*
Louis Burnham	F. B. Washington	G. D. Rogers
Charlotte Hawkins Brown	Bishop R.R. Wright, Jr.	Jacob Reddix

This totals 39, unaccountably. Out of 130 current and past board members of SRC, at the time of Roy Harris' writing, he has singled out 37 plus Dr. Mitchell and Mrs. Tilly of the staff. Of the 37, 21 were not even on the Board at the time of Harris' charges. This failure to distinguish between present and past Board members is part of Harris' deception in trying to inflate his fraudulent charges. (Moreover, one of the names, Harry Stanley Brav, refers to no one who has served on SRC's Board; Rabbi Stanley R. Brav is a former member, but could not conceivably be accused of un-Americanism.) Most of the persons named by Harris are outstanding Southerners whose position is public life would alone testify to their good character.

Harris' method has been to brand as "facts" material taken from the raw files of the House un-American Activities Committee. The Committee itself points out that it does not vouch for the accuracy or the significance of this raw material. The Committee calls it "unevaluated data." No attempt is made to ascertain whether this casually gathered material is accurate or inaccurate, whether an individual was associated with an organization before or after it was accused of pro-Communist leanings, what the nature and circumstances of the alleged association were. Obviously, loosely gathered and loosely handled material of this kind can be used to "prove" almost anything about anybody. (It has been so used, for example, against such noted Americans as Dwight D. Eisenhower, General George C. Marshall, and many others.) One of the past SRC Board members attacked by Harris was, at the time of writing, an avowed Dixiecrat!

4. "Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of the SRC was listed as a top official of the SCHW in the report citing it as a communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts according to records and reports of congressional committees."

Dr. Mitchell was a "top official" of the SCHW only in the sense that he was a member of its Board, from which he resigned in 1947. To suggest, as Harris does, that this makes Dr. Mitchell a Communist sympathizer or that it proves an organic link between SCHW and SRC is ridiculous. As Ralph McGill and others have pointed out, SCHW attracted many distinguished and loyal persons to its membership. Only in the last stage of its existence did the SCHW come to be recognized as having an active pro-Communist minority within its membership, and by that time non-Communist liberals of the sort that compose SRC had almost entirely left the SCHW. Distaste for the makeup and methods of the SCHW was one of the reasons why some of these persons were attracted to the responsible program of the SRC at SRC's beginning. The other associations alleged against Dr. Mitchell in general here, and in detail elsewhere, are of the same order of innuendo and smear as those discussed above and have been answered in detail by Dr. Mitchell. Certainly no one who has known Dr. Mitchell throughout his career of public service would give any credence to charges of this kind. The high esteem in which he is held is testified to by his selection for the annual award of the Catholic Committee of the South in 1953.

5. "The SRC, though claiming to be dedicated to "promote national harmony and reduce tensions' to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort has been solely a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist party line as laid down for the South."

Harris produces not a shred of evidence to support the charge made here. The Council, from its beginning has been scrupulously non-political, and nowhere in its literature of its activities can the slightest evidence to the contrary be found. If there were any such evidence, Harris and his associates would long since have been successful in getting SRC's tax exemption revoked. Similarly with the charge about the Communist Party line. Notoriously the Communist line, in race relations as in everything else, has zigzagged all over the map. SRC's policy has been constantly to work for understanding and cooperation.

6. Harris summarizes George Mitchell's education.

A small point, but typical, that he leaves out Mitchell's several years of study at the University of Richmond.

7. "Dr. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Mr. Ralph McGill, Editor of the Atlanta Constitution, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Dr. Howard W. Odum, applied for the SRC charter to Fulton County Superior Court January 6, 1944."

On the numerous occasions when Harris makes this statement, it is clear that his source is the official records of Fulton County. Yet he falsely includes Dr. Mitchell as an incorporator, although Dr. Mitchell was not even in Georgia or connected with SRC at the time of its incorporation. Similarly he omits the name of one of the actual incorporators who is listed in the official records and in everything that has ever been printed or said about SRC's incorporation. That person is Bishop Arthur J. Moore of the Methodist Church. This repeated falsification by Harris is indicative of his manipulation of the facts for purposes of petty misrepresentation.

8. "We are informed by a reliable source, who has knowledge of the inner workings of the SRC, that a group of project personnel has been named to spend the $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation. This list includes the names of Morris B. Abram. . . and Philip G. Hammer. . . ."

This is about as much misinformation as can be packed into a few lines. It has already been pointed out that the grant to SRC was not made by the Ford Foundation but by the Fund for the Republic. No special group of project personnel "to spend the grant" ever existed.

9. Harris quotes SRC staff member Fleming, and comments that Fleming's statement "reinforces what we have said all along -- that this Ford Foundation money will be used to force an end of segregation upon us and for political action to elect candidates in office who are in sympathy with the Council's pro-communist, anti-southern aims and ideals."

The statement by Fleming, as quoted by Harris himself, is as follows: "The Supreme Court decision"was wholesome and healthy since it gives responsible Southern leadership a chance to work this thing out in a climate that can be relatively free of dissension and sispute as to what is the law of the land."

It is hard for a sane human being to understand how Mr. Harris can draw the inferences that he does from this statement. Another example of Mr. Harris' peculiar view of reality.

10. "The House Committee investigating un-American activities in a report to a Committee of the U. S. Senate, furnished documentary evidence showing [Dr. Channing] Tobias to be linked with nine organizations cited as communist fronts by the Committee."

Although Dr. Tobias has never been officially connected with SRC in any way, Harris first manufactures a spurious connection and than makes the above statement about Tobias. As one more measure of Harris' abuse of of the truth, it is noteworthy that he does not point out the sequel to the charges against Tobias. Following its hearing, the Committee unanimously exonerated Dr. Tobias of all charges of left-wing sympathy, and Dr. Tobias' appointment by the President to a U.S. Commission was speedily approved.

Ford Foundation Gives Fund To Fight Segregation And Investigate Congress

Preservation Of Segregation In Schools Is Promised By Each Candidate In Race For Governor Of Georgia

Tom Linder Puts Those Advocating Mixing Of Races In Lunatic Fringe

All the candidates for Governor have now declared in no uncertain terms that they will preserve segregation in the public school system regardless.

Their statements range all the way from saying that they will cut off all the money and close the schools in any county that mixes the races to saying that it will be maintained, come "hell or high water", and one candidate has said that he will go to jail and run the state for four years from a cell rather than see the races mixed in the school system in Georgia.

On Friday, June 25, 1954 the last three candidates appeared before Governor Talmadge's Commission on Education in Atlanta. The other candidates had appeared at an earlier date.

Ben Garland was the first. He told the commission that he favored setting up an elaborate system of selecting students and having separate schools for the boys and girls and separate for the races.

Charlie Gowen still advocated his plan to let the county school superintendents designate the school which a child shall attend.

Marvin Griffin made known his plan. He plans to require outsiders to live in the state for a whole year before they can send their children to school and to enlarge the members of the board of education of each county from five to one hundred.

Fred Hand advocated keeping the law as it is and controlling the money so as to prevent the mixing of the races in any county.

Barfield advocated an amendment to the constitution to abolish the Supreme Court of the United States.

Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder presented a novel and a most unusual plan. The basis of his plan was to make every man, woman and child stand up and be counted and let it be known where they stand. He proposed to have a census made all over the state of all the children and parents and let them say whether they prefer to attend an all white school, all colored school or mixed school and that those who prefer a mixed school shall have their names published and allow everybody to know who they are.

Then he proposes to form what he calls a pool of available school children. Those who desire to attend white schools will be permitted to attend white schools and those who desire to attend colored schools will be permitted to attend colored schools.

Then the remnants, as Tom calls those who desire mixed schools, would be gathered together and he would employ a lot of psychiatrists and try to find out what's wrong with them.

Tom declared that his plan was entirely different from that advocated by the new-

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

I have been up to Atlanta for another meeting of Governor Talmadge's Commission on Education.

This commission was set up by the legislature and charged with the duty of recommending to the next governor and the next legislature a plan for maintaining segregation in the public schools.

Now, the legislature has by the act creating this commission fixed the state policy. They have said that we will have segregation and charged us with the responsibility of working out a plan to guarantee the maintenance of segregation.

The Governor of Georgia has stated that so long as he is governor we will have segregated schools and that he will use his authority to cut off the money from any institution or any county where they have mixed schools.

The Constitution of the State makes it illegal to spend money on mixed schools.

The legislature has in another respect fixed the policy. The legislature has provided that in the event any institution mixes the races that the funds are cut off immediately. The legislature has already provided that if any county mixes the races in its schools that the money will be cut off from that county immediately.

Now that is the policy of the present governor and the present legislature. That is the policy written into the constitution of Georgia and into the basic law of Georgia.

This policy will continue to be the policy of Georgia for the next four years. I make this statement because every candidate for governor has been before the commission and has guaranteed that he will maintain segregation during the next four years. As a matter of fact the candidates are in a race among themselves to see which one of them can express himself in the strongest language. Some of them have even stated that they will go to jail and operate the state government from a jail cell before they will sign a check to pay a single teacher or to operate a single school where the races are mixed.

So, every candidate for governor is taking the same position and so far as the next governor is concerned he will be standing in the same position where Herman Talmadge stands today regardless of who's elected.

Now what about the legislature?

We have tried to make a survey of the candidates for the legislature and so far as we are able to determine nearly every candidate for the legislature is running on the same kind of a platform. They are guaranteeing to keep segregation.

Now there may be two or three or half a dozen exceptions from some of the city counties. We have some strange people living in our cities this day and time.

It is my prediction that the next legislature will be just as solid as the last and that there will be only a few members who will believe in mixing the races. This lunatic fringe, as Tom Linder calls them, will be so small in number until they will have little effect in the legislature.

So, it seems to me that it is very definite that the policy of the state for the next four years will not change and that it will remain the same.

Now if the policy stays as it is, what will happen if negroes enter some white school in some particular county?

Well, here's what will happen. The money will be cut off immediately and both the white and negro schools will be forced to close. When this happens, the white people are going to become so aroused until they

Tax-Exempt Millions Financing Fight Made Against White People In Georgia By SRC

Financing of pro-communist activities and subsidization of known communists and persons with records of lengthy association with red fronts have been an important factor in bringing about the present Congressional investigation of tax-exempt foundations.

Late last year the House of Representatives passed a resolution providing for the investigation of charitable foundations. Authored by Rep. Carroll Reese, of Tennessee, the resolution was passed on a roll call vote of 209-163.

The committee will conduct a complete investigation and study of the activities of tax-exempt foundations "to determine whether such foundations . . . are using their resources for un-American and subversive activities; for political purposes; propaganda, or attempts to influence legislation."

Time for submission of a final report by the committee is fixed for January 3, 1955. In the meantime, a full-scale investigation and study of various foundations will take place.

$15 million Trust Fund

During the course of debate on the Reese resolution, many references to activities of the Ford Foundation were brought to light.

This is a trust which set up a $15 million fund to be used to "investigate" the investigating powers of the Congress, from what Mr. Reese termed, "a critical point of view."

Recently, this same Ford Foundation made a grant to the Southern Regional Council in Georgia to work for overturn of separate classrooms in the State for the white and colored races.

Detailed Exposure

Last week THE AUGUSTA COURIER carried a detailed expose which established these facts about the Southern Regional Council:

1. It is the successor, in fact, to the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the SCHW.

2. Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as communists in testimony before Congressional committees by former associates in the party.

3. At least 38 officers, members of the executive staff or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of

SERIOUS CHARGES WHICH DEMAND A SERIOUS REPLY

(From THE STATESMAN, Thursday, July 1, 1954)

The AUGUSTA COURIER has raised serious charges against the Ford Foundation-financed Southern Regional Council. They are charges of such nature they demand a full and complete explanation by that bi-racial group which is working to destroy separate schools in Georgia and the South.

Replying to the COURIER's charges, an unnamed "spokesman" who obviously did not want his name revealed in connection with the organization, did not deny the charges but instead resorted to flimsy hedging. His statement answered nothing and attempted through raising a non-existent legal point to call attention away from the charges.

The point raised was that if officers of the Southern Regional Council were members of Communist-fronts why they have not been indicted under the Georgia Subversive and Sedition Act. Of course, no ground exists under the statute for such an indictment. As a matter of fact some of the leaders of this same Regional Council are those who sought behind the scenes to "water down" this law when it was passed by the Georgia General Assembly.

The Augusta newspaper, in a lengthy article documented by copious citations from the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities and the Attorney General of the United States reported results of an investigation by, it into the membership, activities and affairs of the Southern Regional Council.

The newspaper charged as follows:

"It is the successor, in fact, to the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a Communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the SCHW.

"Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as Communists in testimony before congressional committees by former associates in the party.

"3. At least 38 officers, members of the executive staff or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as Communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in the report citing it as a Communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to 'promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions' to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been solely a political action group."

We have known all along that there is nothing Southern, nor Regional about the Southern Regional Council, its membership or its aims. It is as alien to the way of life embraced by the South as independence is to the satellite nations enslaved by Soviet Russia.

The Southern Regional Council is an inter-racial organization in the truest sense of the word. It is as dedicated to destroying segregation in the South as the Communist Party itself.

The AUGUSTA COURIER charges that its Board of Directors is composed of men and women with records of affinity for Communist-front groups and causes, according to records and reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities and citations by the Attorney General of the United States.

The Council, under the direction of Dr. George S. Mitchell, espouses ideologies completely foreign to the South and is dedicated to the overthrow of every tradition and institution held dear by the region.

The Council's statement of policy dedicates it to a South "free of the stultifying inheritance of the past . . . where segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit and will no longer be imposed."

Had the Ford Foundation bothered to check the background of this organization and its members with either the Un-American Activities Committee or the Federal Bureau of Investigation, it could have learned these things for the price of two three-cent postage stamps. Therefore, the only conclusion that can be drawn is that those in the Ford Foundation responsible for this grant were in sympathy with the avowed purposes of the Southern Regional Council and made no attempt to investigate it.

The man responsible for the grant was Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, former Chancellor of the University of Chicago. It is he who has been making speeches in his capacity as Associate Director of the Ford Foundation advocating an end to racial segregation and proposing complete integration of the races. It is he whose record, according to the records and reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities and material appearing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, shows a particularly consistent attraction to Communist-front causes.

That this grant has met with revulsion among true Southerners is evidenced by the action of the Association County Commissioners of Georgia in condemning it at its annual convention earlier this year.

We cannot believe that this action has the understanding approval of the heirs of the late Henry Ford, that great automobile genius who made his fortune under the system the Ford Foundation now seems bent on destroying. We cannot believe that those in control of the Ford Motor Company now will let it stand.

Therefore, for all Southerners, we call on the Ford Motor Company and the Ford Foundation to do two things:

1. Revoke this grant and thus serve notice that it will have no truck with schemes to tear down traditions and constitutional government in any section of our great nation.

2. Discharge this man Hutchins and thus serve notice that the Ford fortune as dispensed by the Ford Foundation will be used for philanthropy and not political or sociological crusades.

Only in so doing can the Ford Motor Company and the Ford Foundation regain the confidence of their friends in the South.

Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in the report citing it as a communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to "promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions" to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been solely a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist Party line as laid down for the South.

6. The incorporators of the Southern Regional Council are Ralph McGill, Editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Dr. George S. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Negro, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk (Negro) University; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina. The charter of incorporation was applied for in Fulton County Superior Court, January 6, 1944, and was granted for a period of 35 years. Attorneys for the applicants were the Atlanta law firm of Haas, Lyons and Hurt, of which Leonard Haas is senior member.

Subsidization of the Southern Regional Council which is a haven for known communists and red fronters follows the pattern set by the Ford Foundation throughout the rest of the nation.

House Resolution

In order that our readers may know about the Ford Foundation and Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, who until recently headed it up, we quote the following excerpts form remarks made by Mr. Reese, of Tennessee, in the debate on House Resolution 217:

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I do not say this lightly, but in my opinion, the subject embraced in House Resolution 217, now before us, is one of the very important matters pending in Washington.

No one seems to know the number of tax-exempt foundations, There are probably 300,000 foundations and organizations which have great tax exemptions.

These exemptions cover inheritances, income, and capital-gains taxes.

The majority of these organizations are honestly and efficiently conducted. In the past, they have made a magnificent contribution to our national life. In the past, the majority have justified these tax exemptions, even though the probable cost to the taxpayers runs into the billions.

Right of Congress

Certainly, the Congress has a right and a duty to inquire into the purposes and conduct of institutions to which the taxpayers have made such great sacrifices.

In any event, the Congress should concern itself with certain weaknesses and dangers which have arisen in a minority of these.

Some of these activities and some of these institutions support efforts to overthrow our Governmnt and to undermine our American way of life.

These activities urgently require investigation. Here lies the story of how comunism and socialism are financed in the United States. where they get their money. It is the story of who pays the bill.

The method by which this is done seems fantastic to reasonable men, for these Communists and Socialists seize control of fortunes left behind by Capitalists when they die, and turn these fortunes around to finance the destruction of Capitalism.

Tax-free Trust Funds

The Members of this House were amazed when they read just recently that the Ford Foundation, largest and newest of the tax-free trust funds, had just appropriated $15 million to be used to "investigate" the investigating powers of Congress, from the critical point of view.

No Congressman, who has gone through such experiences, could fail to be alarmed at the fact that $15 million from the fortune of the late Henry Ford, who probably hated Communism more than any other American of his day, was to be expended to attack the Congress for inquiring into the nature and extent of the Communist conspiracy, on grounds that Congress was "abridging civil liberties" of individuals by requiring them to answer whether or not they were Communists.

Subversive and Procommunist and Prosocialist propaganda activities of the Ford Foundation.

Documentary Evidence

To illustrate the dubious staff and the many subversive and propaganda activities of the Ford Foundation, I offer the following examples from the extensive documentary evidence which I have in my possession:

1. Dubious staff of Ford Foundation.

The record of Robert Maynard Hutchins:

The keyman in the Ford Foundation is Robert M. Hutchins, formerly chancellor of the University of Chicago and until recently associate director of the Foundation. Because of the furor created by his part in making the grant to the Southern Regional Council he has been "promoted" to be President of the Fund for the Republic, one of the Ford Foundation's subsidiaries.

Ran The Foundation

While serving as associate director of the Ford Foundation, Hutchins ostensibly was a subordinate but, in effect, ran the organization, made its policy and determined who would receive Ford grants. During the time Paul Hoffman was the Foundation's president, Hutchins' prominent position was made possible by the fact that Hoffman considers Hutchins the greatest living educator and literally worships him.

With the resignation of Hoffman, H. Rowan Gaither, a San Francisco attorney, became president of the Foundation. But Gaither was a mere figurehead and Hutchins still ran the Foundation. And since there has been no formal announcement of a successor to Hutchins, it can be assumed that he still does.

In his capacity as the policy-maker of the Ford Foundation, Hutchins possesses a completely unprecedented financial power over education, the humanities, and the social sciences. By giving or withholding grants, Hutchins is in position to insinuate his views into any aspect of American intellectual life. Therefore, it is essential to inquire about Hutchins' views and his record concerning the Communist menace.

Testifying in 1949 under oath before the Illinois Seditious Activities Investigation Commission inquiry into subversive activities at the University of Chicago, Hutchins admitted that he was a sponsor of the October 1948 meeting of the bureau on academic freedom of the National Council of Arts, Sciences, and Professions.

Methodist Federation

Regarding the Methodist Federation of Social Action, Hutchins has said:

Believe you are advancing the cause of true Americanism.

The first page of the publication of the Methodist Federation for Social Action, where this quotation appears, asserts that the federation rejects the profit motive and favors a classless society. Does Hutchins think that such an ideology constitutes true Americanism?

The University of Chicago, under Hutchins' administration, has distinguished itself as the only institution of higher learning in America which has been investigated five times for immoral or subversive activities. These investigations are: First, Iillinois State Senate inquiry, 1935; second. University of Chicago Alumni Committee, 1947-48; third, University of Chicago Board of Trustees, 1948; fourth, Iillinois Seditious Activities Investigation Commission, March-June 1949; fifth, investigation and subsequent report to the Illinois Legislature by State Representative G. William Horsley, Springfield, 1949. The first investigation was a whitewash; the second requested the resignation of Hutchins; the third held its deliberations in secret; and the fourth and fifth did not clear the university. Both the majority report of the Illinois Seditious Activities Commission and the independent report of Representative Horsley condemned the university's administration severely and asked the legislature to deny tax exemption.

Seditious Activities

At the hearings of the Seditious Activities Commission of the Illinois Legislature at the 1949 investigation of the University of Chicago, Hutchins, after being sworn in, testified as follows:

The subpoena which I have received summons me to testify concerning subversive activities at the University of Chicago. This is a leading question, and the answer is assumed in the question. I cannot testify concerning subversive activities at the University of Chicago because there are none.

At the same hearings, Hutchins was asked the following question and made the following response:

Question. The records which I shall present through other witnesses show, in summary, that some sixty-odd persons listed in the latest available directory of the University of Chicago, as professors or professors emeritus, have been affiliated with 135 Communist-front organizations in 465 separate affiliations. Is that not something for which the university might well be alarmed?

Student Commie Groups

In the course of the same investigation it was disclosed that there were Communist and pro-Communist student organizations on Hutchins' campus. The student Communist club was freely admitted by Chancellor Hutchins, who said "the club has not sought to subvert the government of this State."

In his testimony before the same investigation, Hutchins stated that—

It is not yet established that it is subversive to be a Communist.

It must be noted that this testimony was given more than a year after the start of the Berlin airlift.

Hutchins Questioned

At the same investigation Hutchins was asked the following question to which he made the following response:

Question. Do you consider that the Communist Party in the United States comes within the scope of a clear and present danger?

Answers. I don't think so.

Hutchins was also asked:

Are you aware that the Communist front organization is a part of the Communist movement, just as much as the party itself?

No.

Then he was asked:

You haven't attempted to make a study of the Communist Party?

No, I haven't—

Hutchins replied.

He was also asked:

Is there any doubt that the Communist Party is a conspiratiorial Fifth Column operated in the interest of a foreign state?

I am not instructed on this subject—

Hutchins answered.

Such was the attitude of Hutchins toward communism after the start of the airlift, and at a time when the United States was spending billions of dollars abroad to fight communism.

The Daily Worker

On June 25, 1951, the Daily Worker, on page 2 under the headline "Ford Foundation Head Joins Blast at High Cost OK for Smith Act," the following item appeared under a Chicago dateline of June 24:

Prof. Robert M. Hutchins, former Chancellor of the University of Chicago and now associate director of the Ford Foundation, joined with Osmond K. Fraenkel, noted New York attorney, opposing the Supreme Court decision upholding the conviction of the 11 convicted Communist Party leaders. Dr. Hutchins said that the majority decision indicates that we are at last up against a great crisis in this country. He spoke of the ruling as a complete reversal of earlier precedents set by the high court * * * Speaking here at an American Civil Liberties Union meeting in his honor, Dr. Hutchins declared that "it may now become more difficult for us to take some of the positions we have in the past." He referred to his stated willingness to hire Communists as University professors. Hutchins told the Illinois Legislature that he would even take back into the university faculty Oscar P. Lange, who, as I pointed out before, renounced his American Citizenship to become Moscow's Ambassador for Communist Poland to the United Nations. "We may even have to decide whether we must violate the law in order to remain in conformity with our convictions," he said.

Subversive Group

Hutchins wrote the introduction to a book entitled "Character Assassination," published in 1950, which was written by Jerome Davis, who has been in more than 40 Communist-front organizations. Hutchins also wrote the foreword to a book entitled "Political and Civil Rights in the United States." published in 1953, by Thomas I. Emerson and David Haber. Louis Budenz, testifying under oath, named as a member of the Communist Party, a charge which Emerson denied. But Emerson has been in a large number of Communist fronts and was head of the Communist-controlled National Lawyers Guild is a subversive organization, and it has been cited officially as such.

Hutchins, whose attitudes I have illustrated, is the key man in the Ford Foundation, which owns outright some 374,000 shares of stock of the 400,000 shares of stock in the Ford Motor Co., one of the biggest industrial giants in the whole world. The stockholdings, according to Henry Ford, II, amount to 90 percent of the outstanding stock of the Ford Motor Co. Recently the New York Times magazine pointed out that the Ford Foundation is the "virtual owner of the gigantic Ford Motor Co." According to Paul Hoffman, then president of the Ford Foundation, the Ford Foundation has made grants of $72 million in 2 years, 1951-52.

Grant of $15 million

So it may readily be seen that a grant of $15 million, to protect the civil liberties of Communists and to investigate the Congress of the United States, from the tax-exempt millions of the income from the stock of the late Henry Ford, a man of sterling character and unblemished reputation whose industrial genius helped build America, and whose faith in our institutions and our American way of life was never shaken, is really peanuts to the Ford Foundation which deals out grants with a lavish hand, both to the left and the right, mostly left. Here is the last of the great American industrial fortunes, amassed in a competitive free marketplace in the last 50 years, being used to undermine and subvert our institutions, $15 million being set aside to investigate the Congress of the United States. What a sad tribute to the man we all respected and loved, Henry Ford. He was a symbol of outstanding commonsense and public virtue. Never would he have approved such tactics by the Ford Foundation, to which he left his fortune estimated at over a half billion dollars in stock in the Ford Motor Co., the earnings of which go directly into the tax-exempt Ford Foundation.

In view of the attitude of Hutchins toward communism, it is not at all surprising that the Ford Foundation has made some highly dubious grants.

Hits at Talmadge, Byrnes

Robert M. Hutchins, Director of the Fund for the Republic of the Ford Fundation, in a recent speech in St. Louis, declared that segregation in the public schools "is on the way out and there is little Talmadge and Byrnes can do to prevent the breakdown.

Hutchins' intemperate and inflammatory statements give unassailable proof that the Ford Foundation has been turned into an agency to destroy segregation in Dixie.

He emphasized in his address that school segregation is "doomed on legal, economic and moral grounds, and pointed out that threats by Governors Byrnes of South Carolina and Talmadge of Georgia to shift public schools in those States to a private base would not come about.

"If they get away with it, they won't get away with it for long," Hutchins said. "If a state has not enough money to manage one good school system, how can they manage two?"

"Separate but equal then means equally bad," he added.

This is the same man who was instrumental in making the $240,000 grant to the Southern Regional Council which this newspaper has exposed as a haven for Communists and Communist-fronters.

This Ford money will be used to destroy segregation in the public schools of Georgia and throughout the South.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

will get busy. The good negroes in that county will also rise up and demand that the negroes stay in their schools and that the schools be reopened.

If this should happen in some county the weather is going to get so hot in that county until the little handful of negroes who forced that kind of an issue will either leave the community or they will decide to get back in their schools.

One man stated before the commission that if that kind of a thing should happen in his county there wouldn't be a negro left in the county in two weeks.

I know of a county where the white people have gotten together and agreed that if this kind of a thing ever happens in their county that they will not give a single job to a single negro. This means that the negroes will be forced to move out of that particular county.

Now, when this kind of a thing happens all over Georgia there is nothing the Supreme Court of the United States can do about it.

When this kind of a thing begins to happen over Georgia somebody is going to say to the Supreme Court like old Andrew Jackson did when John Marshall, the Chief Justice, called on old Andy to enforce the decision of the court in the case of the State of Georgia with the Cherokee nation.

Old Andy said that John Marshall wrote his decision, now let him enforce it and that decision of the Supreme Court has never yet been enforced.

Now, knowing this to be the policy of the state and after listening to every candidate for governor say that he guaranteed to continue segregation a little handful of women in Atlanta appeared before the commission with some strange doctrines and some strange ideas.

It is true that these women represented a very small segment of the women of the state. It is true that the organizations which they represented have very few members and their organizations are nothing but skeletons. But the fact that we have got such women as that in Georgia is certainly impossible to comprehend. How you can explain them is beyond me.

They take the position that it is our Christian duty to mix the white and negro children in the same schools and the same classes.

One of the women who spoke before the commission represented the Georgia League of Women Voters. We asked her how many negroes belonged to the League of Women Voters. She said none. We asked her how many had been solicited to join and she said none.

Then a woman representing a lot of church women in Georgia spoke. We asked her how many negro women belonged to that organization and there were none.

We asked her how many negroes belonged to any of the churches that she represented and she said none.

And one of the women speaking represented a large group of organizations including the B'nai B'rith, a Jewish organization. We asked how ly-elected Governor of South Carolina who suggested three types of schools. One white, one colored and one mixed and all of the children would be given an opportunity to select which they wanted to attend.

Tom did not advocate educating this group who were dissatisfied with their own race and wanted to mix the races. He said in his opinion this group constituted a lunatic fringe and according to him, they are sick and need treatment instead of education.

Linder, upon being pressed as to what he would do with his so-called lunatic fringe stated that he would leave that up to the legislature and so far as he was concerned it didn't matter what the legislature did with them.

Linder was followed by Thompson. Thompson advocated:

1. Amending the Federal Constitution to prohibit the Federal Government and the Supreme Court from interfering with the operation of the schools by the states.
2. Keeping the Constitution of Georgia as it is since the constitution provides that tax money cannot be spent for mixed schools.
3. Keeping the provision in the appropriations bill which forfeits all state money to any county or local system that mixes the races in the public schools.
4. Continuing the building program now being administered by Speaker Hand's State School Building Authority.

Thompson took the position that we already have the machinery necessary to keep segregation in Georgia and that all it takes to have segregation is to have a governor and a legislature with the courage to maintain segregation.

He also stated that he had no objection to the Governor's constitutional amendment and argued that the governor's amendment would not abolish the public school system and only make it possible to subsidize students. Thompson contended that under the present constitution, the legislature has this authority and called attention to the fact that the state is now subsidizing students under the present constitution.

We now have all the candidates guaranteeing we will have segregation for the next four years. Every candidate is trying to go a little further and be more emphatic than the other. Even Speaker Fred Hand on television the other night stated that he would not sign a check for a single dollar to operate mixed schools and if that means going to jail he would operate the state from a cell for a period of four years.

This situation leaves that group referred to by Tom Linder as the lunatic fringe without a candidate. If their views are to be represented it will be necessary for them to get them up a candidate before the entries close.

But as this is written the entries have not yet closed and there is no representative of the lunatic fringe in the race.

It is going to be an interesting summer and most people are going to agree with most everything the candidates are saying.

Most people would be willing to join Thompson in amending the Constitution to prohibit the Supreme Court and the Constitution from interfering with the operations of the schools if they could.

Most of the people in Georgia believe that along with Tom Linder that these people who are dissatisfied with associating with their own race and want to mix the races constitute a lunatic fringe.

Now we are ready for the fire works and it is safe to predict that the lunatic fringe will not have a candidate in the race when the entries close.

Georgia Can Keep Segregation In Schools, Thompson Says

Amendment Proposed To U. S. Constitution To Nullify Ruling Of Supreme Court

Former Governor M. E. Thompson, who is a candidate for Governor, has made known his views as to the methods to be employed to maintain segregation in Georgia.

His speech to the State Commission on Education follows:

"The conclusively and permanently effective remedy for the non-segregation decision of the U. S. Supreme Court is to affirmatively nullify the decision by amending the U. S. Constitution so as to leave to the States the right to operate their own schools without Federal interference or control. This can be done in two ways. If I am your Governor, I will recommend to the Legislature that it initiate such a proposal, and will urge the Governors and Legislatures of other states to take similar action. I suggest that this Commission also urge our Congressional Delegation to immediately introduce such a proposal in Congress.

Next Week The Augusta Courier will carry the speech made by Tom Linder to the State School Commission.

"Every state should gladly support an amendment to the Federal constitution which makes it crystal clear that the sovereign states rather than the Federal Government would have complete power to operate and regulate their own public school systems. That is true whether the state involved desires a segregated or non-segregated system of public education. Such an amendment would have an excellent chance of adoption because it merely would again confirm the proprosition that the states should have the right and power to regulate their own internal affairs. No one should register serious objection to this declaration of policy which is so well intrenched in our American concept of Government.

"Meanwhile, we can effectively continue to have separate public schools for the races in Georgia, if we have a Governor and a Legislature with the courage and will to maintain segregated schools.

"We already have the necessary machinery in my opinion.

"I believe it can be done by keeping the Constitution of Georgia as it is and keeping in the appropriations act the present provision which makes the appropriation to each County subject to their maintaining separate schools.

"It is my opinion that since the same Constitution which gives the legislature the right to levy taxes for educational purposes to the support of SEPARATE SCHOOLS FOR THE RACES, that we cannot legally levy taxes for the support of public schools in Georgia, UNLESS THEY ARE SEPARATE SCHOOLS. The provision in the appropriations act making the public schools appropriations contingent upon SEPARATE schools being maintained for the races, simply follows the Constitution of Georgia. There is no legal way for Georgia to levy taxes or appropriate money to support mixed or non-segregated public schools under our present constitution and laws.

"With the present provisions in our State Constitution and appropriations act, any Governor and Legislature can maintain segregation in our public schools if they have the will and courage to do so.

"If any attempt is made by any school official to use State money to mix the races together in our public schools while I am Governor, I will exercise my authority as budget director and instantly cut off the state money for that school and recommend the impeachment of that school official for violating the law of Georgia. Then, as a practical matter, when the State money is cut off, they will send their children back to their own separate schools in order to get their money restored.

"So it is that I believe that our present law is better than anything I have heard suggested. Any other plan which we may devise either directly or by indirection will, in my opinion, be declared to be unconstitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court, as that Court is now constituted.

"But, I believe it is conceded, even by that Court, that the U. S. Supreme Court cannot force us to operate public schools of any sort. The Supreme Court cannot force us to levy taxes to support mixed or non-segregated schools. The Supreme Court cannot force the Legislature to either levy taxes or appropriate money.

"One Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court has openly stated that this is the law during the argument in the Virginia case and no other Justice contraverted him.

"So, it seems to me that the only legal way we can keep our separate schools for the races is by controlling the money.

"It is my opinion that 99% of the white people and 99% of the Negroes in our State agree that separate schools are best for both races and will agree to maintain them. The negroes of several counties have already taken such action. So, these provisions now in the Constitution and now in the appropriations act are necessary only to prevent the 1% of the two races from attempting to cause trouble and strife.

"With respect to Governor Talmadge's proposed constitutional amendment: As I have heretofore stated, I can see no serious objection to this amendment, I do disagree with some of the implications that have been drawn from the proposal. It has been widely misunderstood as abolishing the public school system. It does no such thing. Here are the words verbatim, which it proposes to add to the Constitution: 'Grants for Education: Notwithstanding any other provision of this Constitution, the General Assembly may by law provide for grants of State, County or Municipal funds to citizens of the State for Educational purposes, in discharge of all obligations of the State to provide adequate education for its citizens.' This amendment simply proposes to permit the Legislature to subsidize the school children. The amendment is completely ineffective without action by the Legislature, and it only permits the Legislature to do the exact thing as stated.

"The Board of Regents is now subsidizing students and sending them out of the State. This is being done under our present Constitution without the proposed amendment. This is being done under an agreement which was inaugurated when I was Governor in order to maintain segregation in the University system. It was necessary for us to furnish equal facilities to the negroes, and consequently, we adopted this system of contributing to their education in other states where we could not furnish the instructions sought in this state at the negro colleges. This agreement has been kept in force by Governor Talmadge. So, I believe, under the present constitution that we already have the authority which this amendment proposes. The present constitution as quoted in Section 2-5501 of the Georgia Code says that the legislature shall have authority to levy state-wide taxes 'for educational purposes'. This broad provision of the constitution already gives the legislature the right to maintain and operate schools or to subsidize those who wish to attend schools, and we have already been doing so under the aforementioned agreement. Since we are already doing what Governor Talmadge's amendment proposes to let us do, I can see no harm in it. His amendment does not abolish the public school system. It is not necessary to abolish the public school system in order to keep separate schools for the races, in my opinion. My plan is to keep both the public school system and separate schools for the races, just as we are now doing. It is my opinion that this can be done either with or without Governor Talmadge's amendment. It can be done by controlling the money as I have outlined.

"Be it remembered that in order to maintain segregation, we must play fair with the negro people. This means that we must give them what we have been asking the U. S. Supreme Court to permit us to do, and that is to give them equal facilities. To give them equal facilities, we must continue our school building program, which I advocated, and which Governor Talmadge has underway, and see to it that we have buildings and equipment and funds for both races over this State on a basis of educational equality.

"I repeat that it is my opinion that all other plans I have heard proposed are simply subterfuges and stop-gap measures and will be stricken down as fast as they get to the Supreme Court of the United States. So, I am of the opinion that our present constitution and our present law as contained in the appropriations act is the best way and plan that we can use at the present.

"But, after the decree of the U. S. Supreme Court is handed down and we see exactly what it contains, if other measures are necessary, I stand ready, willing and anxious to adopt them and to do whatever else is necessary to keep separate schools for the negroes and the white people. If I am your Governor they will be kept separate, whatever it takes. If elected Governor I hope this present Commission, under its present Chairman, and with its other members as now Constituted, will agree to continue to serve the state in advising the Governor and the General Assembly to this important end."

many negroes belonged to the B'nai B'rith and she told that there are none.

We could have asked how many Gentiles belonged to B'nai B'rith and the answer would have been the same. There are none.

So, here we have these organizations of fine women representing church groups and other kind of groups who themselves are practicing segregation of the races in their churches and organizations telling us that it is our Christian duty to mix the little children of the two races together in the school rooms of this state.

Just before the meeting adjourned, I couldn't resist the temptation to rise in the presence of all these people and tell them that if it was our Christian duty to mix the little children in the schoolrooms and destroy segregation in the schools, that they were setting a mighty poor Christian example for us.

This they could not answer. This they did not undertake to answer.

Now, I would like to call your attention to the fact that there is an organized and a concerted movement throughout most of the religious denominations in the South to preach the doctrine that it is the Christian duty of the members of these churches to destroy the pattern of segregation in Georgia.

It is through the churches we are going to find the biggest drive made to destroy segregation.

Now these same churches have been practicing segregation for a long time. They have not admitted negroes to membership in their churches and allowed them to sit along beside them in the pews.

Now, if it is un-Christian to segregate them, we have had a lot of good church people in Georgia throughout the last hundred years who have gone to hell.

So, it looks to me like this group was properly named by Tom Linder when he called them the lunatic fringe.

Now here are these women and these men with a hypocritical self-righteousness confessing the sins of their fathers who have now gone to their reward and saying that all the long line of preachers who preached in the churches of Georgia and all this long line of deacons, stewards and elders and good people who have supported and maintained the churches all these years were in fact un-Christian and not worthy of the name, Christian.

Now, I know that the Supreme Court of the United States has with the stroke of a pen changed all of the law of the land and said that segregation is wrong after these who have gone before them for over a hundred years have said that it was legal.

But I haven't yet seen any authority who has changed the principles of the Christian religion over night as the Supreme Court changed the law of the land.

Segregation has been going on for the last two thousand years. It has been practiced by God's chosen people. It has been practiced by all of the races and during two thousand years the followers of the lowly Nazarene have not construed Christianity to mean that they should mix and mingle the black and white races.

Now who has changed the Christian religion?

How is it that all of these noble people who have gone before us have suddenly been declared to be devils instead of Christians and by this self-righteous, hypocritical, lunatic fringe been consigned to hell as their reward?

Some wit has explained the situation by saying that the church leaders have not been following the principles of Christianity in the past and now they, like Saul of Tarsus, have been suddenly struck down by the Supreme Court decision and converted to Christianity.

Now, there is something wrong when you get a handful of people who say that everybody who has lived before this was wrong and they are suddenly right.

There is something to old Tom Linder's proposition when he says that these people who believe like this ought to be separated and given some kind of treatment.

Tom says they are sick and instead of being given a dose of education, they ought to be treated for the sickness with which they suffer.

Activity Reported All Over Georgia

ATLANTA,—You don't catch Georgia's Parade of Progress marking time; it just keeps on moving forward all over the state, through little towns and big cities alike. That's the latest word from Secretary Clark Gaines, of the Georgia Department of Commerce.

In reporting this continued progress, the secretary pointed to Georgia communities which recently have disclosed industrial expansions of one kind or another or other activities tending to improve the state's economy through progressiveness at the local level. Latest communities cited were these:

Alma, Americus, Atlanta, Augusta, Blakely, Brunswick, Butler, Byron, Calhoun, Camilla, Carrollton, Cartersville, Cedartown, Chamblee, Cochran, Columbus, Cordele, Cornelia, Covington, Dalton, Eastman, Eatonton, Elberton, Ellaville, Fayetteville, Gainesville, Greensboro, Griffin.

Jefferson, Jonesboro, Louisville, McCaysville, Macon, Marietta, Milledgeville, Millen, Monroe, Moultrie, Nashville, Reynolds, Royston, Rupert, Savannah, Senoia, Silvertown, Sparta, Thomaston, Tifton, Valdosta, Vidalia, Warner Robins, Waynesboro and Winder.

More Thumbs Down On Mixed Schools

ATLANTA, — (GSP) Latest evidence that loyal and responsible Georgians are not going to accept the blatant decree of the U. S. Supreme Court which would strike down segregation in the public schools is seen in recent action by the State Board of Education, which, by formal resolution, pledged to abide by Georgia's laws prohibiting spending funds on non-segregated schools. Its resolution points out that Georgia laws forbid the board from appropriating money for mixed schools, and that personnel of a mixed school shall not be paid with state funds. In effect, the board said in the resolution it would obey these state laws.

Ford Foundation Particular Affinity Toward Financing Left-Wingers Shown

Summation Of Facts Given By Courier About Southern Regional Council

THE AUGUSTA COURIER carried a detailed expose, June 28, 1954, which established facts about the Southern Regional Council. They are as follows:

1. It is the successor, in fact, to the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the SCHW.

2. Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as communists in testimony before Congressional committees by former associates in the party.

3. At least 38 officers, members of the executive staff or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in the report citing it as a communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to "promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions" to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been solely a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist Party line as laid down for the South.

6. The incorporators of the Southern Regional Council are Ralph McGill, Editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Dr. George S. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Negro, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk (Negro) University; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina. The charter of incorporation was applied for in Fulton County Superior Court, January 6, 1944, and was granted for a period of 35 years. Attorneys for the applicants were the Atlanta law firm of Haas, Lyons and Hurt, of which Leonard Haas is senior member.

Subsidization of the Southern Regional Council which is a haven for known communists and red fronters follows the pattern set by the Ford Foundation throughout the rest of the nation.

Now, he has written me a letter and accuses me of lying. I want to settle the issue and let the readers see who lied. I say Ralph lied and I am going to prove it by his own words.

Here's the letter he wrote me saying I lied:

Mr. Roy Harris

Augusta, Georgia

Dear Roy:

I received in the mail today a copy of the Courier with the article concerning the Southern Regional Council. I do not at all agree with the conclusions reached in the article, since not only was Bishop Arthur Moore among the incorporators, but leading men in every Southern state are, or have been, members of it. Certainly it contains nothing subversive.

There were at least twenty serious errors of fact in the article. What I chiefly want to say to you, and to make a matter of record, is:

There was a direct quotation from me saying that I had joined the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, but had left it when I saw the direction it was taking. This is completely false. I never at any time was a member of this organization nor did I ever attend any of its meetings.

For a number of years it was a respected organization, but later became infiltrated with Communists, and it is a matter of record that I and The Atlanta Constitution helped drive it out of existence.

I simply want to call your attention to the fact that this direct quote was a deliberate falsehood without any substance of fact whatever.

Sincerely,

Ralph McGill

SRC In Atlanta Using Big Grant To Force Mixing Of Races In Schools

Exposure of the Southern Regional Council as successor to the Communist-front Southern Conference for Human Welfare by the Augusta COURIER in an exclusive article recently gives added proof to charges that the Ford Foundation has shown a particular affinity toward financing left-wing causes and groups.

The Southern Regional Council, headquartered in Atlanta, is now spending a $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation in a project to aid the Supreme Court in forcing mixing of the races in the classrooms of the public schools of Southern states.

As the successor to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, the Southern Regional Council has picked up where the earlier group left off in furthering the Communist Party line in the South.

Platform

"The Southern People's Common Program For Democracy, Progress and Peace" as contained in the DAILY WORKER, official organ of the Communist Party of the United States, sets forth the platform and program of the Party in the South. This platform has ten points which have been followed to the letter in the Southern Regional Council's activities and programs.

For instance, the Communist Party program calls for: abolition of white primaries; abolition of poll taxes; abolition of county unit system; reapportionment of Congressional districts; appointment of judges; FEPC and anti-lynch laws; abolition of segregation in all public health, hospital facilities, libraries, parks, schools and elsewhere and outlawing the KKK. In all of these programs to destroy segregation and end our heritages and traditions in the South the Southern Regional Council has been in the vanguard of the fight.

As a matter of fact, the record shows that the Southern Regional Council is not the first of red-infiltrated activities to which the Ford Foundation has let its funds and support.

Ford Staff Members

Prominent members of the staff of the Ford Foundation have long records of affinity for pro-communist causes and association with communist fronts and their activities, according to the July 27, 1953, edition of the Congressional Record.

The backgrounds of some of the Foundation's principal officials were disclosed in an address from the floor of the House of Representatives by Rep. Carroll Reese of Tennessee supporting the creation of a select committee to investigate foundations.

Reese cited "extensive documentary evidence" which, he said "raises some serious questions regarding some of the officers and activities of the Ford Foundation." He charged the organization has a "dubious staff" and has engaged "in subversive and pro-communist and pro-socialist propaganda activities."

Record of Hutchins

The Tennessee Republican dwelled at length upon the record of Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, associate director of the Ford Foundation. His declarations regarding the former chancellor of the University of Chicago are treated in another article in this issue.

Reese then turned to Bernard Berelson, director of the Ford Foundation's Behavioral Sciences Division; Phillip E. Moseley, president of the Foundation's East European Fund; Bernard Louis Gladieux, assistant to the president of the Ford Foundation in charge of the New York Office; and Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., of the Americans for Democratic Action, hired for a series of radio broadcasts.

Records Disclosed

The Record makes the following disclosures about these men:

BERELSON—". . . director of the Ford Foundation's Behavioral Sciences Division which has just been allotted $3,500,000 for the creation of a center for advanced study in behavioral sciences, which will consider social relations in human behavior. Berelson, while on the faculty of the University of Chicago, served on a committee to welcome the Red Dean of Canterbury, the Very Reverend Hewlett Johnson, world renowned apologist for communism who sports a Soviet decoration for his work in behalf of his Kremlin masters. The welcoming committee for the Red Dean of Canterbury was organized under the auspices of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, an agency which has been cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General of the United States."

MOSELEY—"The East European Fund was established by the Ford Foundation is financed by it and deals with issues relating to the Soviet Union and its European satellites and particularly with the settlement and adjustment of Soviet refugees who have come to the United States. The president of this fund is Philip E. Moseley, who is also director of the Russian Institute at Columbia University. Some years ago Professor Moseley made the following evaluation of the Soviet Union in a pamphlet he wrote for the Foreign Policy Association, also supported by foundations:

" 'Over the long run, great numbers of people will judge both the Soviet and American systems, not by how much individual freedom they preserve but by how much they contribute, in freedom or without it, to develop a better livelihood and a greater feeling of social fulfillment.'

Communist Ideology

"Garet Garett, editor of American Affairs, said that this is straight Communist Party ideology:

" 'It means only that pure Communist ideology may be thus imparted by Columbia University's Russian Institute through the Foreign Policy Association.'

"Philip C. Jessup and Ernest J. Simmons are members of the administrative board of the Russian Institute at Columbia University, which is headed by Moseley. Professor Simmons is the editor of a book entitled U. S. S. R., which grew out of studies at Cornell University that were financed by the Rockefeller Foundation. At least 15 of the 20 contributors of this symposium edited by Simmons are pro-Soviet and none of the other five has ever been known as critics of the Soviet Union. Moreover, Professor Simmons has affiliations with Communist fronts."

Protege of Wallace

GLADIEUX—" . . . former secretary to and protege of Henry Wallace. Gladieux entered federal service in 1988 in Chicago with the Federal Works Agency, transferred to the Labor Department, Wage and Hour Administration, from there to the Bureau of the Budget, then to the War Production Board, leaving the WPB on Nov. 23, 1944, to go with UNRRA. On March 2, 1945, Henry Wallace was sworn in as Secretary of Commerce, and on April 30, 1945, he named Bernard L. Gladieux as his executive assistant. Gladieux remained in the Department of Commerce until Oct. 1, 1951, when he was appointed as an officer of the Ford Foundation in charge of the New York office and as assistant to the president of the Ford Foundation.

"I have been advised by a reliable and responsible source that Bernard L. Gladieux, while in Government service in Washington, had in addition to official association in the ordinary course of business, social contacts with the following persons: William W. Remington, Michael J. Lee, Harry Samuel Magdoff, Philip M. Hauser. Magdoff was identified before a Committee of the House in 1948 as a member of a Soviet spy ring. He recently appeared before the Senate Internal Security Committee and dived behind the Fifth Amendment when asked the $64 question. William W. Remington is in jail serving a term for denying that he was a Communist Party member while in the secret cell of Communists in the Tennessee Valley Authority. Michael J. Lee was fired from the Department of Commerce for disloyalty. Dr. Philip M. Hauser, a former professor at the University of Chicago, who wrote pro-Russian speeches for Henry Wallace, has not yet been called as a witness by the committees who have investigated him and his activities.

Senator makes statement

"Advice was also furnished to me that no investigation of Bernard L. Gladieux's loyalty has been requested or made while he was in federal service. But a review of hearings . . . . certainly indicated that Gladieux's loyalty should have been investigated. A member of the Senate took the witness stand before the Committee and, after being duly sworn as a witness, testified as follows:

" 'I understand that one Bernard L. Gladieux, of the Secretary's office, who is a protege of Henry Wallace, has exercised the power of nullifying decisions of the so-called Loyalty Boards. In other words, if it found he was cleared of actual disloyalty, but recommended as a poor security risk, not a good security risk, then someone overruled that finding. Now I am informed that it could be, probably is, Mr. Gladieux.'

" . . . . Is is possible that the trustees of this huge foundation never made any investigation of Mr. Gladieux or checked with the FBI to determine his loyalty to his country?"

Active in ADA

SCHLESINGER—"According to page 34 of the 1951 Annual Report of the Fund for Adult Education, a subsidiary of the Ford Foundation, the TV-Radio Workshop, administered by the fund for adult education, hired Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., as commentator for a series of 12 weekly broadcasts. Schlesinger, of course, is a big shot in the ADA. The following public statements by Schlesinger are worthy of note:

"In 1946 Schlesinger wrote that the present system in the United States makes 'even freedom-loving Americans look wistfully at Russia.'

"On Dec. 11, 1949, on page 3 of the New York Times, Schlesinger said: 'I happen to believe that the Communist Party should be granted freedom of political action and that Communists should be allowed to teach in universities, so long as they do not disqualify themselves by intellectual distortions in the classrooms!

"On Aug. 18, 1946, on a University of Chicago Round Table broadcast entitled, 'What is Communism?', Schlesinger said: 'Surely the class struggle is going on in America. I would agree completely with the Communists on that.'

Says capitalism is dead

"Schlesinger was then asked: 'Do you mean that capitalism is dead everywhere except in the United States?'

"He replied: 'It is dead.'

"In answer to the question, 'What did it die of?, he said: 'It died of itself. There is much to what the Marxists used to say about capitalism containing the 'seeds of its own destruction'.' "

Reese continued with a recitation of what he called "dubious grants" made by these officials of the Ford Foundation. He listed them as follows:

$15 million allocation

"Grant to aid Communists and to discredit their investigation."—a $15,000,000 allocation for the investigation of congressional methods of inquiries into communism and subversion. Reese attributed this action to Hutchins, who, he said, "has consistently expressed his concern for the civil liberties of Communists."

"Since we know Hutchins' attitude toward communism and we know that his conception of civil liberties is similar to that of the Communists, we can be sure that the new Ford Foundation project will aid the Communist conspiracy and will try to discredit all those who fight it," he declared.

Grant to Communist

"Grant to a Communist"—"Another example of the kind of grants the Ford Foundation makes was revealed in the testimony of William M. Canning, a former member of the faculty of the City College and of Xavier University, who said under oath at the hearings of the Internal Security Subcommittee that Moses Finkelstein, a City College teacher and later a professor at Rutgers University, under the name of Finley, was a member of the Communist Party and that recently this man received a grant from the Ford Foundation."

"Grant to an organization supposedly controlled by a Communist"—"I have been advised by a reliable source that an organization which has received substantial grants not only from the Ford Foundation, but also from the Carnegie Corp., is supposed to be dominated by a Communist who dictates the policy of the organization. It would be unfair for me to provide specific information on this matter until witnesses are put on the stand to give their testimony under oath."

Would abolish the U. S. A.

"Grant to a person who wants to abolish the United States." — "Another dubious grant of a different character was made to Mortimer Adler, who received $600,000 from the Ford and Melon Foundations to set up the Institute of Philosophical Research. Professor Adler is such an ardent advocate of world government that, according to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Oct. 29, 1945, he said: 'We must do everything we can to abolish the United States.' "

"Grant to promote socialism." — "According to the Ford Foundation Annual Report for 1951, the foundation has granted $50,000 to the Advertising Council, Inc., or 'a restatement of the principles of American society.' The Council's public policy committee includes, in addition to Paul Hoffman, former president of the Ford Foundation, and Chester C. Davis, its associate director, several persons who have Communist-front affiliations. The Miracle of America, a publication of the Advertising Council, Inc., states that the public policy committee of the Advertising Council approves and endorses the economic education program of the Council. This program is described in the Miracle of America under the title 'Platform for All Americans.' This platform starts out like a firecracker Fourth of July patriotic speech and then turns out to be a rewrite of the British Labor Socialist Party program. Adoption of this platform would guarantee the success of any socialist legislation in America."

Large Grants to India

"Grant to pro-communist India."—"The Ford Foundation has singled out India for some of its largest grants and is spending millions of dollars in that nation. Is there some special significance to singling out India for large Ford Foundation grants, in view of the fact that the head of the Indian Government is more sympathetic to the Soviet Union than toward the United States, and that he wants the United States to recognize Red China and admit that Communist nation, which is slaughtering Americans in Korea, to the United Nations? I am greatly concerned with what is being done with the Ford Foundation millions in India. That nation is a potential ally of the Soviet Union, and if the Ford Foundation projects in any way are fostering a pro-Soviet attitude in India, the consequences may be disastrous for the future of America."

Hand Takes Positive Stand Against Mixed Schools

Speaker Of House Will Go To Jail If Necessary, Run State From Cell

House Speaker Fred Hand has pledged that, if elected Governor of Georgia, he will go to jail and conduct the business of the State from his cell for his entire term before he will permit a single Negro child to attend any white school in Georgia.

The Pelham Legislator said that, as Governor, he would refuse to approve the expenditure of any State funds to pay the salaries of any white teacher teaching Negro pupils, any Negro teacher teaching white pupils and any white or Negro school principal or superintendent permitting such a situation to arise. Any pupil thus dislocated, he explained, would be permitted to attend classes in any other public school for his or her race until the racial status quo is restored in the disrupted classroom.

Hand, who will formally open his campaign for the State's highest office in Camilla Saturday, July 10, said he is the "only candidate with the courage of his convictions" in the race. He charged that both Former Acting Governor M. E. Thompson and Lieutenant Governor Marvin Griffin are "guilty of talking out of both sides of their mouths on the gravest problem to confront this State since the War Between the States."

"If the citizens of Georgia honor me with their highest office, I pledge that I will gladly go to jail and, if need be, conduct the business of the State from my cell for the duration of my entire term before I will permit even one Negro child to attend a white school or any white child to enroll in a Negro school," he declared.

"I have resolved that, as Governor, I will refuse to approve the expenditure of any State funds to pay the salaries of any white teacher who teaches Negro pupils, any Negro teacher who teaches white pupils or any white or Negro school principal or superintendent responsible for such a situation. By executive order I will permit any pupil thus temporarily dislocated to attend classes in any other public school for his or her race until the racial status quo can be restored in the original classroom. The Governor of Georgia has sufficient authority to take such action and so long as he stands firm in such a resolve nothing short of impeachment can end his control of the situation.

"The federal courts have no power to enforce their decrees except through citations for contempt. The only course they can take against a Governor refusing to buckle under their orders is to put him in jail. And such a prospect does not frighten me because I would consider it an honor to be placed behind bars to spare the people of my State the infamy of a court decision contrary to the Constitutions of the United States and Georgia and to the best interests and wishes of both races."

Hand said Georgians "will not be fooled" by the promises of M. E. Thompson to maintain segregation or the declarations of Marvin Griffin to defy the U. S. Supreme Court.

"The M. E. Thompson who clothed himself in the garments of segregation before the Georgia Education Commission yesterday is the same M. E. Thompson who has admitted publicly that in political campaigns he really is for things he says he is against and actually is against the things he says he is for. Since his principal support is derived from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and since he habitually does the opposite of his promises, he can be expected to mix the races in Georgia's public schools if elected Governor.

"The Marvin Griffin who has, for want of better adjectives, used offensive language to declare his determination to maintain segregation regardless of how the U. S. Supreme Court may rule is the same Marvin Griffin who on Sept. 14, 1950 wrote in his newspaper: 'Georgia will have to abide by decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court. We will buck and raise sand and say we won't, but in the end we will have to bend under.' He is bucking and raising sand just like he said he would and, when the showdown comes, he can be expected to bend under to the court just like he said he would.

"These two men are guilty of talking out of both sides of their mouths on the gravest problem to confront this State since the War Between the States. There is only one candidate in the race who says what he means, means what he says and has the courage of his convictions. I am that man."

RALPH McGILL

Belaboring A Dying Horse

I do not wish to belabor a dead horse, or at least a dying horse, but I have had some query about charges that the Communists had infiltrated the all-but-defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare, which seemingly exists today as a sort of collection agency for funds.

A person for whom I have great respect, admiration and a sincere affection, has taken me severely to task, saying that the fact Communists take pleasure in lining up behind, and supporting obvious reforms, is no reason for those who believe in the reforms to withdraw from them. Therefore, he argued that to condemn the Southern Conference for Human Welfare because Communists had joined with it in support of certain measures, was unfair.

The charge has the sound of logic. Certainly one cannot abandon principles because the Communists, too, espouse them, usually with cynical purpose. But it is not entirely a sound argument.

Basic His basic premise is correct. The Commies do have a policy of throwing in with reform groups for the deliberate purpose of embarrassing and defeating them. The Commies do not want any of the ills of our society remedied. They want them to become worse, so their own ideology will have a chance.

The Communist also is a sworn liar and the word of a Communist may not be taken on oath. In joining the party the Communist member takes an oath to lie, to commit perjury and to do any other act which will further the Communist policy of creating suspicion, doubt, chaos and disorder.

Therefore, when Communists can, they infiltrate into well-meaning organizations and destroy them from within. This is what is happening, and has indeed about happened, to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Cheerfully. Its officers hurried the process along by cheerfully admitting Communists to membership and, in at least two States, allowing them to serve in official positions in those States. They took the fatal policy "we can work with them," and to this day their president has said that if there are Communists in the membership he welcomes them so long as they support his program.

This has about destroyed what started out to be, and what could have been, an effective organization. It attracted many of the best persons in each Southern State to membership. As is the case with many organizations, they left things to the top officers. They, while not Communists themselves, played along with them and tolerated them and made them welcome. It took a long time for the rank and file to learn this, and when they did they began to leave it.

Collections In the last two or three years the Conference has been sending persons on collecting tours. Just what the money is used for, besides maintaining two officers, one in Washington and one in New York, is not known. How much of the money collected in various States where the Commies were in some position of power found its way to Commie sources no one can say for sure.

But it is folly for the officials of the Conference at this late date to try and disavow any knowledge of Communist interest in, or affiliation with, their Conference.

It also is folly for them to deny that it was used, openly, by the Communists as a sounding board.

Writing in The Communist for January, 1939, in a discussion of the then newly formed Southern Conference for Human Welfare, one Robert F. Ball, who signed himself as State Secretary of the Communist Party for Alabama, wrote:

". . . Comrade Browder anticipated the Southern Conference. . . . This is no coincidence. Our party has for many years given earnest study to the problems of the South on the scientific basis of Marxist-Leninist principle. Southern State organizations of the Communist Party were represented at the Conference. . . . Our party contributed in a modest but constructive manner to the success of the Conference. This participation of Communist delegates at the Southern Conference reflects the fact that Southern progressives are becoming aware of the progressive and constructive role played by our party. . . ."

(Comrade Browder, of course, has since been kicked out on orders from Moscow and the American Commies flopped as easily as they did when Germany invaded Russia.)

Welcomed As I have said here before, the Communist Party is almost negligible in the South, but it does maintain, and has maintained, a small Southern headquarters at Birmingham. And it did participate openly in the first Southern Conference for Human Welfare meeting at Birmingham. When this happened I knew enough to get out and knew enough to know that the Southern Conference was finished even as it began.

The Dies Committee, which was ridiculous for most of its career, was able to take the plain fact of Communists in the Southern Conference and use it to smear strongly anti-Communist persons who had sponsored the formation of the Conference. Reactionary writers have been able to do the same thing. They used it against both David Lilienthal and Gordon R. Clapp, who are no more Communistic than are Sen. Robert Taft, of Ohio, and Sen. Owen Brewster, of Maine.

You cannot allow the Commies to go along with you in any organization. If they espouse the same principles, then let them do it on their own. To admit them to membership or companionship is fatal—as the SCHW has learned.

Now, who lied?

In Ralph's letter to me of June 29th, Ralph said: "There was a direct quotation from me saying that I had joined the Southern Conference for learning; this pool to be made up without reference to or in consideration of any race, creed, color or previous condition of servitude; each student and its parents to have the privilege, at their own request and without compulsion of the State in any way, to ask to be assigned to a school of their choice. That is, if a colored parent wants his children to go to an all colored school, he may ask, without compulsion from the State in any way, to be assigned to an all colored school. If a White parent desires for his children to attend an all white school, he may request, on his own initiative and without compulsion from the State, that his child or children be assigned to an all white school.

"In my opinion, there will be only a very small lunatic fringe left in the pool. Then, I propose that the State have necessary schools to accommodate and take care of whatever is left in the pool in such manner as the Legislature, in its wisdom, may designate.

PROPOSAL No. IV

"I propose the adoption of an amendment empowering the Legislature to subsidize those children who are not satisfied in either of the schools provided by the State so that they may use their pro rata share of school funds in attending private schools.

"In this way, the State will not be compelling or requiring segregation of races but will be protecting all citizens in following their unalienable rights to a free choice. No white child will be required to go to an unsegregated school or to a segregated school. No colored child will be required to go to an unsegregated or segregated school. No child will be required to go to a mixed school. No child will be required to go to a private school. Every child can go to the school of his choice without compulsion from the State.

"The parents who are patrons of the white schools will be supplementary monitors to aid State authorities in the protection of the white schools. The parents of colored children will be supplementary monitors to aid the State in the protection of the colored schools. Whatever mixed or private schools there might be would be protected by the State.

PROPOSAL No. V

"Require all school teachers and others connected with education, both public and private schools, as a condition to their employment, to teach absolute respect for all State laws, State Constitutions, State Courts, State Legislatures and State Officials. The immature mind of school children is no place to sow seeds of discord, disrespect, and lack of patriotism.

"He who makes his country live, makes all things live;
And all things living bless him.
But, he who lets his country die, lets all things die;
And all things dying curse him."

N. C. Senator Pays His Respects To Supreme Court

North Carolina's brand new United States senator before he even took his seat blasted the Supreme Court of the United States.

This new United States senator is Sam J. Ervin, Jr. who has been a member of the Supreme Court of North Carolina for several years. Having been on the Supreme Court, he is in a position to appreciate what the Supreme Court of the United States has done to the Constitution.

Referring to the segregation decision, he said, "It is a tragedy that the highest court of the land should be composed of men apparently desirous of recreating our system of government in their own images."

Ervin said the decision not only was an invasion of state's rights but an attempt by the court to amend the Constitution.

"I don't see why our Constitution meant one thing for 86 successive years and why it now means another," he said.

"I think the South should wait and see what the judgment of the court is and see if it intends to convert the federal courts into school boards for all the school districts of the South."

Linder Gives Potent 5-Point Plan To Keep Segregation

Tom Lays It Straight On Line About What He'll Do As State's Chief Executive

Tom Linder has detailed his plan for maintaining segregation in Georgia.

In the main, he advocates:

(1) The taking of a census of the school children and their parents and determining from each whether they prefer to attend an all-white, an all-colored or mixed school.

(2) To place those who prefer an all-white school in such a school, and those who prefer an all-colored school in a colored school.

(3) He thinks those who prefer mixed schools are fit subjects for psychiatric treatment.

In a speech to the Georgia Commission on Education he said:

"There is no reason to abolish or discontinue our present public schools. The people of Georgia, I am sure, are determined to maintain segregation of the races in our public educational institutions. They are equally determined to maintain their system of public education. There is no reason why they should not be able to do both.

"So long as I am Governor, every white child and its parents shall have the opportunity to attend an all white school. Every colored child and its parents shall have the opportunity to attend an all colored school. No white child will be forced to attend a mixed school and no colored child will be forced to attend a mixed school. If there be those among us afflicted with a sociological complex or psychological complex, or that are suffering from some perverted instinct that makes it impossible for them to be happy and contented with their own race, the Legislature will make provisions to provide for such cases, either in public institutions or in private institutions. All these things are consistent with the Constitution, with the statutes and even with the latest decision of the Supreme Court.

"In the future, the people of Georgia and the other states must see to it that the seats in the United States Senate and House of Representatives are filled with men who will use every right, prerogative and power at their command to erase from the government and the courts every individual guilty of usurpation of powers and exercising unauthorized use of constituted powers to destroy the rights of the states under the Constitution which is the real basis of our present problem which has been brought to us ready made by outsiders and does not ,in any way, originate among the people of Georgia, white or colored.

"The people should reward those public servants who, by their record, have demonstrated their courage and ability to carry on this fight, such as our own Governor. I shall lend all of my efforts and influence to this end.

"I propose here today to present a definite plan to carry out these pledges. I am not unmindful of the fact that we are dealing with a momentous question involving many fields of constitutional law. I am not unmindful of the fact that as time goes by, other means and methods may present themselves, other angles may develop which will require the concerted effort of our best legal minds and our best school leaders. I am not, therefore, closing the book for any new ideas and new suggestions; but, as of now, the following plan is laid on the firm foundation, not only of our Federal and State Constitutions and our Federal and State Laws, but it is also laid on a firm foundation of laws more ancient than our Constitutions and more ancient than Magna Carta; and, it shall prevail.

"With this preface, I will proceed to an analysis of our situation and an outline of the plan which I propose to preserve the rights, traditions, interests and welfare, of all the people of Georgia, whatever their race may be.

"The Supreme Court held in effect that the State cannot, as a matter of Law, segregate school students merely on a basis of race or color. In doing so, in my opinion; the Court, by necessary implication, also ruled that the State cannot, as a matter of Law, force the mixing of students of different races and colors purely on a basis of race and color.

"This, I think, gives us a real basis from which to work out a program where the people themselves can effectively segregate themselves without compulsion from the State.

"It is a well defined and recognized principle of constitutional law, as held by the Supreme Court in various cases, that no power resides in government, either Federal or State, to prevent discrimination by individual citizens. The prohibition against discrimination applies only to public action. This is firm ground on which to stand when the individuals choose to segregate themselves because of what they deem good and sufficient reasons.

"The people of Georgia, by and large, white and colored and including other races, are people who believe in God. They are people who recognize the overruling providence that has made this country great. Most of them look upon marriage as a Holy God-ordained relationship. The rearing of their children, training them, protecting them during their minority from evils which the immature mind of children are not able to grasp or understand, is a part and parcel of the deep religious convictions of most people in this State. They believe in the ancient commandment "thy shalt not remove the ancient land marks set by thy fathers". The most ancient land mark is the separation of the races and the maintaining of the purity of each race.

"Since the Constitution guarantees the right to worship God according to the dictates of ones own conscience, and since the rearing of children is definitely a part of that deep religious conviction of conscience, it follows that each parent of children in their minority has an unalienable right to practice whatever discrimination is necessary for them to rear their children in such environment as they believe to fulfill their conscientious duty to their Creator.

"Since the Constitution guarantees everyone the unalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, each individual, without state compulsion, has a right to pursue their happiness in their own way limited only by the supreme law of not interfering with the other fellow's right to the pursuit of happiness.

"This again gives firm ground for the individual to practice, voluntarily and of his own choice, whatever segregation is necessary for his own pursuit of happiness.

"Ultimately, the people themselves are the court of last resort. This is true not only to the extent that they may change their government anytime they see fit, that they may unseat and punish any and all officials who are guilty of usurpation of undelegated authority and that they may use whatever force is necessary for the accomplishment of that purpose. Therefore, in this extreme sense, the people are the court of last resort.

"But within more moderate means, the people are also the court of last resort. They are the court of last resort in that they may, within the bounds of their constitutional rights and rights more ancient than the Constitution, practice whatever sanctions they, as individuals, may deem necessary for the protection of themselves, their property, their liberty and, of course, their families.

"The people of Georgia have never exercised sanctions; but, on the other hand, they have paid taxes willingly, built churches, built schools, loaned money, extended credit, and in every way tried to help the colored people of the State. The people of Georgia will not, at this time, practice any sanctions against colored people except as a necessary last resort to protect their own human rights, But, the people of Georgia can exercise sanctions under the ancient laws of private property, under the ancient law merchant, under the ancient laws of the right to hire and fire. In addition to this, the white people of Georgia can practice age old sanctions of social ostracism against those persons who are not members of the colored race, but who are engaged in the effort to break down and destroy the rights of the white citizens of the State.

In this sense, the people themselves are the court of last resort and from their decision there is no appeal.

"Then again, the people themselves are the court of last resort at the ballot box, which is the machinery set up by civilized people to avoid the more severe remedy of sanctions and also to avoid the most extreme remedy of force and violence. It is, therefore, through this latter sense in which the people are the court of last resort that we intend first to approach a remedy for that evil thing which now besets us through the unconstitutional acts of our Supreme Court, aided and abetted by the Chief Executive and the legislative branch of our national government. Therefore, I propose, at this time, to follow a plan through which the people can maintain segregation in our public schools. I am convinced that the people of Georgia are not willing to surrender their public school system without a fight; and, I am convinced that they do not intend to lose that fight. I am convinced that the people of Georgia do not intend for their children to attend mixed schools; and, I am convinced that they do not intend to lose that fight—whatever remedy they may have to resort to. I am convinced that no power on earth can force the white people of Georgia into mixed schools so long as they are unalterably determined to maintain the rights they have to choose their own kind of school.

PROPOSAL No. 1

"I propose, first, that the Legislature take appropriate action to provide for a full, thorough census of all children and parents who are now or may hereafter be patrons of public schools, requiring under oath a full statement as to the children and parents and stating definitely whether they choose to patronize an all white school, an all colored school or a mixed school. This census form also to be filled out by all teachers, other employees and officials connected with State or local education. When this census is completed, we will know who is who and where they are. This will force everyone to stand up and be counted.

"In order that such census and the choice of each citizen be fairly and openly made, I propose that its results be published in every county of the State. Such a census will give us the information as to what school facilities will be required.

"I believe it will reduce potential trouble to a mere lunatic fringe, some of whom may need special care and treatment because it will probably be found that in most cases where any child or his parent does not desire to go to a school of their own color and race, that there is some perversion of mind, some mental sickness or some sociological maladjustment, some psychic or psychological delusion. I think there should be a board of experts, medical men, psychiatrists, sociologists, etc., to determine in each case what kind of care and treatment the individual requires for normal development.

PROPOSAL No. II

"I propose that the Legislature, by appropriate action, recognize and declare a State policy on education, recognizing that under our present Constitution, it is impossible for the State to comply with the opinion of the Supreme Court, recognizing that no change can be made in that Constitution before the General Election in 1956; declaring a policy of working out a plan for public education that will not be in conflict with the ruling of the Supreme Court, but which will also, at the same time, maintain the rights of all individuals. I propose that the Legislature work out and submit to the voters of the State in the General Election of 1956, a complete plan and also necessary constitutional amendments to put such plan into effect. The Legislature should declare as a State policy that, in the meantime, our present school system can operate only on a segregated basis because there is no money, under our present Constitution and appropriation acts, to pay for any schools other than segregated schools.

PROPOSAL No. III

"I propose that by appropriate legislation and vote of the people we create a pool of all school pupils, both in our common schools and in institutions of higher Human Welfare, but had left it when I saw the direction it was taking. This is completely false. I never at any time was a member of this organization nor did I ever attend any of its meetings."

Now, read the paragraph in his column entitled "Welcomed". In this column Ralph says:

"When this happened I knew enough to get out and knew enough to know that the Southern Conference was finished even as it began."

Now, who lied? How could Ralph get out if he never got in?

Now, he says there were other errors of fact in the article. Well, I would like to say to you that we worked on this article for a long time. Every fact that we have printed comes from the record of the Un-American Activities Committee in Congress or from some public record. There are no errors on our part.

Every fact was taken from either a public record or from Mr. McGill's newspaper columns or from the Un-American Activities Committee in Washington.

Now, we have proved that Mr. McGill lied and we have proved it by a photostatic copy of his own writing in his own paper.

We haven't asked anybody else to say that Mr. McGill lied. We just took Mr. McGill's word for it.

Now, who said Mr. McGill lied? Mr. McGill said he lied and no one else.

Now, I want to ask Ralph this question. Is it still true that I never lied to you?

Now Ralph you say in your article which we have photostated above that you and your newspaper helped drive it out of existence. That is, you say you helped drive the Southern Conference for Human Welfare out of existence. From this language we take it that you gave the information which you had gained about the Southern Conference for Human Welfare to the F. B. I. and the other agencies which helped expose it as a communist front.

If you did help the F. B. I. and the other agencies expose it, you did your country a patriotic service. The only way that the F. B. I. and the committees of Congress can get information on these red front organizations is from fellow members and people who meet with them. Now, if you squealed on your fellow members of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare you did what you should have done.

Now, you have another opportunity to do a great service to your country and your people. Why not help the Un-American Activities Committee and the F. B. I. expose the Southern Regional Council for what it is.

The same folks are running the Southern Regional Council in the main who were mixed up in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. It is the same old crowd and the same people that the Southern Conference for Human Welfare had.

Now Ralph step out and serve your country again. You know these things to be true. So, why not write the Un-American Activities Committee of the House a letter and save them a lot of trouble. You did it as we believe in the case of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. So, if you did it once why can't you tell on this same gang again?

Now Ralph you have been the spokesman for this crowd. The United Press carried a story out of Atlanta about the exposure of the Southern Regional Council and quoted a spokesman for the Council. When they quoted the spokesman, they quoted you. You said that I had made "an unfounded attack" on the council.

Now, is my attack unfounded? It is strange to note Ralph that no one else connected with the Southern Regional Council has denied my charges except you. If you don't know what kind of a gang you are ganged up with you had better stop and investigate it.

Now Ralph it looks like it is time for you to tell the truth.

Rejection Of Ford Foundation $335 Thousand Grant By Los Angeles Education Board Called U. S. Victory

Plans To Teach Un-American Doctrine In Schools Meet With Utter Defeat

The Los Angeles Board of Education has turned down a grant of $335,000 from the Ford Foundation on the grounds that the object of the expenditure was un-American.

The grant was made for the purpose of establishing a teacher-training project to promote the teachings of UNESCO in the Los Angeles school system.

Three members of the Board of Education ran pledged to decline the acceptance of the grant and were overwhelmingly elected by the people of Los Angeles. The Los Angeles Evening Herald Express proclaimed the victory in an editorial entitled, "Old Glory Flies Again Over Board of Education".

The editorial in full follows:

"The American Flag, conspicuous by its absence on the Fourth of July over the headquarters of the Los Angeles Board of Education, can be raised again.

"The action of the Board last night rejecting the Stoddard-maneuvered $335,000 Ford Foundation teacher training project was a shining victory for Americanism in our schools.

"It was a crushing defeat for Stoddard's UNESCO, one world internationalism propaganda which the voters rejected at the recent primary by electing Mrs. Edith K. Stafford, Mrs. Ruth Cole and Hugh C. Willett.

"Two courageous American women supported by practically all the patriotic organizations of the city fought and won the victory for Americanism over UNESCO.

The final vote rejecting the Stoddard inspired Ford Foundation teacher project was 5 to 1 with Arthur F. Gardner the lone dissenter.

"At the end Dr. Stoddard who has carried a flag of UNESCO, dropped it and raised a white flag with the following remark:

"'Unanticipated difficulties and delays have made it impossible to get the project under way by July 20 as planned.'

"This perhaps means that he will try another tack to get UNESCO back in the schools.

"Dr. Stoddard's contract last for approximately another year.

"Then or sooner he should get himself a job in UNESCO and say farewell to Los Angeles.

"As he did to Philadelphia.

"From the outset the acceptance of the Ford Foundation grant has been vigorously opposed by Board Members Mrs. Edith K. Stafford and Mrs. Ruth C. Cole, on the ground that the Board of Education would not have direct control over the administration

By ROY V. HARRIS

The horses are off and the race is on.

Nine candidates for Governor are whopping it up and trying to warm up the politics of the State. But, so far people generally are showing very little concern. They do not seem to be as enthusiastic as the candidates.

The people are watching the campaign very closely and they are waiting to see how the chips are going to fall before they make up their minds for whom they are going to vote.

The State employees, professional politicians, and the close friends of the many candidates are showing the most interest.

Sometime within the next thirty days they will begin to make up their minds and then we will be able to see where they are headed and which candidate will have the best chance to win.

There are several good candidates in the race and there are several candidates whom I like personally. Some of them have been good friends at times, and otherwise at times.

But, so far as I am concerned, I feel very kindly towards all of them.

Yet this is one time we need a real man for Governor and I believe that of those running that Fred Hand comes nearer fitting the bill than any other.

These are peculiar times in which we are living. We are living in a period of confusion as a result of the wars in which we have been engaged. Most of us are confused and we are wondering where we are headed.

In addition to living in a period of confusion, we are confronted with problems more complicated than any this State has ever faced since the days of Reconstruction and the days of the War Between the States.

Many of our problems appear to be incapable of solution. None of them are easy.

In the first place we are a growing State. We are an expanding State.

This State is growing in population and becoming more industrialized every day. As a result we find a shifting population in the State. This shift is from the rural areas to the urban areas.

Our country sections have been losing population and our towns and cities have been growing.

With all of the normal and usual problems which come about during such periods we have recently been hit in the face with a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States which seeks to destroy the traditions, the customs, the habits, and the beliefs of our people.

For all of this to happen at a time when there is world-wide confusion makes the solution of our problems more difficult and calls for a more intelligent and more courageous leadership than we have had before.

There are four things you can say about Fred Hand.

1. He has had the business experience and business training necessary to make a good Governor.

For many years Fred has headed the Hand Trading Company at Pelham and has demonstrated his business ability and his business acumen. He has made a remarkable success as the leader of this enterprise, which is the largest department store in rural America.

In addition to an enormous store, the Hand Trading Company operates farms and is engaged in other different types of enterprises. They are interested in a fertilizer plant, and in a bank, and other related types of business.

So Fred Hand has had remarkable experience in dealing with business, and big business at that.

Cook Threatened With "A Fight Unto The Death," If State Investigates Group

The exposure of the Southern Regional Council, beneficiary of a $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation, as a haven for known Communist-fronters and potentially the Communist Party appartus in the South, has created consternation among the liberal element in Atlanta and the South.

The Ford Foundation and the Southern Regional Council have been under fire for seeking to destroy segregation in the South.

Recent Developments

1. A hasty meeting between Morris Abram and Ralph McGill which resulted in a telephone call to the Attorney General of Georgia threatening him with opposition if he investigated the Southern Regional Council.

2. A statement by Morris Abram to the Attorney General of Georgia in a telephone conversation threatening the Editor of the Augusta COURIER.

3. A bitter letter from the Editor of the ATLANTA CONSTITUTION to the Editor of the Augusta COURIER denying that Ralph McGill had ever been a member of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare;

4. The policy of the Atlanta newspapers to suppress all news not favorable to the SRC; and,

5. Additional detailed information from the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities and the records of the Attorney General of the United States regarding Communist-front activities and Communist Party membership of some of the leading lights of the Ford Foundation-financed Southern Regional Council.

Abram, McGill Confer

The Augusta COURIER has learned from unimpeachable sources that when Morris Abram read the expose of the Southern Regional Council in the Augusta COURIER of June 28 he immediately began a series of talks with Ralph McGill in order to combat and suppress the COURIER story.

When the press contacted Attorney General Eugene Cook relative to the expose, he had not read the COURIER and said that if Communists were at work in any organization that he would certainly be interested in it and would investigate the same. One reporter took this statement to mean that he would launch a full scale open investigation against SRC, but this was not what Cook said.

The Attorney General told the press that as far as he knew the Special Services Agency of the State government, ferreting out Communists, and the FBI might already be looking into SRC's activities.

Abram was on the phone moaning and complaining to the Attorney General. He said that the interpretation placed on Cook's statement had not only "hurt his feelings" but had also "hurt Bishop Moore's feelings."

It was then that Abram threatened to get out opposition to the Attorney General. He told Mr. Cook that he had just talked to Ralph McGill and that they had decided to get out opposition to him in the Attorney General's race.

"We intend to beat you, it's a fight unto the death!" Abram is reported to have stated in the telephone conversation.

Abram Complains

This same Abram is a candidate for Congress now against Jim Davis in the Fifth District. He complained to Mr. Cook for not "ever saying anything on our side" about segregation and the county unit system.

Cook's reply was to Abram that he is a supporter of both these traditional Georgia institutions and that he would continue to fight for them with all of the energy which he possesses and further told Mr. Abram that he and McGill could get out any opposition they desired.

It was then that the Atlanta attorney threatened the Editor of the Augusta COURIER saying:

"SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE TO ROY; HE'S CRAZY!"

McGill's Letter

Close on the heels of the Abram-Cook telephone conversation, Ralph McGill, Editor of the ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, wrote a bitter letter to the Editor of the Augusta COURIER stating that charges made by this paper in the Southern Regional Council expose which quoted him as being a member of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and got out of the organization when he found it infiltrated by Communists "is completely false."

Last week we printed McGill's column which by his own statement he admitted he belonged to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and that he was at the first meeting of the organization. We convicted him by his own evidences as quoted in a column which he wrote several years ago.

He wrote then: "As I have said here before, the Communist Party is almost negligible in the South, but it does maintain and has maintained a small Southern headquarters at Birmingham. And it did participate openly in the first Southern Conference for Human Welfare meetings at Birmingham. When this happened, I knew enough to get out and knew enough to know that the Southern Conference was finished even as it began."

Expected Something Else

Undoubtedly, McGill and other leading lights of the SRC saw the box in the Augusta COURIER printed the week before alerting our readers that an expose of the

The Challenge To The South

(Borah's Dead and We Must Face It)
By the broad and swift Potomac—
Waters crowned a sunlit stream—
Stands the nation's capital city
And its one-time Court Supreme
That did hold the regal glory
Of our jurisprudence plan—
Held the reins for our proud people
In the realms of law and man.

Then the demagogues usurped it,
Made it tool of pink and red,
Made it politicians' haven,
Gave it heavy boots to tread
On the safety of the Southland,
On the way by which we live,
On the rights of our children
And the heritage we give.

Hardly had we yet recovered
From the marches to the sea
Than we faced a greater menace,
Callous blow at liberty.
Not one crowd it was who did this
But a group from many states
Working in a scheme dark-ladened
To control political fates—

Parties locked in desperate battle,
Working close with doubtful mates
In a struggle of the jungle
To obtain the doubtful states.
Long as Borah graced the Senate,
Constitutional lawyer keen,
Never would he let the despots
Wield this cutlass hard and mean.

But the stalwarts served and left us
And there came a lesser breed
In the North to help sustain us
To withstand the puny creed
That the bulls among the china
Would enforce upon the South
Now that Borah has departed
And the dwarfs are given mouth.

Busy little creatures are they,
Plotting nightly, plodding mean,
Termites in the nation's woodwork
Boring through the structure's seam;
Working at their little forges
Striking for us chains of steel:
But they'll never bind this Georgia,
Never grind us under heel.

Now the lawyers of the nation
Look with grief upon the sight
Of a Court of politicians
Standing in the country's light;
Restless heads upon the pillow,
Steeped in schemes banning sleep,
(Aim: destruction of Caucassia),
Counting votes instead of sheep.

Borah's dead and we are dying
If the Court shall have its way
'Gainst the last stand of Caucassia
With a tyranny to stay.
But who'll place this yoke upon us?
Who such chains with us can bind?
Has the soul of Georgia withered
That no courage we can find?

As we stand against the tyrants
With our backs against the wall,
If we keep our Southern courage
God will never let us fall:
He who made us different races
For to dwell in kindness e'er,
He will guide us in our courage,
Keep us from the slightest fear.

In this contest for our children,
For a racial strain that long
Has withstood the tide of color,
Never bartered race for pawn:
O, our children, we'll not sell you
Down the River Politic
In the battle for the White House
And the demagogues' dark trick.

Nor shall we resort to violence:
That is far from Georgia's mind—
But we'll never lay our children
On an altar of this kind.
We shall never sacrifice them
To the demagogic maws
Of the bulls among the china,
And their ill-considered laws.

Cook Threatened With "A Fight Unto The Death," If State Investigates Group

SRC's activities was coming the following week. McGill and his satellites in Atlanta started oscillating to determine the best strategy for answering the COURIER article.

According to reliable information, we have learned that they were expecting undocumented general charges which they would answer by the tactic of confession and avoidance.

However, when the COURIER expose came out proving SRC to be the successor to SCHW; naming two Reds as members of the SRC top level Board of Directors and exposing 38 of its officers and Board of Directors as members of Communist fronts, it was too much for McGill's pen and the power of the Atlanta press to answer. They knew that the COURIER had the facts and deadwood.

Atlanta Papers Suppressed Story

As a result McGill and other top level officials issued orders to subordinates on both the morning and afternoon papers to completely ignore the story and not print a word about it even though a wire service had sent the story to all daily papers throughout the State and nation.

When officials of the Southern Regional Council learned that the COURIER'S expose of that group was going to be spread before the public in the columns of this newspaper, they sought by every means to bring pressure to suppress the story.

They claim that the SRC is not successor to SCHW but another organization the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., headed by Aubrey Williams, as its president is the successor to SCHW.

McGill Hunts Libel

They did not know that the COURIER was in possession of documentary evidence to prove its charges conclusively and shatter these claims. Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, told the press that he is not a communist "but a harmless old socialist." Editor Ralph McGill sought to dissuade the wire services from carrying news stories of THE COURIER'S expose by asking the threatening question: "Is there any libel in it?"

It was also learned authoratively that queries were made by the press to experts on the question of communist subversion in an effort to discredit the COURIER'S news story. We have learned from an unimpeachable source that the replies to all of these queries was that the "Southern Regional Council is just as red as Roy says it is."

Documentary evidence supplied us by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities shows that 24 of the officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council held top policy posts in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare or were extremely active in it. This, in itself, gives the lie to claims of the Southern Regional Council that it is not the successor to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. The Southern Conference Educational Fund can make no such claim.

Any impartial investigation of Communist-front organizations proves conclusively that there is much overlapping of officers and membership, but that the goal of all is one and the same—that of the overthrow of our form of government.

Records and official reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities reveal that the leading lights of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, its offshoot the Southern Conference Educational Fund and its actual successor, the Southern Regional Council are one and the same.

Two Known Communists

We have discovered that two persons who have been branded as known Communists in testimony before the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities are listed in official publication of the Southern Regional Council as members of its Board of Directors. One of these, Aubrey Williams, is also president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund.

To keep the record straight, the Southern Conference Educational Fund was set up by Aubrey Williams and James Dombrowski to combat the effectiveness of the Southern Regional Education program. The organization has met with no success, has no standing and has not been able to garner the funds which it expected to receive. However, the Southern Regional Council operated by the same element has met with financial success through grants from the Rosenwald Fund Foundation and at present the Ford Foundation. It is pursuing the course laid down in the platform of the Communist Party —U. S. A.

Courier In Demand

The COURIER has received telegrams, telephone calls and letters from all over the South and throughout the country requesting additional copies of this article exposing the SRC and showing another way how the Ford Foundation is expending its funds to advance the destruction of segregation in Georgia and the South.

The COURIER heard from several prominent Southern leaders and appreciates their commendation.

The COURIER has at hand additional information from the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities and from the records and files of the Attorney General of the United States information relative to the top manipulators of SRC's policy and anti-segregation effort in the South.

Next week The COURIER will carry another article giving full details on the records of five of these individuals including two known Communists who are members of the top level Board of Directors of the Southern Regional Council.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

He has had remarkable experience in dealing with little business and the affairs of little people.

Twenty-five years of this type of experience certainly should equip him to handle the State's affairs in a businesslike way.

2. Fred Hand is experienced in the affairs of the State Government. He has been a member of the Legislature for twenty-two years and eight years of that time he has been Speaker of the House of Representatives.

These long years of service have given him an opportunity to know the affairs of this State and an opportunity to study the affairs of this State over a long period of time.

No other candidate in the race has had the experience in government that Fred Hand has had.

In addition to his experience as a member of the Legislature he has headed the State School Building Authority, which is now spearheading a 200 million dollar school building program in this State.

The School Building Authority is now building schoolhouses all over this State. Under Fred's direction the School Building Authority has been handled in a businesslike and efficient manner. They are producing results with a minimum of waste and not a single hint of any graft or corruption. Nowhere in this State can you find one single person who has criticized a single contract or the way in which the State School Building Authority has handled this enormous amount of money and the construction of all of these buildings.

This program calls for some 7 or 8 hundred different buildings over Georgia and it is a remarkable job that they are doing.

3. There is no doubt about Fred Hand's courage.

During his twenty-two years of service in the Georgia Legislature he has proved himself to be fearless and to have as much courage as anybody should want.

He has never dodged an issue and he has stood for what he believed as boldly as a man possibly could. He has had the courage to take a stand. He hasn't wiggled around from one side of an issue to the other. There has never been any doubt in all of these twenty-two years about where Fred Hand stood on anything, and he hasn't changed his position one single time.

Fred started his service in the Senate in 1931 and he is the same Fred Hand now that he was in 1931.

It can't be said of Fred that he has preached things that he didn't believe in and that he has failed to preach things that he did believe in.

It can't be said of Fred Hand that he is in favor of segregation one day and against it the next. He has never yet said that we would rear

Air Force Biggest Weapon–Talmadge

ATLANTA, — An Independence Day celebration is, quite naturally, the appropriate place to talk about America's independence—present and future. And that's precisely what Gov. Herman Talmadge did the other day in Canton.

He strongly warned against the increasing menace of Communism to the United States and other nations of the Western Hemisphere. At the same time he emphasized that this country is strong and should adopt a program of independence, adding there is no nation in the world today that "has less reason to be afraid" than the United States. Said he:

"The basic communist policy in this country today is to agitate in every way to force us to spend ourselves into national bankruptcy. Communists hope to take us over without firing a shot. They are the authors and originators of the 'America Last' policy.

"Communists and their sympathizers have sought to make it unpopular for our national leadership to consider the welfare of our country as paramount. The day is surely coming when we must give attention to keeping our own nation solvent and strong if we are to survive. We are fast coming to the realization that we can't buy lasting friendship from other nations.

"It seems to me that in defense of our country we should emphasize those things in which we have the advantage and we should, by all means, refrain from land combat with the Russians, the Chinese and their satellites when they have a manpower advantage over us of approximately ten to one.

"Our defense should be predicted upon the world's mightiest air force. This air force should be capable of defensive as well as offensive action. The greatest deterrent to the Kremlin is the belief that in a matter of minutes the American Air Force could destroy millions of Russians, including their military potential."

Maloof To Step Up Citizens Council's Road Safety Drive

ATLANTA,—Look for an accelerated campaign to save lives on Georgia's highways and streets. Reason: The Georgia Citizens Council, whose main objective is to promote traffic safety throughout the state, has a new director who is pledged to directing a vigorous and aggressive safety program all over Georgia.

He is 35-year-old John W. Maloof, a native of Rome, who recently was sworn in as the Council's director to succeed Garland T. Byrd, resigned. Maloof, who is a member of the Atlanta and Georgia Bar Associations, formerly was with the State Parks Department.

Current phase of the Georgia Citizens Council's program is the "Slow Down and Live" drive, a safety campaign participated in by this and twenty-three other Southern and Northeastern states.

In an effort to drive home to the motoring public that everybody has a better chance of staying alive if automotive speech is slowed down, the Citizens Council is distributing more than 300,00 safety leaflets over Georgia through such outlets as filling stations, sheriffs and local police, the State Patrol, teen-age groups, local safety clubs, civic organizations of one kind and another and other channels.

The "Slow Down and Live" campaign, made possible by joint declaration of governors of all the participating states, will continue through Labor Day, Sept. 6.

Summation Of Facts Given By Courier About Southern Regional Council

THE AUGUSTA COURIER carried a detailed expose, June 28, 1954, which established facts about the Southern Regional Council. They are as follows:

1. It is the successor, in fact, to the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the SCHW.

2. Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as communists in testimony before Congressional committees by former associates in the party.

3. At least 38 officers, members of the executive staff or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in the report citing it as a communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to "promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions" to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been soley a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist Party line as laid down for the South.

6. The incorporators of the Southern Regional Council are Ralph McGill, Editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Dr. George S. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Negro, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk (Negro) University; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina. The charter of incorporation was applied for in Fulton County Superior Court, January 6, 1944, and was granted for a period of 35 years. Attorneys for the applicants were the Atlanta law firm of Haas, Lyons and Hurt, of which Leonard Haas is senior member.

Subsidization of the Southern Regional Council which is a haven for known communists and red fronters follows the pattern set by the Ford Foundation throughout the rest of the nation.

of the program, that it would inevitably place the schools under heavy obligation to the Ford Foundation and finally that if the program were entered into, it probably could and would be used by World Government adherents to force the discarded UNESCO program back into the Los Angeles schools.

"While there is no doubt as to a teacher shortage and the need of recruiting new teachers, Mrs. Stafford and Mrs. Cole felt that this should be done through the schools themselves rather than by accepting the yoke of a huge grant from the Ford Foundation.

"Los Angeles wants no part of UNESCO in its schools and a vigilant public, constantly warned and informed by the Herald and Express, congratulates the City Board of Education on killing a program which could have brought it back."

U. S. High Court Intoxicated With Power--Forrester

Nation Stands In Danger Of Being Destroyed From Within

Congressman E. L. Forrester, of Georgia's Third District, says that no country can be greater than its judiciary and that the members of the Supreme Court are so intoxicated with power that they have relegated to themselves power even to turn the clocks of time backwards.

As a result of the acts of the Supreme Court, Forrester contends that this nation is standing in danger of being destroyed from within instead of by enemies from without.

His speech in this regard in the House of Representatives on May 18, 1954 follows:

"For sometime I have contended that the greatest threats to our Republic and the American way of life come not from overseas, but are in our midst at home. While the internationalists are riding over the world trying to sell their plans to the world, at taxpayers' expense, the same crowd is destroying everything in America that made us great and everything that can be expected to sustain us in our hour of peril, which hour may be closer than many of us think.

Aim of Leftwingers

"It is completely apparent to me that the aim of the leftwingers and the un-American groups in this country is the destruction of the Anglo-Saxon race. We, in the South, recognized that danger long ago and we have tried to alert our people only to be hooted at and condemned. My people cannot understand an individual who has no pride in race; in fact, we cannot understand anyone who has no pride in his or her heart.

"Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, the United States Supreme Court shed all pretense of construing the law and took upon itself the right to change our law, even our Constitution and was brusque enough to virtually say they were so doing. The Chief Justice went out of his way to say that the defendants in the case yesterday were asking that Court to turn back the clock. The Chief Justice and that Court were completely mistaken. What the defendants were asking was that the Court keep its hands off the clock. The Supreme Court has never been charged with the duty of keeping time for the citizens of America, nor to construe the seasons, nor to legislate—these powers being expressly reserved to the Congress and the people. It is completely amazing that nine men should be so intoxicated with power that they should rule that they are to set the clock, yet that is exactly what the Court said. Other than that observation, which is completely without basis in law, these decisions were purely political and completely sterile so far as law was concerned, for that Court had no law whatever to ground its decisions upon. No country can be greater than its Judiciary. The people were entitled to a higher court that would eliminate political considerations and construe the law and Constitution as they were written. I agree that more care should have been exercised in the appointment of the Judges to that Court, and I agree that both parties, Democratic and Republican, have been guided by political philosophies rather than legal qualifications for membership upon that Court. We sowed to the wind and we have reaped the whirlwind.

Terrible Decisions

"Yesterday, the Supreme Court by edict, but completely without legal basis, wiped out every vestige of States rights. It is disgusting now to hear so many claim they believe in the rights of the States. It is apparent that our President approves these terrible decisions, for his Attorney General demonstrated his partisanship by filing a brief asking that our previous adjudications be set aside, demonstrating that his thoughts were purely political and after demonstrating partisanship in an outstanding degree had the gall to ask Congress to give him complete control of wiretapping in this country. I am sure that Mr. Truman approves the decisions of yesterday, and his former Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, was quoted in the Evening Star last night as saying it was a great and statesmanlike decision. Adlai Stevenson will greet this judicial murder with open arms; yes, both major political parties are kowtowing to the minority groups to such an extent that our country itself is in jeopardy.

"Mr. Speaker, the Evening Star of last night quotes one in the present Republican administration as saying that these decisions of yesterday would alleviate Russia's criticisms toward us. He did not discuss the law, nor the basis of those decisions, but rendered an opinion purely on a political basis. I am tired of hearing the argument that we must appease Russia. If that is our object, then why not dismantle our Armed Forces and let our boys come back home. If it is appeasement and not victory that we seek, appeasement can be done without bloodshed.

FEPC Goes Whole-Hog

"The decisions of yesterday mean only this: The old-fashioned Yankee and the old-fashioned southerner whose ancestors won this country and preserved this country are without rights. The object is nothing less than the mongrelizing of the races. Mongrelization has always produced people without stamina and without conviction. Under these decisions of yesterday a man can claim that he is entitled to go to a girls' school by simply contending that the girls' school offers some subject that men's schools do not offer. These decisions mean that all laws prohibting mixed marriages will be annulled as fast as these matters can be brought before that Court. These decisions mean that there can be no exclusive residential section in the United States. These decisions mean that no hotel, boarding house, or public place can be the judge of whom they will take as a paying guest.

"Mr. Speaker, I understand that an FEPC provision has been offered in a committee of this Congress, which would provide an FEPC in interstate commerce.

Intolerable Condition

"Mr. Speaker, these decisions of yesterday have created an intolerable condition upon my people. In my own State we have pledged our future credit, over many years, and have spent millions of dollars trying to bring schools to the Negroes in the South. These moneys naturally will be almost entirely paid by the white people of my State. We did this because for 88 years the Supreme Court of the United States has held equal but separate facilities completely constitutional. The South has done more for the Negro in 200 years than all the rest of the world has done for the Negro in 5,000 years. The whites and the Negroes in my State have been, and are, happy together. The Negroes in Georgia know they have lost much for they know that the South has been honest with them. The Negroes in Georgia know that we have been better to them than any northern or eastern State has ever tried to be. The Negro teachers in Georgia are alarmed over this miscarriage of the law and the Constitution.

"Mr. Speaker, my people are awake to the dangers within our gates. Mr. Speaker, my people believe that in this country there are checks and balances upon every portion of this Government. My people do not believe that the President or any public servant can withhold information from the Congress they have elected, or from the people because it is the people who must do the dying in time of war. My people are against czars. My people repudiate the theory that any person whosoever is above the law of this country. My people see the grave danger hidden in such philosophy and in behalf of my people I tell it now, we spew it out of our mouths. This statement is not to be construed as applying to any individual case, for it is a statement that permeates our thinking, and bless God it is American. We are confirmed in that view although the President, by written order, demonstrates he thinks otherwise."

up for a while and then we would buckle under and surrender. Instead of that he has had the courage to say that we will never buckle under and that if it becomes necessary for the Governor of Georgia to go to jail to preserve segregation that he will go to jail and run the State Government from his cell.

4. Fred Hand is honest.

No one has ever yet pointed a finger of suspicion at Fred Hand about his honesty in all of his dealings over a period of twenty-two years in the Legislature and his dealings in handling 200 million dollars of State School Building money.

Others have been accused of various and sundry manipulations in the Legislature. Some have been mixed up in suspicious contracts in the Highway Department, in the Purchasing Department, and other Departments of the State Government. Some have been mixed up in many and various kinds of suspicious dealings, but Fred Hand has never been accused by his worst enemy of any such shenanigans.

It is a remarkable record for a man to make in public life. I say this because in public life a man's life is an open book and the light of pitiless publicity is always turned on him. Mighty few men can last that long without having had something to rise up to haunt them.

Not only has he proven himself to be honest in public affairs but his dealings with thousands of people in South Georgia have testified to his character and to his rigid honesty.

Now, in view of these things, I can say to you that you will not be gambling if you cast your vote for Fred Hand. You will know what Fred Hand will do and what he will not do.

If you cast your vote for Fred Hand you will know that he will stand like he has stood for twenty-five years because he hasn't been wishy-washy and he hasn't jumped from one side to the other.

Neither has he dodged an issue in all of these days and he frankly has always said what he thought.

This is no time for us to gamble and to take a chance on the Governor.

During the next four years we are going to need a man who will stand hitched to the post and who will go to jail if necessary.

It isn't going to be easy to keep separate schools for the two races in Georgia or anywhere else. It is going to be difficult.

But, it can be done and more depends upon the Governor of this State than anything else.

If we have a Governor who we know will stand and will never surrender, buckle under, or bend under, then we know what we can expect for the next four years.

Now Fred Hand isn't as good a politician as some of the other candidates. He hasn't been all over Georgia like some of the candidates attending barbecues, fish frys, and telling stories with all of the people. On the contrary, he has been a busy man.

He has had to look after his business and he has been forced to build school buildings.

His time has been occupied in diligently doing his duty. Consequently, he hasn't had the chance to be the hand shaker, and the back slapper, and the politician that some of the other candidates have been.

But everywhere I go in Georgia I find business people telling me that they are watching Fred Hand and they believe that by experience and training he is better equipped to give us a businesslike administration of the State's affairs than any other candidate.

His record in public life and his record in private life appeals to them.

So, I say that if you want a businesslike administration, honesty in government, and a progressive program in this State, that Fred Hand is the man to give it to you.

Talmadge Makes Progress Report To Press Of Ga.

ATLANTA, — For a good many years now, a highlight of the Georgia Press Association's annual convention has been a report on "The State of the State" by Georgia's chief executive currently in office. And this year's 68th annual session, just concluded in Savannah, was no exception. Gov. Herman Talmadge delivered his fifth such message which was, you might say, his valedictory "State of the State" address. Reason: His term of office expires at year's end.

But even so, the editors were probably more impressed than ever with the Georgia story as Talmadge told it. They learned first-hand how their state has moved steadily forward on all fronts during the last five and one-half years; heard words of hope and encouragement for the future. They also received a well-deserved pat on the back for their part in aiding the present administration set new records of accomplishments. In short, they were given a progress report perhaps unequaled in Georgia's history.

The Governor expressed his "lasting gratitude" to the citizens and the press of Georgia for their "generous support and cooperation" in the programs of his administration which, he said, have made unprecedented progress in all fields during his years in office. He voiced the hope that "whoever is elected our next governor will have the same measure of friendship and cooperation which has been extended to me."

"The achievements we have made working together are impressive," he declared. "We now have in successful operation great educational and humanitarian programs which five years ago were embodied only in the dreams of progressive citizens and in the editorial recommendations made by you, the editors of Georgia's fine newspapers.

"Working together as a team, our people, the General Assembly, the press, radio and television, our governmental officials, and civic, farm, labor, veterans and other groups have accomplished more tangible benefits for the people of Georgia than during any similar period of our history. As a result of our efforts nearly three-quarters of a billion dollars in permanent improvements now grace our landscape to serve present and future generations."

Talmadge reviewed for the members of the Fourth Estate the great strides that have been made since he took office Nov. 17, 1948. He went down the line, step by step, to show what has been and is being done to improve the common schools, colleges and universities, public health, roads, welfare, agriculture, industry and all the other segments that make up life in Georgia. Then he concluded by saying:

"These things have not come about by accident. They have happened because Georgians have refused to leave their future to chance and are acting on the strength of new-found faith in themselves and their common destiny. No one man, organization or group of men or organizations can claim credit for what has been done. It has been a mutual effort in which we all have shared.

"I am proud that I have been permitted a part in the unfolding of this new era for our beloved state. And I shall cherish as one of my fondest memories the generous support and cooperation which I have received from Georgians everywhere in performing my role. For that I wish to express my lasting gratitude and voice the sincere hope that whoever is elected our next governor will have the same measure of friendship and cooperation which has been extended to me."

Hand Will Maintain Segregation Public School System Unqualified Pledge To Georgia In Keynote Address

State's Finances Be Administered For General Welfare Of All Citizens

Fred Hand says that he will go to jail if necessary to maintain segregation in the public school system in Georgia.

This was the keynote of his opening speech at Camilla on July 10. Everybody concedes that Fred Hand is as good as his word and, if elected, would do just what he says.

His opening speech follows:

The purpose of this get-together is to ask you to help me get elected Governor of Georgia.

I can win only if you want me to serve in this capacity. I can win only if you, all the people listening over the state and your families and friends work and vote for me.

At the outset let me tell you that as a candidate I am seeking no reward but the opportunity to serve my state.

I invite you to examine my life and my record, public and private. Like all human beings, I have made mistakes. But I am proud that in all I have done and said I have been consistent and have never sacrificed my conscience or convictions for expediency.

With nine people in this race there will be many wild promises and maybe some false statements or plain lies. Right now I pledge you I will tell you the truth about what I stand for and also will expose the wild statements of other candidates.

I hate hypocrisy and despise demagoguery. Men who stoop to either deserve to have their names called before the bar of public justices.

No man has the right to talk out of both sides of his mouth—to say one thing today and another tomorrow, to espouse one cause in public and conspire against it in private, to take one stand as a private citizen and champion the opposite view as a candidate.

Candidates who wish to be taken seriously must present themselves with clean, untied hands. Those who, for the sake of money and votes, sell favors and promises, join hands with lawless elements and make unholy alliances with pressure groups and special interests cannot serve the best interests of the people. They can expect to have their names called by me.

I come to you today as my own master.

I am beholden to no one except the people of the Great State of Georgia.

I have made no promises except those I make in my platform.

I have but one special interest — the welfare of all the people.

I am the only candidate who can make that statement and tell the truth.

IT'S GREAT TO BE A GEORGIAN!

That cry never fails to stir me and I have been disappointed in recent years to hear it used less and less.

I want to see it restored as the slogan

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

This is one time when we ought not to gamble on a Governor.

We ought to know where the next Governor stands and there ought to be no doubt in anybody's mind about what he will do. We ought to know whether he will stand hitched of if he will be wishy-washy.

I have just talked to a friend who has been on a tour of Alabama studying the segregation problem. The people of Alabama told him that we were in much better position in Georgia to maintain segregation than they were because we have a governor who stands pat and there is no doubt in anybody's mind where he does stand. In Alabama, they frankly admit that if they had a governor like Talmadge, they wouldn't have any difficulty in working out the problem.

Now, that is one thing that we ought to be sure about. We ought to know that the next governor of Georgia not only has the conviction, but the courage to stand by his convictions regardless of what happens.

In my opinion, Marvin Griffin isn't such a man. In my opinion, Marvin Griffin can't be trusted.

He has been on too many sides of different issues and he has been wishy-washing around from one side to the other ever since I have known him.

Now, let's take up his record and see whether he can be trusted or not.

1. He first came into prominence as Executive Secretary to Governor E. D. Rivers. During the last year of the Rivers Administration, he issued out pardons and paroles a basketful at the time. Most of them were issued during the last few days of the Rivers Administration.

Griffin doesn't deny issuing the pardons. His excuse is that he was Secretary to former Governor Rivers and Governor Rivers told him to issue them.

Governor Rivers disputes this. He states that he didn't know that Griffin was issuing all of these pardons during the last few days of his administration. In addition, Rivers says that Griffin had his negro chauffer out making contact with convicts whom he could pardon.

This issue between Rivers and Griffin has never yet been settled. Griffin at a later date gave Rivers down the country for issuing the pardons and accused Rivers of running the pardon racket. On the other hand, Rivers says that Griffin is the man who ran the pardon racket.

But the public record still is that both admit there was a pardon racket. Griffin admits that he knew about it and that he issued the pardons. Rivers denies that he knew anything about it. But the undisputed testimony of both of them is to the effect that there was a racket and Griffin admits his participation in the racket.

Now the degree of his participation is the only question left. He admits issuing them, but did Ed Rivers tell him to? The burden is on Griffin.

It must be remembered that the Atlanta newspapers made a picture of Griffin issuing the pardons on the last day of the Rivers Administration. They were carried in the Atlanta papers and Griffin was boasting of the fact that he was issuing the paroles and pardons. Now that much is a matter of public record.

Now let me tell you what I know about the last day of the Rivers Administration in January, 1941.

I had been Speaker of the House during the four years of the Rivers Administration. On the last day of the administration I found out that they were about to pardon a man who was convicted in Richmond County and I felt that it would be a reflection on me if they did. So, I went over to the Governor's Office to protest the issuance of this pardon. I first talked to Marvin Griffin and he told me that he didn't care what the

Foreman, Williams Also On SCHW, Close To Hank Wallace, His Gang Of Communists

Two known Communists have been listed as members of the top level board of directors of the Ford-financed Southern Regional Council, according to official publications of that group.

Testimony adduced before House and Senate Congressional committees has branded SRC's directors, Aubrey Williams and Clark Howell Foreman "as Communist Party members."

Both these SRC officials were leading lights in the organization and direction of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Mr. Foreman was its president, according to records of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, while Aubrey Williams is listed as an ex-officio member of the controlling board of representatives of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

CLARK HOWELL FOREMAN

As editor Ralph McGill wrote in the Atlanta Constitution, the Southern Conference for Human Welfare was controlled and dominated by Communists from its inception, and for that reason, the southern editor claimed he got out of SCHW and helped expose his former fellow members.

Editor McGill wrote: "The Communist Party . . . did participate openly in the first Southern Conference for Human Welfare meeting in Birmingham. When this happened, I knew enough to get out and knew enough to know that the Southern Conference was finished even as it began.

"You cannot allow the Communists to

of every citizen. I want to hear it ring out again from our schools, our stages and our street corners. I want to make it the watchword of my administration.

We have every reason to be proud that we are Georgians.

Everywhere we look about us now we can see tangible evidence of the progress we have made working together. Blossoming throughout the State are new industries, schools, hospitals, institutions, highways and parks which five years ago were merely hopes and dreams.

I am proud of the part you have permitted me to play in this great development and, if you elect me your governor, I promise to carry out in your name a 10-Point Plan for Progress to complete these programs and embark upon even more impressive ones.

As Governor, I will maintain a segregated PUBLIC school system.

Before I will permit a single negro child to attend any white school in Georgia I gladly will go to jail and, if need be, conduct the business of the State from my cell for the duration of my entire term.

Not one cent of state money will be approved to pay the salaries of any white teacher who teaches Negro pupils, any Negro teacher who teaches white pupils or any white or Negro school principal or superintendent responsible for such a situation arising. By executive order any pupil thus temporarily dislocated will be permitted to attend any other public school for his or her race until the racial status quo can be restored in the original classroom.

The Georgia Constitution and statutes give the Governor sufficient authority to take such action. And, so long as he stands firm in such a resolve, nothing short of impeachment can end his control of the situation.

The federal courts have no power to enforce their decrees except through citations for contempt. The only course they can take against a Governor refusing to buckle under their orders is to put him in jail. And such a prospect does not frighten me because I would consider it an honor to be placed behind bars to spare the people of Georgia the infamy of a court decision contrary to our state and federal constitutions and against the best interests and wishes of both races.

Two of my opponents have tried to ridicule me for taking this stand.

The sad truth, however, is that neither of them is willing to go all the way to maintain our traditions. One is the tool of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People which has sworn to destroy segregation. The other is a newspaperman who wrote two years ago that Georgians will have to abide by the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Only a man with the courage of his conviction can measure up to this threat and stop it. Men who trade with the NAACP, by virtue of that association, just want to mix the races. I don't and I don't believe you do either. Men who say they will "raise sand" and then bend cannot be depended upon to keep our institution separate and prevent a calamity from befalling our state.

The Office of Governor is the key to maintaining segregation. A strong governor who will stand firm and refuse to yield, a man who will exhaust plan after plan to take recourse after recourse, can keep what we have the way we have it. A weak governor afraid of his shadow and bought by alien pressures can be expected not only to bow to the Court but also to help it enforce its decrees.

Coupled with our determination to protect our traditions we must take positive steps to provide every child in Georgia adequate school facilities. We must continue without letup the vast school construction program begun by the State School Building Authority under my direction.

We must strengthen and expand vocational education and provide a safe and adequate transportation system. We must carry out all provisions of the Minimum Foundation Program and strive to provide an adequate salary for every teacher. We must back the Board of Regents in its policies and promote the growth in our University System of professional services, research and teacher training.

The white people of Georgia have for a generation carried the burden of improving the lot of our colored citizens. We must continue to do so and in all things play fair with them. But they, in turn, must play fair with us who are willing to bear our heavy tax load indefinitely in order to assure them of equal facilities and opportunities. Both races must take a sensible, practical approach to the problems we face within the framework of our accepted pattern of separate, but equal, facilities.

Maintaining segregation is the principle issue in this campaign. And the people of Georgia, before deciding for whom they will cast their ballots, should ask themselves this question—"Who can be trusted to preserve segregation: Marvin Griffin and M. E. Thompson who will not go to jail to keep it or Fred Hand who will go to jail before ending it?"

With Fred Hand as your Governor you will never pay any tolls or fees to travel on the highways of our State. My administration will build a free road system open to every citizen of and visitor to Georgia. It will be administered by a nonpolitical board elected by the General Assembly as now. I will emphasize improvement of all major highways. I also will press for the rapid completion of the post road system and give priority to work on all school bus, mail and farm-to-market routes.

No federal funds will be lost through failure of the State to match them. There will be no interference with the constitutional allocation of road revenues to the State Highway Department. Road grants to counties will be continued.

The health of our citizens is our greatest resource. To protect it our program of constructing local hospitals and health centers will be continued on the present Hill-Burton Act basis. All programs for the eradication of disease, particularly those aimed against Tuberculosis, cancer and heart and contagious diseases, will be pushed with renewed vigor.

The provision for our aged citizens is a primary obligation of the State. I recognized that obligation as the co-author of the first old-age pension bill ever introduced in the Georgia Legislature. I feel even more strongly about it now and, as governor, will insist that this great debt be generously repaid as rapidly as funds are available.

It makes me mad to hear of old people being rudely treated and embarrassed by state and county welfare workers. One of the first things I will do as Chief Executive will be to demand that recipients of old-age benefits be accorded the courtesy and respect to which their years spent in building Georgia entitle them. Each person seeking and receiving any form of welfare aid will be given individual attention in the spirit of sympathy and humanity and no one will be considered merely a case number.

Our state institutions have been elevated from sources of shame to objects of pride. All of them will be improved and expanded.

Too long the hard work, hardships and heartaches of our farmers have gone unrewarded and I intend, if you elect me governor, to do something about it. To encourage a profitable swine industry, I will provide free hog serum to farmers to be administered by qualified veterinarians under the direction of the Department of Agriculture. A program to eradicate Bang's Disease and tuberculosis among cattle will be carried out. Programs of research to advance poultry, livestock and agriculture will be promoted and expanded.

Knowing the great wealth which comes from our forests, my administration will make the state forest fire program available to all counties. And to protect Georgia's fish and wildlife resources, laws and enforcement methods will be strengthened and I will cooperate with the State Game and Fish Commission in replenishing our streams and forests with fish and wildlife.

To better serve veterans, procedures of the State Department of Veterans' Service will be streamlined to eliminate present confusion and red tape. Further, after consulting with veterans' organizations, I will appoint a director of that Department who shall devote his full time and efforts to helping veterans rather than promoting his own political interests.

I believe in the county unit system and my record shows I have never deviated from that belief. I have vigorously defended it, both as a candidate and as a private citizen. As long as I am Governor, it will never be abolished.

Georgia faces grave financial problems during the next four years and the state government will be financially strained to meet our obligations. The only way to prevent a deficit is through better administration of the state's affairs. But the situation will require a man who has business sense—one who knows the problems of meeting a payroll and who recognizes a ledger sheet when he sees one.

As your Governor, I will give you a clean, honest, business-like and efficient administration. I will demand a full day's work for a day's pay and will eliminate all deadwood from the State payroll.

I will insist upon a dollar's value for every dollar spent. There will be no favoritism in state purchasing.

I will advocate no new taxes but will collect all taxes due.

Automobile tags will be sold at the county courthouse as a matter of convenience and economy.

All savings realized through efficiency of operation and all normal increases in revenue will be applied toward expanded state services in the order of their importance in the lives of Georgians.

I will lend every resource of the State to the encouragement of new industries to locate in Georgia and to expand existing industries. I will encourage the State Department of Commerce in its program to attract industry and tourists to Georgia. I will work with labor and management for improved harmonious relations.

Communism is our greatest threat, not only from without but also from within. Communism and Communistic movements will be fought wherever they rear their unholy heads in this State.

I will also utilize the full powers of the Offices of Governor and Attorney General, the Georgia Bureau of Investigation and the Highway Patrol to wipe out the numbers racket and any type of gangsterism and racketeering found in Georgia. I am determined there will be no Phenix City to smear the fair name of our State. I will recommend that the General Assembly put loan sharks out of business and assure people in need the opportunity to borrow at the legal rate of interest.

And last I will continue unswervingly loyal to the party of our fathers, I am proud of my record of being a 100 per cent Georgia Democrat. I am proud of the fact that in 1952 — while my opponents were talking about third parties, supporting the Republican nominees and yelling, "We Ain't Got Nobody"—I was working for the candidates of the Democratic Party of Georgia.

I always have been a Georgia Democrat. I am now a Georgia Democrat. I always will be a Georgia Democrat.

The only office for which I am a candidate is the office of Governor. If elected, I will not seek any other office for the duration of my term.

As Governor, I will appoint delegates to the 1956 Democratic National Convention who have proved by their past records their ability and determination to wage an aggressive fight to maintain states' rights and our southern traditions. Our state will never again be embarrassed by having advocates of Henry Wallace and his like control the Georgia delegation.

These are the things you will vote for when you vote for Fred Hand for Governor of Georgia.

These are the things which will be done if Fred Hand is elected your Governor.

The future beckons to us, my friends.

With the help of Almighty God let us join hands and surge forth in a mighty tide of public sentiment to rid Georgia once and for all of repudiated politicians and seize for ourselves, our children and our children's children the bright future which rightfully is ours.

go along with you in any organization. If they espouse the same principles, then let them do it on their own. To admit them to membership or companionship is fatal —as the SCHW has learned."

Communist Front

The SCHW which was succeeded by the Southern Regional Council, was branded as a communist front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. The congressional investigating group said of SCHW:

"In the light of the fact that a significant number of the leading lights of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare is associated with organizations of campaigns for the defense of the Communist Party or individual Communists, or with organizations defending the Soviet Union, or its policies—issues which have nothing to do with the South—one is forced to the conclusion that, by and large, the common bond among its supporters is a certain degree of sympathy for the Soviet Union and/or the Communist Party, rather than any primary interest in human welfare in the South. One is further forced to conclude that the professed interest in southern welfare is simply an expedient for larger aims serving the Soviet Union and its subservient Communist Party in the United States."

Clark Howell Foreman

According to records of the special committee on Tax Free Institutions, Louis Budenz, a reformed Communist Party member, testified on December 23, 1952 that Clark Howell Foreman, once president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and a director of the Southern Regional Council, "was a Communist Party member."

It will be recalled that Foreman was treasurer of the Henry Wallace Progressive Party and has been a leader of many officially cited fronts. Here is part of his record: Regional chairman, National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions, the Communist Party's top cultural front; sponsor of the American Slav Congress, Bill of Rights Conference, National Committee to Defeat the Mundt Bill, Civil Rights Congress, and the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace.

Aubrey Williams, who has been listed as a member of the board of directors of the Southern Regional Council and was a key official in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, was recently nailed as a known Communist before a Senate committee.

Charges made at Probe

The charges were made at a hearing conducted by Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) for the U. S. Senate Internal Security Committee by Paul Crouch, a former high official and organizer for the American Communist Party and now an agent for the U. S. Immigration Service, and John Butler, a Dallas, Texas, nursery operator.

They made charges against Aubrey W. Williams, president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., and director of the National Youth Administration during the early terms of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt; Dr. James A. Dombrowski, executive director of the SCEF; Clifford J. Durr, a Montgomery, Ala., attorney and former FCC member; Miami Attorney Leo Scheiner; Miami Contractor Max Schlafrock; and Mrs. Durr, sister-in-law of U. S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black.

Williams, Dombrowski and the Durrs categorically denied any red affiliations under oath. Scheiner and Schlafrock invoked the self-incriminatory clauses of the Fifth Amendment as grounds for refusing to answer questions regarding their background and activities.

Citations Possible

Senator Eastland said contempt citations or perjury charges may be brought by the full committee to determine whether the accused or the accusers lied under oath and punish those who refused to answer questions. He said the hearings will be continued in Birmingham in June.

Williams, editor of the Southern Farm and Home Magazine published at Montgomery, Ala., objected to testifying on grounds that the subpoena against him was issued in violation of the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press. He was questioned regarding his affiliation with the Southern Negro Youth Congress, the Workers Alliance, the American Committee for the Foreign Born, the American Youth Congress, the Civil Rights Congress, the Civil Rights Committee, the Atlantic Pact, the Mid-Century Conference for Peace, the National Negro Congress, the American Crusade to End Lynching, the East Information Center, the Progressive Citizens of America, and the World Peace Appeal.

He replied that he was "a sponsor of many things." He said he could "not recall" any identification with most of them. He acknowledged affiliation with the Progressive Citizens of America, the Civil Rights Congress and the Civil Rights Committee but said he had asked his name be stricken from the membership of the latter.

AUBREY WILLIAMS

Asked, "Are you now or have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?" Williams replied: "No, never."

Asked, "have you ever accepted Communist discipline?" he answered: "No, never knowingly."

He passed up the question — "Do you still think that it is all right for a Communist to be employed by the United States Government?"

Crouch, when asked "During the time of your membership in the Communist Party, did you have an occasion to make the acquaintance of Williams?" answered: "Yes, sir. I met him several times. The first meeting with Williams was in the Department of Commerce in Washington. There I met him in the rear of the platform at a meeting. I was introduced to Williams by Herman Benjamin, a charter member of the Communist Party and one of the chief national leaders.

"At that meeting I was introduced as the district organizer and vice president of the Unemployed League. I talked to him about the Unemployed Leagues. Mr. Williams said something to me about the merger giving a powerful organization.

"On the second occasion I met him it was in Birmingham in connection with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. That was at the city auditorium, in 1938, I believe. At that time Williams was passing through.

"During the conversation I reported to Williams on the concentration of the Workers' Alliance and the Farmers' Union and the work being done. Williams asked the questions and commented but I don't remember what he said enough to quote him."

Former Red Testifies

Butler testified he had been introduced to Williams by Alton Lawrence, communist labor union leader, while attending the Southern Negro Youth Conference with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in 1942. He quoted Lawrence as saying, "I want you to meet Comrade Williams."

Butler said he met Williams at Bessemer, Ala.

"I heard his name mentioned time and time again as a Communist member," he testified.

Williams challenged Butler to make his statements outside the hearing room and subject himself to a libel suit. Butler said he would comply.

Butler further testified that he had met Dombrowski in Birmingham in July 1942.

Crouch then was asked: "Did Williams accept the discipline of the party?"

Crouch answered: "Williams' record shows that it always coincided with the interest of the party. I would not have made statements to him unless I had been informed that he was a secret member."

Aubrey Williams

The public records, files and publications of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities contain the following information concerning Aubrey Williams:

The Communist publication, the Daily Worker on May 20, 1947 (page 5), named Aubrey Williams as one of those who signed a statement of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; he was identified as publisher of the Southern Farmer, Montgomery, Alabama. According to the Worker (Sunday edition of the Daily Worker) for October 19, 1947 (page 3), Mr. Williams was Chairman of the Alabama Chapter of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; he also participated in the Second Southern Conference for Human Welfare which was held at Chattanooga, Tennessee, April 14-16, 1940 (see the Call to a Second Southern Conference . . .). He contributed to The Southern Patriot, official organ of the Southern Conference . . . , as shown by the issue of that publication for September 1947 (page 5).

Red-front Organization

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare has been cited as a Communist-front organization which received money from the Robert Marshall Foundation, one of the principal sources of funds by which many Communist fronts operate; and it "seeks to attract Southern liberals on the basis of its seeming interest in the problems of the South." (Report 1311 of the Special Committee on Un-American Activities dated March 29, 1944; and Report No. 592 of the Committee on Un-American activities dated June 12, 1947, respectively.)

Mr. Williams was one of the sponsors of the National Conference of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born, held in Cleveland, Ohio, October 25 and 26, 1947, as shown on the printed program and the Call to the conference. The American Committee for . . . has been cited as "one of the oldest auxiliaries of the Communist Party in the United States" (report of the Special Committee . . . dated March 29, 1944; also report dated June 25, 1942); the Attorney General of the United States cited the organization as subversive and Communist (letters to the Loyalty Review Board, released to the press June 1 and September 21, 1948; it was redesignated by Attorney General Brownell April 27, 1953, pursuant to Executive Order No. 10450).

In the Daily Worker of September 12, 1947 (pages 2 and 12), we find that "Aubrey Williams, former head of the National Youth Administration, assailed the steady offensive against civil liberties as an attempt 'to throw overboard such primary rights as the freedom to think and to hold whatever belief one chooses.' He cited as examples of the drive to destroy civil rights the jailing of Carl Marzani, the conviction of ten officers of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee on contempt of Congress and President Truman's 'loyalty' purge of government employees. '. . . we must take our stand and defend the rights of any Communist to maintain his position as an employee of the government of the U. S.,' Williams declared."

Williams Attacks Policy

Aubrey Williams was one of the "37 prominent Americans" who signed a statement to President Truman, charging that his (Truman's) policy in Germany is aiding Nazi war criminals and industrialists to climb back to their wartime places of power." (From the Daily Worker of January 28, 1948, page 10).

The Daily Worker of June 4, 1947 (page 4), reported that Mr. Williams made a speech against the "Red Scare." He was identified in this article as Editor of The Southern Farmer.

A leaflet "Calling Young People of New York to the New Model Legislature of Youth Meeting in New York City, January 28-30," and issued by the American Youth Congress, named Aubrey Williams as one of the speakers at that conference; he was identified as National Executive Director of the National Youth Administration.

American Youth Congress

The American Youth Congress "originated in 1934 and . . . has been controlled by Communists and manipulated by them to influence the thought of American youth" (the Attorney General of the United States in the Congressional Record of September 24, 1942, page 7685; also cited in re Harry Bridges, May 28, 1942, page 10); subsequently, the Attorney General cited the group as subversive and Communist (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; it was redesignated by Attorney General Brownell). The Special Committee cited it as "one of the principal fronts of the Communist Party" (reports of June 25, 1942; January 3, 1939; January 3, 1941; and March 29, 1944).

An advertisement in the publication PM on October 16, 1947 (page 5), contained the name of Aubrey Williams in a list of sponsors of a protest meeting for Howard Fast, which was to have been held in New York City on October 16 under the auspices of Masses & Mainstream, a Communist magazine.

It has been reported twice in the Daily Worker (June 27, 1950, page 2, and August 14, 1950, page 2), that Aubrey Williams, publisher, Montgomery, Alabama, signed the World Peace Appeal; he also signed the Stockholm Peace Pledge, according to the Daily People's World of June 28, 1950 (page 4). The World Peace Appeal and the Stockholm Peace Appeal have been cited as Communist enterprises (Report No. 378 of the Committee on Un-American Activities dated April 1, 1951).

Editor Southern Farmer

In the last-named report of the Committee which was devoted to The Communist "Peace" Offensive, Aubrey Williams was named as a member of the Executive Board of the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact. The source for this was cited as a letterhead of the group dated September 16, 1950.

Aubrey Williams, identified as editor of Southern Farmer, Birmingham, Alabama, was one of the sponsors of the Mid-Century Conference for Peace, May 29-30, 1950, in Chicago, Illinois, as shown in the "Peace" Offensive report of this Committee. Both the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives and the Mid-Century Conference for Peace were cited in the same report (dated April 1, 1951).

In testimony of Mr. Oliver Kenneth Goff, during public hearings before the Special Committee on Un-American Ac-

Atlanta newspapers said, or anybody else, he was going to turn out a great number of people who were then serving in the penitentiary.

My protest availed nothing. I finally found Governor Rivers late at night and it then was too late. But my efforts to prevent the issuing of this one pardon caused me to stumble into what was happening and the fact that Marvin Griffin told me himself that he intended to issue them and he didn't care what anybody said. At the time I saw Griffin the Governor was not in his office and I couldn't find him. Yet, they were being turned out by the basketful.

2. Governor Ellis Arnall got Marvin Griffin out of the Army in 1945 on the ground that he needed him to be Adjutant General of Georgia. He came back to Georgia and Governor Arnall appointed him as Adjutant General. Immediately he started running for Governor and was trying to run as the Arnall candidate.

Then, in 1946, I had a split with Arnall over the negro question and the question of doing away with the white primary. As a result I fought Governor Arnall's effort to amend the constitution so that he could succeed himself. During this fight, Marvin Griffin was on the other side and was supporting his boss, Governor Ellis Arnall.

Then after the legislature adjourned, I came back to Richmond County and ran for the legislature and made these issues again. We held an early primary in the spring of 1946. The newspapers and people called me a demagogue, a race hater and a race baiter because I tried to point out to them that we were headed for the situation in which we find ourselves today.

I was defeated in Richmond County. Practically every newspaper in the State was doing everything they could against me even though it was a local race. The Arnall Administration was dead set against me and so was Marvin Griffin.

When the summertime approached and it became time for candidates to run for Governor in 1946, Marvin Griffin went down to Bainbridge, Georgia, and opened his campaign for Governor in a speech to his home people. At that time he was running on the Arnall platform courting the support of the Arnall faction and the Arnall Administration.

A few days later, the Atlanta Journal printed his record on the pardon business and the Arnall Administration left him.

When Griffin found out what had happened, he then switched over to the Talmadge side. He announced for Lieutenant Governor on the Talmadge ticket as favoring the continuance of the white primary and the pattern of segregation. As soon as he found that the Arnall Administration wouldn't back him on the other side of the fence, he jumped over the fence immediately.

One week he was shouting the fact that Ellis Arnall was the greatest Governor we had ever had and was willing to run on the Arnall ticket. The next week, he had done a complete flip-flop and was shouting to high heaven to keep the white primary and segregation in Georgia.

He ran for Lieutenant Governor that same year and echoed everything that Eugene Talmadge said during that campaign. Eugene Talmadge was elected and Griffin was defeated. The Talmadge folks wouldn't take him then because his espousal of the Arnall cause was still fresh in their minds.

3. Herman Talmadge doesn't trust him.

For five years while he was Lieutenant Governor, he privately and publicly stated to all of his friends that Marvin Griffin could not be trusted. During this year, when he has talked to some of his friends about supporting Marvin he has always admitted that he could not be trusted, but at times he has thought maybe he was the best that the Talmadge crowd could do. But never yet has he said to a single person that he trusts Marvin Griffin. He knows that Marvin Griffin doublecrossed Ed Rivers and Ellis Arnall. He knows eventually, if Marvin Griffin gets a chance, he will also doublecross Herman Talmadge.

4. The Talmadge leaders at the State Capitol do not trust him. Tom Linder is one of the oldest Talmadge men in the Capitol. Tom Linder and a little handful of people elected Eugene Talmadge Commissioner of Agriculture the first time he was elected.

When Talmadge ran the first time, he was practically unknown, but Tom Linder and this little group had been in the legislature a long time and they were well known. They went out on a limb and went all the way to elect Talmadge and they stayed with him throughout the years.

There can be added to this list such Talmadge stalwarts as Charlie Redwine, the State Revenue Commissioner; James S. Peters, Chairman of the Democratic Party; James L. Gillis, Chairman of the State Highway Department; and Robert Warren, Director of the State Board of Corrections.

There are hundreds of others in lesser positions who share the same opinion. They say that he cannot be trusted and they are not willing to go along with him.

5. Griffin has surrounded himself with a little group of men who, like buzzards circling around a dead carcass, are hoping for his election so that they can work on the State Purchasing Department just like a bunch of buzzards work on a dead carcass. I know their names and most of the people in public life in Georgia know their names. It is well known that if Griffin should accidentally be elected governor that they would pull off through the Purchasing Department the biggest swindle that has ever been pulled in Georgia. They have the machinery set up if such should happen.

Agenda:

1. Literature and Review, J. Starobin
2. Christian Conference
5. Berea Conference, G. Green

Berea Conference.—Made up of 165 registered delegates and a number of visitors, including thirty people from Government agencies in Washington. The conference was good from the point of view that it was more representative of the composition of the youth of the nation . . . The most important speech delivered was that of Aubrey Williams giving an analysis and presenting the young people with the problem of solving the situation. The conference was surprising in the sense that there was 'leftism' from some other centers . . . The conference was divided into two main sessions: 1. Preparations for the Model Youth Community; 2. The World Youth Congress . . . " (Public Hearings, Volume 9, page 5679.)

Clark Howell Foreman

Records of the House Committee investigating Un-American Activities also contain a lengthy documentation on the communist-front activities of Clark Howell Foreman.

References to Clark Foreman are contained on pages 1, 7, 11, and 14 of the Report on Southern Conference for Human Welfare dated June 12, 1947, a copy of which is enclosed for your information.

The "Southern Patriot," official organ of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, listed Clark Foreman as President of that organization during 1947-1948. (See the "Southern Patriot" dated December 1946, p. 8). He was further identified as president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare on a letterhead of that organization dated June 4, 1947; an undated leaflet, "The South Is Closer Than You Think," (received about February, 1947); and the "Daily Worker" of June 24, 1947, page 3.

Paul Crouch's Testimony

The testimony of Paul Crouch during public hearings before the Committee on Un-American Activities, May 6, 1949, reveals the following:

"Mr. Mandel. Was there any indication of subsidy for the work of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare?

"Mr. Crouch. Yes. The district of Alabama at all times received varying degrees of subsidy from the central committee in New York. In 1938 additional grants were made * * * because of the expenses incurred by the Alabama district in its organizational work to build the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

"Prior to the Southern Conference, there was a small committee, with headquarters in Birmingham, which included as its leading members Joseph S. Gelders, Communist Party Leader in Birmingham * * *.

"Mr. Mandel. Was Clark Howell Foreman in that group?

"Mr. Crouch. He came into it later.

"Mr. Wheeler. Do you have evidence regarding the membership of Clark Howell Foreman in the Communist Party?

"Mr. Crouch. I have no evidence of his membership in the Communist Party. I have spoken to him frequently. He knew I was an official in the Communist Party, and he was very anxious to discuss policy and so on, and he impressed me as being anxious to carry out the policies of the party. * * * p. ca 190)

Southern "Liberals"

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was cited by the Special Committee on Un-American Activities as a "Communist front which received money from the Robert Marshall Foundation, one of the principal sources of funds by which many Communist fronts operate." (See Report dated March 29, 1944, page 147).

The Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities, in its Report No. 592, June 12, 1947, cited it as a Communist-front organization "which seeks to attract southern liberals on the basis of its seeming interest in the problems of the South" although its "professed interest in southern welfare is simply an expedient for larger aims serving the Soviet Union and its subservient Communist Party in the United States."

Clark Foreman was a sponor of a Testimonial Dinner held at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York October 12, 1947 under the auspices of the American Slav Congress as shown on the program dated October 12, 1947, page 2. The American Slav Congress was cited as "subversive and Communist" by former Attorney General Tom Clark in lists furnished the Loyalty Review Board, released to the press by the U. S. Civil Service Commission June 1, 1948 and September 21, 1948.

Civil Rights Congress

Among his other Communist affiliations is the Civil Rights Congress, of which organization he was a member of the initiating committee as disclosed in Report of the Civil Rights Congress released by the Committee on Un-American Activities on September 2, 1947 (page 21). It was pointed out on page 19 of the Report that "It is worthy of note that subsequent to the formation of the Civil Rights Congress in Detroit on April 27-28, 1946, and the enlistment of additional sponsors, the names of a number of members of the initiating committee, having served their decoy purposes, disappeared from the organization's letterhead, among them being * * * Clark Foreman * * * .This seems to be a favorable device of Communist front organizations."

Dr. Foreman signed an Open Letter to Congress urging defeat of the Mundt bill as shown on letterhead of the Civil Rights Congress, dated May 7, 1948. He was a sponsor of a Civil Rights Congress meeting as reported in the Communist newspaper, the "Daily Worker" of January 19, 1949 (p. 10); one of the additional sponsors of a Bill of Rights Conference, New York City, as listed on the "Call" dated July 16-17, 1949 (p. 5). He spoke at meetings of the Congress on three separate occasions. (See "Daily Worker" of December 13, 1948, (page 6); January 13, 1949 (page 2); and January 18, 1949(page 11).

The Civil Rights Congress was cited as subversive and Communist by former Attorney General Tom Clark. (See letters to the Loyalty Review Board, released December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948).

Other Commie Fronts

The Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities (Report No. 1115, September 2, 1947, pp. 2 and 19) characterized the Civil Rights Congress as "an organization formed in April 1946 as a merger of two other communist-front organizations (International Labor Defense and the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties); dedicated not to the broader issues of civil liberties, but specifically to the defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party and controlled by individuals who are either members of the Communist Party or openly loyal to it."

The "Daily People's World," official organ of the Communist Party on the west. coast, in its September 10, 1948 (p. 3) issue, announced that Clark Foreman was a supporter of the National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions. A letterhead of that organization (received January 1949) listed him as regional chairman; and the Conference program (p. 14) identified him as a sponsor of the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace, New York City, March 25-27, 1949, which was held under the auspices of the National Council of Arts, Sciences and Professions.

A review of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace prepared and released by the Committee on Un-American activities, April 19, 1949 (p. 19) pointed out that "A tabulation of the numerous Communist-front affiliations of the sponsors of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace shows the following interesting figures: Two hundred and seventy have been affiliated with from one to ten Communist-front organizations, and include * * * Clark Foreman * * *. "Miscellaneous activities in support of Communist Party or Young Communist League (total 63): * * * Clark Foreman * * * ." (page 39. "The following list of sponsors of the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace * * * was given out by the National Council of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions, sponsor of the conference * * * Clark Foreman. * * * " (p. 58).

Under False Colors

The National Council of the Arts, Sciences, and Professions was described in the following manner by the Committee on Un-American Activities in its Review of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace, Page 1:

> "Parading under the imposing title of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace the gathering at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York City on March 25, 26, and 27, 1949, was actually a super-mobilization of the inveterate wheelhorses and supporters of the Communist Party and its auxiliary organizations. * * * pyramiding into one inflated front the names which had time and again been used by the Communists as decoys for the entrapment of innocents."

Clark Foreman was associated with the Win the Peace Conference in various capacities as revealed by the following sources: Chairman, Sunday Morning Session, Washington, D. C., April 4, 5-7, 1946 (Summary of the Proceedings, page 6); vice-chairman, National Committee (letterhead dated June 1, 1946); vice-chairman, National Committee (New York Committee Call to a Win the Peace Conference, June 28 and 29, 1946); sponsor, (letterhead dated February 28, 1946); sponsor ("Daily Worker," March 5, 1946); sponsor ("A Call to a Win-the-Peace Conference," National Press Building, Washington, D. C., April 4, 6-7, 1946); presided and spoke ("Daily Worker," April 8, 1946 (page 3); signed statement ("Daily Worker," May 9, 1946 (page 3).

Fake Peace Conference

The Win the Peace Conference was held in Washington, D. C., April 5-7, 1946, and had among its sponsors numerous Communists and fellow-travelers of the Communist Party, as well as some reputable citizens, congressmen and senators.

Out of this Conference evolved the National Committee to Win the Peace, with Paul Robeson and the late Evans Carlson as co-chairmen. These two individuals, together with Julius Emspak, Bartley Crum and Jo Davidson, are credited with having taken the first steps toward establishing the National Committee to Win the Peace, which organization was cited as "subversive and Communist" by former Attorney General Tom Clark in letters to the Loyalty Review Board and released to the press Dcember 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948.

A statement of Dr. Clark Foreman was published in the "Daily Worker," of May 27, 1947 (page 3). He attacked the purge of Communists in the film industry according to the November 27, 1947 (page 2) issue of the same paper. His photograph and biography appeared in the "Daily People's World," of April 27, 1948(page 4).

6. Griffin cannot be trusted on the subject of segregation.

Now, why do I say this?

When the last convention of the Democratic Party in Georgia was held in Macon in 1950 it adopted a resolution stating that if the Supreme Court of the United States decided the segregation cases against us that Georgia would not consider the decision binding on Georgia, and that we would continue segregation of the races regardless of what the Supreme Court said.

Now, I introduced that resolution in the convention myself. It was prepared under Governor Talmadge's instructions and handed to me at the convention by either Governor Talmadge or the person whom he had to prepare it. At Governor Talmadge's suggestion, I introduced this resolution and it was unanimously adopted by the convention of five thousand Democrats.

Now, as soon as we adopted this resolution, Federal Judge A. B. Conger, in his charge to the Federal Grand Jury in Columbus berated and denounced the resolution and the convention for adopting it.

Now mind you, this was a convention which nominated Governor Herman Talmadge for Governor and Marvin Griffin for Lieutenant Governor.

Then on September 14, 1950 Marvin Griffin, writing in his newspaper, the Post Searchlight, at Bainbridge, said "Judge Conger was within his rights in commenting on it."

He further said that the State of Georgia would be forced to bend under to the Supreme Court if it decided against us. Here is what he said in this editorial:

"In the first place, Georgia will have to abide by the decisions of the United States Supreme Court. We will buck and raise sand and say we won't, but in the end we will have to bend under. Those who drafted the resolution know that, and suffice it to say, we do not believe any of the authors want to go to jail."

Now, that's Marvin Griffin talking four years ago. He had just been elected for a four-year term and fresh from victory he didn't know he would have to face an adverse decision of the Supreme Court in 1954.

Now, when Marvin Griffin was talking in this editorial he was talking for himself. Now, he predicted then that if the decision went against us that he would "raise sand and say we won't." Now he is raising sand and saying we won't just like he predicted four years ago.

But he put a "but" in his editorial. Here's the "but":

". . . . but in the end we will have to bend under."

Now, do you want a governor who is hypocritical enough to say that he will for a time be "raising sand and say we won't" and then do what he said he wouldn't do?

Now, he predicted in 1950 that in 1954 he would be raising sand and saying we won't bend under. Well, ain't he doing it?

So, Marvin is doing exactly what he said he would do in 1950.

Now, if you elect him Governor he will do just exactly what he said in 1950 he would do. And what did he say he would do? He said ". . . . but in the end we will have to bend under."

Now that's the kind of candidate for Governor Marvin Griffin is.

He's changed colors more often and more rapidly than these lizzards you see on a rail fence changing colors in the sunlight.

How can you trust a man like that on the question of segregation?

Those are some of the reasons why we say that Marvin Griffin cannot be trusted as Governor of Georgia.

In his editorial he said that the authors of that resolution would not want to go to jail. Well, none of us wants to go to jail. But those of us who signed that resolution in 1950 in effect said to the world that we were willing to go to jail if it was necessary to keep segregation in Georgia.

Now Fred Hand was one of the authors of that resolution in 1950. Fred Hand hasn't changed his colors like a lizzard on the rail. Fred Hand still says that he is not only willing, but that he will go to jail.

When Herman Talmadge gave us that resolution to introduce in 1950 he meant that he was willing to go to jail and he wanted the Democrats of Georgia to go on record as saying that they would go to jail.

Now, Marvin Griffin was at that same convention. He didn't have nerve enough to raise his voice against this resolution. Yet, as soon as he got home he criticized the resolution and said that the authors were wrong and that we would be forced to "bend under" and surrender to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Do you think now that he can be trusted?

From time to time, we will give you some other reasons why we think he cannot be trusted.

National Association Of Attorneys General Turns Down Brownell Because Of Contemptuousness, Sneak Methods

Cook Writes Master Indictment Of Tom Dewey's Stooge In Eisenhower's Cabinet

Eugene Cook, Attorney General of Georgia, says the reason he did not invite U. S. Attorney General Brownell to speak to the State Attorneys General was due to his "frequent ill-advised and sometimes irresponsible ruthless political conduct."

In a letter to Attorney General Nathaniel L. Goldstein, of New York, Cook said:

Knowing as I did the close political alliance between you, Mr. Brownell and Governor Dewey, I expected you to object to my action, but I am constrained to say that I was deeply disturbed and disappointed in the tone of your protest.

You express the view that my motive was to establish a policy of vetoing speeches at our conferences if the personality or subject matter should be controversial. This is not a fair or true deduction. I firmly favor free and unrestrained debate on major public matters of legal consequence at all of our conferences. I have always been a strong advocate of the Association's policy of releasing to the public the contents of resolutions of major importance, though they sometimes are without a unanimity of approval.

Our disagreement as to Mr. Brownell does not involve a question of vetoing or restraining debate on controversial issues within our group. It is rather a matter of whether it would be in the best interest of the Association and the Mississippi Conference to have him as a principal speaker under the circumstances.

It is my firm opinion that Mr. Brownell's frequent ill-advised and sometimes irresponsible ruthless political conduct has done irreparable damage to our efforts to promote better Federal-State relations, which is the present major objective on our agenda.

I shall relate as briefly as possible substantially what I said in regard to this matter in a public address to a Civic Club in Albany, Georgia, on June 23rd. This meeting, by the way, was attended by one press reporter whose local account of my remarks was considerably more accurate and elaborate than those quoted in your letter. My reference to Mr. Brownell was in response to an appropriate inquiry by several members of the Club.

1. I stated that Mr. Brownell deeply offended most of the Attorneys General of the Southern States when he officially intervened in the U. S. Supreme Court's school segregation cases. This observation was made after conferring with several Southern Attorneys General and with whom I concurred in the determination that his official intervention was highly improper, because:

(a) The suits were instituted by a private corporation and embraced a vicious attack upon the integrity of

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

Some serious charges have been made in the present campaign against my friend, Fred Hand.

They are of such a nature until I feel it my duty to defend him.

Now, here are the charges:

1. They say he parts his hair in the middle.
2. They say he has a mustache.
3. They accuse him of being rich.
4. They condemn him for having the support of the Atlanta newspapers.
5. They sarcastically say that he is the best man in the race, but he can't win.

Now, I have scoured all over Georgia and these are the only charges that I find they have been making against Fred Hand up until this time.

I have been in politics and watching politics for forty years. This is the first time in forty years that I can find that the enemy couldn't find something to accuse a man of more serious than this.

I am reminded of a young fellow who came to see me once and said he wanted to run for Governor. I asked him if he didn't think they would accuse him of being too young. He replied: "Wouldn't you rather be accused of being too young than some other things they might accuse you of?"

Certainly, if I were Fred Hand I would rather be accused of these things than some of the things with which they are charging the other candidates.

Now, since these charges against Fred are so serious, I would like to take them up one at a time and defend him.

1. Let's take up the parting of the hair first.

Now I have been thrown with Fred Hand a lot during the past three weeks and after looking him over, I reached the conclusion that the hair on top of his head is so thin until the middle is the only place he could part it.

2. They say he is rich and we shouldn't have a rich man as Governor.

Well, he isn't as rich as they say he is. I happen to know that for a fact. His father started a big business in Pelham many years ago. Fred owns a minority interest in the business and is general manager and runs the business. At the same time, he has a farm and farms. It is true that he is well fixed, but he isn't a millionaire and he isn't what you call rich. There are plenty of people in every town in Georgia with more money than Fred Hand has.

But the fact that he is lucky enough to own a small part in a big business doesn't disqualify him for being governor. The fact that he has been able to successfully carry on and maintain this business through the years of the depression and all the other times and make a success of it, eminently qualifies him to handle the state's business where the next governor will handle at least a billion dollars in a four-year period.

At least Fred Hand is well off enough to where it wouldn't be necessary for him to be trying to get rich while he is governor like so many others have done.

The twenty-two years that he has been in the legislature and the eight years he has been Speaker of the House have proven to the people of Georgia that he would not use his office to enrich himself.

New York Post Says Mitchell "The Man Talmadge Fears," About Segregation

A former high official of the Communist-front Southern Conference for Human Welfare is today Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council.

This disclosure came as a part of the series in which the AUGUSTA COURIER is exposing the Ford-Foundation-Financed Southern Regional Council, as a haven for Communists and Communist-fronters.

Dr. George S. Mitchell now heads SRC as its executive director. It has been exposed by this newspaper as the successor to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare which was branded a Communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

24 On Board of Directors

We have uncovered the startling fact that besides Dr. Mitchell, a total of twenty-four high officials of SCHW now are on the board of directors of SRC.

We have shown that at least thirty-eight officers, members of the executive staff, or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records or association with multifarious organizations, which have been cited as Communist-fronts by either the Attorney General of the United States or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

Last week, the COURIER carried a detailed expose' showing that two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as known Communists in testimony before Congressional Committees by former associates in the party.

DISCRIMINATION

The NAACP agitators say that it is discrimination against the negro race to segregate the whites and the blacks.

It is difficult to follow this line of reasoning. We have never yet seen a white man who thought that he was discriminated against because he was separated from the negroes.

Now, where is there any discrimination in separating the negroes from the whites?

If it is discrimination against the negroes to segregate them from the whites it likewise would be discrimination against the whites to separate them from the negroes. But it is mighty strange that no white man thinks that he is discriminated against by such separation or segregation.

Now if it isn't discrimination against the whites, where in the name of common sense do we get the idea that it is discrimination against the negroes?

Yet, the Supreme Court of the United States has agreed with the NAACP agitators. They say that it is discrimination against the negro children not to let them go to school with the white children.

The court did not go so far as to say that it was a discrimination against the white children.

It certainly seems that what's good for the goose ought to be good for the gander. If it discrimination against one, it is a discrimination against the other. But neither the NAACP nor the agitators nor the Supreme Court claims discrimination against the whites.

The psychologists to which the Supreme Court referred said that to separate the negro children from the white children made the negro children feel inferior. It is strange that it does not have the same effect on the white children. And it is very peculiar that the psychologists didn't say that segregation isn't causing the white children to develop any inferiority complex.

Now, how is it that this strange situation occurs?

Evidently the NAACP agitators and the Supreme Court hold to the view that there is no advantage accruing to the white children by being mixed in the same classrooms with the negro children. Evidently they think there is a decided advantage accruing to the negro children for the mixing.

Now that gets down to a right ridiculous position.

One of my close lawyer friends has a lot more money than I have. He has the advantage of more money than I have. Now, following this logic, we ought to take this money away from him and give it to me so that he and I will be equal and I wouldn't be embarrassed by associating with him by knowing that he has more money than I have.

And of course that philosophy gets back to the story of the Irishman who was a communist and favored dividing up everything equally. When they got down to dividing up the goats the old Irishman objected to dividing up the goats because he had a goat.

It seems to me that the white man ought to have some rights. The white children ought to have some rights. Some consideration ought to be given to their welfare.

Why should the white children be crucified just to help the negro children? Why shouldn't the negro children help themselves?

Evidently, the negro agitators think that there is a definite advantage to be gained for the negro children by throwing them in the same classroom with the white children and they are after taking away from the white children for the benefit of the negro children.

Evidently, the agitators are ashamed of their own race and the whole effort to destroy segregation is based upon that one fact.

Otherwise, the NAACP agitators wouldn't feel that they are discriminated against because no white man has ever felt inferior to the negro because he was segregated.

Following the logic of the NAACP agitators, then it is outright discrimination to force the white children into the same classrooms with the negro children.

"BENDING UNDER" AND BEGGING THE COURT'S "PARDON"

and others incorporated SRC, not only held a high post in the "red" dominated Southern Conference for Human Welfare but his name also has been linked to other Communist-fronts, according to reports and records of Congressional Committees.

It is in this atmosphere that a recent $240,000.00 grant made by the Ford Foundation to SRC is being spent to destroy segregation in the South.

Authorities on combatting Communism and its menace to our form of government express the fear that the Southern Regional Council could well become the Communist Party apparatus in the South, infiltrated as it is by persons with known records of association with Communists and Communist-front groups.

Rosenwald Fund Aid

Formerly, the Southern Regional Council was financed in the main by substantial grants from the Rosenwald Fund Foundation.

The Rosenwald Fund devoted its major activities, according to a statement made by Dr. Lessing J. Rosenwald, of Philadelphia, Chairman of its Board of Trustees, "to creation of equality between whites and negroes and to the promotion of interracial relations in the South."

Activity of Rosenwald Fund workers in the South during the late 30's and 40's was the first large-scale frontal attack on segregation.

The Rosenwald Fund also financed in part the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, an organization now defunct, but branded as a Communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

Mitchell Comes To Georgia

With the demise of the Rosenwald Fund, the Southern Regional Council lately has been existing on grants from individuals and certain out-of-state groups.

Since 1947, Dr. Mitchell has headed up the Council as its Executive Director. Born in Richmond, Virginia, he came to Georgia in 1944 after lengthy federal government service in the Department of Interior, Department of Agriculture and Foreign Economic Administration during the New Deal years.

His first job after coming to Atlanta was Southeastern Regional Director of the CIO-Political Action Committee from which he became Director of Veterans Service of the Southern Regional Council.

Like the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, the principal aim of the Southern Regional Council, since its formation, has been directed toward the complete elimination of segregation in Georgia and the South. That policy has been stated repeatedly in literature issued by the organization. It looks forward to an amalgamated region with no color distinction.

Statement of Policy

Excerpts from the Council's avowed statement of policy follow:

"The South of the future, toward which our efforts are directed, is a South freed of stultifying inheritance from the past. It is a South where . . . segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and will no longer be imposed . . . We have no illusion that it can be realized in the South quickly or easily or perfectly. Nor do we imagine that the Southern Regional Council can play more than a modest but creditable part towards its achievement. Yet it is the ideal toward which we have a duty to remain dissatisfied, for it is nothing else than the American ideal."

A list of active officers of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare was published in the SOUTHERN PATRIOT, official organ of that organization, in its issue of December 1948. The list included the name of Dr. George S. Mitchell on its top-level "Board of Representatives."

Committee's Report

Branding the Southern Conference for Human Welfare a Communist-front, the House Committee on Un-American Activities, in its report on that organization dated June 12, 1947 concluded:

"In the light of the fact that a significant number of the leading lights of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare are associated with organizations or campaigns for the defense of the Communist Party or individual Communists, or with organizations defending the Soviet Union, or its policies — issues which have nothing to do with the South—one is forced to the conclusion that, by and large, the common bond among its supporters is a certain degree of sympathy for the Soviet Union and/or the Communist Party, rather than any primary interest in human welfare in the South. One is further forced to conclude that the professed interest in Southern welfare is simply an expedient for larger aims serving the Soviet Union and its subservient Communist Party in the United States."

From records and official reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Actvities, the name George S. Mitchell is identified with other Communist-front causes.

Civil Rights Congress

An announcement of the Civil Rights Congress, held in Detroit, Michigan, April 27 and 28, 1946, lists Dr. George S. Mitchell, Director of Veterans Service of the Southern Regional Council, as one of the sponsors of the congress.

According to citations by official government agencies of organizations found to be Communist-fronts, prepared and released by the Committee on Un-American Activities, the Civil Rights Congress of Michigan was cited as subversive by Attorney General Tom Clark in a letter to the Loyalty Review Board released on June 1, 1948.

In commenting on the Civil Rights Congress, the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities in its Report No. 1115, issued September 2, 1947, pp. 2 and 19, said that the group was "dedicated not to the broader issue of civil liberties, but specifically to a defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party" and "controlled by individuals who are either members of the Communist Party or openly loyal to it."

An advertisement which appeared in the NEW YORK TIMES of April 1, 1946 contained a statement opposing the use of injunctions in labor disputes.

This advertisement was prepared by the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties. One of the signers of this appeal was George S. Mitchell, economist, of Atlanta.

Citations by official government agencies of organizations found to be Communist or Communist-fronts, prepared and released by the Committee on Un-American Activities, brands the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties as "one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party" and gives the following citations:

"1. Cited as subversive and Communist. (Attorney General Tom Clark, letters to Loyalty Review Board, released December 4, 1947, and September 21, 1948.)

"2. 'Part of what Lenin called the solar system of organizations, ostensibly having no connection with the Communist Party, by which Communists attempt to create sympathizers and supporters of their program. It was established as a result of a conference on constitutional liberties held in Washington, D. C., June 7-9, 1940.  The defense of Communist leaders such as Sam Darcy and Robert Wood, party secretaries for Pennsylvania and Oklahoma, have been major efforts of the federation.' (Attorney General Francis Biddle, Congressional Record, September 24, 1942, p. 7687.)

"3. 'There can be no reasonable doubt about the fact that the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties — regardless of its high-sounding name—is one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party.' (Special Committee on Un-American Activities, Report March 29, 1944, p. 50; also cited in Reports, June 25, 1942, p. 20; and January 2, 1943, pp. 9 and 12.)

To Protect Commies

"4. Among a 'maze of organizations' which were 'spawned for the alleged purpose of defending civil liberties in general but actually intended to protect Communist subversion from any penalties under the law.' (Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities, Report No. 1115, September 2, 1947, p. 3.)

"5. 'One of the most important Communist-front organizations in the United States. While following the Communist Party line meticulously the organization has been helpful to Communists who wish to evade and defy Government agencies investigating subversive activities.' It 'recently' combined with International Labor Defense and the Metropolitan Inter faith and Inter-racial Coordinating Council of New York to form the Civil Rights Congress." (California Committee on Un-American Activities, Report 1948, pp. 201 and 327.)

It is interesting to note for the record that the names of some others who hold important posts in the Southern Regional Council have a consistent habit of cropping up in connection with groups which have been termed Communist-fronts by Congressional committees investigating Un-American activities.

While the Council itself has never been branded as a Communist-front, it and its members have been in the vanguard of the fight to destroy our cherished heritages and traditions in the South.

New York Post Story

Since announcement of the Ford grant and charges by this newspaper as to the true purpose of the Southern Regional Council, Ralph McGill and the other leading lights of SRC have tried to take the position that the Council is "neutral" on the segregation issue.

That position is completely shattered by a recent interview with Dr. Mitchell, written by Ted Poston, and which appeared in the New York POST of Thursday, June 24, 1954.

Under the headline "THE MAN TALMADGE FEARS", the article read, in part, as follows:

The soft-spoken Southerner whom Herman Talmadge hates even more than he does Walter White leaned back behind his desk in his office on Atlanta's bustling Auburn Avenue.

Discusses Jim Crow Law

"This thing is going to succeed," he said, "and the schools eventually are going to be integrated in the South — largely because of something that many people will laugh and sneer at in the North."

Dr. George S. Mitchell, the Virginia born executive director of the Southern Regional Council, was discussing the Supreme Court decision outlawing Jim Crow public school education.

"One of the reasons it is going to work out," he said, "and this is where the Northern laughter may come, is this:

"In the South, white people and Negroes know each other, and they are close to each other. In spite of everything, that's true.

"There's a folk saying down here that I don't entirely indorse but it might explain what I mean. It goes like this:

Has 3000-odd Members

"Up North, they say, white people will tell a Negro: 'I don't care how high you get as long as you don't get too close.' But down South, they say: 'I don't care how close you get, but just don't get too high.'

"It may not be wholly true, but it's something to build on—this being close. And the South is going to build on it."

As executive director of the most effective and most respected inter-racial organization in the South, Mitchell for more than a year has been preparing his 3,000-odd members in Southern and border states for the Supreme Court decision.

For months, the Council, which has active divisions in all the Southern states except Tennessee and Oklahoma (but many active members there) has been getting small interracial groups together to prepare for what many of them considered inevitable.

Booklet Is Issued

Since August of last year, these groups have been fortified with an excellently edited booklet titled "Questions & Answers: The Schools and the Courts," and since September a second called "A Check List for Your Local Schools."

These booklets, while skillfully presenting the arguments on both sides, are really textbooks for integration of Southern schools, and I heard them quoted several times in the most unexpected places.

A statewide leader of the Georgia Parent-Teachers Assn., who met me reluctantly at the home of a Negro school teacher friend, told me frankly that she "had taken no position" on the question of integrating Negro and white public school children.

"But we intend to fight to the last ditch against any plan Gov. Talmadge tries to put through for turning over the public schools to private groups," she said.

Distribution Widened

"How could we be sure that poor children,—even poor white children—would get an even break in private schools? Who would support the schools if state money can't be spent for segregated schools? Could you get good teachers if they had no real tenure, no public safeguards?"

Each of the questions came almost word for word from the August booklet of the Regional Council which was revised for wider distribution last January.

The Council, for instance, has been attacking the bulwarks of segregation from still another direction—practically and effectively. It has been seeking wider participation of Negro leaders in the direction of school administration.

As Mitchell put it:

"Those communities which are wise will forthwith appoint or elect to their school boards able and courageous Negro citizens—no Uncle Toms.

"If they do that, they will have launched officially on a course of planning the future of the schools together."

Sees Solid South Split

Several Southern attorneys general already ruled—officially and unofficially—that the Supreme Court decision automatically abrogated such state laws. And Mitchell sees in this the wedge which is already splitting the once-solid South.

And Mitchell, who was an organizer for the CIO's Political Action Committee in the South in 1944-45 before he joined the Southern Regional Council, is not one to ignore the fact that there are some "real tough ones," coming up before integration makes any real headway in many Dixie communities.

But despite these admittedly formidable obstacles, coupled with its own small membership and scarcity of funds, the Southern Regional Council has made amazing strides in the last decade in preparing the South for increasing racial democracy.

And the strides may be even more phenomenal in the next few years. For not only has the nation's highest tribunal given sanction to its activities, but the Ford Foundation gave the Council a grant of almost a quarter million dollars to push its program on a wider scale.

The influence of the Council—and the NAACP—will eventually extend to those backward regions where there are Negroes as well as white who regard the Supreme Court decision with apprehension.

Likewise in handling nearly two hundred million dollars in school building money he has proven his absolute honesty and the fact that he will not use his position to enrich himself. This can be said of few men. Yet, Fred Hand has handled the School Building Authority so that not a single finger of suspicion has been pointed at him or his organization in the building of all these school buildings.

It is a funny thing that while they are accusing Fred Hand of being rich at least three other candidates in the race have more money to spend in this campaign than does Fred Hand. Fred is about spent all he has and I have been trying to help out the best I could. We are both badly bent now and we are in need of finances worse than any of the other leading candidates.

The remarkable thing is that they show up richer and with more money than Fred is able to get up.

Now, how do you explain that?

3. They say that he should not be elected because he has the support of the Atlanta newspapers.

Now, you know that I have never been a lover of the Atlanta newspapers. They haven't dealt very kindly with me and I have fought them many times during the past. But you and I know that every candidate in the race would like to have the support of the Atlanta newspapers. The main thing we have had against them is the fact that they have fought our candidates in the past.

Practically every candidate in the race has tried to get the support of the Atlanta newspapers and they would welcome their support today.

Now, I haven't liked some of the policies of the Atlanta newspapers and at times I disagree with them violently. Yet, we must all admit that the two newspapers cover Georgia and the Southeast. They have in the past done a lot of fine things for Georgia. They helped us crusade for the Minimum Foundation Program for Education and they have done a lot of other fine things in Georgia.

The main thing that we have fought the papers for is because they have not been on our side on the race question. Now, we ought to be proud that these two great newspapers are supporting a man who stands for segregation of the races and says that he is willing to go to jail to keep the races separate.

This is one time we ought to applaud the Atlanta newspapers because they are joining us in that fight when they support Fred Hand for Governor.

All of you know that Fred Hand doesn't talk out of both sides of his mouth. He means what he says and says what he means. Everybody that knows him, knows that he is stubborn enough to go to jail if it is necessary. Now, we don't think it will be necessary when the agitators know that they have a man who will go the limit in the governor's office.

If I were running for governor, I would have the same position and I would be delighted to have the two Atlanta daily papers join me in this position.

4. Even our opponents admit that Fred Hand is the best man in the race. Everybody says that he is the best man in the race, but they say he can't win.

Now, why shouldn't we vote for the best man? That's our duty and it is our job. To adopt a policy of trying to guess the winner and vote for him would make of all of us spineless cowards.

If the politics of this state is to be controlled by people who are not concerned with electing a good man governor, but are concerned only with getting on the bandwagon and the gravy train, then the state is headed for damnation and nothing can stop it.

As I look at it, it is the duty of every citizen to vote for the man who he thinks is the best man to fill the office.

I believe we are going to show you that he can win and if all the people who say that he is the best man in the race will join him, then he is obliged to win by an overwhelming majority without the necessity of a run-off.

I am willing to predict at this time that if we get the money necessary

Farm Youths Have Set Ideas, Plans

ATLANTA, — State officers of Future Farmers of America were in Atlanta the other day making plans for the state FFA convention to be held July 19-22 at its camp on Lake Jackson. While there they addressed a luncheon meeting of the Atlanta Farmers Club, an organization affiliated with the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and composed of businessmen. And the youngsters told the grown-ups plenty, too.

For example, Louie Grimes, of Colquitt, state reporter for FFA, said today's farm youth wants to become financially independent; wants to serve his community and his nation as an efficient producer and a good citizen. He added:

"Men like George Washington and Thomas Jefferson show us that a good farmer may rise to the highest position in his community and in his nation. And that's what FFA tries to encourage."

State Secretary Billy Manning, of Leesburg, told the club that FFA offers represent more than 17,000 Georgia farm boys who have about $2-million invested in livestock, land and crops. Other officers who spoke were Jefferson's Terrell Benton, president; Moultrie's Marvin Tillman and Culoden's Dan Haygood, vice president, and Stanford Tillman, of Surrency, treasurer.

17 Sovereign States who have either mandatory or permissive segregation laws relating to public schools, which had received judicial sanction from the Supreme Court 5 times and in 18 Federal District and 59 State Supreme Court decisions.

(b) Our segregation pattern was enacted into our State laws as an expression of the will of both the negro and white races within the prescribed authority of a republican form of government as guaranteed to each State by the Federal Constitution.

(c) The written brief and oral argument as submitted by Mr. Brownell's top flight Assistant, John Rankin, contained unnecessary vicious attacks upon the people and public officials of these States.

(d) The action completely adopted the philosophy of a private corporation determined to destroy the racial integrity of both the negro and white races by a gradual process of amalgamation through intimate association from infancy through adulthood.

2. The second reason I gave for my decision dealt at length with Mr. Brownell's conduct at our 1953 South Dakota Conference. Many of the members of our group will never forget the highly improper and offensive address delivered by one of his Assistants with reference to his policy of enforcing the infamous Thaddeus Stephens Civil Rights Act of 1866. I regret exceedingly that you were not present at this Conference.

In this address an attack was made upon the Governors and the Attorneys General who had criticized Mr. Brownell's "sneak policy" of authorizing some of his F. B. I. Agents to enter penal and other State institutions for investigating purposes under this Act without collaborating with the responsible State officials in charge of the institutions.

This policy had been condemned by some of the Governors at their national conference only a few weeks before and by us two days before the address was delivered. Mr. Brownell was present and had full knowledge of our attitude. Notwithstanding this, he permitted his Assistant to inform us in no uncertain terms that he—Mr. Brownell — would continue this policy and totally disregard our suggestions and criticism.

As a result of this shocking attack on the Governors and our group, I appointed a committee to meet with Mr. Brownell and me in Washington, for the purpose of asking for a clarification of the policy, in the hope that we could persuade him to modify it. Fifteen Attorneys General joined me in this conference. We were respectfully received by Mr. Brownell. We were politely informed that he was simply pursuing a policy adopted by the Truman Administration and indicated that it would be changed to conform to some of the suggestions made by the Governors and Attorneys General. But when I personally requested him to advise his field agents and us in writing as to any changes, he demurred, and as far as I am able to ascertain, no policy changes were made.

Fortunately for Georgia, his local agents have always collaborated with our administrative officials in making these investigations and our relation has been fine, but that is not the case in other States. In fact, the initial protest against this "sneak method" of the Federal government investigating the integrity of a Sovereign State upon frivolous complaints of criminal prisoners and mentally deranged persons within State institutions was first announced by none other than your own Governor Dewey and Governor Fine of Pennsylvania. Most of the Governors and Attorneys General agreed with Governors Dewey and Fine at the time, and we of the NAAG will never be able to understand Mr. Brownell's attitude at the South Dakota Conference and his subsequent inaction on this legitimate complaint.

3. Some of the Republican members of our Association well remember that it was Mr. Brownell and his political friends, including Governor Dewey of New York, who publicly charged the late Senator Taft and his delegation with attempting to steal the nomination for President at the Chicago Convention. Naturally, this "Brownellian" political action was objectionable to our Republican members who were at the convention supporting Senator Taft and to those of us—Democrats and Republicans alike—who respected and admired this great American.

4. Some Democratic members of our group have not forgotten that it was our U. S. Attorney General who recently accused former President Harry Truman of treason in connection with the handling of the Dexter White case, and when confronted, was unable to produce evidence to support the charge. In our group there are Attorneys General who have respect for Mr. Truman and the high office he held as President of the United States.

5. One of the most commanding reasons why I am declining to invite Mr. Brownell to address our 1954 Mississippi Conference is the fact that our host Attorney General James P. Coleman informs me that his appearance in Mississippi as a principal speaker on our program would be objectionable to him and to most of the people of that State. I have always felt that a guest should never offend a host. This I shall not do to General Coleman and the fine people of his State.

Sincerely yours,
EUGENE COOK

to finance a proper speaking, radio, television and advertising program that he will at least be in the run-off, if he does not win on September the 8th.

5. Now, we get to the mustache last.

Fred Hand has been held up and accused like a common felon because he wears a mustache. Now, I don't know why he wears a mustache. I do know that he has been wearing one ever since I have known him and I have known him since he was quite a young fellow. I can see no harm in a mustache. If a man wants to wear a mustache he has that right and that privilege.

However, none of the other leading candidates in the race are as free of criticism as Fred Hand. The Lieutenant Governor and the former acting Governor have some right sorry records and I can put a lot of their conduct up against Fred Hand's mustache and I think that you would certainly prefer him with a mustache to their records.

But, I would like to make this proposition. If you will elect him Governor on Spetember the 8th, I will promise you that I will personally shave off that mustache on the morning of September the 9th.

Then you can take a look at him without his mustache and the people of Georgia can say whether they want him to serve as Governor with or without a mustache.

Now, I haven't consulted him about this proposition, but I do believe that he would be willing to trade his mustache for the opportunity of serving Georgia for the next four years as its governor.

Now, aren't these flimsy charges they are making against Fred Hand?

There is one thing you can say about Fred Hand. He has a record of accomplishments to put up against the wild promises of the other candidates. He has been in the legislature for twenty years and he has made a remarkable record. He has been in the forefront of every movement in this state for the progress and development of the state itself.

And while he has been doing this he hasn't talked out of both sides of his mouth. He hasn't said like Thompson that he advocates things in which he does not believe and forgets about things in which he does believe. He hasn't done like Griffin—say one time that he is for segregation and defying the Supreme Court and the next time saying that we must buckle under and bow down to the Supreme Court decision and mix the races in the public schools in this state.

Fred Hand's record speaks for itself. It is a solid record. He hasn't changed. He is the same Fred he was twenty-five years ago and he will be the same Fred for the next twenty-five years.

He has the courage of his convictions and he hasn't been on both sides of every question.

He is a man that you can tie to in this campaign and he is truly the best man in the race for governor.

System Of Roads Called Obsolete, Inadequate For Defense Of Country

President Eisenhower has proposed a fifty-billion-dollar highway building program.

It is proposed that five billion dollars a year more than is now being spent be appropriated by the Congress to build a network of highways all over the nation.

This five billion dollars increased expenditure is to continue for a period of ten years.

Eisenhower said that the present highway network is "inadequate locally and obsolete as a national system."

He states that this kind of a highway program is absolutely necessary to provide for the defense of the nation and to take care of a population of two hundred million people who are expected by 1970.

Government planners have long felt that the present highway system is inadequate for a swift movement of military units and they have believed that in case of a war against this country that we would be paralyzed for the lack of an adequate system of highways.

Since the advent of the Hydrogen Bomb the highway system is considered more inadequate than ever because in case of the dropping of bombs it would be necessary to hastily evacuate the population of most of the big cities.

Already the highways are inadequate to take care of the regular travel over the highways. Now add to that, the confusion that would result from the evacuation of the cities and the throwing of millions of military personnel onto the highways at the same time.

It is certainly time that the federal government was waking up to the fact that we do not have a road system that is adequate to take care of the necessary travel and movement of people and troops in the event of war.

We have given away more than fifty billion dollars since the end of World War II to different countries and different people and if this nation is able to give away fifty billion dollars, we ought to be able to spend fifty billion dollars during the next ten years to give us a road system necessary for the use of our people in peace times and one that would give us a chance to protect the nation in time of war.

Somebody, somewhere in the government ought to realize that it is time we were doing something for our own people and for the protection of our homes and the nation itself.

Now, if the Congress can just wake up and go along with the president in the building of this kind of a highway program, then we will be getting somewhere.

The politicians of the nation have been running around in circles, confused and not knowing where they were going.

They have been trying to buy peace by giving away the substances of the people of this nation and they have utterly fallen down on the job of doing the things that are necessary to protect this nation and to keep it strong enough to protect itself. Instead of being bigshots at all of the conferences of the world, we ought to be spending some of our money doing something at home. The fifty billion dollars we have been giving away has failed to make us a single, solitary ally.

So, why not do something now to strengthen and build this country and take care of this country? Today we are seeing hundreds of thousands of people killed and maimed every year on account of the fact that we do have a highway system that is inadequate to take care of the travel under modern-day conditions.

It is a wholesome sign when we do see one little evidence of the fact that somebody is coming out of the confusion which has existed in Washington and seeing things clearly.

This program should be enacted by Congress. It will give us enough money to have a real highway system all over this nation.

Asphalt Ed, Slippery Ellis, King-Bootlegger Bowen Running Melvin And Mervin For Governor Of Georgia

Prominent Political Figure Holds Pardon Griffin Issued Self To Keep Out Of Jail

Fred Hand has exposed the activities of M. E. Thompson and Marvin Griffin as the henchmen of both Ed Rivers and Ellis Arnall.

He calls them Ed and Ellis' simonized twins—Melvin and "Mervin."

In a detailed statement, he tells how Melvin and Mervin, acting together, handled the affairs of Ed Rivers and Ellis Arnall during the days of the asphalt scandals and the time when they followed after Henry Wallace.

Hand in his statement also labeled Mervin Griffin as the official bouncer during the Rivers Administration when Ed was throwing highway directors out of the window.

His statement follows:

I'm going to talk to you about the two simonized twins—Melvin and Mervin.

Perhaps you know them better as Negotiating Melvin Thompson and Pardoning Mervin Griffin.

They belong to that well-known political pair—Ellis Arnall and Ed Rivers.

And their claims to fame are unique.

Melvin is the only ex-governor I know who got himself a big job up in Washington and the bureaucrats there couldn't find anything he was capable of doing.

Mervin is the only man in the history of the world who ever pardoned himself.

Melvin is noted for negotiated highway contracts with kickbacks to contractors and selling liquor in Georgia's dry counties through his henchman, John Horace Bowen.

Mervin is noted for signing pardons by the bushel basketfull and bravely tossing a 120-pound Highway Department director down the steps of the State Highway Building.

Now the time has come in this campaign when we must talk about these things.

It's time we talked about the pardon racket.

It's time we talked about the liquor racket.

It's time we talked about negotiated contracts.

It's time we talked about John Horace Bowen, that notorious racketeer who is backing both Melvin and Mervin in this campaign.

Let's look at the record.

You'll recall the shady asphalt deals which scandalized Georgia during the Ed Rivers Administration. You remember the wholesale pardoning which went on in the wee hours of the last morning Ed was in office.

Well, Melvin and Mervin were the boys who carried them out.

They were Ed Rivers' simonized twins.

They were both well greased with asphalt and pardons.

When Ole Ed couldn't put over his as-

I still say you can't trust Marvin Griffin.

You can't trust him intellectually and you can't trust him politically.

1. You can't trust him intellectually.

Let's take his plan for keeping segregation in the public school system as an example of his intelligence.

And how does he propose to keep segregation? Well, it's the silliest proposition that any supposedly intelligent human being ever conceived. Here's how he says he's going to do it:

(a) He proposes that we make everybody who moves into Georgia live in Georgia a year before they can send their children to school.

(b) He proposes to increase the size of the county boards of education from their present number to one hundred in each town and in each county in the State of Georgia.

Now, isn't that a pretty howdy do?

How are we going to get new industries in Georgia and new people here to help us develop the state if we won't let them send their children to school for a whole twelve-months period? I can't tell whether Marvin is opposed to folks' having children or whether he is against their being educated. Of course, if they didn't get any more education than this brilliant idea indicates that Marvin has, it wouldn't do them any good and we ought to close up the school houses.

In Augusta, in Atlanta, in Savannah, in Columbus, at Warner-Robbins and many other places in Georgia, the government has stationed a lot of people who are in the military service. If the state should go crazy enough to adopt Marvin's suggestion, these poor devils would be forced to keep their children out of school for a whole year after they came into Georgia.

If Marvin has any intelligence at all, his brain certainly wasn't clicking the day he originated this fool idea.

Then, how would the average county or town in Georgia ever function with a school board with one hundred members? You would have a continual scrap and a continual squabble all the time and the worst confusion you ever saw.

Why, when you went to vote for one hundred members of the board of education at one time, you wouldn't even be able to remember the names of all those for whom you wanted to vote. And if two or three people ran for each place, you wouldn't be able to find the names of your candidates on the list even if you were able to remember their names.

In the counties where they have voting machines you couldn't even vote because the voting machines wouldn't be big enough to enable you to vote for this many candidates even if you could remember their names and even if you could find them on the list.

Then, what good would a one hundred-member board do? How could the acts of one hundred men be any more legal than the acts of five?

If five members can't enforce segregation against the dictates of the Supreme Court, the acts of one hundred members would be just as much in conflict.

When this idea was originated, the author certainly must have had a bad night before.

2. You can't trust Marvin politically.

I say this because a study of his record shows that he has jumped about worse than a flee hopping around and he has changed colors more than any lizzard ever has.

Now, let's see how he has changed on the segregation question. In September, 1950, he predicted that if the Supreme Court decided against from the Washington Bookshop in 1941 showed that Philip G. Hammer was a member of the same. This organization was cited by Attorney General Francis Biddle, the House Committee on Un-American Activities and later by Attorney General Tom Clark, as a Communist front.

Dodged World War II

This same Hammer was born in Philadelphia, Pa. He studied under Dr. Frank Graham at the University of North Carolina and at Harvard. Upon coming to Washington, he was employed in the office of Bob LaFollette, liberal Senator from Wisconsin. From there he went with the Farm Security Administration in the Department of Agriculture under Henry Wallace. He later was included in the mass transfer of "liberals" to the State Department for work in the Foreign Economic Administration and the United Nation's Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

In spite of the fact that Hammer held responsible government positions all during World War II, even though he was of military service age, he terminated his employment abruptly in late 1945. He is reported to have come to Atlanta in 1946 in an effort to get a magazine started which he hoped to edit, but could not make financial arrangements and left, only to return in 1947 as a business analyst for the Atlanta firm of Joseph K. Heyman.

"Slashed" Fulton County

He resigned from this position in March 1950 to become Director of the Metropolitan Planning Commission and as such was author of the "Plan of Improvement" legislation which took most of the effective governmental powers away from Fulton County and vested them in the Mayor of Atlanta who has twice been elected to office not by a vote of white people but by the bloc vote.

Our investigation shows that Mr. Hammer, in addition to his Communist-front affiliations, was named as a member of the National Executive Council of United World Federalists in early 1949. This is an organization which proposes the surrender of our national sovereignty to a super world government which would have police powers and could arrest individual citizens of member nations.

Alger Hiss, the convicted Communist traitor, who is now serving a five-year sentence in the Federal penitentiary for perjury, made several speeches in furtherance of the United World Federalists organization, according to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Ford Foundation Pet

During the summer of 1953, Hammer took a three months' leave from his job as Director of the Committee of the South to direct an intensive study for the Ford Foundation Education Fund. Main purpose of the study was to convince the Supreme Court that a ruling by it outlawing segregation could be implemented and enforced. This work was known as the Ashmore Project" under which school segregation in the Southern states was studied with a view towards devising ways and means to eliminate it.

The record shows that Hammer has been extremely critical of efforts on the part of the Talmadge administration to preserve segregation in the public schools of Georgia. He has said any so-called "pans" to circumvent the court ruling "won't last as long as the White Primaries."

He has urged that whites and negroes meet together and make immediate plans for de-segregation of public schools in the South.

Guest of "Hungry Club"

According to news items which appeared in the ATLANTA DAILY WORLD, a negro newspaper published in that city, Hammer has been a frequent guest at the "Hungry Club", a negro luncheon group before which he has made political addresses from time to time, and at the same time dined with its members in an atmosphere of mixed frivolity at the Butler Street YMCA.

A recent picture appeared in the DAILY WORLD showing Mr. Hammer at a panel meeting at the Atlanta University, where he reviewed the report of the Ashmore Project relative to ending segregation in the schools in the South. The study was made by Dr. Harry S. Ashmore, Hammer and others for the purpose of "easing the transition from separate white and negro schools to mixed schools."

Hammer's wife, Jane, is First Vice President of the Georgia League of Women Voters and is Editor of "Georgia Voter" a bi-monthly publication of the organization, in which its policy is enunciated. The announcement bulletin of Spelman College for 1952-53 lists Mrs. Hammer as a teacher of Philosophy there. Both the Hammers have been very active in directing the fight against the county unit system in Georgia.

Dr. Rufus E. Clement

The National Advisory Board of United World Federalists lists besides Hammer such names as Dr. Rufus E. Clement, President of Atlanta University and the first negro ever to be elected to the Atlanta City Board of Education. Records of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and documentary evidence possessed by it show that he has been active in at least 12 Communist-front groups and movements.

The public records, files and publications of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities contain the following citation concerning Dr. Rufus E. Clement, who was organizer and is now a member of the Board of Directors of SRC:

"The American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom issued a petition which was signed by Rufus E. Clement as shown on a mimeographed sheet attached to a letterhead of that organization, dated January 17, 1940.

"He was a sponsor of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born as reported in the 'Daily Worker' of October 28, 1940 (page 3); Program, Fifth National Conference, Atlantic City, New Jersey, March 29-30, 1941; Leaflet, 'Sixth National Conference', Cleveland, Ohio, May 9 and 10, 1942 (page 4; an undated letterhead summarizing the 1946 work of the organization; and a Program and Call for Conference, Cleveland, Ohio, October 25 and 26, 1947.

Clement was 'among the 363 outstanding Americans who signed the Open Letter to the President of the United States sponsored originally by the American Council on Soviet Relations, urging a declaration of war on the Finnish government in the interests of speedy victory by the United Nations over Nazi Germany and its Fascist allies' as shown in an official folder of that organization.

Summation Of Facts Given By Courier About Southern Regional Council

THE AUGUSTA COURIER carried a detailed expose, June 28, 1954, which established facts about the Southern Regional Council. They are as follows:

1. It is the successor, in fact, to the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the SCHW.

2. Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as communists in testimony before Congressional committees by former associates in the party.

3. At least 38 officers, members of the executive staff or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in the report citing it as a communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to "promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions" to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been soley a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist Party line as laid down for the South.

6. The incorporators of the Southern Regional Council are Ralph McGill, Editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Dr. George S. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Negro, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk (Negro) University; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina. The charter of incorporation was applied for in Fulton County Superior Court, January 6, 1944, and was granted for a period of 35 years. Attorneys for the applicants were the Atlanta law firm of Haas, Lyons and Hurt, of which Leonard Haas is senior member.

Subsidization of the Southern Regional Council which is a haven for known communists and red fronters follows the pattern set by the Ford Foundation throughout the rest of the nation.

The State Health Dept. will receive a total of $2,730,542 in federal aid for the 1954-55 fiscal year, $1,554,357 of which will be used in six new Hill-Burton projects, it was announced.

Webster County, once known as Kinchafoonee County, will celebrate its first hundred years of growth and prosperity at Preston August 12.

Power is now being generated from the first 100,000 kilowatt unit at Georgia Power Co.'s new Plant Hammond on the Coosa River, near Rome.

Out of every dollar paid out by Georgia's state government 36 and one-half cents goes to the aid of local governments in the state, according to a Bureau of the Census report, based on 1952 fiscal figures. In other words, out of $269,887,000 spent, $98,407,000 went for maintenance of local government operations. That was a per capita of $28.24 in local government aid.

phalt deals because Lint Miller, director of the Highway Department, wouldn't go along, he sent his strong-arm man, Mervin, over to throw him out of office. And big, brave Mervin picked up little, 120-pound Lint Miller and threw him down the steps of the Highway Building.

A photographer took a picture of that brave deed and the Atlanta Journal still has it in its files.

Lint Miller had gotten a court order restraining Ed and his bouncer, Mervin, from bothering him. And after Mervin's little act, Superior Court Judge Will R. Smith of Nashville summoned him into court and sentenced him to 20-days in jail for contempt of court.

But pardoning Mervin was ready for the Judge, too.

Before Ed Rivers went out of office and the case was closed he issued himself a complete pardon.

That pardon still exists.

It's in the hands of a well-known political leader.

Mervin admits he ran the pardon racket for Ed Rivers. He says Ed told him to. Ed says he didn't do any such thing.

But the fact remains that Mervin publicly boasted that he directed the signing of pardons by the basketfull.

I have here a copy of the front page of The Atlanta Constitution of January 14th, 1941. That big picture on the front page shows Mervin and two secretaries signing pardons as fast as they could to get through before Ed Rivers' term ended.

And here is a copy of an inside page of the same issue of The Constitution. It shows the Capitol lights burning into the late hours of that night while this disgusting spectable unfolded.

When Ed Rivers passed out of the picture, Melvin and Mervin passed out with him.

But when Ellis Arnall emerged who did he bring back with him but Melvin and Mervin.

Melvin was Arnall's executive secretary and later his revenue commissioner.

Mervin was pulled out of the Pacific to come back home to be Arnall's Adjutant General.

During Ellis' term they went all-out with him to support the starry-eyed left-winger Henry Wallace. And they did their best to get the Legislature to amend the Constitution to let Ellis run again.

Failing that, Mervin went so far as to announce for governor on the Arnall-Wallace ticket. At the same time he started writing nasty editorials about Gene Talmadge in his newspaper, The Bainbridge Post-Searchlight. Three of the most vicious of those editorials appeared on February 21st, March 28th and April 18th of 1946. And I'm going to have more to say about them on a later program.

But Mervin's balloon didn't get off the ground and when he looked around to size up his chance for lieutenant governor, he found Melvin had beaten him to the draw and had Ellis' blessing. That's when Mervin did a complete flip-flop to become a Talmadge man.

Melvin beat Mervin for lieutenant governor and in the controversy which followed the death of Gene Talmadge, you remember, Ellis appointed Melvin acting governor.

During Melvin's two years in office Ellis and Ed were his advisers. They negotiated highway contracts and let John Horace Bowen sell liquor in dry counties. Testimony taken in an official state investigation in 1949 showed that M. E.'s political fund got 50 cents for every case of liquor John Horace sold. And to show how great was the graft in the highway department, the per mile cost of highway construction now is lower than it was then despite inflation and higher costs.

And now the simonized twins of Ellis Arnall and Ed Rivers are back with us again. One is running on one side and the other is running on the other side.

Ellis and Ed are supporting Melvin. And John Horace Bowen, who since has expanded his operations into Florida, has come out of hiding and is contributing to both campaigns.

John Horace told a close friend before the race started that the past six years have cost him one million dollars and he's "got to have me a governor this time". He's dividing his contributions between Melvin and Mervin. And he's known to contribute in the neighborhood of 100-thousand dollars.

Melvin is promising anything and everything on earth. His platform is like the old Piggly-Wiggly Stores—if you don't see what you want, ask for it and Melvin will be for it.

But Mervin has gone back to the days of his old master, Asphalt Ed Rivers, and reincarnated one of the dead spirits of his administration.

You'll recall that Eddy had two highway departments. In addition to the regular one he created an authority to build post roads.

Now Mervin wants two highway departments. He proposes to establish an authority to build rural roads.

Anybody knows post roads and rural roads are the same thing.

You know also about the asphalt scandals, the road machinery scandals and the negotiated contract scandals of Rivers' administration. They took place during Melvin's two years as acting governor, too.

Mervin knows he can't do what he wants to do with a highway department elected by the Legislature and under the Merit System. So he's taking this page out of Ed Rivers' book to get around it and fix for himself a source for graft.

That's the record. You know what happened when the simonized twins ran Ed Rivers' business. You know what happened when the simonized twins ran Ellis Arnall's business. You know what happened when Melvin was acting governor.

Do you want a repetition of the activities of these simonized twins?

Do you want a repetition of the John Horace Bowen scandals?

Elect either Melvin or Mervin and that's exactly what you'll get.

Don't forget, John Horace is playing it safe this time. He's betting on two horses.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

us in the school cases that we would shout and holler and raise sand for a time and then we would bend under and surrender to the Supreme Court.

It is remarkable that Marvin publicly admits that he would be like the tumble bug and push one way and look another. But that's what he said in 1950 he would do.

And that's what he is doing in 1954. He is shouting louder and longer than anybody on the subject of segregation hoping that by shouting louder and longer, he will make you forget that he intends to finally bend under.

He is just as bad as M. E. Thompson. M. E. said that he advocated things when he ran for governor before that he did not believe in and that he opposed things in which he did believe.

You can't trust a man who says that he will put up a big show of resistence when all the time he knows that he will not resist.

He reminds me of the woman whom Lord Byron described as follows:

"A little still she strove, and much repented,
And whispering, 'I will ne'er consent'—consented."

Truly, Thompson and Griffin ought to be called the simonized twins because they are just as much alike as two peas in a pod.

They are unique, however, for one thing. They are the only two politicians I ever knew who would publicly admit that they would say one thing and do another.

So, you can't trust Marvin Griffin on the question of separate schools for your children. His record shows that he cannot be trusted. His record shows that he has not been consistent. His record shows that in 1950 he was condemning Governor Talmadge, Fred Hand and me for saying that we would not abide by the Supreme Court decision if it was against segregation and for presenting a resolution to the Democratic Convention to the effect that the Democrats of Georgia would not abide by the Supreme Court decision if it outlawed separate schools for the whites and the negroes.

The two highway systems which he proposes in his platform shows that he cannot be trusted.

We have a good highway department. It has built more roads with less confusion and less criticism than any department we have had during the past thirty years.

There has been no suspicion of graft or pay-offs, kick-backs or negotiated contracts with our present highway department. We have three fine members of the board. They are elected by the legislature and not appointed by the governor.

They have been building roads all over Georgia and Governor Talmadge has proclaimed that they have let to contract more than twelve thousand miles of rural roads, and, according to Governor Talmadge they have established a remarkable record not only for this state, but for any state in the nation.

Thus, for the first time in the history of the highway department in Georgia we have a functioning highway department which is building roads instead of playing politics and one free from graft or suspicion.

Now with this situation, why create another? What is the idea of short-circuiting this one?

Ed Rivers had two highway departments when he was governor. Both departments had their own engineers and their own forces. They acted independently of each other.

The confusion which resulted almost got Ed Rivers in the penitentiary. He was indicted by the Grand Jury in Fulton County.

This second Highway department was created because Ed's friends couldn't handle the first one. So, a second one was created.

What happened? There was such a scandal until the Grand Jury in the federal courts and the Grand Jury in the state courts investigated all of the shenanigans and a long list of people were indicted.

The scandals which grew out of these two highway departments and the shenanigans have constituted one of the blackest pages in Georgia's history.

Now, Marvin has gone back to the days of Ed Rivers and copied the second highway set-up from the Ed Rivers administration.

Ed said the purpose of his was to build post roads. Marvin proposes to build rural roads. All the roads outside of the cities are either rural or post or whatever you want to call them.

an unsuspecting public.

But I'm onto their game and I'm going to expose this big steal between now and Sept. 8 from every stump in this State.

Marvin is running the most elaborate, the most expensive campaign of any candidate in Georgia history. But he's had to pawn his soul to get the enormous sums he's spending.

He has sold himself to the highway contractors, the machinery dealers, the automobile and truck dealers, the gasoline distributors and the concrete and asphalt interests. And he's promised them a Highway Department all their own—free of constitutional restrictions and the Merit System—where there will be no curbs on machinery deals, negotiated contracts, kickbacks and just plain graft.

Griffin says he's going to set up an Authority to pave every rural road in Georgia. That means he's going to set up a second highway department.

Highway Departments

Yes, you heard me right, under a Griffin Administration, Georgia would have not one, but two, highway departments.

The present highway department has been cleaned up and is free from graft and out of politics. It's a constitutional agency and is out from under the control of the governor. The General Assembly elects the three members of the Highway Board and highway funds are allocated by constitutional provision.

The present department is as far beyond corruption as it is possible by law to make it and Marvin Griffin and his cohorts know it. They know they could never persuade the General Assembly to change the system we now have. So they plan to curve around it to create another highway department which can be handled by the grafters.

Ed Rivers Plan

If you will take the wraps off this plan you will find underneath a number of prominent machinery dealers, highway contractors and asphalt dealers.

The idea for two Highway Departments isn't original. Georgia had two departments once before—during the administration of Governor Ed Rivers. And as a result several persons, including Governor Rivers himself, wound up in court under indictment.

Marvin Griffin was Ed Rivers' Executive Secretary. He got the idea from Ed Rivers. What he's proposing is the same old thing. The only new twist is that Marin Griffin would be governor instead of Ed Rivers.

Can't you see it now? Two highway departments, two highway boards, two sets of highway employees—all fighting one another for jurisdiction and funds. Where we now have one Highway Department with 2,947 employees under the Merit System, we would have two Highway Departments with probably more than 6,000 employees—half of them not under the Merit System.

Marvin's Profit Scheme

We all want to see our rural roads paved. And we've been doing an excellent job of it with just one highway department—paving more than 5,000 miles in the past six years.

Why do we have to have a separate agency to do it now?

Marvin says we need an Authority to issue bonds to pay for the roads.

I want him to tell me what the Authority will issue bonds against? If it issues them against revenue of the present Highway Department then we won't have any money left for other highway needs. If he doesn't issue them against future revenue then the only other possibility is to secure them by tolls and Marvin says he is opposed to toll roads.

Stink In The Woodpile

And, if it is possible to issue highway bonds, why can't the present Highway Department do it a lot better than a second one?

My friends, there's something hiding in this pretty woodpile Marvin is building. And it has all the makings of a rotten scandal which would make the previous administration with which this same Mr. Griffin was so prominently connected look like penny ante.

Our present highway department is doing a good job and is out of politics. If we keep the present system, as I propose, during the next four years then we'll build more rural roads than we have during the last five. And there won't be any graft, corruption or scandal.

Taking Marvin Griffin's plans for keeping segregation and creating two highway departments is like joining in a poker game with the deck stacked and the jokers wild.

I know I don't want any of it and I don't believe any decent Georgians do.

State Now Respectable

We have pulled our state government up to a respectable level for the first time in 20 years. We must keep it that way and M. E. Thompson and Marvin Griffin couldn't do it even if they wanted to or tried.

If the people of Georgia elect either of those two, they will deserve what happens to them.

I urge you, fellow Georgians, to look at the records. Examine the backgrounds, actions, statements and experience of all candidates. Then vote for the man who has the best record.

I am satisfied if you will decide this race on that basis you will overwhelmingly elect me your governor on September 8th.

Thank you and God bless you all.

Hand Exposes Fake Claims Mousey Melvin, Possum Mervin

Speaker Of House Only Dirt Farmer, Real Businessman In Governor's Race

In a speech at Americus, Georgia, on Saturday, July 31, 1954, Fred Hand again flayed Melvin Thompson and Mervin Griffin.

In addition to calling attention to the fact that Fred Hand is the only farmer in the race for governor, he took a pot-shot at Mervin and Melvin's plans for maintaining segregation.

But in the most pointed part of the speech, he attacked Griffin's plan to set up two highway departments in the State of Georgia which Hand says he copied from the example of Governor Rivers during the days when the asphalt scandals almost wrecked Ed Rivers.

In this speech, Hand said:

Only Farmer In Race

"And you farmers here—I want to tell you that I'm one of you and I'm with you. I'm the only farmer in this governor's race and I know your problems because they're my problems, too.

"I own a farm down in Mitchell County. I grow cotton, tobacco, peanuts, tomatoes and the other things that we raise in this section. When the drought hits you, it hits me, when falling prices put you in a squeeze, they get me, too.

In the last few years our farming problems have multiplied instead of decreasing. Mother Nature has thrown us a curve for three years running. And we've been getting a raw deal out of Congress ever since the Republicans took over.

I not only know farming problems from experience but I've been working on them as a member of the State Legislature for the past 22 years. And when I am elected governor, I'm going to see to it that Georgia's farmers not only are protected but also that they get the best deal they've ever had under any governor this State's ever had.

State's Debt To Farmers

The State has an obligation to help its farmers because without them it would have very little of what we have today. And I intend to see that Georgia carries this obligation out by furnishing farmers free hog serum and undertaking a program to eradicate Bang's Disease, tuberculosis and other disease among our cattle. These things will be done by qualified veterinarians working under the supervision of the State Department of Agriculture. And the programs won't cost the State any more money because sums for this amount have already been appropriated. The sad truth, however, is that they have been used to put useless employees on the state payroll rather than to serve our farmers.

I'm going to do something else, too. My administration is going to emphasize agricultural research to find new, better and cheaper ways of doing things on our farms. And these research programs are going to give special attention to irrigation and finding some way to keep some of our crops from being burned up by long dry spells like we're having down here now. I want to put the best minds we've got to work on this problem and keep at it until we come up with a solution.

Faces Vital Problem

But, my friends, we face difficulties far more grave than even our agricultural and economic problems. We are confronted with the stark reality of being in danger of losing our traditions and, even worse, our right to run our own affairs.

The United States Supreme Court has told us we cannot say which schools our children go to or have a voice in determining who their classmates will be. This high court of political-minded judges has handed down a ruling that we must mix white and colored children in our schools and has indicated it is going to send special federal masters down here to see that we do it.

I don't want mixed schools in Georgia.

I don't believe you do either.

I refuse to accept this sociological ruling by the Supreme Court.

No Mixed Schools

I don't believe you will accept it either.

And I pledge to you that, as your governor, I will not permit a single Negro child to attend a single white classroom in the State of Georgia for the four years I am in office. I will go to jail—and stay there the entire four years, if necessary—before I will approve the expenditure of the first penny of state money for mixed schools.

I just won't have mixed schools.

If that's defying the Supreme Court of the United States, then I'm defying it.

If that's being lawless, then I'm lawless.

But no power on earth can force me to sacrifice my conscience and convictions or sell the people of Georgia down the river.

Georgia laws and her Constitution call for segregation. They have not changed. And so long as I am governor they shall be enforced, the Supreme Court to the contrary notwithstanding.

Peoples Best Interest

In Georgia the best interests of Georgians come first. And as governor I shall serve those best interests and carry out the wishes of the majority of both races rather than the orders of the Supreme Court.

I'm no johnny-come-lately on this matter.

I have never been on but one side of this issue.

I have been fighting for 22 years—first with 'Gene' Talmadge and then with Herman—to keep the races separate in Georgia.

I saw this Supreme Court ruling was coming and did all I could to help prepare Georgia for it. I helped to write into our laws the provision under which funds can be cut off from any school in which the races are mixed. And I sponsored and fought for the creation of the State School Building Authority which is giving us separate, but equal, facilities for the races.

New School Buildings

This one program—of which I am chairman—has done more to keep segregation in Georgia than any other one thing. I say this because the more than 1,000 fine new school buildings it is putting up throughout the State have given Negroes equal facilities. And more important these facilities demonstrate the fact that the white people of Georgia are playing fair with the colored people.

Some of the candidates in this race are not telling you the truth about where they stand on segregation or what they are going to do if elected. Rather they are running up and down this State calling me names and trying to hide their sorry, shabby and disgraceful records by shouting "them lying newspapers."

They remind me of people who get on a San Francisco-to-New-York train three miles outside New York City and then hop off first in Grand Central Station, wave their arms and declare to those who came all the way—"It sure was a great trip we had, boys."

But don't you be fooled, my friends and neighbors.

Fred Hand got on the segregation train when Ole Gene started it and he's been riding it with the Talmadges ever since.

M. E. And Segregation

M. E. Thompson got on the segregation train over yonder at Plains. But I'll bet you when he hops off here in Americus, he's going to tell you it was a "great trip."

M. E.'s record gives the lie to his claim to be a defender of segregation. He's the fellow who has had the support of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People every time he's run for office. And he's got it again this year. If you don't believe me, ask him. He won't tell you he doesn't have it and he won't say anything to offend the Negro bloc vote, either.

M. E. showed his true colors when he made a speech up at Decatur, Georgia, on October 3rd, 1952, and stated: "In 1948 I campaigned for re-election as Governor of Georgia. In that campaign I said I was for things I was against. I said I was against things I was for."

Doesn't that mean M. E. Thompson says the opposite of what he means?

Breaks His Promises

Doesn't that mean M. E. Thompson does the opposite of what he promises?

Doesn't that mean that when M. E. Thompson says he is in favor of segregation he really is against it?

Doesn't that mean that when M. E. Thompson promises you segregated schools he intends to give you mixed schools instead?

You know the answer.

And that brings us to Marvin Griffin.

The Lieutenant Governor flaged down the segregation train five miles south of Ellaville. But when he arrives here in Americus he's going to trot out his best four-letter words and tell you what a "blank, blank good trip" he had.

Marvin's Racial Stand

Can you believe him? No, because Marvin hasn't been on the segregation train any longer than M. E. has.

He may have a big mouth and a loud voice, but all his shouting, ranting and raving can't cover up the fact that he advocates abiding by the ruling of the United States Supreme Court even if it means placing white and Negro children side-by-side in the classrooms of our schools.

And the proof of it is in his own newspaper, the Bainbridge Post-Searchlight. On September 14, 1950, he wrote:—and I want you to listen good to this—

"Georgia will have to abide by the decisions of the United States Supreme Court. We will buck and raise sand and say we won't, but in the end, we will have to bend under."

Does that sound like he's going to defend and preserve segregation come "hell or high water"?

General Confusion

He would like to make you believe that black is white, white is black and when you're properly confused mix the two, but good.

And for the purposes of confusion he could not have a better plan than the one he proposed before the Georgia Education Commission.

This is what he proposed to do to keep segregation in Georgia's schools.

He wants to make persons moving into Georgia wait a whole year before they can send their children to our schools. And to compound that confusion he wants to increase the membership of our county school boards from five to 100.

That is what he said he would do if elected governor.

How a mature man who has been honored with his State's second highest office could make a proposal so utterly silly, stupid and asinine is beyond my powers of comprehension.

Ruin Industrial Chances

How his recommendation could possibly preserve segregation is beyond my ability to explain.

But I'll tell you what it will do.

It will stop industry from coming into Georgia.

It will cause much of the industry we already have to move away.

It may cost us our Armed Forces installations.

Industry isn't coming to a State where its personnel can't send their children to school. Companies aren't going to remain in a place where they can't bring in new workers and officials and guarantee their families an education. The Armed Forces aren't going to put up with a State which won't educate the families of servicemen assigned there.

This "plan" would make us the laughing stock of the nation.

Can you imagine a 100-member school board in session?

Where in most of our small county site towns would we find a hall big enough to accommodate such a group and all the people who would come to watch the show?

Marvin's 100 Members

How long a ballot would it take to elect such a group?

When you were voting for the 100 members of the Board would you be able to distinguish between the white and colored candidates?

How would the counties pay for the expenses of such a group?

It's so ridiculous, it's pitiful, isn't it?

But that's what Marvin's going to do. He's going to stop industry from coming in. Then he's going to compound the confusion with monster school boards. And then when all the shouting, ranting, raving and bucking is over, he's going to bend under to the Supreme Court.

That's not all I want to tell you about this gentleman from Decatur County.

Scores of Grafters

Behind his smokehouse door the grafters, the special interests, the big money boys and the influence peddlers are at work perfecting a diabolical scheme to steal the State Highway Department from the people of Georgia.

They're fixing to try to put across the biggest double deal ever perpetrated upon

Now, Marvin makes out like the idea is that he will issue bonds without the people voting on it and take a lot of the highway money and retire the bonds.

But if it were bonds that he were after, an act of the legislature could easily authorize the present highway board to issue bonds as it could authorize the new highway department to issue bonds, or revenue certificates, as some people call them.

Now, if he is sincere in wanting to create some authority to issue bonds, why not let the present authority issue them? What is an authority anyhow? The legislature simply authorizes certain individuals to act on the part of the state and issue bonds, or revenue certificates and to do certain things.

Now, if it is roads he is after, why not let the board elected by the legislature build the roads and issue the bonds?

Mark my word, when they undertake to get out from under the present highway department, it is not roads they are after. It is money they are after for the contractors, the materialmen, for the machinery dealers and the politicians.

Now, this proposal of Marvin Griffin's is a "nigger in the woodpile". It is a scheme concocted to get campaign contributions with the promise that they will be paid off by this second highway department.

They know they cannot use Jim Gillis and his associates to raise campaign funds or to pay back the contractors, the materialmen or the machinery dealers for contributions through crooked contracts.

I say to you that any man who comes with this proposal can't be trusted.

There is one other thing that you should not forget about Marvin Griffin. He was Ed Rivers' official bouncer. Ed used him when he wanted to fire somebody. He fired Lint Miller from the highway board one time and Lint refused to move. So, Ed sent Marvin over to bounce Lint out the front door on the seat of his pants.

Marvin was the most competent and willing bouncer Ed had around to do the bouncing. So, Marvin was the official bouncer.

I have heard of liquor joints and honky-tonks and gambling joints having a bouncer. But Marvin is the first bouncer that any governor ever had in Georgia.

This is no time to be electing bouncers who have a record of bouncing as governor of your state.

There is no difference between Marvin Griffin and M. E. Thompson. They are two of a kind. They have had the same training.

They were trained by Ed Rivers and Ellis Arnall. They were the two lieutenants who ran Ed Rivers' business. They ran Ellis Arnall's business.

They were stooges for Ed and Ellis then and they are stooges now. Both of them have around them a bunch of racketeers who are trying to take over the government of the State of Georgia.

Some of these racketeers are contributing to both of them figuring that they will be well-healed if either gets elected.

I say there is no difference between both of them because I have tried them both and I know. Most of the people of Georgia know them to be just alike.

So, this time you had better vote for a man whom you can trust. Ask anybody in Georgia and they will tell you you can trust Fred Hand. Ask anybody in Georgia and they will tell you he is the best man in the race.

So, why not take the best man instead of a bouncer or a bruiser?

Hand Urges People To End Talmadge, Anti-Talmadge Feud; "I Am Ashamed Of That Contempt Citation," Griffin Says

Fingerprints Smear Mervin's Pardon; Back Now But Not On Page 323 As Was Originally

In a television speech Monday night, August 9, 1954, Fred Hand stated that his candidacy gives the people of Georgia a chance to eliminate the twenty-five year old feud between the Talmadge and anti-Talmadge people in Georgia.

He stated that thousands of people on both sides were supporting him and that a vote for him gives the people of Georgia an opportunity to eliminate this old feud and to permit all the people of the state to work together for the advancement and the development of Georgia.

He again reviewed the record of the simonized twins, Melvin and Mervin, and told of the peculiar antics surrounding the disappearance of Mervin's pardon from the official records and its sudden re-appearance.

Hand also stated that Mervin was bragging about his on-the-job training.

Hand stated that he did have fine training under Ed Rivers to be a bouncer because it was in this capacity that he was trained and used by Ed Rivers.

His speech is as follows:

Good evening, my Georgia friends:

Since last Monday night I've been traveling over Georgia telling people about the public records of the simonized twins —Melvin and Mervin.

And a lot of people have had their eyes opened both by what I've had to say and the antics of the twins trying to get out of the spotlight I've turned on them.

Melvin says he's just not going to discuss his record.

The truth is he can't discuss it because it condemns him.

Mervin says the discussion of his record is just 'a lot of hullabaloo" which is taking attention away from the issues in this race.

The truth is his record is an issue in this race.

Last week I told you about Mervin pardoning himself when he was executive secretary to Ed Rivers.

He swiped a copy of my script from one of the newspapers and was loudly denying what I said before I got through saying it.

Then Wednesday night in Columbus I showed the people a photostatic copy of that pardon over television.

So on Thursday afternoon Mervin issued a yard-long statement admitting that I had been right about the pardon all the time. He agreed that he actually had signed his own pardon but declared that he wasn't ashamed of it.

But, my friends, that's not the first time Mervin has owned up to that pardon. And the last time he did he was singing a dif-

When you cast a vote for Fred Hand for Governor you will not be ashamed of it.

Most of the people who are supporting Melvin Thompson and Mervin Griffin are ashamed of their position. I have had numbers of people to tell me that when they go around asking people who they are for, that the supporters of both Melvin and Mervin take them around the corner and whisper in their ears.

Most of them are ashamed to speak out in the open.

They explain that they got for Melvin and Mervin because at first they thought Melvin was going to win or that they thought Governor Talmadge was for Mervin.

Now they are beginning to doubt that Melvin can win and they doubt that Governor Talmadge is for Mervin.

Recently, Governor Talmadge has stated that he is not supporting any candidate. He has promised Fred Hand that he will not support any candidate and Mervin's campaign headquarters has filed with the news services a statement signed by his publicity expert by the name of Green denying that Mervin or anyone connected with his headquarters has ever said that Governor Talmadge was supporting them.

As a matter of fact, Governor Talmadge still doesn't trust Mervin.

Now both Mervin and Melvin are desperate. They have been fighting Fred Hand with every method known to the cunning mind of schemers.

To minimize his campaign, they have deliberately spread every false rumor imaginable over the state. They first reported that I was supporting Fred Hand in the day time and Melvin Thompson at night. Everybody in Georgia who's known me, knows that I have been on one side or the other in every campaign for thirty years and I have fought as hard as I know for my side of the fence.

Everybody knows that I do not straddle the fence on anything and never have. They know that this time I am for Fred Hand for many reasons. The principal reason is that my stomach isn't strong enough to stand either Mervin or Melvin.

They have deliberately circulated the report that Fred Hand's campaign was broke and that we were out of money. Well, we haven't been able to get half as much money as Mervin and Melvin have. The reason we haven't been able to get it is because we haven't made the shady deals with the contractors, the materialmen or the liquor racketeers that they both have made. These kind of folks when they make big campaign contributions expect to get it back out of the State Treasury. Neither have we made the trades that have been made through the Purchasing Department to get money. It is through the State Purchasing Department that

Educators Fighting Segregation With $240 Thousand Ford Foundation Grant

Investigation by THE AUGUSTA COURIER into the activities of the Ford-financed Southern Regional Council, shows that it would have been impossible to congregate so many known Communist Party members and persons who have had affiliations with communist-front groups, except by design.

This week, THE AUGUSTA COURIER starts printing the communist-front affiliations of members of the board of directors of the Southern Regional Council, which is now spending a $240 thousand dollar grant from the Ford Foundation to destroy segregation in the public schools of Georgia and the South.

Facts About SRC

During this series, the AUGUSTA COURIER has established the following facts concerning the Southern Regional Council organization:

1. It is the successor to the defunct communist-front Southern Conference for Human Welfare, and is, itself, a haven for known communists and communist-fronters.

2. At least thirty-eight of SRC's officials and members of its board of directors have association with groups and activities which have been branded communist-fronts by responsible federal officials or congressional committees.

3. That two top members of the SRC's board of directors have been branded as known communists in testimony before congressional comittees by former associates in the Party.

Political Action Group

4. That Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of SRC, was also a top official in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and his name has been linked to other "red" fronts, according to records and reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

5. That the SRC, though claiming to be a tax-exempt, charitable activity, is nothing more than a political action group, which has consistently followed the Communist Party line, and has cooperated closely with other groups bent on destroying our way of life in the South.

6. That all except one of the organizers and incorporators of the SRC have been exposed as having records of affiliation with communist-front groups and activities.

Commie-Front Records

This week, THE AUGUSTA COURIER is publishing the communist-front records of two former leading lights in the South-

THIS NEWSPAPER ENDORSES FRED HAND FOR GOVERNOR

(From The LaGrange Daily News)

For a long while now we have surveyed the candidacies of the several gubernatorial runners in the state with much interest. For we, like other voters and citizens in Georgia, were trying to make our choice on the man we would like to see become our next governor.

We believe that Fred Hand, the distinguished Speaker of the Georgia House of Representatives of our General Assembly, is that man. We of this newspaper believe that the guiding hand of Fred Hand is definitely the need of Georgia at this time.

We have not formed this opinion in support of Mr. Hand's candidacy without much deliberation. There are many good men in the race for the state's number one office, but we feel that the qualifications of Fred Hand stand head and shoulders above the qualifications of any of the other eight persons who seek Georgia's highest elective post.

In the light of the campaign we have tried to study all of the issues. And in doing so, we have tried to study how each of the candidates stood on these issues. This, also, has strengthened the candidacy of Fred Hand in our opinion.

Let us look at the issues. The first is segregation. Mr. Hand stands without question a champion of the true tradition of Georgia and we know with him at the state's helm they shall be maintained.

The second real issue is services, even though they have been divided by many of the candidates. Mr. Hand stands for improved services to Georgians and his record supports a clear and advancing economy for our state. The candidate we shall support has shown by action through the years, not in campaign oratory alone, that he will work, and work hard, to better the life of his fellow Georgians.

The third major issue is Georgia's schools and this one is not contained singularly in the segregation issue.

No matter what many will say, Georgia's schools need help and they need a guiding hand for improvement. Fred Hand has shown that he is willing to work to better the state's schools. He is the author of the School Building Authority and Fred Hand has long been a champion for better schools in our state. In this one issue alone, the candidate we support stands far ahead of his opponents.

There is the need for better highways, improved health facilities and welfare aid, aid to farmers and veterans, encouraging the development of industry of our state, and the problems of communism and gangsterism which must be met. Fred Hand will do a good job on all of these. He has the legislative experience and the welfare of his state on his conscience to do a remarkable job with this need. He has shown it by his record.

However, there is a crying need for Georgia today which was the real and final point which has so solidly swayed us to the candidacy of Fred Hand, the man from Pelham in South Georgia. It is this business of money.

Whether we care to face facts or not, Georgia's most serious problem is that of money. Our state needs money for better roads, for better schools, and for better services for its citizens. This will all require money, more money.

Where is this money to come from? Some of it will come from the citizens themselves. More of it must come from a more efficient administration so badly needed in our state affairs.

There is no way for any of the candidates to escape the plain and simple fact that money is Georgia's big problem today. Fred Hand has not tried to run away from it. We need money for everything—schools, roads, industrial development, a program of development for the entire state. All of this takes money.

We believe that Georgia's stake in the future will best be served by following a man who is skilled in this field. And this alone is the most important issue of the campaign of 1954.

How many of us realize that the Governor of Georgia will oversee the handling of approximately $250 million dollars per year for the next four years? Within his four-year term of office our next governor will handle one billion dollars of our money. That's more money than most of us can even visualize.

The decision Georgia must make is who shall be put in charge of the collection of this money and in the spending it. We believe the voters of Georgia have a better chance for good government by electing a man with a wide experience in financial affairs and such a man is Fred Hand.

The other candidates can talk all they want to about segregation, about this and that. But to us the main issue is that of money. When it comes to this Fred Hand is the man.

There is not another man, or woman, in the race to be Georgia's next governor who can even compare with Fred Hand's record as a businessman, and as a high official handling the complex affairs of a growing state government. We believe that this alone qualifies him as the best man to be our next Governor because he best fills Georgia's most crying need—Money and how it shall be spent.

Fred Hand was born in 1904 at Pelham in Mitchell County. He went to the schools of Georgia and grew up in the family store in his home town. Today he is the president of the Hand Trading Company, which is the largest concern of its type in the world.

He is married to the former Voncile Parker of Decatur County and they have five children: Frederick Barrow Jr., Voncile Parker, Alice Virginia, Mary Florence and William Thomas.

Mr. Hand served in the State Senate in 1931 and in 1933 he was elected to the House of Representatives from Mitchell County. In 1941 he was elected Speaker Pro Tem and in 1946 he was elected Speaker of the House. He has served in that capacity for four consecutive terms.

He was the sponsor of the Minimum Foundation Program for Education and also sponsored the State School Building Authority and now serves as its chairman. There is little doubt that he is the best friend Georgia schools have in public office.

Mr. Hand helped re-draft the Constitution of Georgia in 1945 and helped revise Georgia's outmoded tax system in that same year. His voting record in the legislature is one of consistent progress.

We believe that Troup County and all of Georgia will have an able friend in the governor's mansion if Fred Hand becomes our next governor.

Thus we enthusiastically endorse the candidacy of Fred Hand for the next four years as Georgia's chief executive with the full assurance that in him our state will have the best qualified man it can elect to lead our executive affairs.

Fingerprints Smear Mervin's Pardon; Back Now But Not On Page 323 As Was Originally

"The editor of The Statesman, Mr. Eugene Talmadge, has seen fit to write several scathing editorials against me here lately. And by the same privilege of a country newspaper, I will comment on some of his newspaper charges which would be more ludicrous if they were not so asinine."

Mervin was running for governor when he wrote that editorial. He was trying to beat Gene Talmadge. And what he said wasn't so complimentary, was it?

Now he's running again and he's trying to convince everybody what a great Talmadge man he is. Just listen in on his Saturday afternoon rallies.

He's trying to annoint himself as the heir to the Talmadge organization.

This picture I've outlined to you tonight is from the official records of my two opponents — Negotiating Melvin Thompson and Pardoning Mervin Griffin.

It shows you just how ridiculous the political situation is here in Georgia.

For 25 years now we have been voting for candidates for governor on a basis of whether they were Talmadge men or anti-Talmadge men. Some people have hated the Talmadges and others have supported them.

Honestly, now, can you think of anything more ridiculous than voting for a man simply because he voted for or against a Talmadge?

There isn't any Talmadge running in this race. And you have the opportunity for the first time in many years to ignore the factional lines when you cast your ballots.

In this race I'm receiving support from both Talmadge and Anti-Talmadge people. I'm being backed from all sides because people are tired of the bitter political feuding which has been going on in this State.

It's time we stopped this feud.

The Talmadge people are saying I'm the best man in the race.

The anti-Talmadge people are saying I'm the best man in the race.

I deeply appreciate the kindness of both in saying so and I hope that I am.

But the point I'm trying to make is this —let's stop this old feud and put an end to factional fighting and bitterness in Georgia.

You can do it by joining with the thousands of people from both camps in supporting Fred Hand and electing him your next governor.

In conclusion I want to make you this proposition:

Give me a part of your time and your dimes and dollars between now and September 8th and help get me elected.

And when I take office I will give you my full time for four years trying to make you the best governor Georgia has ever had.

I will not use the governor's office for personal or political profit.

I will not use it to build a political machine.

I will not use it to elect myself to any other office and neither will I permit anyone else to use it for any of those purposes.

If you want a governor who will be governor to all the people, I'm your man.

Let me hear from you.

Let me know you are working for me in your county.

And send me in your dimes, quarters and dollars to help pay for the television and radio time I'm using to bring you my messages.

I must have your help if I'm to win this race for you.

Thank you, my friends, and God bless you all.

Over 95 Per Cent Of Georgia Farms Now Served By REA

ATLANTA,—Georgia has come a long way in improving conditions on her farms in recent years. For example, more than 95 per cent of the state's rural territory is now served by electricity and this power is now available to virtually 100 per cent of the rural population, it was revealed by Gov. Herman Talmadge in a speech before the Sumter Electric Membership Corp.'s recent annual meeting in Americus.

"We are particularly proud of the fact that Georgia now ranks fourth among all states of the Union in rural electrification development," Talmadge said. "Less than two years ago we were very much pleased when we learned that 85.6 per cent of the farms were receiving this service. Today the figure is 95.7 per cent, an increase of about ten per cent in the service in this short period.

"When this move started a few people said the plan was 'socialistic.' It is simply a case where the farmers borrowed money from the government over a long period of years at a low interest rate to get a job done that all of them needed."

Pointing out that much of the growth of rural electric service is due to the large number of new uses that have been found for electricity—and of late that includes irrigation—the Governor said:

"At present there are more than 400 ways in which electricity can be used advantageously on the farm. Its utilization is now an economic necessity which can pay its way with substantial profits to the farmer.

"We are paying more attention than ever to irrigation in Georgia. Through the use of electric current, pumps can be operated which can use water from wells, creeks, rivers, springs, lakes and ponds to provide sufficient water for the crops grown on the farms. Irrigation not only provides increased yields and better crops but also provides crop insurance during prolonged dry weather."

Praising the Sumter organization for its "impressive record of achievement" in that part of the state, Talmadge said the corporation now has 1,900 miles of lines serving 5,400 members in eleven counties. The counties are Sumter, Lee, Terrell, Randolph, Chattahoochee, Schley, Marion, Webster, Stewart, Quitman and Dougherty.

Cracks And Otherwise

Two yokels entered an expensive restaurant and, at the end of dinner, a haughty waiter brought two small bowls. They examined them and one said: "Let's ask the waiter." The other insisted: "If we do, he'll know we're a couple of hicks."

After awhile they still hadn't figured out the purpose of the bowls and the first yokel finally asked the waiter what they were. "They are fingerbowls," he was told.

"See," said the second yokel, "you ask a ridiculous question, you get a ridiculous answer."

ern Conference for Human Welfare, and who have been listed as members of the board of directors of the Southern Regional Council. These two officials are helping formulate the policy under which the Ford grant will be spent in an effort to destroy segregation. They are:

DR. BENJAMIN E. MAYS, President, Morehouse College, Atlanta, Georgia, who was listed in the report branding the Southern Conference for Human Welfare as a communist-front, as a member of a nominating committee of SCHW, 1947-48.

DR. CHARLES S. JOHNSON, president, Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee, whose record shows that he worked actively in the SCHW in a leadership capacity, and that he has had a particular affinity for associating himself with numerous communist-front organizations and causes.

Both of these men are presidents of negro colleges.

Their records, as furnished this newspaper by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, follow:

DR. BENJAMIN E. MAYS

The "Daily Worker," March 4, 1948 p. 2), named Benjamin E. Mays as one of the signers of a letter in behalf of Communist deportation cases, which was sponsored by the American Committee for the Protection of Foreign Born. A letterhead of the group contained his name as one of the sponsors (letterhead, December 11 and 12, 1948).

The Attorney General of the United States cited the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born as subversive and Communist in letters furnished the Loyalty Review Board and released to the press by the U. S. Civil Service Commission June 1 and September 21, 1948. The group was redesignated by the Attorney General April 27, 1953, pursuant to Executive Order No. 10450. The Special Committee on Un-American Activities, in its report of March 29, 1944 (p. 155), cited the American Committe for Protection of Foreign Born as "one of the oldest auxiliaries of the Communist Party in the United States."

Benjamin E. Mays, President, Morehouse College, was a member of the initating committee for a Congress on Civil Rights which was held in Detroit, April 27 and 28, 1946. (See: Urgent Summons to a Congress on Civil Rights.) He was an honorary National Chairman of the Civil Rights Congress, New York, as shown by an undated letterhead concerning a conference held October 11, 1947. He signed a call for a national conference of the Civil Rights congress to be held in Chicago. ("Daily Worker," October 21, 1947, p. 5).

Civil Rights Congress

The Civil Rights Congress was cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General in letters released December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948. The group was redesignated pursuant to Executive Order No. 10450. The Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities, in its report of September 2, 1947 (pp. 2 and 19), cited the Civil Rights Congress as an organization formed in April 1946 as a merger of two other Communist-front organizations (International Labor Defense and the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties); "dedicated not to the broader issues of civil liberties, but specifically to the defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party" and "controlled by individuals who are either members of the Communist Party or openly loyal to it."

Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, President, Morehouse College, Atlanta, Georgia, signed a statement by the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship in praise of Wallace's open letter to Stalin, May 1948 (pamphlet, How to End the Cold War and Build the Peace, p. 9). A leaflet, "End the Cold War—Get Together for Peace!" (December 1948) named Benjamin E. Mays as one of the signers of the National Council's appeal to the United States Government to end the cold war and arrange a conference with the Soviet Union. He was a member of the sponsoring Committee of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Committee on Education, as shown by a bulletin of the group, dated June 1945 (p. 22).

Soviet Friendship Council

The National Council of American-Soviet Friendship was cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General in letters released December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948. The group was redesignated pursuant to Executive Order No. 10450. The Special Committee . . . , in its report of March 29, 1944 (p. 156), cited the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship as "in recent months, the Communist Party's principal front for all things Russian . . . . "

He signed an Open Letter sponsored by the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties denouncing U. S. Attorney General Biddle's charges against Harry Bridges ("Daily Worker," July 19, 1942, p. 4; Booklet, "600 Prominent Americans," p. 25). He also signed a statement sponsored by this organization hailing the War Department's order on Commissions for the Communists, as shown by the "Daily Worker," March 18, 1945, (p. 2).

The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties was cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General in letters released December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948. The group was redesignated pursuant to Executive Order No. 10450. The group was cited previously by the Attorney General as "part of what Lenin called the solar system of organizations, ostensibly having no connection with the Communist Party, by which Communists attempt to create sympathizers and supporters of their program." (Congressional Record, September 24, 1942, p. 7687.) The Special Committee . . . , in its report of March 29, 1944 (p. 50), cited the National Federation . . . as "one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party." The Congressional Committee . . . , in its report of September 2, 1947 (p. 3), cited the National Federation . . . as among a "maze of organizations" which were "spawned for the alleged purpose of defending civil liberties in general but actually intended to protect Communist subversion from any penalties under the law."

Cited As Subversive

Letterheads, dated June 12, 1947, and August 11, 1947, of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, list Doctor Mays as a member of the Advisory Board. A leaflet of the organization (exhibit 46, Public Hearings, July 22, 1947, Steele) also contained the name of Doctor Benjamin Mays.

The Southern Negro Youth Congress was cited as subversive and among the affiliates and committees of the Communist Party, U. S. A., which seeks "to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means" by the Attorney General in a letter released December 4, 1947. The group was redesignated pursuant to Executive Order No. 10450. The Special Committee . . . , in its report of January 3, 1940 (p. 9), cited the organization as a Communist front. The Congressional Committee . . . , in its report of April 17, 1947 (p. 14), cited the Southern Negro Youth Congress as "surreptitiously controlled" by the Young Communist League.

The "Daily Worker," April 27, 1947 (p. 24), reported that Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Georgia, signed a statement against the ban on the Communist Party. He signed a statement against the North Atlantic Pact, according to the "Daily Worker" of June 28, 1949 (p. 2). He spoke at a conference on "Jim Crow in the Nation's Capital" ("Daily Worker," December 21, 1950, p. 8).

DR. CHARLES S. JOHNSON

In The Worker of January 11, 1948 (page 3, magazine section, Southern edition), James W. Ford, Communist, reported on an interview with Dr. Charles Spurgeon Johnson, "first Negro President of Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee." The interview was held on the occasion of Dr. Johnson's inauguration as the sixth president of the university, November 6, 7, and 8, 1947."

During this committee's hearings regarding Communist infiltration of Minority Groups in July 1949, Dr. Johnson appeared as a witness and testified that he was president of Fisk University; he told the committee that " I began my academic career, after leaving the University of Chicago, first working as a research director for the Urban League, then as research director for the National Urban League, then as director of the department of social sciences at Fisk University. I have been president of that institution two years." Dr. Johnson further told the committee that "I have served as United States delegate to the first conference of UNESCO in Paris, and to the second conference in Mexico City; as a member of the President's Board of Foreign Scholarships under the Fulbright Act; as a member of an International Commission, under the old League of Nations, to Liberia. I worked with the Department of Agriculture, Department of Labor, Children's Bureau, and served on committees with some of those Departments, including the Department of Justice and the Department of Commerce."

Denies Red Membership

Under oath, Dr. Johnson testified before the committee that "I am not now and never have been a member of the Communist Party." (Hearings Regarding Communist Infiltration of Minority Groups—Part 1, pages 471-475).

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare has been cited as a Communist-front organization which received money from the Robert Marshall Foundation, one of the principal sources of funds by which many Communist fronts operate. (From a report of the Special Committee on Un-American Activities dated March 29, 1944.) Later, it was cited as a Communist-front organization "which seeks to attract southern liberals on the basis of its seeming interest in the problems of the South" although its "professed interest in southern welfare is simply an expedient for larger aims serving the Soviet Union and its subservient Communist Party in the United States" (Committee on Un-American Activities in report dated June 12, 1947).

Dr. Johnson was on the Farm Tenancy Section of the program at a conference of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in Birmingham, Alabama, November 21, 1938, as shown on the official program; the same source named him as a member-at-large of the Southern Council of the organization in 1938-1939. The Call to the organization's second conference which was held in Chattanooga, Tennessee, April 14-16, 1940, named him as one of the sponsors of that conference; he was a member Mervin Griffin is financing his campaign.

Melvin Thompson made a deal with three highway contractors to put up one hundred thousand dollars to start his campaign last spring. These three contractors will control the members to be appointed to the highway department and the liquor racketeers are contributing to both Griffin and Thompson.

But in dribbles and small donations, we are getting enough money to wage the campaign.

At the same time, they shout that Fred Hand is rich. This is not true. I have had occasion to examine his financial position and most country merchants and country lawyers I know over Georgia are worth as much money as Fred Hand. It is true that he operates a large business, but he owns a small percentage of the stock in that business.

Then, Mervin Griffin is denouncing me from every stump in Georgia. Four years ago when I managed Governor Talmadge's campaign and Mervin attached himself to the Governor's coattail, he was telling everybody what a fine fellow I was.

He now says that I ran the pardon racket at the time when he signed his name to the pardons. Well, there is one thing about it. I didn't get any pardons for myself, for any of my clients or for anybody else. Marvin did get a pardon for himself and he issued basketfuls to other people. The way that I knew about the wholesale pardoning of people on the last day of Ed Rivers' administration came about when I went to the Capitol to protest the pardoning of a man who killed his son in Augusta, Georgia. When I got to the Capitol, the Governor was not in town. I found Marvin issuing pardons galore.

He laughed at my protest and told me he was going to pardon the man who killed his own son to collect insurance on his life. He also told me he didn't care what anybody said he was going to turn all of them out that wanted to get out before he left the Capitol that night.

He made good his threat. He stayed in the Capitol until the wee, small hours of the dawn signing and issuing pardons. I have seen some of these pardons. Marvin, or one of his secretaries even signed Ed Rivers' name to some of these. I know his signature and these are not his. Now, whether Ed gave his authority to sign his name, I do not know. Anybody in Georgia who knows Ed Rivers' signature knows that Ed did not sign Marvin's pardon. I have had this signature compared to other official documents in the Capitol. Either Marvin or some secretary or someone else signed Ed's signature to Marvin's pardon.

Now, I have no way of knowing whether Ed Rivers authorized this or not. But I do know that it is customary for someone to be authorized to sign the Governor's name to many documents around the Capitol. When you get a letter from the Governor at any time, it is usually and on most occasions signed by someone else. There are so many signatures until the Governor usually delegates someone to sign for him.

In a great many instances, they use rubber stamps to affix the Governor's name.

So, Mervin ran the pardon racket. He says that he did it out of loyalty to Ed Rivers. It doesn't make any difference why he ran it or how he ran it, the fact remains that he did issue the pardons and ran the racket himself.

All of these rumors are deliberate falsehoods spread with the deliberate intent to confuse and deceive the voters.

But the people of Georgia are beginning to see through the antics of the simonized twins and to realize the sorry records they have made as public officials.

The public knows that Mervin and Melvin have both had on-the-job training under Ed Rivers. Mervin was trained to be a bouncer. He was the rough-neck in the crew. So, he was the man picked above all others for training to bounce the chairman of the Highway Board down the steps of the building on the seat of his britches. Melvin was trained to handle asphalt and the liquor deals. Marvin has somehow secured the benefits of M. E.'s training and is now mixed up not only in the pardon racket, but in the asphalt and liquor deals.

If there ever comes an official investigation of the State Purchasing Department, you are going to read in the record which has been made during this campaign the most sordid scandal ever exposed in the State of Georgia.

Mervin is running that racket through some of the shadiest characters who have ever hung like buzzards around the state capitol. Their names may be called before this campaign is over. The details of their deals and the swindling of the people may be re-counted item by item for the benefit of the people.

Fred Hand's campaign is a wholesome campaign. He offers to Georgia an opportunity to eliminate all these scandals, rackets and shady deals of the past and the present.

Fred Hand gives the people of Georgia a wonderful opportunity. He gives them an opportunity to eliminate the feud which has existed in this state between the Talmadge and the anti-Talmadge people. He gives the people of the state an opportunity to unite without all of the bitterness of the past and to work together in a spirit of friendship and harmony for the progress and the advancement of the people of this state. Georgia has a great opportunity. We are standing on the threshhold of a great development. In order to have this development we must have the people of Georgia working together as a team.

Now, what have we had in the past? About half of the people have been for the Talmadges. About half have been against them. Friend has ferent tune.

Eugene Talmadge jumped on him about the pardon racket in 1946. And in a reply printed as an editorial in his newspaper, The Bainbridge Post-Searchlight, on March 28th, 1946, Mervin said — and I quote:

"And futher, Editor Talmadge, why don't you send one of your henchmen over to the Governor's Office and consult the records and find out that on Page 323 that I received a pardon for contempt of court. This came out of removing the Chairman of the Highway Board from his office. This embarrassment emanated from loyalty to Ed Rivers when he was Governor. I am ashamed of that contempt citation."

Well, all I know is somebody must have been ashamed of this pardon because it was removed from the official records.

We had the records checked for it before I brought the subject up. And it was missing then.

But after I exposed the pardon and the fact that it was locked up in a public official's safe, it reappeared as mysteriously as it had disappeared.

It's back in the books now and you can go over to the State Capitol and read it for yourself. The only difference is it isn't on Page 323 like it was when Mervin put it there.

It's now on Page 593 and its pretty soiled and smeared with fingerprints.

Who took the pardon?

Why was it taken?

Why was it lost for such a long time?

Why was it replaced?

And what do those secretarial symbols under Ed Rivers' signature on that pardon mean?

Those, my friends, are questions which some candidate besides myself will have to answer.

You remember I told you last week why that pardon was issued.

It was issued to get Mervin out of serving a 20-day jail sentence. And he got the sentence for throwing the Chairman of the State Highway Board down the steps of the Highway Building on the seat of his britches.

Mervin's now telling you he's been taking on-the-job training.

That's true, but he hasn't been training to be governor.

When he worked for Ed Rivers he was called executive secretary but he really was training to be a bouncer.

Ed Rivers used him as an official bruiser and bouncer. When he got ready to throw somebody out of office he sent Mervin over to do the job.

Mervin says he carried out orders out of loyalty to Ed Rivers.

Now, we've all heard of honky-tonks, gambling joints and places of ill repute having official bouncers. But Mervin is the only official bouncer the State of Georgia has ever had.

So if you want a bouncer to use in a honky-tonk or some of these other questionable places, Mervin is your man.

Like he says, he's had excellent on-the-job training.

Now, that's enough for Mervin. Let's talk about his twin, Melvin.

Melvin has had some good on-the-job training, too.

While Ed Rivers was training Mervin to be a bouncer, he was also training Melvin.

He didn't think Melvin was strong enough to be a bouncer so he trained him to deal in asphalt.

And when Melvin got to be our accidental governor, he lived up to his training.

He dealt in asphalt.

During this time when he was training under Arnall to be governor, he wrote the most shameful record ever written in the history of the State of Georgia.

Let your minds go back to the governor's race of 1948.

During that campaign Ed and Ellis were negotiating highway contracts for Melvin. Contractors were given contracts all over the State without any competition whatsoever. They were not required to bid. Contracts were handed out to favorites.

During that campaign Herman Talmadge proved that the price of these negotiated roads were increased by the contractors ten per cent and this ten per cent was given to Melvin to finance his campaign.

Melvin has never denied this or the other slimy deals which took place while he was in office.

And now he says he won't discuss his record.

He won't because he can't and stay in this race.

Mervin claims he is the heir to the Anti-Talmadge machine built up by Ed Rivers and Ellis Arnall.

Mervin is trying to ride the Talmadge coattails.

Melvin is trying to ride the Rivers-Arnall coattails.

Now, you good Talmadge people over the State remember that Mervin once was in the Anti-Talmadge machine. But he couldn't get what he wanted from Ed and Ellis so he turned loose from their coattails and he's been grabbing for the Talmadge coattail ever since.

Now let me tell you what kind of a Talmadge man Mervin is.

You know he edits a little weekly newspaper at Bainbridge.

In 1946 while he was working for Ellis Arnall he wrote some nasty editorials condemning Eugene Talmadge. He wrote them because Eugene Talmadge didn't trust Mervin and said so in his newspaper, The Statesman.

On March 28, 1946, Mervin wrote an open letter to Eugene Talmadge. This is what he said—and I quote:

"Many people say you are dishonest but since I can't prove it, I will not be ungentlemanly enough to say that is so."

In the same editorial, he also wrote—and again I quote:

"So I say to you both, you and Ed Rivers are factions of the past and the majority of our people would go fishing before they would be limited to a choice between you. The people have a plague on both your houses."

And a third quotation from that editorial reads like this:

been arrayed against friend and neighbor has been arrayed against neighbor in a bitter feud. Now we have the opportunity to unite together as friends and neighbors behind a wholesome candidate and a wholesome campaign. It is the greatest opportunity the people of this state have ever had.

Fred Hand has thousands of Talmadge people supporting him. Fred Hand has thousands of the anti-Talmadge people supporting him. They are joining hands in this campaign where they have fought bitterly in the past. They are re-newing friendships and they are stopping the old feuds. It is a great opportunity for you to join in this great movement.

I think it is time we all asked ourselves some questions.

Do you want for Governor:

1. Mervin Griffin, who was the official bouncer of the Rivers Administration?

2. Melvin Thompson, whose political fund received fifty cents for every case of liquor sold by John Horace Bowen's crowd in the dry counties of Georgia?

3. Mervin Griffin, who ran the pardon racket during the Rivers Administration?

4. Melvin Thompson who, when he acted as Governor, negotiated highway contracts without bid and collected campaign funds from the contractors as a pay-off for the contracts?

5. Mervin Griffin, who proposes to create two highway departments, one to build roads where federal money is involved and one to build roads where only state money is involved? Where the roads are built with only state money, the federal government cannot check into expenditures and is not required to approve it. Therefore, shady deals are possible without any check.

6. Melvin Thompson, who will abolish the present state highway setup where the members are elected by the legislature and will turn the department over to three highway contractors who put up the sum of one hundred thousand dollars to start him off in the race for Governor?

7. Mervin Griffin, whose supporters have advised Jim L. Gillis, Chairman of the State H'ghway Department that Mervin's first official act will be to fire Jim?

8. Melvin Thompson who has the support of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People? The Atlanta negroes are telling that M. E. has told them that he must publicly take a position for segregated schools to get the votes of the white people, but that when he is elected he will allow the Supreme Court to make him mix the white and the negro children in the schools.

9. Mervin Griffin, who in his own paper on September 14, 1950, said that when the Supreme Court decision came that for a time he would raise sand, but would finally bend under and comply with the Supreme Court decision on segregation?

10. Either one of these simonized twins, Melvin or Mervin, who both had on-the-job training as official bouncers and shady dealers in asphalt and liquor during the Rivers Administration?

If you are willing to endorse such shady deals and such conduct, then you can chose between Mervin and Melvin.

But, if you wish to be proud of your vote, you can vote for Fred Hand. If you vote for Fred Hand, you will be guaranteed:

1. That you will not be ashamed of your vote.

2. That separate schools will be maintained for white and colored children.

3. That the State School Building program will continue.

4. That we will have an adequate program of education in Georgia.

5. That we will keep the highway department out of politics. The members of the board will still be elected by the legislature and that he will recommend that the legislature re-elect Jim Gillis in January.

6. That there will be no negotiated contracts nor shady asphalt deals contracted by the highway department.

7. That there will be no shady deals in the Purchasing Department and that all business people will have an even chance to bid with the purchasing department. The practice of handing out big machinery, truck and tractor deals to a few favorites without competition will be eliminated.

8. That you will have a business-like, efficient and economical administration of state affairs.

9. That more competent and efficient personnel will be furnished to the State Revenue Commissioner so that he can collect all of the income and sales taxes due the state.

10. That the state will have a successful businessman, farmer, legislator and state administrator in the Governor's office.

11. That we will continue to build and develop Georgia so that the income of the people may be increased and the living standards improved.

12. And generally, that you will have the kind of government Georgia ought to have.

So, I urge you and all of your friends to get busy and let's work from now until September the 8th and elect Fred Hand as your next Governor.

If you join us in this endeavor, it will be one of the finest contributions you will ever have an opportunity of making to your state.

of the group's Executive Board, according to an undated leaflet "The South is Closer Than You Think"; he was a member of the Nashville Committee of the organization, as shown on an official report of the group which was undated.

A letterhead of the Southern Negro Youth Congress dated June 12, 1947, named Dr. Johnson as a member of its Advisory Board; the same information appeared on their letterhead of August 11, 1947, and on a page from a leaflet published by the organization.

The Attorney General of the United States cited the Southern Negro Youth Congress as subversive and among the affiliates and committees of the Communist Party, U. S. A., which seeks to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means (press release of December 4, 1947; redesignated April 27, 1953). The Special Committee . . . cited the organization as a Communist-front (report of January 3, 1940); and the Committee on Un-American Activities cited it as "surreptitiously controlled" by the "Young Communist League" (report of April 17, 1947).

Dr. Johnson was a member of the Sponsoring Committee, Committee on Education of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Inc., as shown on the proceedings of the conference on Education About the Soviet Union which was held October 14, 1944 in New York City; a bulletin of the Committee on Education of the National Council dated June 1945 (page 22), also named him as a member of the Sponsoring Committee.

The Special Committee on Un-American Activities cited the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship as having been, "in recent months, the Communist Party's principal front for all things Russian" (Report 1311 of March 29, 1944); the Attorney General cited the National Council as subversive and Communist (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated by the Attorney General April 27, 1953).

A letterhead of the Fourth Annual Conference of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born, held in Washington, D. C., March 2-3, 1940, named Prof. Charles S. Johnson as one of the sponsors of that conference; he was one of the sponsors of the organization's United Nations in America Dinner which was "a tribute to the contributions of the foreign born in America," April 17, 1943.

The American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born is "one of the oldest auxiliaries of the Communist Party in the United States" (Report 1311 of the Special Committee . . . dated March 29, 1944; also cited in a report dated June 25, 1952). The Attorney General cited the organization as subversive and Communist (press releases of June 1 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953).

The program of the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace, arranged by the National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions in New York City, March 25-27, 1949, disclosed the name of Dr. Charles S. Johnson in a list of sponsors of the conference. The Scientific and Cultural Conference was cited as a Communist front which was "actually a supermobilization of the inveterate wheelhorses and supporters of the Communist Party and its auxiliary organizations" (Committee on Un-American Activities in its Review of the conference, released April 19, 1949); in the same review, the National Council was cited as a Communist-front organization.

The January 1943 Message of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, addressed to the United States House of Representatives, was signed by Charles S. Johnson, Director, Department of Social Science, Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee.

The National Federation . . . has been cited as "ostensibly having no connection with the Communist Party, by which Communists attempt to create sympathizers and supporters of their program" (the Attorney General, Congressional Board, September 24, 1942, page 7687); Attorney General Clark cited the organization as subversive and Communist (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948); the Special Committee . . . cited the National Federation as "one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party" (report of March 29, 1944; also cited in reports of June 25, 1942 and January 2, 1943); the Committee on Un-American Activities cited the National Federation as "actually intended to protect Communist subversion from any penalties under the law" (Report 1115 of September 2, 1947).

as a sponsor of the organization's National Conference in Chicago, November 21-23, 1947.

The Civil Rights Congress has been cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953); it was cited as being "dedicated not to the broader issues of civil liberties, but specifically to the defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party" (Committee on Un-American Activities in report of September 2, 1947).

Atwood Signs Appeal

The Daily Worker of February 8, 1939 (page 8), reported that R. B. Atwood had signed an appeal of the Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy to lift the embargo on arms to Loyalist Spain. The Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy has been cited as a Communist-front organization by the Special Committee on Un-American Activities in a report dated March 29, 1944 (page 180).

The official proceedings of the National Negro Congress which was held in 1936 contains the name of Rufus B. Atwood in a list of members of the organization's National Executive Council; the same source named him as a member of the organization's Presiding Committee and General Resolutions Committee; the source identified Dr. Atwood as being from Kentucky.

National Negro Congress

The National Negro Congress was cited by the Attorney General as subversive and Communist (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953; it had previously been cited by the Attorney General as shown in the Congressional Record of September 24, 1942 (pages 7687 and 7688); the organization was also cited by the Special Committee as "the Communist-front movement in the United States among Negroes" (reports of January 3, 1939; January 3, 1940; June 25, 1942; and March 29, 1944).

William E. Cole, Knoxville, Tenn., (Director, SRC).

A letterhead of the League of Young Southerners dated August 13, 1940, contains the name of William E. Cole in a list of sponsors of that group; a letterhead of the Council of Young Southerners dated June 26, 1940, contains the name of William E. Cole in a list of sponsors.

The League of Young Southerners (also known as the Council of Young Southerners) was cited as having "its origin in the Youth Commission of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare," as shown on its letterhead. (From a report of the Committee on Un-American Activities dated June 12, 1947).

Donald Comer, Alabama Industrialist, (Director, SRC).

On May 6, 1949, Mr. Paul Crouch testified before this committee in Executive session, at which time he told the committee he had been a member of the Communist Party for 17 years. Mr. Crouch made the following statement concerning Donald Comer:

Armed With Names

"The Communist Party, armed with the names of important persons as main speakers before the conference (Southern Conference for Human Welfare), obtained a number of other endorsements such as this Professor Nixon, and succeeded in getting the name of Donald Comer and many others who personally are anything but Communists, and, armed with these names, went to Dr. (Frank) Graham and convinced him that the Southern Conference was a bona fide organization interested only in improving the conditions of the South." (See Mr. Crouch's testimony, page 191.)

An official report of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare named Donald Comer as a consultant on Panel 1—Industrial Production; he was identified as Chairman, Avondale and Cowikee Mills, Birmingham, Alabama. He participated in the Farm Tenancy Section of a program of the Southern Conference November 21, 1938, in Birmingham, Alabama (program of the conference which was held from November 20 to 23, 1938); the same source named him as a member of the Committee on Resolutions of the same conference.

Comer Vice Chairman

In a list of officers of the Southern Conference . . . for 1938-1939 which appeared on the same printed program referred to in the last paragraph, Donald Comer was named as one of the "15 Vice Chairmen (1 from each of 13 States and 2 from South at Large)"; he was identified as an Industrialist, owner of the Avondale Mills, Inc., Birmingham. He spoke on the subject, Industrial Life in the South, at the afternoon session Monday, April 15th, of the Second Southern Conference for Human Welfare which was held in Chattanooga, Tennessee, as shown on the Call to that conference in which source he was identified as President, Avondale Mills, Alabama. (Citation of the Southern Conference appears on page 1 of this memorandum.)

The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties has been cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General of the United States; it had previously been cited as an organization used by the Communist Party to "create sympathizers and supporters of their program" (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953; Congressional Record of September 24, 1952, page 7687); the group was cited by the Special Committee on Un-American Activities as "one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party" (reports of March 29, 1944; June 25, 1952; and January 2, 1943); also cited by the Committee on Un-American Activities as having been "spawned for the alleged purpose of defending civil liberties in general but actually intended to protect Communist subversion from any penalties under the law" (report dated September 2, 1947).

Luther P. Jackson, Petersburg, Va. (Director, SRC).

Dr. Luther P. Jackson, President, Virginia Voters League, Petersburg, Virginia, signed a statement of the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact, calling for International Agreement to Ban Use of Atomic Weapons, as shown by the statement, attached to a press release of the group December 14, 1949 (page 17).

Peaceful Alternatives

The Committee for Peaceful Alternatives . . . has been cited as having been organized "to further their (Communists in the United States) part in the Moscow campaign" (report of the Committee on Un-American Activities originally released April 1, 1951).

The Daily Worker of April 26, 1948 (page 11) reported that Luther P. Jackson of Virginia State College had signed a letter defending the Jefferson School of Social Science, cited as an "adjunct of the Communist Party" (the Attorney General of the United States in press release of December 4, 1947; redesignated April 27, 1952); "At the beginning of the present year (1944), the old Communist Party Workers School and the School for Democracy were merged into the Jefferson School of Social Science" (report of the Special Committee . . .dated March 29, 1944).

Dr. Luther P. Jackson of Virginia State College signed a statement on behalf of Eugene Dennis, as reported in the Daily Worker of November 22, 1948 (page 7); he also signed a statement of the Civil Rights Congress in defense of Gerhart Eisler (Daily Worker, February 28, 1947, page 2).

Civil Rights Congress

The Civil Rights Congress was formed in April 1946 as a merger of two other Communist-front organizations, the International Labor Defense and the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties; it was "dedicated . . . specifically to the defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party" (report of the Committee on Un-American Activities dated September 2, 1947). The group was cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953).

Rev. D. V. Jemison, President, (Director, SRC).
National Baptist Convention, Selma, Ala.

In testimony by Mr. Walter S. Steele in public hearings before this committee in July 1947, D. V. Jemison was named as a member of the advisory board of the Southern Negro Youth Congress; the information appeared on a leaflet published by the organization and presented by Mr. Steele as Exhibit No. 46. (See page 96 of the public hearings for Mr. Steele's testimony.)

The same information appeared on the organization's letterhead dated June 12, 1947 and another dated August 11, 1947. The Attorney General has cited the Southern Negro Youth Congress as subversive and among the affiliates and committees of the Communist Party, U. S. A., which seeks to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means. (Press release of December 4, 1947; redesignated April 27, 1953.) The Special Committee . . . cited the organization as a Communist front in its report released January 3, 1940.

Baptist Leader Jemison

An Urgent Summons to a Congress of Civil Rights in Detroit, April 27 and 28, 1946, contained the name of Dr. D. V. Jemison, president, National Baptist Convention, in a list of sponsors of the congress (printed in the Committee's Report on the Civil Rights Congress which was released September 2, 1947, page 22). The Civil Rights Congress was formed at Detroit in April 1946 as a merger of the International Labor Defense and the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties; citation of the group appears on page 1 of this memorandum.

Dr. D. V. Jemison, president, National Baptist Convention of USA, was one of those who signed an appeal to the President of the United States "to effect immediate release of Gerhart Eisler, permitting him to return to his homeland" (from PM for March 3, 1947, page 20, reprinted in the Committee's Report on the Civil Rights Congress, pages 28-29).

A statement of the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact, attached to a press release of December 14, 1949 (page 1), contains the name of the Rev. D. V. Jemison, President, National Baptist Convention, U. S. A., Inc., Selma, Alabama, in a list of initiators of a Statement Calling for International Agreement to Ban Use of the Atomic Weapons; a letterhead of the organization dated March 30, 1950 contained a facsimile of his signature; a leaflet of the organization entitled Statement of Policy which was issued in December 1950, names him as Vice Chairman of the organization.

Group Aids Commies

The Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact has been cited as an organization which was formed as a result of the Conference for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact to further the cause of "Communists in the United States doing their part in the Moscow campaign" (report on The Communist "Peace" Offensive originally released by the Committee on Un-American Activities April 1, 1951).

On the Call to the Mid-Century Conference for Peace, May 29-30, 1950, in Chicago, the name of the Rev. D. V. Jemison, president, National Baptist Convention, Selma, Alabama, appeared in a list of Initiating Sponsors of the conference, cited as a meeting called by the Committee for Peaceful Aternatives . . . and aimed at assembling as many gullible persons as possible under Communist direction and turning them into a vast sounding board for Communist propaganda" (from the committee's "Peace" offensive report).

The Daily Worker of August 10, 1950 (page 1) and August 14, 1950 (page 2) both named Dr. D. V. Jemison, president, National Baptist Convention, as having signed the World Peace Appeal; an undated leaflet received for files September 11, 1950 and entitled Prominent Americans Call For . . . named him as having endorsed the Appeal.

Propaganda Campaign

The World Peace Appeal was cited as a petition campaign launched by the Permanent Committee of the World Peace Congress at its meeting in Stockholm, March 16-19, 1950; it was lauded in the Communist press and put "every individual Communist on notice that he 'has the duty to rise to this appeal' . . . (and) received the official endorsement of the Su-

David D. Jones, identified as President, Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C., signed the January 1943 Message of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, addressed to the U. S. House of Representatives (from a leaflet attached to an undated letterhead of the organization); with the same identification shown, Dr. David D. Jones signed a statement of the National Federation, hailing the War Department's order on commissions for Communists (from the Daily Worker of March 18, 1945, page 2). Citation of the National Federation . . . appears on page 3 of this memorandum.

As shown in the Daily Worker of February 28, 1947 (page 2), Dr. David D. Jones signed a statement of the Civil Rights Congress in defense of Gerhart Eisler. (Citation of the Civil Rights Congress has been shown on page 1 of this memorandum.)

The Council on African Affairs was cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General of the United States (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953). The following sources show Dr. David D. Jones as a member of the Council on African Affairs: A pamphlet of the group entitled For a New Africa (April 14, 1944, page 36); a leaflet entitled What of Africa's Place in Tomorrow's World? (June 26, 1944); a letterhead of the organization dated May 17, 1945; their pamphlet entitled Seeing is Believing (1947); another pamphlet, Africa in the War; another entitled 8 Million Demand Freedom; and a leaflet, The Job to be Done, which was used as Exhibit No. 69 by Mr. Walter Steele during his testimony before the committee in July 1947.

Letter To Governor

Dr. David Jones (with no middle initial shown) who was identified as President, Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C., was a member of the Committee for Defense of the Food, Tobacco and Agricultural Workers Union, CIO, according to the Daily Worker of July 24, 1947 (page 3). The Food, Tobacco and . . . was expelled from the CIO by a vote of the Executive Board, February 15, 1950, effective March 1, 1950, as shown on a press release of the 12th CIO Convention, November 20-24, 1950.

The New York Times of October 9, 1914 (page 12) announced that an Open Letter had been addressed to the Governor of New York State, asking him to grant a pardon to Morris U. Schappes who was serving time from a sentence "arising from the 1940 Rapp-Coudert investigation of subversive activity in the New York City schools. Morris Schappes told the Committee he had been a Communist . . . " Among those named in the Times article as having signed the Open Letter was David D. Jones, President, Binnell College, Greensboro, N. C.

The Schappes Defense Committee was cited as Communist by the Attorney General of the United States (press release of April 27, 1949; redesignated April 27, 1953); it was cited as "a front organization with a strictly Communist objective, namely the defense of a self-admitted Communist who, was convicted of perjury in the courts of New York" (Special Committee . . . in a report dated March 29, 1944).

One Jacob L. Reddix, identified as being from the State of Indiana, was a member of the National Executive Council of the National Negro Congress, as shown on the official proceedings of that congress which was held in 1936 (page 41 of the proceedings).

Packed With Commies

The National Negro Congress was cited as "deliberately packed with Communists" and as a subversive and Communist organization by the Attorney General (Congressional Record, September 24, 1942, pages 7687 and 7688; press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948, redesignated April 27, 1953); the Special Committee cited the organization as "the Communist-front movement in the United States among Negroes" (reports of January 3, 1949; January 3, 1940; June 25, 1942; and March 29, 1944).

Austin T. Walden, Attorney. (Fund Raiser, SRC). Atlanta, Georgia.

T. Walden of Georgia would lead a workshop discussion at the National Lawyers Guild conference on civil rights, legislation and discrimination in New York City, October 10-12, 1952. (See citation of the Guild on page 6.) Austin T. Walden signed a letter of opposition to the Mundt anti-Communist bill (letter and list of persons, May 12, 1948). Walden was affiliated with the Georgia Chapter of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, according to a letterhead of that group.

racket and who had been the official bouncer for Ed Rivers when he was governor?

How would you feel when you read in the newspapers of the nation if you should elect a man who admittedly has been engaged in the liquor racket in Georgia and who has been engaged in a highway racket in Georgia?

Now, some people say that when we call attention to these things in the past records of Melvin Thompson and Marvin Griffin that we are slinging mud.

Now, mind you, we are not slinging mud. We are not discussing their personal affairs, not their private lives.

When we call these things to your attention we are discussing their public and official records. When Marvin Griffin ran the pardon racket for Ed Rivers he was an official of this state and what he did was the official record of the Executive Secretary to the Governor.

When M. E. Thompson was running the liquor racket and the highway racket he was acting as governor of your state.

When Marvin Griffin threw Lint Miller down the steps of the highway office and put him in the hospital he was an official of this state and held an official position with Ed Rivers. I do not know exactly what official title he had at the time, but actually he was Ed's official bouncer. He was the only man Ed had around who was bruiser enough to go over to the highway department and throw a man out of the building who refused to leave.

So, we are discussing their official records. We are discussing their conduct in office when you tried both of these simonized twins on a former occasion.

We are only showing you what they did when they were in authority and you can only judge what they will do in the future by studying their records in the past.

These facts are official records. They are not denied by either candidate. What they have done is a part of the history of Georgia and this conduct is written into the official records and history of this state.

Now, are you going to fall into this trap? Are you going to listen to the political propaganda they are spreading that you are forced to vote for one or the other?

There are good men in the race and men who can be depended upon. Therefore, there is no reason for you to be forced into this trap.

Then, why shouldn't a voter vote his conscience and vote for the best man?

The supporters of these two simonized twins have been frantically running around the state trying to tell you that the other candidates do not have a chance and that you have got to vote for one or the other.

Now, wouldn't that also be a pretty come-off? Are we to say that we are spineless cowards and we do not have the courage to vote our convictions and that our sole motive in voting is trying to guess the winner and vote on the winning side.

I don't believe the people of Georgia are going to be fooled by this tommyrot. I believe that the people of Georgia are going to vote their consciences and vote for the best man in the race.

I believe that I am supporting the best man in the race. However, there is one thing of which I am sure. That outside of those who are on the payroll of the state and those who are trying to get on the payroll of the state, outside of those who are profiting in their dealings with the state, or hope to profit in their dealings with the state, that every man who votes for either Melvin Thompson or Marvin Griffin is ashamed of his vote.

As evidence of this fact, the Associated Press has already reported that their survey shows that more than one half of the people of Georgia haven't yet decided for whom they will vote.

As further evidence of the fact that the average person is ashamed of both Melvin Thompson and Marvin Griffin, let me tell you this:

The other day, I asked a prominent citizen of a good county in Georgia to make a survey of his county and give me his best opinion of the political situation in his county. He reported that he spent two days going over his county. He said that when he talked with a person who was supporting Fred Hand, Tom Linder or Charlie Gowen that they spoke it out loud and seemed to be proud of their vote. But he said that every man he talked to who was supporting either Marvin Griffin or Melvin Thompson took him around the corner and whispered to him as if they were ashamed to let anybody know what they were going to do.

Well, I say that the majority of the people of this state are ashamed of both of them and if either one of these birds should be elected that the whole state will live to be ashamed of the man who wins.

It isn't possible for either one of them to have decency, honesty or economy in government. Both of them are making promises enough to ruin and wreck their administrations.

Both of them are mixed up with deals in liquor, asphalt and highway contracts and promises of business through the purchasing department that will produce a scandal in this state and make every decent person in this state ashamed of his own government.

Now, let's look at the situation for a minute.

We have made great progress in Georgia. We have launched the state on a fine school program and we will be spending not less then $125,000,000.00 next year on education as well as being in the midst of a $200,000,000.00 school building program. We will be spending $70,000,000.00 a year to build highways and farm-to-market roads in this state. We will be building hospitals all over Georgia and we will have the biggest welfare program in the history of the state to care for our institutions and rebuild Georgia.

We're naturally and justifiably proud of what we've accomplished.

But we can't afford to relax our efforts.

We can't afford to let this steady march of progress halt or hesitate.

We must continue to grow and advance.

It's necessary that we have more industry in Georgia. Each of our towns needs to develop new industry among its own people and attract industry from other sections of the nation into its area.

It's our hope that our people can build and operate as much as possible of the industry we need. And at the same time we must attract new industry and new business from other areas.

We mustn't halt our progress in building roads.

During the next four years our State Highway Department will have nearly 300-million dollars to spend—more than 70-million dollars a year.

We must take this money and use it to build a system of roads which will enable us to develop our State and increase the prosperity of our people.

This is no time for toll roads.

This is the time for building free roads to serve every community of the State and every visitor to the State.

More and more the business of the State is being conducted over our highways.

Our entire tourist trade which is growing every year depends upon them. The only way we can encourage it is by having an adequate system of roads in every direction.

And while we are building through highways, we mustn't forget that the farmers and the people who live in the country are entitled to good, hard-surfaced roads, too. They must have them to get to their markets, their schools and their churches.

If you elect Fred Hand your governor, he will see that this 300-million dollars

Thompson's 18-Month Record Of Rascality, Griffin's Contempt For Law Reviewed

is spent to build you a system of free roads which will help increase the prosperity of all the people.

Although roads are important, building them isn't the most important thing for our State to do.

Our greatest resource is our children; yours and mine.

We cannot be content with providing them with second-rate education.

They are entitled to the best and it shall be my purpose, as governor, to give them the best system of education money can buy.

I'm for the proposed Adequate Program of Education. And I believe if this State is managed in a business-like manner—if our taxes are collected vigorously and impartially and if present tax loopholes are closed up—we can finance an Adequate Program of Education without crippling any of the other activities of our state government.

Georgians' per capita income is about 500-dollars a year less than the national average. People in many states are able to earn nearly twice as much as the people of Georgia are able to earn.

This economic problem will never be solved until we have a better-educated and a more-skilled people.

It shall be my purpose to see to it that the people of Georgia have an educational system which will give them the knowledge and skills necessary to solve this problem and increase their productivity.

Likewise we shall not forget our sick people.

We'll continue to build hospitals wherever they're needed.

We'll continue to look after the unfortunate people who are in our hospitals and institutions.

We're not going to neglect our old people. We'll match every dollar the federal government offers us so that aged citizens can get larger pensions than they're receiving today.

How are we going to continue this progress in Georgia?

Our future development depends upon the type of government we have in the State Capitol.

We can't encourage our own people to build new industries or new industries to come into Georgia unless we have a stable government—one which inspires the confidence of the people who will invest their money in these enterprises.

These industries and investors must know that they won't be punished or gouged.

They must know that they'll have a state government they can trust.

They must know that they'll have stability in Georgia.

Let me ask you a question.

What do you suppose would happen in Georgia during the next four years if, on the night of September 8th, the newspapers, wire services and radio and television networks announced to the world that Georgians had elected a man governor who has a reputation for being mixed up in a pardon racket?

What do you suppose would happen if they announced to the world that you had elected a man governor who had operated a liquor racket when he was in office once before?

One of the candidates, as you know, was executive secretary to Former Governor Ed Rivers. He signed hundreds of pardons which caused a shameful scandal and even pardoned himself. He threw the State Highway Director down the steps of the State Highway Building and put him in the hospital.

Another of the candidates served 18-months acting governor. He let a notorious racketeer sell millions of dollars worth of liquor in dry counties and collected 50-cents for each case sold. He negotiated hundreds of highway contracts and his campaign fund got the kickbacks.

How much confidence do you think investors would have in Georgia if either of these men were elected?

Frankly, I don't think that's going to happen. I hope you won't let it happen.

Now, suppose the newspapers, wire services and radio and television networks announced to the world that you've elected a sound businessman as your next governor?

In that event the people of this nation wouldn't be afraid to invest their money in Georgia. They would have confidence in our State and its leadership.

I say that to you because they would know in that event that Fred Hand has a life-long record as a safe and sane businessman . . . that during the 22 years I have served in the Legislature my opponents have found nothing in my record they can criticize . . . that I've handled 130-million dollars of your money in building school houses without the first suspicion being cast upon my transactions.

When I'm elected the newspapers, wire services and radio and television networks will tell the world that you've elected a man who has behind him a background of stability and a business and political record that cannot be attacked. They'll tell the world that I'm the man Governor Herman Talmadge picked when he needed somebody to direct Georgia's vast school building program.

Marvin Griffin has been eliminated from this race.

His campaign has collapsed and he's losing ground rapidly every day.

He's been his own undoing. He's killed his chances in two ways.

In the first place, he proposed a plan to preserve segregation that is utterly stupid and asinine. He told the Georgia Education Commission he would require everybody to live in Georgia a whole year and keep their children at home before they could send them to school. Then he said he would increase the size of county school boards from five to 100 members.

You and I all know that the foremost question in everybody's mind right now is how to keep segregation. And tommyrot like Mr. Griffin's proposal is not in keeping with the gravity of the situation.

In the second place, people had forgotten that Marvin was Ed Rivers' faithful lackey. They had forgotten that he issued all those hundreds of pardons to criminals all over Georgia. They had forgotten that he pardoned himself. They had forgotten that he single-handedly threw Lint Miller out of the State Highway Department and sent that frail, little man to the hospital with injuries.

Now that Marvin has cracked up, we've got to attend to Mr. M. E. Thompson.

You've tried Melvin as acting governor.

You know what he did then and you know what he'll do if he's elected again.

You know how he used millions of your dollars in negotiating highway contracts with unscrupulous contractors instead of letting the contracts to the lowest bidders.

You know how he let John Horace Bowen take over the State Revenue Department and Melvin fire a capable revenue Commissioner and replace him with one who would play ball with John Horace.

You've seen and heard of the report that one of the most respected judges in Georgia made about the activities of Mr. Thompson and Mr. Bowen. Judge Claude Shaw of the Fulton County Superior Court said . . . and I quote . . .

"John Horace Bowen is the biggest liquor racketeer that I have uncovered and the most flagrant liquor law violator in Georgia. Bowen became powerful because of his personal and political alliance with Mr. Thompson. He was able to flaunt the law and be able to go unpunished. He and his gang sold millions of dollars of liquor in practically every dry county in Georgia."

My friends, the choice is yours.

Do you want to advertise to the world that you've elected a liquor racketeer as your governor?

Do you want to advertise to the world that you've elected a man who made shady highway contract deals as your governor?

Do you want to advertise to the world that you've elected a man who has run a pardon racket as your governor?

Do you want to advertise to the world that you've elected a man who was the official bouncer for Ed Rivers as your governor?

If you agree with me that we should not be besmirch the fair name and good record of Georgia, then I ask you to look around among the other candidates and pick the best man to be Governor of Georgia.

I hope that my record for the past 30 years will commend itself to you and that you will feel that I am the best man.

If you do, then I ask you and all the people of Georgia to join with me between now and September 8th to defeat M. E. Thompson, John Horace Bowen and the three contractors in this state who are attempting to force M. E. Thompson on you again.

It's a crusade and I need your help.

I don't have the help of the racketeers or the contractors.

I don't have their big money to spend.

But I promise you that if you will give me your time and effort during the remainder of this campaign, I'll give you four years of consecrated service in an effort to have a clean, decent, honest, stable, business-like government in Georgia.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

to provide pensions for the blind and the aged. We will have the biggest program this state has ever had to promote the health of our people.

We now have a stable and a progressive government in Georgia.

As a result of our forward-looking policies and our stable government, Georgia is the center of attraction in the entire Southeast for new industries and new businesses of every kind. During the last five years 450 new industries have come into the Atlanta area alone. Every town, city and county in Georgia is now bidding for new industry.

All over this state, the people are encouraging local people to create new business and new industry and we are inviting people from outside of the state to come here and take advantage of the wonderful opportunity we have.

Surely, Georgia is on the march. We are making progress and have a great future unless we fumble the ball.

Now, we can fumble the ball and halt the progress that we have been making.

The finest way I know to halt this progress is to elect a governor who does not inspire the confidence of the people of the state and the people of the nation.

Now, if we elect Marvin Griffin governor, how can we expect new business and new industry in Georgia?

Suppose you lived in a distant state and were figuring on locating a new industry in Georgia, or a new business in Georgia, or thinking of moving to this state, what would you do if you read in the paper that the people of Georgia had elected him governor when you knew that he had participated in a pardon racket in this state and had been Ed Rivers' official bouncer and used to literally throw people out of public office?

Even the people of Georgia could have no confidence in their government with Marvin Griffin as its head and people who wanted to invest their money here wouldn't take a chance in Georgia.

Now, suppose you lived in a distant state and was thinking of locating a new industry or a new business in Georgia and investing your life's savings here. Would you do it if you knew that M. E. Thompson was governor after he had been mixed up in the liquor racket with John Horace Bowen and the shady highway deals that he made when he was acting governor of this state on a former occasion.

We cannot command the respect or the confidence of the people of the nation with either one of these birds in the governor's office.

You would not trust your government with either one at the helm and you could not expect the people of the nation to trust your government or to have the faith in the state that is necessary to attract new industry and new business.

It is too great a price to pay to vote for either of these birds and the people of Georgia should make up their minds that they are not trying to get on anybody's bandwagon, but that they are banding together to elect the best man for governor.

I hope you will study the records of all the candidates. They all have a record and you are entitled to know what it is.

I believe that if you study the record of Fred Hand you will reach the conclusion that he is the best man for Georgia.

Now, Fred Hand isn't a silver-tongued orator and neither does he have the capacity to hold great crowds spellbound with honeyed words and tricky phrases.

On the contrary, Fred Hand is a plain farmer and a businessman.

He has demonstrated his business ability by making a success of a big business concern in Georgia and by the operation of his own farm.

While Fred Hand is not a rich man he heads a big business in South Georgia and he has managed that business in such a manner as to make a success out of it.

Then too, he has served 22 years in the legislature, and eight years he was Speaker of the House.

And after this 22 years experience, Governor Talmadge appointed him to run the State School Building Authority. This authority is in process of building $200,000,000.00 worth of school buildings in this state. Already $130,000,000.00 dollars worth of these buildings are under construction in the various counties and communities of this state.

During all this time, no one has been able to point a finger of suspicion at Fred Hand or to say one thing about his official conduct.

So, I say to you that Fred Hand has proved himself and his ability as a businessman, as a member of the legislature, as Speaker of the House, and as head of the State School Building Authority.

If you elect Fred Hand governor the people of the state will have confidence in your government, in its honesty and in its integrity and people all over the world who are thinking of investing their life's savings in Georgia will have confidence in Georgia.

If you elect Fred Hand your governor the march of progress will continue.

If you elect either Melvin Thompson or Marvin Griffin as your governor, then you have destroyed the faith of the people everywhere in the integrity and in the stability of your state government.

Let's not elect a bouncer as governor. Let's not elect a pardon racketeer as governor. Let's not elect a liquor racketeer as governor. Let's not elect a highway racketeer as governor.

These politicians who are supporting Thompson and Griffin have shrewdly designed a trap for you to enter.

Now, you can walk into the trap if you like or you can vote for the best man for governor.

Talmadge Talks On Pet Topic: Farming

ATLANTA,—There's one subject Gov. Herman Talmadge just naturally likes to talk on. It's agriculture any phase of agriculture. For example, on the same day recently the farmer-governor addressed the annual convention of the Georgia Bankers Assn.'s County Key Bankers Division at Rock Eagle Park, near Eatonton, an the North Georgia Veterinary Supplies' annual barbecue at Gainesville. Main topic in both instances: Agriculture.

Georgia's leading position in the hatchery and poultry industry is due in large part to the service agencies which keep them supplied with the latest types of feed and disease control materials, he told the large gathering at the barbecue which was given for some 500 poultry feed dealers and hatcherymen of the area. Said he:

"We (the present state administration) have gone all-out in encouraging experimentation and developing other facilities for service to poultry farmers in Georgia."

To the County Key Bankers he said: "This group of bankers and businessmen, through the agricultural committee, have adopted a definite program which is being carried out to aid progressive agricultural development in the state . . . The key banker is the spark plug in promoting all banks' interest and support in agricultural improvement programs."

Richmond Group Seeks Restoration Of States' Rights; Hugh Grant, Former U. S. Ambassador Heads Association

Federal High Court Ruling In School Segregation Cases Revive Ancient Fight

Richmond County has organized an association to restore states' rights.

The Supreme Court decision in the segregation cases gave rise to this organization. The organizers claim that this decision took away from the states all rights to handle their internal affairs or their customs and was the last straw in the destruction of the rights of the states.

So, now they are after restoring states' rights. They hope that their organization will spread and be a state-wide organization and with the final view that it may become South-wide, to promote an organized fight to pass a Constitutional amendment or to do whatever else is necessary to return to the states the power which the states reserved themselves when the Constitution was adopted.

Hugh Grant, a former ambassador to Thailand, is President of the organization, Roy V. Harris is Vice President and Rodney S. Cohen is Secretary-Treasurer until a permanent organization is adopted.

Recently, the association sent out a letter inviting membership and stating the purpose of the organization.

The letter is as follows:

Following the U. S. Supreme Court ruling of May 17, 1954 declaring racial segregation in the public schools unconstitutional, a small group of Richmond County citizens agreed to try to establish an organization with a view to arousing our citizens to the full recognition of the threat against our State and local laws, institutions, customs and traditions. An informal, unpublicized meeting of citizens was held early in June. A second meeting was held on July 16, at which time the action taken at the previous meeting was endorsed, an organization established, name selected, temporary officers chosen, and a planning committee designated to formulate a definite program of action.

The organization, ASSOCIATION FOR THE RESTORATION OF STATES' RIGHTS, is not affiliated with any political organization or any other group. Its program is designed to investigate and challenge any unwarranted Federal encroachments upon the rights of the people of the several States under their State Constitutions and laws. Its methods will be open and above-board and opportunity will be afforded for full and free discussions of the problems confronting the people of the States as the result of such encroachments. The general policies of the Association were outlined in a newspaper article which was published on the front page of The Augusta Chronicle on Sunday, July 18, 1954, and subsequently in the Congressional Record on July 28, 1954 through the courtesy of Representative

By ROY V. HARRIS

When you read this, the September 8 Primary will be over.

It is being written before the results of the Primary are known. However, even though I do not know what the results will be I would like to comment upon the race.

In the first place, I would like to say that the man who has lost more face and more prestige as a result of the campaign than anybody else is Governor Talmadge.

There are many reasons for this. It was Governor Talmadge who gave M. E. Thompson his first shot in the arm. When Governor Talmadge stated that if more than one of his friends ran for governor that he was going to Lovejoy and watch M. E. Thompson get elected governor, he created a bandwagon psychology in favor of Thompson. Governor Talmadge is the man who put Thompson in the race by this statement. Otherwise, Thompson would have been a nonentity in the race.

Thompson capitalized on this statement and urged all the weak sisters to get on his bandwagon.

Then Governor Talmadge made a lot of his friends mad when he gave a statement to the newspapers indicating that Fred Hand had lied about Marvin Griffin's pardon. The governor had told too many people that he had this pardon locked up in his safe before the incident happened and all of these people spread the word that the governor had told them that he had it.

I do not know whether the governor had the pardon or not, but I do know that he told me he had it and he told a lot of other people over Georgia that he had it. This has become pretty well known over the state and it has left the governor in a ridiculous position.

Then too, the Governor promised Fred Hand that he would take no part in the race. He stated to me on several occasions that he would not take any part and he would just vote for his choice. In addition to making the promise and telling other people this is what he would do, he announced to the people of Georgia through the newspapers that he would take no part in the campaign.

Yet, he had the officials at the state Capitol putting all the pressure they could in behalf of Marvin Griffin. While Fred Hand was repeating over and over on the stump Governor Talmadge's promise to him and reminding the people of the fact that the Governor had publicly stated he would take no part, Governor Talmadge was working night and day for Marvin Griffin. He was calling people and urging them to consolidate behind Marvin. He was talking to them in his office.

These same people whom the Governor called and these people he talked to in person knew that Governor Talmadge had stated publicly that he was not going to take part in the race.

After the Governor had called these people and seen them in person, they went into the various counties and told the Governor's friends that the Governor wanted them to vote for Marvin Griffin. These people thought something was funny when they were reading in the papers that the Governor was having no part in the campaign and yet his leaders were telling them that he had asked them to help carry the county for Marvin Griffin.

This one thing caused the Governor to lose a lot of the goodwill that he had built up in Georgia during the past four years.

Then too, Dixon Oxford, after a conference with the Governor, took over the Highway Department. Jim Gillis said that under the circumstances he was going home and that he would not be back until after the election, if ever.

Fourteen more persons who have been listed by official publications of the Southern Regional Council have been turned up by the Augusta COURIER as having previous association with one or more Communist-front groups.

Half of those included in this week's expose by the COURIER were former top officials and workers of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, an organization now defunct and previously branded by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities as a Communist-front.

This newspaper, in its series of articles on the Ford Foundation-financed SRC, has named and proved that 25 members of the Board of Directors of this organization were formerly the leading lights of the red-front SCHW.

38 Have Red Records

In addition to this, we have shown that at least 38 officials, members of the executive staff or Directors of the SRC have had known records of association with Communist or Communist-front groups.

We have shown that two persons who have been branded as known Communists in testimony before Congressional Committees were the very highest officials in SCHW and are listed on the Board of Directors of SRC in literature of that organization.

We have proved through documentary evidence that the Southern Regional Council is in fact the successor organization to the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and, as such, has been a haven for known Communists and Communist-fronters.

Veil Stripped From SRC

We have stripped the veil from the fact that SRC, though claiming to be a tax exempt charitable activity is solely a political action group consistently following the Communist Party line and is working night and day to destroy segregation in all facets of life in the South.

This week the Augusta COURIER is printing 14 more records of persons who have been listed as directors of SRC.

The records of these people show a particular affinity for Communist-front groups and Communist-front activities.

Following are the names of the Directors of the SRC and their records of association with these groups, as contained in the public records, files and publications of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities:

THE SEGREGATION FIGHT

The drive to destroy segregation has just begun. The Supreme Court decision was not the end, but the beginning.

The ultimate aim is to destroy the civilization of the South and to destroy the nation by creating a mulatto race in America.

Harry Emerson Fosdick, as leader of a committee of one hundred, has agreed to raise one hundred thousand dollars for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to carry on the law suits that are necessary.

Misguided and half-witted church people are falling in line all over the nation.

Immediately after the decision, Dean James A. Pike of the New York Cathedral criticized churches of the country for not abolishing racial segregation in the churches.

In a sermon on May 23, 1954 he said the fact that the Supreme Court says that segregation in the public schools violates the constitution is a judgment against the church itself because the church still follows the pattern of segregation. And segregation is often practiced in church schools, hospitals and other institutions and in our lay associations of men and women, some of them bearing the name of the church, according to the Dean.

So, he called upon the churches over the country to do away with segregation.

On May 11, 1954 the Protestant Episcopal diocese of New York voted unanimously to reject the invitation of the City of Houston, Texas, for the church's convention to be held there in 1955 because they practice segregation in Houston, Texas.

By strange coincidence, the convention of the diocese was held in the New York Cathedral.

Likewise, ministers and preachers over the South have been hailing with glee the decision of the Supreme Court and asking for the abolition of segregation.

Now we shall see what these so-called Christian people do in their own churches. In most of them, they would be willing to admit the rich negroes, but they will all be opposed to the poor negro because he can't contribute to the salaries of the preacher or the expenses of the church as the members of some churches are expected to do.

So, it can be safely said, regardless of all these supposed ministers are now saying from their pulpits, that the poor negro will catch hell if he tries to get into one of these high society white churches.

Yet, they who are protected by their wealth and their position from having to mix and mingle with the poor negro are trying to ram it down the throats of white people who can't help themselves.

It all makes me sick

No wonder when a man comes along like Billy Graham that you find the people of the country hungrying and thirsting to hear him preach.

They are fed up with the stiff-necked hypocritical attitude of some of their church leaders. They are literally starved to death for the real thing.

But watch these church leaders and these hypocritical preachers who are now gloating over the Supreme Court decision. No poor negro will be welcome in their church.

Yet, subtly following a sickly philosophy they are trying to destroy the civilization of the South and the traditions of a great people and a great section of the nation.

They have fallen to the siren voices of the communist fellow travelers who are seeking gradually and slowly to destroy a great race and a great country.

We are not afraid of this country being destroyed by a hydrogen bomb or by invading armies. We are afraid of the treasonous termites who are eating away at the foundation of the government and the country itself from within.

Look out, folks. We are going to see some strange happenings in this country.

North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C., in a list of sponsors of the conference.

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare has been cited as a Communist-front organization which received money from the Robert Marshall Foundation, one of the principal sources of funds by which many Communist fronts operate. (From a report of the Special Committee on Un-American Activities dated March 29, 1944, page 147.)

On May 23, 1947, the Hon. James E. Murray of Montana asked unanimous consent to have included in the Appendix of the Record, "a statement made by 87 leading American liberals, setting forth what they consider to be a standard of political conduct for those who believe in liberalism or progressivism as a middle way between the extremes of reaction and communism—the true highway toward the fullest achievement of American democracy. This statement of liberalism accuses the American Communist Party and its sympathizers of an un-American lack of forthrightness and announces the refusal to associate with American Communists as a proper and reasonable requirement for anyone who is to be of practical help to the cause of liberalism in the United States.

Statement of Leaders

"The statement of these 87 liberal leaders draws a proper distinction between association with American Communists and their sympathizers, on the one hand, and, on the other, an objective attitude toward the problems of Russia and a hope for peaceful relations with that country; these liberal leaders point out that 'failure to reckon with the above distinction occasions the grave present-day plight of the liberal-progressive cause.'"

Identified as a Sociologist, University of North Carolina, Howard W. Odum was named as one of those who signed the statement. (From the Congressional Record Appendix, page 2599, May 23, 1947.)

Marion A. Wright: The Daily Worker of May 20, 1947 (page 5), named Marion A. Wright, South Carolina Division, Southern Regional Council, as having signed a statement of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. (Citation of the organization appears on page 1 of this memorandum.)

Aid Spanish "Democracy"

Carter Wesley: The Daily Worker of February 8, 1939 (page 2), reported that "Nearly one hundred of the most prominent Negro leaders throughout the nation have endorsed the campaign to lift the embargo against Spain, the Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy announced yesterday. The endorsement came in response to a letter circulated by the Committee which urges Congress, the State Department and the President to 'throw the full weight of American Democracy on the side of world democracy by lifting the embargo now placed against Republican Spain, fighting against tremendous handicaps in support of those principles and ideals upon which America was founded and whose ultimate realization our people hold dear.' . . . " Among those who signed the letter was Carter Wesley, Editor of the Houston Informer.

The Negro People's Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy has been cited by the Special Committee . . . as a Communist-front organization (Report 1311 of March 29, 1944, page 180).

Negro Youth Congress

Albert W. Dent: Albert W. Dent, President, Omega Psi Phi Fraternity and Director, Flint Goodrich Hospital, "joined in calling" the Fourth All-Southern Negro Youth Conference of the Southern Negro Youth Congress which was held in New Orleans, April 18-21, 1940 (Daily Worker, March 1, 1940).

The Southern Negro Youth Congress was cited as subversive and "among the affiliates and committees of the Communist Party, U. S. A., which seeks to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means" (the Attorney General of the United States in a press release dated December 4, 1947; redesignated April 27, 1953). The Special Committee . . . cited the organization as a Communist front (report dated January 3, 1940); it was cited as "surreptitiously controlled" by the Young Communist League by the Committee on Un-American Activities in Report 271 of April 17, 1947.

A. W. Dent, Business Manager, Flint Goodrich Hospital, spoke before the Health Section of the conference held in Birmingham, Alabama, November 20-23, 1938, by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, as shown on the printed program of that conference; the same source identified him as a member of the Southern Council of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, from Louisiana. A. W. Dent, Business Manager, Flint Goodrich Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, was one of the sponsors of the Second Southern Conference for Human Welfare which was held in Chattanooga, Tennessee, April 14-16, 1940, as shown on the call to that conference. Identified as President, Dillard University, New Orleans, Louisiana, he was named by the Daily Worker of May 20, 1947 (page 5) as having signed a statement of the Southern Conference for . . . An undated report of the same organization named him as a consultant on Panel III, Youth and Training, Civilian and Military, of a conference held by the group in Nashville, Tennessee; he was identified in this source as President, Dillard University, New Orleans, Louisiana. (See citation of the organization on page 1 of this memorandum.)

Denounces Poll Tax

J. Gordon Hancock: Committee files contain no references to a J. Gordon Hancock, identified with the Virginia Union University, Richmond, Virginia. However, the 1953-1954 catalogue of the Virginia Union University, Richmond, Virginia, names Gordon B. Hancock as Professor Emeritus.

On October 9, 1940, the Daily Worker (page 3), published an article by Ben Davis, Jr., datelined Richmond, Va., October 8, which stated that "James W. Ford's meeting here Monday night was an unusual as it was successful. The outstanding Negro leader and Communist vice-presidential candidate, . . . lashed into poll tax 'democracy' and received a profoundly Negro audience when he presented the Communist message of peace, security and the Bill of Rights . . . The Communist Party of the State, because of the war hysteria and red-baiting one would expect in a state dominated by a Carter Glass machine, did not succeed in obtaining a hall for the Ford meeting.

"But the meeting took place anyway. It was held in the Moore Street Baptist Church, one of the leading Negro churches of the city. Dr. Gordon Hancock, prominent Negro minister and newspaper columnist, is pastor of the church. However, the meeting did not take place under Communist auspices, but under the auspices of the church itself with Dr. Hancock and the Board of Deacons participating . . . The service began in the usual church fashion . . . When this was finished the meeting was turned over to Alice Burke, State Secretary of the Party, who conducted it in the interests of the Communist election campaign . . .

Preacher Defends Commies

"Dr. Hancock, an extremely conservative Negro minister, summed up the feeling of the people in a few remarks following Ford's address: 'We are glad to hear you, Mr. Ford. We do our own thinking but we are interested in the truth. We are glad to see a Negro with the courage to run for the vice-presidency of the United States . . .We are not afraid of Communists, but I don't fall out with people who are. The Communists are a legal party. They have a right to be heard and we have a right to hear them.' . . . "

Dean Gordon B. Hancock, Associated Negro Press columnist and editor, signed "Christmas Greetings and a New Year Plea by Negro Americans" prepared by "fifty-one prominent Negro leaders from 16 states" urging Henry A. Wallace to declare himself a candidate for election as President in 1948.

Dr. Gordon B. Hancock was a member of the Advisory Board of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, as shown on letterheads of the organization dated June 12 and August 11, 1947, and a page from a leaflet published by the group and used as Exhibit No. 46 by Mr. Walter S. Steele during his testimony before this committee July 22, 1947.

The Attorney General of the United States cited the Southern Negro Youth Congress as subversive and among the affiliates and committees of the Communist Party, U. S. A., "which seeks to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means" (press release of December 4, 1947; redesignated April 27, 1953). The Special Committee . . . cited the group as a Communist front in a report dated January 3, 1940; and the Committee on Un-American Activities cited it as "surreptitiously controlled" by the Young Communist League (Report No. 271 of April 17, 1947, page 14).

World Peace Propaganda

J. M. Ellyson: No references appear in file to the name of J. M. Ellyson; however, the following is shown on an individual whose name is spelled Ellison:

Prof. J. Ellison, Virginia Union University, Richmond, Virginia, endorsed the World Peace Appeal, as shown on an undated leaflet entitled "Prominent Americans Call For . . . " (received by the committee September 11, 1950).

The World Peace Appeal (also known as the Stockholm Peace Petition) was cited as a petition campaign launched by the Permanent Committee of the World Peace Congress at its meeting in Stockholm, March 16-19, 1950. It received "the enthusiastic approval of every section of the international Communist hierarchy" (Committee on Un-American Activities in Report 378 of April 1, 1951, page 34).

Cited as Red-front

Dr. J. M. Ellison signed a statement of the National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, addressed to the American People and entitled "We Uphold the Right of All Citizens to Speak for Peace . . ." (from a handbill announcing a meeting in Town Hall, New York City, September 28, 1951). The National Council of the Arts, . . . was cited as a Communist-front organization by the Committee on Un-American Activities in its Review of the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace (House Report No. 1954 dated April 19, 1949, page 2).

F. D. Patterson: Soviet Russia Today for December 1942 (page 42) named Frederick Douglas Patterson, President, Tuskegee Institute, as one of the sponsors of the Congress of American-Soviet Friendship; a letterhead of the Congress, dated October 27, 1942, named Dr. Patterson as one of the patrons of that congress. A letterhead of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Inc., dated March 13, 1946 and a memorandum issued by the National Council March 18, 1946, named Dr. Frederick Douglas Patterson as a sponsor of the organization. He was named on an undated letterhead of the National Council as one of the sponsors of a congress held November 6-8, 1943.

The National Council of American-Soviet Friendship has been cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General (press release of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953); in Report 1311 of the Special Committee . . . dated March 29, 1944, it was cited as having been the Communist Party's principal front for all things Russian in recent months.

President of Tuskegee

Dr. F. D. Patterson, President, Tuskegee Institute, "joined in calling" the Fourth All-Southern Negro Youth Conference of the Southern Negro Youth Congress in New Orleans, April 18-21, 1940 (Daily Worker, March 1, 1940); he was Chairman of the Advisory Board of the organization, as shown on a letterhead of the group dated June 12, 1947, a page from a leaflet published by the organization (used as Exhibit No. 46 by Mr. Walter Steele during his testimony July 22, 1947 before this committee), and a letterhead dated August 11, 1947. (Citation of the organization appears on page 1 of this memorandum.)

An undated leaflet entitled "The South is Closer Than You Think," published by the New York Office of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare (received by this committee about February 1947) contains the name of F. D. Patterson in a list of members of the organization's Executive Board. He was co-chairman of the Race Relations Section of the Southern Conference . . . at Birmingham, Alabama, November 20-23, 1938, and also a member of the Committee on Resolutions at the same conference, as shown on the printed program of that meeting.

Identified as President, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, Dr. F. D. Patterson was co-chairman of the panel on The Meaning of Religion for Democracy at the Second Southern Conference for Human Welfare in Chattanooga, Tennessee, April 14-16, 1940, as shown on the Call to that conference on Democracy in the South. He was Vice Chairman of the Southern Conference . . . from the South at Large, as shown on an official report of the organization showing officers for 1938-1939, in which source he was identified as president of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama. (Citation of the Southern Conference . . . appears on page 1 of this memorandum.)

Letterheads of Council

Letterheads of the Council of Young Southerners dated June 26 and August 13, 1940 contain the name of F. D. Patterson in a list of sponsors; a letterhead of the League of Young Southerners dated August 13, 1940, contains the same information. The Council of Young Southerners (also known as the League of Young Southerners) was "described on its letterhead as having its origin at the Youth Commission of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare" (Report 592 of the Committee on Un-American Activities dated June 12, 1947, page 5).

F. D. Patterson, President, Tuskegee Institute, signed a letter of the American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom which was dated May 26, 1940. The American Committee . . . has been cited as a Communist-front organization which defended Communist teachers (Special Committee . . . in report dated June 25, 1942; also report of March 29, 1944).

Frederick D. Patterson spoke at the Second National Negro Congress, October 15, 1937, in New York City, as shown in an announcement of that congress, a report of the congress and in New Masses in October 26, 1937 (page 11). The National Negro Congress has been cited by the Attorney General as "an important sector of the democratic front, sponsored and supported by the Communist Party" and as subversive and Communist. (Congressional Record, September 24, 1942, pages 7687 and 7688; and press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953.) The Special Committee . . . cited the National Negro Congress as "the Communist-front movement in the United States among Negroes" (reports of January 3, 1939; January 3, 1940; June 25, 1942; and March 29, 1944).

Prof. Florence Sytz

Florence Sytz: Prof. Florence Sytz was one of the sponsors of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace, arranged by the National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, and held in New York City March 25-27, 1949 (from the Call to the conference; also conference program, page 13).

The Scientific and Cultural Conference has been cited as a Communist front which "was actually a supermobilization of the inveterate wheel-horses and supporters of the Communist Party and its auxiliary organizations" (Review of the conference, prepared and released April 19, 1949 by the Committee on Un-American Activities).

Paul Christopher: The Southern Patriot for December 1946 (page 8), named Paul R. Christopher as Vice President for 1947-1948, Southern Conference for Human Welfare; an undated leaflet entitled "The South is Closer Than You Think," published by the New York Office of the Southern Conference . . . (received by this committee in February 1947) also named him as Vice President of the organization; a letterhead of the Southern Conference . . . dated June 4, 1947 named him as Vice President and a member of the organization's National Committee. (See citation of the Southern Conference on page 1 of this memorandum.)

Connected With Commies

The name of Paul R. Christopher appears in a list of individuals who signed the January 1943 Message of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties (leaflet attached to an undated letterhead of the organization, in which source he was identified as Tennessee Regional Director, C. I. O., Knoxville, Tennessee.

The National Federation . . . has been cited by the Attorney General as "ostensibly having no connection with the Communist Party" but by which the Communists attempt to create sympathizers and supporters of their program" and as subversive and Communist. (Congressional Record, September 24, 1942, page 7687; press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953.)

The Special Committee on Un-American Activities cited the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties as "one of the viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party" (reports of January 2, 1943; June 25, 1942; and March 29, 1944).

Will W. Alexander

Will W. Alexander: The official Register of the United States for 1937 and for 1940 both list Will W. Alexander, Administrator, Farm Security Administration, Department of Agriculture, with legal residence shown as Georgia (5th Congressional District).

Mr. Lauchlin Currie testified in public hearings before the Committee on Un-American Activities August 13, 1948, during hearings regarding Communist Espionage in the United States Government, at which time he made the following reference to a Will Alexander:

"Mr. Stripling: Did you ever visit Mr. (Nathan Gregory) Silvermaster at his home at 5515 Thirtieth Street, N. W.?

"Mr. Currie: Yes; I was entertained at his home several times. There were always other people present and the occasion was entirely social.

"Mr. Stripling: Could you name the other people present, please?

"Mr. Currie: I don't remember at this time all the people present. I do remember he had his immediate superiors, people more or less of my rank in Government. who were present, in the Farm Security Administration and his former superiors in the Maritime Labor Board.

"Mr. Stripling: Would you name them, please?

"Mr. Currie: There was Mr. Baldwin, Mr. Will Alexander, I recall specifically; also Mr. Louis Bloch . . .

"The Chairman: Mr. Currie, how many times were you at the Silvermaster home?

"Mr. Currie: I think in the whole period, three or four or five times; I do not really recall exactly.

"The Chairman: And what were the approximate dates?

"Mr. Currie: I do not remember, Mr. Congressman—Mr. Chairman.

"The Chairman: Well, did they start in 1943 or 1944?

"Mr. Currie: . . . I was invited after my first official contact with them, which must have been in 1940, but I only imagine that. I cannot recall from my knowledge.

"The Chairman: When was the last time you were there; what year? . . .

"Mr. Currie: I left the Government in 1945, and I assume it was probably within a year of that time, but I really must say that that is only guessing . . .

"The Chairman: Can you again tell the committee . . . the names of the persons who were present at the Silvermaster home when you were there?

"Mr. Currie: The person I definitely recall would be Mr. C. B. Baldwin, who was Mr. Silvermaster's boss at the Farm Security Administration; and I believe Mr. Will Alexander, who was also followed Mr. Baldwin in the Farm Security Administration, and Mr. Louis Bloch, who was chairman of the Maritime Labor Board who was the previous superior of Mr. Silvermaster, and their wives. I believe that is right. I am not quite sure of my recollection . . . " (see pages 857 and 870 of the hearings).

Known, Suspected Reds

Reference to Mr. Silvermaster was made in the committee's report released December 31, 1948 (pages 15 and 16); in a statement regarding the background of Mary Jane and Philip O. Keeney, prior to their testimony before the committee in May 1949, reference was made to the effect that "the Keeneys became acquainted with numerous individuals in Washington who are known and suspected Communists, including Nathan Gregory Silvermaster, his wife Helen, and William Ludwig Ullmann, who have been reported as primary functionaries to Soviet espionage activities. Nathan Gregory Silvermaster and William Ludwig Ullmann have appeared before this committee and have declined to answer questions regarding their Communist affiliations and their espionage activities under the protection of the fifth

As soon as Gillis got out of town all the stops in the Highway Department were pulled out and Oxford put the call on everybody. They went after the contractors and the Highway employees. Oxford even called bankers who had state deposits in their bank and urged them to support Griffin. The bankers got the idea that the purpose of this call was a vague threat to remove the deposits unless they would support Griffin. The people of the state charged this to Governor Talmadge and it has caused him to lose a lot of respect. Tom Linder had the support of the old-time woolhat boys who followed Eugene Talmadge and the Governor's activity behind Marvin Griffin has alienated this group of people.

Likewise he alienated most of those who voted for Fred Hand.

Fred Hand's friends felt that Fred had been stabbed in the back by the Governor. They still feel the same way.

They know that in 1947 Fred Hand was one of a few men who were responsible for the legislature's electing Governor Talmadge and they know that had not Fred stood by Governor Talmadge as he did that the Governor could not have been elected by the legislature and would probably have never been governor.

They know that Fred Hand supported him in two races for governor and as Speaker of the House stood by him as a great tower of strength. He stood by the Governor when Marvin Griffin was not Lieutenant Governor and could not help him. He stood by the Governor and supported his legislation when Marvin Griffin was making no effort to help the Governor at all.

Fred Hand's friends know that he stood by the Governor in the House of Representatives when the Governor was forced to call on other friends to help him out in the Senate because of the inefficiency and careless leadership he had in the Senate.

Therefore, Fred Hand's friends believe that since the Governor took an active part in behalf of Marvin Griffin after he had promised Fred Hand not to do so that he stabbed Fred in the back.

They feel that if the Governor were going to actively campaign for Marvin Griffin that he should have so advised Fred Hand before he permitted Fred to get into the race.

Then there is another thing that Governor Talmadge will never be able to erase from his record.

When he supported Marvin Griffin he supported a racketeer and he knew he was supporting a racketeer.

It is going to be difficult for him to explain why he chose a racketeer as his candidate for governor.

When Governor Talmadge ran for Governor in 1948 and 1950 he denounced the pardon racket of the Rivers Administration.

Yet, the Grand Jury of Fulton County says that Marvin Griffin ran this pardon racket. They had sworn evidence before them and they found that Governor Rivers passed the authority to grant pardons to Griffin, that Griffin held hearings and granted pardons when the Governor was out of the state and that he so handled the granting of pardons that it amounted to a brokerage business for a select few of the "Inner Circle".

Governor Talmadge has done a good job in advertising Georgia to the people of the nation and he has raised the estimation of the government of this state in the eyes of the people. Now by supporting a known racketeer for Governor he has whittled away some of the prestige he has enjoyed in the past.

It is one of the things that will haunt him the rest of his days and like a ghost it will keep rising to haunt him.

So, I say that Governor Talmadge has suffered a worse defeat than any of the defeated candidates in the race and that he has made a record of which he cannot be proud and one of which he must be ashamed the rest of his days.

He let some of his friends get him in a wreck during one of his campaigns that resulted in a broken leg and his being put in a hospital. This wreck almost took him out of the race in 1948.

The friends who wrecked him in 1948 were well intentioned friends, but were acting at the time very unwisely and very foolishly.

Once again he has let some friends lead him. Once again, they led him into a wreck.

This wreck will be known as the wreck of 1954.

Figuratively speaking, he has at least broken a leg and this time the leg may not heal like it did in 1948.

Regardless of how the election results and regardless of who gets elected the Governor has been in a wreck and how serious the damage to him is to be remains to be seen.

My friend, Jim Gillis has also lost prestige because it wasn't clearly known during the campaign which of the candidates he was supporting.

Forester B. Washington

Forester B. Washington: Dr. Forester B. Washington was a member of the Advisory Board of the Southern Negro Youth Congress, as shown on letterheads of June 12 and August 11, 1947, and a page from the organization's leaflet which was used as Exhibit No. 46 by Mr. Walter S. Steele in testimony before this committee July 22, 1947. (Citation of the organization appears on page 1 of this memorandum.)

Social Work Today for December 1937 (page 2) named Forrester B. Washington as one of the sponsors of that publication; he was Cooperator-Sponsor of the same magazine, as shown in Social Work Today for June-July 1940 (page 2). The Special Committee on Un-American Activities cited Social Work Today as a Communist magazine (report of March 29, 1944).

Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr.

Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr.: The Daily Worker of March 29, 1949 (page 5), named one Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., Wilberforce, Ohio, as an individual who signed a statement of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born, on behalf of Communists who were subject to deportation. (See page 9 of this memorandum for citation of the American Committee . . .)

Identified as Bishop, A. M. E., Wilberforce, Ohio, R. R. Wright, Jr., signed a statement attacking the arrest of the leaders of the Communist Party (Daily Worker August 23, 1948, page 11); he signed the "Statement by Negro Americans" on behalf of the leaders of the Communist Party who had been arrested (The Worker, August 29, 1948, page 11). Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., signed a statement attacking the Mundt anti-Communist bill (Daily Worker, May 4, 1948, page 11).

Identified with the African Methodist Episcopal Church, Bishop R. R. Wright spoke at a meeting of the National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions September 28th (Daily Worker October 1, 1951, page 3); in an advance announcement of that meeting, which appeared in the Daily Worker on September 26, 1951 (page 8 — an advertisement), Bishop Wright was identified as being from Atlanta, Georgia. R. R. Wright, Jr., signed a statement of the National Council of the Arts, . . . , addressed to the American People to "Uphold The Right of All Citizens to Speak For Peace" (from bill entitled "Halt The Defamers Who Call Peace Un-American!" in connection with the September 28th meeting. (See page 4 of this memorandum for citation of the organization.)

Gullible Persons Sought

A mimeographed program of the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives named Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., A. M. E., Bishop of Georgia, Atlanta, as Chairman of Kennote Session and Speaker at a Memorial Eve Session of the Mid-Century Conference for Peace in Chicago, May 29-30, 1950; the same information appeared in the Daily Worker of May 30, 1950 (page 9).

The Mid-Century Conference for Peace was held in Chicago, May 29 and 30, 1950, by the Committee for Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact and was cited as having been "aimed at assembling as many gullible persons as possible under Communist direction and turning them into a vast sounding-board for Communist propaganda" (Report 378 of the Committee on Un-American Activities dated April 1, 1951).

A 1947 pamphlet of the Council on African Affairs, Inc., contains the name of R. R. Wright, Jr., identified as a Bishop, in a list of members of the Council; the New York Times of April 6, 1948 (page 46L) reported that "Communist-influenced forces were accused yesterday of plotting to seize the organization and the property of the Council on African Affairs, Inc., of 23 West Twenty-sixth Street, and of using the council as a feeder for party activities. The charges were made by Dr. Max Yergan, for ten years the executive secretary of the council. He declared the council had been attacked on several fronts 'against the best interests of Negro people everywhere.' . . . Dr. Yergan said the fight to drive him out of the organization began when he proclaimed to the Federal Government that the Council was neither Fascist, Communist nor subversive. 'Today it is either me or the Communists,' he declared . . .

African Affairs Council

"Dr. Yergan said the majority of the seventy council members were his supporters. They include . . . Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., . . . listed as out-of-town members who voted by proxy for the Yergan position . . ."

The Attorney General cited the Council on African Affairs as subversive and Communist (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953).

Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., was one of the sponsors of the National Conference of the Civil Rights Congress in Chicago, Illinois, November 21-23, 1947, as shown in the Daily Worker of October 21, 1947 (page 5), the Daily People's World of October 28, 1947 (page 4); and the program of the conference entitled "Let Freedom Ring." He was one of the sponsors of the Freedom Crusade of the Civil Rights Congress (Daily Worker, December 15, 1948, page 11); and protested the indictment of the twelve leaders of the Communist Party (Daily Worker, December 31, 1948, page 3). Identified from Wilberforce, Ohio, Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., was one of the sponsors of the National Civil Rights Legislative Conference, January 18-19, 1949, called by the Civil Rights Congress (from a leaflet entitled Freedom Crusade which was the program of that conference).

Civil Rights Congress

The Civil Rights Congress has been cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953). The Congress was formed in April 1946 as a merger of the International Labor Defense and the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, two Communist-front groups; it is "dedicated not to the broader issues of civil liberties but specifically to the defense of individual Communists and the Communist Party" (from a report of the Committee on Un-American Activities dated September 2, 1947).

Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., was one of the sponsors of the Win-the-Peace Conference which was held in Washington, D. C., April 5-7, 1946, at which time the National Committee to Win the Peace was organized. (From a letterhead of the Conference dated February 28, 1946; the Daily Worker of March 5, 1946; and the Call to a Win-the-Peace Conference.)

The National Committee to Win the Peace was cited as subversive and Communist by the Attorney General (press releases of December 4, 1947 and September 21, 1948; redesignated April 27, 1953).

Opposes McCarran Act

Identified as being from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Bishop R. R. Wright, Jr., signed an Open Letter to Members of the Eighty-Third Congress of the United States, urging support of legislation to repeal the McCarran Act; the Open Letter was prepared by the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act. (From the Daily Worker of January 19, 1953, page 3; and an undated Open Letter on official letterhead, received by this committee in January 1953.)

Lucy Randolph Mason: Lucy Randolph Mason was a member of the Executive Board of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, as shown on an undated leaflet entitled "The South is Closer Than You Think" (received for files in February 1947); Mr. Walter S. Steele's testimony before this committee in July 1947 (pages 57, 139 and 141); and in the committee's report on the Southern Conference which was prepared and released June 16, 1947, pages 1 and 4. (Citation of the organization appears on page 1 of this memorandum.)

A letterhead of the League of Young Southerners dated August 13, 1940 contains the name of Lucy Randolph Mason in a list of sponsors of that organization, citation of which appears on page 1 of this memorandum.

Josephine Wilkins: A letterhead of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare dated June 4, 1947 names Josephine Wilkins as Parliamentarian and a Member of the National Committee of that c tion, citation of which appears on page 1 of this memorandum.

Josephine Wilkins was one of the sponsors of the League of Young Southerners, as shown on a letterhead of the organization dated August 13, 1940. (See page 2 of this memorandum for citation of the group.)

He may have been supporting more than one.

At least this is the opinion of the public generally.

However, Mr. Gillis will probably be able to overcome his loss of prestige and the people may understand why he took the course he did take.

But there is one thing that stands out above all others in this race and that is that too many people do not vote their conscience on a basis of principle, but they diligently search for the winner.

Another thing that stood out like a sore thumb is the fact that too many people in this state were seeking a candidate who would give them something personally instead of a candidate who promised to give them a competent and a clean administration of the state affairs.

And that brings up the worst thing I know about politics.

It takes a lot of money to be elected Governor and the cost of radio, television, newspaper advertising in the making of a campaign is prohibitive.

Now, you can't run without doing these things and you can't run without money.

There are plenty of people who are willing to contribute. But the ones who are willing to contribute expect some special favor from the state. They either expect highway contracts, deposits of money in their banks, to sell the state something, or to be protected in one of the rackets.

Now, if a man can convince this group of people whom I call racketeers that he has a good chance to win, he can get all the money he wants.

The thing that astounds me is that the people of the state do not know what's going on in these campaigns and they seem little concerned.

If this trend continues you are going to see the government of every state in this nation and the federal government controlled by racketeers.

The reason for this is the fact that legitimate business people are asleep. They do not recognize that somebody must pay the freight. They seem to think that all these campaigns are run without money.

The business people do not contribute and consequently they are defaulting in their duty and surrendering to the racketeer the control of the government of their state.

We are never going to have good government until the business people recognize that they must help pay the freight.

It is easy to get money out of gamblers, bootleggers and people who want rigged contracts with the state.

They will contribute in enormous amounts.

The business people of the state must recognize that he who pays the fiddler calls the tune. Unless the business people of this state recognize this fact and they are willing to assume their responsibility for the government of their own state, then they should quit criticizing governors and other state officials who run rackets for the benefit of their friends.

A straight-laced candidate is handicapped in the raising of campaign funds. One who isn't particular about his obligations fares better.

The whole situation boils down to this: Unless the good people of this state are willing to participate in politics openly and to help pay the expenses of campaigns, then they are surrendering the government of this state to people who are willing to contribute and to people who are willing to stick their necks out and are willing to participate.

The duties of citizenship require all of us to take part in the management of the biggest business in Georgia and that is the state government. When we are afraid to open our mouths or to take part, it means that we are slackers in our duty.

After the results are known, we will have more to say about the campaign.

Ga. Ad Commission Named To Promote Industry, Tourist

ATLANTA, — Georgia in recent years has been doing a creditable job of selling herself to the rest of the world, particularly in so far as industries and tourists are concerned. But she hopes to do even better in the future. Reason: Gov. Herman Talmadge has established a Georgia Advertising Commission.

The commission, composed of twelve members representing a cross section of industries and businesses over the state, is designed to promote a "systematic plan of nation-wide advertising" to boost the state's industries and tourist attractions.

The Governor said he had formed the commission to "help correlate the advertising efforts of private enterprises and that of the state." In swearing in his appointees he told them to work together to get the most out of the dollars spent for advertising. The commission is purely an advisory body.

Nelson M. Shipp, secretary of the Georgia Department of Commerce, was appointed chairman by Gov. Talmadge. In addition to Shipp other members of the commission are:

Alfred W. Jones, chairman of the board of the Sea Island Co.; C. E. Woolman, president of Delta-C & S Air Lines; W. S. Stuckey, of the Stuckey Candy Co.; J. J. McDonough, of the Georgia Power Co. and president of the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce; Howard Callaway, of the Ada Cason Gardens, Hamilton.

Horace Caldwell, owner of Radium Springs Development, near Albany; Flournoy Fiske, president of Fine Products Corp., Augusta; Harrell Perkins, vice president of Central of Georgia Railroad; Mills B. Lane, president of Citizens & Southern National Bank; Jesse Jewell, head of Jewell Poultry Enterprises, Gainesville, and Herbert Bondurant, vice president of Southern Railway.

Griffin Will Dictate Tax Committee's Recommendations; Will School System Needs Be Met Or Largely By-Passed?

Thrasher's Group Proposes Raising Nearly 70 Million New Revenue Annually

The report to be made by Governor Marvin Griffin's Tax Study Committee will have a great effect on the future of Georgia.

This committee can recommend to Georgia people a solution to their school problem, or it can take a nibble at the problem, dodge responsibility and leave the solution to future administrations and legislatures.

The Griffin leaders have shown a decided trend towards taking a nibble at the problem and doing just enough to get by and leave the disagreeable work to the future.

Problem Faced Squarely

However, the subcommittees in their reports to the full committee have not taken a nibble at the problem, but instead, have faced the problem squarely and recommended that the state solve the problem now.

The subcommittee on schools, which was headed by State Auditor B. E. Thrasher, Jr., has recommended that the state raise between sixty and seventy million dollars in new revenue a year for the purpose of giving us an adequate system of education.

This subcommittee report recommended that the full committee endorse a program which called for an increase of state appropriations to the public schools in excess of fifty million dollars a year and for an increase to the University System of approximately ten million dollars.

Plan Is Proposed

Thrasher's subcommittee didn't stop there. They recommended a plan of taxation for producing the money to finance the program.

Georgia today is faced with a critical situation with regard to its public schools and their growth and development in the next few years depends entirely upon the recommendation of this committee.

So far, the full committee has not divulged whether it will nibble at the problem or whether it will undertake a solution as the subcommittees have.

Will Griffin Nibble

It is generally understood that the full committee report will be dictated by the Governor and that the committee will abide by his wishes. Up until now, Griffin and his key leaders have given every indication of just nibbling. However, the reports from Thrasher's committee was so convincing, so thorough and so exhaustive until the Governor and his advisors may not be able to escape the inevitable conclusion.

They certainly will be asked the question that if we must have this amount of money eventually to build an educational system in Georgia, then why not

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

There have always been cranks and crackpots among college students.

At that age, most of us thought that we were endowed with all of the wisdom of the ages and were inclined to be smart alecks whether we went to college or not.

Unfortunately, college kind of brings these traits out, gives a man an exaggerated ego and causes him to be a little worse than the average individual.

Up at the University of Georgia a little handful of college students have been distributing some handbills.

These handbills weren't printed by college students and neither were they published by college students.

There are organizations all over the country working among school and church groups and trying to get people to circulate similar literature and to engage in similar activities.

Seven boys headed by a young fellow who lives at Milledgeville, Georgia, circulated these handbills on the University of Georgia campus.

They have joined up with all the other crackpots trying to destroy segregation.

"Here's a copy of the handbill which they distributed at the University:

"THE UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA'S STUDENT CITIZENS COMMITTEE URGES YOU TO BEGIN

"CREATIVE POLITICAL ACTION

". . . study the problem of race relations intelligently and objectively. Here are a few suggested books in this area. These books are in the University of Georgia Library.

"Lillian Smith, NOW IS THE TIME.

Harry Ashmore, THE NEGRO AND THE SCHOOLS.

William S. Nelson, THE CHRISTIAN WAY IN RACE RELATIONS.

Robert Penn Warren, et al, I'LL TAKE MY STAND.

Johnathan Daniel, A SOUTHERNER DISCOVERS THE SOUTH.

". . . sponsor and plan study seminars on race relations in your local community, your church, your social organizations, etc. You can get speakers and material from the following organizations.

American Friends Service Committee, 617 West Market Street, Greensboro, North Carolina; Southern Regional Council, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia.

"Your church's board on race relations or social action.

". . . write and/or have an interview with your representative in the Georgia State Legislature. Discuss ways of preparing to face the coming implementation of the U. S. Supreme Court decision.

". . . write the governor and express your concern for the development of all potential leadership in our state.

". . . write the Board of Regents of the University System, Deans of the University, and other University officials and urge them to find intelligent and mature means of preparing our state for the coming change.

". . . seek the truth. Accept your freedom to stand in the midst of our divided society and express your convictions."

Now these young students not only had to be cranks, but they were duped by the organizations to which they refer in their pamphlet.

Nobody but a crank would distribute these circulars under the conditions that exist in Georgia.

In the first place, the law of Georgia provides that the races shall

Cook Gives Reasons To Savannah Editor Why State Able To Protect Its Citizens

The State of Georgia is now free to circumvent the Supreme Court's decision ordering the mixing of the white and negro races in the public school system, according to Eugene Cook, Attorney General of Georgia.

Cook says that not only is the State of Georgia free to take such action, but six other states are likewise free to do so. These six states are Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee and Maryland.

Reasons For Conclusion

As his reasons why he reaches this conclusion, Cook, in a recent letter to William J. Robertson, Editor of the Savannah Morning News, said:

"Many good reasons have been given indicating that it might have been wise for me to make an appearance. On the other hand, I am still of the personal opinion that my decision will eventually prove to be right.

"As you know, the decision of the Court of May 17, 1954, holding that segregation of the races in public schools violated the 14th Amendment to the Constitution, was unanimous and no effort on the part of anyone singly or together could possibly obtain a reversal or modification. In fact, the invitation of the Court did not suggest that we would be privileged to even question that decision. To appear as a friend of the Court in a case of this kind with a brief in criticism of the decision and a prayer for reconsideration, modification or reversal would have been inappropriate and not even reviewed by the Court.

Purpose of Invitation

"The purpose of the invitation was to bring before the Court in an official manner all Attorneys General representing States in which the impact of the decision may be felt. In doing this, the Court very shrewdly obligated the Attorneys General who went before it on that invitation to become a party to the formulation of the enforcement decree or decrees and, therefore, honor bound to insist that the citizens of their respective States comply with such decree or decrees.

"This I could not do under the circumstances, when I know that the people of Georgia will not abide by the Court's conclusions on the question of enforcement.

"In fact, when I made my original decision, which was concurred in by Governor Talmadge, the Governors of South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana, I was firmly convinced that the people would by-pass whatever enforcement decree or decrees the Court might write and that they could do so within the framework of the Federal and State Con-

CIO Out To Whip The South

The Camden Chronicle

The CIO said in Washington this week that a group of its unions had arranged to lend the CIO striking Southern Bell Telephone Company workers $1,250,000 to help in their 50-day old strike in nine Southern states.

It is not surprising that the CIO labor unions should take this action. The CIO has long been bitter towards the South because of its failure to get a strong foothold here. It has spent thousands upon thousands of dollars trying to organize the textile workers of this region but has been repulsed in its efforts. It has been able to make no gains in this section at all because Southern workers are too smart to be trapped.

Now they see the possibility of even losing some of the very slight holdings they have in the South. If the phone workers lose their strike it will just about put the finishing touches on the CIO in this section. Hence the CIO unions have decided to turn loose some of the many million of dollars they have lying idle in their treasuries—money they collected from poor working men and women as dues—in an effort to force the Southern Bell Telephone Company into line.

The striking telephone workers also announced that they had received a gift of $500,000 to aid them in their strike. They declined to say where this gift came from. We do not know whether this is a part of the $1,250,000 which the CIO labor unions are going to lend or not. If it isn't the strikers should be forced to tell who did give the $500,000. One wonders not only who gave it but why.

But what is the outlook for the telephone strikers? Even if they should win the strike, their union dues will probably have to be raised in order to pay back the money loaned by the CIO unions and then look at what they have lost in the time they have been out on strike. They are going to lose no matter what happens.

But the big labor bosses will continue to live in luxury, stop at the swankest hotels in the country, ride around in big cars at the expense of the workers who are not out on strike and who are continuing to pay their "dues."

The Telephone Strike

The telephone strike is now over and nobody lost but the strikers. They lost to the tune of seventeen and a half million dollars in pay in addition to a lot of self-respect.

They couldn't help but lost self-respect in view of all of the violence that accompanied the strike over the nine Southern states. The strikers cut cables, dynamited buildings and shot other people. In so doing, they made criminals out of a long string of strikers.

As an aftermath they left a lot of their fellow workers to face the criminal courts and possible penitentiary sentences.

Hundreds of other strikers will know that they are criminals although they were not caught and will probably never face trial.

That's a terrible price to pay for a strike.

The strike went on for about seventy days. In addition to losing seventeen and a half million dollars in pay which the strikers would have received had they been at work, the unions spent millions of dollars trying to keep the strike going. Walter Reuther loaned them a million and a quarter at one time and some union which wanted to remain anonymous loaned them a half million and then they spent their own money.

How much the strike cost the strikers no one will ever know.

The public suffered very little inconvenience as a result of the strike. Telephone service went on as usual and it is believed that the telephone company made more money as a result of the strike than they lost as a result of the damage.

We can't believe the telephone company lost a single penny.

Then, when the thing was all over the union officials signed the same agreement which the telephone company offered them before they went out on strike.

They struck over the silliest thing in the world. The telephone company insisted that they put a provision in the contract agreeing that during the life of the contract the union wouldn't strike. Finally, the union officials had to swallow this dose and they signed the contract and agreed not to strike.

There was only one change made in the contract which they accepted and the one offered before they struck. The telephone company agreed that they would arbitrate the question of all people who were fired during the strike on an individual basis.

So, arbitrators will decide whether those fired during the strike will come back or not and by the time they get through arbitrating them one by one, most of them will be dead with old age.

So, the strikers took a licking. They are the only people who lost.

The union officials didn't miss a meal. The union officials didn't miss a payday. The union officials didn't go hungry. They got their salaries just the same. They rode in their big cars and they slept in air conditioned hotel rooms just the same. Their expenses were paid out of union funds and will continue to be paid out of union funds.

That causes us to ask one question. How long will the average union member continue to be used and cheated as they are now being used and cheated by the union officials?

The average union member is nothing but a sucker and he can't realize it.

Georgia Leads In AG Research Work, Declares Griffin

ATLANTA,—Painstaking work by the experiment stations of Georgia over a long period of years is paying off in big dividends to the farmers and will be of even greater benefit to them in the future, declared Gov. Marvin Griffin at the dedication of the Coastal Plains Experiment Station's new administration-laboratory building, just held at Tifton.

"In 1950, when the University of Georgia's College of Agriculture was reorganized, the Tifton experiment station became an integral part of the state's total agricultural research program," he said. "Georgia can now boast of one of the most extensive and best organized programs of agricultural research of any state in the Union."

The findings of research are now processed through the College of Agriculture and through its extension personnel to all farmers in every part of the state, the Governor explained.

He said presently there are three major experiment stations—at Athens, Griffin and Tifton. There also are four branch stations located in Union, Gordon, Sumter and Burke Counties and four field stations in Decatur County, at Reidsville's State Prison Field, at Alapaha Field in the lower coastal plain and the Eatonton Field station in the Piedmont area. In addition, there are two cooperating U. S. Department of Agriculture stations, jointly staffed with state stations, in Oconee and Liberty Counties.

"These stations have been listed to show just how extensive and important this great program is to the farmers living in every section of our state," Griffin said. "The extensive research work in these stations has paid rich dividends. No state in the South has produced so many new crop varieties and hybrids which are used by Southern farmers as has Georgia.

"In the livestock field, Georgia and the Southern states have felt the impact of the work done at these experiment stations . . . In a state where progress depends upon the economic welfare of the farmer, no better investment can be made than in finding new and better answers to the problems which face our farm people."

Teen-Age Traffic Safety Conference Plans Shaping Up

ATLANTA,—Plans are going forward for the third annual Governor's Teen-Age Traffic Safety Conference, to be held August 7-13 at Camp Safety Patrol on Lake Blackshear, near Cordele. It is sponsored by the Georgia Teen-Age Traffic Assn., under the guidance of the Georgia Citizens Council.

Council Director John W. Maloof has sent out letters to high school principals, county school superintendents and Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y counselors all over Georgia outlining the procedure for selecting the teen-age delegates, and calling on them to get the machinery in motion at the local level, where the youthful delegates are chosen.

Both boys and girls, either juniors or seniors in high schools as of next fall's school term, are eligible as delegates. The sponsors are shooting for a registration goal of 300 delegates, with each of Georgia's counties being represented by one or two of its outstanding students. The smaller high schools will have one delegate and one alternate; the larger schools two delegates and two alternates.

Room and board for each delegate is $12.50 for the entire week of the conference. The only other expense is the cost of transportation to and from the camp. In the past, this expense of each delegate has been borne by some interested individual in the community, or by local merchants, or civic clubs or other groups.

"It is not a large expense, but a small investment that will pay off big dividends by helping Georgia youths become better citizens," emphasizes the Citizens Council.

Qualified adults serve as constultants at the conference. In addition to the educational or "work part" of the conference, which will be devoted entirely to various phases of traffic safety, there will be a well-rounded recreational program including swimming and many other forms of sports, it was pointed out.

stitutions. Subsequent acts by the people and the legislature in amending the Constitution and the enactment of circumvention measures by the legislature have confirmed this conclusion of mine.

Georgia Not Committed

"In view of the present posture of the issue, Georgia is not committed, either morally or legally, to submit.

"Incidentally, press reports reflect that the Chief Justice has asked each of the Attorneys General representing the Southern States the question of whether an honest effort will be made by these States to comply with whatever decree or decrees they formulate. Had I been before the Court, my answer would have necessarily been "no," to which answer the Court may well have found me in contempt and foreclosed any further comments and observations as far as Georgia is concerned.

Has No Authority

"Another reason which I failed to point out in my letter to you is one I have saved for future use, but will give it to you now. Under the Federal Constitution an amendment to that document becomes the law of the land instanter, unless implemented by Congress. The Court has no authority to implement an amendment to the Federal Constitution. Its sole prerogative is that of interpretation. The May 17, 1954, decision construed the 14th Amendment and the question of whether its meaning should be imposed upon the people instanter or at some future date is solely the prerogative of the people through their duly elected representatives in Congress. Constitutional lawyers are unable to find any precedent in which the U. S. Supreme Court said to the President of the United States and to Congress that an amendment to the Federal Constitution could not be enforced until a given date. Congress, however, has the right to implement amendments to the Constitution even though they may be self-executing because the Constitution is the written expression of the people and its implementation is exclusively that of the U. S. Congress.

"Had I officially appeared with a plea to the Court that because of the peculiar conditions in Georgia prevailing at the present time the Court should postpone the enforcement of this decision indefinitely or allow time for orderly adjustment, I would have necessarily officially conceded the right of that Court to usurp the prerogative of Congress and the people.

NAACP's Contention

"General Counsel for NAACP, Thurgood Marshall, stated to the Court in his arguments that its decision should be enforced forthwith because the Court was without authority to postpone it. In this I concur with him. According to a report I received from two of my Assistants who were there observing incognito, no member of the bench disputed the NAACP Attorney's charge. At least, they did not take exception to what he said.

"It is my firm belief that the Court's decision in the segregation issue and its disgraceful effort to implement it will be a matter against which constitutional lawyers of the United States will rebel for the next generation, and I am sincerely expecting some of our ablest constitutional lawyers to finally convince the Court of its error by the use of public indignation and congressional effort in a manner that will place upon the bench constitutional lawyers and not pseudo-lawyer politicians. No one who shares my view holds out any hope for this much-desired accomplishment under the reign of the Court as it is presently con-

Black Race's Contribution To Civilization Is Negative

World's Advancement Due To Caucasians, Medical College Professor Says

The black race alone has not contributed to any civilization throughout the history of the world, according to Dr. W. C. George, Professor of Anatomy at the Medical College at the University of North Carolina.

In a recent paper he has tried to outline that the integration of the white and black races will result in the destruction of the creative genius of our people.

The Courier has already carried two articles on his recent paper and has tried to point out that integration of the black and white races means tragedy for the American people.

The reason the black race has never contributed to any civilization is due to a distinctive difference between the Caucasian and negro races.

Caucasian Race

The Caucasian race has made great strides and has led in the development of the civilization of the world under circumstances more difficult than the circumstances under which the negro races have lived.

In developing this idea, Dr. George says:

"Is there any difference between the Caucasian and negro races in their relative ability and will to achieve? In an earlier paper I cited evidence from tests given in the military forces and elsewhere leading to the conclusion that the mean level of intelligence in the Negro is roughly 20% lower than in whites. Race integrationalists have attempted to discredit such evidence in one way or another. Quite recently Carothers (1953) has published a further extensive study, made in Africa, of the African mind and personality, and he cited a number of rather recent studies made by other investigators. Although he seems reluctant to accept the implications of these studies, he does record the data and the conclusions. Whatever the absolute accuracy may be, we cannot lightly dismiss so much old and new objective evidence, all of which points in the same direction.

Finds Inferiority

"Dr. Carothers was born in South Africa, went to school and to medical college in England, and has spent his life on the staffs and as director of mental hospitals in Africa. In his rather extensive monograph on The African Mind in Health and Disease one finds the statement that, 'The available objective data point to a marked inferiority on the part of the native in comparison with the European children in educability.'

"Attempting to summarize the attributes of the African, Carothers says, 'The African has accordingly been described as conventional; highly dependent on physical and emotional stimulation; lacking in spontaneity, foresight, tenacity, judgment and humility; inapt for sound abstraction and for logic; given to phantasy and fabrication; and, in general, as unstable, impulsive, unreliable, irresponsible, and living in the present without reflection or ambition, or regard for the rights of others outside his own circle. To counteract these ruderies, he has also been described as cheerful, stoical, self-confident, sociable, loyal, emotionally intuitive, and eloquent, and as bearing no grudges and having an excellent memory, a large vocabulary, and an aptitude for music and the dance' (p. 87). Concerning reliability of behavior in Africans, Carothers cites cases and says, 'The failures were of the usual kinds met with in Africa; . . . . although such failures occur from time to time, of course, in experience of European employees . . . . they would only occur frequently in western European civilization in persons who would be considered thoroughly irresponsible, whereas Africans who do not frequently default in ways like these are rather exceptional people.' I could not vouch for the correctness in all details of this appraisal of Africans, but it certainly corresponds in many ways with our experience in dealing with American Negroes.

Racial Developments

"One might give acquiescence to the efforts to explain away such evidence as has been obtained by tests and other observations if the historical record revealed significant accomplishment by the Negro race. But such is not the case. Throughout the thousands of years during which the different branches of the Caucasian race were developing the civilizations of Egypt, Sumeria, Assyria, Chaldea, Babylon, Persia, India, Palestine, Phoenicia, Carthage, Greece, Rome, Modern Europe, America—throughout all these thousands of years the Negroes in Africa have not developed beyond food gatherers and a hoe agriculture. Although they have been in peripheral contact with civilizations of other races since the days of early Egypt, they have borrowed little and created little.

"Bad environment is not an acceptable excuse for failure of the Negroes to do anything much but survive. They had a whole continent, indeed a whole world, to have great resources. Furthemore, other races have overcome environmental difficulties. Why should not the Negroes? Overcoming difficulties is the very essence of civilization. Toynbee has pointed out that the development of the Egyptian civilization required 'the transformation of the prehistoric jungle swamps of the lower Nile into the ordered networks of dikes and fields where soil and water are subject to human control.' Also, the Mayan culture of Central America was developed in the tropical humid jungles where conditions were similar to conditions that confronted the Negroes in central Africa.

Black Races Negative

"If you want confirmation, read the world historians. Ridpath remarks, 'The whole of ancient and modern history is virtually occupied with the ambitions, activities, and grand monuments of those Ruddy peoples, who, springing from a common origin in the east and spreading everywhere, have obtained and held the mastery of the world.' And Arnold Toynbee says, 'The black races alone have not contributed to any civilization.'

"Does modern history confirm or refute the lesson of ancient history? In spite of the efforts of press agents to make out a flattering case for the Negro race, it is well known that during their 300 years in America their contributions to our civilization have been and are relatively meager whereas their contributions to social delinquency have been major. Apologists claim this is due to discrimination and lack of opportunity, a claim that is hardly credible for the record is not significantly different in areas that boast of their lack of discrimination. A few years ago the Philadelphia Presbytery made a race relations survey of their area. Concerning crime and delinquency, the survey reports what they refer to as 'Disturbing facts of Negro juvenile delinquency in Philadelphia. Though Negroes constitute only 14.5 percent of Philadelphia's population, 43 percent of juvenile arrests have been Negroes . . . Four out of every five Negro boys are now coming into some scrape with the law by the time they reach 18.'" be separate. So says the Constitution of Georgia.

Then in addition, the law of Georgia says that in the event white and negro students are mixed in the University System that the whole University will be shut down and closed. In other words, there is no money in Georgia to operate the University in the event that negroes are admitted there.

Likewise, there would be no money to operate the three negro schools should whites be admitted to either of those schools. Yet, here these boys are advocating flying in the face of the law of Georgia and closing the University itself.

What does such an insignificant matter as closing the whole University mean to a crank of this kind?

Unfortunately, these organizations have infiltrated into the schools and churches of this state and they have a lot of weak-minded people suffering with a case of conscience because they are not marrying up and mixing with the negro race.

Then, these young cranks seem to be tied up with two communist-front organizations. Their pamphlet says that you can get material from American Friends Service Committee and Southern Regional Council.

The Southern Conservative in its May, 1955, issue said of the American Friends Service Committee the following:

"American Friends Service Committee", Henry Cadbury, chairman. Once a respected organization representing the Quakers, this outfit is now a propaganda apparatus which sends Socialists and left-wingers all over the country to address religious and educational groups. Many of these speakers are authors of books and publications openly plugging for the banishment of the free enterprise system and the adoption of collectivism as a national policy. One of the Friends' lecturers, a Negro, was sent to Pasadena, California, to address the local branch of the American Association of University Women. After expounding his social theories to the AAUW ladies, he was arrested on a morals charge when he was found at three o'clock in the morning in a parked car with two white men.

"Henry Cadbury, chairman, has been shown as belonging to such officially cited Communist fronts as the American Rescue Ship Mission, and the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties and as being affiliated with the Conference on Peaceful Alternatives to the Atlantic Pact which, according to the House Un-American Activities Committee, was instituted by Communists."

Now, you all know about the Southern Regional Council. You know that for weeks the Augusta Courier ran an expose of the Southern Regional Council.

On July 12, 1954, we summed up what we had printed in the June 28, 1954 issue of the Courier. Here's what we said then:

"THE AUGUSTA COURIER carried a detailed expose, June 28, 1954, which established facts about the Southern Regional Council. They are as follows:

"1. It is the successor, in fact, to the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the SCHW.

"2. Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as communists in testimony before Congressional committees by former associates in the party.

"3. At least 38 officers, members of the executive staff or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

"4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare in the report citing it as a communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

"5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to "promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions" to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been solely a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist Party line as laid down for the South.

"6. The incorporators of the Southern Regional Council are Ralph McGill, Editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Dr. George S. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Negro, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk (Negro) University; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina. The

let's have it now?

The report of the full committee will be written at an early date, adopted by the committee and transmitted to the legislature.

Should this committee boldly and bravely present the true facts to the legislature and recommend a full and complete solution now, then the legislature might adopt the program and if so, Georgia would be catapulted into a period of growth and development unheard of here before.

Only Courage Needed

Will Griffin dare take the chance? Will he dare risk his political neck on the chopping block and recommend the amount of taxes that will be necessary to solve the problem?

It will take an unusual amount of political courage for Griffin to take the chance and the gamble.

It is always safer politically to do just enough to get by and to give those who are clamoring for an expanded program of education just enough to close their mouths for the time being.

Griffin is to be sympathized with in his position because it is a perilous position. If he be politically minded and politically ambitious he will certainly be more cautious than usual. On the other hand, if he has made up his mind that this is his last fling at politics and this is his last chance it will be easier for him to do what is necessary to be done. But the average, everyday person is not in position where he is required to make the decision and he can feel safe and smug. But the man on the firing line like Griffin and the members of the legislature will be required to spend many uneasy and restless nights.

Few Dodge Successfully

Yet, that is the price that one must pay for glory. Those who are placed in positions of honor and power are subjected to the hazards of the game.

Some few people have managed to stay in office for a lifetime and skip by the pitfalls and dodge the distasteful issues from time to time. But few men have been so lucky and so successful.

It is strange that history has not recorded the records of those who have skipped by easily, but those who have faced up to the emergencies and the crises when they came and did something about it.

If Griffin faces up to this issue and raises the money necessary to keep Georgia's march of progress going, he may be unpopular for a time, but he will live to see the day when he is praised from one end of the state to the other.

The issue now is up to Griffin. What will he do? For an answer to that question, we must wait and see.

Framers Of Constitution Feared Supreme Court's Powers

Danger Of Tribunal To American Form Of Government Told By U. S. Senator

The usurpation of power by the Supreme Court of the United States in recent years makes especially interesting what the framers of the Constitution thought about the Supreme Court at the time of its creation.

U. S. Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr., of North Carolina, in a recent speech to the Harvard Law School Association of New York City, dealt with this subject.

In his speech, he outlined that there were delegates to the Constitutional Convention of 1787 who were afraid of the power given the Supreme Court.

Limits Not Well Defined

One delegate said, "There are no well-defined limits of the judiciary powers, they seem to be left as boundless as an ocean," and then ended by saying, "It would be an Herculean labor to attempt to describe the dangers with which they are replete."

George Mason, of Virginia, claimed that the judiciary of the United States would absorb and destroy the judiciaries of the several states.

To all these arguments, Alexander Hamilton said that the supposed dangers were "in reality, a phantom."

So, with full knowledge of how the Supreme Court has abused its power in recent years, Senator Ervin entitled his speech "Alexander Hamilton's Phantom."

Opinions of Delegates

And in reference to what the delegates to the constitutional convention thought about the Supreme Court at the beginning, Senator Ervin said:

"The men who composed the American Constitutional Convention of 1787 comprehended in full measure the everlasting political truth that no man or set of men can be safely trusted with governmental power of an unlimited nature. In consequence, they were determined, above all things, to establish a government of laws and not of men.

"To prevent the exercise of arbitrary power by the Federal Government, they inserted in the Constitution of the United States the doctrine of the separation of governmental powers.

Separation of Powers

"In so doing, they utilized the doctrine of the separation of powers in a twofold way. They delegated to the Federal Government the powers necessary to enable it to discharge its limited functions as a central government, and they left to each state the power to regulate its own internal affairs. It was this use of the doctrine of the separation of powers which prompted Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase to make these memorable remarks in his opinion in TEXAS vs. WHITE:

" 'Not only, therefore, can there be no loss of separate and independent autonomy to the States, through their union under the Constitution, but it may be not unreasonably said that the preservation of the States, and the maintenance of their governments, are as much within the design and care of the Constitution as the preservation of the Union and the maintenance of the National Government. THE CONSTITUTION, IN ALL ITS PROVISIONS, LOOKS TO AN INDISSOLUBLE UNION, COMPOSED OF INDESTRUCTIBLE STATES.'

"In their other utilization of the doctrine of the separation of powers, the members of the Convention of 1787 vested the power to make laws in the Congress, the power to execute laws in the President, and the power to interpret laws in the Supreme Court of the United States and such inferior courts as the Congress might establish. Moreover, they declared, in essence, that the legislative, the executive, and the judicial powers of the Federal Government should forever remain separate and distinct from each other.

Arbitrary Power

"The members of the Convention of 1787 did not put their sole reliance upon the doctrine of the separation of governmental powers in their effort to forestall the exercise of arbitrary power by the Federal Government. They balanced the President's power to veto the acts of Congress against the power of Congress to legislate, and they balanced the power of Congress over the purse against the President's power as Commander and Chief of the Army and Navy. They made the Supreme Court of the United States independent of the President and the Congress by giving its judges life tenure during good behavior and by providing that their compensation should not be diminished during their continuance in office. They failed, however, to place in the Constitution any provisions to restrain any abuse of its judicial power by the Supreme Court of the United States.

"This significant omission was not overlooked at the time. Elbridge Gerry, a delegate from Massachusetts, asserted:

" 'There are no well defined limits of the Judiciary Powers, they seem to be left as a boundless ocean, that has broken over the chart of the Supreme Lawgiver, thus far shalt thou go and no further, and as they cannot be comprehended by the clearest capacity, or the most sagacious mind, it would be an Herculean labor to attempt to describe the dangers with which they are replete.'

Mason Makes Objection

"George Mason, a delegate from Virginia, made this more specific objection:

" 'The Judiciary of the United States is so constructed and extended as to absorb and destroy the judiciaries of the several states . . .'

"Others declared, in substance, that under the Constitution the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States would 'not be in any manner subject to . . revision or correction'; that 'the power of construing the laws' would enable the Supreme Court of the United States 'to mould them into whatever shape it' should 'think proper'; that the Supreme Court of the United States could 'substitute' its 'own pleasure' for the law of the land; and that the 'errors and usurpations of the Supreme Court of the United States' would 'be uncontrollable and remediless.'

Hamilton's Opinion

"Alexander Hamilton rejected these arguments with this emphatic assertion: 'The supposed danger of Judiciary encroachments . . is, in reality, a phantom.' He declared, in essence, that this assertion was true because men selected to sit on the Supreme Court of the United States would 'be chosen with a view to those qualifications which fit men for the stations of Judges', and that they would give 'that inflexible and uniform adherence' to legal rules 'which we perceive to be indispensable in the courts of justice.'

"In elaborating this thesis, Alexander Hamilton said: 'It has been frequently remarked with great propriety, that a voluminous code of laws is one of the inconveniences necessarily connected with the advantages of a free government. To void an arbitrary discretion in the courts, it is indispensable that they should be bound down by strict rules and precedents, which serve to define and point out their duty in every particular case that comes before them; and it will readily be conceived, from the variety of controversies which grow out of the folly and wickedness of mankind, that the records of those precedents must unavoidably swell to a very considerable bulk, and must demand long and laborious study to acquire a competent knowledge of them. Hence, it is that there can be but few men in . . . society, who will have sufficient skill in the laws to qualify them for the station of Judges.'

"By these remarks, Hamilton assured the several States that men selected to sit upon the Supreme Court of the United States would be able and willing to subject themselves to the restraint inherent in the judicial process. Experience makes this proposition indisputable: Although one may possess a brilliant intellect and be actuated by lofty motives, he is not qualified for the station of a judge in a government of laws unless he is able and willing to subject himself to the restraint inherent in the judicial process."

charter of incorporation was applied for in Fulton County Superior Court, January 6, 1944, and was granted for a period of thirty-five years. Attorneys for the applicants were the Atlanta law firm of Haas, Lyons and Hurt, of which Leonard Haas is senior member."

Now, these young cranks at the University have aligned themselves with at least thirty-eight members of the Southern Regional Council who have belonged to organizations cited as communist-fronts by either the Attorney General of the United States or the Un-American Activities Committee of the House of Representatives.

So, that's a fine bunch of folks they have lined up with.

And that's the kind of people who are infiltrating the churches and the educational institutions with their filthy, slimy doctrine of racial mixing.

They have used every argument in the world. They have claimed it to be the Christian duty of the white people to mix their blood with the negro blood. They have worked on the consciences of a lot of church people and a lot of crackpot preachers have gone off with them. Some teachers have likewise gone as well as people in other leading positions.

Their aim is a mulatto race in America. They hope to produce a mulatto race in order to weaken America.

This doctrine of race-mixing is communist doctrine. It had its beginning with the communists. It has been promoted by the communist movement from beginning to end.

The Communists know that if they can mix the blood of the white man in the United States with that of the negro that they will destroy the creative genius of the American people and will so weaken the race until by infiltration and without firing a single shot they can take over this country and make America a sattelite to be included behind the iron curtain.

Back of all of it is the determined purpose to destroy the creative and inventive genius of the American people and trim us down to their size. As soon as they can mix us up with negro blood this condition can be produced and America can either be conquered or destroyed according to the whims of the particular dicator who happens to be in control of Moscow.

Now, the pity of it is that young men at the University of Georgia who who come from fine families can be induced into joining up with such filthy and slimy movements.

The fact that they can do so on the campus of the University is no compliment to the teaching staff of the University or to those who sit in administrative positions.

If they had been indoctrinated with a hearty, healthy dose of good old Americanism and the principles that the decent people in Georgia stand for, then the cranks would not even have the nerve to stick their heads above the water.

The people of Georgia pay the bills. The people of Georgia are entitled to know the things taught at the University and they are entitled to have the minds of their children indoctrinated with a more wholesome philsophy.

Now, it is true that there is only a small group in the University who entertain such crazy notions. But the minority group is there.

These minority groups not only exist in the University, but they exist in practically every county in Georgia. They have infiltrated in the churches and into some of the local schools.

Some of our preachers entertain some of the same kind of ideas and most leaders of most churches today are preaching the same kind of filthy doctrine.

Cranks and crackpots have come up with strange doctrines from time to time throughout history. There is nothing strange about that.

Now, the thing for you and I to worry about is the fact that my neighbor doesn't seem to be concerned about this situation and those of us back home are sitting down and doing nothing about it.

I have repeatedly said that it will be too late for us to close the door after the horse has escaped. We have been sitting complacently too long. By our complacency and our failure to take positive action we have led the national politicians into believing that we will gently submit to this kind of a crime being pulled off in this country.

When are you going to do something about it? When are you going to organize in your community? When are you going to investigate what is being taught in the schools in your county? When are you going to do something about the church literature that goes into the hands of your child? When are you going to check up on your preacher and your church?

Destroy School System

"Georgia now stands well to circumvent the Court's decision within the framework of both the Federal and State Constitutions without having committed itself either morally or legally. Moreover, I, as Attorney General, am free to carry out the mandates of the legislature and the people through the orderly processes of defending the State constitutional provisions and statutes designed to accomplish this purpose.

"According to press reports, the United States Solicitor-General demanded of the Court that it forthwith declare all State legislation and constitutional amendments designed to circumvent its decision to be in violation of the Federal Constitution. Should the Court do this, it would mean the complete destruction of Georgia's public school system until the people amended the State Constitution permitting the expenditure of State tax funds for mixed schools. Presently we are without authority under our Constitution to levy taxes for the support of mixed schools.

"Under such circumstances, it is obvious that my position would be untenable had I assisted the Court in writing a decree to bring this about.

Virginia School Bonds Issued In 1953 Held Invalid Now Because Of Desegregation Ruling Of U. S. Supreme Court

Old Dominion Jurist Denounces Racial Decision Of High Tribunal

A Virginia judge ruled recently that a county could not use its 1953 school bonds to build schools in which white and Negro races were to be brought together.

Circuit Judge Leon M. Bazile in a Hanover County case, held that its bonds raising $1,000,000 in school construction funds, are now invalid. He said they had been issued before the United States Supreme Court's decision on May 17, 1954, outlawing racial segregation in public schools.

That Virginia's constitution required separation of whites and Negroes in schools was known to voters when they approved the bond issue on July 14, 1953, the judge said.

Denounces High Court

In granting the injunction upon the petition of an Hanover County attorney, Judge Bazile denounced the Supreme Court for its 1954 desegregation order. He said:

"We are for the first time in American judicial history presented with an opinion which overrules well-considered and rightly considered opinions by some of the greatest American judges on the authority of the unestablished opinions of certain psychologists."

The Virginia judge charged that the members of the Supreme Court's real objective is to bring about complete socialization of the races, and not only nonsegregation in the schools.

Quotes Taft's Opinion

In his twenty-one-page opinion, Judge Bazile quoted from an opinion of the late Chief Justice William Howard Taft, wherein it is held that the matter of school segregation (in a case involving a Chinese) was within the constitutional powers of state legislatures to decide.

"Mr. Chief Justice Taft was a much greater and abler judge than any member of the present court," the Virginia jurist commented.

The judge pointed out that the Supreme Court has twice spoken in the past in favor of separate but equal schools for whites and Negroes, and further that state police powers in that respect were not compromised by the Fourteenth Amendment.

Excerpts From Opinion

"Unfortunately," he added, "the present court has the power—not the right—to reconstrue the XIV Amendment, and having done so, however erroneous and worthless its opinion may be, the several states are bound by it."

Excerpts from the opinion of Judge Bazile barring the use of county bonds for construction of non-segregated school buildings and in which he holds those bonds to be invalid now, is as follows:

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

Governor Marvin Griffin made a great speech to the legislature when he opened the extra session on June 6, 1955.

He outlined the progress that Georgia has made in recent years and it is real progress that we have made.

In this connection, he said:

"All of us have witnessed the economic gains which have been made under an expanded program of State services. True, it has meant greater sacrifices, but the result has been higher incomes for all our people and a greater degree of human security for both urban and farm families in Georgia.

"The record of total accomplishments shows that we have made strides during the last five years far beyond all expectations.

"Business indices prove that we are well along the way toward taking our proper place as a leader among the most progressive states of the union.

"Value of goods produced by our industries during the last five years is up over a half billion dollars. Plant payrolls have risen another $150 million dollars annually in the same period. This economic expansion has created 100,000 new jobs for Georgians.

"Our population has gained nearly a quarter million since the last census in 1950, and is expected to top 4 million within ten years.

"Motor vehicle registration, in the last five years, shows that 250,000 additional cars and trucks are now in use on our highways.

"All of these statistics I cite to demonstrate we are growing rapidly. We must give thought at this time to what we can do to insure a continuation of this forward movement.

"If we plan and work, we will see built here more than 2,500 new industrial plants in the next decade, costing in excess of $150 million dollars, and affording new employment opportunities to over 200,000 Georgia workers.

"These added factories will bring about a half billion dollars in additional payrolls to stimulate the state's economy.

"With such prospects as these, it is clear that vast new markets will be created for the products of our farms. There will be more mouths to feed and more dollars through increasing earning capacity to buy farm commodities.

"Experts predict that within our graps is a multi-billion dollar market for farm and consumer products that we can see realized in the next ten years.

"The question now is whether we are proud of this progress and whether we will take advantage of the challenge that presents itself to us?"

And after the Governor asked the question contained in the last paragraph, he said:

"As for me, I am not content to sit idly by and let one of the most golden eras of opportunity in the economic history of the nation be lost to our people in Georgia.

"We are resolved to go forward and seize the opportunities which can be ours.

"I shall not turn my back on progress.

Industrial Capital Will Go Elsewhere If Georgia Refuses To Go Forward

The future of this state depends upon what the present legislature does for the health, the education and the welfare of the people of Georgia.

And the future depends upon how the legislature finances the program for health, education, welfare and highways.

As this is written, the legislature is still in session and has not adjourned and it may have finished its work and adjourned before this issue of the Courier reaches the reader.

As it now looks, Governor Griffin will pass most of his revenue measures. The majority of them have already passed the House and are ready for action in the Senate.

All Bills May Pass

It is a safe prediction that all of his revenue measures will pass with some amendments and some adjustments with the exception of the extension of the sales tax to services on personal property.

If the bill to extend the three percent sales tax to services on personal property passes it will probably be in a watered-down condition or with some amendments.

Without the sales tax extension, he will not be able to raise the sixty-five million dollars sought.

If everything else passes with the exception of the sales tax, the state should receive additional revenue to the tune of approximately forty million dollars.

Schools At Bottom

Sixty-five million dollars is the minimum on which an adequate program of education, health, welfare and roads can be financed and if only forty million dollars is produced, it means that it will be necessary for the Governor, as the director of the budget, to trim the appropriations down accordingly.

Under the present financial set-up, the schools will come last and any deficit in raising the amount sought by the governor means that the biggest cut will come in the school appropriations.

The Governor can't be entirely blamed for this condition because it is one which has gradually developed in state finances.

Gas Tax Allocated

Under the present constitution, all gasoline tax and automobile tag taxes are allocated to the support of the highways. If this provision of the constitution is followed, the Highway Department will probably secure the amount of money which the Governor's study committee recommended.

The study committee and the Governor have recommended approximately eleven million dollars for this purpose.

Then, in order to protect federal funds available for old age assistance and aid

"I shall not desert our children in their hour of need."

After I had finished reading his speech, I couldn't help but pick up the Sunday issue of the Atlanta newspaper where they devoted a full page showing that Georgia leads the nation in the output of moonshine liquor.

And then I couldn't help but think that Georgia is 'way down the line in the field of education.

With all of the progress we have made in Georgia in recent years under the Minimum Foundation Program, we are still 'way down near the foot of the list.

If Governor Griffin raises the full sixty-five million dollars which he seeks to raise, we will be able to spend only two hundred dollars on each child in average daily attendance in the public schools. The average in the nation last year was two hundred and forty-five dollars and the average of the more prosperous states is in the neighborhood of three hundred dollars per child.

I can't understand how any Georgia citizen can be content to have the federal officials say that Georgia is "the number one moonshine state in the country" and realize that we are near the foot of the list in education.

Possibly the lack of an adequate system of education in the past is the explanation as to why we have built up so many lawbreakers, so many moonshiners and so many bootleggers.

Of course, the fact that we have been a moonshinning state is no news to me. I have known that for some time.

There is one county in Georgia where one of its leading citizens told me two or three years ago that practically all of the people of that county were interested in the moonshine liquor business either directly or indirectly.

Yet, this county has one of the poorest school systems I have ever known and the people of this county, many of whom I know, are poorly educated, unskilled and untrained for the ordinary avocations of life.

But my experience with them shows that they are very skilled in making, hauling and peddling moonshine liquor. They have been well-trained in these unlawful endeavors and their county is and has been racket-ridden.

In the past three years, agents of the state and federal government have destroyed 10,460 liquor stills and made 11,882 arrests in Georgia.

Last year, these same agents destroyed 3,640 stills and made 3,903 arrests.

Last year, these agents poured out 79,065 gallons of moonshine and 2,255,137 gallons of mash.

Now, these agents didn't destroy one-tenth of the stills in Georgia nor one-tenth of the liquor that was made, or the mash that was ready for the distilling process.

So long as we are the number one moonshine state in the nation we can't be the number one state in education and if we ever reverse these figures and become the number one state in education we will soon cease to be the number one moonshine state.

The peculiar thing about this moonshine business is that over half of the moonshine made in Georgia is made in forty-six counties around Atlanta. Forty-five of these counties are so-called "dry" counties. That is, they vote dry and won't let legal liquor be sold in those counties.

Yet, they do nothing about moonshine liquor.

Now, moonshine liquor can be stopped in Georgia if the enforcement officers want it stopped. If the people of a community want it stopped, then they will elect officers who will stop it.

I know that I can find out within twenty-four hours the names of everybody in Richmond County who is making liquor and nearly every one of those who are peddling moonshine. If I had the job, I believe that within another twenty-four hours we could reach every one of them or at least destroy their distilleries.

This same thing can be done in every county in Georgia.

The thing that bothers me is that the people generally in these so-called "dry" counties aren't concerned about moonshine liquor and the great majority aren't concerned about the education of their people.

When Governor Griffin proposed to raise sixty-five million dollars in new taxes you heard a howl all over Georgia. Now, I know that taxes are heavy, but local taxes and state taxes are not heavy in Georgia. It is only the federal taxes that weight us down.

The biggest howl will come from some of these counties that have

"Shall Hanover County contract a loan in the amount of $1,000,000 and issue bonds therefore in that amount for the purpose of providing funds to supplement state school construction funds for the construction of school improvements in said county for white and Negro school children, including the purchase of sites for school buildings for additions to school buildings, the construction of school buildings, or additions to or alternations of existing school buildings, and the furnishing and euipping of school buildings, for additions to school buildings?"

The order calling the election was entered 27 June, 1953, by this court and the date fixed for said election was 14 July, 1953.

The above question submitted was voted in the affirmative at said election and 20 October, 1953, the order was entered by this court pursuant to Code Section 22-172.

Constitution Cited

At the time when the election was held, Section 140 of the Constitution of Virginia was in full force and effect. This section provided "white and colored children shall not be taught in the same school."

This section is part of Article IX of the Constitution and it is inconceivable that any part of that article would have been adopted without the incorporation of Section 140 therein.

At the beginning of the Public School System of Virginia, 1869-70, and continuing through all subsequent codes of Virginia to the present code * * * the declared law of Virginia has been that white and colored children were to be educated in separate schools.

Fourteenth Amendment

The Supreme Court of the United States, when its membership consisted of great judges who were educated in constitutional law and who respected the Constitution of the United States and the high office which they held, had occasion to construe the XIV Amendment of the Constitution of the United States in Plessy v. Ferguson * * *.

In construing the XIV Amendment in that case, Mr. Justice Brown, speaking for the court, said: "The object of the amendment was undoubtedly to enforce the absolute equality of the two races before law, but in the nature of things it could not have been intended to abolish distinction based upon color, or to enforce social, as distinguished from political, equality, or a commingling of the two races upon terms unsatisfactory to either. Laws permitting and even requiring their separation in places where they are liable to be brought into contact do not necessarily imply the inferiority of either race to the other and have been generally if not universally, recognized as within the competency of the state legislatures in the exercise of the police powers. The most common instance of this is connected with the establishment of separate schools for white and colored children, which has been held to be a valid exercise of the legislative power even by courts or states where the political rights of the colored race have been longest and most earnestly enforced."

Court Disagrees

This court does not agree with the opinion in Brown v. Board of Education, supra that what was said in Plessy v. Ferguson about schools was dictum. It is true that case arose under a statute separating the races in railway coaches but the court was construing the XIV Amendment and what it said with reference to schools was directly in point because if the amendment prohibited segregation in the one case it prohibited it in the other.

In any event Plessy v. Ferguson was decided by one of the greatest bodies of judges who ever sat on the Supreme Court of the United States; and this decision was reaffirmed when the direct issue of the separation of races in schools came before the court in Lum v. Rice * * * 1927. In an able opinion written by Mr. Chief Justice Taft, who was one of the greatest judges ever produced in America, probably second only to Marshall as a judge, said:

"The question here is whether a Chinese citizen of the United States is denied equal protection of the law when he is classified among colored races and furnished facilities for education equal that offered to all, whether white, brown, yellow or black. Were this a new question it would call for every full argument and consideration, but we think that it is the same question which has many times been decided to be within the constitutional powers of the state Legislature to settle without intervention of the Federal courts under the Federal Constitution."

Twice Decided by Court

The Constitution of the United States is a written document. A particular section cannot mean one thing at one time and another and different thing at another time * * *

Such was the law on 14 July 1953. It was twice decided by the Supreme Court of the United States that the separation of the races in the public schools was within the police powers of the states unaffected by the XIV Amendment. The same view had been taken by the courts of Massachusetts, Ohio, New York, California, Kansas, North Carolina, Indiana, Missouri, Arizona, Nevada and the inferior Federal courts.

If the voters had sought the best legal advice prior to 14 July it must have been that segregated public schools were legal. In fact, no other public school was permitted in Virginia. * * *

Presumption of Law

The law presumes that every man knows the law. * * *

It must be conclusively presumed that when they voted for the bond issue on 14 July, 1953, that they knew of Section 140 of the Constitution and its contents and Section 22-221 of the code and its contents. At that time it was a matter of common knowledge that only segregated public schools could be operated in Virginia.

Indeed the very ballot that they voted specified that the bond issue that they voted was for white and Negro schools. Indeed at that time no other issue could have been submitted to them. Section 140 of the Constitution of Virginia and 22-221 of the code were in full force and on 14 July, 1953 no integrated public school could have been lawfully operated in Virginia.

Segregated Schools

The bond issue was therefore voted for such schools as could have been lawfully erected on 14 July 1953, that it segregated schools, the white schools for white children and the Negro schools for Negro children. No other proposition could have been or was contemplated by the voters * * *.

In Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka et al, 1954, the Supreme Court of the United States in a purely political opinion based on certain psychology books overruled Plessy v. Ferguson supra and Lum v. Rice supra and we are for the first time in American judicial history presented with an opinion which overruled well considered and rightly considered opinions by some of the greatest American judges, on the authority of the unestablished opinions of certain psychologists.

Taft Is Praised

Mr. Chief Justice Taft was a much greater and abler judge than any member of the present court. Wherever lawyers are assembled, his opinions are treated with the greatest respect. The same may be said for Mr. Justice Brown. He was a great judge and lawyers respect and admire his opinions. But their successors on the court which they once honored see fit to overrule their opinions on the authority of the opinions of certain psychologists who have no training in the legal field or knowledge of constitutional law. * * *

Unfortunately, the present court has the power—not the right—to reconstrue the Fourteenth Amendment, and having done so, however erroneous and worthless its opinion may be, the several states are bound by it.

Whereas on 14 July, 1953, only segregated schools were authorized in Virginia, today if the state remains in the public school business it can in the future operate on non-segregated schools. The inferior Federal courts are bound to enforce whatever decree the Supreme Court may enter in Brown v. Board of Education supra and the people of Virginia are helpless.

No Nonsegregation

It may require further litigation with persons not parties to the litigation of Brown v. Board of Education supra before the nonsegregated system can be put into effect. But that is a mere quibble. If the state continues the public school system, it is inevitable that its public schools must be operated on a nonsegregated basis.

Therefore, the school buildings to be constructed out of the proceeds of the bond issue here will have to be operated as nonsegregated schools.

It follows that the bonds were voted for the building of segregated schools both white and Negro. If the money is spent now the schools that will be built with it must be integrated or nonsegregated schools. Is this such a change as will invalidate such bond issue. * * *

Law Governing Force Of Treaties In U. S. Needs Revising

Georgia Jurist Advocates Bricker Amendment At Meet Of State Bar Group

No other nation in the world makes a treaty the supreme law of their land except the United States, says Justice Carlton Mobley of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

In a speech to the Georgia Bar Association meeting at the Bon Air Hotel in Augusta, on May 28 he called for the correction of this defect in American law by the adoption of the so-called Bricker Amendment to the Constitution.

As it stands today we enter into a treaty with England and the terms of that treaty binds the individual citizen of the United States, but does not bind the individual of Great Britain.

Outlines Position

In defense of his position, Justice Mobley said:

"Should the constitution be amended to provide that, first: 'A provision of a treaty or other international agreement which conflicts with this constitution, or which is not made in pursuance thereof, shall not be the supreme law of the land nor be of any force or effect.' And secondly: 'A treaty or other international agreement shall become effective as internal law in the United States only through legislation valid in the absence of international agreement.' That is what the Bricker amendment as it is now pending in the Senate provides. The American Bar Association is strongly urging its adoption.

"Section 2 simply provides that a treaty or other international agreement shall not become effective as internal law in the United States until implemented by legislation of Congress, which act of Congress is or would be constitutional without relying upon the traty or agreement. This would eliminate self-executing treaties and agreements, which in and of themselves impose obligations upon the United States, which our courts are required to apply. Then all would be non-self-executing, which would leave them binding upon the United States and other nations to the treaty, but would not be binding upon the individual citizens of the United States, until Congress said so. This is already the law in every nation in the world except the United States, Cuba, Philippine Islands, and two or three other small countries.

British Way Different

"The difference in a British treaty, for instance, and ours is that a British treaty when ratified does not of itself have the force of law. It overrides no existing British domestic law, and while binding upon the government it is not binding on the British courts or people until Parliament enacts legislation making it so. In the United States, a treaty, or executive agreement, which the Supreme Court holds is the same as a treaty, is the 'supreme law of the land,' superior to the constitution and the laws of the states. The framers of our constitution never dreamed that a treaty could be used to make domestic law in the 48 states, but the Supreme Court of the United States does not always interpret the Constitution as it was intended, when written. Could there possibly be any valid objection to putting the United States in the same position as the other nations of the world by making treaties binding as domestic law, only after Congress passes an act so providing, which act must not violate the constitution? I cannot see how there could be any valid objection to putting us on an equality with other nations, nor how merely putting us on equality with nations we are dealing with could unduly interfere with our ability to negotiate treaties.

"Those opposing the amendment give as their principal objection to the first provision, that a treaty or agreement shall be of no force and effect if in conflict with the constitution, that it is not necessary because the Supreme Court will so hold. That is not facing reality in view of what has come from the Court in recent years upon the question.

Hamilton's Views

"To say that the amendment is not necessary because the power to make a treaty, which violates the constitution, was not expressly delegated to the federal government, therefore, it does not exist, reminds us of the objection Alexander Hamilton made to the Bill of Rights. He said: 'For why declare that things shall not be done for which there is no power to do?' How many rights would still be preserved to the American people had not they been nailed down in the constitution?

"One of my friends, an able and distinguished jurist, is not enthusiastic about the amendment. He says that the Supreme Court should decide the question, and that what is needed is for the Senate of the United States to perform its constitutional duty and concur in appointments to the Supreme Court, only where the appointee is a qualified lawyer and will recognize judicial restraint. That would be good, but in the meantime the door is open, and the court seems on its way through, why not close the door? Why let the matter come to decision when it can so easily be prevented?

"Secretary Dulles now says that he has tried unsuccessfully to put into words an amendment which would accomplish the desired result without hindering the President in dealing with foreign governments at this critical time in the world's history. I submit that world leadership and national security are worthy objectives, not incompatible with the preservation of liberty at home. Secretary Dulles further says that the American Bar Association, Senator Bricker, and other alert citizens, who became concerned over efforts to use the treaty-power as a way to effectuate reforms, particularly social reforms which were alien to our traditional concepts, have aroused the American public, and that this has served as a correction of the evil; 'That there has been a reversal of the trend toward trying to use the treaty-making power to effect internal social changes. This administration is committed to the exercise of the treaty-making power only within traditional limits.'

Officials Are Reluctant

"Office holders are reluctant to voluntarily release any of the power of their office. As a rule they strive for more. The Secretary feels that so long as he is exercising the power on this question the country is safe. I do not question his sincerity. However his position supports a government of men rather than one of laws.

"Assuming that the President could be trusted not to make a treaty or agreement that conflicted with the constitution, that the Senate would not ratify such a treaty and that the Supreme Court would not uphold such, we are relying upon men and not laws to protect us. The very purpose of the constitution was to put beyond the power of man to destroy the rights of the people and to leave in the hands of the people the governing of themselves. Let us heed the advice of Thomas Jefferson when he said: 'In questions of power let no more be said of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the constitution.'" the poorest educational systems and make the most liquor. It will come from people who are not really interested in building of legitimate businesses in Georgia and the building of a more enlightened and a more skilled people.

We are in the fix we are today because our most intelligent and so-called leading people have failed to take a realistic view of the problems that confront us.

It would be much better to have legal liquor sold in Georgia than to have all of these thousands of racketeers distributing moonshine liquor all over the state.

We have failed to take a realistic position on the liquor question. It is still true of a lot of people what Will Rogers once said about Southern people generally. He said, "They will vote dry as long as they can stagger to the polls."

Likewise, we haven't taken a realistic attitude on the subject of education. A realistic attitude means that we recognize that an adequate system of education costs money and we can't have it without money.

We can't have the money unless all of us are willing to pay and to contribute.

Now, the time has come when we should take a realistic attitude towards the subject of education.

If we are realistic, we know that a better trained and a more skilled people will pay big dividends. We will get back more in the long run than it costs to operate the schools. As a matter of fact, we will get back fifty times as much as it costs.

I can't see how any intelligent person would relish the idea of being the nation's leading moonshine state and at the same time having a per capita income five hundred dollars less than the national average.

We can't expect to increase this per capita income with a bunch of ignoramuses. We can't do it with an untrained and an unskilled people. To increase this per capita income as it should be is going to take a greater degree of knowledge among our people than we now have and a greater degree of skills.

While we have had a poor school system we have also had one of the poorest road systems in the nation. Our roads in Georgia are no great compliment to our intelligence.

We will have a better road system when we take a realistic attitude on that subject and realize that instead of costing us money that a better road system will pay great dividends. A better road system will save you and I money in the operation of our automobiles and the operation of our trucks. The business of this state is now done on wheels and will be done on wheels in the future. If we expect to expand our business and have a more prosperous state, then we must provide for the rolling of the wheels over the highways and with a greater degree of safety than we have had in the past.

We have had a poor system of roads and a poor system of schools because we weren't willing to pay the price to have them.

Unfortunately, most of us have lived in an atmosphere where we hoped to get something for nothing. We want the roads and we want the schools, but we want them for nothing.

People in Georgia have wanted free roads and free schools. There isn't any such animal. There is no such thing as a free school or a free road. Somebody must pay the price and most of us have been engaged in a struggle to force the other fellow to pay.

et al, 1875, the town subscribed to the stock of a railroad company with a definite route fixed for the construction of the road at the time. Subsequent to that date the railroad made a change in its route which the courts held was a mercurial change. It then held that the taxpayers of the town could maintain a suit to enjoin the issue of bonds in payment of stock subscription for which the town was no longer bound. * * *

It is true that in Board of Public Construction v. State (Fla.) (1954) the court held that where a bond issue for schools was voted prior to the decision in Brown v. Board of Education supra that the validity of the bond issue was not affected by that decision. This court has read the main opinion by Terrell, Justice, the concurring opinion of Matthews, Justice, and it is not impressed with either the reasoning or the correctness of the opinion and concurring opinion, and does not feel bound to follow such case, even though it may be a school bond case, in the face of the overwhelming weight of authority to the contrary on the issue here involved.

Illegal Expenditure

As was so clearly pointed out by Matthews, Justice, in his dissenting opinion in that case. . .

"The proposed bond issue as submitted to the freeholders was for the purpose of building and improving separate schools for Negro and white children and, as has been noted, is in direct conflict with the United States Constitution, as Now construed by the Supreme Court of the United States in the Brown case. Therefore, the purpose for which the money is to be expended is illegal. The purpose being illegal it follows that the bonds are illegal. The purpose for which said bonds were to be issued cannot now be changed to build an improved school where Negro and white children may be permitted or enforced to attend the same schools. Such purpose would be in direct conflict with the Constitution of the State of Florida and violation of the contractual obligations with the freeholders."

Basic Position

The underlying position of the Supreme Court in Brown v. Board of Education supra is something more than mere nonsegregated education. It goes further than this. From what was said in McLaurin v. Oklahoma State Regents (1950) object is so far as that court can coerce the state to compel complete socialization of the races. In a graduate school it was held that a signing of a special seat at a table in the classroom and library and a specific table in the cafeteria to a Negro student violated the XIV Amendment. Under this decision no regulation can be imposed as to where the respective children will sit in the classroom and the library and what party they will play on the athletic field and no restraint can be placed by the school authorities as to how they will be served in the cafeteria or where they shall sit after being served; nor can the school authorities prevent or prohibit the "intellectual comingling of the students."

That is the real underlying purpose of the political opinion rendered by the Supreme Court in Brown v. Board of Education supra and that is the real objective of the psychologists whose opinions the present Supreme Court regards more highly than the ablest and soundest opinions of its great predecessors.

Injunction Granted

It is such a change from the situation that existed when the bonds were voted as rendered the expenditure of the proceeds thereof for nonsegregated school buildings invalid?

From an examination of the law which has heretofore been cited the court is of the opinion that the change wrought by the Supreme Court since 14 July 1953 makes any expenditures from the proceeds of the bond issue for nonsegregated schools illegal.

An injunction will therefore be issued restraining the school board from issuing said bonds or using them for any school purpose.

If the people are interested in building nonsegregated schools another election may be readily held to determine this issue.

Stricter Control Tax-Free Foundations Seen By Congress

Ford Endowment Given SRC To Fight Racial Segregation In Southern States

Although stricter control of tax-exempt foundations by the Congress is anticipated, Dean Rusk, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, says that foundations will never shy away from controversial matters, neither will they be intimidated by political criticism, such as that of Representative B. Carroll Reece, Republican of Tennessee, then head of a House Committee on Tax-Exempt Foundations.

Increasing abuses of tax exempt foundations were discussed by lawyers at a conference attended by more than 200 persons at New York University, May 19th through May 21st.

It was charged that the abuses had risen as the number of charitable foundations soared from a handful to 30,000: most of the growth has been in the last fifteen years.

Stricter Control Seen

"Because a few persons have been unscrupulous in manipulation of foundations for personal gains, stricter control may be legislated soon by Congress," Donald C. Alexander, member of the Cincinnatti law firm of Taft, Stettinius & Hollister, said. The abuses, in the opinion of Alexander, had made foundations appear to be "too juicy a deal."

It was pointed out by George D. Webster, Jr., Washington attorney, that tax-exempt foundations come into conflict with the Internal Revenue Code when they accumulate income unreasonably. He cited ownership of separate "feeded' corporations for profit as an example.

Restrictions Listed

Jay O. Kramer, lecturer at New York University's Institute of Federal Taxation, and former special attorney with the chief counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, listed key restrictions on foundations holding tax-exempt status as:

1. No earnings may go to benefit a private individual.
2. No substantial part of earnings may be used to influence legislation.
3. No money may be contributed to a political candidate.

New foundations usually do not get tax exempt status for a year, Kramer said. During that time they are required to show active intention to work toward the charitable purpose for which it was organized or created.

Subversion Changed

The Bureau of Internal Revenue would be prompt to revoke tax exempt status for charities failing to carry out stated purposes or engaging in prohibted transactions, Harry F. Weyher, a New York attorney and lecturer at New York University's School of Law, said.

If the Commissioner of Internal Revenue removed the exemption, the punished foundation would have to pay taxes for at least a year, Maurice C. Greenbaum of the New York firm of Greenbaum, Wolff & Ernst, declared. The foundation could then apply, Greenbaum said, for reinstatement under what he described as the "naughty, naughty" provision of the tax code, promising "never to sin again."

Congressman Reece's report, based on findings of his committee, and which was referred to by Rusk, head of the Rockefeller foundation, charged that some of the larger foundations had supported subversion and financed promotion of socialist and collectivist ideas. The Reece report was signed by the three Republicans on the committee.

Explosive Issues

"I have confidence that in the next few years," Rusk predicted, "foundations will have a pleasing list of controversial items for the consideration of such critics as Reece."

Entry of foundations into explosive issues will not only continue but will grow, F. Emerson Andrews, director of studies for philanthropy for the Russel Sage Foundation, declared.

General research foundations such as those named for Rockefeller, Ford and Carnegie are likely to support more undertakings in the controversial area of the social science field, Andrews said.

Future Growth Seen

Foundations will continue to grow in number and service to mankind, Andrews declared. But, he urged foundations to start self-regulation at once. A good place to start, he suggested, would be with annual voluntary public reports on foundation activities and aims. Of the seventy-seven general research foundations in the United States, he said, only twenty-six now issue such reports.

Rusk says he sees a need for a centralized agency to help keep foundations up to date on what each are doing and on what needs to be done.

Approval of Rusk's idea, was given by Leonard W. Mayo, director of the Association for the aid of Crippled Children. Mayo said representations of thirty foundations in New York City now meet informally once a month to discuss mutual interests. He invited other foundations represented at the conference to attend the meetings. A network of foundations rubbing shoulders in a cooperative way in New York could close gaps and prevent overlapping of projects.

Bank Official Speaks

Don K. Price, associate director of the Ford Foundation, and Rector K. Fox, vice president on the Hanover Bank of New York, were among the speakers.

Speaking editorially about the statement of Rusk and Andrews, The New York Times, said in part, May 22, 1955:

"It is refreshing to be told that, in spite of Representative B. Carroll Reece's jitters about such matters, American foundations are going to deal increasingly with "controversial" issues—especially when this opinion is expressed by those who know most about foundation activities. Both Dean Rusk, President of the Rockefeller Foundation and F. Emerson Andrews, author of authoritative studies in this field, said as much at the conference on the problems of the charitable foundation held at New York University last week.

Objective Study

"In our opinion controversy is not only an index of the importance of a subject but also of the need for its objective study by competent people beholding to none of the interests involved. By and large American foundations are uniquely fitted to meet these requirements—as they have impressively proved in the past."

The Southern Regional Council with headquarters in Atlanta, was subsidized by the Ford Foundation with a grant of $247,000.00, several months ago.

The Southern Regional Council is a haven for Communists and Red fronters; it is the successor of the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

Officers of SRC

Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council, are practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Among other things promoted by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, was destruction of racial lines by eliminating segregation in the hotels, restaurants, on trains and in buses, social quality and intermarriage between white people and Negroes. When that organization was revealed by a congressional committee as a communist front organization, it folded up and came to life again under the name and style of the Southern Regional Council with headquarters in Atlanta, as was the case with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Georgia Incorporators

Revelations about the communistic inspired Southern Conference for Human Welfare, forced it to go out of business under that corporate name. It was succeeded by another corporation under the name of the Southern Regional Council. The records of the Superior Court in Fulton County, Georgia, show that incorporators of the Southern Regional Council are:

Ralph McGill, editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Dr. George S. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Negro, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk (Negro) University; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, University of North Carolina.

The charter incorporating the Southern Regional Council was granted for thirty-five years. Attorneys for applicants for the charter were the Atlanta law firm of Haas, Lyons & Hurt, of which Leonard Haas is senior member.

Ford Fights Segregation

Activities supplementing the grant by the Ford Foundation of nearly a quarter of a million dollars, to the Southern Regional Council, for the purpose of breaking down racial segregation and for other political activities, a grant of $75,000.00 was made to the Southern Education Reporting Service. That was to help keep a tab on sentiment and other things having to do with the plan to destroy segregation. Joe Parham of the Macon Newspapers, was appointed Georgia correspondent of the Southern Regional Council.

The Southern Education Reporting Service is an off-shoot of the Southern Regional Council. The Ford Foundation made the $75,000.00 grant to the Southern Educational Reporting Service.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

There is only one way that we can have adequate roads and adequate schools and that is by all the people in Georgia making up their minds that each is willing to pay in accordance with his own ability.

There aren't enough big corporations and rich people if we should saddles all of it on them. Yet, we have been trying to do that throughout our history in order to keep the average fellow from paying. It simply can't be done.

The Governor's request for these taxes has met with a lot of opposition. That's natural. We are still looking for something for nothing and hoping to make the other fellow carry the full burden.

But the Governor deserves credit. It took courage for him to take the stand which he took. It took nerve for him to ask for these taxes escpecially in view of the fact that he ran on a platform pledging no new taxes.

When he got in office he found out that it was either new taxes or the state would go backwards. Consequently, he was frank enough to admit his mistake and to ask the people to admit theirs.

Now there isn't but one answer to this tax problem. We have got to raise our own money and finance our own institutions and activities. We have been looking to Uncle Sam too long.

Now, here's the answer. If Uncle Sam will just quit giving away all our money in an effort to buy friends all over the world then the federal government can reduce its taxes and allow the states to have something to tax. If the federal government would only reduce its taxes ten percent, then the state could raise the sixty-five million dollars which the governor wants and the people of Georgia would still save money.

The federal government took out of Georgia last year seven hundred and five million dollars in taxes. A ten percent reduction would be more than seventy million dollars. So, if the Congress would only do what it ought to do, Governor Griffin could get his sixty-five million dollars and the people of Georgia would save five million dollars in the deal.

It is time to quit cussing the local people for trying to do something for our folks. It is time to start cussing the bunch who vote appropriations to give away billions of dollars every year to people away off some place.

It's time that we do something for our folks.

Industrial Capital Will Go Elsewhere If Georgia Refuses To Go Forward to the blind and dependent children, it is absolutely necessary that the state put up more money.

Hospital Needs Money

It is also essential that the Governor allocate money to open and operate the Talmadge Memorial Hospital in Augusta and the State Hospital at Milledgeville, the tubercular hospital at Rome and the other state institutions in order to take care of the unfortunates who are in these institutions.

This being true, necessarily the amount to go to the Highway Department must be calculated first and the amounts to be spent for health and welfare must come next and the schools necessarily will be last.

So, any deficit in the sixty-five million dollars sought means that the greater portion will come out of the funds which would be available for the public schools should the full amount be raised.

Would Damage Schools

Of course, the Highway funds are subject to budgetary control and the Governor can by executive order take some of the money away from the Highway Department to be used by the schools as Governor Talmadge did in order to keep the schools going during the last year.

It is safe to assume that a failure to raise the full amount will hurt the school program worse than anything else even though the Governor might see fit to exercise his budgetary control over the allocations of the Highway Department and take part of the highway money to be used to operate the schools.

It is also safe to assume that in the event the present legislature fails to raise the full amount of the taxes sought that there will be a continuing crisis in the state school system and that it will be necessary for the legislature as the next session in January, or the session following in January, 1957, to complete the job.

Money Is Needed

It cannot be disputed that the money is needed and if the state is to continue to make progress that the money must be forthcoming.

Even those who are fighting the tax program in the legislature the hardest admit this to be true. There is no argument over the need for the money.

The arguments used by opposing members of the legislature is that they fear to vote the taxes on account of the sentiment of the people back home and on account of the fear of being defeated at the polls next summer.

What Others Say

Others say they would be willing to incur the displeasure of the people, but they do not trust the Griffin administration to handle the money.

Still others say that the Griffin administration has not yet eliminated the waste and the mismanagement out of state affairs and that should come before the levying of taxes.

Yet, all of them admit that even if after waste and extravagance have been eliminated that more money would be needed and that the amounts sought by the Griffin administration is about the minimum with which the state can operate an adequate program of services to its people.

At the time of this writing it appears that the increase in the tax on insurance premiums, tax on wine, liquor and beer, cigarettes, cigars, automobile tag taxes and the increases in the income tax have an excellent chance to pass.

The extension of the sales tax on services has a rocky road to travel.

Income Of More Than Eight Million Persons In South Less Than $500 Annually, Federal Government Reveals

Curse Of Ignorance, Poverty Continues To Haunt People Of Southern States

More than 8,000,000 persons in the South still receive incomes less than $500 a year, the Atlanta field office of the U. S. Department of Commerce reported.

The large negro population and the low income on the farms is the cause of this condition.

The report was based on a current Bureau of the Census release on incomes of persons over the United States in the year 1953.

An analysis of the survey showed that 24.4 per cent of the South's population 14 years old and over had the lowest incomes, $1 to $499, and another 15.4 per cent, or more than 5,000,000, received from $500 to $999 in that year.

The Census Bureau report, which contained a breakdown for males and females in the income-earning category, listed 15.1 per cent of the region's males as in the $1 to $499 income class and 33.5 per cent of the females.

The study of the survey results, made by Merrill C. Lofton, manager of the Commerce Department field office here, was based upon the 1950 census of population which contained the most recent regional figures on males and females of labor force age. In this instance, the South covered the States of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Tennessee, the Carolinas and Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Kentucky, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma and the District of Columbia. The 1950 Census listed 16,558,049 such males and 17,110,074 females.

The survey and analysis showed that only one tenth of one per cent of the males, or an estimated 16,558 men, received $25,000 and over. There were no women in this class.

It was also shown that males in the region received a median or nearly average income in 1953 of $2,317 and females, $900, which compared with $3,223 and $1,168, respectively in the United States as a whole.

Other income brackets reflected in the survey and study based upon the 1950 Census in the South were:

Nine and eight-tenths per cent, 3,291,750 persons, $1,000 to $1,499.

Nine per cent, 3,030,683, from $1,500 to $1,999.

Nine and two-tenths per cent, 3,098,571, from $2,000 to $2,499.

Six and eight-tenths per cent, 2,299,918, from $2,500 to $2,999.

Six and six-tenths per cent, 2,229,822, from $3,000 to $3,499.

Four and four-tenths per cent, 1,485,259, from $3,500 to $3,999.

Three and seven-tenths per cent, 1,231,368, from $4,000 to $4,499.

Two and two-tenths per cent, 731,314,

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

My hat's off to Governor Griffin.

It took courage to call an extra session of the Legislature and to recommend to the members of the Legislature that they levy an additional sixty-five million dollars in taxes on the people of this state.

Taxes are never popular and they are more unpopular right at this time than ever before in the history of the state.

Governor Griffin and his committee knew that taxes would be unpopular and they knew that it would be difficult to get the Legislature to vote them.

They knew that people generally who are unable to comprehend the importance of an adequate school system, adequate health and welfare services, and an adequate road system would be against any additional taxes.

They had to know that human nature is selfish and that all of us would like to put the tax burden on the other fellow.

As evidence of that fact, there is always a hue and a cry to soak the rich. But, unfortunately there are not enough rich to go around and there are not enough rich people left to support the state.

They say soak the big corporations, but most of the big corporations are corporations from other states and even though they are foreign corporations there are not enough of them to go around. There are not enough of them to support the state.

Then, if there were enough corporations we would destroy the goose that lays the golden egg if we destroy them.

This attitude of soaking the big corporations is entirely wrong. To answer that question we only need to ask who constitutes the big corporations. The big corporations are owned by thousands of little people who have invested their life's savings and earnings into the stocks of these corporations. One of the reasons most of the corporations operating in Georgia are so-called foreign corporations is due to the fact that Georgia people have been poor and we haven't invested our money in the stocks. It is good business for us to save and work and buy all of the stocks in these corporations that we can so that they will belong to the people of Georgia.

Due to the fact that we have not been properly educated and trained in the past we have bought up too few of these stocks, we own too few of these stocks and we own too small an interest in these machines which do the big business of the nation.

Instead of trying to destroy them, we ought to be doing everything we can to own as big a stake in them as we can possibly own. Certainly our ownership in these corporations ought to be bigger than it is today.

But that's somewhat beside the point. Let's get back to Governor Griffin and the members of the Legislature who helped him vote these taxes.

Governor Griffin and every member of the Legislature who voted with him risked their political necks and put their political heads on the chopping block when they came out for these taxes.

If you read the newspapers and the letter columns in the daily press, you found that every one of them were unpopular and that the people generally were opposed to them.

If you get out and ride the state you will find that the people of Georgia today are grumbling and criticizing the Governor and the Legislature and that Governor Griffin today is the most unpopular governor we have

The school teachers, like the cow's tail, came out last at the recent session of the Legislature.

Next to the school teachers were the schools themselves. Governor Griffin's study committee stated that the schools would need between forty and fifty million dollars more with which to operate in the next few years and they are now winding up with twenty-two million.

Everybody else got what the study committee recommended except the schools.

The reduction from sixty-five million to less than forty million came out of the school system.

The recommendation of the study committee for the expenditure of the sixty-five million dollars provided that eleven million would go to the Highway Department, seven million to health, welfare and public institutions and the balance should go to the school systems.

Out of the special session, the Highway Department got twelve million, health, welfare and institutions got its seven million and the schools were reduced from forty-seven million to twenty-two, a total reduction of twenty-five million dollars.

Instead of the highways getting twelve million, they will actually get eighteen million more because Governor Talmadge took six million dollars of the highway money with which to operate the schools during the last year.

Under the recommendations of the legislature, this six million dollars will probably be restored and the schools will once again be flapping around like an old cow's tail. The children and the schools come last.

This is the age-old story under the set-up in Georgia and the method of financing the state.

Under the present set-up, this is the way appropriations are made:

1. Under the State constitution, the proceeds of all gasoline and tag taxes are allocated to the State Highway Department.

2. When the Highway Department is taken care of, then money is set aside to pay old age pensions, pensions for state employees, for the Health Department and to operate the State Hospital and institutions.

3. Then, whatever is left is divided between the public schools and the University System.

To make matters worse, the revenue bills passed at the recent session of the Legislature will not raise forty million dollars during the first year and possibly not during the second year.

If the bills raise as much as thirty-five million dollars for each of the first 2 years,

THE SUPREME COURT

"The myth of judicial infallibility is exploded by a reference to the case of Gong Lum v. Rice (275 U. S. 78) decided by the United States Supreme Court in a unanimous opinion handed down 28 years ago by Chief Justice Taft. That Court, composed of men of great judicial stature, such as Oliver Wendell Holmes, Brandeis, and others, stated in an opinion directly contrary to the opinion of May 1954: 'The right and power of the State to regulate the method of providing for the education of its youth at public expense is clear. * * * The education of the people in schools maintained by State taxation is a matter belonging to the respective States, and any interference on the part of Federal authority with the management of such schools cannot be justified except in the case of a clear and unmistakable disregard of rights secured by the supreme law of the land. * * * The same question * * * has been many times decided to be within the constitutional power of the State legislature to settle without intervention of the Federal courts under the Federal Constitution. * * * (citation of 15 earlier opinions). * * * The decision is within the discretion of the State in regulating its public schools and does not conflict with the 14th Amendment.'

"In its opinion of May 17, 1954, in the case of Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka (347 U. S. 483) the Supreme Court brushed aside all of the reason and logic embodied in the foregoing well-settled principles in one sentence and in referring to the Gong Lum case twice erroneously referred to the child involved as a boy when in fact it was a Chinese girl named Martha Lum whose father, Gong Lum, instituted the suit in her behalf. This circumstance raises a serious question whether the Court even read the earlier opinion in the Gong Lum case.

"It remains to be seen whether or not the opinion of the Supreme Court of May 17, 1954, arrived at solely by a reference to the writings of certain psychologists, and in considering as it did only the alleged effects of segregation on the colored child without any discussion of or thought given to the effect of enforced integration on the mental, moral, and health standards of the white child, will be able to stand the test of time and the assault of logic and legal reasoning that may be expected henceforth to challenge its validity."

—From a speech made by Paul Lee Sweeny, Attorney for Fairfax County, at Annandale High School (Virginia) on April 30, 1955.

The Commies' Program For Youth

The Communist Party has gotten out a booklet entitled "A Racial Program for the Twentieth Century."

We quote the following excerpt from this pamphlet:

"We must realize that the Party's most powerful weapon is racial tension. By pounding into the consciousness of the dark races that for centuries they have been oppressed by the whites, we can mold them to the program of the Communist Party. The terms colonialism and imperialism must be featured in our propaganda.

"In America we will aim for a subtle victory. While influencing the negro minority against the whites, we will endeavor to instill in the whites a guilt complex for their exploitation of the negro. (And what a success that has been!)

"We will aid the negro to rise to prominence in every walk of life, in the professions, and the world of sports and entertainment. With this prestige the negro will be able to intermarry with the whites and begin a process which will deliver America to our cause."

This has been the aim of the Communist Party since the days of the 20's. A lot of good unthinking people have had instilled in them the guilt complex which the Communists seek. A lot of good Christian people have been duped.

And, in addition, a lot of politicians have lost their nerve and their courage to fight such an ungodly purpose.

Now, what are you and I going to do about it?

Concrete Highways Bring Quicker Money To Contractors Than Schools And Colleges

they will do better than can be reasonably expected.

So, instead of the legislature raising forty million dollars, it will be thirty-five million.

And out of the thirty-five million, the Highway Department will get its twelve, the Health, Welfare and institutions must have their seven million and, consequently, nineteen million will be gone immediately.

That leaves sixteen million to be divided between the University System and the public schools.

Then, if you take the six million off of this sixteen to replace the amount the Highway Department has been contributing to the general treasury, that will leave ten million dollars to be divided between the University System and the public school system.

Unless Governor Griffin exercises his budgetary authority and takes some of the Highway money, the public schools and the University System will wind up with between ten and fifteen million dollars to operate between them.

Now, suppose all of this ten or fifteen million dollars is given to the public schools and the University System is left out completely. What do you think will happen?

In the first place, the state will need in September eleven hundred more school teachers to furnish the required number of teachers to teach the children who will enroll. If these teachers are paid an average of twenty-five hundred dollars a year each, that will amount to two million seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Additional money will be required to transport all of these thirty thousand new pupils that will come in in September and additional money will be needed to maintain the buildings and to provide new buildings to house them.

So, after we get through hiring the new teachers, hauling the children to school, buying fuel and furnishing lights and janitor service and putting up money with which to pay off the bonds being used for building the new classrooms, the teachers will have the privilege of dividing what's left.

When we get down to the amount that that will be left, it is going to be very small and it is going to be a little cow's tail left for the school teachers.

The school teachers will get cow-tail soup and that's all. It won't even be a fat ox-tail soup. It will be soup made from a poor tail of a half-starved piney woods cow.

So, this session called principally to help the schools is going to take care of everybody but the schools and the schools will be given just a little taste.

Yet, the school teachers and the school people all over the state were used to build up the crisis which produced the session and produced the taxes that we will get.

The psychology in the state which produced this situation is nothing new or unusual.

This psychology which pervades the State of Georgia is due entirely to the lack of education in the past and as a result of the fact that our people have not been properly educated in the past.

Had we had the people of Georgia better educated and more skilled, they would recognize the absolute need and the urgency of an adequate school system in this state.

So, it can be said that even though the Legislature has met in extra session and passed these tax bills, that we will not have an adequate system of education in this state.

In a few months it will appear that the Legislature has done a good job everywhere else, but they have only done a piece-meal job on the schools.

The school people will soon find out that they came out of the session at the bottom of the list and once again it will be necessary to start a campaign in the state for an adequate system of public education.

All the other things are important and every one of the other state activities should have been properly cared for, but so long as Georgia puts education on its list as the least important of state activities, then we are going to be a poor people and we are going to have a low per capita income as in the past.

Georgia will make real progress when she puts education at the top of the list in importance and when she builds up a foundation where it can fix a salary schedule which will attract into the teaching profession the brightest minds among our people.

Until this is done we will have the school problem on us and there will be a demand for more taxes and more money.

So, every dollar the Legislature failed to raise as recommended by Governor Griffin means that that dollar comes out of the school funds.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

had in a long, long time.

Governor Griffin and the members of the Legislature knew this when they took their stand.

Yet, every one of them had to put the interest of the state above his own personal interests. It took courage to do it and every one of them, instead of being blamed, deserves a great deal of credit.

While I am disappointed in the fact that the schools will get little benefit from the session, it is some and we should be thankful for that. You and I were not required to stick our necks out.

You and I are not candidates for any political office and there is nothing that anybody can do to us. These men who did stick their necks out for the progress and development of Georgia have incurred the criticism and the wrath of their neighbors and their friends and they are now required to go back home and take the criticism and the snubs that will come as a result.

Time will prove that they have been right and that they have done a good job. They will each have had the satisfaction of knowing that he has served the best interests of his state and that he has kept the ball of progress in Georgia rolling.

Each will have the satisfaction of knowing that he has helped to break down to some extent the old apathy which has existed in the South and the spirit that has caused us to be satisfied with little or nothing.

Time will cure a lot of the hurt on account of these taxes. The people of the state will soon learn that these taxes were necessary and that it was necessary for the Governor and the Legislature to meet the crisis which faces the people of this state.

The session of the Legislature came at an unfortunate time. It came at a time when people were sick of federal taxes. It came at a time when the people were disgusted with the way the federal government wastes and gives away their money. It came at a time when the people felt helpless to remedy the situation with respect to the federal government and at a time when it looked as if our representatives in Washington would do nothing to relieve the fearsome tax burden which the federal government puts on the backs of the people.

The session came at a time when business is leveling off in Georgia and at a time when business itself is slowing down and the average person is behind with his installment payments.

The session came at a time when the state was hit with a severe drought last summer and again with a freeze last spring which financially crippled the agricultural areas of the state. In addition, great portions of the

Equal Justice Under Law Now Only A Figure Of Speech

U. S. Senator Ervin Tells Of His Disgust Of Members Making Up High Tribunal

There is no such thing as equal justice under the law so long as we have the present Supreme Court of the United States, according to Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr., of North Carolina.

He drove this point home in a speech which he made at the annual dinner of the Harvard Law School Association of New York City on April 28, 1955.

Senator Ervin is a former member of the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina and is now serving his first term in the United States Senate.

According to his remarks, he is disgusted with the Supreme Court and the members who constitute it.

"I was taught in my youth to repose an absolute confidence in the Supreme Court by my father," said Senator Ervin.

The recent decisions of the Supreme Court have caused the Senator to lose confidence and he now has no respect for the legal ability of the members of the Court or their intellectual honesty.

In this connection the Senator said:

"The States accepted as valid Alexander Hamilton's positive assurance that men chosen to serve on the Supreme Court of the United States would subject themselves to the restraint inherent in the judicial process, and were thereby induced to ratify the Constitution notwithstanding the omission from that instrument of any express provision protecting the other branches of the Federal Government, the States, or the people against the arbitrary exercise of its judicial power by the Supreme Court.

"For several generations next succeeding its utterance, the people of America had no reason to doubt the accuracy of Alexander Hamilton's assurance. With rare exceptions, the Presidents selected for membership upon the Supreme Court of the United States men who had long and laboriously participated in the administration of justice either as practicing lawyers or as judges of State Courts or as judges of the Federal Courts inferior to the Supreme Court. As a consequence, the overwhelming majority of the men called to service upon the Supreme Court were able and willing to subject themselves to the restraint inherent in the judicial process and to perform their tasks in the light of the principle that it is the duty of the judge to interpret the law, not to make it.

"I was taught in my youth to repose an absolute confidence in the Supreme Court by my father, an active practitioner of law in North Carolina for 65 years, who was accustomed to refer to the Supreme Court with reverential awe. He used to say that this tribunal would administer justice according to law even though the heavens fell.

"I regret to say, however, that the course of the Supreme Court of the United States in recent years has been such as to cause me to ponder the question whether fidelity to fact ought not to compel us to remove from the portal of the building which houses it the majestic words, 'Equal Justice Under Law,' and to substitute for them the superscription, 'Not justice under law, but justice according to the personal notions of the temporary occupants of this building.' In making this statement, I reveal my acceptance of this observation made by the late Justice Robert H. Jackson in BROWN v ALLEN: 'But I know of no way that we can have equal justice under the law except we have some law.'

"Candor compels the confession that on many occasions during recent years the Supreme Court has to all intents and purposes usurped the power of the Congress and the States to amend the Constitution. This abuse of power was made manifest even before the decision in BROWN v BOARD OF EDUCATION, which repudiates solely upon the basis of psychology and sociology the interpretation placed upon the Fourteenth Amendment in respect to racial segregation by Federal and State Courts, the Congress itself, and the Executive branches of the Federal and State Governments throughout the preceding 86 years. Time does not permit me to cite all the cases supporting my present contention. I mention only one, namely WILLIAMS v NORTH CAROLINA, where the majority of the Court altered the meaning of the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution by over-ruling the holding of HADDOCK v HADDOCK to the effect that a State Court even of the plaintiff's domicile, could not render a judgment of divorce that would be entitled to Federal enforcement in other States against a non-resident who did not appear and was not personally served with process. In so doing, the majority of the Court held, as the late Justice Jackson asserted in his dissenting opinion, that 'settled family relationships may be destroyed by a procedure that we would not recognize if the suit were one to collect a grocery bill.'

"Recent decisions make it manifest that the Supreme Court has usurped the power to nullify acts of Congress. Perhaps the most glaring of these decisions is GIROUARD v UNITED STATES, where the Court overruled three previous decisions and a subsequent confirming act of Congress simply because a majority of its members did not believe that Congress had exercised its legislative power wisely in denying the privilege of citizenship to aliens who were unwilling to bear arms in defense of this country. To be sure, the majority of the Court did not say that it thought that Congress had legislated unwisely. But a statement to this effect would have been a far better reason for its decision than any of those it gave.

"In addition to is revolutionary decisions on constitutional and statutory subjects, the Supreme Court of the United States has substantially impaired the doctrine of stare decisis and the stability of the law of the land which this doctrine formerly insured by overruling, repudiating, or ignoring its established precedents of earlier years. Former Justice Owen J. Roberts, a recent member of the Court, made this comment in this connection in his dissenting opinion in SMITH v ALLWRIGHT: 'The reason for my concern is that the instant decision, overruling that announced about 9 years ago, tends to bring adjudications of this Tribunal into the same class as a restricted railroad ticket, good for this day and train only'."

state have suffered two dry years.

As a result of the freeze and the drought, the agricultural areas of the state are hard up and the people who live in those areas are having a difficult time in trying to recover their losses and to stay in business.

It was necessary to hold the session at this time of the year and before Governor Griffin's administration had had an opportunity to sell the people of the state upon the absolute necessity of the new taxes. It was unfortunate for the administration that it had to be done now, but that couldn't be helped.

Consequently, the proper build-up and the proper campaign to create sentiment for the session had not been made.

The Griffin administration didn't have an opportunity to properly present it to the people in advance.

Then there are two other things which entered into the picture and were very unfavorable to the success of the tax session.

1. During the last campaign some of the candidates for governor told the people that we would face a crisis in our finances at this time of the year. Governor Griffin made the mistake of vehemently denying this fact. He said there would be no crisis and that there would be plenty of money to finance the state. In his enthusiasm and his anxiety to be elected, he went too far in his statements. Unfortunately, the human mind, being as it is, every one of those statements are remembered by the people today and are held against the Governor.

I am willing to give the Governor the benefit of the doubt and to say that he was not properly informed as to the actual financial condition of the state. Yet, he could have been properly informed by merely talking to the State Auditor and upon consulting with the school people of this state.

2. The people of the state do not have confidence in the state administration. Griffin was elected with about thirty-five percent of the votes and with a majority of the people against him.

During last summer's campaign the people were not enthusiastic about any one of the candidates and they milled around for a long time before they made up their minds. The campaign came at a time when the people were confused in their own minds about state issues and the personalities who were engaged in the race.

Griffin hasn't had time yet to build confidence in his administration. I believe that confidence is growing in Griffin himself.

Yet, confidence is not growing in the Griffin administration. I believe confidence is lessening in the key men in the Griffin administration.

I spent three days in Atlanta during the session. A day and a half was taken up entirely with a Board of Regents meeting and the other day and a half was spent mixing with the members of the Legislature and the people who hung around the hotels and the Capitol.

Numerous men who were strong last summer for Griffin approached me and asked the question: how long will it be before this administration blows up? And then they would immediately say, "I'm running for cover."

Upon being asked why they felt as they did, they would start criticizing one after another of the key men in the Griffin administration. Each one spoke very kindly of the Governor, but each one was very critical of at least one or two of the men upon whom Griffin must depend.

This seems to be a state-wide sentiment and unless Griffin can build confidence in himself and his key men, he's in for rough sledding during the remainder of his term.

One of Griffin's key men told me that in his opinion the only chance Griffin had of making a success was a complete reorganization of his key personnel.

This I cannot say at this time. But I do say this: that unless Griffin can quickly build confidence in his ringleaders at the Capitol it will be necessary for him to have a complete reorganization in order to build any great degree of confidence among the people of the state.

Ugly rumors are flying. They are not just being talked by Griffin's enemies. They are being talked by men who were his close friends last summer.

Even some of his appointees and state officials are moving with fear and trembling. They are scared to death and they are scared as they say that the administration is going to blow up.

Now, I didn't support Griffin last time. I frankly didn't want to get mixed up with some of the group who are now causing this kind of sentiment in Georgia.

Personally, Marvin Griffin has always been very kind and friendly to me. I have nothing against him personally.

Since the Legislature has given him this additional money I wish for his administration the best of luck. The future of Georgia depends upon what he and his associates do and I am jealous of my state and I am anxious to see my state make progress and assume its rightful position among the more prosperous states of the nation.

I am anxious to see segregation kept in Georgia and I know that we must depend upon Marvin Griffin and his colleagues to keep segregation for the balance of his four-year term.

We are dependent upon him for our progress and our development during this time.

If his administration were to blow up it would set this state back from $4,500 to $4,999.

One and four-tenths per cent, 481,287, from $6,000 to $6,999.

One and five-tenths per cent, 497,845, from $7,000 to $9,999.

Five-tenths of one per cent, 182,681, from $10,000 to $14,999.

As for the South compared with other regions in the United States, the analysis pointed out that incomes of southern residents were lower than those in the rest of the country, because, it was explained, a larger proportion of the South's population lives in rural areas and on farms. Also, it was added, the South has a larger percentage of nonwhites whose earnings are relatively low.

"When the analysis is restricted to urban residents," it was stated, "the income difference between the South and other regions is relatively small for whites. Among urban whites, the median income of men in the South was only about 10 per cent below that received by the corresponding group in the West and Northeast, and the median for women was not significantly different from that in other parts of the country. Among urban nonwhites, however, the incomes of both men and women in the South were far below those received in other regions."

Government Must Be Kept Close To People—Talmadge

ALTANTA. — Deploring the development in this country of the philosophy that the federal government is best qualified to determine what is in the best interest of all citizens, former Gov. Herman Talmadge told a recent meeting of the Georgia County Officers Assn. in Atlanta that this trend has developed to such an extent it "no longer is possible to peddle peanuts on the streets without federal regulations."

Talmadge said the same school which would concentrate all states' powers in Washington also would hand all the powers of the cities, counties and local political subdivisions to state governments, and warned the county officials to be on guard and resist such usurpation. Said he:

"The closer we keep government to the people, the better that government is . . . under their watchful eyes and in their custody."

University Of Georgia Is In Dire Financial Straits

System Operating On 6 Per Cent Less Money Now Than In Years 1951-52

The University System of Georgia is in dire straits for new money with which to educate Georgia's young people, according to Harmon Caldwell, Chancellor of the University System.

In a statement recently issued pointing up the dire needs, Caldwell said:

"During the current fiscal year the State of Georgia is providing for the operation of its publicly supported colleges and universities approximately $11,500,000, or $519.00 for each full time student enrolled. The per student appropriation in Georgia is lower than in any other Southern State.

"The institutions of the University System are now operating on 6% less money than they received in 1951-52, although the number of students today is 5,000 greater than it was in 1951-52.

"In view of the foregoing facts and others that I could mention, several institutions of the University System—both large and small—are encountering grave difficulties in their efforts to comply with the accreditation standards of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Unless funds are provided for the employment of additional teachers, a number of our institutions cannot meet the standard regarding the minimum teacher-student ratio.

"We are losing the services of some of our most able teachers because of an inadequate salary scale. Although some increases have been made in teachers' salaries, our salary scale has never risen to the level that prevails in many of the stronger institutions of the South. During the past four years, when substantial salary increases were being made in other States, the relative position of our own University System salary scale has dropped considerably. A state university in an adjoining state is now paying salaries that are from 15 percent to 20 percent higher than salaries for comparable positions in our institutions and is requesting funds for further substantial increases for 1955-56.

"In considering the adequacy of the appropriation to the University System, it should be borne in mind that during the past four years the System and its institutions have been called upon to provide many new services for the people of the State. Among these new services are a program for the training of teachers for handicapped or exceptional children, programs of nursing education to provide nurses for the new hospitals throughout the State, new programs of teaching and research work at the doctoral levels, a program of continuing education for adult citizens, expanded teaching, research, and extension programs in animal husbandry, poulty husbandry, and forestry.

"The cost of providing scholarships for negroes taking graduate and professional work in institutions outside the University System has increased enormously and expenditures for this purpose will continue to climb.

"In the light of repeated requests from agriculture and industry for more comprehensive research and extension programs, the Board of Regents believes that the research programs of the agricultural experiment stations and of the engineering experiment station should be expanded and that greater efforts should be made to disseminate the results of this research work.

"We have made many statements regarding the miserable inadequacies of our physical plants and regarding the absolute necessity for erecting new buildings if we expect to maintain first rate colleges and universities in Georgia. We have also pointed out the wretched condition into which many of our buildings have fallen as a result of the lack of money for repairs and maintenance.

"It was with these faces in mind that on June 8, 1955 adopted the following resolution:

" 'The members of the Board of Regents congratulate the Study Commission on the excellence of its recent study and express to the Study Commission their thanks and appreciation for the painstaking and thorough examination which they made of the affairs and needs of the University System of Georgia. The increase in appropriation recommended by the Study Commission will enable the Board of Regents to make some progress in the management of the institutions of the University System. We are hopeful though that means will be found to enable the Board of Regents to have the entire amount of the appropriation requested in order that higher education in Georgia may rank with that in its sister states in the South.'

"It is the hope of the Board of Regents that the members of the General Assembly will give careful and sympathetic study to the various requests that the Board has made, for, unless these requests can be met, there will necesarily be a serious curtailment in the scope and quality of the services that the University System undertakes to provide for the people of Georgia. The Board solicits the aid of all citizens in its efforts to provide them with the services they want and to maintain the standards of these services at levels comparable to those existing in other leading states.

many years and it would take years to overcome the handicap.

So my interest and your interest and the opportunity of my child and your child is dependent upon the success of his administration.

I am convinced that it is going to take stronger and better men than he has at the head of at least two or three of his departments for him to have a successful administration. It isn't necessary for me to name them at this time because he knows who they are as well as I do.

He can't help but hear some of these ugly rumors. He can't help but hear some of the criticism.

The criticism is too loud and too persistent and my advice to the Governor is that from among his friends he pick the most capable and the most experienced and the most intelligent and the most honorable of his friends to do these jobs.

I am convinced that he must make some changes.

Griffin has a fine idea for a road program. It isn't well organized and it isn't properly functioning.

But with a little effort and a few changes it could be properly organized on an efficient and an intelligent basis.

But if he depends upon these county contracts to put over his rural roadbuilding he is going to wind up with the worst scandal that has ever been in Georgia. These county contracts which are immediately transferred to some contractor has been a shame all the time. Former administrations have gone along with them in bowing to the clamor from the county commissioners.

They are nothing but negotiated contracts in the name of the county and turned over to some favored contractor. They have resulted in more cheap and shoddy roads than anything else in Georgia.

Then, it has been true always that some handful of contractors have had too much favoritism from the Highway Department. As a result, we have been building cheap and shoddy roads in Georgia. Some times we have seen one end of the road wear out and blow away before the other end was completed.

Now, I live on the banks of the Savannah River and I am in the State of South Carolina practically every month in the year. These kind of things simply don't happen in South Carolina.

When South Carolina builds a road, they build a good road. When South Carolina builds a road, it stays put. They have the best road system in the nation today for a state of its size and its wealth.

Georgia can have the same kind of a road system if we put business in our Highway Department and if we build roads like we should.

Now, every administration I have known for a great many years has been guilty of the same thing in Georgia. We have built too many cheap political roads.

That's the reason the Highway Department fares better than the schools. There are hundreds of contractors, machinery dealers and materialism over the state who are trying to get their finger in the pie. There is no pie in spending money on schools. These people who are trying to make money out of the state haven't been able to use the schools for this purpose. Their only chance to make big money out of the state is building highways and getting concessions through county contracts and otherwise.

It is time for this kind of roadbuilding to stop and it is time for us to have a business-like administration handling the Highway Department.

There are other changes that ought to be made. I call attention to this condition in the Highway Department because it is not peculiar to the Griffin administration alone.

It has been true in Georgia since the Highway Department was created. The Highway Department ever since 1920 has been a political machine and some few people have been able to use it for their own personal advantage. Some have used it for political purposes and others have used it to make money for themselves.

Personally, I want to commend the Governor for the courageous stand that he took in trying to meet the problems of Georgia and I certainly hope that he will work out his administrative problems with the same degree of courage that he exercised in calling the extra session of the Legislature and asking them to levy sixty-five million dollars in taxes on the people of this state. If he will act with the same courage in his administrative problems that he has acted during this session of the Legislature, he will be able to overcome the criticism that he has suffered to date and he will be able to lead this state through four years of progressive administration and help build here a better place in which to live and a more prosperous and greater state than he found it when he took office.

Marvin Griffin has a great opportunity. It will take courage to take advantage of that opportunity and here's hoping that he brings to the administration of state affairs the same degree of courage that he brought to the running of the recent session of the Legislature.

Progress Parade Keeps Rolling On Throughout State

ATLANTA—There just doesn't appear to be any signs that the wheels of progress are slowing down in Georgia. On the contrary, Georgia's Parade of Progress keeps rolling along all over the state—in small towns, in big cities, in crossroad communities.

At least, that's the latest appraisal of this state's economic picture by Scott Candler, secretary of the Georgia Department of Commerce, the state's No. 1 agency for promoting a more profitable commonwelath.

In reporting continued progress in business and commerce channels, Candler pointed to Georgia communities of all sizes which recently have disclosed industrial expansions of one kind or another or other activities tending to improve the state's over-all economy through progressiveness at the local level.

Among those communities cited in the Commerce Department's latest Newsletters were:

Albany, Americus, Athens, Atlanta, Bainbridge, Barnesville, Brunswick, Buford, Calhoun, Carrollton, Cartersville, Chamblee, Clayton, Cleveland, Colquitt, Columbus, Conyers, Cordele, Cumming, Dahlonega, Dalton, Dawson, Dawsonville, Donalsonville, Douglas, Dublin.

Eatonton, Elberton, Fitzgerald, Fort Oglethorpe, Gainesville, Gray, Griffin, Hawkinsville, Jefferson, Kingsland, LaGrange, Louisville, Manchester, Macon, Milledgeville, Millen, Monroe, Monticello, Moultrie, Patterson, Pelham.

Roberta, Rochelle, Rome, Rossville, Sandersville, Savannah, Shannon, Swainsboro, Thomaston, Thomasville, Thomson, Toccoa, Trion, Tybee, Valdosta, Vienna, Wadley, Waycross, Waynesboro, Whitehall, Winder and Wrens.

Teen-Age Traffic Safety Conference Wants Delegates

ATLANTA — Plans are moving right along for the third annual Governor's Teen-Age Traffic Safety Conference, to be held August 7-13 at Camp Safety Patrol on Lake Blackshear, near Cordele.

But the Georgia Citizens Council sponsors of the event in co-operation with the Georgia Teen-Age Traffic Safety Assn., would like to hear from more high school principals regarding names of the teen-age delegates. (Delegates are selected from seniors and juniors in high schools all over Georgia.)

"We want to hear from more school principals," Council Director John W. Maloof said. "At this stage we need to have the names of high school boys and girls who are planning to attend, as well as the names of their alternates."

The sponsors are shooting for a registration goal of 300 delegates, with each of Georgia's counties being represented by one or more of its outstanding students. Room and board for each delegate is only $12.50 for the entire week of the conference. The only other expense is the cost of round-trip transportation.

"This is not a large expense," Maloff said. "It is usually borne by some adult civic or service organization in the delegate's home town. Where that is not possible, we would like to know about it and in the case of a deserving youngster who wants to attend the conference we try to make financial arrangements from our office.

"The important thing is to get interested teen-agers to the conference. By having delegates from every county, these young people not only get acquainted with each other but they get an insight into the various traffic problems that exist in diffrent parts of the state. The conference is manned by teen-agers. They preside at all sessions, receiving a minimum of adult guidance. There's plenty of recreation for them, too. It's educational and it's fun for them."

Hammer, Ex-Head Red-Front SCHW On Staff Ford Foundation, SRC Says

Ford Foundation Money Used In Treasonable Activities Known Communists, Traitors Are Praised, Awarded Funds

15 Million Dollars Given Fund For The Republic, Doled Out To Enemies Of U. S.

The Ford Foundation money is being used in near treasonable activities.

The Fund for the Republic, a fifteen million-dollar fund created by the Ford Foundation, has been awarding known communists and traitors with praise and checks out of tax-exempt money.

Mary Knowles is librarian at Plymouth Meeting, Pennsylvania.

She is a known communist and when she appeared before the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee she refused to answer the question as to whether she was a communist because the answer would tend to make a criminal out of her.

The library's trustees refused to fire her and then Robert Hutchins, the head of the Fund for the Republic, sent a representative to make a speech praising Mary Knowles and gave the library a check for five thousand dollars to reward them for defending and upholding a known communist.

These facts were very glowingly portrayed in a speech recently made in the House of Representatives by Congressman B. Carroll Reece of Tennessee.

In this speech, Congressman Reece said:

"On May 8, 1953, Mr. Herbert Philbrick, of White Plains, New York, appeared before the Internal Security Committee of the Senate and swore that Mary Knowles was a member of the Communist Party, 'in fact a member of my own progroup underground cell.'

"Mr. Philbrick further identified Mary Knowles as Harrison Harley's secretary. Harrison Harley was the director of the Communist Samuel Adams School for Social Studies in Boston, which was disbanded and went underground for security reasons in 1948. Mr. Philbrick testified that the Samuel Adams School was run completely and controlled entirely by the Communist Party as its biggest educational project.

"The school's own literature, introduced into evidence identified Mary Knowles as secretary, her authority exceeded only by the director and associate director.

"Mr. Philbrick was an undercover agent for the FBI in the Communist Party for over 9 years in the Boston area and his testimony helped convict the 11 first-string Communist Party leaders in New York Federal court of violation of the Smith Act. Mr. Philbrick was subsequently hired by the New York Herald Tribune and I do not know of any attacks on his integrity or testimony.

"On May 21, 1953, Mary Knowles of Norwood, Mass., appeared before the same Senate committee, with counsel, and when asked if she was a member of the

By ROY V. HARRIS

I don't like what I think I see.

I have thought for some time that I saw a conspiracy in Washington between the leaders in the Democratic Party and the leaders in the Republican Party and between the outstanding members from the South and the outstanding members from elsewhere, regardless of party lines, to remove the question of the integration of the races from the forum of the Congress across the street to the so-called "Temple of Justice" — the Supreme Court building.

You will remember that we were continually fighting about the so-called "civil rights" legislation in Congress. You will recall that there was always an anti-poll tax, an FEPC bill or some kind of an anti-South bill that we were fighting. A majority of the Congress was committed to vote for all of these fool bills and only by a filibuster in the Senate by Southern Senators were we able to head them off.

There were campaigns being run to do away with the right to filibuster so that they could be passed.

Then all at once everything went quiet on Capitol Hill. You heard nothing from either Democratic or Republican leaders or from Northern or Southern leaders about this so-called "legislation."

On this question it was so quiet on Capitol Hill until you could hear a pin drop at any time and all through the Houses of Congress there was not even a mouse stirring on this question.

Then, when Capitol Hill became quiet, the whole effort was moved across the way to the Supreme Court building.

The quiet that existed among even our Southern leaders made me sit up and take notice at the time. I thought something had happened. I didn't know what.

Southern leaders in both the House and the Senate began to tell me that the thing was inevitable. They began to tell me that it was only a question of time until it was coming. This was strange language coming from Southerners and I couldn't understand it.

It looked then as if there had been a quiet agreement to move the fighting ground across the street. It looked to me then as if leaders of all sections and of all parties breathed a sigh of relief and were delighted to see the battleground shifted even though there had been no definite agreement.

It could be that the leaders on the other side saw an opportunity to shift the scene of conflict, knowing that Southern leaders would breathe a sigh of relief and they would go quiet and say nothing further.

Regardless of whether the conspiracy was an open and an avowed conspiracy, regardless of whether it was a conspiracy evidenced by undercover agreement or whether it was a conspiracy that was never put into words, but quietly acquiesced in, the conspiracy was certainly there.

When the forum of the fight was moved to the Supreme Court building, our Southern leaders went quiet and said nothing. That is true of the Southern representatives in Congress who were in a position of leadership. There were a few Senators and Congressman who did not occupy such favored positions who spoke out.

There were only two from Georgia. They were Congressman Jim Davis and Congressman "Tick" Forrester. There were a few other stragglers from the Southern States. These few stragglers were like a voice crying in the wilderness and not even did the Southern leadership give heed to their crying voices.

During the consideration of the segregation cases in the Supreme

Two former high officials of the Communist-front Southern Conference for Human Welfare hold key positions in the Southern Regional Council which is spending a $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation to destroy segregation in the South.

PHILIP HAMMER, former president of the Communist-front SCHW in Washington, D. C., has been listed by the Southern Regional Council as being on the central staff of the Ford Foundation project personnel. He is also Executive Officer of the Committee of the South, a vague sort of organization which has no definite announced program and whose source of funds cannot be determined.

DR. RUFUS CLEMENT, President of Atlanta University and an organizer of The Southern Regional Council, was listed by the House Committee on Un-American Activities in its report branding SCHW a Communist-front, as being a member of the top level Executive Board of that organization.

Look Southward Angel

An undated leaflet of the SCHW titled "Look Southward Angel" listed Hammer as president of SCHW. This organization was cited as a Communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

No one could have held such a high office in Washington SCHW organization unless he could be fully trusted to carry out instructions.

It was also learned by the COURIER that records subpoenaed by the House Committee on Un-American Activities from the Washington Bookshop in 1941 showed that Philip G. Hammer was a member of the same. This organization was cited by Attorney General Francis Biddle, the House Committee on Un-American Activities and later by Attorney General Tom Clark, as a Communist front.

Dodged World War II

This same Hammer was born in Philadelphia, Pa. He studied under Frank Graham at the University of North Carolina and at Harvard. Upon coming to Washington, he was employed in the office of Bob LaFollette, liberal Senator from Wisconsin. From there he went with the Farm Security Administration in the Department of Agriculture under Henry Wallace. He later was included in the mass transfer of "liberals" to the State Department for work in the Foreign Economic Administration and the United Nation's Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

In spite of the fact that Hammer held responsible government positions all dur-

'It Cannot Be Repeated Too Many Times'

(From The Richmond News-Leader)

Roy Wilkins' speech in Charlottesville on Friday was pretty much what one would expect from the executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Anyone who resists compulsory integration is, in his view, making war upon the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. Mississippi is a terrible place, and Viriginia, "she of the proud tradition and the aristocratic manner, is pronouncing in rounded phrases what Mississippi says in whoops and hollers." Those who oppose the NAACP are "shameful as well as shameless," and the NAACP "will win because we are right."

As a peptalk to the State NAACP convention, the speech probably went off just fine, but the talk actually was addressed, of course, to the larger public. And there was this paragraph in it worth quoting:

"You know, my friends, all through this debate and procedure, white people have been depending upon what they think they know about what Negroes think. It cannot be repeated too many times that Negroes do not tell white people what they think. Even the Uncle Toms do not tell whites the truth. We tell them only what is necessary to keep the peace and get along in the little worlds that we both inhabit."

It seems to us that in this passage, the NAACP's executive secretary spoke volumes of the gulf that divides. Here he is complacently boasting of a racial characteristic—of duplicity, concealment, evasion, secretiveness. He says that it cannot be repeated too many times that Negroes do not tell whites the truth. As a result, white people do not know what Negroes really think.

That is a remarkable approach toward justifying the rightness and soundness of mixed public schools. "We are the sort of people who will not tell you the truth," the NAACP spokesman is saying, "but we demand that you admit us to the intimate relationship of your elementary and high school classrooms. We may tell you we are concerned only with education, but actually you will not know what we are thinking of."

Wilkins is mistaken (as he is mistaken in a good many things) if he imagines that white persons, especially in the South, are not prefectly aware of this quality of concealment, this less-than-the-truthness he would have everyone understand. The late W. A. Percy, certainly no enemy of the Southern Negro, once termed it a condition like a plate of glass—something you could not see, but could feel. It is a part of the private world of the Negro race, a part of the mores and customs that have preserved in the South two separate societies, together but apart, and apart but together.

"It cannot be repeated too many times that Negroes do not tell white people what they think . . . " True, true. And sometimes we wonder if they tell the NAACP exactly what they are thinking, too.

LAND OF ONE RACE

(From the Washington Afro-American Newspaper, June 7, 1955)

"In Brazil, you will find blue eyes and black skin, flat skulls with triangular faces, hair plaited in pigtails, white babies at the breast of colored mothers, colored babies at the breast of white mothers and colors running from ebony to eggshell via copper, olive, caramel and banana.

A mixture of this sort has made any attempt at racial segregation out of the question in Brazil—because no one could possibly tell where white begins and black ends.

Brazil has long since passed the rest of the world in its race relations. The so-called race problem simply doesn't exist in Brazil."

ing World War II, even though he was of military service age, he terminated his employment abruptly in late 1945. He is reported to have come to Atlanta in 1946 in an effort to get a magazine started which he hoped to edit, but could not make financial arrangements and left, only to return in 1947 as a business analyst for the Atlanta firm of Joseph K. Heyman.

"Slashed" Fulton County

He resigned from this position in March 1950 to become Director of the Metropolitan Planning Commission and as such was author of the "Plan of Improvement" legislation which took most of the effective governmental powers away from Fulton County and vested them in the Mayor of Atlanta who has twice been elected to office not by a vote of white people but by the bloc vote.

Our investigation shows that Mr. Hammer, in addition to his Communist-front affiliations, was named as a member of the National Executive Council of United World Federalists in early 1949. This is an organization which proposes the surrender of our national sovereignty to a super world government which would have police powers and could arrest individual citizens of member nations.

Alger Hiss, the convicted Communist traitor, who is now serving a five-year sentence in the Federal penitentiary for perjury, made several speeches in furtherance of the United World Federalists organization, according to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Ford Foundation Pet

During the summer of 1953, Hammer took a three months' leave from his job as Director of the Committee of the South to direct an intensive study for the Ford Foundation Education Fund. Main purpose of the study was to convince the Supreme Court that a ruling by it outlawing segregation could be implemented and enforced. This work was known as the "Ashmore Project" under which school segregation in the Southern states was studied with a view towards devising ways and means to eliminate it.

The record shows that Hammer has been extremely critical of efforts on the part of the Talmadge administration to preserve segregation in the public schools of Georgia. He has said any so-called "plans" to circumvent the court ruling "won't last as long as the White Primaries."

He has urged that whites and negroes meet together and make immediate plans for de-segregation of public schools in the South.

Guest of "Hungry Club"

According to news items which appeared in the ATLANTA DAILY WORLD, a negro newspaper published in that city, Hammer has been a frequent guest at the "Hungry Club", a negro luncheon group before which he has made political addresses from time to time, and at the same time dined with its members in an atmosphere of mixed frivolity at the Butler Street YMCA.

A recent picture appeared in the DAILY WORLD showing Mr. Hammer at a panel meeting at the Atlanta University, where he reviewed the report of the Ashmore Project relative to ending segregation in the schools in the South. The study was made by Dr. Harry S. Ashmore, Hammer and others for the purpose of "easing the transition from separate white and negro schools to mixed schools."

The Courier last year ran a series of articles exposing the communist-front Southern Regional Council which is financed by the Ford Foundation.

We are now re-producing these articles and this is the fifth of the series and appeared under date of August 9, 1954.

Hammer's wife, Jane, is First Vice President of the Georgia League of Women Voters and is Editor of "Georgia Voter" a bi-monthly publication of the organization, in which its policy is enunciated. The announcement bulletin of Spelman College for 1952-53 lists Mrs. Hammer as a teacher of Philosophy there. Both the Hammers have been very active in directing the fight against the county unit system in Georgia.

Dr. Rufus E. Clement

The National Advisory Board of United World Federalists lists besides Hammer such names as Dr. Rufus E. Clement, President of Atlanta University and the first negro ever to be elected to the Atlanta City Board of Education. Records of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and documentary evidence possessed by it show that he has been active in at least 12 Communist-front groups and movements.

The public records, files and publications of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities contain the following citation concerning Dr. Rufus E. Clement, who was organizer and is now a member of the Board of Directors of SRC:

"The American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom issued a petition which was signed by Rufus E. Clement as shown on a mimeographed sheet attached to a letterhead of that organization, dated January 17, 1940.

"He was a sponsor of the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born as reported in the 'Daily Worker' of October 28, 1940 (page 3); Program, Fifth National Conference, Atlantic City, New Jersey, March 29-30, 1941; Leaflet, 'Sixth National Conference', Cleveland, Ohio, May 9 and 10, 1942 (page 4); an undated letterhead summarizing the 1946 work of the organization; and a Program and Call for Conference, Cleveland, Ohio, October 25 and 26, 1947.

"It is noted on a bulletin, Spot News, (page 1) that Rufus E. Clement was one of the sponsors of the American Committee to Save Rufugees, which was cited as a Communist front by the Special Committee (Report, March 29, 1944, pages 49, 112, 129, 138, and 180).

Letter to President

"Rufus E. Clement was 'among the 363 outstanding Americans who signed the Open Letter to the President of the United States sponsored originally by the American Council on Soviet Relations, urging a declaration of war on the Finnish government in the interests of speedy victory by the United Nations over Nazi Germany and its Fascist allies' as shown in an official folder of that organization.

"The Civil Rights Congress was the subject of a report by the Committee on Un-American Activities, dated September 2, 1947, which listed Dr. Rufus E. Clement, President, Atlanta University, as one of the sponsors of the group.

"The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties released a statement hailing War Department order on Commissions for Communists. It was reported that Dr. Rufus E. Clement, President, Atlanta University, was one of those who signed the statement.

Policy In China

"Dr. Rufus E. Clement, President, Atlanta University, was named as a sponsor of the National Conference on American Policy in China and the Far East (a conference called by the Committee for a Democratic Far Eastern Policy). (See Conference Call, January 23-25, 1948, New York City).

"An article which appeared in the 'Daily Worker' of February 21, 1949 (p. 2) stated that Dr. Rufus Clement was one of the sponsors of the Scientific and Cultural Conference for World Peace. The Conference 'Call' and Program (p. 12) also disclosed this information.

"The Southern Conference for Human Welfare was made the subject of a report by the Committee on Un-American Activities, June 16, 1947, in which Rufus E. Clement was listed as a member of the Executive Board, a Consultant, and a Member at Large on an official report of the organization.

SYNC Advisory Board

"Dr. Rufus E. Clement was a member of the Advisory Board of the Southern Negro Youth Congress as shown on a page from a leaflet published by the organization; a letterhead, dated June 12, 1947; and another dated August 11, 1947.

"One Rufus E. Clement was an initiating sponsor of the Independent Citizens' Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions as shown in the 'Daily Worker' of December 24, 1944 (page 14) and a letterhead dated November 26, 1946, of that group.

"See pages 104 and 108 in the Committee's Report on the Communist 'Peace' Offensive for further references to Rufus E. Clement; also page 12 of the same report for reference to Rufus E. Clement."

Progress Parade Marching Onward Through Georgia

ATLANTA, — Onward, ever onward, Georgia's Progress Parade keeps moving ahead in Georgia—through small towns, big cities and medium-size communities.

At least, that's what reports from all over the state indicate. They are reports received by the Georgia Department of Commerce, whose job it is to keep a finger on the state's economic pulse. And the over-all picture continues to look bright, according to Commerce Secretary Scott Candler.

To prove his point, Candler cites Georgia communities of all sizes which recently have announced industrial expansions of one kind or another or other activities tending to improve Georgia's economy through progressiveness at the local level.

Among the latest communities cited for these reasons by the Commerce Department's Newsletter were:

Adairsville, Albany, Americus, Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Austell, Bainbridge, Blairsville, Brunswick, Buena Vista, Byron, Cairo, Calhoun, Camilla, Carrollton, Cartersville, Cedartown, Chatsworth, Cleveland, Columbus, Commerce, Cordele, Covington.

Dacula, Dahlonega, Dalton, Dawson, East Point, Gainesville, Hartwell, Hazlehurst, Helen, Jackson, Jesup, Lithonia, Louisville, Lula, Macon, Manchester, Marietta, Milledgeville, Millen, Moultrie.

Newnan, Richland, Ringgold, Rome, Savannah, Stone Mountain, Toccoa, Valdosta, Waycross, West Point, Woodbury, Wrens.

Melton Insists Colleges In Ga. Stay Segregated

ATLANTA,—Quimby Melton, Jr., who, among other things, is editor of the Griffin Daily News, president of the Georgia Press Assn., and a member of the University System's Board of Regents and the State Democratic Executive Committee, was a featured speaker at the recent United Daughters of the Confederacy convention held in Albany.

And, according to the reports, what he said made good sense on several scores. For example, on the question of segregation in the institutions of higher learning, he declared:

"I intend to work for the betterment of all the colleges in Georgia, colored as well as white. But I shall insist that they remain separate. Segregation has proven the wisest course for Georgia and as far as I am concerned we will continue to operate separate white and negro colleges. That is all there is to it as far as I'm concerned."

Since becoming head of the GPA last summer, Melton says he has traveled more than 5,000 miles in every part of the state, "and I have found every mile of it marked with progress—new schools, new homes, new hospitals and health centers, new businesses and industries and better farming . . . Now we rapidly are regaining our place in the sun . . . Georgia is the greatest state in the nation; its past is illustrious, its present progressive and its future unlimited."

Ga. Commerce Dept. Issues Directory Of Manufacturers

ATLANTA, — "It's the most complete guide of its kind ever issued in Georgia," is the way Scott Candler, secretary of the Georgia Department of Commerce, describes the 1955 directory of Georgia Manufacturers, compiled and just released by his department. Writing the foreword, he said:

"Georgia's change from an agricultural domain to leadership in the Modern Industrial South has been rapid. To fulfill demands for listings of our huge teeming factories and bustling smaller shops, together with their employment and their myriad products, the Georgia Department of Commerce has prepared this directory.

"To obtain the information contained in this book, representatives of the Department of Commerce visited every one of the state's 159 counties and made hundreds of calls upon Chambers of Commerce, municipal officials, industrialists, bankers and newspapers."

The 132-page directory is in two parts. The first part lists the counties in alphabetical order, listing the firms by name, the city, the kind of products and the approximate number of employees. The second part, also in alphabetical order, groups the products in general classification and then lists the firm name, the city, the specific product and the approximate number of employees.

Business leaders who are interested in obtaining a copy of the new directory may write Scott Candler, Secretary, Georgia Department of Commerce, 100 State Capitol, Atlanta 3, Ga.

Court, Southerners on the Court joined the other members in a unanimous decision overthrowing all the decisions of all the courts of the land for more than one hundred years and substituted the writings of a socialist Swedish psychologist in place of the law of the land.

Now, the members of the Supreme Court would not have been bold enough to overrule and overthrow all of the law of this land as declared by the Supreme Court of the United States, all of the Federal courts and all of the state courts unless they had been led to believe that Southern leadership would accept the decision and that Southern leadership would welcome and embrace the decision.

Even the Supreme Court of the United States, as now constituted, would not have been crazy enough to hand down that decision had they not believed that such a conspiracy existed in the Congress.

And when they handed down the decision, what happened?

Not a single Southern Congressman or Senator in the top echelon of leadership opened his mouth. Not a single one had a word to say.

The one Senator who spoke out, who came nearer to occupying a position of leadership in the Congress, was Senator Russell and his statement was very mild at the time. He stood as a lone voice. Senator Eastland of Mississippi has spoken in no uncertain terms. He has paid his full disrespects to the Court and the members thereof. He has tried to expose the conspiracy which existed to overthrow the law of the land. He has exposed the nature of the authority which the Supreme Court relied upon.

But Senator Eastland is not among the top echelon of leadership and neither is Senator Russell because of his views.

If Senator Russell were to forget his views on the question of mixing and mingling the white and Negro races, he would be readily accepted among the top echelon of leadership.

Not a single Southern leader in the top echelon joined the movement to set aside the Supreme Court decision or to take away from the Supreme Court authority to pass on questions involving our state schools. Such a bill was introduced in Congress and got no support from the top echelon of Southern leadership.

When Eisenhower appointed Judge John Marshall Harlan of New York to the Supreme Court bench and it was known that his grandfather started the nonsense of throwing away all of our law and forcing the mixing of the races by his dissenting vote in the otherwise unanimous pro-segregation decision in the case of Plessy versus Ferguson, every Southern Senator in the top echelon of leadership either voted for the confirmation of his appointment or did not vote at all.

Now, new evidence of this conspiracy is coming to light.

The top Democratic leadership of the Nation favored Adlai Stevenson in 1952 as the Democratic candidate for President. They still favor him.

It is true that they are afraid of his ability to win against first-class opposition. Nevertheless, they favor him because he turned his campaign over to the Americans for Democratic Action and the CIO in 1952. He ran on a straight-out anti-South ticket favoring the integration and the mixing of the races.

Now Stevenson's agents and representatives have been in Georgia and all of the other Southern states telling our leaders that since the Supreme Court ruled and took over the question of mixing the races that neither the President nor the Congress will have anything to do with it and that it will not be necessary at the next convention to even mention the question of integration in the platform.

Therefore, they argue that since this be the case and that the Courts have taken over the question of integration of the races and eliminated it from the field of politics, that we should go along and support Adlai Stevenson for President.

A lot of our Southern leaders are falling into this rotten trap. They can't see through the whole picture. They are all too concerned with getting a little honor or a little power for themselves.

Now, this conspiracy is not confined to the Democratic Party. The Republicans are likewise a part of it.

Eisenhower, in 1952, led a lot of Southern leaders to believe that he was with us on this question of mixing up the races. They knew that when he was Commander-in-Chief of the allied armies in Europe that he opposed integration of the races.

As soon as he was elected, he turned on these Southern leaders with a fury and went all out to mix up the races.

By executive order, he integrated the races in the Armed Forces. By executive order, he forced soldiers living on military posts to send their children to mixed schools while he, at the same time, saw to it that his own grandchildren attended private schools and didn't have to mix with the Negroes.

Now, the Republican leadership is telling Southern people that the question of integration has already been settled and they can afford to go along and support the Republican ticket.

What the Republicans and the Democrats are both proposing to the South is that we close our mouths, that we go deathly quiet, that we sit still and do nothing and there won't be any issue raised in the platform.

What both sides propose is what the Negro proposed to the catfish. The Negro told the catfish: "Be still, little catfish, I ain't gwine do nothing to you but skin you and gut you."

That's what they propose to do to the people of the South today and a lot of our Senators and Congressmen and our Governors and others in positions of leadership are willingly walking into this trap and they are going to cause us to be like the Negro's little catfish.

Northerners Told By Jesuit Editor To Eliminate Own Racial Prejudices

NEW YORK, N. Y., OCT. 29 — Northerners were warned yesterday to eliminate their own race prejudice before becoming critical of segregation in the Southern states.

The straight-from-the-shoulder advice was given by the Rev. John LaFarge, associate editor of the Roman Catholic magazine, AMERICA, in an address by him to the Interracial Council of Fordham University.

(The magazine AMERICA, is one of the outstanding intellectual publications in the United States. It is edited by the order of the Society of Jesus, a religious order in the Roman Catholic Church, which was founded by Ignatius Loyalo in 1534. Members of that order are known as Jesuits and are the intellectuals of the church.)

Father LaFarge cited a Catholic organization as an example of prejudice in the North. "There are hardly any councils of the Knights of Columbus," he said, "which admit Negroes."

One of the first councils of the Knights of Columbus to admit Negroes, he said, is the one in San Antonio, Texas.

The Jesuit editor pointed out that merely eliminating segregation would not be sufficient. "We must work out a sound policy of co-existence of the races," he declared.

The Reverend Father said the Roman Catholic hierarchy and the vast majority of Catholic clergy are not prejudiced.

(The Vatican called on all Roman Catholic Americans, recently, to join in the fight against "inhuman racial prejudice." The end of racial discrimination has been ordered in the Archdiocese of New Orleans by Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel: it is applicable to all Catholic churches and will apply to Catholic schools next year.)

The Letter Column

October 22, 1955

The Augusta Courier
Augusta, Georgia

Just how far does the Ford and other like-minded TAX-FREE Foundation-Funds dare to go in their attempt to rebuild America into their own image?

Their recent backing up, to the tune of $1,400,000.00,—a group of UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO professors to secretly wire-tap and record the supposedly SECRET DELIBERATIONS of JURORS in a Wichita jury room, and the foreknowledge and approval of the Federal District Judge,—just about takes the cake! And did you read the most strange-sounding names of these meddlesome-mattie University of Chicago professors who thought, and still think, it is a public service to EAVESDROP JURIES, — record their remarks to each other on a planted RECORDER in Wichita, and then play it back to an audience in DENVER?

While the magazines who broke the story and thereby queered the plans of the panty-waist wiretappers didn't dwell on it overmuch, — we noted that it was the original plan to wire-tap FIVE HUNDRED (500) jury deliberations. WHO DOUBTS FOR A MOMENT THAT SOUTHERN STATES JURIES MOSTLY, WERE TO BE SPIED UPON, to appease and to amuse the MONKEY-MEN and MONKEY-WOMEN who hate everything and everyone in what they term the "degraded and ignorant South"?

The slick magazines have so long insulted the WHITE South that fewer Southerners are subscribing to them, or picking them up at drugstores and newsstands; so the news of this jury-spying episode, and who gleefully FINANCED IT will be slow getting around. The Atlanta Newspapers are always reluctant to let us know about devilment the folks in the cold country carry on against us, —such as the fact that the Dad of the boy who caused the Mississippi trouble was NOT the "fallen WAR HERO" which LIFE magazine, painted him; "dying for the principle that all are equal", — BUT, died at the end of a hempen rope, applied by the U. S. ARMY, in Italy, for thinking he could MURDER ONE ITALIAN WHITE WOMAN AND RAPE TWO OTHER ITALIAN WHITE WOMEN and go free. It wasn't an ATLANTA paper, nor a Yankee paper that dug the facts out of Washington; but, the Jackson (MISSISSIPPI) Daily News. Ralph McGill and his Mix-Races Societies are far too busy to give us the News.

Macon Lawyer Defends Mississippi Letter To Paper

Anti-Southern Policy Of Many Newspapers In South Scored By Prominent Georgian

Charles J. Bloch, a member of the Board of Regents and a prominent lawyer of Macon, in a letter to The Macon Telegraph, blisters the newspapers and the slick press for condemning the people of Mississippi on account of the killing of Emmett Till.

In this letter he clearly pictures the different way in which the newspapers played up the Till case and the way they played the gruesome gang murders that are taking place in New York and Chicago.

In the Till case, the newspapers condemned the people of the whole State of Mississippi. They did not condemn the people of Illinois and the people of New York for more gruesome crimes committed there.

Bloch's letter follows:

October 21, 1955

Editor
The Macon Telegraph
Macon, Georgia
Dear Sir:

About forty years ago (before you were born, I guess), a celebrated criminal case was tried in the courts of Georgia. The conduct of the trial did not suit the Northern Press. The Editor of the Telegraph at that time was not a Southerner by birth. He was a Canadian—George Long. But he could dip his pen in vitroil, and write in letters of fire when he thought his adopted State was being unfairly treated. The result was an editorial, especially directed to the State of Massachusetts, the title of which was: "To H— with Massachusetts." I hope you can find it in the files of your paper.

We need one like George Long today —one who isn't seeking Pulitzer prizes, or the accolade of the Northern Press.

What I am particularly referring to are the tirades of the slick paper magazines and the press against the State of Mississppi, on account of the Emmett Till case, and most particularly an editorial which appeared in Life Magazine a week or so ago entitled, "Emmett Till will be avenged." And the New York Times of October 18, 1955 (pages 1 and 33) referred to the Vatican newspaper as follows: "The newspaper noted that racial prejudice in the United States had 'unfortunately caused many crimes.' It cited specifically the 'wolf whistle' trial at Sumner, Mississippi, deploring that 'a crime against an adolescent victim remained unpunished.'"

No right thinking person condones the slaying of any human being, white or colored, adult or adolescent — but what has the State of Mississippi done wrong? What is it that the State or her people should do they have not done? A colored boy was alleged to have been brutally murdered. Promptly the charge was investigated. His alleged murderers were arrested, and indicted. A special prosecutor was appointed. They were tried according to law—the trial was presided over by a jurist of learning and dignity. The trial was orderly. The prosecution was vigorous. The defense equally so. The defendants were acquitted. Still the Northern press — and now the Vatican press— continues to harp on the affair. What is it that they want? Do they want the people of Mississippi to take the law into their own hands, and punish the alleged offenders? That would be "lynch law." Or can it be that they are harping on Mississippi in order to divert the eyes of the world from barbarities in their own midst.

Your newspaper of this morning (October 21) contains another newstory of the "heartless slaying of three young boys" in Chicago last Thursday, and tells of the theory that "the boys fell prey to a gang of teenage toughs." If that be true, these would be three others in the long list of those horrible crimes committed in Chicago which are there called "gang-murders." If they had been committed in Georgia or Mississippi, they would be "lynchings."

And your same newspaper contains a United Press story under a New York date line captioned with the headline, "Hoodlums Mutilate Body Held in Funeral Home." The gruesome details commence with this paragraph: "Teen-age Brooklyn hoodlums broke into a funeral home after three of their fellow gang members had been charged with murder, dumped the 15-year-old victim from the casket and 'cut the body to ribbons' with knives, it was revealed today."

Can a more horrible, more grisly crime be imagined? It didn't happen yesterday. It happened "last year" but not one word had the New York press said about it, until Judge Samuel Leibowitz trying the case "disclosed the story of teen-age hatred that did not stop with death . . ."

If such a thing had happened in the South, how we would have been portrayed through the length and breadth of the land as uncivilized barbarians.

Why is the State of Mississippi condemned on account of the Till case, and no word of condemnation uttered against the State of Illinois or the State of New York for crimes even more horrible?

I wonder if it is possible that politics are involved—that the Northern press is not nearly so concerned about the Till child as it is the colored vote?

But, above all, what is demonstrated is that if ever a group of people needed a spokesman and a leader, that group is the white people of the South.

You may publish this letter if you want to, but on one condition, that you publish all of it—every single word.

Sincerely,
Charles J. Bloch

We can only get a skinning and a gutting out of it.

Since 1952 we have said there was no difference between the Democratic and the Republican Parties so far as this issue is concerned. Eisenhower and his group were under the control of Tom Dewey and his crowd and they have been just as bad as Adlai Stevenson would have been had he been elected President.

There is one difference, however, between the Republican and the Democratic Party.

The Republicans didn't owe the South anything. We have voted Democratic most of the time and Georgia has never gone Republican.

But the Democrats did owe the South something. The South kept the Democratic Party alive for years and when the Democratic Party did stay with the South, we would give them a solid vote clear across the area every time. The Democrats were supposed to be our friends. Yet, they stabbed us in the back.

Now, when we look forward to 1956 we are in a devil of a fix. On the Democratic side, it looks as if we must choose between Stevenson, Harriman and Kefauver.

Harry Truman is a sweet-smelling geranium compared to this mess of rotten wildcats. Stevenson, Harriman and Kefauver all three think the way to be elected is to be for mixing the races and being sweet on the communists and the wildcat labor unions. It is difficult to tell which is the worst. If there is one entitled to the championship, it is Kefauver because he is wilder than Stevenson and Harriman. Kefauver is for anything that is anti-Southern although he represents a Southern state. His voting record is more nearly in line with the communist line than New York's, Marcantonio. His voting record and the position of the communist Daily Worker are almost identical.

Stevenson isn't much better and Harriman is even worse.

Harriman and Stevenson were both born with a silver spoon in their mouths and they seem to have acquired a distaste for the very system of government and economy which put the silver spoon in their mouths.

They are now vying with one another to see which one can be more anti-South and which one can love the socialists and the communists more.

If the people of the South go to the convention and vote for either Stevenson, Kefauver or Harriman, they will automatically confess to be the biggest dern fools that ever lived.

The Republicans won't have anything better to offer. It will either be Nixon or Warren or some other wildcat like that and at the bottom of the list, I would put Warren.

Any man as Chief Justice of the United States who will so stultify his conscience and so betray his people as to throw out the window all the law of the land and follow a Swedish socialist in re-making the law, deserves no consideration whatsoever.

As a matter of fact, I think he ought to be impeached as Chief Justice.

So, I don't like what I think I see about the candidates for President.

The above prognostications are based on the assumption that Eisenhower won't run. Even if he does run and even if he is elected, he won't be any better for the South than even Kefauver, Harriman or Stevenson.

Now, I am getting to the point.

We are not going to get anywhere in the South until our leaders are willing to stand up and let the world know that we are willing to fight.

We are in the position of the Negro's catfish today because we haven't had the type of leadership in the South with the intelligence and the courage to stand up and fight. They have laid down and took it like the little catfish and now the Supreme Court and the leaders in the Republican Party and the Democratic Party are of the opinion that the people of the South haven't the courage to fight.

Whether we should fight through the machinery of the Democratic Party or whether we should start out on our own, nobody is smart enough to say right now.

But, I am in favor of starting a fight and starting it now. Let's start it in the Democratic Party and if we don't get some relief there, let's start it somewhere else.

As things stand now, I repeat my former statement: I am a mighty poor Democrat and no Republican at all.

Communist Party now, she dived behind the fifth amendment and refused to answer the question—Subversive Influence in the Educational Process, Hearings Senate Committee on Internal Security, parts 9 and 10, pages 944-1002.

"The Samuel Adams School of Boston is on the Attorney General's list as subversive and Communist.

"Mrs. Mary Knowles, following her plea of the fifth amendment before the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, subsequently submitted her resignation as branch librarian to the trustees of the Norwood, Mass., library, and it was accepted.

"Mrs. Knowles had been employed by the Norwood library for some time while she was also serving as secretary of the Communist Samuel Adams School.

"Then Mrs. Mary Knowles took a similar position with the library of the Plymouth Monthly Meeting of Friends, a Quaker group at Plymouth Meeting, a village near Philadelphia.

"When Mrs. Mary Knowles went to the town of Plymouth meeting, veterans' organizations and others asked her to take a loyalty oath. She refused. Thereafter, the Plymouth Township School Board, the governing authorities of Plymouth and Whitemarsh Townships, and the Conshohocken Community Chest withdrew financial support of the library. This amounted to about $1,500 annually.

"Now, it is clearly shown that Mrs. Mary Knowles has had no civil rights violated in any manner. She, to the contrary, appears to have utilized her rights to the fullest, including refusal to take a loyalty oath, and refuge behind the fifth amendment.

"Some of the Quakers, aroused at the adverse publicity the community was receiving, and wanting no truck with a fifth-amendment Communist, got up a petition to the meeting to have Mary Knowles discharged. This got voted down in a maneuver, though it appears a majority favored it, whereupon Dr. Hutchins, of the Ford Fund for tht Republic, dashes Mrs. Eleanor B. Stevenson, one of his directors, and wife of Dr. William E. Stevenson, president of Oberlin College, to the scene with a $5,000 check which she presented to John Archibald, clerk of the town of Plymouth Meeting, with the amazing statement that she wanted to make it very clear that whatever Mrs. Knowles' past associations may or may not have been, she is a loyal American and a highly qualified librarian.

"Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the Ford Fund for the Republic, announced in New York that the gift of $5,000 was for 'courageous and effective defense of democratic principles.'

"Mr. Speaker, these statements by two directors of the Ford Foundation Fund for the Republic are disgraceful. They are incredible.

"What is going on in this country when we cite and award known Communists and traitors with praise and checks for $5,000, of tax-exempt money. When the former chancellor of the University of Chicago and the wife of another college president make public statements glorifying Reds who hide behind the fifth amendment and bestow on them $5,000 in cash, we had better stop, take stock, and see where we are headed.

"Is the Ford Fund for the Republic going in the same direction as the American Fund for Public Service — the Garland Fund—which was exhausted years ago by the Communist Party and its fronts or the Robert Marshall Foundation which has been drained of its resources of over a million dollars by organizations on the Attorney General's list as subversive and as a fund for the payment of attorney fees of $20,000 to Joe Rauh of ADA in the case of Soviet spy, William Walter Remington, as pointed out by the gentlemen from Illinois (Mr. Velde) on October 17, 1951, at page 13664 of the RECORD?"

RE: Harris charges

Here is a stab at cataloging Roy Harris' lies about SRC. I dare say it would be possible, by tediously plowing through more issues, to turn up some further nonsensical items. But the ones treated here represent the substance of Harris' mythology about us, and I should think any reasonable person would see how he works from this much analysis.

Let me know whether this is the kind of thing you had in mind and how close this comes to meeting the need as you see it.

THE AUGUSTA COURIER: AN ANALYSIS

(Issue of May 3, 1954, the Augusta Courier, published by Roy V. Harris.)

1. "SRC, of Atlanta, had been granted one quarter of a million dollars by the Ford Foundation."

The grant referred to was not made by the Ford Foundation, but by the Fund for the Republic.

2. "[Ralph] McGill was recently appointed a member of the executive committee of the Ford Foundation."

McGill has never been so appointed. He is a member of the Board of the Fund for the Advancement of Education.

3. "This SRC picked up one of the platforms of the Communist Party in America and that was the destruction of the pattern of segregation in the South."

Anybody who is even slightly familiar with the Communist party platform knows this is false. The official Communist doctrine as formulated decades ago calls for the establishment of an independent Negro republic ~~comprising~~ encompassing the so-called black belt of the Southern U.S. This objective, which has never been repudiated by the Communist Party, is about as far as you can get from the program of the SRC. The SRC, like its predecessor, the Committee on Interracial Cooperation, has always worked soberly and quietly; the Communists have carried on noisy campaigns designed to exploit injustices ~~to~~ Negroes for their own purposes. The SRC was established during World War II (1943 and 1944) at a time when the Communists professed no concern for the status of the Negro in the South, since they wanted to see all national energies devoted to assisting Soviet Russia by opening a second front against Germany. Statements by the Soviet press as well as analyses by American experts on international affairs make it clear that the Communists are exploiting ~~national desegregation and~~ discrimination and segregation in this country among colored peoples elsewhere in the world. It is the pro-segregation extremists in the South who aid their purpose, not responsible southerners like those in SRC who seek harmonious progress.

4. "The object and purpose of the SRC is to divide the people of the South and to create chaos, confusion and violence."

SRC's purpose demonstrably is, and always has been, to unite the people of the south and to avoid chaos, confusion and violence. This is borne out by everything the Council has ever said or done, and Harris, of course, produces no evidence to the contrary.

June 28, 1954.

1. "SRC is the successor of the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a Communist-front by the House Committee investigating un-American activities."

This constantly repeated falsehood by Harris is refuted by a whole army of facts. SRC is the official successor to the ~~Committee~~ Commission on Interracial Cooperation, which was founded in 1919. SRC was organized in 1943 and chartered in 1944, at a time when the SCHW had been in existence since 1938 and was still going strong; they were generally regarded as rival organizations. Most of the principal founders of SRC had never had any connection with SCHW. The approach and program of SRC is markedly different from that of the old SCHW. The SCHW has a clear and acknowledged successor in the Southern Conference Educational Fund. Attempts to label SRC as a second, unacknowledged successor are obviously absurd. Evidence on this point in SRC's files include official records of its organization and ~~list some~~ letters from such founders as Msgr. T. J. McNamara, Goodrich C. White, J. McDowell Richards and Howard W. Odum.

2. "Two top members of the SRC's Board of Directors, who are also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as Communists in testimony before Congressional Committees by former associates in the party."

This frequently repeated charge by Harris is amplified elsewhere as a reference to Aubrey Williams and Clark Foreman. It is false on two counts. First, neither of these men was a member of the SRC Board at the time they were accused before Congressional Committees. The accusations against them were made by Louis Budenz and Paul Crouch in 1953. Clark Foreman, who moved out of the South, was dropped from the SRC Board in 1949, and Aubrey Williams resigned, also in 1949 - ironically because he did not feel that SRC went far enough in opposition to segregation. Secondly, neither Foreman nor Williams could conceivably be described as "top members" of SRC's Board even during their terms of membership. Neither held any office or served at any time on the Executive Committee, and neither at any time played any significant part in formulating SRC's policy. Since the charge of Communist affiliation was made against these two men long after they ceased to serve on SRC's Board, it is not the business of this organization either to defend or denounce them. But it should be noted that both Williams and Foreman, under oath before Congressional Committees, branded their accusers as liars, and no charge of perjury was brought against either Williams or Foreman. Of course, Harris, with his usual lack of regard for accuracy and the reputations of others, makes no mention of these facts.

3. "At least 38 officers and members of the executive staff or directors of the SRC's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as Communist fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee investigating un-American activities.

a) A culling of names from this issue turns up the following as persons referred to in this charge:

George S. Mitchell *	Ira Reid	Carter Wesley *
Howard Odum	Benjamin Mays *	Gordon Hancock *
Charles Johnson *	William Cole	J. M. Ellison
Rufus Clement *	Donald Comer	Florence Sytz *
Marion A. Wright *	David Jones	W. W. Alexander
A. W. Dent *	Aubrey Williams	Harry Stanley Brav
P. B. Young Sr.	Clark Foreman	R. B. Atwood *
Guy Johnson *	Bishop E. A. Penick *	Grace Hamilton *
F. D. Patterson	Glenn Rainey	Luther Jackson
Paul Christopher *	Mrs. M. E. Tilly *	D. V. Jemison
Josephine Wilkins *	Virginius Dabney	Z. A. Looby *
Louis Burnham	F. B. Washington	G. D. Rogers
Charlotte Hawkins Brown	Bishop R. R. Wright Jr.	Jacob Reddix

This totals 39, unaccountably. Out of 130 current and past board members of SRC at the time of Roy Harris' writing, he has singled out 37 plus Dr. Mitchell and Mrs. Tilly of the staff. Of the 37, 21 were not even on the board at the time of Harris' charges. This failure to distinguish between present and past board members is part of Harris' deception in trying to ~~provide a specious basis for~~ inflate his fraudulent charges. (Moreover, one of the names, Harry Stanley Brav, refers to no one who has served on SRC's board; Rabbi Stanley R. Brav is a former member, but could not conceivably be accused of un-Americanism.)

~~Leaving aside Williams and Foreman, already discussed,~~ Most of the persons named by Harris are outstanding southerners whose position in public life would alone testify to their good character.

Harris' method has been to brand as "facts" material taken from the raw files of the House un-American Activities Committee. The Committee itself points out that it does not vouch for the accuracy or the significance of this raw material. The Committee calls it "unevaluated data." No attempt is made to ascertain whether this casually gathered material is accurate or inaccurate, whether an individual was associated with an organization before or after it was accused of pro-Communist leanings, what the nature and circumstances of the alleged association were. Obviously, loosely gathered and loosely handled material of this kind can be used "to prove" almost anything about anybody. (It has been so used for example, against such noted Americans as Dwight D. Eisenhower, General George C. Marshall and many others.) One of the past SRC board members attacked by Harris was, at the time of writing, an avowed Dixiecrat!

4. "Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of the SRC was listed as a top official of the SCHW in the report citing it as a communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts according to records and reports of congressional committees."

Dr. Mitchell was a "top official" of the SCHW only in the sense that he was a member of its board, from which he resigned in 1947. To suggest, as Harris does, that this makes Dr. Mitchell a Communist sympathizer or that it proves an organic link between SCHW and SRC is ridiculous. As Ralph McGill and others have pointed out, SCHW attracted many distinguished and loyal persons to its membership. Only in the last stage of its existence did the SCHW come to be recognized as having an active pro-communist minority within its membership, and by that time non-communist liberals of the sort that compose SRC had almost entirely left the SCHW. ~~Disillusionment with~~ Distaste for the makeup and methods of the SCHW was one of the reasons why some of these persons were attracted to the responsible program of the SRC ~~in the mid 40's~~ at SRC's beginning. The other associations alleged against Dr. Mitchell in general here, and in detail elsewhere, are of the same order of innuendo and smear as those discussed above and have been answered in detail by Dr. Mitchell. Certainly no one who has known Dr. Mitchell throughout his career of public service would give any credence to charges of this kind. The high esteem in which he is held was testified to by his selection for the annual award of the Catholic Committee of the South in 1953.

5. "The SRC, though claiming to be dedicated to 'promote national harmony and reduce tensions' to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort has been solely a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist party line as laid down for the south."

Harris produces not a shred of evidence to support the charge made here. The Council, from its beginning has been scrupulously non-political, and nowhere in its literature of its activities can the slightest evidence to the contrary be found. If there were any such evidence, Harris and his associates would long since have been successful in getting SRC's tax exemption revoked. Similarly with the charge about the Communist Party line. Notoriously the Communist line, in race relations as in everything else, has zigzagged all over the map. SRC's policy has ~~neither zigged nor zagged~~ been constantly to work for understanding and cooperation.

? ~~Further refutation of this point is given above.~~

6. Harris summarizes George Mitchell's education. A small point, but typical, that he leaves out Mitchell's several years of study at the University of Richmond.

7. "Dr. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Mr. Ralph McGill, Editor of the Atlanta Constitution, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Dr. Howard W. Odum, applied for the SRC charter to Fulton County Superior Court January 6, 1944."

On the numerous occasions when Harris makes this statement, it is clear that his source is the official records of Fulton County. Yet he falsely includes Dr. Mitchell as an incorporator, although Dr. Mitchell was not even in Georgia or connected with SRC at the time of its incorporation. Similarly he omits the name of one of the actual incorporators who is listed in the official records and in everything that has ever been printed or said about SRC's incorporation. That person is Bishop Arthur J. Moore of the Methodist Church. This repeated falsification by Harris is indicative of ~~the~~ his manipulation of the facts for purposes of petty misrepresentation.

8. "We are informed by a reliable source, who has knowledge of the inner workings of the SRC, that a group of project personnel has been named to spend the $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation. This list includes the names of Morris B. Abram... and Phillip G. Hammer...."

This is about as much misinformation as can be packed into a few lines. It has already been pointed out that the grant to SRC was not made by the Ford Foundation but by the Fund for the Republic. No special group of project personnel "to spend the grant" ever existed. ~~or was thought of, and Mr. Hammer and Mr. Abram were never anything but regularly constituted members of SRC's policy board.~~

8. Harris quotes SRC staff member Fleming ~~as saying that the Supreme Court decision~~ and comments that Fleming's statement "reinforces what we have said all along - that this Ford Foundation money will be used to force an end of segregation upon us and for political action to elect candidates in office who are in sympathy with the Council's pro-communist, anti-southern aims and ideals."

The statement by Fleming, as quoted by Harris himself, is as follows: "The Supreme Court decision was wholesome and healthy since it gives responsible southern leadership a chance to work this thing out in a climate that can be relatively free of dissension and dispute as to what is the law of the land."

It is hard for a sane human being to understand how Mr. Harris can draw the inferences that he does from this statement. Another example of Harris' peculiar view of reality.

9. "The House Committee investigating un-American activities in a report to a Committee of the U.S. Senate, furnished documentary evidence showing [Dr. Channing] Tobias to be linked with nine organizations cited as communist fronts by the Committee."

Although Dr. Tobias has never been officially connected with SRC in any way, Harris first manufactures a spurious connection and then makes the above statement about Tobias. As one more measure of Harris' abuse of the truth, it is noteworthy that he does not point out the sequel to the charges against Tobias. Following its hearing, the Committee unanimously exonerated Dr. Tobias of all charges of left-wing sympathy, and Dr. Tobias's appointment by the President to a U.S. Commission was speedily approved.

(Editor's Note: In view of the activities of the Southern Regional Council, COPE and the NAACP to spend several million dollars in an effort to register Negroes and control the politics in the Southern States, we are reproducing this article which appeared in THE AUGUSTA COURIER under date of June 28, 1954. This article, as it appeared in June, 1954, has been circulated all over the country and no one has denied the charges made. It will be very interesting to read this article again.)

The Southern Regional Council, a bi-racial organization and recipient of a $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation, is a haven for known communist fronters and could well become the Communist Party apparatus in the South.

That conclusion was reached by this newspaper only after a thorough and searching study of the council's history and activities since it was chartered and headquartered in Atlanta, January 6, 1944.

Our investigation has established the following concerning the organization:

1. It is the successor, in fact, to the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare which folded after being branded a Communist-front by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities. Officers and directors of the Southern Regional Council are, practically without exception, the same as those who ran and directed the SCHW.

Branded as Communists

2. Two top members of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors, who were also high officials in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, have been branded as Communists in testimony before congressional committees by former associates in the party.

3. At least 38 officers, members of the executive staff or directors of the Southern Regional Council's Board of Directors have known records of association with multifarious organizations which have been cited as Communist-fronts by either the Attorney General or the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

4. Dr. George S. Mitchell, Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, was listed as a top official of the Southern Conference for Human

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

During the last few years we have had a lot of requests for information on the Southern Regional Council.

All copies of past issues of THE AUGUSTA COURIER containing stories on the Council have long been exhausted and we have been unable to furnish the information.

In view of the fact that the Southern Regional Council has secured a grant from the Ford Foundation in the amount of $325,000 and has joined up with the NAACP and the Committee On Political Education of the AFL-CIO in a campaign to register and vote the Negroes in the South, we thought it would be wise to reproduce elsewhere in this issue an article that we carried in 1954 on the Southern Regional Council.

While the Southern Regional Council starts off with only $325,000, the NAACP and COPE have $750,000 to go with it in this joint undertaking.

It is predicted by informed sources that this is just the beginning and that during the summer of 1962 these organizations will probably spend five or six million dollars in the South in an effort to control the politics of the various states.

There will be an election for Governor in most of the deep South States this year and practically all of them will be electing at least one United States Senator.

In addition, all Congressmen and members of the legislature are running.

Even though this is what we call an "off" year in politics, it will be a very important year in determining who will control the state governments.

In Georgia, for instance, this crowd has gone into the federal courts and obtained an order outlawing the County Unit System of voting in the Democratic primaries.

They are hoping to elect a candidate for Governor on a popular vote basis and are basing their hopes on the fact that they can control the votes in the cities.

It is in the cities that this effort to register the Negroes will be made.

They are spending this money because they know they can control the Negro bloc vote and they are hoping that the Negroes and the wildcat leftwingers will vote together in a bloc and that white people generally will split up and, consequently that these bloc votes will control the elections.

They are after power and they are trying to control state governments and the party machinery in the various States.

This presents a problem to Southern Democrats. How can we control the governments of the various Southern States and keep it out of the hands of the Negroes and the radicals?

There is only one answer and that is for the white people to organize and stick together and back a white man's candidate.

As George Washington once told his subordinates: "Put none but Americans on guard tonight", we need none but real white men on guard in the state capitols in the South today.

We need somebody who will stand up for the white people.

ARE YOU GOING TO SURRENDER TO THE LEFTWINGERS?

Welfare in the report citing it as a Communist-front. His name has also been linked to other red fronts, according to records and reports of Congressional committees.

5. The Southern Regional Council, though claiming to be dedicated to "promoting racial harmony and reducing tensions" to qualify as a tax-free charitable effort, has instead been solely a political action group and has consistently followed the Communist Party line as laid down for the South.

These are serious charges but we have the uncontrovertible proof of them all.

Ford Foundation Funds

The Ford Foundation is, in effect, financing communization of the South and ultimate destruction of this country and her free enterprise system under which all of the Ford fortune was accumulated.

Taking our investigation of the Southern Regional Council up, chapter and verse, let us first start by considering Dr. George S. Mitchell, an incorporator of the Council, its director of veterans services during the period 1945-'47 and its executive director since that time.

Born in Richmond, Va., Mitchell studied at the University of Delaware, Johns Hopkins and at Oxford University in England. He is a Ph.D. and taught economics at Columbia 1929-'35. After that he went into federal government service.

It is interesting and indicative to note that his career from 1935 to 1944 closely parallels that of other "liberals" of the time who served in the Agriculture Department under Henry Wallace and later transferred, almost as a group, to the Foreign Economic Administration.

Incorporation of SRC

Mitchell jumped from government service in 1944 to the job as Southeastern Regional Director of the CIO-Political Action Committee. He served for nearly two years in this job before taking a position on the executive staff of the Southern Regional Council which he now heads.

Dr. Mitchell, Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Mr. Ralph McGill, Editor of THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Dr. Howard W. Odum applied for the SRC charter to Fulton County Superior Court, January 6, 1944. The Atlanta law firm of Haas, Lyons and Hurt, of which Leonard Haas is senior member, were attorneys for the applicants for the charter. It was granted for a period of 35 years.

Records and reports of proceedings of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities reveal Dr. Mitchell as a member of the top-level "Board of Representatives" of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; Dr. Rufus E. Clement is listed as a member of the powerful executive board of the SCHW; Dr. Charles S. Johnson is named also as a member of the executive board of the SCHW and was extremely active in promoting the affairs of the conference, while the name of Dr. Howard W. Odum appeared on the list of sponsors for the second Southern Conference for Human Welfare held in Chattanooga, Tennessee, as contained in the call for the conference.

Group Switched Over

Ralph McGill, editor of THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, was an early member of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare but wrote later after discovering communist infiltration into the group that "when this happened, I knew enough to get out and knew enough to know that the Southern Conference was finished even as it began."

Thus, it is apparent that when the heat of public inquiry was turned on the SCHW by the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, its leading lights set up the SRC to catch the ball after the SCHW was exposed as a red-front and its usefulness was at an end. This will become more and more apparent as our story unfolds.

The real policymakers and directors of the old SCHW were Clark Howell Foreman, its president, and Aubrey Williams, ex-officio member of its board of representatives. Both these men have been listed on official publications of the SRC as members of its Board of Directors. Both of them have been branded as known communists in testimony before congressional committees.

Clark Foreman Named

Louis Budenz, former communist, testifying before the House Committee investigating tax-exempt foundations December 23, 1952, identified Clark Foreman "as a communist party member."

Aubrey Williams was nailed "as a secret communist" earlier this year at the New Orleans hearings held there by Sen. James O. Eastland for the Senate Internal Security Committee.

John Butler, Dallas nursery operator and a former red, testified: "I heard his name mentioned time and time again as a communist member." Paul Crouch, another former communist, testified that he knew Williams as a "secret member of the Communist Party."

Investigation discloses that others who held high office or took an especially active part in the Communist-front SCHW are now either officers, directors or executives of the SRC.

Listed In Daily Worker

Marion A. Wright, President of the SRC, was listed in the DAILY WORKER of May 20, 1947 (page 5) "as having signed a statement of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare," according to records of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

Albert W. Dent, Vice-President of SRC, President Dillard Univ., New Orleans, La., identified "as a member of the Southern Council of the SCHW; sponsor 2nd SCHW and sponsor Southern Negro Youth Conference, a red-front."

P. B. Young, ex-vice-president SRC, Publisher, Norfolk, Va., JOURNAL and GUIDE, signed statement of SCHW, according to DAILY WORKER, May 20, 1947.

Guy B. Johnson, ex-vice-president, Southern Regional Council, Chapel Hill, N. C., Institute for Research in Social Science, University of North Carolina, was a consultant on Panel IV – Citizenship and Civil Liberties of the SCHW as shown by official records of the group.

Directors of SRC

Directors of the SRC who also held important posts or were active in the SCHW include the following: Dr. Howard W. Odum, Univ. of N. C., Chapel N. C., F. D. Patterson, Pres., Tuskegee Inst., Tuskegee, Ala.; Paul Christopher, Regional Director, CIO-PAC, Knoxville, Tenn.; Miss Josephine Wilkins, Atlanta, Ga.; Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Ala.; Clark H. Foreman, New York, N. Y.; Dr. Rufus E. Clement, Pres., Atl. Univ., Atlanta, Ga.; Louis E. Burnham, Birmingham, Ala.

Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Pres., Palmer Inst. Sedalia, N. C.; Dr. Ira De Reid, professor, Atl. Univ., Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. C. S. Johnson, Pres., Fisk Univ., Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, Pres., Morehouse College, Atlanta, Ga.; Guy B. Johnson, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C., William E. Cole, Knoxville, Tenn.; Donald Comer, industrialist, Birmingham, Ala.; David D. Jones, president, Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C.; Rt. Rev. E. A. Penick, Bishop, Diocese of North Carolina, Raleigh, N. C.; and Glenn W. Rainey, professor, Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta.

The above lists prove beyond the shadow of any doubt that the SRC is the successor group to the exposed communist-front SCHW. The same people who organized and operated the latter group are now manipulating political action on the part of the SRC.

Carefully Camouflaged

The House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities concluded following its investigation of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare as follows:

"The Southern Conference for Human Welfare is perhaps the most deviously-camouflaged communist-front organization. When put to the following acid test it reveals its true charter:

"1. It shows unswerving loyalty to the basic principles of Soviet foreign policy.

"2. It has consistently refused to take sharp issue with the activities and policies of either the Communist Party, USA, or the Soviet Union.

"3. It has maintained in decisive posts persons who have the confidence of the communist press.

American bias and pro-Soviet bias, despite professions, in generalities, for love of America.

"In the light of the fact that a significant number of the leading lights of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare are associated with organizations or campaigns for the defense of the Communist Party or individual Communists, or with organizations defending the Soviet Union, or its policies – issues which have nothing to do with the South– one is forced to the conclusion that, by and large, the common bond among its supporters is a certain degree of sympathy for the Soviet Union and/or the Communist Party, rather than any primary interest in human welfare in the South. One is further forced to conclude that the professed interest in Southern welfare is simply an expedient for larger aims serving the Soviet Union and its subservient Communist Party in the United States."

Names of SRC Officers

Names of SRC officers, who have been linked with one or more communist-fronts other than the SCHW in the official records, reports and proceedings of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities include the following:

Dr. George S. Mitchell, Ex. Dir., SRC, Atlanta; Albert W. Dent, V.P., SRC, New Orleans, La.; Virginius Dabney, Editor TIMES-DISPATCH, Richmond, Va.; Forrester B. Two Known Commies

THE AUGUSTA COURIER had anticipated, when beginning its investigation of the Southern Regional Council, that it would find a handful of people in it with Communist-front associations. But the COURIER was, to say the least, amazed to find two known Communists on its Board of Directors and 38 others who have associations with Communist-fronts in varying numbers and degrees. It would be impossible to congregate this many people with such backgrounds and affiliations except by design.

When the U. S. Supreme Court announced its ruling declaring segregation unconstitutional in the public schools of the South SRC chief, Dr. Mitchell, was quoted in the press as hailing the decision. He said integration would "give every child equal opportunity . . . and would enrich this and every other Southern community."

Besides Dr. Mitchell's top policy job in the SCHW, his name has also cropped up in connection with other communist-front organizations such as the old Civil Rights Congress, the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, the Communist-infiltrated Brookwood College and others, according to records and reports of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

We are informed by a reliable source, who has knowledge of the inner-workings of the Southern Regional Council, that a group of project personnel has been named to spend the $240,000 grant from the Ford Foundation.

Morris B. Abram

This list includes the names of Morris B. Abram, Atlanta attorney, and newly-named Director of SRC, as a worker on the field staff of the Ford project, and Philip G. Hammer, Executive Officer, Committee of the South, also of Atlanta, presumably as a paid employee of the central staff of SRC's project personnel which will work to mix the races in the classrooms of Southern public schools.

Hammer was a speaker at a recent meeting of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia. Apparently officials of this group did not know about Hammer's record of association with communist fronts.

Hammer was president of the Washington, D. C., Committee of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and was also listed as a member of the Washington Bookshop, another subversive communist front. No one could have held such a high office in the Washington SCHW organization unless he could be fully trusted to carry out instructions.

This same Hammer was born in Philadelphia, Pa. He studied under Dr. Frank Graham at the University of North Carolina and at Harvard. Upon coming to Washington, he was employed in the office of Bob LaFollette, liberal Senator from Wisconsin. From there he went with the Farm Security Administration in the Department of Agriculture under Henry Wallace. He later was included in the mass transfer of "liberals" to the State Department for work in the Foreign Economic Administration and the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

In spite of the fact that Hammer held responsible government positions all during World War II, even though he was of military service age, he terminated his employment abruptly in late 1945. He is reported to have come to Atlanta in 1946 in an effort to get a magazine started which he hoped to edit, but could not make financial arrangements and left, only to return in 1947 as a business analyst for the Atlanta firm of Joseph K. Heyman.

He resigned from this position in March 1950 to become Director of the Metropolitan Planning Commission and as such was author of the "Plan of Improvement" legislation which took most of the effective governmental powers away from Fulton County and vested them in the Mayor of Atlanta who twice has been elected to office not by a vote of white people but by the bloc vote.

Hammer's Activities

Our investigation shows that Mr. Hammer, in addition to his Communist-front affiliations, was named as a member of the National Executive Council of United World Federalists in early 1949. This is an organization which proposes the surrender of our national sovereignty to a super world government which would have police powers and could arrest individual citizens of member nations.

During the summer of 1953, Hammer took a three months' leave from his job as Director of the Committee of the South to direct an intensive study for the Ford Foundation Educational Fund. Main purpose of the study was to convince the Supreme Court that a ruling by it outlawing segregation could be implemented and enforced. This work was known as the "Ashmore Project" under which school segregation in the Southern States was studied with a view towards devising ways and means to eliminate it.

Hammer has been a frequent guest at the "Hungry Club", a Negro luncheon group, where he has dined with its members. He told delegates to the recent Southern Interstate Conference of the National Council of Jewish Women that plans to preserve separate schools in Georgia "won't last as long as the white primaries."

Voters League Official

His wife Jane is First Vice President of the Georgia League of Women Voters and is Editor of GEORGIA VOTER, a bi-monthly publication of the organization, in which its policy is enunciated. The announcement bulletin of Spelman College for 1952-53 lists Mrs. Hammer as a teacher of Philosophy there. Both the Hammers have been very active in directing the fight against the county unit system in Georgia.

Another so-called "liberal" who will help SRC spend the Ford grant is Morris B. Abram. While Abram has never been associated with any organization which has been branded as a communist-front, he was a member of the National Executive Council of the United World Federalists.

UWF, according to an article printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, "was created by communists, fellow-travelers and communist sympathizers whose whole purpose is to so weaken us as a nation that we become impotent."

Abram's other activities include lectures at Negro colleges, attendance at Negro banquets, inflammatory addresses before NAACP groups, legal representation of publishers and producers of questionable books, magazines and motion pictures seeking to destroy the morals of our youth and segregation in the South. He now is a candidate for Congress in the Fifth District of Georgia on a platform recommending abolition of the county unit system.

A member of President Truman's notorious Civil Rights Commission is field secretary of the Women's Division of the Southern Regional Council. She is well-known to Georgians as Mrs. M. E. Tilly of Atlanta.

Methodist Federation

Records of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities show that Mrs. Tilly was an active member of the Methodist Federation for Social Action, a communist-front. In the report on that group branding it as such, Mrs. Tilly's name appears throughout the context.

Other communist-front activities with which she has been connected according to House Committee records include the following:

"A facsimile of the signature of Mrs. Dorothy Tilly (Mrs. M. E. Tilly) is found on a Jan. 19, 1951, letterhead of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act, on this letterhead, another dated May 25, 1951, and in the Daily Worker of Dec. 27, 1950 (page 9), her name appears as an initator of the National Committee to Repeal the McCarran Act; the Daily Worker referred to identified her with the Southern Regional Council, Atlanta.

"In the Statement of Policy, issued by the National Committee for Peaceful Alternatives in December 1950, Mrs. M. E. Tilly was named as a member of the Executive Board of that Committee. The Daily Worker of July 28, 1950 (page 8), reported that she signed a statement of the same committee, regarding Korea. A letterhead of the National Committee . . . dated Sept. 16, 1950, also named Mrs. Tilly as a member of the organization's Executive Board (from the Committee's Report on the Communist 'Peace' Offensive which was released on April 25, 1951, (page 56). Identified as being associated with the Southern Regional Council, Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. Tilly was named as one of the sponsors of the Mid-Century Conference for Peace held in Chicago, May 29-30, 1950 (from the Conference Program printed in the 'Peace' Offensive Report, (pages 143-151).

Aid To Communists

"The Committee for Peaceful Alternatives . . . was formed to further the cause of 'Communists in the United States' doing 'their part in the Moscow campaign' (report on the Communist 'Peace' Offensive referred to above.) The Mid-Century Conference for Peace (May 29-30, 1950), was cited as having been 'aimed at assembling as many gullible persons as possible under Communist direction and turning them into a vast sounding-board for Communist propaganda' (report of the Committee on Un-American Activities dated April 1, 1951)."

Harold C. Fleming, director of information and a spokesman for the Southern Regional Council, was quoted recently as terming the decision of the Supreme Court outlawing school segregation as "wholesome and healthy since it gives responsible Southern leadership a chance to work this thing out in a climate that can be relatively free of dissension and dispute as to what is the law of the land."

Mr. Fleming's statement reinforces what we have said all along—that this Ford Foundation money will be used to force an end to segregation upon us and for political action to elect candidates for office who are in sympathy with the Council's pro-communist, anti-Southern aims and ideals.

Grant of $75,000

Further along this line the Ford Foundation has made a more recent grant of $75,000 to Editor Virginius Dabney of the Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch for an information agency to "condition the minds of Southern people" that nothing can be done to prevent the destruction of segregation.

"News" releases extolling methods used by various Southern States to end segregation in schools will be ground out by this organization known as the "Southern Educational Reporting Service." It will be staffed by liberal "newsmen" with headquarters in Nashville, Tenn. Its real purpose is to coordinate the activities of various groups and organizations which seek an end to public school segregation.

It also is revealing to note that Constitution Editor McGill, an incorporator and leading apologist for the SRC, has been appointed by the Ford Foundation to a membership on the Board of Directors of the subsidiary Fund for the Advancement of Education. The Fund was established by the Ford Foundation in 1951 to support "new and experimental programs in formal education."

The SRC has been anticipating a ruling adverse to segregation and received the Ford grant for the purpose of conditioning the minds of Southern people to the idea of mixing the races in the classrooms of the South.

Commie Party Platform

Stripped of all its window-dressing, the aims, purposes and platform of the Communist Party, the defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare and now the Southern Regional Council are one and the same. They are identical on all points.

"The Southern People's Common Program for Democracy, Progress and Peace" as contained in the Communist Party Daily Worker lists in detail the platform of the party and its program of political action in the South.

Its main goal is to dilute the influence of responsible people and concentrate all governmental power in the South in the hands of bloc voters and minority elements. It would do this through abolition of white party primaries, county unit voting system and the checks and balances provided by our system of constitutional government. It would overthrow segregation in all phases of Southern life, socialize industry and divide up the property of the people.

The Southern Conference for Human Welfare, as Mr. McGill admits, was dominated by those who advocated and fought for such a program.

SRC's Policy Statement

The Southern Regional Council has picked up the ball and is now working to destroy us. It seeks the defeat of officials like Byrnes and Talmadge and every conservative senator and congressman in the South. It seeks the election in their stead of left-wingers "who will go along" with their communistic programs. In other words, it is an effort to destroy us from within.

The SRC's avowed statement of policy calls for the destruction of the South as we have known it. It says:

"The South of the future, toward which our efforts are directed, is a South freed of stultifying inheritance from the past. It is a South where . . . segregation will be recognized as a cruel and needless penalty on the human spirit, and will no longer be imposed . . . We have no illusion that it can be realized in the South quickly or easily or perfectly. Nor do we imagine that the Southern Regional Council can play more than a modest but creditable part toward its achievement. Yet it is the ideal toward which we strive and, short of which, we have a duty to remain dissatisfied, for it is nothing else than the American ideal."

Plant News Stories

The main purpose of the Southern Regional Council during the period immediately preceding the Supreme Court decision was to convince the Court through statements from sympathetic agencies, planted news stories and other activity that the people of the South would bow down and accept a decision abolishing segregation.

During the years since its establishment, the Southern Regional Council has centered its fire on white primaries, poll taxes, election laws and other projects designed to pave the way for the election outlawing segregation itself.

SRC Given Large Sum Of Money To Get Negroes Registered; Election Of 5 Negro Congressmen From South Is 1962 Goal

New Alliance Of COPE-NAACP Would Control Vote In All Big Cities

The new alliance of COPE-NAACP is determined to secure a stranglehold on the vote of every big city in America.

COPE is the Committee On Political Education of the AFL-CIO and, of course, NAACP is the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

They realize that it was the bloc votes of the big cities which gave President Kennedy his razor-thin majority in 1960.

So, they are out to work with the regular Democratic organizations over the nation to solidify their forces so that the margins of victory in the future will not be so narrow as Kennedy's was in 1960.

Three-Way Coalition

All three organizations will be able to put in the field from now on disciplined shock troops and they hope that this three-way coalition will be in position to dominate the political scene in America for the next few generations.

This three-way coalition will be well-financed. COPE and the NAACP have been able, in the past, to raise unlimited campaign funds on any occasion and the Democratic organizations will use every means at their command to force contributions.

And then, at least for the next few years, this three-way coalition will have the backing of the Kennedy millions.

Drive For Negroes

Right now, they are busy pushing a drive to register Negroes in the South.

A Ford Foundation has made a grant to the Southern Regional Council of $325,000 to be used for the purpose of getting the Negroes registered to vote.

Of course, the Southern Regional Council is calling this program the Voter Education Project.

Nevertheless, it will be aimed directly at getting the names of Negroes on the registration rolls.

They say that this $325,000 is the initial grant to get the work underway.

More will be forthcoming in the future.

5 Negro Congressmen

Victor Riesel, the man who writes the syndicated column entitled, "Inside Labor", recently wrote:

"Turbulent political winds are sweeping in from Mississippi. Above the uproar is the voice of Rev. Martin Luther King—soon to be joined by others—campaigning to send "as many as five Negro congressmen" to Washington from the Deep South.

"At meeting after meeting, Reverend King is telling his people that 'if we make a determined push in voter registration . . . we can change the entire political structure of the State of Mississippi.'

"It is yet quiet. But the storm will come. The Negro drive to pile up ballots has just begun. Most active and most dramatic for the moment is the work of Reverend King. He has been campaigning like a professional politico. He has walked and talked and shaken the hands of thousands on plantations, cotton gins, schools and crossroad stores.

"For the moment he is out of Mississippi. But he will return — with manpower and money. Some funds will come from the $750,000 the AFL-CIO has alloted to its own Committee on Political Education. This was arranged for in Miami, back in December during the national labor convention."

Ample Funds

So, according to Riesel, Martin Luther will have $750,000 to add to the initial grant of $325,000.

Now, this makes more than a million dollars and this is just a beginning.

You can look for from five to ten million dollars to be spent in the next two years for the sole purpose of getting the Negroes registered.

Riesel says that they have set up a pilot project down in Sumter, South Carolina.

South Carolina

Here's what he says about it:

"There is, for example, a pilot center being operated in the small South Carolina city of Sumter. There the Congress of Racial Equality has set up a voter registration clinic. First, Negroes are picked up at their homes and driven to the official registration centers. If they fail to pass the literacy test they are driven back to the clinic. There they are taught what is necessary for qualification. . . ."

The effort will not be confined to South Carolina and Mississippi. Here is something else Riesel says:

"But there also are drives for Negro registration over in Georgia and in Alabama and Louisiana.

"There are more than clinics. There are field secretaries, lawyers—and students. In one community 20 students, picking up the labor technique, rang door bells, distributed leaflets, and contacted 1,380 homes on just one Sunday."

The Governor's Race

But all the money will not spent on just registering Negro voters.

COPE and the NAACP will be in the midst of every Governor's race in every one of these Southern States.

They will be in the Governor's race in Georgia and they will have a candidate and this candidate — whoever he may be—will not be without funds from COPE and the NAACP.

It is time for the people of the South to begin to use their intelligence.

Watch these candidates for Governor and the United States Senate who are running with the support of, and on the money furnished by, COPE and the NAACP.

Principal financial support for SRC during its early years prior to 1948 came from the Rosenwald Fund Foundation. This Fund was dedicated to "the creation of social equality" among the races in the South, according to Dr. Lessing T. Rosenwald of Philadelphia, chairman of its Board of Trustees. It provided SRC with an annual grant of $25,000 for its operations.

With the demise of the Rosenwald Fund a hasty mobilization of communist fronters sought other means to continue financing SRC's anti-segregation activities.

Tennessee CIO Director

Among those attending these fund-raising drive meetings was Paul Christopher, Tennessee CIO director. From his presence and the continuing interest of CIO-PAC officials in posts of key responsibility in SRC, it is evident that the group has received financial support as well as active cooperation from the powerful labor political organization.

Records of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities show that Paul R. Christopher was a vice president for 1947-48 for the Southern Conference for Human Welfare and was also listed as a member of that organization's National Committee. Other documentary evidence shows that Christopher's name appeared in a list of individuals who signed the January 1943 Message of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties.

The National Federation has been cited as an organization "by which communists attempted to create sympathizers and supporters of their programs and as subversives and communists." A Special Committee on Un-American Activities cited it as "one of the most viciously subversive organizations of the Communist Party."

Another notorious communist fronter who has been particularly active in fund-raising for the SRC, a collaborator in its administration, is Dr. Channing H. Tobias, formerly of Augusta and Atlanta and now president of the Phelps-Stokes Fund in New York City.

Communist Fronts

A digest of Dr. Tobias' record of affilations with communist fronts, as contained in records of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, takes up nearly four single-spaced typewritten pages.

He was a member of the Executive Board and held other high functionary positions in SCHW.

The House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities in a report to a Committee of the U. S. Senate, furnished documentary evidence showing Tobias to be linked with nine organizations cited as communist fronts by the Committee.

The Southern Regional Council also has worked closely with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in all of its activities. A. T. Walden, Atlanta Negro attorney and counsel for the NAACP in Georgia, has been notably active in helping raise funds for SRC's anti-segregation activities.

Civil Rights Group

While it is not known whether Walden was a member of SCHW, the Daily Worker of Oct. 7, 1952 (page 3) reported that he would lead a workshop discussion on civil rights at a meeting in New York City of the National Lawyers' Guild. The Guild has been cited by the House Committee on Un-American Activities as a communist front and the foremost legal bulwark of the Communist Party in the United States.

MORRIS B. ABRAM

This same Walden also signed a letter addressed to the U. S. House of Representatives opposing the Mundt Anti-Communist Bill as shown on the mimeographed letter, which includes a list of individuals who signed the same dated May 12, 1948.

Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University and the first Negro ever to be elected to Atlanta's City Board of Education, has been extremely active in SRC's operations since it was founded by him and others in 1944. He is generally regarded as a protege of Atlanta Constitution Editor Ralph McGill.

Clement ran for his Education Board post against a white man and with every support possible in the news columns of the Atlanta papers and the Hartsfield-Walden organization won the election. He did this even in spite of the fact that records of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and documentary evidence possessed by it show that he has been active in at least 12 communist-front groups and movements.

Source of Ford's Money

No one knows exactly how many active, paying members SRC has on its rolls. It claims "around 3,000 or 4,000." However, some observers are doubtful whether its real membership extends much further than its so-called "Board of Directors" and "project personnel" who will spend the Ford Foundation's grant.

It would be interesting indeed to see a list of members of the Southern Regional Council compared with a membership list of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Certainly, if the officers of both groups are practically identical, one could conclude with assurance that the same is true for the membership.

Many Southern taxpapers have raised the point that SRC's pro-communist, anti-segregation activities are financed by money good law-abiding Americans pay in federal taxes. They say this because donations to SRC are exempt from taxation due to its classification as a "charitable organization."

This is also true in regard to the grant from the Ford Foundation. Profits made by the Ford Motor Company on the sale of Ford automobiles and tractors go tax free to the Ford Foundation as dividends on common, non-voting stock held by the Foundation.

So, in reality, taxpayers of the United States and purchasers of Ford products are financing this activity to destroy Southern institutions.

Senator Talmadge Charges Racial Disturbances At Albany Caused By Groups Who Are Serving The Cause Of Communism

Martin Luther King, Leader Of Mob, Has A Record Of Red Front Affiliation

Senator Herman Talmadge says that the racial disturbances in Albany are caused by groups who are serving the cause of the Communists.

He says these disturbances are caused by outside agitators engaged in a "cold, calculated effort" to damage this country's foreign relations by "pitting race against race throughout the Nation."

He says the chief group sponsoring this movement is the Congress Of Racial Equality and that CORE has nine members on its advisory committee who have records of affiliation or identification with subversive groups and activities.

Must Stamp Out Mobs

The Senator says that such mob action, as has taken place in Albany, must be eliminated if constitutional government is to be preserved.

On stamping out such mobs there can be no compromise, he says. Unless we stamp out such mobs, anarchy will result.

The Senator's comments are very apt because Martin Luther King leads the mob and he himself has a record of Communist affiliation.

King attended a 1957 Labor Day Week-End Communist Training School at Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tennessee.

A Communist Agency

The Georgia Education Commission, which was set up by Governor Talmadge and continued by Governor Marvin Griffin, got out a bulletin on this training school and carried pictures of Martin Luther King addressing it.

The Highlander Folk School has been run out of the State of Tennessee as a Communist agency.

The Georgia Education Commission charged that at one time Bayard Rustin was Secretary to Martin Luther King

STRICTLY PERSONAL

By ROY V. HARRIS

Carl Sanders is posing as being a little saint and trying to accuse everybody who is opposed to him of being a grafter, a goon, a hoodlum or a cutthroat.

In view of his attitude, we think it is about time to unfrock little Carl and examine his "sainthood".

His record cannot be overcome by the pretty lips and the dimples that the artist who designed his posters emphasized.

Now, this is something the newspapers didn't tell you about Carl Sanders.

Carl Sanders and his associates own a corporation known as American Shell Homes, Inc. Carl is chairman of the board of this company.

A group of people in and around Augusta last week filed a suit against Carl's American Shell Homes corporation, and some of his associates, for "fraud and deceit practiced upon the plaintiffs for the deliberate purpose of inducing each of the plaintiffs and all others similarly situated to extend credit to the Old South Manufacturing Company, Inc., to the injury, damage and loss" of the plaintiffs. Old South Manufacturing Company was a dummy corporation set up by American Shell.

In addition to being chairman of the board of American Shell Homes, Carl Sanders is their attorney and he and his law firm had to have knowledge of all the situations which are referred to as constituting "fraud and deceit".

This is not a flimsy suit.

Here are the names of the law firms signed to this suit:

Fulcher, Fulcher, Hagler & Harper
Boller & Yow
Hull, Willingham, Towill & Norman
Harris, Chance, McCracken & Harrison
Charles G. Houston, Jr.

These law firms have an outstanding record and top standing in Augusta, Georgia.

These law firms would not have filed a scurrilous suit just for political purposes.

This suit says:

"That Old South Manufacturing Company, Inc., was organized and operated for the purpose of permitting American Shell Homes, Inc., to acquire a manufacturing plant and inventory to construct shell homes, and so as to merge it with American Shell Homes, Inc., in order to form a series of interlocking companies to manufacture, sell and finance shell homes; that all the acts and omissions herein described were in furtherance of this plan and were done to accomplish this result without any risk or liability upon the individuals or American Shell Homes, Inc., in the event of adverse financial developments."

Then the suit says that the American Shell Homes, Inc., and the other defendants conspired with one another, or acted upon orders from their superiors, who conspired with others, for the purpose of obtaining credit from the plaintiffs in the suit and to deceive and defraud the plaintiffs and other creditors.

American Shell set up a dummy corporation known as Old South Manufacturing Company, Inc. The incorporators were P. E. Thomas

Ralph Is Decorated By NAACP For His Contribution To Racial Integration

Ralph McGill's ATLANTA CONSTITUTION has now officially endorsed Carl Sanders for Governor.

Ralph McGill was cited by the 1959 Youth March for Integrated Schools for being the leading contributor to the cause of integration in America. He was cited along with Daisy Bates, of Little Rock, the leader of the Little Rock's NAACP integration movement, and Martin Luther King, Jr., of Atlanta.

Washington Newspaper

THE EVENING STAR, of Washington, D. C., in its issue of Wednesday, April 15, 1959, on Page B-7, carried the following article:

"Fifteen Thousand To March To Promote Laws for Integration

"More than 15,000 white and colored persons will meet here Saturday on behalf of school integration and civil rights legislation.

SCHOOL BUILDING FUNDS

During Governor Griffin's administration, the State of Georgia made more progress in the field of education than any other comparable period of time. Many of these improvements were started during Herman Talmadge's administration. This was when the sales tax was enacted and funds were first made available. The school building program was actually started under Talmadge's administration, but most of the buildings were erected during Griffin's administration. The School Building Authority originated soon after the Foundation Program was enacted. Local school systems are able to borrow funds through the Authority to construct school houses and pay for them on the installment basis. Governor Griffin proposed an amendment to the Authority that should be passed by the General Assembly at its next session. He suggested that the School Building Authority Act be amended so it can operate like the Bridge Building Authority and the University Building Authority. When the Bridge Authority pays off a lump of its bonded debt, it is possible to issue new bonds and build more bridges.

To date, more than half of the bonds for school houses have been paid off. The Authority Act should be amended so that new bonds can be issued after old ones have been paid off. There is no reason why these additional state funds cannot be made available to the growing school systems to provide standard classrooms for our children. A great many of the school plants do not yet have physical education facilities and assembly rooms. It seems that this could be a source of help for completing the school building program in the state.

AGITATING RACE TROUBLE

The News & Courier, Charleston, S. C., August 7, 1962

Hitler used ration cards to starve citizens into obedience. Two New York State congressmen propose to use government contracts to discipline whole communities with the threat of economic starvation.

The sinister suggestion was made by Rep. Samuel S. Stratton and Sen. Kenneth B. Keating with respect to Albany, Ga., the victim of intense racial pressure against the city government. Mr. Stratton mentioned an air base and defense plants which could be made the targets of federal displeasure.

Another New York member of Congress—Sen. Jacob K. Javits—has urged the Dept. of Justice to move in on Albany. We agree that Albany deserves protection from invasion by outside agitators. But that is not what Sen. Javits has in mind. He wants the federal government to oppose — and we assume disarm — the local police force in its attempt to keep order.

A Negro agitator has threatened to give the Albany treatment to Englewood, N.J. He has invited Malcolm X, the New York leader of the Black Muslims, to attend a rally there August 18.

The Muslims are a terrorist group, not interested in integrating with white people. The Mayor of Englewood, in replying to Paul Zuber's threat to organize boycotts and pickets on the ground of racial discrimination, pleads that Englewood's schools are already integrated. Thus it is apparent that even surrender to Negro demands is no guaranty of peace.

Tampering with racial passions for political purposes is dangerous in the North as well as in the South. The federal government itself is agitating an explosive situation.

The dummy corporation was not to begin business until one hundred thousand dollars' capital stock had been paid in.

This capital stock was never paid in, but officials of American Shell Homes filed a financial statement with Dun & Bradstreet for Old South Manufacturing Company, Inc.

The financial statement showed that Old South Manufacturing Company, Inc., had:

"Citations for contributions to the cause of integration will be presented to Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution; Mrs. Daisy Bates, the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jackie Robinson, Harry Golden, Harry Belafonte, Lillian Smith, Sidney Poitier, Roy Wilkins and the Rev. Gardner Taylor.

"The 1959 Youth March for Integrated Schools will bring petitions here, signed by citizens throughout the country, calling for 'speedy integration of schools throughout the United States.'

"The march was initiated at a meeting of more than 10,000 young people here last October 25. It was signal the beginning of a national campaign for immediate school integration and the passage of the Douglas civil rights bill."

Subversive Groups

Martin Luther King and Ralph McGill are both backed by the Congress On Racial Equality and Senator Herman Talmadge says that nine members of the advisory committee of this Congress have records of affiliation and identification with subversive groups and activities.

This is further evidence of the fact that Carl Sanders is being backed in his race for Governor by Ralph McGill and Martin Luther King.

CORE openly admits that it is backing Martin Luther King in the integration movement in the South and has been very active here on numerous occasions.

Those Hooked To Sanders

So, in Atlanta, we start off with Ralph McGill, Martin Luther King and the Atlanta newspapers in Carl Sanders' corner.

In Savannah, we find James E. Cay, Jr., and Mrs. Frank P. McIntire leading Sanders' campaign. Both of them agitated to integrate the lunch counters in Savannah and both of them appeared before the board of education of Chatham County on several occasions demanding that the schools of Chatham County be completely integrated.

Sanders is being backed in Augusta by the same group who tied the hands of the police in a recent mob action on the part of the Negroes which caused the death of one white boy and the wounding of another.

All of Them Smell Alike

This mob action was produced by a rabblerousing speech made by Martin Luther King, Jr.

In Macon, Columbus and everywhere else in the State, Carl Sanders is being supported by the organizations and the individuals who have been clamoring loudly for integration in the public schools in Georgia for many years.

Carl Sanders denied having the support of the Atlanta newspapers at the beginning of his campaign. He denied that Mills B. Lane was supporting him.

Mills Lane Admits It

Mills B. Lane has admitted in public print that he is supporting Sanders and now comes along and joins Lane, Ralph McGill and THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION.

When it was charged that Mills B. Lane, the Atlanta newspapers, Martin Luther King and the NAACP were supporting Sanders, he branded our charges as being "lies".

Now, Mills B. Lane and Ralph McGill and THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION have proved Sanders to be a liar on two different occasions.

He has been smoked out as having the support of Martin Luther King, CORE, the NAACP and other similar rabblerousing organizations.

The above is a picture of Martin Luther King, Jr., addressing the Labor Day Week-End Communist Training School, held at Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tennessee in 1957. He first came to fame as the leader of the Montgomery boycott where he was associated in the Montgomery Improvement Association with Bayard Rustin. THE DAILY WORKER lists Bayard Rustin as a delegate to the 1957 convention of the Communist Party. THE DAILY WORKER also identified Rustin as secretary to Martin Luther King.

Now Is Time To Cut Taxes And Curb Spending, Thurmond Says

National Economy Dragging, Senator Declares In Letter To Carolinians

It is time to cut taxes and cut spending on the part of the United States Government, according to Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina.

In his letter to the people of South Carolina, on August 6th, Senator Thurmond stressed the fact that he was in favor of cutting taxes and he was also in favor of cutting gvernment spending.

"Any tax cut should be offset by reductions in government spending," said Senator Thurmond.

Heaviest Tax Burden

Here is his letter of August 6, 1962:

No people in the world are carrying a heavier national tax burden and national debt load than the people of the United States. In fact, at the present time our national debt of $300 billion surpasses that of all the rest of the world put together. And, this does not figure in all the future financial commitments of our government, which, when added together with the national debt, amount to the shocking figure of $1¼ trillion.

In recent weeks the question of whether the lagging national economy should be subjected to a quickie tax cut in an effort to spur the economy along, and also possibly to bring some favorable political results in November, has been much in the news. It now appears that the President is going to pass up the advice of some of his advisors whose primary thoughts center around a tightly controlled economy and deficit spending.

Tax Cut Proposed

The reasoning behind the drive for a quickie tax cut this year is based on three ideas, each of which is subject to strong challenge. First, most "liberals" feel that either a tax cut or massive doses of federal public works expenditures are necessary whenever the national economy is lagging, even a little. Second, these same "liberals" think it does not matter if a tax cut would cause a deficit of $10 billion, because deficit spending is good for the economy and the national debt is of no concern since we as a nation merely owe the money to ourselves. Third, some feel that a spur is needed to get the desired results in the congressional elections as well as in the national economy.

I favor tax relief, but I also favor a balanced budget. Any tax cut should be offset by reductions in government spending. The "modern" thinking by White House aides is that we should throw out the present method of national bookkeeping in favor of the capital budget system, whereby research and capital expenditures are to be separated from the budget, so surpluses will be reflected instead of deficits. This is nothing more than a clever way to increase government spending for more welfare state programs, without engendering national concern about deficit financing, which has occurred in 26 of the last 32 years. The capital budget system would make the budget deficits disappear, but the annual additions to the national debt would not be erased.

National Economy Large

There is evidence that the national economy is lagging. Even some "liberal" economists, however, do not feel that the economy is sick enough to justify a cut in taxes or increased government spending to try to right the economy. There is no law of economics which decrees that the national economy will be spurred in direct proportion to the amount of government spending or reduction in taxes. In a few cases where taxes were reduced, the economy sagged more, one being the depression of 1929. From the standpoint of practical results, however, there is a line of economic reasoning which has, in the past, placed the strength of our national economy head and shoulders above the rest of the world, particularly those countries with socialist or communist-controlled economies. This is the idea that the key to real economic growth, rather than mere government growth, lies in easing rather than increasing control of the economy in order to release the energies of a free people in a free market. Economic theorists have tried and tried to change the natural laws of economics, but they have yet to come up with a workable substitute for the most fundamental of economic principles, the law of supply and demand.

The fallacious idea which assumes that favorable political results could be bought with a quickie tax cut has been largely diminished by lack of congressional enthusiasm, and a recent Gallup Poll indicating that 7 of 10 people polled are more concerned with a balanced budget than a tax cut. This again demonstrates that the people are ahead of the President's advisors in the application of practical judgments to national problems. The people tend to rely on time-proven concepts which bring practical results rather than turning to unproved economic theories spawned in an ivory tower.

This statement showed also that ninety thousand more shares of stock were being sold for $1 per share.

Dun & Bradstreet reported these facts to suppliers of materials and equipment and the dummy corporation started doing business.

Dun & Bradstreet's statement was dated March 6, 1961.

On September 12, 1961, six months later, involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in the bankruptcy court and the Old South agreed to be adjudged a bankrupt.

This suit alleges that the statement filed with Dun & Bradstreet was absolutely false.

This suit shows that only sixteen thousand dollars of the capital stock was ever paid in and it was soon thereafter withdrawn; that the dummy corporation never had any fixtures or equipment and that it never had any notes receivable and that the ninety thousand additional shares of stock, at a dollar a share, were never subscribed to nor paid in.

As a matter of fact, this suit, in effect, says that the Old South was a dummy corporation and that the statement filed with Dun & Bradstreet for the purpose of obtaining credit was absolutely false and fraudulent and intended to deceive the people who sold them large quantities of supplies on credit.

Then, on June 21, 1961, American Shell Homes, Inc., from its office at 712 Reynolds Street, Augusta, Georgia, mailed out a notice to all of the creditors of the Old South Manufacturing Company, Inc., which recited:

"The Old South Manufacturing Company has been acquired by American Shell Homes, Inc., as a wholly owned subsidiary. Possibly you may experience some inconvenience during this transition period, but we will endeaver to hold any such inconvenience to a minimum and would appreciate your cooperation."

Then, about three months later, the Old South Manufacturing Company was declared a bankrupt, with the consent of its officers and directors, and the creditors were left holding the bag.

Carl Sanders' law firm set up this dummy corporation, they steered it through its activities and Sanders, as chairman of the board, was the head man in American Shell.

The effect of all this is that Old South Manufacturing Company was never legally organized. It was not legally organized because its capital stock was never paid in as provided in its charter.

It started business without any capital stock, or without any assets, and wound up with only liabilities.

Now, Old South Manufacturing Company was an operation carried on by American Shell Homes, which is Carl Sanders' company.

American Shell wound up with the assets and Old South wound up with the debts.

American Shell is still in good shape and Old South is in bankruptcy.

The people who sold lumber and other building supplies to the Old South, upon the strength of the reports made to them by Dun & Bradstreet, are now holding the bag to the tune of many thousands of dollars.

Certainly, this was a "shell game".

If you have ever seen the old "shell game" worked at a carnival, then you know what I am talking about. The operator puts a peanut under a shell and he has two other shells standing by. He bets you that

OPPRESSION AT ALBANY

To the ordeal of Albany, Ga., long beset by racial agitators, now is added the oppressive hand of the United States government.

The Department of Justice (so-called) has intervened as a "friend of the court" in a bald attempt to deny a voice in court to elected municipal officers. Albany's local authorities, manfully striving to protect the lives and rights of citizens of both races, have petitioned a federal judge to protect them from the constant fomenting of public disorders. Department of Justice intervention on the side of the agitators shows that it is no friend of decency and tranquillity.

"It is no more than we expected," said Mayor Asa D. Kelley, Jr., in one of the saddest commentaries we have read on the federal government.

"This is an affront," he added, "to those of us in the South who are prepared to stand fast for law and order."

Indeed it is an affront, and a dangerous one. The federal action gives a cloak of legality to the use of organized mobs against a peaceful community. No locality in the United States is safe from the type of campaign being waged against Albany. Martin Luther King and his allies — the Kennedy administration among them — can concentrate anywhere they choose for the purpose of creating turmoil.

On the same day that this new outrage in the name of government was being perpetrated on Albany, a spokesman for the Kennedy administration on the other side of the world shamelessly stated the political reason behind such racist policy. John Kenneth Galbraith, U. S. ambassador to India, credited President Kennedy's election in 1960 to the Negro vote.

In an address to members of parliament and guests at the New Delhi Constitution club, Ambassador Galbraith frankly acknowledged that the Kennedy administration is in power today "because it enjoyed the overwhelming support of the 19 million Americans of African descent." He pictured the Negro vote also as a factor in the United States government's stand against colonialism in Africa, which he called "perhaps even more pressing than yours."

Accenting the consequences of the anti-colonial — which means anti-white man, anti-European and sometimes anti-Christian — attitude of the United States is the news from Africa. In Algeria, Frenchmen are fleeing from fresh outbreaks of Moslem terror. In British and Portuguese African territories, white settlers live in fear for their lives and scan the globe for refuge.

In the United States, a minority of barely more than 10 per cent of the population, representing the lowest element in economic and cultural development, has placed the majesty of the federal government on the side of oppression, disorder, degradation and death of a great Republic. All these things are behind the intervention in Albany.

Race Mixing In U. S. Results In Jungle Conditions; Congressman Williams Points Up The Evils Of Integration

Equalitarian Press Overlooks The Anti-Measures Of New African States

Race mixing in this country brings about jungle conditions wherever it is tried on a massive scale.

In Africa, the Negroes take a different attitude. The jungle conditions are there to begin with and as soon as they get a voice they cry black supremacy.

This is made very clear in a speech recently made to the Congress by Congressman John Bell Williams of the State of Mississippi.

Williams Says

Congressman Williams said in this connection:

The competition for the Negro vote here in the United States is fierce and keen. Demagogs in both major political parties clamor incessantly about alleged wrongs being committed against the Negro race by "heartless" southern white people. It is extremely difficult to talk and act sensibly in this kind of atmosphere, and reason and commonsense become obscured in the maelstrom of hysterical prointegration propaganda.

The public schools of the District of Columbia were desegregated in the fall of 1954, just a few months following the Supreme Court's infamous black Monday decision. If the bleeding-heart theorists had been correct, this would have solved the matter, and Washington would have become a utopia of racial intermixture. The practical result has been a mad and frantic exodus of white people away from the integrated District of Columbia into the segregated suburban areas, and the public schools of Washington have become virtually resegregated because of this flight of white people away from the District.

Crime In Washington

The crime rate in the District of Columbia is unusually high, and has been the subject of great concern to the responsible citizenry and to the Congress. A disproportionate share of these crimes are committed by Negroes; yet, by some curious process of reasoning, the pro-Negro equalitarian liberal press has absolved the Negro of his own derelictions and has managed to place all of the blame upon the white people. They claim that it cannot be the fault of the Negro, because they are victims of their past. This rationalization, unfortunately, does not contribute anything toward solving the crime situation in the Capital of our Nation, which continues to rise with alarming rapidity.

Most of our Negro leaders rail constantly against racism — racism in the United States, that is. In Africa, things are quite different.

There the Negro leaders air their racism blatantly. Do our American Negro leaders criticize them? The answer is a flat "No." Many of the African leaders are out-and-out racists who say they will put the whites in their place and keep them there. Have there been any complaints from our Negro leaders and our bleeding-heart liberals? I have not heard any.

you can't tell which shell has the peanut under it. After he has maneuvered them around he throws the peanut away and then you lose.

American Shell used Old South and when they got through shifting the shells around, Old South had nothing left but debts.

Certainly, the numerous creditors of the Old South were defrauded of their lumber and other supplies furnished at the request of American Shell to the tune of about seventy-five thousand dollars.

Does this situation leave little Carl looking like a saint?

Pretty lips and dimples on the posters along the highways do not satisfy these creditors who have lost their money.

This isn't all of this shell game.

American Shell owned another corporation known as Universal Homes, Inc. It was a wholly-owned subsidiary of American Shell.

Universal Homes is now so broke until nobody will even put up the court costs to put it in bankruptcy.

Universal beat one of my clients out of $4450.

Universal entered into a contract with one of my clients and obligated itself for $5950. When they didn't ante, I was instructed by the manager of American Shell Homes to call Carl Sanders.

Carl told me that the directors of American Shell didn't know anything about the contract and that the manager of Universal Homes had no authority to make the contract. He also stated that he and the other directors of American Shell knew nothing about what their manager had done and also that Universal was broke.

Consequently, I had to accept a $1500 settlement from "Dimples" for my client.

Now, in the case of Universal, the big boss plead that he didn't know what his manager was doing and, therefore, that his company was not liable.

Now, does this "shell game" look like the handiwork of a saint?

Now, this suit was brought by reputable firms doing business in Augusta. Here are the names of the people who brought the suit:

Appalachian Oak Flooring and Hardware Company
Harison-Gulley Chevrolet Company
N. W. White and Company
Pratt-Dudley Builders Supply Company
Anderson-McGriff Company
Augusta Sash and Door Company
Howard Lumber Company
Standard Lumber Company
Coplan Pipe and Supply Company
Stuart Office Supply
A. W. Cordes, trading as Georgia-Carolina Manufacturing Company
Harry E. Lamb and William T. Lamb, doing business as Lamb Bros. Lumber Company

Now, how does "Dimples" explain this situation?

Does he admit his connection with this "shell game" or does he claim to be ignorant of the conduct of the employees of his company?

It is time to hear from "Dimples".

Finished In Kenga

Let us listen to Tom Mboya, Kenya leader, as quoted by Louis Lomax, well-known Negro journalist and writer. Mboya, prospective Prime Minister when Britain steps out of Kenya, is quoted as follows:

"The Europeans know they are finished in Kenya. Now all they want to know is if we're going to pay them for their land. The civil servants know they are done here. Now all they want to know is whether we are going to give them a pension. Every day they stop me on the streets and they ask me: 'Mr. Mboya, are you going to take our land? Are we going to be compensated? Are we going to get pensions?'

"I tell them, 'Don't ask me to pay you. Tell your troubles to Macleod (the British Colonial Secretary). Let him pay you. As far as we are concerned, the Europeans have lived off the fat of the land. They have had their compensations and their pensions.'

"Then the Europeans want to know if they can stay on in Kenya. I tell them: 'Sure.' But if they stay on they must get out of politics. We are going to have an all-black Parliament and an all-black Government. We are going to divide our land among our people. If the Europeans want to stay, they can stay on as squatters. If they want to work, they can work for us."

Liberal Papers Silent

This goes far beyond anything said on the race issue in this country by the most rabid segregationist leaders, including even the grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan.

Is there an outcry against Mboya from Negro spokesmen and publications such as the Washington Post and the New York Times? Do not be ridiculous. The pseudoliberals and their spokesmen flair racism in America; in Africa it is an entirely different thing.

Our self-styled liberals attack colonialism constantly, white colonialism, that is. They couldn't care less about the rise of Negro racism and dictatorship in Africa. Apparently they have no concern about Negro colonialism which already exists and will spread as the strong countries among the new African nations begin to practice imperialism of their own.

and that this same Rustin was a delegate to the 1957 convention of the Communist Party.

There was no doubt about this Highlander Folk School's being a Communist agency and there is no doubt about Martin Luther King's connection with it.

King and Communism

A proper investigation of Martin Luther King, and some of the sources of his money, would disclose that he himself is serving the Communist cause in this State.

Elsewhere in this edition we are carrying a picture of Martin Luther King as he spoke to this Labor Day Communist Training School at Monteagle, Tennessee in 1957.

Talmadge Is Right

The picture was taken by a photographer sent to the Labor Day Weekend by the Georgia Education Commission.

Martin Luther King is backed in his movement by the Congress Of Racial Equality.

Senator Herman Talmadge is eminently right. Unless we have a Governor in Georgia that will use the necessary force to break up such mob action as has taken place in Albany, Georgia, we will soon have anarchy in this State and this anarchy will be produced by Communist sympathizers.

Left Wing Council Invades State

How A Republic Died

By Dr. Charles Poling, D.D.

Constitutional State rights no longer exist. Government is no longer from the state-house and the State legislative bodies; government is from Washington and the White House. Government is in partnership, maybe the captive, of labor unions; our free enterprise system is but a memory. Today, big government competes with the little businessman, regulates and restricts business.

Today the farmer is no longer free to manage his own farm, no longer free to decide what crops he will plant — this decision is handed down from Washington. As citizens, we have no way of knowning just what is happening in, or to, our Government — all of our news media is managed and we are told only what Washington wants us to know. Treason in high places of Government, Billie Sol Estes, Bobby Baker, and Jenkins, are shielded; and too many others who have betrayed America, are protected by public servants who are sworn to uphold and defend the Constitution.

ACHR Goes about work Quietly; Carries Out Orders From Above

By Jimmy Jones

The Alabama Council on Human Relations is probably the most important single left wing organization in this state. It is also one of the most carefully camoflaged and least understood (by the general public) organs of the left.

The Alabama Council on Human Relations receives its financial support and organizational directives from the Southern Regional Council on Human Relations in order to "encourage the development of action groups at state level; recruit and develop state leadership and seek to remold and articulate public opinion through the radio, press, speakers and publicatons . . ."

Records of the American Legion's Americanism Commission reveal that the past directors and presidents of the Southern Regional Council have held essentially the same offices in the Communist Southern Conference Educational Fund and/or the subversive Southern Conference on Human Welfare. (That is, they held the same offices in both organizations.)

All existing evidence indicates that the Southern Regional Council is controlled and directed by the Southern Conference Education Fund, an identified Communist front.

Directives laid down by the Southern Conference Educational Fund (with offices in New Orleans) are relayed through the Southern Regional Council to the Alabama Council on Human Relations where the appropriate action

"Protestant church religion came [illegible]ing to enhance the rise of capitalism. It proclaimed the divine right of property. It defied (sic) the kings of finance, the lords of commerce and the captains of industry. Today this church religion is directed by remote control from the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers and the offices of cartel imperialists. With these it has economic investments in the capitalist exploits of the whole world.

"The Peoples Institute of Applied Religion, therefore, goes beyond church religion of all kinds. It goes back to the class struggle basis of true religion. It defines, reclaims and acts upon the democratic dynamic of our Judaeo-Christian Heritage."

Rev. Williams was expelled from the Presbyterian church for heresy. According to a recent edition of The Worker, Rev. Williams was re-ordained as a minister in a Baptist church in Chicago. After the ceremony he returned to Helena.

Constitutional State rights no longer exist. Government is no longer from the state-house and the State legislative bodies; government is from Washington and the White House. Government is in partnership, maybe the captive, of labor unions; our free enterprise system is but a memory. Today, big government competes with the little businessman, regulates and restricts business.

Today the farmer is no longer free to manage his own farm, no longer free to decide what crops he will plant — this decision is handed down from Washington. As citizens, we have no way of knowning just what is happening in, or to, our Government — all of our news media is managed and we are told only what Washington wants us to know. Treason in high places of Government, Billie Sol Estes, Bobby Baker, and Jenkins, are shielded; and too many others who have betrayed America, are protected by public servants who are sworn to uphold and defend the Constitution.

Men who fraternize and play patsy with our godless enemy are received as royalty in high places. Martin Luther King — known to associate with Communists, having as his chief lieutenants sex perverts and identified Communists — an ordained Baptist minister who openly denied in the National Observer the Baptist doctrines he said, when ordained, that he believed — he went on record as not believing the doctrines of the virgin birth, the deity of Jesus Christ, the substitutionary atonement of Christ, the literal resurrection of Christ and other basic doctrines he confessed before Almighty God to believe and accept.

While mouthing a doctrine of nonviolence, he organizes and leads (from a safe distance) demonstrations he knows will end in violence, perhaps death. What hypocrisy, and this egomaniac has become the spiritual Moses of a militant minority of his race and the socialist liberal clergy. He has whipped his disciples into a frenzy of lawlessness. The mood of his army is illustrated in a threat issue by one of his lieutenants in Americus, Ga.: "We'll tear this town down." Tyis is nonviolence? King is not a man of peace; he is not really an apostle of nonviolence; he can hold his position of rule only through riosts, subversion, and revolt. Probably he is not a Communist, but he is communism's chief ally, whether he realizes it or not.

His program of civil disobedience is a deadly pestilence, and if unchecked, will destory our republic through the ever-growing bloody revolts that are spreading with frightening speed from city to city in America. When human beings behave like jungle brutes, they can be controlled only by force, and their cry about "police brutality," is offensive and disgusting to decent, law-abiding citizens. My sympathy is not with the plundering, revolting, "barbarians," but with the police who are sorn to uphold our laws and preserve peace.

I am not about to forget that these hoodlums have seriously beaten, injured, and killed many of our police. Is it not significant that people who are obeying the law and respecting the rights of others never complain about "police brutality?" "The court and not the street is the place to seek justice" and redress from grieveance. Truly our land is cursed by "barbarians" and our highways and byways are red with violence.

Presently, organized crime is at an alltime high. Last year we had a 13-per cent increase in crimes reported, over 1963. There were 20,500 reported cases of forced rape; 112,000 reported robberies, and more than amillion cases of aggravated assault. Students riot on the campuses of our universities, destroy

Pity For The City Man

This is a time of year when my heart goes out to city-dwellers. It's a time when rural or smalltown living is immensely superior to that in the concrete canyons, the abominable apartments, the sad suburbs of metropolia.

In the city, day ends drearily in the fall. There's the long, wearying battle home through traffic, or the draughty, crushed, degrading scramble on public transportation.

The city man arrives home fit for nothing but slumping for the evening before the television set. And what greets him? The old lady, wound up like a steel spring because she hasn't seen a soul she knows all day, there's nothing to look at but that stupid house next door, exactly like their own, and the kids have been giving her hell.

He's stuck with it. For the whole evening. That's why so many city chaps have workshops in the basement. It's much simpler to go down cellar and whack off a couple of fingers in the power saw than listen to Mabel.

Life is quite different for the smalltown male. He is home from work in minutes. He surveys the ranch, says, "Must get those storm windows on one of these days," and goes in, to the good fall smells of cold drinks and hot food.

His wife saw him at breakfast, again at lunch, has had a good natter with the dame next door, and has been out for two hours, raking leaves with the kids. She doesn't need him.

Instead of drifting off to the basement, the small-town male announces that this is his bowling night, or he has to go to a meeting of the Conservation and Slaughter Club, and where's a clean shirt. And that's all there is to it.

While her city counterpart squats in front of TV, gnawing her nails and wondering why she didn't marry good old George, who has a big dairy farm now, the small-town gal collects the kids and goes out to burn leaves.

There is nothing more romantic than the back streets of a small-town in the dark of a fall evening. Piles of leaves spurt orange flame. White smoke eddies. Neighbors call out, lean on rakes. Women, kerchiefed like gypsies, heap the dry leaves high on the fire. Kids avoid the subject of bedtime, dash about the fire like nimble gnomes.

Or perhaps the whole family goes to a fowl supper. What, in city living, can compare to this finest of rural functions? A crisp fall evening, a drive to the church hall through a Hallowe'en landscape, an appetite like an alligator, and that first wild whiff of turkey and dressing that makes your knees buckle and the juices flow free in your cheeks,

But it's on weekends that my pity for the city-dweller runneth over. Not for him the shooting-match on a clear fall Saturday, with its good-humored competition, its easy friendliness. Not for him the quiet stroll down a rising like clouds of mosquitoes. sunny wood road, shotgun over arm, partridge and woodcock

It's not that he doesn't live right, or doesn't deserve these pleasures. It's just that it's physically impossible to get to them easily. If he wants to crouch in a duck-blind, at dawn, he has to drive half the night to get there.

Maybe on a Sunday or holiday, in the fall, the city family decides to head out and see some of that beautiful autumn foliage. They see it, after driving two hours. And with 50,000 other cars, they crawl home in late afternoon, bumper to bumper, the old man cursing, the kids getting hungrier, the mother growing owlier.

Smalltown people can drive for 15 minutes and hit scenery, at least around here, that leaves them breathless.

Directives laid down by the Southern Conference Educational Fund (with offices in New Orleans) are relayed through the Southern Regional Council to the Alabama Council on Human Relations where they are put into action by local members.

The Birmingham Chapter of the Alabama Council on Human Relations was organized by an assorted group of left wingers in 1956.

Meetings have been held in various places including the Chamber of Commerce Building, Miles College, the Negro Y.M.C.A.; and more recently, the Center Street Congregational Chruch.

The Directors of the Birmingham Chapter of the ACHR were listed in the Birmingham News, January 17, 1957. They included Perry Daugherty, Dr. Roger Hanson (a teacher at the University Medical Center), Robert Johnson, Dr. Beryl McLasky, William Mitch (Mitch has quite a long Communist front record. He is active in the Jefferson County Mental Health Assn. and local labor groups), Rev. J. L. Ware, Rev. J. C. Wilson, Mrs. H. C. Bryant, Peter Cowin, Justine Barker, Dr. Fredrick Kraus (Unitarian; teacher at the University Med Center, and active in mental health), Mrs. James Battle, Arthur Shores (long time Communist fronter), and others.

On February 14, 1957, the Alabama Council on Human Relations elected C. G. Gomillion vice chairman. Gomillion has been associated with at least 14 Communist organizations and enterprises. He is also a "graduate" of the infamous Highlander Folk School.

Another interesting member of the Alabama Council on Human Relations in 1957 was Claude Williams, R. F. D. Helena, Ala.

Claude Williams, still a resident of Helena, was featured in an article written by the expert on communism, Dr. J. B. Matthews, in the February, 1954 issue of American Mercury magazine. Dr. Matthews said that "Reverand Claude Williams was a member of the Communist party under the name 'John Galey.'"

Rev. Williams was director of the now defunct Peoples Institute of Applied Religion, an organization cited by the Attorney General as Subversive and Communist, and identified in testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities as one of te most vicious Communist groups in the United States. This organization was formerly located at 4105 1/2 3rd Avenue South, Birmingham, Alabama.

Williams' organization had as its objective the destruction of all legitimate religions. In a speech in New York on December 29, 1945 at the National Convention of the Institute, Rev. Williams said:

captains of industry. Today this church religion is directed by remote control from the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers and the offices of cartel imperialists. With these it has economic investments in the capitalist exploits of the whole world.

"The Peoples Institute of Applied Religion, therefore, goes beyond church religion of all kinds. It goes back to the class struggle basis of true religion. It defines, reclaims and acts upon the democratic dynamic of our Judaeo-Christian Heritage."

Councilman Seibles Asks Negro Policemen

City Councilman Seibles Jr. spoke to members of the Alabama Council on Human Relations in Birmingham last week.

Seibels called on the group for an increased drive for Negro policemen and Negro school board members.

The Albama Council on Human Relations is an am of the Southern Regional council, which has been called a Red Front by the American Legion Publication, "The Firing Line." It also has connections with the Communist Southern Confernece Educational Fund.

The group expressed its appreciation to Seibels for the work done by the City Council in the hiring of Negroes to fill vacancies on the Library, Pensions and Security and Housing boards.

The Alabama Council on Human Relations has carried on an extensive campaign to bring to light cases of "polic brutality" to them, along with signed affidavits. Other state "Councils on Human Relations" have had the setting up of civilian policy review boards as their goals.

Seibels is director of Public Safety in charge of the Police Department for the city of Birmingham.

U.S. Moving From Principles - Mallick

Greenwood, S.C. - -The United States is moving away from the principles of personal and economic freedom and in the direction of a controlled economy, which has been a resounding failure time after time in thousands of years of human history.

That was the theme of remarks made today before the Greenwood Rotary Club by Earl W. Mallick, vice president-South for United State Steel Corporation.

Earlier, Mallick had made essentially the same speech before the faculty and students of Lander College.

"History records that nations have fallen or lost their positions as leaders in the world when they went farther and farther down the welfare state plan in the direction of complete socialism," Mallick said. "I don't know when that point was reached, but I do know that we are getting closer to it every day.

"Our nation is moving increasingly in the direction of more and bigger welfare measures - measures which forcibly take money from one group of citizens and give it to another group - measures which. . sap the vitality of any nation-measures which remove the incentive to produce little by little measures which, if the trend is allowed to continue, will some day result in the collaps of our economic system, and with it, our political system as well."

Mallick pointed out that the Russians had tried central economic planning and failed and are now trying to restore incentives to some degree. The Roman Empire couldn't make the welfare state work, he said and when, i n 301 A.D. the Emperor Diocletian tried to fix wages and prices, the results were disastrous including starvation and death.

The spiritual founders of America had a different, better idea of how best to provide for human welfare, Mallick said. That idea was freedom, which Mallick called "our most precious possession."

'The concept developed in 17 was as revolutionary as the war After people had been killing each other for centruies over what kind of authoritarian government there should be, our forefathers declared that all men are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights among them the right to life and liberty.

"This is at once a spiritual political and economic concept. Mallick said, "spiritual in that ognizes that those rights are given to us by God; Political in that this is a denail that these rights are given to

Mrs. Clifford Durr (Virginia), of Montgomery was another of the founding members of the Alabama Council on Human Relations.

Virginia Durr's Communist front affiliations include: Southern Conference for Human Welfare, vice president; Souther Conference Educational Fund, ember and vice chairman; National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax, member of Committee; National Citizens Political Ation Committee and thers.

One of the goals of the Alabama Council on Human Relations is the smearing of local police forces. They spare no effort in the effort to ferrett out cases of "police brutality."

The "Rev." Elwanger, Rev. E. Herbert Oliver, and other members seek out persons in an effort to have them sign affidavits charging local police with acts of brutality. This past spring, members were given a number of these signed affidavits charging "police brutality" and asked to write letters to local papers, when possible, charging police with brutality.

The use of "front" organizations is an important part in the work of the Alabama Council on Human Relations. ACHR members devise cover names for their organization when pushing some particular political philosophy.

Former leader in the ACHR, Rev. Alfred Hobart, then pastor of the Unitarian Chruch, used such an operation in demanding that federal troops be sent to Birmingham. Hobart, and other ACHR members mailed signed telegrams to the President, the Attorney General, Mayor Boutwell, and Gov. George Wallace demanding that State Toopers (the ole meanies) be removed from Birmingham and replaced by the (more benovolent) U.S. Army.

The recent Selma march by a group of so called "Concerned White Citizens," ;ed by Elwanger, Kraus, and Ted Kilicke (the latter two men receive their salaries out of your pocekts) was another ACHR front operation. These gentlemen demonstrated support for King's invasion of our state by their march.

The January 7, 1965 Bulletin of the ACHR indicated that a strong membership drive was to be conducted this year.

The following persons were selected to head up the mebership drive: Peggy (mrs. John) Fuller, Birmingha; Father Brice Joyce and Phillip Huckaby, Florence; Dr. Ralph Lee, Huntsville; Rev. J. C. Wilson and Jerry Roden, Lee-Macon Counties; Mr. Gordon Decourdres, Talladega; Mrs. James Wood, Mobile; Mr. Moreland Smith and Mrs. A. W. West, Mont-

Persons unable to understand what Mizell really means are in need of mental therapy. Simply stated, Mizell's doubletalk means that these college chapters of the Alabama Council on Human Relations will unite student revolutionaries and aid them in the overthrow of the exisiting social order.

The ACHR has already suceeded in establishing a student chapter at the University of Alabama. This operation posed no real problem with University President Frank Rose in the saddle. Ted Kilickie, a teacher in the art department is reported to be working with the University ACHR chapter. This is the same man who took part in the Selma march. Sources on the University Campus report that this group has "big plans" for the future.

The Alabama Committee to Preserve the Peace has in its files a large amount of information on the Alabama Council on Human Relations, including the membership list.

This information should be made available to the general public. The ACHR is a festering boil in the flesh of the State of Alabama. Only public exposure of the members, goals, and past actions of this outfit can remove this stigma. No state educator should be kept on the payroll if he is a member of this organization.

All parents should write the Alabama Committee to Preserve the Peace and ask for a membership list of the ACHR.

If your child's teacher is a member of this organization you have the right to demand his dismissal.

Communist nations. Russia and Red China may spat between themselves over who is going to be 'top dog' in the Communist world; but, at the final countdown, neighter of them can hardly afford the luxury of letting fellow Communists go down in defeat to the U.S. or any freedom-type nation without a hard try.

It seems possible that our high government officials are just keeping the Vietnames war going in the hope that some miracle will bring Russia to its senses since Red China is conceded by many reasonable Western minds to be completely hopeless in this aspect. expressed our attitude and our position on Viet Nam.

Our position is that we must be in Viet Nam. We must be there to win, not merely to appease Communism or to contain it. We believe that some of these cries for Peace, etc., that they are using — are merely clouding the issue. Well, what are we going to do? Are we going to let the Communists take over Viet Nam as they mean to do, and as they certainly will if we leave? We are confronted with a situation of international power politics. On one side of Viet Nam is the International Communist conspiracy and on the other side is the United States of America. With us are many anti-Communist Asian allies.

Young Americans for Freedom believes that the United States should ask more of these Asian allies to participate in this thing: Korea, Free China, the Philippines and others. Let's take Chiang Kai-shek's forces, for instance. Our National YAF chairman, Tom Huston, has just finished a 21-day tour of Southeast Asia where he met many anti-Communist leaders, including Chiang Kai-shek, and discussed these things with them. And it's our position that we must win in Viet Nam, and we must stay there until we do win.

DEAN MANION: How strong is the Young Americans for Freedom Organization? I asked Cox, the California State Chairman, to explain this.

MR. COX: I think YAF has grown terrifically in the United States over the past several years. I think throughout the country we really have responsible, well-organized young people in great numbers. California is probably one of the most active States in the Union for Young Americans for Freedom, but New York is also very active. So are many of our chapters in the Midwest. Over-all, we've grown tremendously. We have well over 500 chapters all around the Nation.

The Students for a dEmocratic Society has only 30 or 40, but the thing to remember is that some of these chapters of the SDS are very well-organized and they are very well financed. Some of the budgets of these organizations, these Left Wing organizations are tremendous. I am informed that a year and a half ago the ultra-Left, along with the Communist Party itself, raised $300,000 in Los Angeles County alone to finance Left Wing causes and to finance their publication, "The People's World."

know that there is such an active organization of patriotic young people which is striving to counter and oppose the Communist inspired organizations that have suddenly been spawned on the campuses of our American universities — particularly the big ones. These young patriots are fighting hard and effectively to keep our student bodies from being taken in and taken over by the pompous preachments and crocodile tears of the Intellectual Left Wing.

But, whereas, the Left Wingers have limitless resources, patriots like the Young Americans for Freedom are living and working on very short rations and under very severe handicaps. In most instances the official campus publications and campus radio stations are Socialist oriented and under the influence of Liberal faculty advisors who think that American patriotism is an atavistic vulgarity and that academic freedom should protest everything from filthy free speech to unlimited free love.

For many years American taxpayers and American philanthropists have made a fetish of education and demi-gods of eductors. If the big college campuses are to become breeding grounds for Socialist subversion, now would seem to be the time for the involved universities to make a moral accounting to the people of the United States.

FBI & Cops Net Pacifist

Murphy Dowouis, 24, a folk-singing pacifist from Louisiana, was outmaneuvered by FBI men and the cops yesterday. They intercepted him before what was to have been, for him, a shining hour.

Reporters, alerted that Dowduis was to give himself up to the FBI, with flourishes, on a charge of draft-dodging, stationed themselves in front of Catholic Worker Movement heaquarters at 175 Chrystie St. to await the big moment.

They Close In

But the FBI men wanted to avoid any chance of a pacifist demonstration.

They closed in on him a block and a half from the Catholic Worker headquarters, as he walked from his lodgings at 58 Kenmare St. The FBI men were accompanied by a couple of uniformed cops.

Dowouis went limp and was carried to a waiting auto which took him to the Federal Building in Foley Square.

There, he was held in $2,500 bail for hearing Nov. 24 on a move to remove him to Louisiana. Dowouis said he would not try to make bail and would not fight the removal proceedings.

Virginia Durr is also actively recruiting new members for the ACHR.

The Jan. 7, 1965 Bulletin of the Alabama Council on Human Relations stressed the formation of "Student Human Relations Groups" on colleges campuses. An article by Hayes Mizell of Atlanta indicated that these college organizations would play an important part in future operations of the ACHR.

According to Mizell, these college chapter units would "be affiliated with the Alabama Council on Human Relations. The chapters would give radical students "an opportunity to meet other students of like mind so they can band together to solve problems." Mizell said that these chapters would also give students "an opportunity to broaden their horizons by holding state conferences where they can discover new ideas and new personalities, as well as learn new dimensions of old problems."

This is probably the most wishful thinking of the 20th Century. No more than Red China can Russia afford to let a comrad-in-arms lose a war for "liberation" without exerting every effort to prevent it. For Russia to do this would be letting a fellow Communist country down; it would demoralize every Communist satellite, contemporary or potential. Further, Red China could seize upon such an action by Russia as a tremendous propaganda weapon to propel itself into No. I position in the Communist World.

The United States can allow this war to drag on for ten or more years (as some reports are now estimating it will do), hoping for a better day for negotiations, continuously losing American men and youth in a war being fought on the enemy's terms. At the end of such time, we may very well be brought up short to realize that Red China has had ample time to build up a nuclear delivery system which can be turned on her next door neighbor, Russia, or any part of Southeast Asia.

Therefore, unless we have the courage to see our duty and the boldness to carry it out, more and more South Viet Nams may be compelled ultimately to live in darkness rather than FREEDOM and INDEPENDENCE.

Most state employment service offices of the State Department of Industrial Relations maintain an active list of workers with special and unique skills.

With the exception of July, nonfarm employment in Alabama each month has been higher than for the previous period, said Governor George C. Wallace.

Current nonagricultural employment of 878,000 is a new high for Alabama, according to estimates by the State Department of Industrial Relations.

Dear Alice:

You may have seen the enclosed editorial from the Charleston News and Courier. Tom Waring got mad because Bem Price called me moderate.

I am enclosing a copy of the letter that I wrote to Waring in reply to his charges against SRC. I have considerable doubt that Waring will publish it. Whether he does or not, feel free to make any use of the letter that you care to.

With best regards,

Sincerely,

HAROLD C. FLEMING
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

June 28, 1957

A Council to attain, through research and action, the ideals and practices of equal opportunity for all peoples in the South.

Mr. Thomas Waring, Editor
The News and Courier
Charleston, South Carolina

Dear Mr. Waring:

Your editorial of June 25 titled "SRC and Red Records" seeks to discredit the Southern Regional Council. I trust that in the interest of fairness you will publish this reply.

There is little point in quarreling about interpretations of "moderate" -- except to say that, by your reasoning, the News and Courier can be no more moderate than the Ku Klux Klan, since both have the objective of maintaining a completely segregated school system.

You are correct in saying that the SRC has received grants-in-aid from the Fund for the Republic. So have the Southern Presbyterians, the Methodists, the Episcopalians, the Catholic Committee of the South, and most of the other major religious groups in the South. One of the beneficiaries of a Fund for the Republic grant -- that to the Southern Association of Nieman Fellows -- was the editor of the News and Courier himself, who received a fellowship under the Fund-financed program.

More importantly, you quote the Firing Line as establishing "a definite trend of interrelationship between the Southern Regional Council and the Southern Conference For Human Welfare, a defunct communist front organization." The "evidence" cited in support of this statement is that "16 former and nine present directors of the Southern Regional Council have been affiliated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare." The obvious implication is that these directors have infected the SRC with pro-communist sympathies.

This charge is utterly false and is supported by "evidence" of the most dishonest sort. The "nine current directors" are Southerners of unimpeachable character, including two presidents of state-supported colleges, a labor official who serves by appointment on a state commission, the presidents of three of the South's leading Negro institutions of higher learning, the president emeritus of a Georgia Methodist college, a past president of the Georgia League of Women Voters, and a past president of the University of South Carolina Alumni Association.

The high crime of which these persons stand convicted in your eyes is shared by the Hon. James F. Byrnes, who prominently graced a dinner staged by the Southern Conference in 1945. Is one to believe that Mr. Byrnes is a carrier of the dread infection you ascribe to nine of SRC's 80 board members?

Among the past SRC board members indicted by the Firing Line is the late Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University. Until his recent death, Dr. Johnson served on the board of the Southern Education Reporting Service -- along with the editor of the News and Courier. Does this mean that the SERS and the worthy editor are tainted by this "definite trend of interrelationship"?

Among the other SRC directors cited by the Firing Line is that distinguished North Carolina scholar, the late Dr. Howard W. Odum. Dr. Odum was one of the chief authorities relied on by Attorney Robert McC. Figg in his brief defending the Clarendon County school authorities. What is one to make of this "interrelationship"?

The cynical formula that you have so readily applied to the SRC can be used to damage the reputation of any body of citizens. The SRC is and has always been squarely opposed to communism and all other totalitarian doctrines. I respectfully suggest that the News and Courier would serve its cause better if it based its criticisms on real differences of opinion rather than unfounded character attacks.

Sincerely,

Harold C. Fleming
Executive Director

SRC AND RED RECORDS

The Associated Press has distributed to member newspapers an article by Bem Price on Harold C. Fleming of Atlanta. Mr. Fleming is director of the Southern Regional Council.

Mr. Price describes Mr. Fleming as an "advocate of the moderate approach to the South's ancient racial problem." Mr. Fleming and the Southern Regional Council are moderate only if one believes the NAACP is also moderate. The objectives of the SRC and the NAACP are the same--an end to separate public schools in the South.

The Southern Regional Council has received many thousands of dollars from the Fund for the Republic, a Northern foundation that acts as paymaster for integration in the South.

The May 15 issue of Firing Line, a publication of the National Americanism Commission of the American Legion, says:

"Records of the American Legion reveal a definite trend of interrelationship between the Southern Regional Council and the Southern Conference For Human Welfare, a defunct communist front organization."

Last December, an official of the SRC denied that the organization is the successor of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

A documented study of the SRC in the Legion publication states that 16 former and nine present directors of the Southern Regional Council have been affiliated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

This important information was not in Bem Price's article.

The Editor's Prerogative

ONE of the easiest—and most dishonest — ways to assail someone's character is through the "guilt association" route. One of the easiest — and most dishonest — ways to win an argument is to censor the answers of the person assailed.

A case in point is the recent exchange between the editor of the News and Courier of Charleston, S. C., Thomas Waring, and the Southern Regional Council, of which Harold C. Fleming is executive director and the editor of the Delta Democrat-Times is a director.

Editor Waring fired a broadside at the Southern Regional Council, intimating it was Communist-inspired because "sixteen former and nine present directors of the Southern Regional Council have been affiliated with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare,' and quoting the American Legion magazine, Firing Line, as a source of information that the Southern Conference was a "defunct communist front organization," noting that the Southern Regional Council "has received many thousands of dollars from the Fund for the Republic, a Northern foundation that acts as paymaster for integration in the South."

Editor Waring also said, mockingly, that "Mr. Fleming and the Southern Regional Council are moderate only if one believes the NAACP is also moderate. The objectives of the SRC and the NAACP are the same — an end to separate schools in the South"

Mr. Fleming replied that on the basis of Waring's kind of argument "the News and Courier can be no more moderate than the Ku Klux Klan, since both have the objective of maintaining a completely segregated school system," but Editor Waring chose to delete this when he printed the letter in his newspaper.

In fact, out of ten paragraphs, the News and Courier only printed four in reply to its own completely unfair, vicious editorial which attempted to link the Southern Regional Council to the defunct and unsavory Southern Conference on Human Welfare.

May we emphasize here that we hold no brief for the Southern Conference, which, like many such organizations, started out with some directors, supporters and members of good intent but fell into bad hands. These men dropped out of the organization when they began to learn of its true motivations.

The News and Courier should have printed Mr. Fleming's letter in toto if it believes in fair play The paragraphs deleted were cut out with what one can only assume was malicious intent because they were the ones that gave the whole letter meaning.

What remained was an innocuous denial filled with generalities such as "This charge is utterly false and is supported by 'evidence' of the most dishonest sort."

What Editor Waring censored were vital bits of evidence in behalf of the Southern Regional Council:

1. The Fund for the Republic has also supplied money to Southern Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians and Catholics. One of the beneficiaries was the Southern Association of Neiman Fellows and Editor Waring was granted, and accepted, a fellowship under this Fund-financed program. We wonder if his fingers felt as ditry then as his conscience must now.

2. South Carolina Governor James F. Byrnes was a prominent speaker at a dinner staged by that now defunct Southern Conference for Human Welfare in 1945. ("Is one to believe that Mr. Byrnes is a carrier of the dread disease you ascribe to nine of SRC's 80 board members?" asked Fleming. The question was omitted in the News and Courier).

3. One of the past SRC board members, indicted by the Firing Line was the late Dr. Charles S. Johnson, president of Fisk University, who also served on the board of the Southern Education Reporting Service along with Editor Waring of the News and Courier. Mr. Waring also gets money for that too—from the same Ford Foundation that established the Fund for the Republic. (We hope that in gratitude for what might be called a double-tit situation, Mr. Waring at least is driving a Ford or maybe a Mercury). Mr. Fleming wondered if "this means that the SERS and the worthy editor are tainted by this "definite trend of interrelationship"?

4. Another Southern Regional Council director was the late Dr. Howard W. Odom, the South's most noted sociologist, and one of the chief authorities relied upon by Attorney Robert McC. Figg in defending the Clarendon County school authorities who resisted racial integration of their schools in one of the cases involved in the original Supreme Court decision on school integration.

The deleted paragraphs of Mr. Fleming's letter would have made Editor Waring at least as guilty by his associations as he attempted to make Mr. Fleming. As a matter of fact, Editor Waring is guilty only of a very special kind of yellow journalism.

Dear Sir:

In a recent issue you publish another in Mr. Stanley F. Horne's long series of diatribes. This one, characteristically, seeks to sully the reputation of Mr. James H. Dabbs by feverish charges against the Southern Regional Council, of which Mr. Dabbs is president.

Mr. Horne is the evidently willing collaborator in a myth originated by the Communists themselves, in their Daily Worker.

Rather than answer once again these tired and absurd charges ourselves, we refer to the enclosed editorial from the conservative Richmond Times-Dispatch, from which we cite the following passages:

"(The Southern Regional Council) not only was no 'offshoot' of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare; it was criticized in some quarters because it was more conservative than that organization and suspected of being in competition with it...

"As to the allegation of the Communist Daily Worker that James E. Jackson, chief of the Southern branch of the U. S. Communist party, was a 'co-founder of the Southern Regional Council,' there is nothing to support this.... The Daily worker's statement that he was a 'founder' is as unreliable and inaccurate as nearly everything else in that Communist sheet....

"While we disagree strongly and completely with (the Council's) present position on (integration), we feel obligated to point out, in fairness, that it was in no sense Communist in its origins. The Southern Regional Council was established because of a sincere desire on the part of white and Negro leaders in the South to eliminate many of the disabilities and discriminations from which Negroes were suffering."

Well Harold —

It finally published your letter in full, though it was a note to refute the letter. Obviously they checked with their chief contributor before printing your letter; why they didn't accord you the same opportunity when his letter was printed is also obvious.

Got to see Bill & Lucia briefly the other day & they'll be returning tomorrow night. Elizabeth realized she had met him at a Thanksgiving dinner long ago.

Who Is Wrong?

To The News and Courier:

A letter by Harold C. Fleming of the Southern Regional Council which appeared in the Sept. 16 issue of The News and Courier. In his letter Fleming denies Communist ties with the Southern Regional Council by quoting from an editorial which he says appeared in The Richmond Times-Dispatch. These quotations refer to the origins of the council and are mostly in the past tense.

By contrast a look at the March 9, 1957, issue of The News and Courier is very interesting. Here appeared a special dispatch written by Phil Stroupe regarding testimony presented before the Louisiana State Legislature committee investigating causes of racial unrest in the South. According to this dispatch Manning Johnson, a director of research for the U. S. Dept. of Justice, a Negro and formerly a Communist of 10 years standing, testified that the Southern Regional Council and the Southern Conference of Human Welfare "are transmission belts for Communism in the South."

What says Harold Fleming?

Reply From SRC

To The News and Courier:

I have no wish to prolong a debate in your columns with the tireless detractors of the Southern Regional Council. But R. J. Zehnder's letter of Sept. 18 seems to require a reply.

He cites the testimony of one Manning Johnson, before the segregationist Rainach Committee of Louisiana, as reflecting on SRC's present activities. Mr. Zehnder is misinformed about Mr. Johnson, as follows:

(1) Johnson is not and never has been "a director of research" for the U.S. Dept. of Justice. I understand the department itself advised The News and Courier of this inaccuracy in Phil Stroupe's article of March 9, 1957, and reportedly a correction was published on March 12, 1957.

(2) The Justice Department has specifically dissociated itself from Johnson's testimony before the Rainach Committee.

(3) Earlier, on Aug. 11, 1956, the U. S. Subversive Activities Control Board expunged from its records what it termed "tainted" testimony given by Johnson.

Johnson, in short, is a thoroughly discredited professional ex-Communist. His charges against SRC, whether concerning the past or the present, are utterly unfounded.

It's a bitter pill, but SRC just doesn't have any use for Communists — or for their cousins of the right who also prefer character assassination to honest disagreement.
